The Call of the World A Political Memoir Bill Graham

The Call of the World takes us on an unprecedented, behind-the-scenes tour of defining moments in recent global history. Bill Graham – Canada's minister of foreign affairs and then its minister of defence in the tumultuous years following 9/11 – is an insightful and wryly humorous guide, steering readers through an astonishing array of national and international events, explaining important geopolitical relationships, and revealing the human side of global affairs through his deft portraits of world leaders.

An engaging storyteller, Graham offers personal reflections as well as a riveting account of his years in office. He recalls his fortunate childhood in Vancouver and reflects on his time working as an international lawyer in Paris, as a backbencher in Ottawa, and as a cabinet minister during the Chrétien-Martin years. While his political career took him around the world, he remained a devoted champion of his constituents in his riding of Toronto Centre.

During his time as a member of Parliament, Graham was a passionate promoter of bilingualism and an early advocate for gay and lesbian rights. He is perhaps best known, though, for his role in keeping Canada out of the 2003 invasion of Iraq, for his work in rebuilding the Canadian Armed Forces, and for stepping up as interim leader of the Liberal Party following Paul Martin's resignation.

Many of the issues tackled in The Call of the World remain as immediate as today's headlines. Graham demystifies globalization, free trade, human rights, peacekeeping, and multilateralism. All the while, he offers a bold appraisal of Canada's current role on the global stage and makes a case for why international law offers the best hope for a safer, more prosperous, and just world.

BILL GRAHAM was elected five times as a member of Parliament for Toronto Centre (formerly Toronto Centre-Rosedale) and served as the chair of the House of Commons foreign affairs committee, minister of foreign affairs, minister of national defence, leader of the Official Opposition, and interim leader of the Liberal Party of Canada. Prior to his election to Parliament in 1993, Graham practised law at Fasken & Calvin and subsequently taught international law at the University of Toronto, McGill University, and l'Université de Montréal. In 1985, the French government appointed him a chevalier de la légion d'honneur for his promotion of the French language in Canada. In 2014, he became a member of the Order of Canada in recognition of his contributions to Canadian politics. Born in Montreal and raised in Vancouver, Mr. Graham currently lives in Toronto.

a new imprint by UBC Press

On Point Press

In celebration of spring and all things new, UBC Press is delighted to announce the launch of its trade imprint, On Point Press.

Why "On Point"? The Press is located on the sea-swept promontory of Point Grey, Vancouver – and our promise is to publish sharp, authoritative, and thought-provoking works of non-fiction.

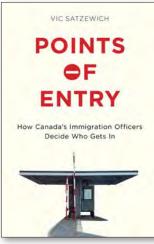

Why a new imprint? On Point Press will introduce a broad audience of readers to current thinking and new ideas about history, politics, Aboriginal studies, the environment, and the natural world, areas that have long reflected UBC Press's stellar publishing reputation in the scholarly realm. On Point books will be intelligent and engaging, they will provoke discussion and reaction, they will enlighten and amuse. And they will set the bar for cutting-edge, quality non-fiction publishing in Canada.

Brand Command 🌞

Canadian Politics and Democracy in the Age of Message Control Alex Marland

Canada's style of politics has been changing. Ministers are kept on a short leash. MPs parrot the same catchphrases across the country. Journalists are shunned. Government information is hidden. Why has this happened? To get to the bottom of this, Alex Marland conducted over seventy interviews with political insiders, reviewed internal political files, and submitted dozens of access to information requests. He discovered that in the face of rapid changes in communication technology, the infusion of corporate marketing strategies instills a culture of centralized political control over government messages. At the core of the strategy is brand control; at stake is democracy as we know it. ALEX MARLAND is an associate professor of political science and an associate dean of arts at Memorial University of Newfoundland. He is a leading researcher on political communication and marketing in Canada.

How Canada's Immigration Officers Decide Who Gets in Vic Satzewich

Every year, over 1.3 million people apply to visit, work, or settle in Canada and discover that their future rests in visa officers' hands. How do these officers decide who gets in? Seeking answers to this question, Vic Satzewich gained access to eleven overseas visa offices to investigate how immigration officers determine who gets in, and who stays out. Contrary to popular opinion, individual bias rarely enters into their decisions. Instead, a combination of experience, organizational culture, and local knowledge shapes their decision to issue a visa or dig deeper into some people's stories. VIC SATZEWICH is a professor of Sociology at McMaster University and an expert on immigration issues. His most recent books are Racism in Canada and Race and Ethnicity in Canada (with Nikolaos LIodakis).

Made in Nunavut 🌞 An Experiment in Decentralized Government Jack Hicks and Graham White

After years of dreams and negotiations, the territory of Nunavut was established on April 1, 1999. Made in Nunavut provides the first comprehensive account of the planning that led to this remarkable achievement. The authors, leading authorities on the politics of the Canadian Arctic, pay particular attention to the Government of Nunavut's innovative organizational design – especially the decentralization of offices and functions (normally located in a capital) to communities across the territory. They explain how this new government was designed and implemented, and critically assess whether decentralization has delivered better government for Nunavut. JACK HICKS is a social research consultant and a university and college lecturer. He has worked in a range of senior positions in Nunavut, and has written and presented widely about public policies across the circumpolar Arctic. He lives in Iqaluit, Nunavut. Graham White is a professor emeritus in the Department of Political Science at the University of Toronto. He is the author or editor of twelve previous books on Canadian Politics and is the English co-editor of the Canadian Journal of Political Science.

Loyalist Slavery in the Maritimes Harvey Amani Whitfield

Many Canadians believe their nation fell on the right side of history in harbouring escaped slaves from the United States. In fact, in the wake of the American Revolution, many Loyalist families brought slaves with them when they settled in the Maritime colonies of British North America. Once there, slaves used their traditions of survival, resistance, and kinship networks to negotiate their new reality. Harvey Amani Whitfield's book, the first on slavery in the Maritimes, is a startling corrective to the enduring and triumphant narrative of Canada as a land of freedom at the end of the Underground Railroad.

Making a Scene 划

Lesbians and Community across Canada, 1964-84 Liz Millward

In the 1960s, a youthful and ambitious lesbian movement began taking shape in Canada. After decades of being pathologized, disparaged, or erased from public view, lesbians were ready to make a scene – both by calling attention to themselves and by creating places to come together and forge their own culture. Making a Scene tells this story, revisiting the spaces lesbians created across rural and urban Canada, from physical locations, such as bars, bookstores, and members' clubs, to ephemeral sites, such as conferences, festivals, and protest marches. Enriched with interviews, this volume captures the exuberance and challenges of this transformational period.

Where the Rivers Meet 👎

Pipelines, Participatory Resource Management, and Aboriginal-State Relations in the Northwest Territories

Carly A. Dokis

Oil and gas companies now recognize that industrial projects can only succeed if Aboriginal communities are involved in decision-making processes. Where the Rivers Meet is an account of Sahtu Dene involvement in the environmental assessment of the Mackenzie Gas Project, a massive pipeline that, if completed, would have unprecedented effects on Aboriginal communities. The book reveals that while there has been some progress in establishing avenues for Dene participation in decision making, the ultimate assessment of such projects remains rooted in non-local beliefs about the nature of the environment, the commodification of land, and the inevitability of a hydrocarbon-based economy. CARLY A. DOKIS is an assistant professor in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Nipissing University. She has worked with communities in northern Ontario and the Northwest Territories focussing on the social, economic, and political consequences of participatory environmental management.

Alberta Oil and the Decline of Democracy in Canada

Edited by Meenal Shrivastava and Lorna Stefanick

In probing the impact of Alberta's powerful oil lobby on the health of democracy in the province, contributors to the volume engage with an ongoing discussion of the erosion of political liberalism in the West. In addition to examining energy policy and issues of government accountability in Alberta, they explore the ramifications of oil dependence in areas such as Aboriginal rights, environmental policy, labour law, women's equity, urban social policy, and the arts. If, as they argue, reliance on oil has weakened democratic structures in Alberta, then what of Canada as whole, where the shortterm priorities of the oil industry continue to shape federal policy? MEENAL SHRIVASTAVA is an associate professor of political economy and global studies at Athabasca University. LORNA STEFANICK is a professor at Athabasca University where she serves as coordinator for the Governance, Law, and Management program.

A Naturalist's Guide to the Hidden World of Pacific Northwest Dunes George Poinar Jr.

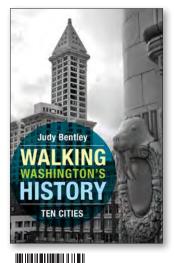

The Pacific dunes provide a unique habitat for plants, animals, and insects, and anyone who walks along the coast will want to have this illustrated reference handy. This guide to exploring the dunes is detailed enough to be used by biologists and ecologists, and accessible enough to serve as a field guide for hikers and outdoor enthusiasts. A Naturalist's Guide to the Hidden World of the Pacific Northwest Dunes belongs on every beach house bookshelf from California to Canada.

Walking Washington's History Ten Cities

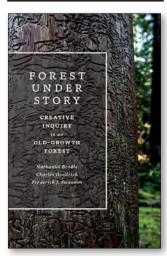

Judy Bentley

Walking Washington's History showcases the state's engaging urban history through guided walks in ten major cities. Bentley uses narrated walks, maps, and historic photographs to reveal each city's aspirations. Bentley begins in Vancouver, established as a fur trade emporium above the Columbia River, and ends with Bellevue, a bedroom community turned edge city. Readers crisscross the state, with walks through urban Olympia, Walla Walla, Tacoma, Seattle, Everett, Bellingham, Yakima, and Spokane. When readers pass through these cities, they will discover both the visible and invisible markers of Washington history underfoot. JUDY BENTLEY writes hiking guides, history, and biography and is emeritus faculty at South Seattle College. She is the author of Hiking Washington's History and (with Lorraine McConaghy) Free Boy: A True Story of Slave and Master.

Creative Inquiry in an Old-Growth Forest

Edited by Nathaniel Brodie, Charles Goodrich, and Frederick J. Swanson

This anthology - which includes work by Sandra Alcosser, Alison Hawthorne Deming, Jane Hirshfield, Linda Hogan, Freeman House, Robin Wall Kimmerer, Kathleen Dean Moore, Robert Michael Pyle, Pattiann Rogers, and Scott Russell Sanders - grows out of the work of the Long-Term Ecological Reflections program and showcases the insights of the program's thoughtful and important encounters among writers, scientists, and place. These vivid essays, poems, and field notes convey a landscape of moss-draped trees, patchwork clear-cuts, stream-swept gravel bars, and hillsides scoured by fire. They also bring forward the ambiguities and paradoxes of conflicting human values and their implications for the ecosystem.

Boundary Layer 🍟

Kem Luther

In atmospheric science, a boundary layer is the air layer where the ground comes into contact with the air, where daily fluctuations in temperature and moisture are transferred to or from the surface of the earth. This boundary layer teems with lichens, mosses, ferns, fungi, and diminutive plants. It's a universe in miniature, an unexplored territory that author Kem Luther calls the stegnon, the terrestrial equivalent of oceanic plankton. In Boundary Layer, Luther takes a voyage of discovery through the stegnon, exploring the life forms that thrive there and introducing readers to the scientists who study them.

Naturalist and writer KEM LUTHER is the author of Cottonwood Roots and The Next Generation Gap. He lives on Vancouver Island.

Endeavouring Banks

Exploring Collections from the Endeavour Voyage, 1768-1771 Neil Chambers, with Sir David Attenborough, John Gascoigne, Jeremy Coote, Andrew Cook, and Anna Agnarsdottir

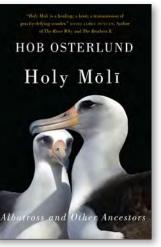

When English naturalist Joseph Banks accompanied Captain James Cook on his historic mission into the Pacific, the Endeavour voyage of 1768–71, he took with him a team of collectors and illustrators. They returned with artifacts and specimens of stunning birds, fish, and other animals as well as thousands of plants. They also brought back remarkable landscape and figure drawings of the peoples encountered on the voyage, along with the first detailed maps of these lands. In this stunning book, original voyage specimens are shown together with illustrations and descriptions of them, many of which have never been published before. #### Unpleasantries

Considerations of Difficult Questions Frank Soos

Frank Soos's meditations move from fly-fishing in dangerously swift Alaska rivers to memories of the liars and dirty-joke tellers of his small-town Virginia childhood, revealing insights in new encounters and old preoccupations. Even from upside-down in his recently flipped truck, Frank Soos reveals himself to be a ruminative, grappling with the limitations of language to express the human condition. Moving quickly – skiing in the dark or taking long summer bike rides on Alaska highways – Soos combines an active physical life with a dark and difficult interior existence, wrestling the full span of "thinking and doing" onto the page with surprising lightness. FRANK SOOS is the Alaska State Writer Laureate, 2015–2016. He taught writing at the University of Alaska, Fairbanks, from 1986 until 2004. His publications include Double Moon: Constructions and Conversations (with Margo Klass), Bamboo Fly Rod Suite (essays), and Unified Field Theory (stories).

Holy Mölī

Albatross and Other Ancestors Hob Osterlund

Albatross live long. They spend the majority of their years airborne, gliding across vast oceans. In nesting season, they rack up inconceivable mileage to feed their chicks waiting on the islands of the Hawaiian archipelago. When Hob Osterlund happened upon a few courting albatross in Kauai in 1979, she embarked on a personal journey that introduced her to the Hawaiian concept of 'amakua – spiritual ancestors who occupy the physical forms of animals. This is the story of how the albatross – or Mōlī – guided Hob on her journey, back to the origin of a bargain she struck as a child. HOB OSTERLUND is an award-winning writer and photographer whose work has appeared in National Geographic Explorer, The New York Times, Nature, and more. She lives on the Hawaiian island of Kauai.

Leaving Iran Between Migration and Exile Farideh Goldin

In 1976, at the age of twenty-three, Farideh Goldin left Iran in search of her imagined America. Meanwhile, the political unrest in Iran intensified and in 1979, Farideh's family was forced to flee Iran on the last El-Al flight to Tel Aviv. Farideh's father was a well-respected son of the chief rabbi and dayan of the Jews of Shiraz. During his last visit to the US in 2006, he handed Farideh his memoir chronicalling his life after exile: the confiscation of his passport when he returned to Iran for his belongings, the years of loneliness as he struggled against a hostile bureaucracy to return to his wife and family in Israel, and the eventual loss of the poultry farm that had supported his family. Leaving Iran knits together Farideh's father's story of dislocation and loss with her own experience as an Iranian Jew in a newly adopted home.

Born in Shiraz, Iran to a family of dayanim, FARIDEH GOLDIN now lives in Virginia and is the director of the Institute for Jewish Studies and Interfaith Understanding at Old Dominion University. Her first memoir, Wedding Song: Memoirs of an Iranian Jewish Woman was published in 2003.

Worlds Ago

A Memoir of My Journeying Years With a new preface and conclusion by the author Walter Lagueur

Originally published in 1993, Worlds Ago is about the world that shaped renowned historian and political commentator Walter Laqueur. In pre-war Germany, he witnessed the rise of the Nazi party. As a young man, he worked as an agricultural laborer on a kibbutz in Palestine. He became a journalist and writer, and came to know many of the leading figures involved in the establishment of the State of Israel. This volume tells his story up until 1948, when he was working as a reporter in Jerusalem. Laqueur went on to become one of the leading historians of the Weimar period in Germany. WALTER LAQUEUR was director of the Wiener Library and the Institute of Contemporary History in London. He was founder and editor of the Journal of Contemporary History. Laqueur taught at Harvard, the University of Chicago, Johns Hopkins, and Tel Aviv University. His last academic position was as a professor at Georgetown.

The Teacher and the Superintendent

Native Schooling in the Alaskan Interior, 1904-1918 Compiled and annotated by George E. Boulter II and Barbara Grigor-Taylor

George E. Boulter begun teaching along the Yukon River in 1905 and by 1910 had been promoted to superintendent of schools for the Upper Yukon District. In 1907, Alice Green left a comfortable family life in New Orleans to answer the "call to serve" in the Episcopal mission boarding schools for Native children at Anvik and Nenana. The Teacher and the Superintendent collects Boulter's letters and Green's diary, portraying their vivid, firsthand impressions that also bespeak the earnest but paternalistic beliefs of those who lived and worked in these immensely isolated regions. It also provides us with an invaluable account of the daily conflicts that occurred between church and government and of the many injustices suffered by the Native population in the face of the misguided efforts of both institutions.

BARBARA GRIGOR-TAYLOR, of Cavendish Rare Books, London, has presented papers and lectures on topics ranging from Western writings on China to eighteenth century Russian explorations. GEORGE E. BOULTER II was born in Alaska and later lived in California before embarking in 1942 on a career in the US Merchant Marines.

Counterpunch

The Cultural Battles over Heavyweight Prizefighting in the American West Meg Frisbee

Boxing was popular in the American West long before Las Vegas became its epicenter. However, not everyone in the region was a fan. Counterpunch examines how the sport's meteoric rise in popularity in the West ran concurrently with a growing backlash among Progressive Era social reformers who saw boxing as barbaric. These tensions created a morality war that pitted state officials against federal regulators, boxing promoters against social reformers, and fans against religious groups. Frisbee focuses on several legendary heavyweight prizefights of the period to explain why western geography, economy, and culture ultimately helped the sport's supporters defeat its detractors.

Modern Poisons

A Brief Introduction to Contemporary Toxicology Alan Kolok

Modern Poisons bridges the gap between traditional toxicology textbooks and journal articles on cutting-edge science. This accessible text explains basic principles in plain language while illuminating the most important issues in contemporary toxicology. Kolok begins by exploring age-old precepts such as the doseresponse relationship and goes on to show exactly how chemicals enter the body and elicit their toxic effect. Kolok then traces toxicology's development, from studies of endocrinedisrupting chemicals in toiletries to the emerging science on prions and epigenetics. Whether studying toxicology itself, public health, or environmental science, readers will develop a core understanding of - and curiosity about - this fastchanging field.

State of the World 2016 Can a City be Sustainable? The Worldwatch Institute

Cities are the world's future. Today, more than half of the global population - 3.7 billion people - are urban dwellers and that number is expected to double by 2050. Will we invest in the physical and social infrastructure necessary for livable, equitable, and sustainable cities? In the latest edition of State of the World, the flagship publication of the Worldwatch Institute, experts from around the globe examine the core principles of sustainable urbanism and profile cities that are putting them into practice. Issues examined range from the nitty-gritty of handling waste and developing public transportation to civic participation and navigating dysfunctional government. The result is a snapshot of cities today and a vision for global urban sustainability tomorrow.

ALAN KOLOK is the director of the Aquatic Toxicology Laboratory, interim director at the Center for Environmental Health and Toxicology, and a professor of biology at the University of Nebraska at Omaha. He is the editor of the journal Environmental Toxicology and Chemistry.

Defying Dystopia

Going on with the Human Journey after Technology Fails Us Ed Ayres

To most, the collapse of modern civilization is the stuff of fiction. Yet science confirms that due to misuse of technology and environmental abuse, our world is in grave danger of ruin. The Union of Concerned Scientists prophesized, in their World Scientists' Warning, that humanity is not going any further – our journey will be over in the near future. Ayres is committed to preventing that and argues that the most critical task for survival is to disengage from our tech thrall. Rather, we need to shift to a conscious management of our evolution where we use technology to enhance our evolved skills and strengths rather than erode or supplant them.

ED AYRES is the former editor of World Watch magazine, one of the first periodicals to focus on the emerging challenges of environmental degradation and destabilized climate.

Joe Plomin

This is the complete and authoritative guide to the practicalities of using hidden cameras to expose abuse or wrongdoing. Secret filming is no longer the preserve of specialists, professional journalists, and private investigators. Drawing on the author's own experience producing undercover documentaries and wearing secret cameras, this book explains covert recording for the general public, including specific advice for filming using a phone or covert camera, the legal and ethical issues to consider, and what to do with any evidence recorded. It also looks to the future of covert filming and the implications of technological advances, such as drone cameras.

JOE PLOMIN, one of the most experienced producers of covert television documentaries, has managed some of Britain's most high profile undercover investigations, including into the abuse of people with learning disabilities at Winterbourne View private hospital.

Trauma is Really Strange Steve Haines; Art by Sophie Standing

What is trauma? How does it change the way our brains work? And how can we overcome it? When something traumatic happens to us, we dissociate and our bodies shut down their normal processes. This unique comic explains the strange nature of trauma and how it confuses the brain and affects the body. With wonderful artwork, cat and mouse metaphors, essential scientific facts, and a healthy dose of wit, the narrator reveals how trauma resolution involves changing the body's physiology. This book also describes techniques that can achieve this, including Trauma Releasing Exercises that allow the body to shake away tension, safely releasing the deep muscular patterns of stress and trauma. STEVE HAINES has been working in healthcare for over twenty-five years and as a bodyworker since 1998. He has studied Yoga, Shiatsu, Biodynamic Craniosacral Therapy, and Trauma Releasing Exercises (TRE). He is a UK registered Chiropractor and teaches TRE and Cranial work all over the world. Steve lives and works between London and Geneva.

When Anxiety Attacks Terian Koscik

Frank and full of gentle humour, Terian Koscik's graphic memoir shares her experiences of living with anxiety, finding the courage to see a therapist, and learning more than she could have imagined. Even in childhood, anxious thoughts would seep into Terian's day. Yet she never thought that getting professional help was for her, simply concluding that her problems weren't "real" problems. But when her anxiety finally became overwhelming, she knew it was time to see a therapist. To her surprise, Terian learned endless coping techniques through her therapy sessions. She shares how mindfulness strategies helped her and how "I" statements encouraged her to express feelings more openly. But perhaps the most important thing she learned was that there really is no right way to feel.

TERIAN KOSCIK has been a reader of comics, a creator of comics, and an anxious person for almost as long as she can remember. Most of her work is autobiographical in nature and deals with finding humor in feelings of loneliness, anxiety, and depression.

What the Hell Happened to My Brain? Kate Swaffer

Kate Swaffer was just forty-nine years old when she was diagnosed with a form of younger onset dementia. In this book, she offers an all-toorare first-hand insight into that experience. Kate describes vividly her experiences of living with dementia, exploring the effects of memory difficulties, loss of independence, leaving longterm employment, the impact on her teenage sons, and the enormous impact of the dementia diagnosis on her sense of self. Never shying away from difficult issues, she tackles head-on stigma, inadequacies in care and support, and the media's role in perpetuating myths about dementia, suggesting ways in which we can include and empower people with the diagnosis. KATE SWAFFER works as an advocate and activist for dementia and aged care, has published many articles and a book of poetry, and has presented internationally on dementia. She is a co-founder and co-chair of Dementia Alliance International, chair of Alzheimer's Australia Dementia Advisory Committee, and a co-chair of the Consumers Dementia Research Network.

Elemental Island Kathy Hoopmann and J.S. Kiss

Astie has always been different. Her twelfth birthday is looming and she still has not decided on her thesis. All the Learners at the Hub picked theirs years ago. On the verge of being diagnosed with Social Syndrome, she stumbles upon Danny, who has landed in a forbidden flight machine. To protect him, Astie persuades her cousin Jakob to tamper with the Overseer's memory. On the run from the Monitors together, Astie calls on her unique qualities to forge a friendship with the stranger and discover his reason for coming to the island. What she finds will shake the foundations of the place she calls home. Set on a secretive island utopia where science and logic rule, this intriguing novel explores and celebrates differences in people from an alternative perspective.

Frankie's Foibles A Story About a Boy Who Worries Kath Grimshaw

Frankie is worried. He's worried about his new school, he's worried about making friends, and he's worried about the bully boys that wait for him on the corner. But most of all, he's worried about what might happen if he steps on the cracks in the pavement. Then Frankie learns about his foibles, the pesky little creatures that whisper worries in his ear. They are bullies, just like the boys on the corner. But with a big grin on his face and a little help from his brand new friend, Frankie discovers that he can learn to ignore his foibles ... and eventually escape his worries for good! This beautifully illustrated story will appeal to any child who worries, especially those with OCD and anxiety. Emphasising that we all have worries, it is a great way for parents and professionals to approach the topic sensitively.

KATH GRIMSHAW is a writer, illustrator, and children's book designer. She has Obsessive Compulsive Disorder and, as a child, she struggled to understand why she felt the way she did, which inspired her to write this story. Kath studied Human Sciences at Oxford University before pursuing a career in children's book publishing.

Weaving the Boundary Karenne Wood

Evocative, haunting, and ultimately hopeful, Karenne Wood's poetry collection Weaving the Boundary explores personal and collective memories and contemporary Indigenous realities through lenses of human loss, desire, violence, and love. Political yet universal, Wood tells of love and betrayal, loss and forgiveness. Wood intertwines important and otherwise untold stories and histories with a heightened sense of awareness of Indigenous peoples' issues and present realities. Moving from elegy to evocations of hope and desire, the poems call for respect toward Mother Earth and feminine sensibility. KARENNE WOOD holds an MFA in poetry from George Mason University and a PhD in linguistic anthropology from the University of Virginia. She is an enrolled member of the Monacan Indian Nation and has served on the Monacan Tribal Council for many years. She directs the Virginia Indian Programs at the Virginia Foundation for the Humanities.
