By signing this License, you give UBC the non-exclusive right to copy, distribute, and transmit your Submission over the Internet through ciRcle on the terms set out below. Visitors to the ciRcle site will be permitted to use your Submission for non-commercial purposes, as set out in greater detail below. You may assign different licencing terms to govern how ciRcle visitors may use your Submission.

The rights you grant to UBC under this License will last in perpetuity. References to ciRcle include any successor repository designated by UBC.

This License grants UBC significant rights and contains important limitations on your rights to your work. Please read it carefully.

You acknowledge that ciRcle staff have not and will not independently review the Submission and that UBC is relying upon the representations and warranties you have made above.

If, at any time hereafter, you learn that any of the foregoing statements are inaccurate, you must contact ciRcle immediately.

3. Grant of License. In consideration of UBC preserving your Submission in perpetuity in ciRcle, you hereby grant to UBC the non-exclusive, world-wide, perpetual, and royalty-free right to use, reproduce, display, convert, sublicense and distribute, in any format and any medium, your Submission, for the following purposes:
- uploading and storing your Submission;
 - publishing the Submission electronically Internet via ciRcle, which means making your Submission available to the public by telecommunication so that they may view and download your Submission, subject to the public access terms described in Section 5;

- c. converting your Submission to any medium or format for the purposes of security, back-up, preservation and use of the Submission in accordance with this License; and
- d. authorizing third-parties to perform any of UBC's rights described in this Section, on UBC's behalf.

If you are submitting a graduate thesis or dissertation, your grant of rights described above is irrevocable and includes, for greater certainty, UBC authorizing Library and Archives Canada to copy, display, publish, communicate, archive, convert into any format, and make your thesis or dissertation available to the public online or in paper form, all for non-commercial purposes.

4. Publication of your Submission. This License does not affect the ownership of copyright—you maintain whatever rights you have in the Submission. In addition, this License does not contain a waiver of your moral rights to your Submission. However, you have granted important rights to UBC and visitors to cIRcle, and, therefore, you agree that if you grant others copyright ownership or a license, it will be consistent with the rights you have granted under this License. For example, if you wish to publish your Submission in a journal, you will inform the publisher of the rights you have granted under this License and not agree to terms that restrict those rights.
5. Terms of Access by the Public. UBC will make a digital copy of your Submission available in cIRcle for the public to view and copy for non-commercial purposes only, without prior permission or charge, provided that your Submission is not altered in any way and is properly acknowledged, including citing the author(s), title and full bibliographic details. (Note: this corresponds to the Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivs, or CC BY-NC-ND Creative Commons license) UBC may, in its discretion, make your Submission available pursuant to a Creative Commons license (or other licencing platform), on similar terms. If you wish to assign different license terms to your Submission (for example, a different Creative Commons license), you must inform cIRcle as part of the submission process to cIRcle, and the terms of that license shall apply to your Submission. Public access to your Submission may be withheld for an agreed upon period of time: see the cIRcle Digital Repository Policies for applicable policies and processes.

To assign different license terms, please select one option for each question below. If you do not complete this section, the default terms described in this section will be applied. Learn more about the Creative Commons licenses.
