THE LARDEAU LINE.

Survey Party now on the Ground at Arrowhead to Locate the Road.

A party of surveyors under the command of F. M. Young, assistant district engineer of the construction department, left Robson Monday night for Arrowhead, their mission being to locate the Lardeau railway through from Trout Lake to Arrowhead. The line is already located from Argenta to Trout Lake and twelve or fourteen miles of grade were built in 1899, but contrary to expectation nothing was done this year as had been promised by president Shaughnessy. Why this location party is being sent into the Lardeau with winter coming on is known only to the head office staff, but it will be regarded as an indication that the road is to go ahead at a much earlier date than was looked for. At any rate the people of Lardeau will be delighted to learn that the C. P. R. is taking action again. The country is regarded as a coming mining section, but the conditions are such that the mineral propositions cannot become large producers without better transportation facilities than are afforded by the trails they now possess.—Nelson Tribune.

FISH RIVER CAMP.

Progress and Prospects of Mining in This Promising District.

(From our own correspondent)

FISH RIVER, Nov. 5.—The Imperial Development Syndicate of Nelson have obtained options on several free milling properties on Lexington Mountain, among which are the Eva, Imperial and Mackintosh groups. It is understood that the same Company has bonded the Clara group owned by B. E. Grove, for $15,000, with a substantial cash payment.

W. H. Jackson is doing a lot of work on the three properties, Black Bear, Wide West and Eclipse, which he purchased during the summer and it is reported that he has taken options on the Alma and Daffodil groups. Mr. Jackson has displayed great judgment and business accumen in his investments and it may be predicted that, if there ever is a silver-lead mine in the district, he will have it.

Everybody here is discussing the rich free milling discovery recently made on the Criterion, one of the claims adjoining the Imperial Syndicate's purchases and an eye witness assures me that the coarse gold is plainly visible all through a small fissure vein about three feet wide.

J. A. Magee has built a cabin and will work his promising copper property, the Copper Dollar.

Alba Heywood Company.

The Alba Heywood company put up a rattling good show here on Tuesday evening in the opera house. The versatile Alba Heywood is a whole show in himself. His impersonations of Dennis Mudd, the pessimist, Josiah Allen's wife and a Kid and his imitations of a steam calliope and a phonograph were capital and kept the audience in fits of laughter. The comedy was interspersed by some wonderfully good violin and 'cello playing by Miss Gertrude Monroe and Gustave Ulrich and Miss Emilie Cole's charming singing. Mr. Heywood promises Revelstoke another visit next year and he can reckon on a bumper house next time.

SIR CHARLES TUPPER AT LINDSAY

"Speaking at Massey hall, the other evening, Sir Wilfrid Laurier had declared that he was never found swimming with the stream; he was always guided by principle and stood firmly by his convictions in all times and places. Such a statement, Sir Charles Tupper said, showed that the premier was lost to truth and fact. He, Sir Charles, had challenged Sir Wilfrid in the house, and did it now again, to point to any principle that he had laid down in 25 years and had not broken, or any promise that he had not falsified. The premier, said Sir Charles, had declared that he would maintain the principle that the federal parliament must not interfere with the provinces; yet, at St. Roche, he told his fellow religionists that if Manitoba did not give the Manitoba Catholics redress he would get it by compulsion.

"Turning to the trade question, Sir Charles quoted from Sir Wilfrid's speech at Massey hall. There he had declared that he had given England a preference because of gratitude for what she had done for us. In that statement, Sir Wilfrid was in collision with Sir Richard Cartwright, who declared that Canada but Christian forgiveness for the wrongs she has done us.

"To Sir Wilfrid's taunt that the loyalty of the Conservatives sprang from their stomach, Sir Charles retorted that the premier was a nice man to talk of loyalty. In 1891 he stumped the country declaring that unrestricted reciprocity with the United States was Canada's only hope. He would get his tariff from Washington—a tariff that was the highest in the world against other nations England included. Was that loyalty? (Cheers.) When Conservatives protested that such a course was hostile to England he replied that Canada must look out for herself.

"Sir John Macdonald had lamented the disloyalty of the Liberal leaders at that time. Sir Charles had assured him that if they did get into power they would outdo the Conservatives in the loyalty talk, for it was office and not Canada for which they cared. Edward Blake had at that time left the party because he declared that its policy would ruin British institutions in Canada.

"Sir Wilfrid had said in Boston that the

than the English shilling, especially when the latter was so near. Its talk of gratitude to England now was all humbug. Nor was there any more in his statement that the preference worked to Canada's advantage.

"Sir Wilfrid had also declared that the national policy had been a policy of failure. Could any more monstrous insult be offered the electors of Canada. That policy had picked Canada up out of commercial depression and saved her when her credit was almost ruined. After a term of office the Mackenzie-Laurier government had its majority of 70 turned into a minority of 86. After that the country was administered for 18 years under the national policy, and when four years ago the Liberals again came into power they adopted that policy as the only life buoy to which they could cling. Sir Charles had prophesied that Liberal success at the last election would mean ruin for the country. He had believed Liberals men of their word who would adopt the principles they proclaimed, but they did not. They had taken the policy of their opponents and while that had saved Canada it should also have made Sir Wilfrid Laurier ashamed to say that the national policy had been the policy of failure. Instead of free trade the Liberals had adopted a tariff in cottons and a score of other common articles higher than ever before."

THE LIBERAL REVOLT

Never were bright prospects so completely shattered in so short order as have been those of the triumphant Liberalism of 1896. As with those who in private life parade superior virtue, the lofty professions of the party when in opposition were found to be but a cloak hiding the rapacious disposition of the manipulators of the Liberal machine who no sooner found themselves in power than—as Peter Mitchel said of the earlier official career of the party—they inaugurated a system of corruption that for extent and boldness stands unparalleled in the history of government under British constitution. No wonder that the respectable Liberals, the men whose names gave respectability and strength to the party of office-raiders whom they masked, join in indignant protests from end to end of Canada.

Stripped of the support of the honest element of the Liberal party, how is it possible for the Laurier-Tarte combination to win? If they should win, and continue on their career without the restraints imposed by the upright men hitherto within the party, but who can support its leaders no longer, what a prospect of public degredation opens before the country.

The Liberals of the George Brown Alexander Mackenzie and Edward Blake type are not found following Laurier and Tarte.

BEFORE AND SINCE LIBERAL RULE

Total expenditure for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, the last year of Conservative rule, $41,702,383; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, the total expenditure was $52,713,810; estimated expenditure for the current fiscal year $56,312,527.

The silence of the Liberal leaders in regard to the terrible Cook charges is the silence of guilt.

The Liberal landslide began when Hugh John boosted Greenway down hill in Manitoba. It is still sliding.

By sending word as to the exact location of his last ditch Oom Paul ould confer a favor on the British public.

It is no wonder that Li Hung Chang has a standing as a diplomat. He is said to have 1,000 hired girls in his household.

It often happens that people sing jubilantly at church: "We Shall Know Each Other There," who refuse to know each other here.

The decrease in the tariff is 0.97 per cent and the decrease in the people's good opinion of the Laurier government is 99.99 per cent.

If every man could vote where he sleeps, hundreds of people might enfanchise themselves by going to sleep in the middle of a Free Press editorial.

The honesty of a Liberal journal hat will quote under flaring headlines the traitorous utterances of La Presse, when all Canada knows that La Presse has been bought over by the Tarte gang, is not visible to the naked eye.

Calve the Woman.

Calve the woman is a topic not a whit less fascinating than her career as a prima donna. Each summer is spent at her chateau at Cavriere, near Aveyron, France. There is a pretty romance connected with this country seat. When as a girl she used to walk past this place each day, her most daring dream was to some time be rich enough to purchase it. Today she spends as much time as possible there in company with her parents and brothers and sisters. To the village folks Calve is an ideal Lady Bountiful. She visits the poor, takes the sick all sorts of tempting delicacies, interests herself in securing positions for the unemployed. The village children fairly worship her. Calve loves children. She will sit for hours on the lawn under the big trees surrounded by a group of admiring children, telling them strange tales of what she has seen and heard in foreign lands or relating legends of long ago.—George T. B. Davis in Woman's Home Companion.

Her Seven Sons.

A mother who had only one child, a son, lost him through an accident by drowning when he was 17. His body was washed out to sea and never recovered. She very much wanted a portrait of him, and she called upon a famous artist, who was a friend of the family, to reproduce the boy's face and form. He asked for every photograph she had of her son from babyhood onward.

When the painting arrived, it represented a glade in a wood. Playing about were five little children of various ages, but all the same boy as his mother had known him. Coming down the center, joyous, gay, was the 17-year-old lad, leading his baby self of 1 year by the hand.

The mother looked at the picture and burst into tears. "I have lost seven sons!" she said.

"You had lost six of them before your son died," the artist replied.

Boot Buying.

People would find less difficulty with ready made shoes, says an experienced salesman, if they would stand up to fit them on instead of sitting down. Nine persons out of ten, particularly ladies, want a comfortable chair while they are fitting a shoe, and it is with the greatest difficulty you can get them to stand for a few minutes even after the shoe is fitted. Then when they begin walking about they wonder why the shoes are not so comfortable as they were at first trial. A woman's foot is considerably smaller when she sits in a chair than when she walks about. Exercise brings a larger quantity of blood into the feet, and they swell appreciably. The muscles also require certain space. In buying shoes this fact should be borne in mind.

Think of it for a moment.—Every time you have lain down to rest during the past four years the public debt of Canada has been five thousand dollars more that it was when you arose in the morning. The average increase has been five thousand dollars a day.

WOMAN AND HOME.

A CLAIMANT FOR THE POSITION OF FIRST "REAL DAUGHTER."

Woman's Higher Education—Her Work In Turkey—Cured of Her Craze—Principles Versus Cooks. They Conduct a Sheep Ranch.

Miss Jane Morton of Salisbury, Vt., is the first "real daughter" of Ethan Allen chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution of Middlebury, Vt. She was initiated early in the year 1898 and at the age of 95 still retains her mental and bodily faculties to a remarkable extent. She was born at Middleboro, Mass., and came to Vermont with her parents in 1807.

Miss Morton's father was Captain John Morton, born in Massachusetts in 1763. He fought through the Revolution, together with two brothers, and was at the burning of New Bedford in 1781. In 1807 Captain Morton moved from Middleboro, Mass., to Salisbury, Vt. Here he organized a company of militia, and when the war of 1812 broke out he became captain of the famous "Silver Grays," 77 men, which took part in the battle of Plattsburg in 1814. He passed away at the age of 94 years on Dec. 23, 1857.

MISS JANE MORTON.

Among Miss Morton's treasured keepsakes are an ancient desk and a drinking cup of peculiar shape, relics of her Massachusetts home. She relates her early experiences in Vermont with a pleasure born of a knowledge that they are past. Among her recollections is hearing the cannons fired at the battle of Plattsburg, this memory being indelibly imprinted by her anxiety for her father, who was engaged in that fight. A student of physiognomy will mark gentleness and high breeding in the portrait above given, and these terms aptly describe her character. Her health has not been of the best recently, but her friends hope for her many more years of life.—Middlebury (Vt.) Cor. Boston Herald.

Woman's Higher Education.

In these days of discussion about the higher education of girls and the propriety of woman's entering the arena of political life, the effect of this education and political work on her position in society is rather lost sight of. Has the study of philosophy a bad bearing on the power to entertain? and has a knowledge of the ins and outs of election day a tendency to decrease the ability in charm? are aspects which are considered only by the few and not by the great majority. The fact is, let a woman know what she may, if her smile is winning, her manners pleasant and her disposition charitable she will be popular. The trick of telling the character of the land by the rock formation will not harden the true woman's heart against an appeal for mercy or charity. The ability to determine what medicine will help her ailing child without a doctor's aid will never make her heart less loving to that child, if she be a true woman in the first place, and if she is not, then all the ignorance in the world will not remedy the defects which education cannot cure but may help.

In the social ranks alone, leaving out of the question entirely the thinker's view on the subject, it cannot be claimed that the ignorant are the most popular because of that ignorance. There are many very popular girls who know nothing of the depths of learning, and there are many girls who are able to demonstrate a problem in mathematics and astronomy who are shunned and left to be wallflowers, and there are the cases cited by the pessimist, who wishes his women to know nothing beyond what he tells them and to be fools enough to believe it all.

Many pretty, sweet tempered girls have not the ability to study deeply, and that these girls are popular is no argument against study. They are loved in spite of their ignorance, not because of it. The student may be loved if she is lovable in the first place and does not allow her study to detract from that characteristic and if she will come out of her books to be in touch with the people about her and descend sometimes from her clouds to know their little hope and fears.

It is a cynical but true statement that people love us for the interest we display in their own affairs. This may not be true of the one great love of life, but it is true of the love which is possessed by a person of whom it is said, "Everybody loves her," and it is almost invariably the secret of great popularity. The faculty may be expected by the student as well as the know nothing, and, although the former will have less time in which to win her hearts, she may have a better chance of keeping them when won if she can school herself never to forget the details which interest her confidants or the affairs which have been poured into her sympathetic ears.

The result of thinking on the subject, then, is that if the mathematician can dance as well as her sister, who cannot say the rule of three, and can listen as well as the dear little girl who never opens a book and flirt as nicely and comfortably as the one who always wore the dunce cap at school she may have the same measure of popularity they possess, and she will have the additional great comfort of being independent of others for amusement and solace in sorrow, which she can find in her beloved books, and in old age, when they can do nothing but knit and gossip, and this is a comfort worth all the study of a lifetime.—Graziella in Pittsburg Press.

Her Work In Turkey.

Miss Corinne Shattuck of Urfa, Turkey, spoke at the meeting of the ecumenical conference upon "The Work of Orphans." Miss Shattuck was the only foreigner in Urfa at the time of the massacre there in December, 1895, when 3,000 people were killed, and but for her presence many more must have lost their lives, says the New York Tribune. As soon as order was restored after those frightful days she was offered escort to Aintab, where there was an American college and mission station, but her reply was: "I remain here for the present. I cannot leave our orphaned people." Before the evidences of carnage were fairly removed she began to plan the relief work which benefited a multitude of wretched people. Within three months she had distributed 9,580 garments to 1,236 persons and given kettles and wash basins to those who were absolutely destitute. Women and children at that time were also employed in picking cotton which she had bought in the bush and were cleaning and spinning it for the wearer. This mostly enabled many women to maintain themselves and gave work to over 300 people. Her next step was to utilize the native handiwork of the women, and before many months had passed samples of silk embroidery in cotton homespun had been sent to the markets in England. The industries have continued since that time, and Miss Shattuck, besides performing her ordinary duties as missionary, had supervised the importations of materials, the work itself and its sale through agents in Constantinople.

Her exhibit of this work was one of the most interesting in the missionary exhibition held in connection with the ecumenical conference which opened April 30. Besides the industrial work, Miss Shattuck has had charge of the orphans, who at some times have numbered 200 or more. The waifs she has endeavored to bring up in such a way that while they received careful training they shall not be in anyway estranged from their natural position and their people. Miss Shattuck became a missionary under the American board of commissioners for foreign missions in 1873 and soon after charge of the girls' school in Aintab, Turkey, was given to her in place of Miss Procter, who was obliged to return home on a furlough.

In 1874 Miss Shattuck toured about central Turkey, riding for more than 1,000 miles on horseback. In 1878 she started a school for girls in Urfa, in 1877 at Kesseb and in 1878 in Adana. The next four years were spent in this country, to which she had been obliged to come because of ill health. Upon her return to Turkey the girls' college in Marash was put in her charge. While there she organized and sustained a kindergarten in addition to her other work. She went to Urfa, where she had started the school eight years before, arriving there just before the massacre.

Cured of Her Craze.

A genealogist received a letter from a wealthy woman the other day, saying that she was anxious to know something of her descendants and she would like to have him call upon her with reference to looking them up. As the letter was addressed to the genealogist, instead of to an astrologist, a palmist, phrenologist, or even the woman who tells fortunes with cards or tea leaves, he came to the conclusion that she had made a slight mistake in her phraseology and wanted to look backward instead of forward, and he called upon her. That was what she wanted. She was anxious to have her family tree developed, and she agreed to pay him the regular price, $25, for a line of ancestors.

The man went to work, and, being a conscientious laborer, he worked along regulation lines and did not get down to William the Conqueror or even Roger Williams. What he did come to was an interesting ancestor who would have been just the man by whom the woman could have joined one of the Revolutionary societies or become a Colonial Dame. But there was one trouble with this ancestor. He was imbued too strongly with the independent feelings of the early days, but his independence was not properly directed. The fathers of the country had noted this, presumably with sorrow, but they had felt it necessary to have him shot for what they called "insubordination," and the sentence was carried out.

All these facts, with details, the antiquary wrote out and sent to his patron. She should have been appreciative of her ancestor's qualities. It is a prominent quality in the feminine descendants of Revolutionary heroes. They don't call it insubordination, but they have not the slightest objection to disagreeing with their superior officers and make it so manifest at times that there are battles that would not be much hotter with powder and bullets.

But the woman in search of descendants, getting her pedigree before she joined a society, evidently did not know this. Her ardor for a family tree was quenched once and for all. She paid the $25, but she found she had all the living ancestors she cared to look after and decided to let the others alone.—New York Times.

Principles Versus Cooks.

A volume might be written on the malign influence exerted on femininity's principles by the loss of a cook. Volumes have been written relating how an injury to her child turns a woman into a savage, but just as radical a change marks her when her culinary department has lost its priestess and madam herself has been battling with pots and pans for days and is wearied in soul and body.

She, too, becomes savage then in some degree, and all her fine ideas about domestic etiquette which she has paraded in palmy days before Mary Ann went to newer fields are forgotten.

There's one little woman known to the writer who is an excellent example of this fact. Comfortably servanted—if one may use such an expression—she's the soul of honor. Her principles are well defined on nice points, and not for the world would she covet her neighbor's goods, his manservant nor his maidservant.

For a week after her maid had gone she stood by her original tenets and struggled with the drafts of the range and the intricacies of omelets until she was too tired for words. She visited intelligence offices and spent her leisure hours, which were few, owing to these same intricacies, reading advertisements in the papers and seeking out the advertisers.

The second week she herself advertised, interviewed all the applicants that came in response to her notice and engaged the one that suited her best.

When the one failed to appear at the appointed time, she engaged another, and when she also failed her she engaged with calm impartiality every maid who came within her reach. When these either did not come or proved incapable, she began to cast covetous eyes on her neighbors' "help" and was with difficulty restrained by the men of the family from approaching the maids and asking them if they did not want to make a change.

She did ask such as told her they were engaged for service but had not yet gone to their new homes to send word to their prospective mistresses that they could not come because of a prior engagement which they had forgotten.

To such depths of infamy did one gentle woman fall just from sheer weariness of body. 'Tis a sad commentary on feminine nature, but it goes to prove by what trivial things one's morals are affected.—Baltimore News.

They Conduct a Sheep Ranch.

Two young girls, Gussie and Louise Lamm, respectively 19 and 20 years of age, are running a sheep ranch covering 15 miles of the California mountains. They are making a success of it, too, although their previous training was hardly in that direction, as they were educated in a convent.

They began the work in an accidental way. When home for the Christmas vacation several years ago, a heavy snowstorm began, and night came on with 700 sheep out in the storm back of one of the mountains. Gussie, then 14 years old, insisted on helping her father get the sheep under cover, and worked bravely until daybreak, when all were safely housed. The next day when her father started out to see how the sheep were he found his daughter, clad in one of his old suits for greater ease in travel, waiting to accompany him. After that the two girls went everywhere with the father when on their vacations and adopted boy's attire for everyday wear while at home. In this way they learned all details of the management of a sheep ranch, so that when Mr. Lamm died they continued to conduct it as he had.

Their costume on ordinary occasions consists of blue jean overalls, tucked into top boots, with shirt waist open at the throat, sailor fashion. The hair is braided singly and coiled close to the head. Each girl carries a rifle when she rides over the hills and knows how to use it.

ALL A MYSTERY TO THE BLIND.

Persons Born Sightless Have No Accurate Conception of Sight.

"What a profound mystery invests all the operations of our senses!" said a college professor of this city. "I was talking the other day with a very intelligent blind man. He had been blind from birth, but had received an excellent education and was fully as well informed as the average person one meets in cultured circles. He spoke freely of his infirmity, and finally I asked him whether he had ever succeeded in forming a clear mental conception of the sense of sight. He replied frankly that he had not, and then he asked me several very curious questions.

"The idea of color, he said, was a great puzzle to him, and he had never been able to obtain the slightest clew to what was meant when one said, for instance, that one thing was red and another thing was blue. 'Your color impressions are absolutely stationary, are they not?' he asked. The question startled me. It was so strange. Now, what could possibly have been in his mind? One would infer that he associated color with some sort of movement, yet when I asked him to explain he couldn't do it. He soon lost himself in words, sighed and gave it up. He understood, as nearly as I could gather, that the sense of sight somehow furnished us with information as to the size, shape and general character of surrounding objects, but I am satisfied, from his questions, that he had formed no idea whatever of the picture that is presented to the brain. He was unable to understand how a whole scene could be taken in at once. He could distinguish B flat on a violin, he said, but suppose the whole surrounding country was full of violins, all playing different airs? That seemed to him a good analogy for the various things in a landscape. I soon realized that explanation on either side was hopeless. There was a barrier of the inexpressible between us.

"I went away with an immensely increased respect for the teachers at institutes for the blind and deaf and dumb. It is a marvelous thing that they ever succeed in breaking into those sealed brains and bringing children so terribly handicapped into touch with their fellow beings."

A PAINFUL DREAM.

The One In Which You Imagine Yourself Partly Naked.

There is a painful class of dream which may be labeled the inadequately clothed dream. In this class of dream it occurs to us to come down from our bedrooms, to mingle in society, even sometimes to be presented at court or to take part in the highest and most solemn functions, in a costume that we should deem scarcely adequate if we had been just roused from our beds by a shout of "Fire!"

The degrees of this comparative nudity are very various, and it is remarkable that never, so far as I can learn, has human being (that is to say, in the temperate climates) ever in his dreams appeared before his fellows in an absolutely Arcadian or idyllic lack of costume, but the costume is commonly very inadequate, so inadequate that the police would very rightly interfere in the bare interests of decency.

Indeed, that fear—the apprehension of police interference for the sake of the public morals—is a factor in the general uneasiness that we feel in our dreams in finding ourselves going abroad in such deshabille. For we are conscious of a measure of uneasiness, we can feel that we did wrong in not putting on this or that absolutely indispensable portion of our wardrobe before we left our room, but it is as nothing to the utter shame and horror that would overwhelm us were we really to find ourselves in such conditions.

And in the same degree the shock that our appearance gives our unfortunate friends among whom we show ourselves in such guise is not a circumstance to the pain those sensitive souls would receive if our appearance were a reality instead of a subjective fancy. Yet we retain a sufficient sense of shame to be conscious of a very real relief when we wake to find that we have not behaved ourselves in such manner as to be the reprobation of every right minded man and woman.—Longman's Magazine.

Sugar as Food.

Starch forms a considerable portion of our diet in one form or another, and all starch has to be converted into sugar by the saliva and intestinal juices before it can be assimilated. The action of these ferments breaks it up into simpler chemical compounds, so that it finally reaches the blood and muscles as dextrose, a form of sugar which can be burned to yield heat and muscular energy. The change required in sugar for its assimilation is very slight compared with that required for the digestion of starch.

It will thus be seen that the process of manufacturing sugar from its vegetable containers results in a product that for digestive purposes is comparable to partially digested starch, so that it is evident the substitution of sugar for starch is of advantage to the digestive system, since it does not burden the digestive tract and less force is required for its digestion and assimilation. Unfortunately, however, nature will not tolerate man's attempt to present concentrated chemically separated pure foods all ready for assimilation, except in limited amounts, and this is true of sugar, as of peptones, partially digested meats and similar foods.

How He Cured Her.

A young doctor took his best girl to the theater. The curtain was late in rising, and the young lady complained of feeling faint.

The doctor smiled sweetly upon her, took something out of his vest pocket and whispered to her to keep "the tablet" in her mouth, but not to swallow it.

She shyly placed it on her tongue and rolled it over and over, but it would not dissolve. She felt better, however.

When the performance was over, she slipped the tablet in her glove, being curious to examine at home this tasteless, indissoluble little substance which had given her such relief.

When alone in her room, she pulled off her glove, and out came a mother of pearl shirt button.

THE PARTING HOUR

There is pathos in the figure of Paul Kruger on the deck of the warship which is bearing him away from the continent which gave him birth.

Oom Paul may not appreciate the pathetic significance of the parting hour which sees his native land sink below the horizon.

An imaginative man would be tortured at such a time by his emotions. But Paul Kruger lacks imagination. His want of insight, his inability to appreciate imminent possibilities, was the undoing of the Boer nations.

A gross-minded man is Paul Kruger, with a nature which seems to have materialized all his views of religion and duty. The imagination which could have measured the reserve power of Britain was not given to him, nor the spiritual mind which could have prized the crown of the peace-maker between the warring races of South Africa far above the evil fame which has come to Kruger, the wrecker of two nations.

The Convent of the Sacred Heart in Calgary is prospering. More than 200 children frequent it, and nearly 40 boarders are sheltered under its roof. The time is not far off when they will be obliged to think of enlarging their beautiful establishment.

It is a significant fact that no candidate in Winnipeg has so far declared himself as a supporer of Mr. Sifton. Mr. Sifton is best known in Winnipeg.—London Free Press.

Sensationalism in African Affairs

Lord Roberts Will Not Leave as Soon as Expected.

Chinese Affairs.—Strong Opposition in England to Lansdowne as Foreign Secretary.—British-German Agreement.—Other General News.

London, Nov. 2.—A despatch to the Standard says that Lord Roberts, who was scheduled to leave South Africa on November 15th has postponed his departure owing to the fact that one of his daughters is ill with enteric fever at Pretoria.

The war office has received the following from Lord Roberts, dated Johannesburg, October 31: "Rundle occupied Bethlehem on October 21, driving the Boers from two strong positions three miles south of that place. General Rundle had three killed and 17 wounded, the latter including Lord Gerald Grosvenor, a second lieutenant in the Scots Guards. Rundle's men have been engaged daily with parties of Boers, varying in number from 30 to 150. He was compelled to burn Wessel's farm because a messenger carrying a proclamation was fired on from the verandah by Mrs. Wessels, who is a sister of Botha."

During October the British lost 167 killed in action, including 15 officers; died of disease, 21 who died of accidents, and 97 captured or missing. The total being almost equal to the monthly average for the duration of the war.

London, Nov. 3.—The Express publishes a sensational statement to the effect that the Boer revolt is more serious than has hitherto been believed and in consequence Lord Roberts' return is likely to be still further postponed.

It says also that no considerable portion of the troops will return before January or February, while the regimental drafts from England will continue and some 5000 horses will be sent out. The paper definitely declares that the Boers are well armed and abundantly supplied with ammunition and that the campaign is likely to last another six months. In the best informed quarters, however, it is reported there is no ground for the pessimism of the Express.

CHINESE AFFAIRS

Pao Ting Fu, Nov. 3.—The commissioner of enquiry into the outrages of misionaries htre, has sentenced to death, Tien Yang, the provincial judge; Wag Shung On, the military commander; General Kiu, and two other officials. German and French troops will garrison at Pao Ting Fu for the winter. The propositions were complete, when this message was sent, for the destroying on October 27th of the most venerated temples in the city.

OPPOSED TO LORD LANDSDOWNE

London, Nov. 2.—Conservative journals are protesting loudly and bitterly against the Marquis of Lansdowne being placed at the head of the foreign office.

Lord Salisbury, it is understood, made the selection against his own desire and against that of his party. The appointment was decided upon at the direct request of the Queen, who was visited at Balmoral a week ago by the premier. Not one of the ministerial organs can find a good word to say for the new foreign secretary. On the contrary all of them are of one opinion in their expressions of condemnation.

The Globe says: Lord Salisbury is out of touch with the feeling of the nation and of the party that has returned o power, and the other organs are in a state of disgust over the appointment.

Great Britain's new ministry, so far as the principal offices are concerned, will be about as follows:

Prime minister, Lord Salisbury.

Secretary of state for foreign affairs Lord Lansdowne.

First lord of the treasury, Arthur Balfour.

First lord of the admiralty, Earl of Selbourne.

Secretary of state for colonies, Jos. Chamberlain.

Chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach.

Secretary of state for home department, Charles Thompson Ritchie.

Secretary of state for India, Lord George Francis Hamilton.

Lord lieutenant of Ireland, Marquis of Londonderry or Earl of Dudley.

Lord high chancellor, Earl of Halsbury.

Lord president of the council, Duke of Devonshire.

Lord of the privy seal, Lord James of Hereford.

Secretary for Ireland, Geo. Wyndham.

Secretary of state for war, G. St. John Broderick.

President of the board of trade, G. William Balfour.

BRITISH GERMAN AGREEMENT

Washington, Nov. 1.—The state department today made public the British- Gorman agreement as regards maintaining the open door and territory in China, with the answer of the United States. This country acquiesces in the clauses referring to the open door but to the third clause, referring to prohibiting another power from obtaining territory, the state department says this government "does not regard it as called upon to express an opinion" in respect to it.

ROBBED IN PARIS

London, Nov. 3.—Mrs. Ian Hamilton, wife of General Hamilton, was robbed of her jewelery, money and papers while passing through Paris. She placed her bags containing her valuables in the hall of the Hotel Regina, while she went to register her name. In the brief interval the bag disappeared. The loss of her bank book left her entirely without funds. Until communications could be opened with her London bankers friends in Paris advanced her money. The French police have so far been unsuccessful in tracing the thieves. The stolen jewels alone were valued at over twenty-five thousand dollars.

C.P.R. FRAUDS AGAIN

Winnipeg, Nov. 3.—Two men were caught on the train travelling on tickets which they had purchased from people in Calagry who were not returning to the east. The men had to pay the railway company's local rates and were out of pocket to the extent of funds which they had given the parties in Calgary. The men who are disposing of these tickets are committing a fraudulent act, which should be put a stop to in order to save innocent people from being duped.

A FARMER DISAPPEARS

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 1.—The residents of Chilliwack district are exercised over the remarkable and complete disappearance of a farmer, Archibald Edmondson, since October 1st, on an alleged drunken spree. This was apparently his first, and fears are entertained of suicide as a consequence of the result.

DISASTROUS TYPHOON

Hongkong, Nov. 2.—A fearful typhoon has caused havoc through Anam. The area of destruction is very large and 1600 people are reported to have perished. Besides these killed 4650 persons were rendered homeless.

SPLENDID RECEPTION TO "OUR BOYS."

But Marred by Tarte's Disloyal Coldeness

Quebec, Nov. 5.—There was a large number of men of the R.C.A., Q.O., C.H. and 90th battalions at the I.C.R station at Levis when the train containing the South African contingent arrived at 5:30 on Saturday morning. The bugle band of the 8th was also in attendance. When the boys arrived they were received with cheers and fire works. After half an hour's stay the train proceeded to Montreal. It will stop over at St. Rosalie for a time, reaching Montreal at 1:30 p.m.

The contingent composed of 30 men which had been sidetracked at St. Charles, arrived at Levis at 9 o'clock and was met by the goverment steamer Druid and the parents of the returning men. When the Druid left Levis a salute of 29 guns was fired from the citadel. On landing, a procession was formed and the South African heroes were escorted through the principal streets of the city, which were gaily decorated and lined by cheering multitudes, to the skating rink. Here an address was read to Colonel Pelletier and his brave boys while the former was made the recipient of a handsome cabinet of cutlery presented on be-

The Reception at Ottawa

Ottawa, Nov. 5.—The city extended a memorable welcome to the returned soldiers on Saturday. The city was gay with flags. The train arrived at 2:45. On Metcalf street, Tarte's home was the only one not decorated, not even the tricolor being displayed. This has caused much adverse criticism. The governor general addressed the men on Parliament hill. At night the city was ablaze with illuminations and a great celebration is promised for today in Lansdowne park. Lady Minto will present the men with gold lockets.

The Unspeakable Tarte

Mr. Tarte's unpatriotic indifference to the welcome of the troops is being talked about. By some it was suggested to force the Liberal minister to hang out the union jack or the Canadian ensign. The opinion was freely expressed that had Tarte gone so far as to have displayed the tricolor of France and thus shown at least a measure of respect to the Canadian heroes, his offence against patriotic decency might in a measure have been condoned. Nothing however could remove the stigma already inflicted by the absence on the residence of the minister of public works of the smallest token of respect and honor which from a minister of the crown was at least due to the returning soldiers. It may be placed to the credit of the citizens of Ottawa that advantage was not taken of all the circumstances to create unpleasantness in the vicinity of Tarte's residence. The fact is, it seemed to be tacitly understood that to make a scene would diminish an established and most apparent reflection upon the disloyalty and neglect of the minister. But on every street corner and in every hotel rotunda the theme of Tarte's impassiveness is heard.

Montreal, Nov. 3.—An important document has just been issued signed by all the French-Canadian Conservative candidates in the province of Quebec. It is an eloquent and earnest protest against the dangerous and desperate appeals of the corrupt Tarte clique and is destined to exercise a sweeping influence on the electorate of this province. There has been a noticeable and extremely significant change in sentiment going on throughout the province during the last three days and the Conservatives are confident of carrying a large proportion of the 52 seats.

The document, signed by the Conservative candidates is as follows:

Finding the French Canadians rising in their might to overthrow the Tarte government, the Liberals have printed and issued at the last hour on the very eve of an election a pamphlet intended to rouse unthinking masses to the frenzy of a mob in the hope of carrying them to the ballot boxes blinded by racial prejudice. There never was a more deliberate attempt to raise a veritable race war and which if persisted in can scarcely end in anything but open rebellion or annexation.

It is the work of men driven by despair and who, rather than risk the will of the people at the polls, descend to the wretched expedient of arousing, by inflammatory appeals and imaginary stories, the worst passions that human beings can be guilty of. As the Boxer element in China roused to deeds of violence and bloodshed, so the Liberals in the pamphlet seek to dethrone reason and intelligence, and to drive our people of the province to acts that they may regret all their lives. Tarte and Blair and Sifton think they can deceive us French Canadians but let them beware.

The French Canadians are finding out that Mr. Tarte, who was a poor man in 1896, is now rich and lives luxuriously. He and his Liberal government have made life dear for the poor man. Clothing, coal oil, groceries, hardware, furniture, coal, everything is dearer now than when the Conservatives were in power. Tarte things by exciting us, the French Canadians, on the race question, he will make us forget the extravagance of the Liberal government, the corruption of the Liberal government, the scandals of the Liberal government. Tarte and Blair and Sifton think if they can only entrap the people into giving them another term any device or stratagem will do and then they can snap their fingers at the people. Blair has grown suddenly rich, and is buying for his house the finest picturers and works of art in Europe. Sifton rejoices in a princely expenditure in his own way.

All these men were poor men four short years ago. Now they are growing rich by leaps and bounds.

Laurier has no say, no power, no influence over these men, and has become their tool.

The outlook is black unless the peope use the only remedy open to a free people.

Glasgow is free from the bubonic plague now.

Several promotions in the Ninetieth battalion are promised.

The missing deeds stolen from the Vatican have been found.

The state of affairs at Pekin is said o be very demoralizing.

A heavy docket will come before the Winnipeg assizes on November 9th.

The changes in the minor British cabinet portfolios are announced.

Tarte only asks for one more term of power for his party. In another five years, says an exchange, he expects to be rich beyond the necessity of pulling political strings.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Today is a day, which is as yet of scarcely more than official and private observance, but which will eventually become one of the great public holidays of the Empire. It is the birthday of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales. The Prince is a personage of enormous popularity in the old country, where he is best known. He has recently expressed a strong wish to revisit Canada, which it is to be hoped that he will be able to carry out. His courtesies to the returning Canadian soldiers and the Bisley team have evinced his great appreciation of the good work our boys have done for the Empire and his desire for a better acquaintance with Canada and men and things Canadian. These signs shew that the prince is anxious to follow his great mother, Victoria the Well Beloved, in the task of empire building and empire binding. A visit from him to this loyal Dominion would be welcomed with immense enthusiasm and would be looked upon as the best token of the appreciation with which Canada's recent services to the Empire are regarded by the Imperial Royal family.

The Mining and Engineering Review considers it probable that the price of copper will advance toward the end of the year. The consumption of copper is continually on the increase in Europe. At the same time silver has touched 64 cents and the prospects are that it will continue to rise. These factors point to an increase of mining activity next year and North Kootenay should be one of the districts to profit by it. We must never let up till we get the transportation facilities, which alone will induce capital to take hold of the wonderful resources of the district.

A NOBLE DEATH

A Gallant Officer of the C. M. R. Dies to Save His Comrade.

The following thrilling record of gallantry concerns two officers of the C. M. R. both well known to many old Nor'Westers in town. Capt. Chalmers was an ex-inspector of the N. W. M. P. but had resigned his commission and left a flourishing surveyor's business in Edmonton to join the C. M. R. and met his death in South Africa. Saunders was an inspector in the Mounted Polic, well known in the force:

Lord Roberts in a despatch, dated Johannesburg, Nov. 5th, reports to the War Office as follows: "Smith-Dorien states that Major Saunders and Capt. Chalmers, of the Canadian Mounted Rifles, behaved with great gallantry in the action of Nov. 2nd. Saunders rode out under a heavy fire to bring in a horseless non-commissioned officer. Saunders was wounded and his horse was killed and Chalmers went to his assistance. Saunders implored him to leave, but was refused, and the gallant Chalmers was, I grieve to say, killed."
