Trudeaumania

Paul Litt

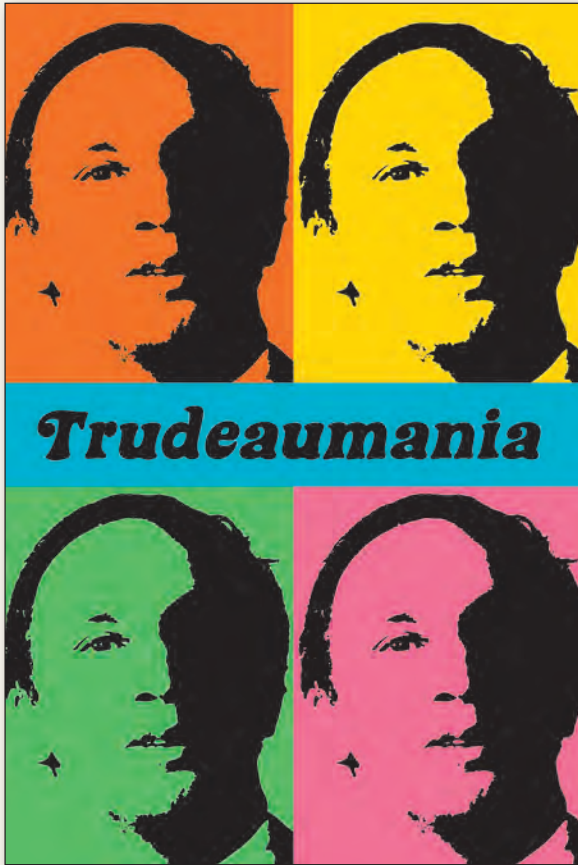

A variety of memoirs, biographies, and histories have dealt with the life and times of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau but none have captured the excitement and drama of 'Trudeaumania' as well as this book does. Paul Litt artfully combines thorough research with a penetrating media analysis to create the most definitive account of that extraordinary phenomenon of Trudeaumania ever published.

Paul Rutherford, author of When Television Was Young: Primetime Canada 1952–1967

In 1968, Canadians dared to take a chance on a new kind of politician. Pierre Trudeau, a relative newcomer to federal politics, became the leader of the Liberal Party in April. Within two months he was prime minister of Canada. His meteoric rise to power was driven by Trudeaumania, a phenomenon that generated the same media hype, sexual sizzle, and adoring crowds as its rock star equivalent Beatlemania. What did it all mean?

This book examines the origins, dynamics, and enduring significance of Trudeaumania. Combining an engaging narrative with well-informed analysis, Paul Litt shows that Trudeaumania was the product of a conjunction of circumstances – most notably the rise of 1960s radicalism, modern mass media, and nationalist aspirations. Still high on the heady nationalist experiences of the Centennial and Expo 67, Canadians wanted to modernize their nation, differentiate it from the US, and thwart the threat of Quebec separatism. Trudeau became their means for doing so. In terms of its significance, the mania that swept Canada fifty years ago was not just a sixties crazy moment. It was also an exercise in national identity formation that would define the values of Canadians for decades to come.

PAUL LITT is a historian of twentieth-century Canada and a professor cross-appointed between the Department of History and the School of Canadian Studies at Carleton University in Ottawa. He is also the author of Elusive Destiny: The Political Vocation of John Napier Turner.

POLITICAL MEMOIR

The Call of the World

A Political Memoir

Bill Graham

Bill Graham – Canada's minister of foreign affairs and minister of defence during the tumultuous years following 9/11 – takes us on a personal journey from his Vancouver childhood to important behind-the-scenes moments in recent global history. With candour and wit, he recounts meetings with world leaders, contextualizes important geopolitical relationships, and offers acute observations on backstage politics. He explains Canada's decision not to participate in the 2003 invasion of Iraq and makes a passionate case for why international law offers the best hope for a safer, more prosperous, and just world.

BILL GRAHAM served as Canada's minister of foreign affairs (2002–04), minister of national defence (2004–06), leader of the Official Opposition (2006), and interim leader of the Liberal Party of Canada (2006). He is currently the chancellor of Trinity College at the University of Toronto, Canada.

The Harper Era in Canadian Foreign Policy
Parliament, Politics, and Canada's Global Posture
Edited by Adam Chapnick and Christopher J. Kukucha

In 2015 the Harper era in Canadian foreign policy was over, suggesting a return to the priorities of a gentler, more cooperative Liberal era. But was the Harper era really so different? And if so, why? This comprehensive analysis of Canada's foreign policy during the Harper years addresses these very questions. The chapters, written by leading scholars and analysts of Canadian politics, provide an excellent overview of foreign policy in a number of different policy areas. They also come to a surprising conclusion as to whether the transition from a minority to majority government in 2011 shaped the way the Harper Conservatives conceived of, developed, and implemented international policy.

ADAM CHAPNICK is the deputy director of education at the Canadian Forces College and a professor of defence studies at the Royal Military College of Canada. CHRISTOPHER J. KUKUCHA is a professor of political science at the University of Lethbridge.

POLITICAL SCIENCE

Beyond Afghanistan
An International Security Agenda for Canada
Edited by James Fergusson and Francis Furtado

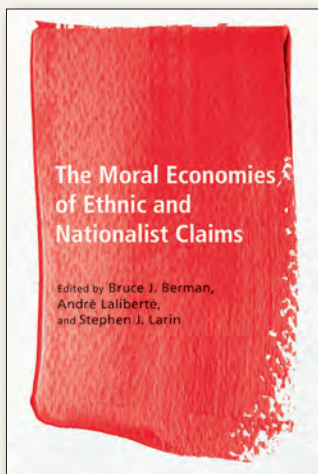

For over a decade, Canada's participation in the war in Afghanistan dominated media headlines, government discussions, academic studies, and the public international security debate. Now that the mission in Afghanistan is over, what issues should shape Canada's international security agenda? This collection of essays, written by leading observers of Canadian policy, seeks to answer this question by investigating how Canada will likely respond to new threats and security challenges in light of experience gained in Afghanistan. Topics include the future place of NATO in defence and security policy, regions of concern and interest, and nuclear weapons and arms control.

JAMES FERGUSSON is the director of the Centre for Defence and Security Studies and a professor in the Department of Political Studies at the University of Manitoba. FRANCIS FURTADO served for over twenty years with the Government of Canada and currently works as a consultant in Ottawa.

The Moral Economies of Ethnic and Nationalist Claims
Edited by Bruce J. Berman, André Laliberté, and Stephen J. Larin

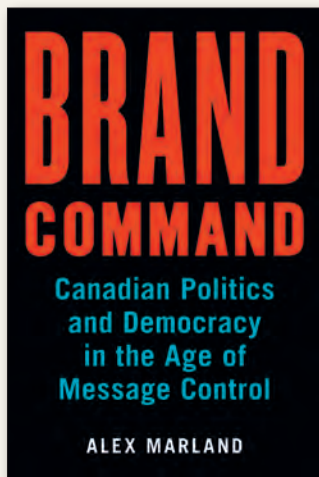

Bringing together international experts on ethnicity and nationalism, this book argues that competing moral economies play an important role in ethnic and nationalist conflict. Its authors investigate how the beliefs and practices that normatively regulate and legitimize the distribution of wealth, power, and status in a society – moral economies – are being challenged in identity-based communities in ways that precipitate or exacerbate conflicts. The combination of theoretical chapters and case studies ranging from Africa and Asia to North America provides compelling evidence for the value of moral economy analysis in understanding problems associated with ethnic and nationalist mobilization and conflict.

BERMAN is a professor emeritus of political studies at Queen's University and was director and principal investigator of the Ethnicity and Democratic Governance Project, 2006–12. ANDRÉ LALIBERTÉ is a professor of political studies at the University of Ottawa. STEPHEN J. Brand Command

Canadian Politics and Democracy in the Age of Message Control

Alex Marland

The pursuit of political power is strategic as never before. Ministers, MPs, and candidates parrot the same catchphrases. The public service has become politicized. And decision making is increasingly centralized in the Prime Minister's Office. What is happening to our democracy? To get to the bottom of this, Alex Marland reviewed internal political party files, media reports, and documents obtained through access to information requests, and interviewed Ottawa insiders. He discovered that in the face of rapid changes in communication technology, the infusion of corporate marketing strategies has instilled a culture of centralized political control. At the core of the strategy is brand control; at stake is democracy as we know it.

ALEX MARLAND is an associate professor of political science and an associate dean at Memorial University of Newfoundland. He is a leading researcher of political communication and marketing in Canada.

Big Tent Politics

The Liberal Party's Long Mastery of Canada's Public Life

R. Kenneth Carty

The Liberal Party of Canada is one of the most successful parties in the democratic world. It dominated Canadian politics for a century, practising an inclusive style of "big tent" politics that enabled it to fend off opponents on both the left and right. This book traces the record of the party, unwrapping Liberal practices and organization to reveal its distinctive "brokerage" approach to politics and franchise-style structure. A masterful analysis of how one party came to define the nation's public life, this book also identifies the challenges that lie ahead as the Liberals reinvent themselves for the twenty-first century.

R. KENNETH CARTY is a professor emeritus of political science at the University of British Columbia.

Building a Collaborative Advantage

Network Governance and Homelessness Policy-Making in Canada

Carey Doberstein

Homelessness is not a historical accident. It is the disastrous outcome of policy decisions made over time and at several levels of government. Drawing on network governance theory, extended participant observation, and more than sixty interviews with key policy figures, Carey Doberstein investigates how government and civil-society actors in Vancouver, Calgary, and Toronto have organized themselves to solve public problems. He concludes that having a progressive city council is not enough to combat homelessness – civil-society organizations and actors must have genuine access to the channels of government power in order to work with policy makers and implement effective solutions.

CAREY DOBERSTEIN is an assistant professor of political science at UBC on the Okanagan campus.

Mobilizing Metaphor

Art, Culture, and Disability Activism in Canada

Edited by Christine Kelly and Michael Orsini

Mobilizing Metaphor illustrates how radical and unconventional forms of activism, including art, are reshaping the rich and vibrant tradition of disability mobilization in Canada. The artists, activists, and scholars in Mobilizing Metaphor reveal how their work is distinctive as both art and social action, and how disability activism is as varied as the population it represents. Sketching the shifting contours of Canadian disability politics, the authors challenge perceptions of disability and the politics that surround it, leading us to re-examine how we define oppression and how we enact change.

This series highlights the works of emerging and established authors who are challenging us to think anew about the politics and cultures of disability. Reconceiving disability politics means dismantling the strict divides among culture, art, and politics. It also means appreciating how disability art and culture inform and transform disability politics in Canada and, conversely, how politics shape what counts as art in the name of disability. Drawing from diverse scholarship in feminist and gender studies, political science, social work, sociology, and law, among others, works in this series bring to the fore the implicitly and explicitly political dimensions of disability.

UBC Press is committed to making all the books in this series fully accessible.

DISABILITY STUDIES

Disability Politics and Care

The Challenge of Direct Funding

Christine Kelly

"We do not need care!" is a rallying cry for disability movements. It is informed by a recognition that a lack of choice over simple care decisions – like what to eat or what to wear – is a subtle yet pervasive form of violence endured by many disabled people. Disability Politics and Care examines an independent living program to explore what happens when people with disabilities take control of their own care arrangements. Christine Kelly documents responses by a wide range of stakeholders of this program and reflects on some of its broader social and political implications.

CHRISTINE KELLY is an assistant professor in community health sciences at the University of Manitoba.

Critical Suicidology

Transforming Suicide Research and Prevention for the 21st Century

Edited by Jennifer White, Ian Marsh, Michael J. Kral, and Jonathan Morris

In Critical Suicidology, a team of international scholars, practitioners, and people directly affected by suicide argue that the field of suicidology has become too focused on the biomedical paradigm: a model that pathologizes distress and obscures the social, political, and historical contexts that contribute to human suffering. The authors take a critical look at existing research, introduce the perspectives of those who have direct personal knowledge of suicide and suicidal behaviour, and propose alternative approaches that are creative and culturally sensitive. In the right hands, this book could save lives.

Contesting Elder Abuse and Neglect

Ageism, Risk, and the Rhetoric of Rights in the Mistreatment of Older People

Joan R. Harbison

The mistreatment of diverse older people in varying ways is categorized in many societies as "elder abuse and neglect," yet this concept has not been subjected to rigorous critical inquiry. Instead, it has most often represented the interests of professionals, academics, and governments, while policymakers and researchers frequently disregard the complexity of issues that fall under the designation. The first comprehensive, scholarly critique of the topic, Contesting Elder Abuse and Neglect is an important, much-needed contribution that encourages new thinking, policies, and action regarding the treatment of older people.

Protest and Politics

The Promise of Social Movement Societies

Edited by Howard Ramos and Kathleen Rodgers

The Tea Party. The Occupy Movement. Idle No More. Around the world, popular social movements are challenging the status quo. Yet most democracies are seeing a decline in voter turnout. Protest and Politics examines this shift in political participation, as well as the blurring of social movements and mainstream politics, through the lens of the social movement society thesis. Analyzing historical and contemporary social movements in Canada in comparison to those in the US and in the transnational sphere, the authors argue that our understanding of the boundaries between politics and protest needs to evolve.

When Wheat Was King

The Rise and Fall of the Canada-UK Grain Trade

André Magnan

Over the course of a century, the Canadian Prairies went from being the breadbasket of the world to but one of many grain-growing regions in a vast global agri-food system. Magnan traces the causes and consequences of this evolution, from the first transatlantic shipments of wheat to the controversial dismantling of the Canadian Wheat Board. When Wheat Was King reveals how farmers, governments, and consumers, over successive periods, responded to industrialization, international trade rules set by the US, the liberalization of global markets, and the consolidation of corporate power. The result is a fascinating look at how regional, national, and international politics have influenced agriculture and food industries in Canada, the UK, and around the world.

Zombie Army

The Canadian Army and Conscription in the Second World War

Daniel Byers

Zombie Army tells the story of Canada's Second World War military conscripts – reluctant soldiers pejoratively referred to as “zombies” for their perceived similarity to the mindless movie monsters of the 1930s. In the first full-length book on the subject in almost forty years, Byers combines previously underused and newly discovered records to argue that although conscripts were only liable for home defence, they soon became a source from which the active army recruited overseas fighters. He also challenges the traditional nationalist-dominated impression that Quebec was only a grudging participant in the war.

DANIEL BYERS is an assistant professor in the Department of History at Laurentian University.

The Weight of Command

Voices of Canada's Second World War Generals and Those Who Knew Them

J.L. Granatstein

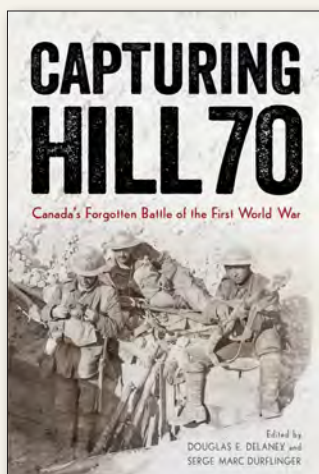

The ultimate compliment is to tell someone, 'As usual you have nailed it!' That's what J.L. Granatstein has done in his presentation and analysis of the intimate, often colourful, interviews he conducted with generals and their staff – both the good and not so good – who led Canada's efforts during the Second World War.

Lewis MacKenzie, Major General (ret'd), Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, and author of the bestseller, Peacekeeper: The Road to Sarajevo

Three-quarters of a century after the Second World War, almost all the participants are gone. This book contains interviews with and about the Canadians who led the troops during that war. Edited and introduced by one of the foremost military historians of our time, this carefully curated collection brings to life the generals and their wartime experiences.

The interviews are based on lengthy conversations that J.L. Granatstein had with the surviving generals, their key staff officers, fighters under their command, and their families. Generals McNaughton, Crerar, Simonds, Foulkes, and Burns are among those discussed. The content is revealing and conversations frank. Peers and subordinates alike scrutinize key commanders of the war, sometimes offering praise but often passing harsh judgment. We learn of their failings and successes – and of the heavy weight of command borne by all.

J.L. GRANATSTEIN, OC, FRSC, is a Distinguished Research Professor of History Emeritus at York University. For fifty years he has published extensively in Canadian military, political, and foreign policy history; his most recent book is The Best Little Army in the World: The Canadians in Northwest Europe, 1944–1945. He taught at York University for thirty years, was Director and CEO of the Canadian War Museum, and has served on government commissions.

Capturing Hill 70

Canada's Forgotten Battle of the First World War

Edited by Douglas E. Delaney and Serge Marc Durflinger

In August 1917, the Canadian Corps captured Hill 70, vital terrain just north of the French town of Lens. The Canadians suffered some 5,400 casualties and in three harrowing days defeated twenty-one German counterattacks. This spectacularly successful but shockingly costly battle was as innovative as Vimy, yet few Canadians have heard of it. Capturing Hill 70 marks the centenary of this triumph by dissecting different facets of the battle, from planning and conducting operations to long-term repercussions and commemoration. It reinstates Hill 70 to its rightful place among the pantheon of battles that forged the reputation of the famed Canadian Corps during the First World War.

Engaging the Line

How the Great War Shaped the Canada-US Border

Brandon R. Dimmel

For decades, people living in adjacent communities along the Canada-US border enjoyed close social and economic relationships with their neighbours across the line. The introduction of new security measures during the First World War threatened this way of life by restricting the movement of people and goods across the border. Many Canadians resented the new regulations introduced by their provincial and federal governments, deriding them as “outside influences” that created friction where none had existed before. Engaging the Line examines responses to wartime regulations in six communities and offers a glimpse at the origins of our modern, highly secured border.

War-Torn Exchanges

The Lives and Letters of Nursing Sisters Laura Holland and Mildred Forbes

Andrea McKenzie

Laura Holland and Mildred Forbes, an inseparable duo, set off from Montreal in June 1915 to serve as nursing sisters in the Great War. Over the next four years, the two cared for each other through sickness and health, air raids and bombings, unrelenting work and adventurous leaves. This thoughtfully curated collection of their letters home paints a vivid account of nursing through the battles of Gallipoli, Passchendaele, and beyond. Mildred and Laura were remarkably forthright, revealing how they relied on friendship, humour, and professional ethics to carry on in the face of mismanagement, discrimination, deprivation, and trauma.

Sister Soldiers of the Great War

The Nurses of the Canadian Army Medical Corps

Cynthia Toman

In Sister Soldiers of the Great War, award-winning author Cynthia Toman recovers the long-lost history of Canada's first women soldiers – nursing sisters who enlisted as officers with the Canadian Army Medical Corps. The nursing sisters had a mandate to salvage as many sick and wounded men as possible for return to the front lines. Nothing prepared them, however, for the poor living conditions, the scale of the casualties, or the type of wounds they encountered. But, their letters and diaries reveal that they were determined to soldier on under all circumstances while still “living as well as possible.”

Maritime Command Pacific

The Royal Canadian Navy's West Coast Fleet in the Early Cold War

David Zimmerman

The Royal Canadian Navy crews that sailed the Atlantic during the early Cold War held a contemptuous view of their West Coast brethren, likening the Pacific fleet to a "yacht club" where sailors enjoyed a life of leisurely service on a tranquil sea. As David Zimmerman reveals, nothing could be further from the truth. From the fleet's postwar downsizing, through to its rapid expansion in the wake of the Korean War as Cold War fears gripped the nation, Maritime Command Pacific fought to hold steady amid drifting Japanese mines, Soviet submarines, and joint US-Canadian training exercises.

Lock, Stock, and Icebergs

A History of Canada's Arctic Maritime Sovereignty

Adam Lajeunesse

In April 1988, after years of failed negotiations over the status of the Northwest Passage, Brian Mulroney gave Ronald Reagan a globe, pointed to the Arctic, and said "Ron that's ours. We own it lock, stock, and icebergs." A simple statement, it summed up Ottawa's official policy: Canada owns the icy waters that wind their way through the Arctic Archipelago. Behind the scenes, however, successive governments have spent over a century trying to figure out how to enforce this claim. Drawing on recently declassified material, Lajeunesse guides readers through the evolution of Canada's Arctic sovereignty, showing how the Northwest Passage and the surrounding waters became Canadian.

Creating Canada's Peacekeeping Past

Colin McCullough

Creating Canada's Peacekeeping Past illuminates how Canada's participation in United Nations' peacekeeping efforts from 1956 to 1997 was used as a symbol of national identity – in Quebec and the rest of the country. Delving into four decades' worth of documentaries, newspaper coverage, textbooks, political rhetoric, and more, Colin McCullough outlines the continuity and change in the production and reception of messages about peacekeeping. Engaging in debates about Canada's international standing, as well as its broader national character, this book is an ingeniously conceived addition to the history of Canada's changing national identity.

We Still Demand!

Redefining Resistance in Sex and Gender Struggles

Edited by Patrizia Gentile, Gary Kinsman, and L. Pauline Rankin

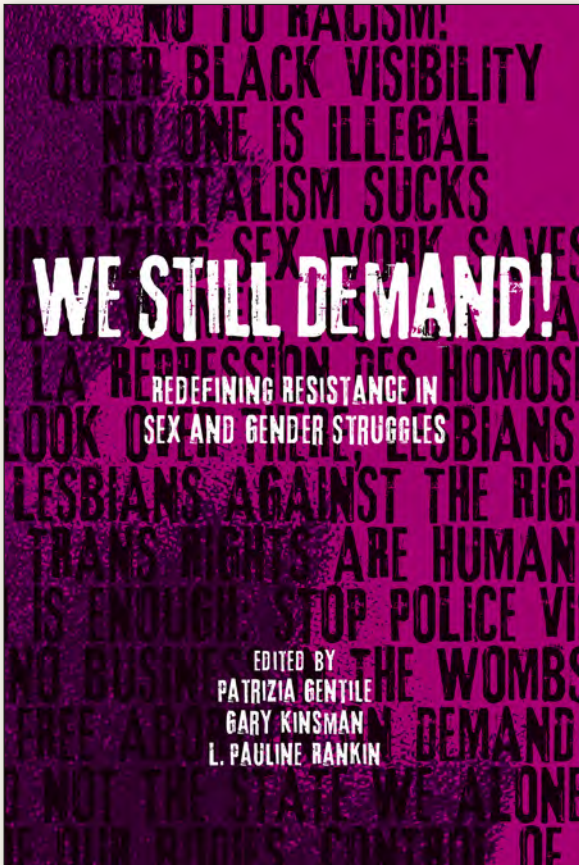

We Still Demand! recovers vibrant and unsung histories of sex and gender activism across Canada from the 1970s to the present. Departing from conventional accounts, this book demonstrates the varied nature of resistance and the productive power of remembering sex and gender struggles. In attending to the records and accounts that have slipped out of view, it also redraws the boundaries between activism and scholarship.

The first part of the book remembers these struggles. Drawing on a rich history of activism, the contributors recall 1970s same-sex marriage activism; early queer union organizing; organizing against police repression; early trans organizing; the emergence of dyke marches; the organization of black queer space at Toronto Pride events. The second part of the book rethinks past and current struggles. The authors address gender “passing” in historical research; lesbian s/m porn; sex-worker organizing; problems with organizing against “human trafficking”; queer immigration and refugee struggles; and trans identity. By recovering the history of activism and outlining contemporary challenges, We Still Demand! provides a vital rewriting of the history of sex and gender activism that will enlighten current struggles and activate new forms of resistance.

Science of the Seance

Transnational Networks and Gendered Bodies in the Study of Psychic Phenomena, 1918–40

Beth A. Robertson

Beth A. Robertson resurrects the story of a group of men and women who sought to transform the seance into a laboratory of the spirits and a transnational empirical project. Her findings cast new light on how science, metaphysics, and the senses collided to inform gendered norms in the 1920s and '30s. She reveals a world inhabited, on one side, by psychical researchers who represented themselves as masters of the senses, untainted by the effeminized subjectivity of the body and, on the other, by mediums and ghostly subjects who could and did challenge the researchers' exclusive claims to scientific expertise and authority.

BETH A. ROBERTSON is a historian of gender, sexuality, and the body who teaches in the Institute of Interdisciplinary Studies at Carleton University.

Not Fit to Stay

Public Health Panics and South Asian Exclusion

Sarah Isabel Wallace

In the early 1900s, panic over the arrival of South Asian immigrants swept up and down the West Coast of North America. While racism and fear of labour competition were at the heart of this furor, Not Fit to Stay: Public Health Panics and South Asian Exclusion reveals that public leaders – including physicians, union leaders, civil servants, journalists, and politicians – latched onto unsubstantiated public health concerns to justify the exclusion of South Asians from Canada and the United States.

Infidels and the Damn Churches

Irreligion and Religion in Settler British Columbia

Lynne Marks

British Columbia is at the forefront of a secularizing movement in the English-speaking world. Nearly half its residents claim no religious affiliation, and the province has the highest rate of unbelief or religious indifference in Canada. Infidels and the Damn Churches explores the historical roots of this phenomenon. Lynne Marks reveals that class and racial tensions fueled irreligion in frontier BC, a world populated by embattled ministers, militant atheists, turn-of-the-century New Agers, rough-living miners, Asian immigrants, and church-going settlers. This nuanced study of mobility, masculinity, and family in settler BC offers new insights into the beginnings of what has become an increasingly dominant secular worldview across Canada.

The Secular Northwest

Religion and Irreligion in Everyday Postwar Life

Tina Block

The image of a rough frontier – where working men were tempted away from church on Sundays by more profane concerns – was perpetuated by postwar religious leaders troubled by the decline in church involvement. Tina Block debunks the myth of a godless frontier, revealing a Pacific Northwest that rejected organized religion – but not necessarily God. Women, families, and middle-class communities all helped to shape the region's secular identity. Drawing on oral histories, census data, news articles, and private archives, Block launches this exploration of Northwest secularity and the independent spirit of those who chose to live irreligiously.

The Iconic North

Cultural Constructions of Aboriginal Life in Postwar Canada

Joan Sangster

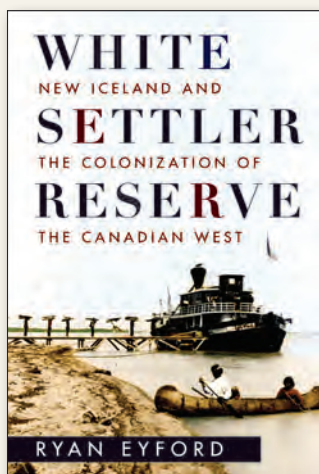

Resilient ideological assumptions, shifting economic priorities, and government policy in the postwar era influenced how northern culture was represented in popular Canadian imagery. In an enlightening exposure of Canada's cultural landscape, The Iconic North lays bare the relationship between settler nation building and popular images of Aboriginal experience. Joan Sangster redirects the debates about the geopolitical prospects of the North by addressing how women and gender relations have played a key role in the history of northern development. She reveals how assumptions about both Indigenous and non-Indigenous women shaped gender, class, and political relationships in the circumpolar north.

White Settler Reserve

New Iceland and the Colonization of the Canadian West

Ryan Eyford

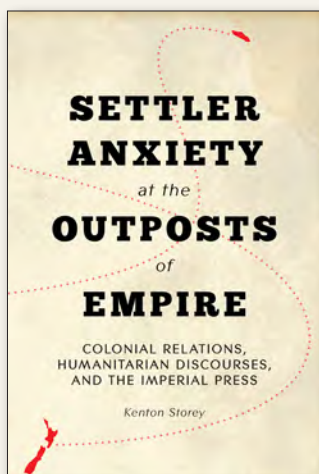

In 1875, Icelandic immigrants established a colony on the southwest shore of Lake Winnipeg. The timing and location of New Iceland was not accidental. Across the Prairies, the Canadian government was creating land reserves for Europeans in the hope that the agricultural development of Indigenous lands would support the state's economic and political ambitions. In this innovative history, Ryan Eyford expands our understanding of the creation of western Canada: his nuanced account traces the connections between Icelandic colonists, the Indigenous people they displaced, and other settler groups while exposing the ideas and practices integral to building a colonial society.

Settler Anxiety at the Outposts of Empire

Colonial Relations, Humanitarian Discourses, and the Imperial Press

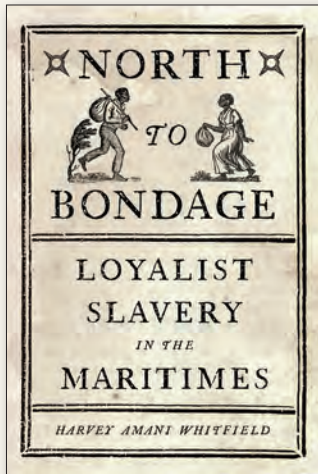

Kenton Storey

During the 1850s and 1860s, there was considerable anxiety among British settlers over the potential for Indigenous rebellion and violence. Yet, publicly admitting to this fear would have gone counter to Victorian notions of racial superiority. In this fascinating book, Kenton Storey challenges the idea that a series of colonial crises in the mid-nineteenth century led to a decline in the popularity of humanitarianism across the British Empire. Instead, he demonstrates how colonial newspapers in New Zealand and on Vancouver Island appropriated humanitarian language as a means of justifying the expansion of settlers' access to land, promoting racial segregation, and allaying fears of potential Indigenous resistance.

KENTON STOREY is a historian of the British Empire and a legal researcher working in the field of First Nations history.

North to Bondage

Loyalist Slavery in the Maritimes

Harvey Amani Whitfield

Many Canadians believe their nation fell on the right side of history in harbouring escaped slaves from the United States. In fact, in the wake of the American Revolution, many Loyalist families brought slaves with them when they settled in the Maritime colonies of British North America. Once there, slaves used their traditions of survival, resistance, and kinship networks to negotiate their new reality. Harvey Amani Whitfield's book, the first on slavery in the Maritimes, is a startling corrective to the enduring and triumphant narrative of Canada as a land of freedom at the end of the Underground Railroad.

From Left to Right

Maternalism and Women's Political Activism in Postwar Canada

Brian T. Thorn

Time Travel

Tourism and the Rise of the Living History Museum in Mid-Twentieth-Century Canada

Alan Gordon

In the 1960s, Canadians could step through time to eighteenth-century trading posts or nineteenth-century pioneer towns. These living history museums promised authentic reconstructions of the past but, as Time Travel shows, they revealed more about mid-twentieth-century interests and perceptions of history than they reflected historical fact. These museums became important components of post-war government economic growth and employment policies. Shaped by political pressures and the need to balance education and entertainment, they reflected Canadians' struggle to establish a pan-Canadian identity in the context of multiculturalism, competing nationalisms, First Nations resistance, and the growth of the state.

Exhibiting Nation

Multicultural Nationalism (and Its Limits) in Canada's Museums

Caitlin Gordon-Walker

Canada's brand of nationalism celebrates diversity – so long as it doesn't challenge the unity, authority, or legitimacy of the state. Caitlin Gordon-Walker explores this tension between unity and diversity in three nationally recognized museums, institutions that must make judgments about what counts as "too different" in order to celebrate who we are as a people and nation through exhibits, programs, and design. Although the contradictions that lie at the heart of multicultural nationalism have the potential to constrain political engagement and dialogue, the sensory feasts on display in Canada's museums provide a space for citizens to both question and renegotiate the limits of their national vision.

Museums and the Past

Constructing Historical Consciousness

Edited by Viviane Gosselin and Phaedra Livingstone

Museums and the Past explores the central role of museums as memory keepers and makers. Using case studies from a Canadian context, the contributors to this collection reflect on the challenges in maintaining and developing museums as meaningful places of memory and learning. Discussions of museum practice and historical consciousness – how our understanding of the past shapes our sense of the future – consider the modern museum's narratives and pedagogical responsibilities and how museums continue to inform our sense of history.

Mixed Blessings

Indigenous Encounters with Christianity in Canada

Edited by Tolly Bradford and Chelsea Horton

Mixed Blessings transforms our understanding of the relationship between Indigenous people and Christianity in Canada from the early 1600s to the present day. While acknowledging the harm of colonialism, including the trauma inflicted by church-run residential schools, this interdisciplinary collection challenges the portrayal of Indigenous people as passive victims of malevolent missionaries who experienced a uniformly dark history. Instead, this book illuminates the diverse and multifaceted ways that Indigenous communities and individuals – including prominent leaders such as Louis Riel and Edward Ahenakew – have interacted, and continue to interact, meaningfully with Christianity.

From Treaty Peoples to Treaty Nation

A Road Map for All Canadians

Greg Poelzer and Ken S. Coates

Canada is a country founded on relationships and agreements between Indigenous people and newcomers. Although recent court cases have strengthened Aboriginal rights, the cooperative spirit of the treaties is being lost as Canadians engage in endless arguments about First Nations "issues." Greg Poelzer and Ken Coates breathe new life into these debates by looking at approaches that have failed and succeeded in the past and offering all Canadians – from policy makers to concerned citizens – realistic steps forward. The road ahead is clear: if all Canadians take up their responsibilities as treaty peoples, Canada will become a leader among treaty nations.

Two Generations Reflect on Tsimshian Education and the Day Schools

Helen Raptis with members of the Tsimshian Nation

The legacy of residential schools has haunted Canadians, yet little is known about the day and public schools where most Indigenous children were sent to be educated. In What We Learned, two generations of Tsimshian students – elders born in the 1930s and '40s and middle-aged adults born in the 1950s and '60s – add their recollections of attending day schools in northwestern British Columbia to contemporary discussions of Indigenous schooling in Canada. Their stories also invite readers to consider traditional Indigenous views of education that conceive of learning as a lifelong experience that takes place across multiple contexts.

Learning and Teaching Together

Weaving Indigenous Ways of Knowing into Education

Michele T.D. Tanaka

Across Canada, teachers unfamiliar with Aboriginal approaches to learning are seeking ways to respectfully weave Aboriginal content into their lessons. This book introduces an indigenist approach to education. It recounts how pre-service teachers immersed in a crosscultural course in British Columbia began to practise Indigenous ways of knowing. Working alongside Indigenous wisdom keepers, they transformed earth fibres into a mural and, in the process, their own ideas about learning and teaching. By revealing how these students worked to integrate Indigenous ways of knowing into their practice, this book opens a path for teachers to nurture indigenist crosscultural understanding in their classrooms.

MICHELE T.D. TANAKA is an assistant professor in the Faculty of Education at the University of Victoria. Her research and teaching interests have been shaped by twenty years of classroom experience in a variety of educational settings.

Uncertain Accommodation

Aboriginal Identity and Group Rights in the Supreme Court of Canada

Dimitrios Panagos

In 1982, Canada formally recognized Aboriginal rights within its Constitution. The move reflected a consensus that states should and could use group rights to protect and accommodate subnational groups within their borders. Decades later, however, no one is happy. This state of affairs, Panagos argues, is rooted in a failure to define what aboriginality means, which has led to the promotion and protection of a single vision of aboriginality – that of the justices of the Supreme Court. He concludes that there can be no justice so long as the state continues to safeguard a set of values and interests defined by non-Aboriginal people.

Reconciling New Zealand and Māori Law

Carwyn Jones

Māori author and legal scholar Carwyn Jones provides a timely examination of how the resolution of land claims in New Zealand has affected Māori law as well as the challenges faced by Indigenous peoples as they attempt to exercise self-determination in a postcolonial world. Combining thoughtful analysis with Māori storytelling, Jones's nuanced reflections on the claims process show how Western legal thought has shaped treaty negotiations. Drawing on Canadian and international examples, Jones makes the case that genuine reconciliation can occur only when we recognize the importance of Indigenous traditions in the settlement process.

Fragile Settlements

Aboriginal Peoples, Law, and Resistance in South-West Australia and Prairie Canada

Amanda Nettelbeck, Russell Smandych, Louis A. Knafla, and Robert Foster

Fragile Settlements compares the processes by which British colonial authority was asserted over Indigenous peoples in south-west Australia and prairie Canada from the 1830s to the early twentieth century. At the start of this period, in a humanitarian response to settlers' increased demand for land, Britain's Colonial Office moved to protect Indigenous peoples by making them subjects under British law. This book highlights the parallels and divergences between these connected British frontiers by examining how colonial actors and institutions interpreted and applied the principle of law in their interaction with Indigenous peoples "on the ground."

Accusation

Creating Criminals

Edited by George Pavlich and Matthew Unger

Much critical scholarship has detailed the punitive effects of accusations that lead to criminalization. Less well documented is the founding role that accusation plays in creating potential criminals. In an attempt at redress, this collection foregrounds how ideas and rituals of accusation initiate criminalization processes. It offers various perspectives on the mechanisms by which legal persons come to be identified as suitable subjects for criminal justice arenas. By analyzing how criminal accusation operates in theoretical, historical, socio-legal, criminological, political, cultural, and procedural realms, this book launches an important new field of inquiry.

Behind the Walls

Inmates and Correctional Officers on the State of Canadian Prisons

Michael Weinrath

Despite falling crime rates, more rights for inmates, and better training for correctional officers, Canada's prisons are overflowing, and outbreaks of violence continue to grab headlines. Applying Goffman's frame theory and drawing on interviews with inmates and correctional officers in provincial and federal prisons, Michael Weinrath offers an unprecedented look at how inmates and officers perceive themselves, their relationships with others, and new developments and ongoing issues in prisons, including boundary violations by officers and the rise of prison gangs. Although progress has been made, prisons continue to be plagued by problems that prevent inmates from forging positive relationships among themselves and with correctional officers.

Parole in Canada

Gender and Diversity in the Federal System

Sarah Turnbull

Just as Canada's population has changed in the past four decades, so has its prison population. The increasing diversity among prisoners raises important questions about how we punish those who break the law. Parole in Canada is the first book to explore how concerns about Aboriginality, gender, and the multicultural ideal of "diversity" have been interpreted and used to alter parole policy and practice. Using the Parole Board of Canada as a case study, this book shows how some offender differences are selectively included in conditional release decision making, while the structures, practices, and power arrangements that would enable fundamental change remain unaltered.

LEGAL HISTORY

Lawyers' Empire

Legal Professions and Cultural Authority, 1780-1950

W. Wesley Pue

Approaching the legal profession through the lens of cultural history, Wes Pue explores the social roles that lawyers imagined for themselves in England and its empire from the late-eighteenth to the early twentieth century. Each chapter focuses on a moment when lawyers sought to reshape their profession while at the same time imagining they were shaping nation and empire in the process. As an exploration of the relationship between legal professionals and liberalism, this book draws attention to recurrent tensions that have arisen as lawyers sought to assume their own economic well-being while simultaneously advancing the causes of liberty, cultural authority, stability, and continuity.

In Search of the Ethical Lawyer

Stories from the Canadian Legal Profession

Edited by Adam Dodek and Alice Woolley

What options did Paul Bernardo's lawyer have when his client directed him to retrieve hidden evidence? Where would David Milgaard be today if a lawyer hadn't doggedly challenged his murder conviction? And what should a defence lawyer do when told her client is a danger to the public? In this book, leading Canadian legal academics and practising lawyers draw on real-life stories to probe the tension between ethics and the law. Whether re-examining high-profile cases, celebrating barristers who tore down barriers, or pointing out current injustices within the justice system, their stories are compelling and raise important questions about what it takes to be a "good" lawyer.

The Intellectual Property-Regulatory Complex

Overcoming Barriers to Innovation in Agricultural Genomics

Edited by Emily Marden, R. Nelson Godfrey, and Rachael Manion

Advances in agricultural genomics could help address pressing global issues such as world hunger. However, overlapping and inconsistent intellectual property and biosafety regimes – collectively referred to as the "Intellectual Property-Regulatory Complex" – create significant, and often conflicting, barriers to developing and commercializing new agricultural biotechnology. The authors of this collection explore how this Complex impacts innovation in ways that cannot be appreciated when individual regimes are examined in isolation. They then propose solutions that would meet the objectives of the current intellectual property and biosafety regimes while enabling innovation in the field of agricultural genomics.

EMILY MARDEN is counsel at Sidley Austin LLP in the food and drug regulatory practice in Palo Alto, California, and research associate in law and genomics at the University of British Columbia.

R. NELSON GODFREY is an associate in the Vancouver office of an intellectual property and technology law firm. RACHAEL MANION is a senior associate at a public policy consulting firm in Ottawa that serves the health and life sciences sectors.

Striving for Environmental Sustainability in a Complex World

Canadian Experiences

George Francis

In the face of growing anxiety about global environmental sustainability, George Francis, a leading authority in the field of sustainability studies, presents initiatives undertaken in Canada over the past twenty-five years to protect some of our unique environments. Focusing mainly on collaborative studies of thirty-one landscape regions – designated as “Biosphere Reserves” by UNESCO or as “Model Forests” by the Canadian Forest Service – Francis also summarizes smaller sustainability projects across the country. The author concludes on a hopeful note, looking at solutions considered, proposed, and in some cases already implemented by groups striving for sustainability in an increasingly complex world.

GEORGE FRANCIS is a distinguished professor emeritus in the School of Environment, Resources, and Sustainability at the University of Waterloo.

Empowering Electricity

Co-operatives, Sustainability, and Power Sector Reform in Canada

Julie L. MacArthur

Since the 1990s, there has been an upsurge in renewable electricity co-operatives across Canada as hundreds of community organizations have turned to the sun, wind, and rivers as sources of local power generation. Empowering Electricity offers an illuminating analysis of these co-operatives within the context of larger debates over climate change, renewable electricity policy, sustainable community development, and provincial power-sector ownership. It looks at the conditions that led to this new wave of co-operative development, examines their form and location, and shines a light on the promises and challenges accompanying their development.

Community Forestry in Canada

Lessons from Policy and Practice

Edited by Sara Teitelbaum

This book brings together the work of over twenty-five researchers to provide a comparative and empirically rich portrait of community-forestry policy and practice in Canada. Tackling all of the forestry regions from Newfoundland to British Columbia, it unearths the history of community forestry across the nation, demonstrating strong regional differences tied to patterns of policy-making and cultural traditions. Case studies reveal innovative practices in governance and ecological management but also uncover challenges related to government support and market access. This book also considers the future of the sector, including the role of institutional reform, multi-scale networks, and adaptive management strategies.

Resource Communities in a Globalizing Region

Development, Agency, and Contestation in Northern British Columbia

Edited by Paul Bowles and Gary N. Wilson

Northern British Columbia has always played an important role in Canada's economy, but for many Canadians it has existed as an almost forgotten place: a vast territory where only a few roads and a ferry system connected small cities, towns, and villages to the outside world. Now as the appetite for natural resources intensifies, this resource-rich and geographically important region is being pulled onto national and global economic stages. This timely volume examines the connections between local development and global forces, and how governments, Aboriginal peoples, organized labour, NGOs, and the private sector are adapting to, resisting, and embracing change.

PAUL BOWLES is a professor of economics and international studies at the University of Northern British Columbia. GARY N. WILSON is a professor of political science at the University of Northern British Columbia.

Unbuilt Environments

Tracing Postwar Development in Northwest British Columbia

Jonathan Peyton

In the latter half of the twentieth century, industrial pioneers came to British Columbia with grand plans for resource development projects, many of which never materialized. Unbuilt Environments argues that these kinds of projects have lasting impacts on the natural and human environment – even when they fail. Jonathan Peyton examines a range of archival materials in five case studies. Looking at a closed asbestos mine, an abandoned rail grade, an imagined series of hydroelectric installations, a failed LNG export facility, and a fuel transmission line, Peyton finds that past development failures continue to shape contemporary resource conflicts in the region.

JONATHAN PEYTON is an assistant professor in the Department of Environment and Geography at the University of Manitoba.

The People and the Bay

A Social and Environmental History of Hamilton Harbour

Nancy B. Bouchier and Ken Cruikshank

This book explores the complicated relationship between Hamilton Harbour and the people who came to reside on its shores. From the time of European settlement through to Hamilton's rise as an industrial city, townsfolk struggled with nature, and with one another, to champion their vision of "the bay" as a place to live, work, and play. The authors bring to life the personalities and power struggles, drawing on a rich collection of archival materials. Along the way, they challenge readers to consider how moral and political choices being made about the natural world today will shape the cities of tomorrow.

Everyday Exposure

Indigenous Mobilization and Environmental Justice in Canada's Chemical Valley

Sarah Marie Wiebe

Every once in a while, an outstanding work of scholarship comes along that transforms the way a seemingly intractable injustice is seen and, in so doing, also transforms the way it should be approached and addressed by all concerned. Such a work is Everyday Exposure.

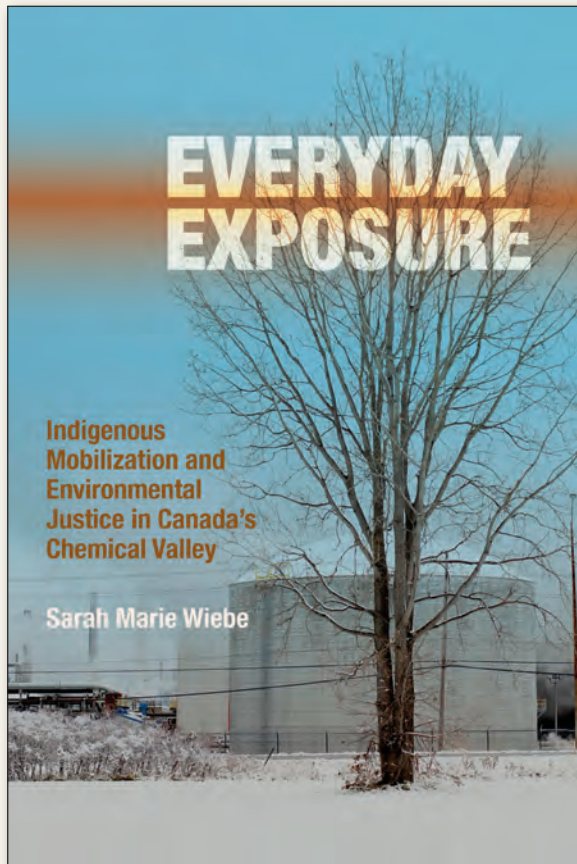

From the Foreword by James Tully

Near the Ontario-Michigan border, Canada's densest concentration of chemical manufacturing surrounds the Aamjiwnaang First Nation. Living in the polluted heart of Chemical Valley, Indigenous community members report a declining rate of male births in addition to abnormal incidences of miscarriage, asthma, cancer, and cardiovascular and respiratory illnesses.

As this book reveals, Canada's dark legacy of inflicting harm on Indigenous bodies persists through a system that fails to adequately address health and ecological suffering in First Nations' communities like Aamjiwnaang.

Everyday Exposure uncovers the systemic injustices faced on a daily basis in Aamjiwnaang. Exploring the problems that Canada's conflicting levels of jurisdiction pose for the creation of environmental justice policy, analyzing clashes between Indigenous and scientific knowledge, and documenting the experiences of Aamjiwnaang residents as they navigate their toxic environment, this book argues that social and political changes require an experiential and transformative "sensing policy" approach, one that takes the voices of Indigenous citizens seriously.

SARAH MARIE WIEBE is an assistant teaching professor at the University of Victoria and holds a SSHRC Post-Doctoral Fellowship with the Institute for Studies and Innovation in Community-University Engagement (ISICUE). She has published on the politics of reproductive justice, ecologies of Indigenous citizenship, and community-engaged scholarship. She has also worked with Indigenous communities in Ontario and British Columbia on community filmmaking projects such as Indian Givers and To Fish as Formerly.

A Town Called Asbestos

Environmental Contamination, Health, and Resilience in a Resource Community

Jessica van Horssen

For decades, manufacturers from around the world relied on asbestos from the town of Asbestos, Quebec, to produce fire-retardant products. Then, over time, people learned about the mineral's devastating effects on human health. Dependent on this deadly industry for their community's survival, the residents of Asbestos developed a unique, place-based understanding of their local environment; the risks they faced living next to the giant opencast mine; and their place within the global resource trade. This book unearths the local-global tensions that defined Asbestos's proud and painful history to reveal the challenges similar resource communities have faced – and continue to face today.

Ecology of Salmonids in Estuaries around the World

Adaptations, Habitats, and Conservation

Colin D. Levings

Biologists have long marvelled at how anadromous salmonids – fish that pass from rivers into oceans and back again – survive as they migrate between these two very different environments. Yet, relatively little is understood about what happens to salmonids in the estuaries where they make this transition from fresh to salt water. This book distills the current knowledge of how eighteen salmonid species around the world (including salmon, steelhead, char, and trout) are adapted to estuaries. It discusses why the waters where rivers and oceans meet are critical to salmonid survival as well as how these vital habitats can be preserved and recovered.

COLIN D. LEVINGS is a scientist emeritus in the Department of Fisheries and Oceans' Centre for Aquaculture and Environment Research in West Vancouver, British Columbia, and an adjunct faculty member in the Institute for Resources, Environment, and Sustainability at the University of British Columbia.

Leaky Governance

Alternative Service Delivery and the Myth of Water Utility Independence

Kathryn Furlong

Municipalities face important water supply challenges. One response has been to render utilities independent from municipal government through alternative service delivery (ASD). For its proponents, ASD provides needed autonomy from municipal government; for its detractors, it is privatization under another name. Using Ontario as a case study, Kathryn Furlong paints a complex picture of both ASD and municipal government. Examining organizational models for water supply and how they are affected by shifting governance and institutional environments, she reveals water management and municipal governance to be deeply interdependent and contends that both must be strengthened to meet contemporary water supply needs.

KATHRYN FURLONG is an assistant professor of geography at the Université de Montréal.

PLANNING

Public Interest, Private Property

Law and Planning Policy in Canada

Edited by Anneke Smit and Marcia Valiante

When it comes to urban planning, to what extent and under what conditions should the community's interest prevail over the rights of private property owners? Public Interest, Private Property addresses this question at a time when pollution, urban sprawl, and condo booms are forcing municipal governments to adopt prescriptive laws and regulations. Case studies focus on spheres in which public values and private property rights collide – expropriation law, natural resources regulation, green development, and water provision – laying the groundwork for more active debates on the issues currently shaping our cities.

Planning Canadian Regions, Second Edition

Gerald Hodge, Heather M. Hall, and Ira M. Robinson

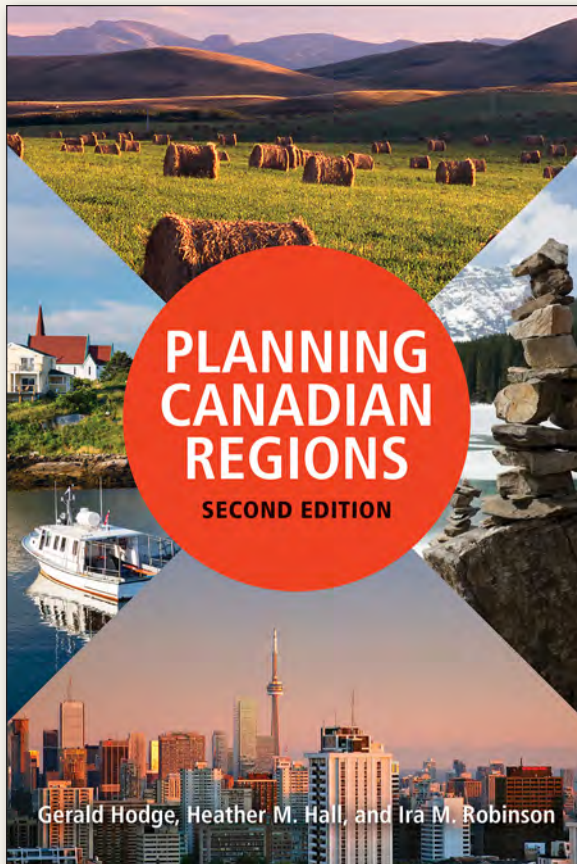

Planning Canadian Regions was the first book to integrate the history, contemporary practice, and emergent issues of regional planning in Canada. This much-anticipated second edition brings the discussion up to date, applying the same thorough analysis to illuminate the rapid changes now shaping our regional landscapes and their planning.

Drawing upon contemporary analyses, examples, illustrations, and the most recent literature, this new edition addresses the increased spatial complexity facing regional planners in their practice when dealing with the interdependence between cities and their regions, as well as between and within regions. In particular, the volume has been expanded to include:

- a full discussion of the distinctive planning needs of urban regions comprising several metropolitan areas, such as the Greater Toronto mega-region;
- a broad examination of the planning dimensions of climate change adaptation and environmental sustainability and their impact on the planning of regions across Canada;
- expanded analysis of the inequities of economic development faced in peripheral resource regions and discussion of the potential for place-based planning;
- the recognition that Canada's Aboriginal peoples must be involved in planning for their regions and the significant impacts this has for the planning not only of northern and peripheral regions but for all regions across Canada.

This book challenges planners, educators, and policy makers to engage with the latest thinking and strive for best practices in twenty-first-century regional planning.

HALL is an assistant professor in the School of Environment, Enterprise, and Development at the University of Waterloo. IRA M. Planning Toronto

The Planners, The Plans, Their Legacies, 1940–80

Richard White

In this lavishly illustrated, meticulously researched book, Richard White analyzes the city's planning and how it contributed to Toronto becoming a functional, world-class city. Focusing on the critical period from 1940 to 1980, he examines how planners sought to shape the city and the region amid a maelstrom of local and international influences and obstacles. Planning Toronto offers the first comprehensive explanation of how Toronto's postwar plans – city, metropolitan, and regional – came to be, who devised them, and what impact they had. As this definitive history reveals, planning matters – though perhaps not always as expected.

RICHARD WHITE is a Toronto historian and a lecturer in Canadian history at the University of Toronto, Mississauga.

The Nature of Masculinity

Critical Theory, New Materialisms, and Technologies of Embodiment

Steve Garlick

This analysis of the relationship between gender and nature proposes that masculinity is a technology that shapes both our engagement with the natural world and how we define freedom. As the complexity of our ecosystems becomes more apparent, the line between nature and culture, human and nonhuman, and technology and bodies becomes less distinct. Yet contemporary masculinity studies has generally failed to incorporate this new way of thinking. Drawing on the work of the Frankfurt School, Heidegger, and new materialist theories, Steve Garlick reassesses the relationship between masculinity, nature, and embodiment to advance a new critical theory of masculinity.

Shelter in a Storm

Revitalizing Feminism in Neoliberal Ontario

Casey Ready

Shelter in a Storm brings together the personal and the political to ask: What is neoliberalism? How does it harm women? And what can be done about it? The book looks at how three YWCA women's shelters in Ontario were affected by the neoliberal policies of Mike Harris's Progressive Conservative government and the subsequent "new-neoliberal" policies of Dalton McGuinty's Liberal government. Drawing on interviews with forty-one staff, clients, volunteers, and activists, Shelter in a Storm exposes the dangers for women that are embedded in neoliberal policies and reveals the value of revitalizing feminism to counteract this powerful ideology.

CASEY READY is an executive director of a non-profit agency, an assistant professor (status only) at the University of Toronto, and a research associate at Trent University.

From Slave Girls to Salvation

Gender, Race, and Victoria's Chinese Rescue Home, 1886-1923

Shelly D. Ikebuchi

For decades, the Chinese Rescue Home was a feature of the landscape of Victoria, British Columbia. Originally a refuge for Chinese prostitutes and slave girls rescued from captivity, it became a residence and school where the Methodist Women's Missionary Society attempted to reform Chinese and Japanese girls and women. They did so, in part, by teaching them domestic skills meant to ease their integration into Western society. This book offers the first in-depth history and analysis of this iconic institution and expands our understanding of the complex interplay between gender, race, and class in BC during this time.

SHELLY D. IKEBUCHI researches and teaches sociology at Okanagan College, Kelowna.

Banished to the Great Northern Wilderness

Political Exile and Re-education in Mao's China

Ning Wang

After Mao Zedong's Anti-Rightist Campaign of 1957-58, Chinese intellectuals were subjected to "re-education" by the state. In Banished to the Great Northern Wilderness, Ning Wang draws on labour camp archives and other newly uncovered Chinese-language sources, including an interview with a camp guard, to provide a remarkable look at the suffering and complex psychological world of intellectuals banished to China's remote north. Wang's use of grassroots sources challenges our perception of the intellectual as a renegade martyr – revealing how exiles often denounced one another and, for self-preservation, declared allegiance to the state.

NING WANG is an associate professor in the History Department at Brock University.

Empire and Environment in the Making of Manchuria

Edited by Norman Smith

For centuries, some of the world's largest empires fought for sovereignty over the resources of Northeast Asia. This compelling analysis of the region's environmental history examines the interplay of climate and competing imperial interests in a vibrant – and violent – cultural narrative. Families that settled this borderland reaped its riches while at the mercy of an unforgiving and hotly contested landscape. As China's strength as a world leader continues to grow, this volume invites exploration of the indelible links between empire and environment – and shows how the geopolitical future of this global economic powerhouse is rooted in its past.

E-BOOKS

UBC Press titles are available to libraries in e-book format via a number of different suppliers, including Ingram Content Group's MyiLibrary®, ebrary, and EBSCO. For more information, please visit www.ubcpress.ca.

UBC Press e-books are also available for individuals from Kobo and Google Play.

EXAMINATION COPIES

UBC Press invites faculty members to write, on departmental letterhead or via a departmental e-mail address, to request the title you wish to consider for course adoption. Please state the course name, semester, anticipated enrolment, and the book currently in use. Paperback titles of interest for courses may be available before their paperback release date. Please contact Harmony Johnson, Academic Marketing Manager, johnson@ubcpress.ca, 604 822 1978, or toll-free 877 377 9378.

UBC Press charges a shipping and handling fee for each examination copy requested. In Canada the fee is $8.50 per title; in the US, $15.00; and elsewhere, $25.00. Please include payment with your request.

Please note: All examination copy requests are provided at the publisher's discretion.

REVIEW COPIES

Please submit review requests to Kerry Kilmartin, Publicity & Events Manager, kilmartin@ubcpress.ca, fax: 604 822 6083.

Please note: All review copy requests are provided at the publisher's discretion.

RETURNS

Permission to return is not required. Current editions of clean, re-saleable books are eligible for credit at invoice discount if returned not less than 3 months nor more than 12 months from purchase date.

Invoice numbers must be supplied. Damaged books, short shipments, or errors must be reported within 10 days of shipping date.
