ESTABLISHED 1892 — FRIDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 20, 1901 — DAILY EDITION

WILL FIGHT TO A FINISH

NOT AGAINST AN INDIVIDUAL LIKE BERNARD MACDONALD

But for the Inherent Rights of Freeborn British Subjects and American Citizens.

ROSSLAND, September 19.—[Special to The Tribune.]—Last night at the regular meeting of the miners' union a very large number were in attendance, greater in fact than at any meeting since the strike commenced. The following preamble and resolution was unanimously carried:

"Whereas, it has been announced that the new directors of the Le Roi and allied mining companies will continue to uphold the policy toward labor organizations as laid down by Bernard Macdonald; and

"Whereas, the executive board of the Western Federation of Miners have endorsed the strike now in force at Rossland, and have promised every support, financially and otherwise, to bring the strike to a successful conclusion, and we have not come out in this strike against Bernard Macdonald or any man, but in a struggle for common justice, and in defense of our rights to a voice in the terms of our employment. Without this we are the slave of the employer and lack that inherent share of the freedom which is the heritage of every British subject or American citizen. Therefore, be it,

Resolved, that we, the Miners' Union of Rossland, continue the strike as carried on at present to a successful conclusion at whatever personal sacrifice may fall to our lot."

Out of respect to the late president of the United States, all business was practically suspended here today from high noon until 4 p. m. A parade of about 700 people, composed of members of the labor unions, fraternal societies, and citizens, marched through the streets this afternoon to Miners' Union hall, where a special memorial service was held.

ROSSLAND, September 19.—[Associated Press.]—The McKinley memorial service today was the occasion of a remarkable out pouring of public spirit in the loyal Canadian city of Rossland. At noon a procession one mile long and containing two thousand marching men paraded the principal streets of the city, led by British and American flags, borne respectively by veterans of the South African and Philippine wars. A mass meeting took place, to which hundreds were unable to obtain admittance. Business was suspended throughout the city by the mayor's proclamation, and all buildings were draped in mourning, while hundreds of flags floated at half-mast, including the big standard at Mount Roberts, 6650 feet above sea level and 2500 feet above the city. The procession was witnessed by 5000 citizens. At Union hall 3000 people gathered, many being turned away. On the reading desk was a magnificent eagle with wide spreading pinions. Mayor Lalonde opened the proceedings and the other speakers were Revs. Sanford, Methodist; Robinson, Presbyterian; Welsh, Roman Catholic; and Hedley, Anglican. American residents have issued a warm note of thanks to the citizens generally for the spirit manifested.

Memorial Services at Greenwood.

GREENWOOD, September 19.—[Special to The Tribune.]—Business was entirely suspended in Greenwood this afternoon out of respect to the memory of the late president McKinley. In the evening a memorial service was held in the Auditorium, the largest hall in the town. This service was very numerously attended, the hall and galleries being crowded to the doors, British subjects uniting with the American citizens resident here to do honor to the memory of the dead president. The local lodge of Knights of Pythias met in their lodge room and marched in the procession, thence to the place of meeting, headed by the Greenwood band playing a funeral march. As they filed into the seats reserved for them in the crowded hall, the Dead March in Saul was played on the organ. The proceedings were opened by Rev. Knox, Methodist minister, reading the burial service of the Knights of Pythias. Then followed an address by mayor Jakes, who expressed on behalf of the British citizens of Greenwood grief at the great tragedy which had deprived the people of the United States of their honored head. On this suggestion, an American citizen was then appointed to preside over the gathering. Frederick Keffer, general manager for the British Columbia Copper Company, and a native of Cleveland, Ohio, was called to the chair. Addresses by the chairman, H. C. Shaw, Duncan Ross, W. G. Gaunce, Rev. Mr. Cox as spokesman for the Knights of Pythias, Robert Mayock, and Elwood G. Owen were interspersed with suitable hymns led by the combined choirs of the Greenwood churches. Rev. Mr. Millar, Presbyterian minister, closed the service with prayer, after which "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," was sung. The hall was elaborately hung with mourning drapery, with groups of American and British flags here and there, and a large picture of the late president over the chairman's chair.

Vancouver Local News.

VANCOUVER, September 19.—[Special to The Tribune.]—D. McIntyre of Similkameen arrived here today en route to Honolulu, having sold three claims near Princeton to American capitalists for $100,000, a payment of $30,000 cash having been made. A shipment of $20,000 in gold from the Cariboo hydraulic mine was received at the Dominion assay office here today. A seam of coal has been discovered at Greer's beach, on the English bay water front. The seam is three feet wide and fairly good lignite. A company composed of W. H. Quann, J F Garden, A. McNair, and other prominent citizens has been been formed to work the prospect

WORLD'S FASTEST VESSEL

Goes to the Bottom of the Sea.

LONDON, September 18.—The torpedo boat destroyer Cobra has foundered in the North Sea, as the result of an explosion. The vessel was en route from the yard of her builders, the Armstrongs of Newcastle, to Portsmouth and carried a navigating crew of from 50 to 60 men. It is reported that all were lost with the exception of about a dozen persons. The first intimation of the disaster was the arrival of a fishing boat at Yarmouth with six bodies, which she picked up in the spot where the Cobra was last seen. According to the fishermen the Cobra was sighted by the lightship off Downing Sands yesterday morning, enveloped in steam, and soon afterwards she disappeared. The men on the lightship supposed that the Cobra had sailed away until the evening, when they observed the bodies floating in the water, and signalled the fishing boat to investigate the disaster. A dispatch from Middleboro says that twelve survivors of the crew of the Cobra were landed there this morning, and confirms the first report that all the others were drowned. The British admiralty has received information that the explosion occurred after the Cobra had struck a rock, and that she sank immediately. The Cobra, like her sister boat the Viper, was a turbine-engine vessel. She had just left the yard of her contractors and was undergoing a boiler test. About one year ago the torpedo boat destroyer Cobra beat the record of the Viper and won the title of the fastest vessel in the world, making 37.7 knots, or 43.5 miles an hour.

LONDON, September 19.—The Cobra had on board 42 naval men and about 45 men in the employ of the contractors. So far as known, the 12 men previously referred to are the only survivors. Five boats were launched after the Cobra struck, but some of them were swamped in the heavy sea.

One More British Disaster.

PRETORIA, September 18.—Lord Kitchner announces that the Boers, on September 17th, ambushed three companies of mounted infantry with three guns commanded by major Gough in the vicinity of Scheeper's Nek. After a severe fight, the British were overpowered and lost their guns, the sights and breechlocks of which were first destroyed. Two officers and 14 men were killed, and 5 officers and 25 men wounded. Five officers and 150 men were made prisoners. Major Gough, who escaped during the night, reports that the Boers numbered a thousand men, and that they were commanded by general Botha. General French reports that commandant Smuts, in order to break through a cordon, rushed on a squadron of the 17th Lancers at Elandsriverpoort, killing 3 officers and 20 men and wounding 1 officer and 30 men. The Boers, who were dressed in khaki and were mistaken for British troops, lost heavily.

A Clue to a Conspiracy.

DES MOINES, Iowa, September 19.—On the person of a wounded prisoner, an Anarchist, the police found a letter, mailed from Los Angeles two weeks before the shooting of president McKinley, which promises to furnish a clue to a conspiracy. The letter contains two printed circulars, a strange mixture of letters and figures. They have been partially translated. Some of the expressions already deciphered are, "Beasts at Buffalo exposition," "Whatever happens is to be repeated," Lincoln's assassination," "Real Anarchist known only to Iews, the light," "Anarchist dreams of duty," "So in the matter of the president's life," "People perish for lack of wisdom," and others. The circular is headed "The Eagle Eye," and the words are ingeniously woven with numerals, broken at points so as to appear as biblical references.

Vessel and All on Board Lost.

DETRIOT, September 19.—A special to the Tribune from Sault Ste. Marie says: The steamer Nicholas, which arrived her from Duluth today, brought the report that the steamer Hudson foundered off Eagle river last Monday, her crew of 25 men being drowned in the heavy sea. The story clears up the mystery of the sinking of a steamer with two stacks seen from the shore on Monday, when the report was sent out that the crew had been rescued by a steamer nearby. That steamer now proves to have been the Nicholas. Mr. McLean says he had all he could do to keep his own vessel afloat in the heavy sea and was unable to succor the men who were hanging to the rail of the sinking Hudson. The Hudson was bound from Duluth to Buffalo with a full cargo of flour, grain, and general merchandise.

Appointment for Dr. Rixey.

CANTON, Ohio, September 19.—It has been specially announced that medical inspector P. M. Rixey will be appointed surgeon-general of the navy to succeed surgeon-general Van Reypen upon the expiration of the latter's term of office.

THE FUNERAL AT CANTON

M'KINLEY LAID AT REST IN HIS HOME TOWN.

The People of the Ohio City Pay Their Last Respects to Their Illustrious Dead.

CANTON, Ohio, September 19.—As the time approached for bearing the body of the dead president from the McKinley home to the church today, the little cottage of North Market street was the center of a vast concourse of people. Regiment after regiment of soldiers, acting as guards, were in triple lines from the curbs back to the lawns. In front of the McKinley cottage was drawn up the two files of bearers, eight soldiers of the army and eight sailors of the navy, waiting the orders to take up the casket. At this time the black chargers of the Cleveland troops swept down the street, the riders four abreast, in their brilliant hussar uniform, with flags bound in crepe and every sabre hilt bearing its fluttering emblem of mourning. Their coming was the signal for the approach of the president and the members of his cabinet.

It was 1:15 o'clock, and the time had come for taking up the body. A brief service had been held within the darkened chamber, Dr. Manchester saying a prayer while the relatives gathered around and Mrs. McKinley listened from the half opened door of her adjoining room. A solemn hush fell upon the multitude as the bearers advanced with measured tread. Not a bugle blast went up, not a strain of the hymns the dead ruler had loved so well was heard. The scene was majestic in its silence. As the casket was borne along above the line of heads could be seen enfolding stars and stripes, and on top great masses of white roses and delicate lavender orchids. Tenderly the coffin was committed to the hearse, and the silence was broken as the order to march passed from officer to officer.

The great procession now took up its mournful journey, passing under the sweep of giant arches robed in black, between two living lines of humanity massed along the streets, covering house to house, and filling the windows. The church bells were tolling, mingling their dismal tones with the cadence of the funeral dirge. At either side of the hearse marched the guard of military and naval honor, then generals on the right led by general Miles, and admirals on the left led by admiral Farquhars. Then came the long line of carriages for the relatives and friends, and after them the innumerable military and civic organizations that are assembled to pay this last honor to the fallen chief. In the line were division after division of Knights Templars, Knights of Pythias, Masons, Odd Fellows, and representatives of benevolent orders, chambers of commerce, as well as delegations of citizens of cities and towns throughout the state and country.

It was 1:50 o'clock when the procession passed the Court House and turned into Tuscarawas street to the stately stone edifice where the funeral services were to be held. At the church entrance were drawn up deep lines of soldiers, with bayonets advanced, keeping a clear area for the advancing casket and the long train of mourners. The hearse halted while president Roosevelt and the members of the cabinet alighted. Again they grouped themselves at either side of the entrance, and with uncovered heads waited the passing casket. Then the flower-covered coffin was brought from the hearse, and as it passed the black draped entrance, the president and his cabinet followed within the edifice. The mourners, too, passed inside but the stricken widow was not among them. She had remained behind in the old home, along with her grief.

The scene within the church when the casket was carried in on the brawny shoulders of the soldiers and sailors was profoundly impressive. The members of the senate and the house of representatives had preceded the coffin through the door at the side of the chancel through which it entered. They were ushered as at all state ceremonies by the sergeant-at-arms of each body. Senators Allison of Iowa and Bates of Tennessee headed the senatorial representation, of which there was about forty, and speaker Henderson and representative Dalsell of the house, of which more than half of the membership must have been present.

CANTON, September 19.—It was after 3 o'clock when the silent and anxious throngs outside the church saw the solemn pageant appear through the church doors. First came the guard of military and naval honor, the generals, and admirals, forming a double line leading from the entrance to the waiting hearse. Again the flag-draped casket, with wealth of flowers, appeared and was committed to the hearse. The president and members of the cabinet followed arm-in-arm and stepped into the waiting carriages. The relatives entered carriages next. Then the squadron of troopers broke their battalion front and wheeling into platoons took up the march to the grave. The line of the funeral from thechurch to the cemetery was about one and a half miles in length.

For hours before the time set for the commencement of the funeral services at the McKinley home, the streets along the entire length of the line of march was crowded wih spectators. From the gates of the cemetery to the doors of the church here was on each side of the street an almost unbroken line of soldiers, and on all the intersecting streets 100 feet from the thoroughfare on which the cortege was to go, and nobody was permitted to go in either direction. It was exactly four minutes after four when the funeral car bore the remains of the dead president through the gateway of his last resting place. Twenty minutes after that time the brief services at the vault were over and members of the family and the distinguished men of the nation who had come so far to do him honor had passed through the gates on their way homeward.

Revs. G. S. Bland and A. A. Cameron delivered brief sermons. The church was draped for the occasion.

BERLIN, September 19.—Memorial services were held in the American chapel here today in honor of the late president McKinley. The Prussian cabinet ministers, the foreign ambassadors and ministers in Berlin, and many of the attaches and secretaries of the diplomatic corps were present. Prince Leopold of Soloms-Baruth, as the representative of emperor William, occupied the seat of honor.

CHICAGO, September 19.—The noises of a great city were hushed and its commerce suspended for a few moments today, while muffled bells tolled off the fifty-eight years of the dead president's age. Between twenty and twenty-five thousand men marched in a funeral procession which followed a draped carriage. Its empty seats were more eloquent than words of the nation's loss. In this carriage two years ago the president rode through long aisles of applauding people.

PARIS, September 19.—A memorial service was held this afternoon in honor of the late president McKinley in the American church on the avenue d'Alma. The attendance included the staff of the United States embassy, the staff of the United States consulate, colonel Meux De St. Maro, representing president Loubet, M. The spacious church was packed with the resident and traveling Americans. The pulpit was draped with a creped American flag.

Priests in many parts of the Archipelego conducted services in honor of the dead. The churches were crowded.

WASHINGTON, September 19.—Twenty years after the death of Garfield the nation's capitol was again in mourning. The wheels of government were locked, and the voices of the people were uplifted in prayer for the soul of William McKinley, while his mortal remains were being committed to the tomb in his Ohio home. As if by common instinct, men, women and children, white and black, came to a sudden halt in whatsoever they were engaged, and sat or stood still as statues wheresoever they chanced to be, and the great city was as quiet as a prayer meeting. To the people of Washington the late president McKinley was more than an official; he was their kindly guardian, and they divided their token of respect with the whole nation. Justice Brewer of the United States supreme court delivered the principal addresses at the First Congregational church. His key note was the need of imposing upon all Americans the necessity of a personal respect for the law. It was the duty of the citizen that society was the culmination of human happiness.

LONDON, September 19.—From all parts of Great Britain, the British colonies, and the Continent come telegrams giving evidence of the universal sympathy for the people of the United States in their great affliction. The great cathedrals of Canterbury, Edinburg, Dublin, Glasgow, and other cities, and the churches of all denominations throughout the land were filled with congregations, generally headed by the mayors and corporations.

TELEGRAPH INSTRUMENTS

Silent for Five Minutes.

CHICAGO, September 19.—One feature was unique in the incidents that characterized the McKinley obsequies. It was the silencing of the telegraph. Never before since electricity was first put into use as a means of communication from city to city and from country to country has there taken place, it is said, anything parallel, even in a small way, what was done this afternoon on a scale that was gigantic. Upon orders from the officials of the different telegraph companies, or upon the common impulse of the operators where directing instructions were not received, the entire telegraph system of the United States was sufficiently hushed for five minutes at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, the hour set for lowering the president's body into the grave at Canton. At that moment on all the huge network of wires from the Atlantic to the Pacific not a "sounder" in the land gave a single tick, and the great American cables were pulseless as the corpse of the late chief magistrate himself. It is estimated that fully 100,000 telegraphers thus simultaneously paid homage to the memory of McKinley. The total number of miles of wire affected was upwards of a million and a quarter. In the Western Union Chicago office the hundreds of operators all rose at their desks when the moment came, and joining the services sang with deep feeling the president's hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee." The Associated Press, the Postal Telegraph Company, the North American Company, the Chicago & Milwaukee Company, and all similar organizations were included in the general order.

Services in Westminster Abbey.

LONDON, September 19.—By command of king Edward a memorial service in honor of the late president McKinley was held in Westminster Abbey today, and was attended by many Americans and Englishmen of distinction. The lord stewart of the household, lord Pembroke, represented the king. Next to him sat ambassador Choate, secretary White, and other members of the United States embassy, colonel Alfred M. Egerton, comptroller and eqeurry of the duke of Connaught, represented the duke and duchess of Connaught. Major James E. Martin, equerry of prince Christian, represented the prince and princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, the secretary of war, William St. John Broderick and the under-secretary of the foreign office, lord Cranborne, were present, and other cabinet ministers were represented. The British ambassador to the United States, lord Pauncefote, the Russian ambassador, the Danish minister, and the Turkish ambassador were also present, with members of all the legations, including the consul-general of Monaco, lord Rosebery, the lord chief justice, baron Alverston, baron Revelstoke, baron Mount Stephen, sir William and lady Vernon Harcourt, and the agent-general of 20 British colonies were there. Among the Americans who attended the service were L. P. Morton, formerly vice-president of the United States; the United States ambassador to Italy Bourke Cochran, judge Lambert Tree, formerly United States minister to Belgium, John P. Morgan, Charles Francis Adams, bishop Hurst of Washington, and bishop Hartzell of the Methodist Episcopal church in Africa.

LONDON, September 19.—The stately service, similar in most respects to that held in memory of queen Victoria on the day of her burial, was conducted in St. Paul's cathedral today out of respect to the memory of the late president McKinley and was attended by six thousand persons. Lord mayor Frank Green, the sheriffs, the aldermen, and councillors of the city, wearing their official robes, marched in the procession into the cathedral, accompanied by several provincial mayors, who had visited London for the purpose of taking part in the ceremony. Dean Gregory and fourteen other clergymen were engaged in the service. The archbishop of Canterbury, leaning feebly on the arm of one of the clergy, pronounced the benediction. The hawkers in the streets of London disposed of great numbers of memorial cards with pictures of the late president, creped rosettes, and flags. The government buildings here are flying their flags at half-mast and the Glasgow exposition was closed during the service. All Canadian stores were draped in black.

VICTORIA, September 19.—Solemn memorial services were held to day in Christ's Church cathedral, the bishop of Columbia officiating. In the afternoon the Victoria theatre was packed by an immense crowd assembled to do honor to the dead president. Eloquent tributes were made by Rev. E. S. Rowe, and consul Abraham Smith, the latter showing deep emotion, often breaking down. All business was suspended this afternoon by request of mayor Hayward. Tonight services are being held in the Methodist church, conducted by Rev. E. S. Rowe. The afternoon services were attended by lieutenant-governor Joli, Hon. James Dunsmuir and his cabinet, the mayor and aldermen, admiral Bickford and staff, and the military and civil authorities. Service was also held on the steamer Majestic on her trip from Ca

PASSED THE DAY QUIETLY

VISITED ONLY CHARITABLE AND EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS.

Both the Duke and Duchess Received Honory Degrees at McGill—Go to Ottawa Tomorrow.

MONTREAL, September 19.—As a sympathetic tribute to the memory of president McKinley, the duke and duchess of York refrained today from participation in public functions, and limited their movements to a round of visits to religious, charitable, and educational institutions, including McGill university, where each received the honorary degree of doctor of law. Large crowds again assembled on the streets to greet and cheer them when they appeared, but the general public was excluded from the institutions which they visited. They drove to McGill university at 10 o'clock, and were met by lord Strathcona, chancellor, and the entire faculty of the university. They were shown Convocation hall in Royal Victoria college, where the conventional robes were placed upon them. Lord Strathcona, as chancellor, read a formal address, and in replying the duke congratulated lord Strathcona and sir William McDonald for the large endowments given by them to the university. After the duke's reply, the chancellor again addressed the royal couple as graduates of the university. The royal couple then proceeded to the new medical hall of McGill and chancellor, read a formal address, and Craik, dean of the faculty, read an address, and the duke in replying praised lady Strathcona and hon. Mrs. Howard for their liberal donations to the building fund.

The duke and duchess next drove to the Royal Victoria hospital, and were shown through the institution by lord Strathcona and R. B. Angus, president of the hospital association. From the hospital the royal couple drove to Laval university, where the clergy and students gave them a cordial greeting. Archbishop Bruchesi addressed them in a speech of welcome and the duke replied briefly. From Laval they proceeded to the Diocesai college, where the provincial synod of the Angelican church was in session. Bishop Sweetman of Toronto read the address of welcome and the duke responded. Later on in the day, the duke and duchess were driven to Villa Maria convent. They were met again by archbishop Bruchesi, who with sister St. Mary Caroline, superior, showed them through the historic old building. In Creation hall a formal address of welcome was read by a pupil and there was a short musical programme.

The duke and duchess of York were accompanied on their several visits by a number of their suite, and aside from the presentation of addresses everything was informal. They conversed very freely with those whom they met at the different places visited, and there was a general absence of ceremony.

The governor-general and countess of Minto left early in the day for Ottawa, to prepare for the visit to that city of the ducal party, but premier Laurier remained in attendance and assisted at the different informal receptions held during the day.

Flags at half- mast for president McKinley were displayed all over the city and pictures of the dead president draped with purple or crepe were in many windows. At St. James church, at 12 o'clock, special memorial services for the dead statesman were held and many attended.

The duke and duchess of York will carry from Montreal two handsome presents. He was given an artistically inscribed gold medal commemorative of the visit from the city, and she received a jewel from the ladies of the city. The latter is diamonds and pearls and is in the shape of a maple leaf. The ducal party leave Montreal at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning for Ottawa.

We place these on sale at prices that will certainly move them; original cost has been quite lost sight of in making the price. In many of these remnants the quantity is sufficient for even a large room. The high standard of our papers is now well known and not often does an opportunity offer to buy such papers at from 5 to 12½ cents per roll. If not ready to paper just now anticipate your fall wants.

THE TRIBUNE ASSOCIATION, Ltd.
John Houston, Manager. Nelson, B. C.

The attention of the management of the Canadian Pacific telegraphs is respectfully directed to the fact that someone at Rossland, presumably in the pay of Bernard McDonald, is sending out as Associated Press most distorted and unreliable news of the conditions that prevail in that town. As transmitters of Associated Press dispatches in Canada, the Canadian Pacific telegraphs, through their superintendent at Vancouver, is aiding and abetting men who daily violate one of the Ten Commandments. How long will Christian Canada stand such a condition of affairs? James Kent of Montreal may be able to answer the question.

The manufacturers of public opinion on the Coast, judging from the special telegrams sent to their newspaper organs in the interior, are guessing as to what action certain members of the legislature from the interior may take. The Tribune can speak for the member for Nelson riding. John Houston will under no circumstances support any government or any combination that is in favor of granting subsidies to railways on conditions sought to be imposed by railway companies like the V. V. & E. The province has already become responsible for the payment of hundreds of thousands of dollars in the way of guaranteed bonds and guaranteed interest on bonds granted to railways like the Victoria & Sydney, Shuswap & Okanagon, and Nakusp & Slocan, and has given away millions of acres of land to aid the Esquimalt & Nanaimo, Columbia & Kootenay, Nelson & Fort Sheppard, Kaslo & Slocan, Columbia & Western, and British Columbia Southern railways, and what has the province got in return? Six hundred and ten miles of railway have been built with the aid of the guaranteed bonds and land grants, every mile of which would have been built without either a dollar of subsidy or an acre of land. If the province has money and land at its disposal for railway building, let the railways be built and owned by the province. A glance at a map of the southeastern portion of the province will show to what extent the land granting policy has gone. For every square mile open to the settler and prospector, two are within the boundaries of railway land grants. The time has come for people to take a stand against railway charter-mongering and subsidy-granting legislation. How many public men on the Coast have the courage to withstand local clamor manufactured for the occasion? The people of Victoria and Vancouver are clamoring for a railway from the Coast to Kootenay, not because points in Southern Kootenay, like Nelson and Kaslo and Rossland, and points in Southern Yale, like Grand Forks and Phoenix and Greenwood, are lacking in railway facilities with the Coast, but merely because charter-mongering and subsidy-hunting schemers have led them to believe that they (the people of Victoria and Vancouver) are not getting their share of the trade of Kootenay and Yale, and that they (the people of Victoria and Vancouver) can only get what they want by the construction of the V. V. & E. railway, and that this railway can only be built by the aid of cash subsidies from the province and the Dominion. In other words, all the people of the province are called upon to contribute a share of the cost of a railway in order that the people of Victoria and Vancouver may be specially benefited. If the public men of the Coast cannot rise above local self-interest and prejudices, the province cannot possibly have a broad-guage government, for the Coast, under the present distribution of seats, has the power of numbers. The only hope for the province is the passage of a redistribution bill giving the people fair representation in the legislative assembly. On the passage of such a bill, a general electon should be held, and if the campaign is conducted on party lines, the result may be a stable government with a well-defined policy. The policy of the Liberal party will be dictated by Mackenzie & Mann and James J. Hill, and that of the Conservative party will be dictated by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, but the people will not be in doubt as to who their real rulers are, and that is one of the satisfactions of having a party-line government.

The people of Nelson made no ostentatious display of mourning on the day on which president McKinley was buried. There were no proclamations issued and no services in church or hall. The people simply refrained from doing business, and all those who had flags kept them at half-mast. This is the best evidence of the sincerity of the feelings of our people over the death of the president of a nation whose people are our nearest and best neighbors.

At the election in June, 1900, J. C. Brown, running as a Martin candidate, with the prestige of being Martin's minister of finance, received 53.7 per cent of the vote polled. In September, 1901, John Cunningham Brown, running as a member of the Dunsmuir government, received 47.5 per cent of the vote polled. At the election in 1900, J. C. Brown had no quarrel with the Presbyterian church and had the active support of the local fishermen. At the election in 1901, John Cunningham Brown was bitterly and vindictively opposed by the Presbyterian church and did not receive the support of the local fishermen. Three and 7-10ths per cent of the vote polled in 1900 is 44. In other words, Mr. Brown had only 44 votes more than one-half of the votes polled, not counting spoiled ballots. Two and one-half per cent of the vote polled in 1901 is 28. In other words, Mr. Brown lacked only 28 votes of having a majority of the votes polled, not counting spoiled ballots. In 1900, a change of 45 votes would have defeated him. In 1901, a change of 28 votes would have elected him. Taking these figures in connection with the change of heart of the Presbyterians and the change of front of the fishermen, it is not ridiculous to attribute Mr. Brown's defeat in 1901 to the unpopularity of his staunch friend, ex-premier Joseph Martin?

The Associated Press report of the memorial services at Rossland in honor of the late president of the United States is a fair sample of the grossly inaccurate and ridiculously exaggerated statements that are daily transmitted by the agent of he Associated Press in that town.

WHO STOPPED CZOLGOSZ?

There Are Rival Claimants.

James Parker, the colored waiter, who, according to his own story, prevented Czolgosz, the assassin, from shooting president McKinley the third time, is going to have a hard time to establish his claim to that distinction. The episode of knocking Cozolosz down and overpowering him, and crediting the service to the rightful person, is no longer a trivial and unimportant incident. Parker asserts that he was just in front of Czolgosz, and that just as soon as the shots were fired he turned upon Cozolgosz, hit him with his fist on the nose and bore him to the floor. The mental picture of Parker, who is six feet six inches tall, was so dramatic when first told that it was easily believed by hundreds of thousands of people. It seems to be a question after all whether Parker did all that his admirers say he did, for the evidence is piling up in the office of district attorney Penney that the credit for overpowering Czolgosz belongs primarily to private O'Brien, 73rd company Coast Artillery, one of the dozen or more guards close to the president on the memorable Friday afternoon. O'Brien's friends have come to the front with a mass of corroborative evidence, which is being most seriously considered by district attorney Penney and superintendent of police Bull. The evidence thus far collected tends to establish the following general facts: That private O'Brien crushed Czolgosz to the floor. That Czolgosz's pistol was wrested from him by Albert Gallagher, a Chicago secret service detective; that Parker was fifteen feet from the president when Czolgosz fired the shots, and that Czolgosz's face was bruised by the blows of several persons, Parker among the rest.

James D. Wells, a Buffalo newspaper man, who stood close to the president at the time of the shooting, is one of the witnesses whose statement concerning the shooting has been requested by district attorney Penney. Mr. Wells said: "O'Brien was the man who floored Czolgosz. I was looking at him when he did it. He was the guard on Mr. Milburn's left and Mr. Milburn was immediately at the president's left. I was to the right of the president, and a little behind him. The line of people who pressed forward to shake the president's hand came from the southeast side of the building and swung around a crescent toward the southwest side, the point of egress. Midway between the two sides stood the president and his party. I saw Parker pass the president after shaking hands with him and I remarked as I looked at the breadth of his shoulders and the back of his head, which towered far above other men, that I would like to have his physique. He was more than ten feet away from the president, and going out of the building at that time. As soon as the shots were fired there was a general mix-up. I saw O'Brien jump on Czolgosz, and then detective Foster of the secret service struck at Czolgosz and also fell on him. I saw Parker suddently wheel and rush toward the bunch of men on top of Czolgosz. He was stopped by two guards. He may possibly have reached Czolgosz through that struggling mass of arms and legs, but I do not see how he did it, for there were a dozen men trying to strike or kick the assassin. I tried to myself. The guards certainly stopped him once."

Secret service detective Foster says: "I think O'Brien was the first man to get at Czolgosz, and I am equally confident that I was the second. I made a grab for Czolgosz's pistol hand but on account of so many people being in the mix-up I could not quite reach it. I called to Gallagher, who was bending over Czolgosz: 'Al, get the gun.' Gallagher grabbed the revolver and the handkerchief which was partly around it. He still has the handkerchief. The gun was taken away from him by Parker and a corporal of the guards, who probably took Gallagher for the assassin. Parker grabbed Gallagher by the throat and nearly choked him to death, while the corporal wrenched the revolver away from him. This is the substance of the statement that I have given to district attorney Penney."

Parker meanwhile is still receiving the plaudits of the people from all over the United States, and his mail is increasing, and subscriptions have been started for him in Syracuse, Buffalo, and other cities. A Buffalo newspaper, apparently satisfied that Parker's story is true, has started a subscription in his behalf, and a niece of admiral Dewey is one of the patrons of the enterprise. Parker will be asked to forward to district attorney Penney a circumstantial account of his part in the arrest of Czolgosz. Parker's story is being investigated, but up to the present all the eye-witnesses' testimony that had been furnished to the district attorney tend to show that Parker merely joined the melee, and was not the first to lay hands on Czolgosz.

Not an Imperial Necessity.

A plausible pretext and a powerful corporate influence are the factors which in joining operations have caused the Laurier government to veto the legislation designed to protect British Columbia from the evils of Mongolian immigration. The plea of deference to imperial interests is a thin cloak for the real motives for disallowance. The British Columbia legislation which has been disallowed is almost identical with the Natal Act. Imperial interests do not require interference with the anti-Mongolian statutes of a South African colony, and how can imperial objects be prejudiced by a similar measure on the statute books of British Columbia? Japan's friendship for Britain is based on large considerations. Russian and Japan are natural enemies, and the policy which has to deal with the encroachments of the czar creates an indissoluble relationship between the interests of Japan and the power of England. To say that the relationship between Japan and England is a fabric which can be cleft with a British Columbia statute is to propound an obvious absurdity. British Columbia's interests are being sacrificed in the name of corporate influence, not on the altar of imperial exigency, as the Laurier government contends.

British Ignorance of Canada.

Since the South African war we have been deluding ourselves in this country with the hope that the part we took in that affair had made the Dominion better known in Great Britian, and would lead to the British people taking a more active practical interest in the development of our industries and unsettled territories. The name of the Dominion is certainly better known than before, but the practical results we anticipated do not appear to be following, and it is being made painfully evident to us by the American visit of the delegation of British artisans that if we expect to attract British capital and British immigration we shall have to improve our methods of advertising the resources and advantages of the Dominion. Of the twelve members of the delegation who were sent out to this country to investigate American ways of working, five have not thought it worth their while to vist Canada at all, and among them is the mining expert of the party, who is apparently unaware that Canada has such a thing as mineral. One of the seven members who came over here put the case in a nutshell yesterday when he said that emigration agents go about the Old Country giving lectures and describing Canada as a good place for farmers, but never saying anything about her mines or her industries. In fact, he added, the people of Scotland do not know that Canada has any industries. It is a serious reflection on our emigration agents that the United States should be better known than Canada in Great Britain, especially as the United States has ceased to solicit emigration, while Canada is anxious to secure as much of it as possible. The members of the British delegation are thoroughly representative of their various classes, and their ignorance of Canada reflects the ignorance of the whole body of British workmen. Even those who have paid this country a visit evidently expected to find us a community composed almost entirely of farmers, and they were surprised at the evidences of industrial progress which they saw everywhere around them. Their visit will be of great benefit to us, as on their return they will clear up some of the misconceptions which their countrymen have regarding Canada; still it is, in a sense, humiliating to think that we have made so little effort to advance our interests in the mother country that a trip like this should be of service in correcting wrong impressions. We do not say that our agents in Britain do not work hard, but it is clear that there are too few of them, and that they pursue ineffective methods. Moreover, they only tell half of the story. We need men who will arouse interest in our industries and in our unparalleled mineral deposits, as well as in the opportunities which the country affords to the agricultural settler, and the government should see that they are provided not only with lantern slides and immigration literature, but with samples of our principal products, which is a far more convincing way of advertising than the descriptive method usually adopted.—Toronto News.

Medical Skill.

Looking up the papers of the last few days and re-reading what has been written about the marvelous skill of president McKinley's surgeons and the wonders of "twentieth century surgery," how ironical it all seems! "Surgery is not now what it was twenty years ago," said one of the medical men at the Milburn house, desiring to emphasize his conviction that if Mr. Garfield had had Mr. McKinley's treatment, Mr. Garfield would have recovered. Alas! the event only goes to show that modern surgical wisdom is not less fallible and modern surgical skill almost as hopeless as the surgical skill and wisdom of twenty years ago. It would be cruel to blame the surgeons and physicians for their failure to save Mr. Kinley's life. Probably, no more skillful or faithful practitioners than they could be found in the United States. They did all that could have been done to save their patient. And their failure is all the more noteworthy because of their eminence and their zeal. Not one of them anticipated the developments which in twenty-four hours resulted in death. Without exception, they confidently expected the speedy recovery of their patient. It is little wonder that all through the ages mankind has believed in an over-ruling fate, or destiny, or Kismet, which fixes the life-span of every creature, and from whose decrees there is no appeal.

Little Malta's Big Problem.

The little island of Malta has a grievance. It is that difficulty of such tremendous possbilities known as the language problem. What is to be the language of Malta? The broken and bastard dialect of the great majority of the islanders is called Maltese, appropriately enough. But it is of the official language which is the matter now involved. Hitherto it has been Italian, but the colonial office in London has decided lately that it shall be in the future English, a policy which has given great offence among the people of wealth an social influence in Malta. The mass of the people themselves appear to be tolerably indifferent. The London Outlook, usually a devoted admirer of Mr. Chamberlain, differs from him most emphatically.

"Whether Mr. Chamberlain has managed the affair with tact may be questioned," it believes. "His replies to questions in parliament were of that trenchant and half contemptuous nature so galling to small bodies of people in the hands of a great nation. There is no doubt that the use and study of English among all classes in Malta was increasing. It was making way by those virtues of brevity and clearness which seem likely to make it in time the universal language. What special need there was to raise the question of its use as an ofilcial language in Malta does not appear. It might have been left to prevail without edicts and orders. But Mr. Chamberlain, having visited Malta, has chosen to stir up this purely official difficulty, and he being the European bogey, the Maltese profess to see in his action tyranny and opression, and tune their appeals to that pitch of sentiment. And to think that the whole affair is so superfluous."

A Result Not Intended.

McKinley's popularity was immensely increased by the act of Czolgosz, a fact which all persons in the assassination business would do well to take notice. Stories are now being told of his courtesy and kindness of heart. Senator Tillman, a Democrat, says that no finer gentleman has occupied the post since George Washington. One of the president's characteristics was that he never took offense at the severest criticisms. Tillman said he was becoming a dictator, to the subversion of the old republic, and McKinley retorted with a favor to one of Tillman's constituents. When the secretary of the Anti-Imperialistic League visited Washington the president came out of a cabinet meeting to see him. In the organization of the first Philippine commission one of the men provisionally selected hastened to Washington to tell McKinley that he was not much of a believer in his expansion policy, and that, probably knowing this Mr. McKinley would want somebody else to serve. "Quite the contrary," was the president's answer. "We need just the element of opinion on that commission which you represent." These stories are interesting as showing an amiable and liberal character, but still more significant is the fact that they are now being published. It is not difficult to see how in the course of time admiration would grow into reverence, and how a man of high character would be hedged about with divinity equal to that of any monarch. Even the prejudice against a third term might be relaxed, and the president might hold office for the length of an average reign. In the event of death loyalty would be transferred from the man to the office, and the people would be willing to give enormous powers to the executive for the purpose of maintaining a stable government.

Sheriff Tuck is advertising the interest of E. Defour in the N. Bonaparte mineral claim for sale to satisfy a judgment in the case of the Helber Brewing Company vs. Edward Defour for $67. The N. Bonaparte is a relocation of the Surprise mineral claim and is situate near the townsite of Craigtown. The interest of Defour will be offered for sale in front of the sheriff's office on Thursday next at 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

Although it was expected that a start would have been made before this by the reconstructed Athabasca company in the way of resuming work on the consolidated Athabasca-Venus, nothing has yet been done and no word has been received to indicate that an early start will be made. The excuse offered is that it is the holiday season in England and that until the directors of the company return from their vacation trips nothing can be done.

The time for receiving tenders for the repairing of the city wharf has been extended until Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock. As originally drawn by the city engineer the specifications have been altered by the mayor so as to permit of alternative tenders. The council is by no means of one mind as to what extent the improvements suggested should be carried out, and the scheme of calling for alternateive tenders will doubtless tend to simplify matters when the question comes up at the meeting of the city council on Monday evening.

Marc Gilliam came into Nelson yesterday after having made an extensive trip through that section of the country lying between Ymir and Kootenay lake and river. He says there are a number of gold prospects on the ridge between the headwaters of Cultus and Summit creeks, the showings upon which are sfficiently good to warrant the expenditure of capital necessary to show them up. At present the section is rather difficult to get at, but as the indications are that the ledges discovered carry free gold it would be possible to work them without very heavy initial expenditure on account of trails.

John Lynch arrived in Nelson from the Referendum group on Forty-nine creek, where he has been performing considerable work for the owners. His work consisted in the installation of a pump and the driving of a 60 foot crosscut from the bottom of the 100 foot shaft. The work performed has not been quite sufficient to show the property up in the manner that was intended and it is likely that some further work will be contracted for at once. The owners of the Referendum have now a five-stamp mill upon the ground and the setting of it up is but awaiting the developments from the crosscut.

The squabble between James A. Macdonald, the architect and the clerk in charge of the federal building, and Louis Doviaux, the foreman in charge for the contractors, was ventilated before police magistrate Crease in his court this morning. Both parties to the dispute were represented by counsel and the affair took on all the appearance of a tempest in a tea pot. It was conclusively proven, however, that the foreman made use of language which was at least abusive to the architect in charge of the work, and the magistrate imposed a fine of $10 and costs. There is some talk of having the case appealed.

F. Mourgues, who for several months past has been the engineer in charge for the Chapleau Consolidated Mining Company, has started a suit against the company for breach of contract in connection with his agreement for service with the company as engineer and technical manager. Mr. Mourgues claims that he was engaged by the company for a term of three years at a salary of $300 per month and an allowance of $30 per month for living expenses. He claims that several minor breaches in the contract have been made by the defendant company and he is now suing for $1800, the amount of six months salary, as liquidated damages, and other damages which brings the total up to $1995.

The proclamation of the governor-general calling for yesterday as a day of mourning for the late president McKinley was right in line with the merchants and business men of Nelson. The result was there was not a single place of business open on Baker street, saving of course the restaurants and hotels. Even the cigar stands and news stands, which usually remain open seven days in the week were closed up tight yesterday. Yesterday was probably the first time in the history of the Dominon that the business of the entire country was suspended in honor of the memory of any foreigner, but the order calling for the observance of the day in this fashion was not only half so noteworthy as the manner in which the proclamation was received and observed by the people as a whole. Nelson's line of closed stores yesterday gave striking proof of the fact that there is more in the mooted sympathy of the two great branches of the Anglo-Saxon family than could be brought to the surface by a room full of the best after dinner talkers from the two countries; and that it is too deeply rooted to be dispelled by the most bellicose of their politicians or jingoes. It is a sympathy which is shared in by the people, not one which is traded upon solely by their public men.

Boat Club Meeting.

The general meeting of the Nelson Boat Club was held last evening and was very largely attended. A. H. Buchanan was in the chair. There was quite a lengthy discussion regarding the purchase of the sampling works and the erection of new club quarters. It was at length pointed out by alderman Selous that an attempt was being made to put the cart before the horse, and it would be better for a special committee to be appointed to devise means to raise funds; the spending of the money would be an easy matter to take up afterwards. A special committee was then appointed, made up of Messrs. Selous, Holt, Wragge, Croasdaile, Winters, Beaven and Mathews, to arrange entertainments etc., for the benefit of the club. Mr. Phair has kindly offered the use of his hotel for a club dance. The question of the purchase of a racing shell was then taken up, and after considerable discussion, the secretary and captain were instructed to order from Clasper of London, England, a four-oared racing cedar shell. It was then proposed that a vote of thanks be tendered to J. Roderick Robertson for his present to the club of a silver challenge cup. This concluded the business of the meeting. The various committees will get to work at once and organize entertainments for the benefit of the club.

OUR GENUINE RETIRING SALE

Shall stand as a record-breaker for time to come. We would rather count dollars than goods. Therefore we are going to trade everything for dollars that we possibly can. That is why our stock of Clothing and Gents' Furnishings are going to be sold at such low prices.

These prices show the extent of the reductions:
Mens' Tweed Pants, worth $3.00 for $2.50.
Mens' Worsted Pants, worth $4.00 for $2.75.
Mens' Blue Beaver Overcoats, worth $12 for $8.
Mens' Grey Tweed Overcoats, worth $12.50 for $8.50.
Mens' Serge and Tweed Suits, former price $14 and $16, now $9.50 and $10.

See our Mackinaw Coats at $3.50 usually sold for $5.
7 lb. Canadian Grey Blankets now $2, worth $3.50.
All Rubber goods at cost.

A personal inspection will convince you.
