FIVE ASSASSINATIONS IN TEXAS

In One Day.

DALLAS, Texas, August 21.—Police officers Albert P. Rawlins and Charles A. Daniels fought a duel with 45-calibre revolvers at 4 o'clock this morning. Rawlins was shot through the heart and also through the body from the right side, and died in five minutes. Daniels was shot in the upper part of the stomach, the ball coming out at the back close to the spine. He died in about an hour. Although twelve shots were fired the three mentioned were all that took effect.

The duel took place at Main and Poydras streets. Wildly fired bullets shattered windows in the American National Bank and the wholesale store of the Knepley Jewelry Company, between which the men fought.

Rawlins had been on the police force eleven years today. Daniels was formerly on the regular force, but was discharged about three years ago. Since then he has been a special policeman, doing watchman's duty at the American National Bank. He had frequently expressed the opinion that the influence of Rawlins and his friends was behind his being discharged. His statements reached the ears of Rawlins, and ill-feeling resulted, but no one considered it of a serious character.

Rawlins was off duty last night and got under the influence of liquor. He and a hackdriver were standing at Main and Poydras streets. He saw Daniels on the sidewalk opposite him, and applied an offensive term to him. Daniels walked over to where Rawlins stood and asked: "What was that you said?" Rawlins repeated his languageand both men drew their pistols and began shooting.

Rawlins was a natve of Bloomington, Illinois, and was thirty-seven years old. He was unmarried. Daniels was a native of this county. He was thirty-five years old, and leaves a widow, but no children.

At 8 o'clock tonight three more assassinations were reported, making a total of five in Dallas county today. At Simonsville, ten miles from the city, the wife of William Dougherty was mortally wounded and William Lincome instantly killed with buckshot by James and John Robinson. The latter have fled to the timber bottoms of Cedar creek, but was pursued by a sheriff's posse from the city. William Work, one of the oldest and best known business men of the city, was assaulted by a negro named Sol Smith, who fractured his skull in two places. Mr. Work is unconscious and physicians consider his injuries fatal. The negro hired a horse from Work's stable and used it badly. Work protested against this when the animal was returned, and the negro assaulted him because of what he said. The employees of the stable got a rope and tried to lynch the negro, but policemen arrived in time to take him to jail.

Boundary Freight.

E. W. Peters has issued a circular letter to the business men of the Boundary country. From it, it will be seen that the railway people expect the Robson-Penticton branch to reach Grand Forks by September 1st. It will probably not reach there on that date, but it will be at Grand Forks by the middle of September. The circular is as follows: "For your information I would advise that our track is now being laid across the Kettle river bridge at Cascade, and we expect to commence forwarding freight for above points by the end of this week. The chief engineer advises me that it should not take more than ten days longer to reach Grand Forks, when the track reaches that point freight for Grand Forks and points west will be forwarded there. Owing to our limited storage facilities, for the present consignees are requested to arrange to take prompt delivery of their goods after arrival at Cascade or Grand Forks. It is also imperative that properly signed orders for the delivery of all freight are forwarded to our agents at above points as no goods will be delivered to freighters unless they present such an order. All goods remaining on our hands after the receipt of advice by the consignees will be entirely at owner's risk.

Mining Operations on Eagle Creek.

W. A. Duncan returned yesterday from a visit to the Granite and Royal Canadian mines, which are operated by the Duncan Mines, Limited. He says that the company have ninety-two men in their employ developing the mines, grading the wagon road, and building the mill. On the Granite there are thirty-five men working on contract, and on the Royal Canadian there are twelve men. The machinery of the mill is being installed by the William Hamilton Company under the superintendence of D. J. McNally, and the mill will be completed in a couple of weeks. The wagon road is completed, and bunk-houses and a dining-room are being erected at the mine.

Justice Irving Returns.

VICTORIA, August 21.—Justice Irving, who has been in Atlin settling disputes over mining locations arrived back this evening on the steamer Alpha. The steamer brought about one hundred passengers and sixty thousand dollars in gold from the Klondike and Atlin. News has reached here of the drowning at Five Finger rapids of Frank Rickard of the party constructing the Dominion telegraph line to Dawson.

MANY LINES OF UNINTERESTING

Evidence Given Yesterday.

RENNES, August 21.—There was a large attendance at the Lycee at the opening of court at 6:30 this morning, in view of the possible reappearance of Maitre Labori, but though progressing satisfactorily, his physicians deemed it best for him to remain quiet. The court settled down quickly to business, and by nine o'clock five witnesses had appeared at the bar. If this rate continues, as calculated, the court will be through with ninety-odd witnesses by the beginning of September, and it is considered probable that the verdict will be delivered by September 7th.

Colonel Picquart, after protesting against the manner in which his correspondence was tampered with, expressed surprise that the question of the employment of secret service money should be constantly mixed up with the Dreyfus case, with which, he claimed, it had nothing whatever to do. He also denied he had given M. Lenoist the slightest information regarding the secret dossier, and said the only document of the dossier revealed, and that was not by himself, was the "cette canaille" document, which had been utilized by the enemies of Dreyfus. There was also the "Liberte" document, which was delivered to Esterhazy, "who used it to levy the most shameful blackmail on the government."

Major Lauth followed. He traversed the ground covered by his evidence before the criminal division of the court of cassation in regard to the circumstances under which Henry communicated the bordereau. He said that when the bordereau reached the intelligence department, Henry was absolutely the only officer who knew the agent who furnished it, and was the only officer known to the government. Henry, he explained, had appointments with the foreign spy in question only in the evenings, at eight or nine o'clock, at various places, so it was impossible for Henry to hand the papers to colonel Sandherr the same evening, therefore he took them home and brought them to the office in the morning. Very oftenthese appointments were kept on Saturday, and major Lauth believed the packet containing the bordereau was handed to Henry on Saturday, September 22nd, and was taken to the office on September 24th or another date, though it cannot matter much. I arrived at the office and was about to enter the room in which I usually work when Henry, who was talking in the corridor, called to me, and took me into his room. Captain Mathon arrived simultaneously. We had scarcely entered when Henry showed the packet received, and exhibiting some pieces he had pasted together said: "It is frightful; you just see what I have found in this packet." We walked to the window and all three began to read the contents of the paper, which was none other than the bordereau. We discussed who could be the author. I must add that M. Gribelin entered the room and was informed regarding the document at the same time. The bordereau was only shown to colonel Sandherr, half or three-quarters of an hour later, when he arrived. Next, discussing the petit bleu, major Lauth said it reached colonel Picquart enclosed in a packet early in March. Incidentally the witness mentioned the mission to Nancy on which Henry went, and said that while he was absent his wife came to the intelligence department to ask for his whereabouts, as she knew nothing of his departure. "It was the same with all the officers in the department," said Lauth. "Our families never knew where we were going when we were sent on a mission, and it was true the department corresponded with us. That proves that things were not conducted in the fourth bureau as alleged by colonel Picquart, and the officers were not so negligent and careless as he has asserted." The witness maintained this also disposed of Picquart's assertion that Henry was in the habit of working at home in the presence of servants. As a matter of fact, he added, the officers were very reserved before their families. Continuing, the witness proceeded to speak of Picquart's orders to destroy all evidence of the petit blue having been torn, and to determine the office by affixing a postmark, etc. "The spy Ceurs," said Lauth, "entered into relations with the ministry of war with the avowed purpose of avenging himself on his government. He refused to accept payment beyond his fare to Basle, as Ceurs was evidently an agent provocateur who had been sent to us. But we were never able to get anything of the slightest value from him. It has been said that we bullied him to prevent his speaking. I wish the person who made the statement to come here and repeat it. The truth was, we bullied him not to prevent his speaking, but because he refused to say anything which was not known."

Major Lauth's extremely long deposition was listened to in profound silence. He protested at Picquart's allegations against him in the course of the Tavernier enquiry, when he represented him as the instigator and, perhaps, also, the writer of the Henry forgery. "I declare," said Lauth, "that if by inspiring or writing it I had a share in any way whatever in the perpetration of the Henry forgery, I should have avowed it the day Henry committed suicide. I am not even now afraid of the razor, or the rope of Lemercier, or of Picquart, or even of a broken glass of Malette." After controverting further statements of Picquart, major Lauth, in conclusion, declared that Henry, "who knew nobody on the newspapers, held aloof from the press campaign organized in response to the friends of Dreyfus."

After a short adjournment the court re-assembled and the judges questioned major Lauth. They asked his opinion of the Schneider letter of November 30th, 1897. Witness replied that it was authentic and emanated from a general "Pierre."

Replying to M. Demange, witness said he never saw the photograph which certain newspapers had asserted he took, representing Picquart and Schwartzkoppen strolling arm and arm at Carlsbad. "I suppose it was I who took it," the witness added ironically. "M. Demange, I do not accuse you."

At the instance of M. Demange colonel Picquart again described the alterations of the petit bleu as he declared it was at the last time he saw it the day before he started on his mission. The petit bleu was still in the same condition as when major Lauth handed it to him in November, 1897. When Picquart saw it in the possession of general Pellieux, it seemed to him, Picquart, that the handwriting had been modified, and at the Tavernier enquiry he noticed that alterations of quite a serious character had been made. Ruled lines had been erased. Moreover, experiments showed the address had been written in ink made of gall, while a superimposed word was written in ink made of logwood.

Replying to the president of the court, major Lauth said that when he photographed the petit bleu he did not notice any signs of erasure. Picquart said the plate taken by major Lauth bore no traces of erasures. The photograph alone had been tampered with. Colonel Jouaust—"Was there an expert examination?" Picquart—"Yes, it was a searching enquiry."

Captain Junk followed. He said he was a probationer simultaneously with Dreyfus, but in another department of the war office. He saw the prisoner a great deal, and detailed conversations in which, he alleged, Dreyfus spoke of great sums he had lost in gambling and in his intercourse with loose women. "One day," the witness proceeded, "when we were visiting the colories shipiques, we met three immoral women, who bowed to us. Dreyfus returned their greeting, and I said to him: 'Well, for a married man, you have nice acquaintances.'" He replied that they were old friends of his batchelorhood, and pointing to one of them said her name was Valtesse and that she had a house on the Champs Elysee where she gave nice parties, where pretty women were to be met and where there was much gambling. Dreyfus also boasted of his large means, and spoke with great relish of his comfortable house and travels. The witness continuing, said Dreyfus was well acquainted with the scheme for the concentration of the troops and could trace it on the map as most of the other probationers could. Witness then detailed the work of the different bureaus and proceeded to demonstrate that the probationers were cognizant of the plans of the plans of the transport and concentration of the troops, and how Dreyfus was ordered to draw up a report on German artillery, comparing it with French artillery, and having access to all the necessary documents. In regard to the Madagascar note, Dreyfus, Junk claimed, told the witness that his cousin had procured him interesting information. Captain Junk then spoke of the efforts of Dreyfus to secure the firing manual, and discussed the theory that Henry might have divulged the documents in the bordereau. Such a supposition, the captain declared, was utterly impossible. Later the witness corroborated the statement that colonel Picquart proposed postmarking the petit bleu with the view of proving its genuiness.

General Fabre, former chief of the fourth bureau of the general's staff, on the witness stand today said that in his official capacity he compared the writing of the bordereau with the writing of various officers in his bureau, including the writing of a probationer, who had been in the bureau since the previous year, and who had not favorably impressed his comrades. This probationer Dreyfus, who was regarded as untrustworthy and insincere in his pretentions, was, according to the witness, equally disliked by his comrades and his superiors. He was constantly endeavoring by all sorts of means to learn the secrets of the plan of concentration of the eastern railway system and in his anxiety to secure information, neglected his duties. His official duties, witness said, placed it in Dreyfus' power to disclose the documents referred to in the bordereau. Witness could emphatically deny all Dreyfus had said on this subject. When major Bertin showed witness the bordereau, the latter was struck with the resemblance of the caligraphy. Dreyfus was the only officer who made a bad impression in the bureau, and the opinions of the chief of staff and heads of other departments confirmed the witness's belief. General Fabre, in conclusion, declared he was still as firmly convinced as in 1894, that the prisoner was the author of the bordereau.

After M. Demange had pointed out the discrepancy in M. Fabre's statements and those he gave in 1894, colonel Jouaust invited Dreyfus to reply. The prisoner said general Fabre quite correctly described the work on which he was engaged when a probationer, especially explaining that he had to keep the dossier relating to the concentration of the centres on the eastern system posted up. This was not a fictitious task. The prisoner's reply was made in calm measured tones and his frankness seemed to favorably impress the judges.

Colonel Dabovill, former deputy chief of the fourth bureau, related how Fabre had shown him a photograph of an anonymous note in which the writer intimated to his correspondent, "evidently foreign to the army," that he had confidential documents to communicate. The witness told Fabre that the documents mentioned, showed that the writer could only be an artillery officer, belonging to the general staff, who participated in the expeditions of the headquarters staff in June and July, 1894. The position of Dreyfus corresponded with these conditions, and "To their great surprise," a striking resemblance was apparent in the writings of Dreyfus and the anonymous letter." Witness further declared that only a probationer could possess the information mentioned in the bordereau. It was not only because of the resemblance in the handwriting that suspicions were directed at Dreyfus, but because he was in a position to be acquainted with the documents enumerated.

Pressmen in Victoria.

VICTORIA, August 21.—The Eastern Canadian Press Association, who make this the turning point of their excursion to the west, arrived on the Dominion steamer Quadra this evening, and will spend tomorrow in this city.

THE WEEKLY OUTPUT OF WEST KOOTENAY MINES

IN GOLD, SILVER, COPPER, AND LEAD.

In giving returns of the weekly shipments of ores from the various mines in West Kootenay district, it is almost impossible to give accurate figures. The management of some of the mines, like the Silver King at Nelson, refuse to give any figures, saying that they make monthly reports to their head office, etc., etc., etc. Of course, none of the mines controlled by the Mine Managers' Union care to give THE TRIBUNE any information whatever, for if THE TRIBUNE is able to show that the ore shipments are keeping up to the average of last year, then their contention that the mining industry has been killed by the operation of the eight-hour law is not good. The shipments for the week ending Saturday, August 19th, were as follows:

A GOVERNMENT AND A LACROSSE

Manager in Trouble.

Special to The Tribune.

VICTORIA, August 21. — Ex-attorney-general Martin, today answering a question whether he would vote against the Semlin government on other than personal issues said that nothing would please him better than to see the government defeated on the first day of the session. He added that with the defection of MacPherson, Higgins and himself there was no escape from defeat. The Province of Vancouver (government) discussing Helgesen's declared intention to go into opposition unless the eight-hour and alien exclusion acts are repealed, says, that as these form so prominent a part of the government's policy, Mr. Helgesen must, if correctly reported, be counted with the opposition, and the government's defeat is thus made inevitable.

Manager Wright of the Nelson lacrosse team has been proving the wisdom of THE TRIBUNE'S advice that they should dispense with a manager and hire a trainer. In Vancouver he has been prolonging a squeal commenced in Victoria about lack of hospitality in this city, and alleged cinching of the Nelson team for expenses he claims to have expected the James Bays to pay. Wright complains through the press of Vancouver that Victoria gave Nelson only $70, about half of which was required to pay advertising and other expenses, which he thinks the James Bays ought to have assumed. He adds words very offensive to Victoria citizens and newspapers. Secretary Dallain says in reply that he made arrangements for the match at the request of Wright, after explaining that as the game was set for the middle of the week, rather than Saturday, large gate receipts could not be expected. Notwithstanding this, Wright instructed Dallain to go ahead with the arrangements, and offered to play for net proceeds of gate, after paying the rental of the grounds and advertising. These stipulations are contained in the correspondence. The gross proceeds of the gate were $93, not $70, as Wright says. The net proceeds handed to the Nelson team were $70.

Accident to the Beaver.

TORONTO, August 21.—The greatest interest centered in the yacht race for Canada's cup which started at 11 o'clock this morning. There is a greater gathering of yachts in the harbor than was ever gathered in fresh water before, including any number of Americans. The weather is very breezy and will test the capabilities of the yachts to the utmost. The Canadian yacht Beaver, owned by George Gooderham, G. A. Cox, F. G. Cox, A. E. H. Massey and others, and is sailed by Æmilius Jarvis, and the American yacht Genessee, representing the Chicago Yacht Club, is owned by the Rochester Yacht Club and sailed by Charles G. Davis. Both boats come within the limit of the 35-foot class. To-day's course is a triangle on Lake Ontario south of the island, each side of the triangle being about seven miles.

Later—Race was half an hour late in starting. It did not begin till 11:30. The Genessee then had the advantage by five seconds in the start. In fifteen seconds the Beaver had overtaken the Genessee and was passing the American boat when the throat halyard on the Beaver parted, and her lee spreader broke. This put the Beaver out of the race and the Genessee is going over the course alone. A great crowd of crafts was on the lake watching the race and the keenest disappointment was felt at its tame conclusion.

Part of the Dossier Withheld.

PARIS, August 21.—The Echo de Paris, in commenting upon the testimony offered at Rennes by major Cuignet, former attache of the ministry of war, to whom was assigned last the task of collecting matter bearing upon the Dreyfus, Picquart and Esterhazy affairs, says: "Major Cuignet's evidence shows that the whole secret dossier has not been communicated to the court martial. A document has been withheld which proves the existence of a vast network of espoinage under the direction of foreign military attaches and of negotiations on the subject of the Dreyfus case between several French notabilities and the representatives of foreign powers. The dossier, moreover, contains proofs that the sum of 35,000,000 francs was received in France from abroad for the purpose of prosecuting a pro-Dreyfus campaign." According to the Echo de Paris, as a consequence of major Cuignet's evidence general Chanoine, who took the war office secret dossier to Rennes, has started suddenly for Paris.

A CARIBOO M. P. P. DECLARES

What He Will Do Politically.

Ashcroft Journal.

H. Helgesen, M.P.P., who returned to Cariboo this week, and is just down from Atlin, where he spent the season, says that Cariboo mines are good enough for him yet, and that while there are gold properties that will pay for working in Atlin, everything is as yet undeveloped and the country has been unduly boomed as a gold camp. Politically, Mr. Helgesen said, in a conversation with a representative of the Journal, that the laws passed last session had been in several cases against his judgment, and that the mining regulations now in force should be radically changed. That he was unable last session to get absolutely necessary appropriations for roads in Cariboo, and that many things should have been done that were not to improve Cariboo's condition. It being suggested that had Messrs. Helgesen and Kinchant stood together and made absolute demands the government could not possibly have refused any request of theirs, Mr. Helgesen agreed, but stated that at that time, for reasons it was impossible to give now, they did not do so. He is now on his way to visit his constituency and will give an account of his stewardship. Mr. Helesen authorized the Journal to say as his unalterable conclusions, first, that the eight-hour law was unwise legislation and should not have been passed, at least at this time, and that various rulings by the minister of mines must be changed; second, that the anti-alien legislation was a mistake; third that if the present government does not at the very earliest date repeal these obnoxious measures and make new regulations in the mining department, amending the license act, etc., and give to Cariboo the attention it should but has not received at its hands, he will withdraw his support and will sit at the coming session in the opposition. That this statement was made after careful consideration and as an expression of his views to be given his constituency. The conversation took place in the presence of several mining men, residents of Cariboo and constituents of Mr. Helgesen, who, to a man, assured him that his present views were those of at least the great majority if not of all his constituents.

A Smelting Messiah.

Greenwood Times.

Paul Johnson is here. He is the smelting Messiah who is to deliver the people from any disappointment because of the installation of the Graves' smelter at Grand Forks. Mr. Johnson means business, and evidently means to stay. He is armed with half a dozen trunks, and as many valises, a million dollars or so, and an enviable reputation as a successful smelter expert. He is here representing the British Columbia Copper Company of New York, and as an earnest of his intention to erect a smelter he brought with him John Norborn, the mining machinery expert of the Union Iron Works, San Francisco. Mr. Johnson is the heavy weight among the experts. He carries around some 280 odd pounds daily and still remains a genial, jovial gentleman. Mr. Johnson was not desirous of making public the details of his plans, but he stated positively that he was here to build a large smelter. Questioned as to the location, Mr. Johnson stated that he would make a thorough inspection of the district. When asked regarding a water supply he laughed. "That does not need to frighten anyone," he said. "Water is not a serious consideration with the latest methods for taking care of the slag. Any of the small streams in this locality has sufficient water for a big smelter."

City of Victor Burned Down.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colorado, August 21.—Fire has utterly destroyed the business portion of the city of Victor, causing a loss estimated at $2,000,000. Beginning shortly after noon the fire raged until evening, consuming everything in its way. It had its origin, it is thought, in the Merchant's cafe, adjoining the Bank of Victor on the corner of Third street and Victor avenue. A strong wind from the north fanned the flames, and in a few minutes all the surrounding houses were afire. Help was summoned from Cripple Creek, but the town had been built in the early days of the camp and was of pine timber for the most part and burned like paper. Efforts were made to stop the progress of the flames by blowing up the buildings in its path by means of dynamite, and all afternoon the streets roared with the explosions.

Is it a Bonanza?

The owners of the Queen group, which adjoins the Yellowstone mine, are in pretty good spirits over reports recently received from the property. The ledge has been crosscut for thirteen feet, and the footwall is not yet in sight. From samples brought to Nelson the following assay returns were had: No. 1—Gold $58.40 and 4.6 ounces silver; No. 2—Gold $4.20 and 1.8 ounces silver; No. 3—Gold $53.20 and 4.2 ounces silver; No. 4—Gold $16.20 and 2.6 ounces silver; No. 5—Gold $45.80 and 1.08 ounces silver.

The only government that would suit a large percentage of the people of British Columbia is one that would spend money right and left for roads, trails and bridges. When the credit of the province would become exhausted, then the government would be blamed for extravagance and be ousted from office. A government that manages the affairs of the province as a careful business man manages his own affairs is not wanted—long.

THE Greenwood Times says: "What "the province needs is an attorney-gen-"eral with Joe Martin's strength without "his weakness." What the province needs most is fewer dampfool newspapers and lawyers in office.

ONE of the lame-duck organs of the opposition contends that the people should be given a chance at the polls to give expression to their views on the eight-hour law, and hints that one of the members from Kootenay should resign in order that a test be made. Well, let colonel Baker make a trial of it in his district.

THERE are newspapers in this province that make a feature of abusing those who differ with them, and the abuse is seldom couched in honeyed phrases. When called down, they whimper and play the baby act. The Greenwood Miner is one of them.

A Precious Lot of Scoundrels.

Toronto Telegram.

The French generals who are practically on trial before the Dreyfus tribunal seem to be relieved by the disappearance of Maitre Labori. A prisoner, crippled by the attempted assassination of his counsel, is denied the privilege of delay, and his trial is hurried on at race-horse speed. The anxiety of the French generals to take advantage of the attack on Labori would almost indicate that they are not exactly out of sympathy with the attempt to assassinate the defender of Dreyfus. Poor France seems to have pinned her faith to an army which is controlled by a precious lot of scoundrels.

How a Filipino Dies.

The general, in a white hat, was marching in advance of the firing line, when the discharge of a rifle was heard in the yard of a house next the road, says John F. Boss in Harper's Weekly. Several soldiers rushed into the yard, but not in time to prevent two more shots, which came whizzing in the direction of the general. At this moment I came to a break in the hedge where I could see what was going on. A young Filipino was about thirty yards off. He was turning this way and that like an animal at bay, thoroughly frightened. He had a rifle in his hand. It afterwards turned out that this rifle was choked. The soldiers were breaking down the high hedge to get in. Suddenly the Filipino made a run for life. He got through the hedge some way and dashed across an open field. Three shots followed, all of which took effect. The wounded man turned, ran sideways a few paces, lay down on the ground and a second after was dead. I got a good sight of the whole incident, and so naturally did the Filipino stretch himself along the ground and rest his head upon his arm that I thought he was shamming. An examination a minute later proved that he was dead. There is a difference between the manner in which American and Filipino soldiers die—the American falls in a heap and dies hard; the Filipino stretches himself out, and when dead is always found in some easy attitude, generally with his head on his arms. They die the way a wild animal dies—in just such a position as one finds a deer or an antelope which one has shot in the woods.

The difference between the Judge and the Bishop may be that the Judge can say "you be hanged," while the Bishop can say "you be damned." On the other hand when the Judge says "you be hanged," you are hanged. Next to the value offered, the most marked peculiarity of our Wall Paper is that when the Judge has made his selection and says "you be hanged," it is hanged; not even the cheapest grades giving trouble. There are papers that are beyond the jurisdiction of the Judge and come under that of the Bishop. There is an art in avoiding this kind—this art has been our study.

HOW A COMPANY WAS WRECKED.

George J. Goodhue, manager of the Kootenay Water Supply Company, is fully prepared to meet the charges made in New York, in which he, with one or two of the other stockholders, are accused of being responsible for the wrecking of that company.

"In the first place," says Mr. Goodhue, "I am not the manager of the company and have not been for some time. I had resigned and my accounts had all been checked up and reported correct before any of the trouble which led to the breaking up of the company occurred.

"The Kootenay Water Supply Company was organized in 1894, and I was elected one of the directors and managers. I had, prior to this time secured a 10-year lease on the property of the Kootenay Hydraulic Mining Company, near Waneta, fifty miles below Nelson, having obtained the lease by agreeing to put in a $40,000 placer mining plant. For the purpose of raising the money to do this the company was organized. A large portion of the stock was subscribed at Rochester, New York, and New York city, the principal place of business being at Rochester.

"As soon as the company had been organized, I, as the manager, opened an office at Waneta, and took personal charge of the work being done there. The plant was put in, but instead of costing $10,000 it necessitated an expenditure of $55,000, all of which went through my hands, and was accounted for in my accounts, which was afterward approved at a meeting of the stockholders.

"Shortly after the organization of the company the principal offices were moved from Rochester to New York city, the prime movers in this change being Stuart W. Cowan and Rev. Lewis R. Streeter. Cowan was one of the heaviest stockholders of the company, and he an Streeter together representing the controlling interest. Streeter himself, however, did not own the amount of stock accredited to him in the New York story, but as he says, held considerable stock in trust for other parties. It was not for the company, however, that he held this stock, but for a syndicate of the New York stockholders, who had him represent them for the purpose of moving the offices to New York.

"The entire business at the New York end was in the hands of Cowan and Streeter, and it was through them and by them that the stock of the company was disposed of there. I had nothing whatever to do with the management of the affairs of the company, except at this end of the line. I had my office at Waneta, where I was assisted by my brother, who was then vice-president. While the plant was being put in all of the directors visited the property at different times and expressed themselves well satisfied with the prospects.

"In July, 1897, a meeting of the directors was held in my office at Waneta, at which president Cowan, who had been elected to that position the year before, and directors Streeter and John Dawson were present. As I was also a director at that time, there was a majority of the board present. At this meeting I tendered my resignation as manager. No one was elected to fill my place, but Cowan, as president of the company, took possession of the books and records of the office and installed himself as manager, my brother remaining with him as bookkeeper. With Cowan at the head, the works were kept going till September, when they were closed down, and have never since been started up again. After resigning I have gone east and had nothing more to do with the management of the company.

"During the time I had been in charge at Waneta, I had kept the most careful account of all the business of the company, which had passed through my hands. Not only did I take vouchers for all of the expenditures made by me, but even the items on the various bills were copied into the journal, every cent being accounted for.

"When the works closed down in September, 1897, Cowan returned to New York, taking the books with him. The company had had an account with the Traders' National Bank of Spokane, through which I transacted all of my business. When I resigned my position as manager there was an overdraft against the company at the bank, and after Cowan took charge of the affairs at Waneta there was a further overdraft of about $1900, making the total amount overdrawn somewhere in the neighborhood of $6000, and this is the indebtedness for which the stockholders allowed a plant that had cost them $55,000 to be sold on a judgment.

"I had signed the checks as manager of the company, and when the cash for the overdraft was not forthcoming the bank attached some O. K. Mining Company stock, of which I was the owner as security. This attachment was afterward released, however, when the bank learned the circumstances, and the property of the company was held for the account.

"About a year after I had resigned, and while I was in Chicago, I learned that a committee had been appointed by the stockholders to investigate the affairs of the company, and although I was sick at the time I hurried to New York to be present at the meeting of the stockholders at which this committee was to report. At that meeting the committee reported that it had my books and accounts examined by an expert and that they were absolutely correct in every respect.

"In regard to the 2 per cent assessment. That was made after I was out of the management, and I had nothing to do with it, but the money raised was not applied to the payment of the overdraft at the bank.

"After the assuming of the control of the management by Cowan the bank started suit against the company for the amount of the overdraft and some labor bills which had been assigned to them, securing a judgment, under which the property of the company was sold, leaving it with no assets whatever, but before this was done the bank had released my stock from attachment.

"If there was anything crooked in the management, we knew nothing of it, and it took place after I had given up my position as manager. I am inclined to believe, however, that there was nothing wrong with the management, but that the wrecking of the company was due to a combination of unfortunate circumstances, and the allowing of the plant to be sold when a little money would have saved it. My entire connection with the company is open to the inspection of any of the stockholders and my books will always stand the test of an examination."

Output of Certain Metals.

The largest output of certain metals ever recorded in any one year in the history of American mining, stands to the credit of 1898. The increased price of copper stimulated the production of aluminum to 5,200,000 pounds, an increase of 1,209,000 over that of 1897. The price per pound was about 38 cents. The copper output was 535,800,000 pounds, a large increase over that of 1897. Our gold production was valued at $65,082,430, while our silver output, reaching 58,763,127 ounces, was valued at only 59 cents an ounce against 60.35 cents in 1897. The pig iron product was 11,500,165 long tons. Three hundred ounces of platinum was produced, worth $12.80 an ounce. Phosphate rock, weighing 1,257,645 long tons, was produced, as against 1,007,367 long tons in 1897, the increase coming from Tennessee and Carolina. The United States is, truly, a great mining country. Its possibilities are not, nor can they be, measured by last year's output. Large increases in the production of all the metals, except silver, may be recorded at the close of the present year. The production of lead does not appear in the above. Causes over which lead mine operators have had much to contend with during the current year may curtail its production in 1899. But gold, copper and aluminum may require larger figures to measure their outputs at its close.

Convict Statesmen.

As regards length and variety of prison experience, Michael Davitt, M.P., is unapproachable. He has spent nine years in confinement, and is intimately acquainted with the interior of an equal number of jails. He is, besides, the only parliamentarian who has turned his prison experiences and observations to literary account. He is the author of "Leaves from a Prison Diary." Last, but not least, is Edward Gibbon Wakefield, one of the most remarkable of convict statesmen. He served a sentence of three years' imprisonment in Newgate for abducting an heiress, and succeeded in living down this very unpleasant stigma of his early youth. He afterwards devoted his whole time and attention to the study of colonization. He acted as private secretary to the earl of Durham during the latter's mission of pacification to Canada. He was subsequently one of the principal founders of the colonies of South Australia and New Zealand. To the latter colony he emigrated from England in 1852, and it became his permanent home. He was a prominent member of the early parliaments, and rose to high distinction in its public life.

The Alien Game.

Toronto Telegram.

United States capitalists are in a position to seriously impair Canada's ability to compete with the American ironmasters in the markets of the world. A little money and less foresight will enable these aliens to purchase Ontario's iron ranges and protect the American ranges against competition by a long-continued lock-up of the Canadian deposits. Ontario is hoping for rich results from the activity of American iron men in this province. Their activity may mean that they are taking time by the forelock and getting hold of deposits with intent to prevent Canadian iron from meeting American products on the markets of the world. Ontario's timber and nickel policy has been the desire to lay hold of the immediate penny at the risk of losing the ultimate dollar. The sale of vast tracts of iron lands to aliens at a few cents per acre may prove to be bad business if these aliens retard the development of the Canadian iron industry for the sake of increasing the value of the output of their American properties.

Silk Blouses Fashionable.

Never were white silk blouses as fashionable as they are this midsummer season. The fad has extended to gowns, and the search for novelty in their makeup has resulted in a far more effective decoration than the multitudinous tuckings of the last few months. Now your blouse or gowns must have applique designs in Irish point lace, which have a transparent effect over a colored lining, as the white silk is cut away under the lace so as to leave this lining visible. A white glace silk gown which is arranged in this way and is trimmed with Irish point lace in a deep shade of ecru over a lining of lily-leaf green soft satin, is a thing of beauty. To be worn with this is one of the newest French hats, in soft white crinoline, with a wide bent-about brim and a high transparent crinoline crown. This hat is tied under the chin with a narrow black ribbon and trimmed with a mass of roses, shading from the palest pink to the deepest damask, and tied in the centre of the front with a stiffly wired bow of turquoise green ribbon.

THE FINEST PLEASURE RESORT IN KOOTENAY

THE LOCAL NEWS OF THE TOWN

Coming Next Saturday.

Mayor Neelands has received a telegram sttaing that the Canadian Press Association will arrive here next Saturday evening, instead of Friday as expected, and will leave again for the Crow's Nest on Sunday evening. This has considerably altered the arrangements made for their entertainment and they will not be able to see as much of the city and the neighborhood as had been hoped. The party leave Rossland at 3 p.m. on Saturday, and arrangements will be made for light refreshments to be served them on the steamer at Robson. The train will be stopped for about twenty minutes at Bonnington Falls to permit of the visitors getting a glimpse of the falls and the power house. This will bring them in here about 8 p.m., when it is the intention to entertain them at a dinner to be given at the opera house, at which music will be provided and the speeches customary on such occasions made. A committee consisting of the mayor, alderman Hillyer, H. J. Evans, W. A. Jowett, H. W. R. Moore and J. E. Annable has been appointed to look after and make the necessary arrangements for the catering.

Clean Out the Reservoir.

Kasloites say their reservoir is cleaned out every six months. However this may be the reservoir at Nelson has not been touched this year, with the result that creeping and horrible things of different kinds abound therein. On Sunday morning a long thin thing like a very slender worm about a foot long, came through the pipe into a pipe in a private house in town. The creature was caught and now to be seen in a bottle at the Bodega saloon. This is not the first time that complaints have been made of the unusual appearances in the supposedly pure city water.

Merely a Straw.

The following is on extract from a letter written by a man who is doing business at a station on one of the railways operating in the Slocan. The letter was addressed to a resident of Nelson, and accompanying it was a check for a substantial sum, payment on an old account. The extract goes to show that business is not dead in the Slocan, even though some of the big producing mines refuse to ship ore: "Considering the state of things in general, I am not doing too bad here. My sales will exceed $1000 this month, while the present season gives indications for this place which a year ago I or few others thought of."

So Rich That Assaying is Not Necessary.

Development on the Birdseye, which adjoins the Athabasca and Juno, is being attended with results that exceed the most sanguine expectations of the Wilson brothers, who have the property under bond. A tunnel is being driven on the vein and there is now six feet of free milling quartz in the face of the tunnel which shows visible gold everywhere. The tunnel has already been driven through thirteen feet of this rich stuff. The ore is obviously so exceedingly rich that R. C.
