Major regional project will seek future industrial land needs

VICTORIA - Industry and small business development minister Don Phillips, and the boards of the Central Fraser Valley, Dewdney-Alouette, Fraser-Cheam and Greater Vancouver regional districts recently announced the initiation of a comprehensive project "to chart the dynamics of industrial growth on the lower mainland and to formulate policy options to maintain an adequate supply of industrial land."

The project, which is expected to cost in excess of $200,000, is being undertaken as a co-operative venture between the five participants. Consultation will also take place with a variety of other provincial agencies and local governments. The project is scheduled to be completed in September.

The official regional plans of the four lower mainland regional districts were recently updated. During this process, concern was expressed about the availability of sufficient land designated for industrial purposes to meet long-term demand. It was also recognized that problems of industrial development extended beyond just land designation to include such things as community acceptance, conversion to other uses, density of development, and servicing. Consultation between the various authorities led to the conception of the present project.

The objective of the project is to develop a comprehensive strategy for industrial development in the lower mainland and to prepare guidelines for the actions and programs of the various authorities involved in industrial development, according to Phillips.

Six major areas will be investigated during the project including: the supply of industrial land, the demand for industrial land, the density of use of industrial land, industrial zoning, the servicing and development industrial land and the development of an implementation strategy. Phillips says project is an important step in assuring that a supply of industrial land will be maintained in the lower mainland. It is hoped that the results of the project will also have general applicability to other parts of the province.

The project will be directed by a steering committee comprised of representatives from the ministry of industry and small business development and the lower mainland plan technical liaison committee. Actual work on the project will be undertaken by staff members of each regional district along with consultants for specific projects. The cost of the project will be shared by the regional districts and to support the use of consultants, funding from the ministry of industry and small business development.

VANDERZALM'S NEW LAND USE ACT

Restrictive bill causes concern

MURRAYVILLE - A letter from the Dewdney-Alouette regional district criticizing portions of municipal affairs minister Bill VanderZalm's proposed land use act (bill 9) was termed "a very constructive assessment of the situation" by Langley district councilors this week.

Letter expresses "concern over the loss of local autonomy as reflected in the increased decision making authority given to appointed and elected provincial officials".

It continues, "There are questions in our minds as to whether the bill, if passed, will speed up or slow down the development process in B.C. Too many unanswered questions remain and there is a need for much more information to fully understand the bill.

"The advantages of having virtually all local regulations in one land use bylaw are not clear. At this time it appears that this may prove to be more of a disadvantage than an advantage because it could be very cumbersome."

The letter from chairman J. Agnew says the bill reflects a general tightening up on local government, "presumably directed at improved service to the public." But it adds that at the same time it implies little change for the provincial approval process in terms of the service that will be provided.

VanderZalm to speak

LANGLEY - Municipal affairs minister Bill VanderZalm will be the guest speaker at a chamber of commerce dinner meeting here on Tuesday, Feb. 16.

VanderZalm will speak on the new B.C. land use act.

The public is invited to this function which gets underway at 6:30 p.m. at Newlands golf course at 21025 - 48 Avenue. Guests who want to reserve dinner should call 530-6656.

Pit drownings bring sentence

ALDERGROVE - The president of a local sports organization has been sentenced in provincial court to one day in jail and six months suspended.

Judgement followed criminal negligence action taken after three youngsters drowned in a water-filled pit at the Aldergrove Motorcycle Association's south Aldergrove track last spring.

In addition to the jail term imposed on Walter Levy, the association was fined $1,000.

The Corporation of the township of Langley, owners of the property, had been charged along with Levy and the AMA. These charges, however, were later dropped.

Motorcycle association is leasing the Little Rock track from the municipality's recreation commission.

Four 10-year-old boys had ventured onto the property after having scaled a fence surrounding the track. They all fell into the pit, but one managed to scramble to safety.

'Big fight' expected over GVRD dump proposal for Fort Langley

MURRAYVILLE - Council members here are gearing up for the "big fight".

They consider it inevitable that eventually they will have to take on the big monster, the Greater Vancouver regional district.

The local dragon-slayers are prepared to fight the battle right to the hallowed halls of the supreme court of Canada in order to keep Langley green and garbage-free.

For a while they thought they had heard the last of a GVRD proposal to establish a huge "sanitary landfill" operation at Fort Langley. Local people said they did not want it, politicians said they did not want it, and Langley MLA Bob McClelland said GVRD would proceed only over his "dead body".

Either the GVRD officials haven't heard, or else they just don't care what Langley residents and McClelland say. Last week they announced that their committee charged with the task of finding a new metropolitan dump site had narrowed the choices down to two, at Pitt Polder north of the Fraser River, or at Fort Langley.

The people at Pitt Polder are no more enthusiastic about the idea than are the people of Langley. When the GVRD's intentions became known, they immediately mobilized local residents, environmentalists and naturalists in a protest rally at the south shore of Pitt Lake.

Langley officials feel that the GVRD now "only have one site left", naming the Derby townsite west of Fort Langley.

"We will not tolerate a (city) dump within the borders of Langley district," Mayor Bill Blair said this week to the call of "hear, hear" from his councilors. A motion was immediately passed immortalizing Blair's defiant statement.

According to Ald. Ian Stachan, the latest GVRD move is "the most hideous example of the big lie." They had already indicated, he said, that they had abandoned their plans for the Langley dump site.

"We have to be vigilant night and day," Strachan said.

Municipal clerk Dereck Doubleday has been instructed to send away for the transcripts of a recent Supreme court of Canada decision involving a similar situation in Nova Scotia where a metropolitan regional district also tried to impose their garbage on a largely rural municipality outside their own boundaries. According to Ald. Mal Harper, the metro lost.

If they have to, the Langley councilors say, they too will take their case to the supreme court. Even if it ends up costing the taxpayers another mill or two.

Council has the support of the local rod and gun club, and the local board of health people are concerned as well.

Fisheries people, too, are alarmed. In a recent speach to the B.C. chamber of commerce in Vancouver, federal fisheries minister Romeo LeBlanc stated that "the toxic seepage from the Richmond landfill and other landfills into the Fraser...are possible or proven threats to salmon".

Leblanc also criticized local politicians for exerting "too much pressure on salmon rivers...because of poorly planned urban and industrial developments."

Local politicians say their experts have confirmed that seepage into the Fraser River from a dump at Fort Langley is inevitable. The only answer to the city's problem of disposing of 2,700 tonnes of garbage daily, is through incineration and recycling, they say.

Seagulls by the thousands congregate at the Aldergrove Jackman Road garbage dump.

Town Talk

By RICK McILWAIN

The location of Vancouver's future garbage dump keeps coming up in the news. First it was slated for Fort Langley, then maybe Pitt River, now perhaps back to Fort Langley. How do you feel about the GVRD locating their garbage dump in Langley?

John Matthews

I don't agree with locating a garbage dump in Langley. I don't agree with this idea of land fill anyway. Why can't we be like London where they destroy all the garbage that has no use and recycle everything else. Their operation runs at a profit and we have to pump thousands of tax dollars into ours.

It's essential that we dispose of our garbage somehow, but in this day and age, why can't we have a central location for shipping all garbage, then incinerate it all? Metal, glass and many chemicals could be recovered and sold for profit. Heat and energy could be sold from the incinerator. Hopefully it could be self financing in time.

Smoky Walters

Fort Langley sure doesn't want the dump but Aldergrove wouldn't be too bad off. The dump on Jackman could be closed down and we can still dump our garbage at the Fort. If we could only unload the sewer plant on Murrayville at the same time we'd be all right.

But seriously, the talk of expropriating necessary land for a dump wherever GVRD sees fit. Well, I never! We don't really own anything anymore. The government just lets you pay the bills and taxes on a piece of land until they need it. Then you're on your own again.

Garbage is a problem but they are going to have to put a lot more thought into the solutions. Even if they do take over Langley for a garbage dump, where are they going to go when that site is filled. Maybe they should plan for the future instead of what's convenient?

Town Talk seldom has trouble finding people to express opinions but this week's subject for some reason drew an unusual number of people that had no opinion, no comment, no knowledge or just plain didn't care. I'm afraid we only have two opinions to choose from but hopefully many readers will have an opinion after today.

Four young persons charged with murder

MURRAYVILLE - Following investigation by Langley RCMP, four people were charged last week with first degree murder in connection with the death of William Sederquest. His body was found in Langley on December 24, 1981 and he had been murdered on October 31.

Charged with first degree murder are Kimberly Ann Eldridge, 19, of no fixed address; Ronald Joseph Abel, 20, of 44 Avenue, Delta; Michael Kenneth Peters, 19, of 201 Street, Langley, and Michael John Drayer (believed to be an alias) presently in custody in Arizona.

Drayer has tentatively been identified as John Frederick Johnson, born Feb. 21, 1956. He is being held on a murder warrant from Ohio. Attempts will be made to extradite Johnson to Canada on the outstanding murder charge here.

No objection to coal search

MURRAYVILLE - That local maestro of the one-liner, Ald. Ian Strachan, told council here this week that Langley is "being undermined and overburdened".

But he refused to go along with a motion by alderwomen Carol Gran and Muriel Arnason, that Langley council object to coal mining in Langley.

Last week it was learned that Utah Mines Ltd. of Vancouver is seeking sub-surface rights to 12,640 acres of land situated between Aldergrove and Langley city, for the purpose of exploring for possible coal deposits.

Gran and Arnason suggested Langley should object to the granting of a license in a letter to the former's employer, mines minister and Langley MLA Bob McClelland.

Their motion was defeated.

The men on the council, aldermen Strachan, Mal Harper and Dan Williamson, wanted to know more about the application before making their stand known.

The Utah mining people are seeking possible coal deposits thousands of feet underneath the Fraser Valley bottom lands, and if mining were to commence, the fuel material would be brought to the surface somewhere on property now classified as agricultural reserve lands.

Langley council to discuss problems with McClelland

MURRAYVILLE - There are political problems in Langley district, and councilmen here will be discussing four of the most urgent ones with the people's elected representative, energy minister Bob McClelland, next Monday.

On the agenda, when they meet with McClelland here, will be the proposed GVRD garbage dump at Fort Langley, the Gloucester industrial farce, the on-and-off-and-on-again public swimming pool, and an application from a mining company for expropriation rights to a large tract of land between Aldergrove and Langley.

On the dump issue, McClelland has already stated that it will be located in Langley "over my dead body." Greater Vancouver regional district officials, however, are still pressing forward with plans for a new dump either at Pitt Polder or at Fort Langley.

As for Gloucester, McClelland has for several years been in favor, personally, of the industrial proposal. He has been low-key on public statements, however.

It is not known if McClelland can do anything to secure the future of the pool. Before it was voted on by Langley residents last Nov. 21, local officials were warned by the ministry of municipalities that the referendum might not be allowed. After it was passed by slightly more than 50 percent of the voters, finance minister Evan Wolfe introduced a moratorium on provincial grants which would make it impossible for Langley to build the facility.

The coal question, of course, has to deal with McClelland's portfolio of energy, mines and petroleum resources. Councilors here have not yet decided where they stand on the Utah Mines Ltd. application for sub surface rights. Presumably this is the local politicians' way of sticking their fingers in the air and feeling in what direction the wind is blowing. Question is, in the Fraser Valley, in 1982, is John Q. Public for or against the industry of mining?

Mobile park considered

MURRAYVILLE - Merits of a mobile home park proposal for the 32 Avenue - 196 Street area of Brookswood will be considered by council members at a committee meeting next Monday.

Terry Keeping, representing the owner of the preoperty, told councilors here Monday afternoon that he could not understand the "negative feedback" he had had from the municipal planning department. Land was well suited for a mobile home park, he said.

Keeping also pointed out that council has "gone on record as recognizing the need for housing for essentially low and middle income families."

Ald. Mal Harper said the planners were concerned about the density of housing in the area, and that Keeping's application amounted to "asking for pre-density zoning before planning is completed in the area". A study of the Brookswood area is currently underway, he said.

Keeping said his clients had heard this before, but their reaction to this statement was that studies of the neighborhood were already in existence.

"We have studies and then more studies," he said. "Why do we need to have that before we proceed with much needed projects?"

Planning the key for housing

SURREY - Any land taken out of the provincial agriculture land reserve should be done so in a "logical manner", and not by political interference in the appeal process, according to the B.C. council of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada.

And the basic solution to providing adequate land for residential housing in B.C. should not be the abolition of the ALR, three provincial organizations concerned with land use in B.C. have agreed. The starting point to providing an adequate supply of land for residential housing is planning, they say.

The document, ratified by the executives of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture (BCFA), the B.C. council of HUDAC, and the Association of B.C. Professional Foresters, was adopted by the land committees of the three organizations following two months of negotiation. Representatives of the organizations will present the document to the provincial cabinet for consideration.

HUDAC provincial president Jack Barker of Vernon says, "The three organizations agreed on a document that could be presented to the province in a surprisingly short time. Now it will be up to the government to act on it".

Jake Hoogendoorn, a Lumby cattleman and chairman of the BCFA land committee says, "The document is a great accomplishment because it is an agreement adopted by people with widely-ranging land use views.

"These organizations were pretty far apart in this matter - it is quite an accomplishment to come that close to a full agreement. We intend to keep in touch and may come even closer in the future.

"The government will have to pay close attention to this agreement. It represents the thoughts of a wide-diversity of land-use people - it will be hard for them not to recognize it," he said.

The organizations say it is the provincial government's responsibility to bring a rational discipline to the utilization of land to obtain maximum benefit for each section of the economic base.

The document says the basic solution to providing land for residential housing should not be the abolition of the ALR or the provincial forest. It says, "It is clear that the integrity of the ALR and provincial forest must be maintained.

"There is an urgent need to identify lands outside of the established agricultural and forest lands that is suitable for urban development."

The agreement says the starting point for this should be planning, and that this planning should identify land which has the least resource conflict and best potential for urban development.

With a sound planning process in place, urban development can proceed with minimal impact on other resource users, it says.

The proposed provincial land use act says that local governments shall prepare community plans designating land suitable to accommodate growth for 10-year periods. The 10 year land supply should be included in a framework of a 25 year outlook for regional growth, the paper says.

The joint committees say local governments should examine the competing use question in preparing these plans, and should designate where the growth should most logically occur. The agreement says it is the provincial responsibility in community development plans to assist each municipality and regional district in finding a "realistic" 10 year supply of developable land, while "making sure potential resource conflicts are looked after."

The agreement stresses that any land to be removed from the ALR should be done so with care and by analysis, and not by political intervention in the appeal process.

Consideration must be given to soil capabilities; present and future viability for agricultural use; impact on adjacent agricultural land; orderly and economic development; availability of lower conflict lands; and minimizing the future pressure on farmland.

The refinement process has also been limited by inadequate funding and provision for staff at ther provincial land commission and this must be remedied, the agreement says.

The provincial government will also be told that mechanisms 'must be established to allow for trunk servicing necessary to open areas with the best potential for urban land use'.

Government programs should be established to help municipalities install these services, the paper says.

The agreement also says efforts should be made to increase density in urban areas so as to maximize land use and minimize servicing costs.

Rural lots on the urban fringe do not contribute to significantly easing the B.C. housing shortage the three organizations say. These lots often interfere with the right of access to resources and recreation areas so crown land should not be made available for this purpose.

"Rural acreage lots are not viable farm units, erode the integrity of the ALR and provincial forests, create conflict for access to forests, recreation lands, and to grazing and agricultural lands," the agreement says.

The social costs of servicing such development also creates a drain on public resources away from areas that should receive a higher priority, the joint committee says.

Organization to seek "face"

ALDERGROVE - Are you satisfied with the way Aldergrove is growing? As many of our readers will know, proceedings have been initiated for the revitalization of downtown Aldergrove. The first step towards this was the hiring of the consultant firm of William Graham Consultants of New Westminster.

Aldergrove Downtown Business Association held an open meeting at the Aldergrove Legion on February 8. Ideas and suggestions from the entire community - the public, merchants and the landlords, were invited.

A representative of the consultant firm was in attendance.

EFFECTIVE ANNUAL YIELD FIXED TERM PLAN

Now is the best time to be thinking about investing in a Registered Retirement Savings Plan. With the introduction of the new Federal budget and volatile market conditions, people have a lot of questions. At Surrey Credit Union we'll do our best to answer those questions and uncomplicate your RRSP investment plans. We're the largest locally-owned financial institution in the Fraser Valley.

You'll be seeing a lot of advertising for a variety of plans from many different sources, and all of them will offer some benefits. At Surrey Credit Union we offer a very competitive RRSP with three real advantages for you:

Great Interest
No Fees
Locally Administered

GREAT INTEREST

Compare for yourself, our RRSP interest rate is one of the best around. And at Surrey Credit Union your plan calculates interest starting the day you deposit. Your interest is paid to you semi-annually, compounding to a very attractive rate over the course of the plan. Rate subject to review.

NO FEES

An RRSP from Surrey Credit Union has absolutely no fees attached. There's no fine print to worry about. Every dollar you invest grows just for you.

Compare the Surrey Credit Union RRSP with other plans. Ask if there are any front end load (start-up) charges or other hidden charges. These extra fees can really chip away at your savings: savings you'll want in later years.

P.S. If you need to borrow to invest in an RRSP, our loans department will be pleased to explain our special fast and convenient RRSP loan package.

LOCAL CONVENIENCE

Something unique and a real benefit for you - our RRSP is our very own plan. A plan trusteed right here in the Western Fraser Valley - your own community. In practical terms, that means you can count on friendly service and neighborly advice. If you have any questions about your plan a branch is close by or just a phone call away. After all, we're close to home.

GUARANTEED SECURITY

When many people think about credit unions, they think about security. It's a fact: your Surrey Credit Union Registered Retirement Savings Plan is truly secure, all deposits to your plan are protected 100%. That's real peace of mind!

R.R.S.P. HOTLINE

If you want to know more about RRSP's, call our special RRSP Hotline. Whether you're considering starting a plan for the first time or you wish to transfer your present plan, just call 888-RRSP. Our friendly RRSP experts have the answers to your questions. There's no obligation, just the information you'll need to make the best decision. Better still, come in to one of our eight convenient locations, we've got a branch right in your neighborhood! We'll give you the answers you need plus an informative booklet "The Basics" to help you make the right decision.

TIME'S RUNNING OUT

Remember, you must invest in your RRSP before March 1st to receive a 1981 tax benefit. We recommend you make your investment as soon as possible to avoid the last minute rush. You'll appreciate the level of service, the information and the advice. So take a look around, and then come and see us. We're sure you'll agree, Surrey Credit Union has the best Registered Retirement Savings Plan for you.

FIXED TERM PLAN

With our increasingly popular Fixed-Term RRSP you can choose a term from one to five years. Interest is calculated annually and paid on the anniversary date of the deposit. For terms of two years or more, we compound the rate annually at the prevailing term rate.

Just like our regular RRSP there are absolutely no extra charges to worry about, nothing to chip away at your hard-earned savings. We'll keep you posted on your investment twice a year. And you'll be advised prior to maturity about automatic renewals to ensure a consistent rate of return.

(Note: Our Fixed-Term Plan is non-redeemable and non-transferable until maturity.)

The continuing story of bungling bill

Nobody is saying anything right now, but locally people are laying odds that the B.C. land commissioners will press forward with their application to have the provincial government return those 642 acres to the land reserve.

True, commissioners were visibly surprised at that Jan. 27 public hearing - they had obviously expected to be cheered for their stand here in Aldergrove - but having recovered from their amazement they will likely do what they set out to do; try and convince senior politicians that the Gloucester lands are "prime agricultural".

Politicians in Victoria, meanwhile, no doubt wish the militant commissioners would drop dead.

What can the government do when the ball, after March 16, will be back in their court?

If they follow the advice of the land commission experts, then they openly admit that they are no longer in control. This will be an admission that our system is no longer a democracy, but rather a bureaucratic oligarchy.

On the other hand, if they uphold their former stand, turn down the commission's application and leave the Gloucester property outside of the agricultural land reserve, then we can see commissioners walking out in a huff.

But perhaps that wouldn't be the worst thing that could happen.

Stay tuned to more in the exciting saga. But don't expect a quick solution. By early summer we might know. And then again, we might not.

Public hearing to address dumpsite

FORT LANGLEY - A public meeting will be held at the community hall here on Monday night at 7:30 p.m.

Municipal councilors have been invited along with officials of the GVRD.

A large turnout is expected. Meeting is called to let the politicians know how the local people feel about the proposed dumpsite west of here.

Perhaps there's no limit

It was a tragic happening, and we felt for the parents of the three young boys who drowned in that south Aldergrove gravel pit last year.

But we also felt empathy for the Aldergrove man who innocently became the holder of a criminal record when he was held responsible by a court last week of negligence in not having had that hole filled in.

The court's ruling really opens unlimited legal possibilities. Like, who will be held responsible the next time someone drowns in Cultus Lake or at Crescent Beach? Or even right here, in Bertrand Creek?

A time to be reasonable

By ROGER WORTH

At a time when bankruptcies are at an all time high and employee layoffs are spiralling, organized labor in Canada continues to seek huge wage increases that bear little relationship to what hard-pressed companies, or the public, can afford.

One union leader after another, it seems is threatening strike action unless businesses and governments cave in to their hefty demands; and the volume of rhetoric is growing.

It's true that 12 to 13 percent inflation, high interest and mortgage rates, and the rapidly rising cost of everything from heating oil and gasoline to taxes is eroding our standard of living. But, by attempting to protect members against any reduction in purchasing power, union leaders may be placing employers in a position where high labor costs make products uncompetitive.

When that happens, even more workers are laid off as sales drop.

Unlike their U.S. counterparts, Canada's unions can't seem to understand there is a time to fight employers, and a time to sit down and sort out difficulties for the good of both parties.

Consider what's happening in the United States. Time after time, unions have made concessions to companies as they try to save jobs. No union leader likes the idea, but the Americans are at least pragmatic enough to freeze or reduce wages and give up vacation days when enough jobs are on the line.

And it's happening in one industry after another. Workers in the money-losing rubber industry were the first to make major concessions, followed by those in the airline sector. Now the truckers and auto workers have followed suit, as have employees in a host of other industries.

It's a remarkable achievement.

Yet the militant Canadian unions won't countenance such activity.

Instead of taking less, they are asking for a lot more, even though thousands of members are in the layoff category.

Perhaps the time has come for union leaders in Canada to ask the members they represent, including those on definite or indefinite layoff, whether concessions should be made for troubled companies.

They might find the answer surprising.

REPORT FROM PREMIER'S OFFICE

Spellman visit was important

By BILL BENNETT

I was happy that one of the first major events I participated in to begin this year of 1982, was a visit to governor John Spellman in Olympia, Washington.

We were able to discuss a number of issues of importance both to Washington and to British Columbia. The forest fire suppression and emergency measures agreements signed when governor Spellman visited British Columbia in May are tangible examples of the benefits that come from these kinds of exchanges.

At a time of temporary difficulties in our forest industry and that of the Pacific Northwest in the United States, I was very pleased to be able to convince governor Spellman that imposition of tariffs and other barriers to trade is no way to try to deal with the problem.

As a result, governor Spellman stated publicly that he would oppose very strongly any move by the U.S. government to limit the access of B.C. lumber to the U.S. market. This is very welcome news indeed to our forest industry, which is for the time being experiencing some serious short-term difficulties, which have resulted in substantial layoffs in this important industry.

As a result of our discussions, the governor has a much better appreciation of the B.C. position on the lumber industry. Certainly, with lumber exports from B.C. to the U.S. down by about 45 percent, no one can say that British Columbia is profiting at the expense of our American neighbors.

It is true that the British Columbia share of U.S. markets for lumber has increased in the 1970s but the causes underlying this are complex. The U.S. housing construction industry has depended on Canadian lumber for a long time and in fact, in 1972 president Nixon's advisory panel on housing sought assurances from Canada that this country would be able to help meet projected increases in U.S. lumber needs. We have, of course, also benefitted recently because of exchange rates, but the reverse has been true in the past and may well happen again.

It is important that our American friends understand these points and this trip gave me an excellent opportunity to explain them.

It is important that problems that arise between our two countries, and between regions of our countries, be discussed in a spirit of friendship and co-operation.

At present, both British Columbia and Washington are experiencing some temporary difficulties.

That makes it all the more necessary that we pursue economic recovery as our number one social priority.

I am optimistic about our future. I sense that the period we are going through, difficult as it may be, is only temporary – a challenge to test the energy and creativity of our society.

And, I am confident in the underlying strength of our province and our nation and that this strength will soon begin to manifest itself to the long-term benefit of our people.

REPORT FROM OTTAWA

Religious groups have right to choice

By BOB WENMAN, MP

On January 26, I appeared before a CRTC hearing and spoke for the fundamental right of the freedom of choice in support of the licensing of religious broadcasting.

The current provisions of the broadcasting act state that programming must provide "a reasonable, balanced opportunity for the expressing of differing views". Under this caveat, the CRTC has imposed a virtual ban on religious broadcasting, deciding in the specific case of the Family Radio application that playing 37½ hours of religious music contravened the terms of the act.

My basic point in refuting the decision of the CRTC is that government regulation is an unnecessary and reprehensible coercive imposition of censorship that denies the freedom of choice which is a constitutionally guaranteed right of all Canadians.

The freedom of speech, choice and religion is guaranteed to Canadians by the Diefenbaker bill of rights and the soon to be ratified charter of rights in our new constitution. Freedom of choice without freedom of broad choice however, is not freedom at all. To deny the broader freedom of choice that is now available through expanding technology, which can create an almost limitless number of channels through cable and satellite, is an imposition on the freedoms guaranteed by Canadian law.

If the CRTC decision is not overturned, it will show that our guarantees are no better than the same guarantees written on scraps of paper by a totalitarian regime.

I feel that the forces of the market place are best suited to determine the viability of religious broadcasting, or any other enterprise. Consumer demand should be left to its own volition to regulate the widest possible diversity of choices.

I feel that the right to espouse God's message for humanity is essential to our underlying value system and a Family Radio station would be an excellent vehicle to achieve this end. For copies of my speech, contact my constituency office at 530-1424.

On January 26, I seconded a motion by David Kilgour calling for an independent federal inquiry into how Clifford Olson was free, despite indications of repeated violations of his parole, to murder eleven young people and how the $90,000.00 payout to Olson's wife would have been affected had Olson not pleaded guilty.

These are questions which should be answered quickly to completely clear the air and to allow the relatives of the victims of these horrible and barbaric crimes to put the past behind them and start living normal lives again. Unfortunately the Liberals would not allow this motion to pass.

The House of Commons reconvened on January 25. Unfortunately finance minister Allan MacEachen must have missed his wake-up call, for he did not see fit to make an appearance to face his questioners until January 26.

Michael Wilson, P.C. finance critic, welcomed MacEachen back to the house and pointed out to him that unemployment had passed the one million mark and continued to rise. Wilson suggested that MacEachen would be performing a public service if he would withdraw his budget and then resign.

What do you think? Send me your letters calling for the withdrawal of the budget and MacEachen's resignation and I will forward them to the minister of finance.

REPORT FROM VICTORIA

1982 B.C. outlook foresees modest improvement

By BOB McCLELLAND, MLA
(energy minister)

As most of you will have heard, my colleague provincial secretary Evan Wolfe, has ordered a full enumeration of British Columbia voters. It is expected that the enumeration and new voters' list will be completed by the end of July. A new computerized system will reduce both the length of the enumeration process and the cost.

The minister reiterated his commitment to introduce amendments to the election act. Wolfe said that "amendments will be introduced in the next session of the legislature making enumerations mandatory between provincial elections and providing polling day registration for voters that might have been missed during an enumeration."

The ministry of industry and small business development recently released a report on British Columbia's 1981 economic performance and a forecast for 1982.

The report indicates that despite a gloomy year for some of our major exports (forest products, metallic minerals and natural gas) the provincial economy is expected to register a 2.0 percent growth in gross domestic product.

High interest rates resulted in a decline in housing starts in North America in 1981, contributing to an 8.0 percent decline in the value of shipments for all B.C. forest industries. The outlook for 1982 shows a modest improvement.

Falling prices for major mineral products resulted in an estimated 1.6 percent decline in the overall value of mineral production. The outlook for 1982 is for some improvement - assuming an economic upswing in the last half of the year.

Energy products showed mixed results in 1981. Natural gas deliveries dropped an estimated 16 percent while electricity rose an estimated 20 percent. The 1982 outlook is mixed, depending upon export markets, economic recovery and federal energy policies.

There was strong growth in the coal sector with the value of sales up by 15.5 percent. The outlook is for strong growth in 1982 and doubling of sales by 1985.

An increase in farm cash receipts was offset by rising costs, resulting in realized farm income being down slightly from 1980. Modest growth is the outlook for 1982.

The outlook for British Columbia's secondary manufacturing industries is promising as is the 1982 outlook for tourism.

This week the cabinet committee on economic development, of which I am chairman, is undertaking a fact-finding mission of northern British Columbia. During the week the committee will be holding meetings and touring industrial sites in Fort St. John, Fort Nelson, Cassiar, Atlin, Dease Lake and Stewart. By meeting with people on the scene, the people with detailed knowledge of local problems and concerns, the committee gets a far better feel when it comes to assessing development policies and programs.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Living on the proceeds of sickness

Editor, The Star, Sir,

What kind of a life can you lead, what kind of a family can you raise, if you are aware that your income is blood money; money received for killing children by a member of your family? Could you provide for a nice trip, dancing lessons, movies, and so on if you were the wife of Clifford Olson?

Does the state even do the right thing? Don't we take any chance away that Olson's child grows reasonably sound?

There is a difference between having a sick father or living on the proceeds of that sickness.

We do have thousands of single parent children who seem to manage reasonably well. Of course some do need social assistance, but we long ago decided to provide for that.

This monster has cost the taxpayer thousands and thousands of dollars and there will be many more hundreds of thousands spent on him.

He managed to get ninety thousand for information and very likely he well do well in the future. But what is done to protect society?

It seems to me that there may be someone in this world who considers $10,000 - and why not ask for $20,000 - a fair amount for any old body and who will act accordingly. And to top it all off, we won't even manage to keep him out of circulation for the rest of his sad, hopeless life.

Aldergrove does have a pool

Editor, The Star, Sir,

I noted your comment under the picture of Aldergrove Lake in the January 27 issue of the Star, with regard to this lake being Aldergrove's only aquatic facility.

As many residents know, Aldergrove has an outdoor pool which has been operating since 1963. Last summer 900 children took swimming lessons and over 4,000 enjoyed public swimming sessions. In addition, 390 children participated in swim lessons organized in co-operation with the school district.

I am sure that your comment was just an oversight, as the Aldergrove Star has always publicized special events at the pool in past years.

During the winter, many Aldergrove residents travel to Chrisholme indoor pool to enjoy aquasizes and swimming instruction. Chrisholme is located at 460-216 Street, and is the most convenient location in Langley for Aldergrove citizens to attend parks and recreation programs.

We all look forward to the day when Langley will see a new indoor public aquatic facility.

Yours truly,

TWO DRUGSTORES HIT

Armed robberies commonplace

LANGLEY - Armed robberies are becoming commonplace here. Last week two incidents involving bandits carrying sawed-off shotguns took place in Langley, both involving drug store holdups.

During the first incident, last Tuesday night, the gunman was apprehended at the rear of the Shoppers Drug Mart at 20555 - 56 Avenue, after he had robbed the druggist shortly after 6:30 p.m. Charged with armed robbery is Reginald Garry Hook, 21, of Surrey.

Two days later, Valley Pharmacy at 20577 Douglas Crescent was held up by a single male brandishing a sawed-off shotgun. He approached the druggist and demanded drugs. A small quantity was taken and the robber fled in a red car driven by an accomplice. Holdups occurred at about 2:50 p.m.

Gunman is described as a white male in his early 20's, about 6 ft. 2 inches tall and weighing about 180 pounds. He was wearing a stocking mask and a blue toque and a red and white checked lumberman's jacket.

Police have no suspects at press time, but investigation is continuing.

Odor control underway for Coquitlam dump

VANCOUVER - Construction of a leachate and gas collection system to control odors at the Coquitlam dump has been approved by the Greater Vancouver regional district.

The work, which will be carried out immediately, will cost $400,000. Additional work may be required at a later date.

The Coquitlam landfill was slated to be closed nearly two years ago but had to be kept open because of problems in finding a new landfill site. It is now planned to close it later this year.

A report to the regional district board states that there have been problems with intermittent foul odors from the landfill. In recent months complaints from citizens and businesses in surrounding communities have increased.

Investigations revealed that quantities of gas are being generated, containing sulphides and other odorous gases. In addition, leachate in the surrounding collection system moves slowly because of the site's topography. Two small pumping stations will be built to overcome this situation.

Gov't. and police must keep separate

VICTORIA - Politicians should not become too closely involved in the operations of police forces in Canada, solicitor general Robert Kaplan told law enforcement officers here January 30.

The solicitor general, guest speaker at the second annual police honors night said there was danger of political interference in policing if governments attempted to "make every decision" for policemen.

"The police must be left free to the greatest extent possible to exercise their own judgment. There must be guidelines, set by governments, and police actions must be legal. But it would be a dangerous thing for governments to attempt to make narrow rules about what police may do in every situation."

BY SCHOOL TRUSTEES

Centralized control feared

VANCOUVER - The B.C. School Trustees Association wants assurance from Victoria that proposals for a county system, which allude to reduced cost and improved efficiency of regional government, would not mean the control of education by a centralized authority or the elimination of locally elected school boards.

"If there are ways to make regional government more efficient or ways to relieve the financial burden on taxpayers, our association would be the first to support such measures," said BCSTA president Gary Begin. "But the rationale applied to centralized administration of physical plant and support services should never extend to educational philosophy or programs which shape the minds of this province's young people."

Begin said BCSTA is dedicated to the premise of parental sovereignty in education and "we contend that democratic control is possible only through elected boards which are directly accountable to local electorates." He called on the government of B.C. to reaffirm its support for the fundamental principle of Canadian democracy which promises parents a direct role, through elected representation, in the decisions which affect the education of their children.

Langley RCMP crime notes

MURRAYVILLE - Local RCMP received 427 complaints last week, and 33 motor vehicle accidents were reported.

A stolen gold colored 1974 MGB sports car was recovered at the 4500 block of 217B Street on February 1. An 18 year-old male was charged with possession of stolen property. The vehicle had been stolen from a Burnaby garage.

Valley Redi-Mix, a local business on the Langley by-pass was the victim of a breaking and entering on Feb. 2 at approximately 5 o'clock. Nothing was stolen from the business, however attemps had been made to open the safe.

Aldergrove Kentucky Fried Chicken was broken into over the evening of Feb. 1 to 2. The Aldergrove restaurant was entered through a vent. There are suspects in this occurance, according to a police spokesman.

On February 2 a 73 Datsun 240Z, white in color, was stolen from the 20300 block of 56 Avenue and later recovered on Feb. 4 in Matsqui. A suspect was arrested by Matsqui police and charges are pending.

A local Chinese restaurant was the victim of a dine and dash on Feb. 3. Four persons were responsible for leaving the restaurant without paying the $48.15 bill.

A 1978 red Nova was stolen from the Safeway parking lot at the 20400 block of Fraser Highway on Feb. 3. The vehicle was later recovered at the Bow Fiddler parking lot. Although the vehicle had cassette tape deck and tapes in the front seat, these were not taken and there was no damage to the vehicle.

Two vehicles were broken into over the evening of Feb. 4. The burglars vandalized the vehicles by ripping out the material inside. The vehicles were parked at a car lot on the No. 10 bypass.

Christmas Seal campaign "best ever"

VANCOUVER - The annual Christmas seal campaign, organized by the British Columbia Lung Association, has had its most successful year ever, in spite of poor economic conditions in the province, president Dr. Jack Rosenblatt says.

Rosenblatt, a Vancouver allergist, says British Columbians contributed $782,000 to the 1981 campaign, which ended officially on January 31. He says this represents a 16 percent increase over the 1980 campaign, which had contributions of $673,000.

Contributions from the Aldergrove area total $3,367, up from last year's $2,788. The Aldergrove christmas seal committee chairman is Margaret Gervan of the ladies auxiliary, Royal Canadian Legion branch 265.

ALDERGROVE - "I'll take the cash," said Mrs. G. Wright, when she won the Aldergrove Kinsmen "liquor store shopping spree." Kin Ernie Glover presents her with the alternative prize of $400. Project raised over $2,400 for Kinsmen community services.

Valley Barter Network now on stream

MISSION - The Valley Barter Network is now in operation as an outlet for people to trade skills and services.

Founder Sunnie Lloyd-Thompson says hers is the first service of this kind in Western Canada. It is modelled after a similar network in California. Sunie says it will provide a much needed service to many Fraser Valley residents. As an example she says a single parent on a fixed income can earn barter credits to use in exchange for car repairs, or any other service she requires. Sunie pointed out that a lot of retired people have gained a tremendous wealth of wisdom over their lifetime, knowledge they can share with young people. She says barter is better than offering charity because both parties feel they have earned what they have received.

Recalling her bartering experiences, Sunie says she once traded a rooster for a metronome and a pencil, sharpener for a chicken...and that's just the beginning to bartering possibilities.

Hughes wins Sears TV

ALDERGROVE - Mrs. M. Hughes of Aldergrove is now the proud owner of a 12" black and white television set, compliments of Sears Ltd.

After coming to Aldergrove to pick up some goods ordered from Sears, Hughes jokingly told clerk Toby Tobiason, "Phone me when I win it" referring to the draw for the 12" TV set.

Less than an hour later Nancy Horton and Toby Tobiasen held the large box of stubs for Rose Princess Leanne Wallace to select the winning stub from within. She reached into the hundreds of stubs and came out with the one single slip of paper that would win. You guessed it! A quick phone call and a disbelieving Mrs. Hughes was finally convinced the girls weren't putting her on and was quite pleased to have won.

Bryant Ross takes win at Golden Gloves

ALDERGROVE - The Langley-Aldergrove Boxing Club was active again on Saturday night. In the invitational Bathtub Golden Gloves at Nanaimo, local light-heavyweight Bryant Ross rose off the deck to pound out a majority decision over the island representative, Cody Redofrd.

Redford, no mean opponent, came into the contest sporting a record of seven knockouts in nine bouts and a finely-tuned set of skills.

The first round was fairly even with Ross staging an ending ralley, scoring heavily to the body.

The second, however, erupted into open warfare. The Island champion sprayed Ross with a volley of jabs, dropping him to one knee from a vicious left cross. After the mandatory eight count, the two stood toe to toe and attempted murder for a full minute.

After a flurry of preliminary sparring in the final frame, Redford fell sideways after absorbing a crushing inside hook to the jaw. He got up at five and stood for the remainder of the count.

Although Cody battled gamely to the final bell, the Langley-Aldergrove puncher was able to force yet another eight count (standing) and to be in full charge at the final gong.

The championship jacket and the championship came back across the water with the Langley-Aldergrove entourage.

From his efforts Cordy Redford received the trophy for 'most scientific boxer'.

The two may well meet again when the B.C. Golden Gloves tourney is held in March.

Fox and Hounds Racers get shut out

ALDERGROVE - The Racers played host to the Guildford Sounders at Steele park on a beautiful day, Feb. 6, at eleven o'clock. The first half saw both teams trying to get their timing together after the long lay-off. The Sounders seemed improved with some good efforts.

The first half ended zero to zero with the Racers having the edge at keeping the ball in their end but they could not put the low balls into the net.

Racers got going in the second half when Bryn Savage hooked a high ball over the keeper's head. He was assisted by David Morgan and Kevin Snowdon at the 12 minute mark. Morgan got the second goal assisted by Aaron Meilleur and Snowdon. The now aggressive David scored Aldergrove's third goal assisted by Kevin Wix and Snowdon.

The fourth goal came from Malcolm Sask who played a tireless game. He was assisted by Morgan.

The final score was Racers 4, Guildford 0.

Racers played a good second half once they got their act together and the feel for the ball. They are last year's division champions and have to hand the cup back to the club. They practice in the gym on Tuesdays between 7:00 and 8:00 p.m., and on Friday at Brown Road from 6:30 to 7:30 on an all weather field.

Local clubs and merchants supported the Big Brothers fund drive by raising $2,500 in the Bowl-for-Millions campaign.

WITH BIG BROTHERS "BOWL FOR MILLIONS"

Local merchants get involved

ALDERGROVE - Big Brothers annual fund rasing campaign received active support from local merchants Saturday.

Bowlers from Century 21, Toronto Dominion Bank, Aldergrove Credit Union, Kinsmen and Kinettes got together with their many pledges and bowled off Saturday at Aldergrove Lanes. Other local teams were expected to bowl this week.

Big Brothers annually hold their "bowl-for-Millions" campaign. It is their largest annual fund raising drive.

Bowl-for-Millions is patterned after 'Miles for Millions' and is sponsored by Big Brothers of Canada, the Canadian Five Pin Association and the Canadian Ten Pin Federation. Bowlers raise money for Big Brothers via pledge forms and sponsors. The sponsor agrees to pay the bowler a given amount per point for one game. The pledge is, in turn, submitted to Big Brothers.

The money provides for services beyond the volunteer program. Professional counselors, advertising for volunteers, group outings and functions all cost money. A large portion of the raised funds will go towards these expenses.

The Bowl-for-Millions is open to any group that wants to make up a team, get some pledges and go and have fun bowling and raising money at the same time.

Aldergrove Eskimos play again

ALDERGROVE - After a break in regular schedule since before Christmas, the J. Sawatsky Construction sponsored Aldergrove Eskimos, played a regular league game again. The Eskimos were faced off against last year's provincial cup runners up, the Cape Horn Western.

For the first 10 minutes, the two teams were relatively evenly matched. Aldergrove had one corner kick, but did not score. Then Cape Horn scored and started to dominate play by more hustle and better ball control. An indirect penalty was awarded to Cape Horn which gave them the second goal. Minutes later a low hard drive from 20 yards out eluded Eskimos goalie Philip Whitehouse for Cape Horn's third goal. Then Bryan Harder saved a goal, by clearing the ball just before it crossed the goal line. The fourth goal was unfortunately scored when the ball bounced off the goal post and Philip just before half time.

In the second half the Eskimos were more in form, not allowing any more goals and applying some pressure themselves. Cape Horn had to give up four consecutive corner kicks. Neil Messmer just missed the top corner of the goal, a long shot from 20 yards out. Paul Dornian, David Ellis and Wesly Cox were being robbed of the Eskimos other good scoring chances. The half and defence line clicked better in the second half, ending a one sided game in a 4-0 victory for the visiting Cape Horn Western.

Flames 5, Drillers 0

ALDERGROVE - Flames, the under 12 girls hosted the Langley Drillers last Saturday in the first leg of the district playoffs. Both teams were rusty in the first half because of the long lay off. This resulted in some sloppy play.

The Flames got on the scoreboard late in the half by a good shot from right winger Stacey Markle.

In the second half the Flames were more aggressive taking the ball and the play away from the Drillers. Fine passing from the Flames' forwards resulted in four more goals all coming from left winger Chrissy Aitken who played her position very well.

A good overall job done by all the Flames.

Legionaires have their turn

By RUSS DAVIDSON

ALDERGROVE - Soccer started again on Saturday, February 6. This time, it was Steele park which was the scene for a great game. The teams were well-matched, as the first meeting of the season between the two teams was a victory for Langley Nicomekl over the Legionairs, 2 - 1. When they met a second time, it was a one-all tie. But this time it was the Legionaires' turn!

After the first-half was over, and the boys had had their oranges and got their second wind, there were several shots hitting the goal posts, and near ones missing the net. But at the forty-minute mark of the second half, Bryan Bell stole the ball. It was passed to Adrian Reglin, and on to Paul Liebel, who fed Danny Wakelyn. Then it was into the top of the net for the only score of the game, which ended 1 - 0 for the Legionaires.

Next game is at Shortreed at 11:00 a.m. on February 13.

Practices will begin 3:45 p.m. to 5:00 p.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays at Shortreed park.

Bridge club back in force

ALDERGROVE - Play resumed on Jan. 8, with 27 bridge players in attendance at the local bridge club. Jack Williams won first.

On Jan. 15, 23 players attended. A grand slam was bid and made by Fred Miller and Fran Colebrook.

Another grand slam was bid and won on Jan. 29 when 30 players were present. Grand slam was successfully bid by Jean and Bob Ulmer. Jean won first and Marcelle Hill was second.

On Feb. 5, 28 people attended. First was won by Rene Rowley and second by Glen Gladstone.

Next week the bridge players will meet at the OAPO hall in Abbotsford at 7:30 p.m. For further information, contact Anne at 856-8836 or Colleen at 856-2415.

Royal Go Getters win Cup first round

ALDERGROVE - Go Getters played away last week to meet the Langley Lightbulbs. Game got off to a slow start with both teams bewildered after a 2½ - month lay over caused by bad weather. Late in the first half Rachel Hanon found the net easily after good effort from Michelle Ring and Nancey Clark. The half ended with Royal Bank Go Getters one ahead of Langley Light Bulbs, one to zero.

Second half started off with the Go Getters still moving slowly but surely, returning to their old form with four more goals. Number two was Rachel Hanon from Michelle Ring. Number three came from Carmen Miller assisted by Rachel Hanon; number four from Rachel Hanon (her hat trick) from sister Sarah Hanon and team captain Nancey Clark. The fifth and final goal came from Nancey Clark, assist going to Sarah Hanon.

Final score was five to 20 in Aldergrove's favor. Aldergrove's defense played a well organized game.

Next weekend will see round number two of the cup games. Aldergrove Royal Bank Go Getters will meet Guildford Kickers who won their first round against Langley United Rowdies.

Otter 4-H horse club get busy

OTTER - February got off to a very busy start for the Otter 4-H horse club. Members enjoyed an informative speech on "Winter care of horses", presented by Dr. Tolksdorf, on Feb. 2. And on the following evening the first portion of the senior members did their speeches.

In the second week of February there was a junior theory night, and the second half of the senior speeches the next night. Both the junior speeches and some of the senior impromtu speeches were done on Feb. 16.

The first monthly workday will be held at Highland Hills on Feb. 21, involving one hour of trail, an hour riding lesson and another hour of fun events for everyone to participate in.

The origins of Saint Valentine's Day

Every year on February 14th millions of people celebrate St. Valentine's Day by sending cards and gifts to people they love. People have been doing this for so long that no one seems to know why anymore. There are several stories floating around that try to explain the custom.

One of the stories says that way back when, during the time of the Roman Emperor Claudius II, young men were forbidden to marry. Apparently the ruler thought that single bachelors made better soldiers because their minds weren't wandering to the women they loved. A priest named Valentine refused to obey Claudius and married lovers in secret. He was beheaded on February 14th for all his efforts.

A different story says that a man named Valentine refused to worship the Roman gods. Valentine was thrown into prison — much to the despair of everyone who knew him. He was a kind and gentle soul who was loved especially by children. While he was in prison his fan club sent him affectionate notes through the bars of his cell. A note of love soon became known as a Valentine.

There's yet another story about the origins of Valentine's Day. Some people think that the custom of celebrating the day started on February 14th sometime in the 1400s in England. A Frenchman, Charles of Orleans, was imprisoned in the Tower of London. Nobody knows why he was in jail, but it is known that he missed his wife so much that he sent her a long, rhyming love letter on February 14th.

Those are the three main stories about St. Valentine's Day - which one do you want to believe?

New Agricultural Association slate launches historical research project

ALDERGROVE - The Aldergrove Agricultural Association, the town's oldest club, elected a new slate of officers late last week. The meeting also passed a motion to launch a special historical research project in the area.

The association will be applying to the government in the near future, to obtain a special grant, to pay the wages of two or three students through the summer. The students will be put to work, researching the history of the Aldergrove area, with special attention to the impact of agriculture on the community. They will be asked to interview pioneers.

The findings of the student research team will be published by the association, and sold to consumers through local outlets.

Elected as president of the association was Harry Hunt, and he will be helped by vice president Bill Franklin. Treasurer is Dagney Johnston while secretarial duties fall to Betty Hunt and Donna Costello.

Directors of the 1982 Aldergrove Agricultural Association are Norman Hunter, Helen Gortz, Bessie Bohnke, Art Johnston, Fred Dreger, Fred Zaharia and Liz Dreger.

Trustees are Gilbert and Ray Amundson.

The new slate inherits a financially healthy association, with assets totalling close to $20,000. Nevertheless, members are agreed that great care must be taken to keep the association in good fiscal condition.

Those attending the annual meeting noted that local government is cutting back on its grant monies to community groups.

The agricultural group has been receiving about $600 annually from the district council, but has been paying more than that for the rental of municipal property to stage the town's annual fall fair. This year they have decided to ask for a grant large enough to cover the rental of the Aldergrove arena for one weekend each year.

The newly invested executive slate of Aldergrove's oldest club. The Aldergrove Agricultural Association officers are elected for a one year term. Gary Chambers photo

'True Confessions' did lack something

By DONNA PION

"True Confessions", starring Robert Deniro and Robert Duvall was interesting yet at the same time slow moving and at times boring, and I left the theatre feeling like I hadn't even been inside. I'm still not too sure about the movie, but what I did enjoy was the excellent acting abilities of both Deniro and Duvall.

"True Confessions" is about two brothers, one a priest (Deniro), the other a police sergeant. There's a close brotherly bond between the two, yet their lives are very different. Because of his profession, Sergeant Spellacy is in a world of crime, bad language, and immoral conduct. Monsignor Des Spellacy lives quite differently. The two meet regularly and the movie surrounds itself around a wealthy man, Jack Armstrong, who contributes generously to the church's upkeep, but lives his life in an immoral fashion.

Sergeant Spellacy reveals to the public the double standards of Armstrong, which also incriminates his brother.

I kept thinking something more was going to happen; it didn't, and then the movie ended, abruptly. The story line was good, the acting was good, but something was missing. Maybe they're going to make a "True Confessions II", then I'll know what happened to the priest and the police sergeant.

"Chautauqua Girl" is vaudeville fun

By JAMES ROSS

Emma is only eight, but her career as a reviewer is well on its way. "I liked the Chautauqua Girl. It was fun. What I liked best was the real magic. They put a flower in some liquid water (Liquid Nitrogen). They took it out and breaked it up, like it was made of glass."

She ran out of time before she could finish, but she did give me a list of other parts of the show she liked. We had seen The Snow Queen at the Ridge two weeks previously, and there is no doubt about it...children become much more involved in live theatre than with films.

Chautauqua Girl is a delightful production that has just opened at the Waterfront Theatre and will run for the next four weekends at 1:00 p.m. It operates at several different levels, which makes it worthwhile for a variety of different age groups. The most important level is just pure fun...vaudeville that is just a touch 'off', so that you can laugh with it while laughing at it.

Chautauqua is a slice of Canadian history. From 1917 until the mid-Thirties a band of travelling showmen set out to entertain folks in isolated farm communities, loggers, troops, and toffs in the cities. Chautauqua Girl is worked around the first night set here, in Vancouver, and follows the problems that beset Nora Cross as she tries to cope with a train de-railment which is preventing her performers from reaching the city. While younger children may miss this part, it holds the attention of older kids.

Faced with seeming insurmountable odds, Ms. Cross improvises. She makes do, as the company must have had to many times over in the years that they were on tour, and she conscripts the ticket sellers and stage hands into helping out. Playwright Ken Mitchell (Waiting for the Parade) cleverly captures the flavor both of the period and of what became a Canadian institution.

Besides the inevitable magic act, the musical clown and acts that are still accepted as standard fare, there are several period pieces that are refreshingly different. The tales-with-a-moral, while still getting their message across, are wonderful spoofs of parents that have children rolling with laughter. Three little girls in polka-dot dresses bounce on stage and perform a routine about friendship and selfishness. In another scene children suffer the consequences of listening to the evil Dr. Careless.

Carousel Theatre have succeeded in mounting a very entertaining show. After years of such strong and socially relevant children's theatre it is wonderful to re-discover some of the old fashioned ways. Pantomime may never have become a great art form, but my fondest childhood memories still revolve around seeing Noddy and Puss-in-Boots in London. There is room enough in Vancouver for both styles and so I hope Carousel will continue to push the veil of time backwards.

Preparations for Festival Days 1982

ALDERGROVE - An Aldergrove Festival Days committee has been formed to plan and co-ordinate the yearly event, Festival Days '82. The committee is made up of representatives from the Aldergrove Kinsmen and Kinettes, and the local chamber of commerce. Three planning meetings have been held, and a "Good Old Days" theme adopted for this year.

If you wish to help on the committee or have any suggestions for events, call Brian Turnquist at 856-4297, Gloria Luypen at 856-8642, or Ken MacDonell at 856-1600.

Paula is fascinated by three one-day-old kids at Fez Arabians on 272nd Street. The little ones were born Friday to Champion Fez Joanna's Shannon doe.

Shannon is the only Nubian doe in Canada classified excellent. There are five goats in Canada classified excellent but Shannon is the only Nubian so designated.

Classification as opposed to showing is much more critical. Showing, the animal is judged against the other animals in the ring whereas in classification the animal is judged against the theoretical ideal animal.

Soft Cell acknowledge their roots in new hit single Tainted Love, currently a number one hit single across Canada, is the product of a British duo named Soft Cell.

Soft Cell are Marc Almond on vocals, percussions, and "energetics" and David Ball, electronics and percussion. Citing a diverse range of influences, such as soul music, cabaret, disco, and a passion for "trash media", the duo was formed in Leeds in October 1979, playing their first gig at at Christmas party that year. By summer '80, they had recorded their first EP, Mutant Moments, consisting of mutated minimal electronic pop, recorded in a small studio in the Pennines. The record has become something of a collector's item since then - not surprising since only 2,000 copies were pressed.

The group attracted further attention when they recorded a track for inclusion on the 'Some Bizarre' compilation album; this led eventually to a recording deal with Some Bizarre Records and Phonogram in the U.K. The first release under the new pact was Memorabilia, a 12-inch electro-funk single aimed specifically at the dance floor. Concurrently, Soft Cell issued a seven-inch single, A Man Could Get Lost.

Combining two soul classics from the '60s - Gloria Jones' Tainted Love and The Supremes' Where Did Our Love Go - on one record, was the result of Soft Cell's desire to mesh electronic music into soul and vice versa. During a recent feature in New Musical Express, Marc Almond elaborated: "We both like Northern soul, '60 s music and the 12-inch record. We though we would try to bring that '60 s sound and style of song into the '80 s, but the problem was of how to do a 12-inch of Tainted Love without doing the boring, very standard thing of stripping it all down to the bass and drums and re-editing the sound, which is putting me off 12-inches in a way. Then we had the idea of doing an instrumental bit in the middle and going into another song at the end, almost like a medley tribute to where we come from; those songs which made an impression on us. It was originally just going to include a few bars of Where Did Our Love Go but we liked the way it turned out and included the whole song. And we even had a slight tongue-in-cheek drum break in the middle - that's the crashing of dustbin lids and syndrums."

Released as a seven-inch single, Tainted Love became a monster hit in Britain, where it lodged itself in the no. 1 position for several weeks. Consequently, the duo appeared on U.K. television, where they performed their hit song on "Top of the Pops". To date, the 45 has sold 700,000 copies in the U.K.!

Soft Cell are hardly a conventional duo; singer Marc Almond contrasts sharply with his keyboardist partner David Ball. Record Mirror described Marc a "tousle-haired bag of nerves, (who) gets over it with a mixture of exhibitionism and 90-miles-an-hour gabbing. He giggles. He stutters. He waves his arms around or fiddles with his standard issue pop star glasses." David, on the other hand, was described as a "strong, silent type, who can't get a word in edgeways!" Their live performances have been called "controlled chaos."

Future projects for the two include solo ventures; among them is David's flirtation with a female vocal duo called The Vicious Pink Phenomena! A Soft Cell album is now out. Says Marc, "we want it to be music to get involved in, an album to buy a plastic dustjacket for! It should be a package, music you want to play over and over again, to sing with and dance with."

"Soft Cell play modern soul cabaret dance music to be enjoyed by the body, and keen acidly observed lyrics to be mulled over by the mind. Character, feeling, and soul are their stock-in-trade. 'Tainted Love' just shouldn't be ignored."

Concert rundown

By KURT LANGMANN

Doc Watson & Borderline

Friday night the Commodore presented a solid three hours of stringband ecstasy with Borderline and the show's star, Doc Watson.

Borderline opened the show with their traditional bluegrass sound featuring the talents of five men on guitar, double bass, banjo, mandolin and violin, as well as lead and harmony vocals. Solo breaks were frequent and exciting, showing their musical skills are as fine as anyone's. Their repertoire extended to good old-time southern gospel, ballads and yes, even good old Everly Brothers tunes, while still keeping the overall sound of pickers like the Delmore Bros.

Doc Watson, on the other hand, presented a far more varied sound. Together with guitarist Dave Sylvester and a bassist whose name I couldn't catch (Doc can belt out a tune, but seems too shy and low-spoken for the part of an M.C.), Doc flat-picked and sang a selection of great old and new tunes. The trio performed slow blues and snappy blues (Natural Born Gamblin' Man), ballads (Sadie), country (Peace Makin' Time) and traditionals (Tennessee Stud) and much more to the delight of the appreciative and enthusiastic audience.

Doc's singular style took all of us back to the roots of country, blues and even jazz (Sylvester's solos often reflected influences such as early jazz pioneers like Django Reinhardt and Charlie Christian).

It was a very unique ninety minutes of music and all of the crowd was sorry to see the fine old character led off the stage - even though he'd earned his money by the end of the evening.

Jean Luc Ponty

Virtuoso violinist Jean Luc Ponty returns to Vancouver tomorrow night, Feb. 11, at the Commodore.

Ponty began as a conservatory-trained classical violinist in France, but the call of progressive jazz and rock proved too great. His first album of note, King Kong featured Frank Zappa compositions and he later joined Zappa's Mothers of Invention and John McLauchlin's Maharishnu Orchestra. Since 1975 he's led a fruitful and prosperous solo career and has released nine albums including the top-selling Imaginary Voyage and his new release, Mystical Adventure, on the Atlantic label.

Tickets at VTC-Eaton's.

Hagood Hardy & The V.S.O.

Hagood Hardy, the well-known Canadian composer and instrumentalist will join maestro Kazuyoshi Akiyama and the V.S.O. for the first set of concerts in the Seagram Pops series, February 12 to 16 in the Orpheum.

When Hardy first burst on the pop scene with The Homecoming in appeared as if he'd come out of nowhere to become a top recording artist, but it was in fact the culmination of years of hard work and noted accomplishments.

Tall and athletic, the bespectacled Hardy began his career with local groups in his Oakville, Ontario hometown. He worked on CBC variety shows, and also spent several years as an innovative vibraphonist with the Herbie Mann Sextet and the George Shearing Quintet. In 1968 he formed the Montage group and also did commercial music work during this period.

His seven albums on Attic Records have netted several Juno and Billboard awards as well as double-platinum (200,000 units) sales.

Under the direction of Akiyama, the V.S.O. will play Weinberger's Schwanda The Bagpiper and Carpenter's Adventure In A Perambulator.

Hardy will be guest conductor and piano and vibraphone solist in the second half of the program. They will perform When Joanna Loved Me, If I Had Nothing But A Dream, Misty, Won't Last A Day Without You and Hardy's own compositions, The Looking Glass, Silent Sky, Sonny's Ragtime, Klondike Fever, Reunion, Second Wind, Tell Me My Name, Let Me Love Again, Les Arrivants, The Homecoming as well as the premiere of his new work, Winter Suite.

Tickets for this show and the four others in the Seagram Pops series are now available at Eaton's.

(Other concerts in the series include Harry Ellis Dickson, Great Movie Music, Broadway Classics and Robert Farnon).

Valentine's Day, this Sunday, presents two fine artists John Renbourn and Stefan Grossman at the QE Playhouse, 8 p.m. and local jazzers, Skywalk at the Soft Rock Cafe, 9 p.m.

John Renbourn & Stefan Grossman

With Renbourn and Grossman, one can expect virtuoso finger-picking guitar on traditional blues and celtic music through to Charlie Mingus jazz pieces. They have released several duo albums (including the highly recommended 1977 release on the Kicking Horse label).

Renbourn is renowned for his work with Davey Graham, Bert Jansch and was a founding member of Pentangle. He performed with a quartet featuring Jacqui McShee at the Playhouse last year and the positive response has led to his early return to Vancouver.

Grossman played electric guitar with the Fugs and Chicago Loop in the '60s, and although he now primarily performs on acoustic guitar, he employs techniques as diverse as those he learned from Eric Clapton, Rev. Gary Davis and Mississippi John Hurt. Grossman performed several sets at last year's Vancouver Folk Festival.

They will perform solo and duo sets this Sunday evening and reserved seats are $8 and $9 at VTC-Eaton's.

Skywalk

Skywalk are a sophisticated jazz fusion sextet and are one of Vancouver's most consistently exciting live bands.

Pianist Graeme Coleman and trumpeter Tom Keenlyside compose most of the complex Skywalk music.

Rene Worst, fretless bassist; Jim McGillveray, percussionist; Kat Hendrikse, drummer and Harris Van Berkel, guitarist round out the band's roster.

The individual members have long track records and have worked with bands as diverse as B.T.O., Prism, Valdy, Shari Ulrich, Paul Horn, Heart, Esther Phillips, Chet Baker and Jim Byrnes to name but a few. (McGillveray and Keenlyside are also major members of Vancouver's increasingly popular Wildroot Orchestra.)

Skywalk are a versatile and dynamic combination of six of the west coast's most talented and tasteful musicians. Fans of progressive and articulate music will not be disappointed; tickets are $5 at the door.

V.S.O. In The Valley & Vienna Boys Choir

The Vancouver Symphony Orchestra's Music In The Valley series has almost sold out. Tickets are sold on a series subscription basis with individual tickets on sale at the door only if available. The series at Clearbrook Community Centre opens March 1 with the world-renowned Vienna Choir Boys - twenty-four young boys upholding a centuries-old tradition.

Their program includes sacred music, folk songs, polkas and waltzes spanning an illustrious choral tradition from Vittoria and Buxtehude to Kodaly and Edgar. They will also perform Johann Strauss's Tales from the Vienna Woods in full costume.

The series will later feature a pops concert and two Beethoven concerts (see "What's On").

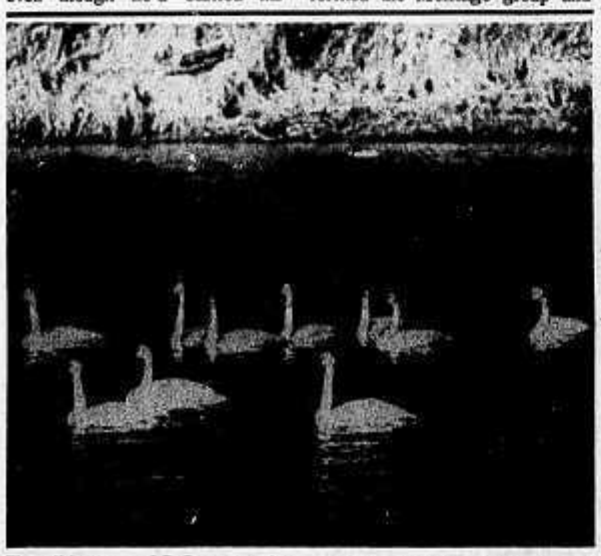
If individual tickets are not available for the Clearbrook performance, the Vienna Choir Boys will also give two concerts, March 3 and 4 at the Orpheum; tickets $3 to $19, at VTC-Eaton's.

Fischer Choir Album

Choir fans will also be interested in a new PolyGram recording, Melodies For Millions with the Fischer Choir and the Hans Bertram Orchestra.

This album features favorites from Tchaikovsky, Bizet, Lilibert, Rubinstein, Smetana, Giordani, Offenbach and Brahms among others. Recording quality is of course superb, featuring a truly enormous and powerful choral ensemble.

Their presentations of waltzes, folk melodies and a Russian medley featuring soloist Ernst Muller are sure to please old-world families.



The wild swans of B.C. appear to be making a strong comeback. This small flock was part of over 100 of the majestic birds seen on an outing in the Fraser Valley over the weekend. Between hunting and destruction of habitat, these birds were in danger of being wiped out. The danger is still present, but from their current numbers, it appears they have a chance of surviving for some time to come.

Forest seed plant to relocate in Aldergrove

VICTORIA - Reid-Collins Nurseries is planning to relocate its Richmond forest seed extraction plant to a new site in Aldergrove.

The new plant will have an increased cone drying capacity and improved seed extraction capability.

This will allow the nursery to provide seed extraction services to domestic companies producing genetically controlled trees. Extraction for this market was not possible in the old plant due to outdated machinery.

The establishement cost of the new plant is estimated at $585,010 of which $37,000 will be provided under ARDSA, the federal and provincial governments' agriculture and rural development subsidiary agreement. The new plant is expected to employ three full-time people and also provide from 100-120 summer jobs for cone collectors in various rural areas throughout B.C.

At the present time, Reid-Collins markets its forestry seed throughout the world, with the majority of sales to northern Europe.

Drainage to be improved in Matsqui flats

VICTORIA - Two new pumping stations will help improve drainage for five farms in the Sim Road area of Matsqui.

The Sim Road drainage basin suffers from Fraser River water seepage through coarse subsoils in the diking area. Two privately-owned pumping stations and a floodbox partially drain the area at the present time. During periods of high levels in the Fraser River, flooding limits crop yields in the low-lying areas.

The new pumping stations are estimated to cost $50,000 of which $37,500 will be funded under ARDSA, the agriculture and rural development subsidiary agreement shared by the provincial and federal government.

Approximately 105 hectares (260 acres) of agricultural land, which produces grass-legume silage and hay crops, will be improved by the new system.

Patiently, the puppets await their curtain call during Saturday's Childrens Theatre at Murrayville Hall.

Puppet Delights!

Puppeteer Dirk Oertel gives early arrivals an unexpected treat as he introduced some of the shows stars to the young audience. The entertaining puppet theatre will be returning on March 6, so if you missed it, there's your chance to enjoy a terrific show along with your children.

Farmers and fishermen have more tax options

VANCOUVER - Farmers and fishermen have more options open to them at income tax time than most taxpayers.

They can report their income either on a cash basis, which includes all the money received in 1981, or on an accrual basis which includes all the money received plus what was still owing them from business done last year.

A farmer or fisherman may "block average" his or her income once every five years. This allows the gains made in good years to offset the losses in hard times and shield some of the income from tax by taxing it at a lower rate.

If you were in business and owned assets such as farm machinery or fishing gear prior to 1972, you may claim depreciation on them (sometimes called capital cost allowance) on a straight-line basis.

In years when a farmer is building a herd and has little if any income, he may still show an amount as livestock inventory up to the fair market value of the herd at year-end. This option allows him to take advantage of personal exemption write-offs.

There are also special options to transfer farm property to children before and after the death of parents. This is useful in deferring capital gains and recaptured depreciation.

Farmers may also deduct the costs of clearing and levelling land, constructing an unpaved road on farm property, drilling or digging wells and having public utilities brought to the farm.

The bona-fide farmer can deduct all business expenses associated with farming and take advantage of all the options open to him. A part-time farmer whose chief source of income does not come from farming is restricted to a maximum loss of $5,000 per year.

Fishermen have special depreciation rates available to them on the costs of boats and conversion. They can also show the value of their nets and traps each year in inventory and write off any losses rather than claim depreciation on them.

Unincorporated farmers and fishermen are eligible for small business development bonds if they are in "financial difficulty". Revenue Canada, which decides just what being in financial difficulty really is, has not clarified its definitions yet. Your bank manager, accountant or financial advisor's counsel should be sought if you think you may be in a situation Revenue Canada would consider "difficult".

The Farm Credit Corporation, which provides low-interest loans to farmers, was expanded in the November 1981 budget.

Park attendance is well up

VICTORIA - More people visited provincial parks in 1981 than in any previous year, says lands, parks and housing minister Jim Chabot. Total recorded attendance for the year was 16.2 million people, a nine percent increase over 1980's 14.9 million.

B.C. to go with Pay-TV on its own

SCHOONER COVE - The provincial government has directed the B.C. utilities commission to receive applications and open hearings for licensing pay-television and non-broadcast cable operations.

"The utilities commission has jurisdiction over telecommunication utilities, including pay-TV," said energy, mines and petroleum resources minister Bob McClelland. Commission falls under his ministry.

"Through the utilities commission there will be a greater diversity of pay-TV operations in our province, and a speedy commencement of service," said communications minister Dr. Pat McGeer. "We are also asking the commission to ensure that non-broadcast services carried on cable systems--clearly a provincial responsibility--develop in B.C. in a manner consistent with provincial policy."

Copper for preserving organic soils

OTTAWA - Scientists in Quebec are studying the use of copper to preserve organic soils in that province.

Exposing certain micro-organisms in the soil to the air through cultivation causes organic soils to decompose. Research has shown that adding copper to the soil reduces the action of the micro-organisms, extending the life of these soils.

Ingram to bring tax knowledge

By RHODY LAKE

MURRAYVILLE - David Ingram may not be a new household word, exactly - but it's a name inseparably linked with the mystique of income tax, tax shelters, proper tax planning and the complex world of RRSP's, RHOSP's and tax and financial counselling

Langley night schools are bringing the expertise of David Ingram's Centa Tax specialists into the community with a one-day tax planning seminar on Saturday, February 20 at Newland's gold club. Ingram's tax seminars have put hundreds of people on a sound financial and tax base. His Saturday morning hot-line radio show on CJOR on tax savings and real estate strategies has brought him into kitchens and living rooms across the country. Ingram himself hops jets from sea to sea to extend a helping hand to the financially unlearned.

Pat Stretch, general manager of the Delta office, says that Centa Tax is the most aggressive accounting and tax firm in Canada.

"We're surrounded with experts," he says, "in every area of business and finance.

"The purpose of the tax seminars is to keep people in business - and to show them how to best utilize money within tax laws. The number one reason for business failure is mismanagement. We bring finances to a level everyone can understand."

Stretch says that their people are interested in personal financial problems and participants in the tax seminars are encouraged to bring them to class.

This is the right time of year to protect the purchasing power of your capital - understand new budget implications and how to find your way through the maze of tax laws.

There'll be competition for seats, so Langley Continuing Education recommends that you register early. Phone numbers for further information are 530-2231 and 534-1722.

Canadian Business

BY GARTH TURNER

These are good times for Ronald Reagan.

Recently, the U.S. president got word from his labor department that inflation last year was the lowest since 1977 — 8.9%.

"This," he said, "means progress."

It sure does.

That consumer price index figure was down from 12.4% in 1980, and more than 13% the year before. U.S. government analysts said they think 1982 is going to be even better. Maybe only 7%.

At the same time, Canadian economic experts were telling me this:

☐ Inflation in Canada will remain "at least 3%" higher than that in the U.S.

☐ By the end of the year, the prime lending rate will likely be 18% or better, and mortgage rates will be 20%.

☐ Canadians pressing for catch-up wage gains are bound to be disappointed. Real income levels must fall if the country is to remain competitive in world markets.

☐ If wages aren't moderated, Ottawa will step in and do it for us, with wage and price controls.

☐ The economy will recover — but not until the summer. Even then, the recovery will be modest, with housing starts still declining and bankruptcies setting a new record.

☐ Statistics Canada revealed inflation last year ran at 12½% — the worst in 33 years.

"There is certainly a difference," Toronto Dominion Bank economist Sid Doloy said of the Canadian and U.S. figures, "there is a big, big gulf.

"The worse our inflation performance is, the worst it will be for our dollar. We're simply going to be forced to retain high interest rates."

1982 could get you coming and going.

"If we continue to have wage rate increases without a compensating productivity gain," says Bank of Commerce economist Mitch Rothman, "we could be in danger of getting priced out of our markets.

"Over the last four or five years, real wage growth has been negative, so people think they've been losing and should catch up.

"But the truth of the matter is that real incomes have to fall. It's not an easy thing to say, and I know it's a shock for people — they're just not prepared for it."

Rothman says vastly higher oil prices, now that the Ottawa-Alberta energy agreement is in place, will rob incomes along with inflation.

But why such a difference now between U.S. and Canadian annual price hikes?

Rothman blames ballooning 1981 energy costs, an American cost-of-living formula which is more heavily weighted to reflect interest rates, and higher Canadian wage settlements.

Part of the reason for that is a government in Ottawa which Rothman says is now "diametrically opposed" to fiscal policies the U.S. is following.

☐ While Reagan cuts taxes and reduces government spending, Ottawa spends more and then looks for new sources of revenue (like oil prices) to make up the difference.

☐ While Washington drops anti-trust suits against big business, Ottawa presses ahead with its Restrictive Trade Practices Commission enquiry into oil company "rip-offs."

☐ And while Reagan backs off from intervening in the economy, Ottawa jumps in. The White House decontrols gas. Trudeau brings in the National Energy Program and buys Fina.

"When government goes out into industry and picks winners and losers, it's bound to failure," Rothman says. "It just prolongs the pain and costs a lot of money. It's clearly not the way to go."

"THE PRISONER OF SECOND AVENUE" AT ABBOTSFORD THEATRE

Historical background explains hysterical reaction to Simon play

To New York theatregoers, who flocked for over 18 months to Neil Simon's eleventh-in-a-row comedy hit, "The Prisoner of Second Avenue", it was perfectly clear why this king of comedy writers had located the action of his saga of urban exasperation on Second Avenue. Audiences who will be attending the Abbotsford Little Theatre's presentation of this play from February 11 through February 27, who may not be familiar with the special character of New York's Second Avenue as a residential neighborhood, may need some explanation.

Certain geographical areas of Manhattan have so often been celebrated in song and story that every American knows something of their history and flavor. Wall Street, for example, means Big Finance. Greenwich Village means bohemianism. Harlem - center of the Black Ghetto. Morningside Heights, where Columbia University's students swarm. The West Side, (upper), where dwell the comfortably-off, non-chic middle class and where bubbles the unblending, melting pot revealed in "West Side Story", and are committed Feiffer's "Little Murders."

Madison Avenue - advertising agency row; Yorkville - Little Hungary, Little German, Little Czecho-Slovakia. Gramercy Park and Washington Square, still exclusive islands of wealthy homes, though the latter is being encroached on by New York University. Park Avenue, where the rich reside in luxury, and Fifth Avenue too, in its upper reaches, middle Fifth Avenue (34th to 60th Street) being where the great department stores and smaller specialty boutiques make shopping insidious.

Second Avenue also breaks into upper and lower parts. The lower stretch, once a center for the Yiddish-language theatres and other cultural institutions in the early decades of this century, is now where English-speaking off-Broadway theatres cluster, and moderate-rent apartment houses. It's the upper reach that Neil Simon has nailed down for the site of his play - the thirty blocks above 60th Street, the white brick belt that began to sprout in the early 1950's and filled both sides of the thoroughfare by the end of the 60's.

It's a new neighborhood and its newness is what made it so apt a locale for Simon's tale of jittered victims of Big City Blues. High-rise, high-rent, schlock-luxury apartments, each with a uniformed doorman and growths crawling up the white brick faces, called "terraces", on which two people can manage to sit with one potted plant to stare at the view of other white brick structures and terrace growths.

Each apartment of three or four cramped rooms - each about the size of a modest one-car garage - has been loaded to its low ceiling with push-button gadgetry (air-conditioning, dishwashers, wall ovens, TV outlets to a master antenna on the roof).

In these expensive but far from opulent cubicles young junior executives and their wives live until the coming of children drives them to find more and larger rooms in the suburbs. This is where apartments are shared by duos, trios, quartets of stewardesses of the 44 airlines that fly in and out of New York, as locations for late-night merry-making between their 2,300-odd daily flights out of the city's three airports.

Second Avenue, of course, was always there, but until mid-century it was lined with drab "railroad flats" - five-story walk-ups with rows of rooms laid out like railroad ties, draped with fire-escapes ("terraces" of the old days), a refuge for the underpaid people forced to endure the clatter outside their windows of the "el".

But the elevated railroad that scarred Second Avenue was torn down in 1942, leaving an unsuspectedly wide, sunny thoroughfare that was quiet for the first time in 70 years. Canny real estate men saw an opportunity. Down they brought the old railroad flats and up they rushed the white brick edifices with air-conditioning, shiny slick, latest-model refrigerators, dishwashers and tiny terraces - to compensate for the itsy-bitsy size of the rooms, the tastelessly decorated, phony-elegant lobbies, the tacky thin walls that transmitted every neighbor's sounds of living like so many public address systems.

Canny Neil Simon also saw an opportunity in these white brick beehives. Put into one of the apartments-but-not-a-home a couple affluent enough to pay the rent and have two daughters off at college, show them getting more and more irritated by the breakdown of the gadgets, have the husband become a victim of a firm's staff-cutting after 22 years in his job, get them burglarized - and let the inevitable paranoia ferment. Bound to make a recognizable, heartbreakingly funny comedy.

Simon was proved as right as were the real estate men who believed they could charge high rents for their second-rate apartments on Second Avenue. Simon's audiences laughed uproariously, for over 18 months, at the plight of the helpless people he had trapped in their white brick prison.

Not only laughed. They applauded! At performance after performance, for example, when the irate tenant - complaining about being unable to sleep because the apartment's air conditioner is stuck at a temperature of 14 degrees - cried out "Why do they bother printing on it 'High', 'Medium' and 'Low'? It's all High!" - audiences burst into applause! It was like the response of people listened to a political candidate telling them how they have been misused by a government in office - they know it but they're endorsing a leader expressing their grievances. The poor tenant, the oppressed "prisoner", was reflecting the discontents of dwellers on all the Second Avenues of the land.

Starring in the play at the Abbotsford Little Theatre are Alan Clift and Beda Martin. Others in the cast of the company are Bert Turner, Mary Stewart, Marj Thompson and Kathy Nash.

Bill Green is the director who is staging "prisoner" with an emphasis on it's flair and fun. Evelyn Kingston is designing the prisoner's "cell", a 14th floor apartment of a soul-less apartment building. Fred Kingston is the lighting designer with Glenn Brim as his assistant. Inge Langmann will put the final 1970's touch with her costume designs. Miriam Elliot will be the stage manager with Iris Todd her assistant.

Tickets are at the following outlets in Abbotsford; Anderson's Pharmasave (853-1624), The Bookworks (853-4824), The Valley Feed Bag, Inc. (853-8911) and The Copper Kettle Buffet Restaurant (853-5961). In Aldergrove tickets are available at The Aldergrove Star (856-8302). In Mission you can get your tickets at The Valley Feed Bag, Inc. (826-1412). For general information and telephone orders call 856-8720.

The Abbotsford Little Theatre is located at the Laurel Street Arts Center at the corner of Montrose and Laurel Streets in Abbotsford.

We also offer a Dinner Theatre Club with the Copper Kettle Buffet Restaurant on Alliance Street in Abbotsford. This is a combination package of dinner and the show. For information and reservations call the Copper Kettle Restaurant at 853-5961.

'Women's Institute Week' will be noted by local affiliates

ALDERGROVE - The week from Sunday to Saturday, including February 19, will be known as Women's Institute Week across Canada.

Patrick Watson has very successfully interviewed historical 'titans' on his popular television series, but time limits have prevented him from touching on some of Canada's titans. This special week, designated by the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada and proclaimed by the British Columbia government, will celebrate the foresight and dedication of such Canadian titans as Adelaide Hoodless, founder of the women's institute. Hoodless lost an infant son through drinking impure milk, and, upon finding that no information on homemaking, sanitation, and other subjects related to family needs was available, declared, "a nation cannot rise above the levels of its homes, therefore we women must work and study together to raise our homes to the highest possible level." 101 women agreed with her, and on a February night in 1897, in Stoney Creek, Ontario, they formed the world's first women's institute. From this early gathering, this organization has spilled over international boundaries, until to-day, nine million women in over 70 countries revere this Canadian woman, Adelaide Hoodless, as a truly modern titan.

In British Columbia, the women's institutes are deeply committed to children's needs, and are now looking forward to the opening of the new children's hospital in Vancouver. Few people realize that it was the British Columbia women's institute that founded both the children's hospital and the Queen Alexandra hospital in Victoria, two of the province's most in-depth health care units for children. Though funding of the hospitals now comes from many other sources as well, the B.C. women's institute members still sew garments and toys, and prepare quiet books to entertain the hospitalized youngsters. Cash donations also, including over $22,000 in the international year of the child in 1979.

While Hoodless dealt with the grass roots planning for the branches, Mrs. Alfred Watt of Metchosin, B.C., was the woman who founded the international organization. Watt was a tireless leader. She gave the international level its name - The Associated Country Women of the World (ACWW) - and she served as the first president through the depression and world war II, a total of 14 years.

ACWW to-day links nine million women in friendship and determination to improve conditions for families. In India, where infants were losing their sight due to vitamin A deficiences, ACWW set up a pilot project teaching families better nutrition, and better use of foodstuffs available to prevent this blindness. The project was so successful that the United Nations has now taken over, and is expanding the program to address other health problems in various parts of the world.

An appeal at the world conference in Kenya in 1977 resulted in Canadian women sending thousands of dollars to that country to dig water wells to provide a more abundant and sanitary water supply, and to plant trees to offset the advance of the desert. Both projects have been highly successful, and now the Kenyan members are looking for ways to help themselves and others.

Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II is the president of the Sandringham's women's institute, which has other royal family women as members. This makes Queen Elizabeth a member of ACWW. Delegates representing these women will be meeting in Vancouver at the University of British Columbia in June of 1983, to share ideas and problems, while planning future priorities and projects.

Women's institutes are open to women of all ages, who are interested in promotion of better living in their community and country. Their motto, "For home and country" is indicative of both the scope and priorities, and membership is non-partisan, non-sectarian, and non racial.

Women's institute is a quiet organization that tackles whatever needs it sees for families, and without fanfare, gets the job done. During this special week they want to share with the public the titans of their past, and a glimpse of their projects to come.

There are three women's institutes in the Aldergrove area, at Coghlan, Langley, and Patricia. One of the special annual events here is the Peace Arch picnic, held in July. All the institutes in the Fraser Valley meet with members of the American homemakers clubs. One year the picnic is held on the American side, the other on the Canadian soil. There is quite an impressive ceremony where an American lady and a Canadian lady go arm in arm through the Peace Arch, and then members form a big circle and sing the hymns of all nations, and a prayer is said.

The local institutes maintain their funds by holding teas, bake sales, and needlework sales. During the year members work on quilts for raffling, and on special garments for the children's hospital and Queen Alexandra hospital in Victoria.

The local institutes would like to welcome new members. The numbers to call are - Coghlan, Mrs. Welsh, 856-1300; Mrs. Slipec, 856-4841; Langley, Mrs. Jeffries, 534-4907; Mrs. Mulligan, 534-5708; Patricia, Mrs. Wright, 859-8408; Mrs. Wilson, 856-5010, Mrs. Durkie, 856-2780.

Alderhaven activities are always enjoyed by all

By IRENE ORWICK

ALDERGROVE - On January 27 we held a very successful pot-luck supper at Alderhaven. It was like Christmas dinner once again, thanks to Mr. Odde who provided roast turkey and cranberry sauce.

Many and varied were the dishes of hot food. It did my heart good to hear the laughter, talking and people enjoying themselves. We always look forward to get togethers of this nature.

The general meeting was held February 2. It was well attended, with Ron Fryer from B.C. Housing on hand to answer any questions tenants might have.

At the birthday party for February, the theme was "Hearts and flowers". The table was pretty, with a heart shaped cake and red carnations. Anna Brown and Mrs. Hartman were the only two sitting at the table. A man never shows up.

Take heart, get out and walk, whenever the weather permits. It does the heart good.

Otter hospital auxiliary elect officers

OTTER - Otter auxiliary to the Langley Memorial hospital held its annual meeting on Friday, January 29 at the home of Jean Deck. Seventeen members answered the roll call.

During the meeting elections were held for officers for 1982. Dorothy McDowell became the new president; Muriel Douglas, first vice-president; Mamie Compton, second vice-president; Joyce Mayne, treasurer; Virginia Fredrickson, secretary; Noreen Dornan, auditor; Jean Deck, Penny Pincher store representative; Joyce Mayne, gift shop representative; Bessie Bohnke and Gertrude Taylor, telephoning committee; Winona Morgan, publicity and sunshine.

Eleanor Rutz, Otter auxiliary past president, was warmly extended a vote of thanks by the members for her term of office and was presented with a stering silver "past president" pin.

Two auxiliary members were elected to help set up and clean up at the annual council meeting pot luck luncheon being held at the Langley United Church hall on Monday, March 1 at 11:30 a.m.

At the monthly meeting the door prize, donated by Lilian Howse, was drawn by Winona Morgan.

The auxiliary's next meeting will be held Friday, February 26 at the home of Dorothy McDowell with Joyce Mayne as co-hostess and Bernice Aylen donating the door prize.

Breast feeding encouraged

CLEARBROOK - Mothers wishing to breast feed will find helpful information at the next meeting of La Leche League, Abbotsford. The meeting will be held on February 17 at 7:30 p.m. at 31466 Aero Lane, Clearbrook.

This month's discussion will be about nitrition and weaning.

For further information call 856-6620.

Naturalist find solitary owl

By MARY PASTRICK

ALDERGROVE - The Langley Field Naturalists travelled to the Mud Bay area only to find one snowy owl. There were three seen earlier in January this year. The lone snowy owl sat motionless in the middle of the green turf field with large flocks of gulls around the margin. The snowy owls are regular winter visitors in open country in the lower mainland. This owl is a large round-headed owl, without ear tufts, basically white and measures about 25 inches, and, by weight, is the largest of the North American owls. The snowy owl is an Arctic species and is one of the main predators of the tundra zone. It is often a diurnal hunter because it lives in regions where daylight is prolonged or continuous in summer. It is a large powerful species which feeds principally on lemmings and arctic hares, but, also takes various other small mammals and a variety of birds up to the size of eider ducks. When the lemming supply is short, the snowy owls migrate into the lower mainland.

Two short sared owls hunted over the half submerged drift logs along the grassy dike, then rested on root-snags near the water. And a good number of rough legged and marsh hawks hunted for meadow mice across the farms and marsh areas. Both mature and immature bald eagles rested on top of fence posts, in stubbled fields and on the top branches of some of the few remaining trees in the area.

Guest for the field naturalists' February meeting will be Maria Ferreira with a program called 'A botanist's view of Brazil'. Meet at the Langley Arts Centre at 8 p.m. on February 19.

Next field trip Feb. 14 at the Forslund-Watson farm to do winter inventory. Meet there at 9:30.

140 turn out for meeting

By ERNEST CLUETT

ALDERGROVE - The February general meeting of Aldergrove OAPO had an attendance of over 140 members who came to help in the running of their organization. Jack Baker gave an account of the lottery and emphasized that all members who have been posted to the wrong organization to fill in the coupon in the February Elder Statesman and send it in. Pat Prozesky also gave particulars regarding the New Horizons grant to the choral group and explained the objectives of the grant.

There will be a mid winter break bus trip to Point Roberts via Tsawwassen and back to White Rock for lunch. The cost is $4.50 per person and the trip leaves the OAP hall at 10 a.m. and returns at 4 p.m.

A pot luck supper at 5 p.m. followed by a slide show on Bangladesh will take place on Thursday, February 11. All are welcome. Also another slide show about South America is slated for March 4 at 7 p.m.

New members to be welcomed were Grace Ferguson, Evelyn Wheatly, Ernest and Irene Woodland and Harry and Alice Misfeldt.

Anyone wishing to put forward a resolution for the conventions' consideration is asked to hand them in before Feb. 15 if possible.

The Jan. 30 dance paid tribute to Andy and Gwen Keay on the advent of their 43rd wedding anniversary, also the birthday of Gladys Kaufhold. Door prize went to Slim Burrell and the spot prizes to Dave and Doris Lockhart.

The choral group sang at the New Vista care center on February 2 before an overflow crowd and were given a rousing welcome. The center is located off Edmonds street in Burnaby. They were singing again on February 8 at the Edmonds hall, a senior citizens and OAPO center on Kingsway. We are grateful to the choral group and to the entertainment committee and all the other dedicated members of branch 71 who by their efforts publicize far and wide the ever expanding Aldergrove OAPO. When we were rebuilding the hall a few years back, most of the civil servants in Vancouver with whom we had to deal, never had heard of Aldergrove and didn't have a clue as to where it was; all of them using the freeway on their summer rush to their Cariboo cottages.

The Saturday dance winners were; door prize Arne Colley, and Carl and Rita Helsnor of Washington won the spot prizes. The birthdays of Monty Montgomery and Tracy Brown were suitable celebrated. Visitors were Ruth Syme of Abbotsford and Ruby and Harry Kuch of New Westminster.

The trials and tribulations of a president in his efforts to further the interests of the pensioners organization was brought to the fore when attending day school in Langley he found himself the only male in a class of thirty women.

Doris says her husband has bought her a car. He assures her it is in top condition. Everything makes a noise except the horn.

Money$mart

BY MARIE VAN HAVERE

"Since the November budget, are there any new rules about RRSPs that a taxpayer should know about?

Some of the ground rules concerning Registered Retirement Savings Plans will be changed when the government passes its budget proposals. The rules will mainly affect 1982 tax returns.

One change that took effect from November 12, 1981, is that the cost of interest on money borrowed for RRSP investments will no longer be tax deductible. The RRSP maximum contribution limits will remain the same, however: 20% of earned income, maximum $3,500 if you're a member of a company pension plan or $5,500 if you're not or self-employed.

Some taxpayers will be affected by the new, and as yet unclear, rules concerning the tax-free transfer of "retiring allowances" to RRSPs or pension plans. (The proposals would restrict the amount of money transferable, based on years of service and membership in a company pension plan or deferred profit sharing plan.)

It is still possible to roll over Canada Pension Plan or Old Age Security cheques into RRSPs until age 71. In 1982, it is proposed that if you do this, you will not be able to claim the $1,000 pension exemption.

The budget did not touch some aspects of the RRSP program. Wise taxpayers should take advantage of these possibilities.

You can still have as many RRSPs as you wish so long as you do not contribute more than your allowable 20% of earned income to your plans each year. You can still put money into spousal RRSPs. Many taxpayers are not taking full advantage of this option.

When one spouse is not working and therefore not earning any income, that spouse is not normally eligible for an RRSP. However, the spouse with earned income can allocate his or her RRSP monies into RRSP plans for either or both husband and wife. This now gives the spouse without earned income a legitimate RRSP.

The real advantage to spousal RRSPs comes at retirement. Money from an RRSP must be converted into pension income no later than age 71. This RRSP-pension is eligible for the pension deduction of $1,000 commencing with the tax year in which you turn 65. (From age 69 RRSP monies can be converted into one of the RRSP maturity option plans which provide pension income.) The deduction allows a pensioner to receive the first $1,000 of qualified pension income tax free. Note that Canada Pension Plan or Old Age Security payments do not qualify for this exemption.

The ground rules have changed slightly, but RRSPs are still one of the best tax shelters around.

COUNTRY HAPPENINGS
by Doug Davis

Razzy Bailey

Razzy Bailey will have a hard time topping his 1981 accomplishments. He received Billboard's "No. 1 Country Singles Artists of 1981 Award" for racking up three No. 1 hits — "I Keep Coming Back for More," "Friends" and "Midnight Hauler."

Bailey's third album, "Makin' Friends" was released early last year. Even before he started getting hits, Bailey was making the top 10 with singles like "What Time Do You Have to Be Back In Heaven Tonight," "Tonight She's Gonna Love Me Like There's No Tomorrow" and "I Ain't Got No Business Doing Business Today."

He closed out the year with a New Year's Eve bash at Billy Bob's in Fort Worth, Texas with Bob Hope, Johnny Cash and Chuck Berry.

Bailey has another LP in the rising ranks, "Feelin' Right" (RCA) and a single, "She Left Love All Over Me."

Ronnie McDowell was seen recently on the syndicated TV show "America's Top 10" performing his current single "Watchin' Girls Go By" (Epic).

Dave Rowland has been in the studio for the past few weeks working on an album, presently untitled.

Roy Clark has finished a 17-day run at the Aladdin Hotel, marking his first Las Vegas appearance outside Suma showrooms in 11 years. The show featured Clark with his road crew of Rodney Lay & the Wild West, Fanci and Jimmy Henley.

Clark's Las Vegas performances date back to 1960, when he was a backup guitar picker at the Golden Nugget.

He is credited with taking country music to the strip for the first time during a co-headlining run with Buhala Clark at Caesar's Palace in 1970.

In 1971 Clark recorded his first live album during an engagement at the Landmark. Lately he has performed 12 weeks each year at either the Desert Inn or Frontier Hotels.

Terri Gibbs should make the top of the charts with her newest single, "Misery River." Ms. Gibbs recently headlined the Palomino Club for the second time while on the West Coast for interviews. Her LP is "I'm a Lady" (MCA).

The National Kidney Foundation has chosen Bill Anderson, Jim Ed Brown, and Jeannie C. Riley to represent the its annual fundraising "radiothon" this year. The national broadcast, to be billed as "Country Music Festival," will air live on April 4 and 5 from Nashville's Opryland Hotel.

Thursday

Host Bert Convy leads the festivities on TATTLETALES, the lively celebrity game series featuring well-known couples and involving the studio audience each weekday, including Thursday, February 11 on CBS-TV.

Each of three celebrity couples, challenged to guess how their partners will respond to a variety of questions, has a studio-audience rooting section, among whom the winning monies are divided.

"Tattletales" rejoined the network this January after it ran for five years previously following its debut in February 1974.

PBS PRESENTS

Historic rebellion

His name is absent from most American history books, yet Denmark Vesey can stand beside any of the great leaders who pioneered the fight against slavery in America.

Vesey was a prosperous black carpenter in Charleston, S.C. during the 1800s. He was a freed man who had endured the inhumanity of the slavery of his family and friends until 1822, when his personal belief in freedom led him to plot a conspiracy that, if successful, would free the slaves of Charleston.

The people behind this revolt and one man's heroic leadership unfold in "Denmark Vesey's Rebellion," a 90-minute drama airing Wednesday, Feb. 17 (check local listings) on PBS as part of Black History Month. The cast includes Yaphet Kotto (who portrays Vesey), Cleavon Little (shown), Ned Beatty and Bernie Casey.

Denmark Vesey's effort to free the slaves of Charleston was a complex interplay of motives and loyalties. With the aid of a small band of co-conspirators, Vesey planned to organize plantation slaves and hijack a ship to Santo Domingo. Yet, conflicting emotions and allegiances prevented some of the slaves from fighting for their liberation.

"Denmark Vesey's Rebellion" was researched to reflect life in 19th-century Charleston as accurately and non-stereotypically as possible. The drama is the pilot for "A House Divided," a four-part anthology series featuring biographical portraits of historical figures central to the issue of slavery throughout American history.

Land development course offered

SURREY - Kwantlen College is offering a course that will appeal to municipal officials, real estate agents, land-developers and land owners.

The course "land development" will be instructed by Barrie Letts, who will explain to participants the complicated process involved in the processing of approvals and financing as well as the municipal development approval required for any development.

Letts, will also teach participants various aspects of procedures in financing along with the knowledge and skills necessary to evaluate property for its development.

This four sessions course will be held on the Surrey campus, from 7 - 9:30 p.m. beginning Thursday, February 25. Pre-registration is required as classes are limited to thirty students.

For further information, contact Kwantlen College, continuing education at 588-4411.

BROWNIES FLY UP

On February 5, 1982 four girls who have completed their Brownie Program received their wings and now fly-up to Guides. The girls are: Corina Blackwell, Rose Davidson, Tammy Giesbrecht, and Teresa Nachbar.

They were Butterflies who matured and then flew through a flower garden of the Brownie Promise, Law, and Motto, and then arrived at Guides which will take them on another leg of learning.

GARDENING IN THE VALLEY

By DON ANSON

Three years ago I wrote an article about companion and compatible gardening. I have been asked to repeat it so here goes.

What is meant by these words is sometimes confusing. Basically they mean getting one plant to assist another in the control of a disease or insect pest. Knowledge of compatible and companion planting is essential if you are one of the growing number of gardeners who dislike use of dangerous sprays.

Many of our popular flowering plants and most of the herbs have scents that are repellent to assorted insect pests. Among those popular flowers that do not attract insects are marigolds, asters, chrysanthemums, cosmos and coreopsis. Nearly all of the herbs also have this property.

There are plants that are avoided by deer and others that are never touched by rabbits. Some plants are loved by cats (nepeta) and some are always avoided. Dogs avoid certain plants, and for that matter, so do humans.

It can therefore be seen easily that a knowledge of compatible planting will greatly assist the gardener who does not want to be out in the garden spraying throughout the year for this and that.

Down through the ages, gardeners have found by experimenting that companion planting really works. It is not a new idea. Those who hate chemical sprays make great use of this knowledge and also encourage natural enemies of pests into their gardens.

They welcome ladybugs, grass snakes, toads and other insect predators. They approve of plant-derived pesticides such as rotenone and pyrethrum. They encourage birds by feeding them and providing them with food, water and nesting materials. And they have learned all about companion and compatible planting.

What do you grow with your roses? Are you aware that chives planted among roses tend to keep aphids away? Do you know that parsley repels rose beetles and keeps away whitefly? Still with roses, do you plant garlic to repel black spot, mildew and aphids?

Some plants, notably marigolds, repel nematodes by some substance effused from their roots and onions should always be grown if you are troubled by cutworms.

Plant nasturtiums near broccoli if you are troubled by aphids and, if your cabbages are always attacked by the cabbage butterfly, plant some sage nearby. Also grow tomatoes in the next row because the cabbage white butterfly hates the smell of tomatoes.

If you continually get cabbage maggots, try growing mint or rosemary alongside or try putting a piece of rhubarb in the planting hole.

If beetles are attacking your grapes, grow germaums under the vine and if your squash suffers from squash bugs, then grow radishes near them.

No one can be expected to remember all these things but any book on organic gardening will give you a full list.

Wise gardeners will grow aromatic herbs such as basil, anise, coriander, rosemary and sage at odd spots around the garden. They will assuredly have plenty of marigolds and parsley about and will certainly grow garlic whether they like it or not on the table because they know it is anathema to most of the creepy-crawlies.

Compatible plants complement each other because of their height, root spread and cultural needs.

Just as eggs go with bacon, so do beets with onions; carrots with peas; celeriac with leeks; celery with bush beans; corn with peas; cucumber with pole beans; early potatoes with corn; kohlrabi with beets; leeks with beans; onions with beans and turnips with peas.

Plants are individuals. They have their likes and dislikes just like human beings. Among the flowers, certain combinations have been passed down for generations, not only for effect but because such combinations have been found to be compatible. Alyssum and lobelia go together; tulips and forget-me-nots go together and there are numerous other effective combinations.

Some plants are enemies to others. Black walnut trees inhibit the growth of numerous other shrubs because of a substance they exude from their roots. Some plants need a lot of room and are bothered by close company. Others like to be snuggled close to other plants.

There are so many beautiful and easy-to-grow herbs. These are the mainstay of protection against insect pests. Your vegetable garden should certainly contain chives and garlic. It could conveniently have a border of parsley and marigolds and if possible it should have such herbs as rosemary, lavender, fennel or sage growing nearby.

Flower borders lend themselves to automatic protection by means of numerous herbs.

Don't imagine that you will get no bugs at all if you follow these rules. Every garden will have its pests but they won't arrive in multitudes if you are wise to the ways of companion and compatible planting.

Pests must have a certain right to live, I suppose, but we have to make it as uncomfortable as possible for them to live in our garden. We must inform them they are not wanted on our plants by growing other things that they hate nearby. We must be our own garden doctors and by regular visits look for signs of trouble. Early death of one caterpilar or one grub may stop an infestation as the propagating powers of most insects are enormous.

Gardens will not look after themselves. They are not natural, they are man-made and if neglected for even a short time will become non-gardens.

The author will endeavor to answer any questions on the subject of outdoor gardening. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: "Gardens", care of The Star, Box 220, Aldergrove, V0X 1A0. All letters will be answered personally, but some may be answered in this column.

SuperShopping

BY RHONDA MAXWELL

I am sure you are tired of hearing it. Nutritionists, dietitians and consumer writers all tell you to read the labels. The question is, are you doing just that?

Read the labels. Find out what it is you are buying. Are you paying for water, fillers, additives or are you paying for food?

Look at the first ingredient on a package of processed food. It will tell you what there is most of in the package you are about to buy. When I looked at prepared entrees recently, the first ingredient I saw listed was WATER. The price for a 250g. box was $2.73. In this particular case the food product was supposed to be meat. In order to purchase a pound of this product, albeit it was prepared, almost ready for you to eat, the price would have been $5.46 per pound. That buys you a lot of chicken or a very nice, juicy steak for two.

Why pay for water, spices, additives and who knows what else, when you can buy the real food yourself and prepare to your liking. It really does not take that much longer and you will certainly save yourself a great deal of money.

BOOKS IN REVIEW

In Ngaio Marsh's Photo Finish Troy and her intrepid detective husband, Alleyn of the Yard, are invited to stay at a luxurious island retreat in New Zealand. Troy is commissioned to paint the portrait of Isabella Sommita, a world famous opera singer. But before Troy gets a chance to unpack her paintbrushes, the prima donna is murdered and the guests are isolated from the rest of the world by a storm. Alleyn decides to start his own informal investigation until the local police can make their way to the island. (Fontana; $2.95)

Tom Hirschfeld's How to Master Video Games tells you how not to get zapped by those nasty little invaders from outer space, asteroids, jet fighters or any of the other obnoxious electronic monsters that charge you a quarter so that they can shoot you down. The book has diagrams showing what to expect from the video beasties and how to avoid the pitfalls novice video players fall into. The book gives strategies, explains scoring systems and generally tells you how to live longer — video-wise — and make your quarters last longer. (Bantam; $2.95)

William G. Ouchi's Theory Z: How American Business Can Meet The Japanese Challenge outlines what N. American business can learn from the Japanese. A management consultant, Ouchi has studied business in both Japan and the U.S. for over 10 years and shows that the secret to Japanese success is not technology, but a unique style of managing people. Christina Blizzard

by Alex Barris
CBC Merchandising, $9.95

Alex Barris is perhaps the perfect person to record the history of Front Page Challenge, the longest-running most consistently popular of all the CBC's TV shows. Barris used to be the show's Fred Davis, he has been a regular and guest panelist, and has written the program and in various ways has been connected with it during most of the past 25 years. Anyway he's the show's memory and has compiled an unusual history — not tiresome, chronological flow of events, but spotted memories, anecdotes, incidents, outrages, embarrassments, humor. More than any TV program Front Page Challenge has been involved in world history over the past quarter century. There probably isn't a Canadian who hasn't seen Front Page Challenge at some time, who has not a favorite recollection. Many are captured in this book. For example there is a splendid one on Page 102 which I, for one, had forgotten. Not Alex Barris though...

A SERMON

What God never told Job

By ANN SAUNDERS

ALDERGROVE - Dr. Benjamin [illegible] (pastor of the Aldergrove Seventh-day Adventist church) chose his subject from the Book of Job, which Victor Hugo describes as '...perhaps the greatest masterpiece of the human mind.' This book deals with human suffering which, as everyone recognizes, is still rampant today in every city, town and village.

Dr. Schoun told of his first dealing with a traumatic experience in breaking the news to an 8th-grade student that her father had just died of a heart attack. Her reaction? "Not him! Never! Why? Why? Why?"

A sincere christian young man prayed for a good wife. Later he married, was happy, but, in a few years his wife left him for someone else. Was he at fault? Were his prayers not answered? He too, questioned: 'Why?'

A previously well-to-do christian man suffered financial reverses and was forced to live poorly in order to recover his business. He was a faithful supporter of his church. Had God forgotten him? Why did this happen? Dr. Schoon asked the question: "In view of disappointments here and discouragements there, do we have a right to expect something better? Then he added: Job's book helps us to understand the 'why'?"

Job was the richest man in the east. He was a successful farmer with 500 yoke of oxen, 500 donkeys and 7,000 sheep. He had 3,000 camels. Could he, perhaps, have been the first to operate a rent-a-camel business? Job also was a judge at the local courthouse and people respected him. He was philanthropic, helping orphans and widows and acting justly on their behalf. His reputation was unsurpassed but listen to what happened to him in one day —

His camels and oxen were stolen by bands of robbers and the servants killed except the ones who reported to him. The 7,000 sheep were destroyed by a thunderstorm and his children were all killed by a cyclone. One moment a wealthy man - now disaster, and, to top it off, he was smitten with a painfully hideous disease and broke out in oozing irritating sores.

Did Job question: 'Why?' He certainly did!

Job's case was the subject of conversation for many, many weeks. People accused him of hiding some dreadful sin. Shakespeare described such a condition in these words:

'This is the state of man: today he puts forth
The tender leaves of hope; to-morrow blossoms,
And bears his blushing honors thick upon him;
The third day comes a frost, a killing frost,
And, - when he thinks, good easy man, full surely
His greatness is a-ripening, - nips his root,
And then he falls.'

Job's three best friends came to see him and were so astonished at his condition they sat silently for seven days. Then they spoke. Eliphaz advised Job to turn to God and insisted he was being punished for sins that needed repenting of. Bildad also volunteered that God is just so Job's troubles must be because of wrong-doing by his children. Zophar was seemingly no friend for he related that Job's punishment was less than he deserved and that Job must be hiding some secret sin. Elihu listened to all the speeches and then he proceeded to tell them that punishment is meant as a corrective measure. Job denied ever having, knowingly, committed the sins of which they accused him.

Suddenly God interrupts and, in chapter 38, asked many questions of Job such as:

"Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth?
Hast thou entered the springs of the sea? or walked
On the ocean floor?
Who can number the clouds?
Hath the rain a father?
Who provided for the raven
his food?

God was revealed himself to Job, not to settle their arguments, but to give Job a clearer understanding of his omnipotence.

But God did not explain to Job the reason for his suffering.

God did not reveal to Job that his life was a focal point in the great controversy between good and evil. Job's suffering was not due to his own sins nor was it God's will that he suffer. God simply said to Job: 'Trust me' and Job responded in Chapter 42:5 "Now mine eyes seeth thee." He also stated in Job 13:15: "Though he slay me, yet will I trust him."

Job lived after this experience for nearly another century and a half. His blessings returned and were more abundant than ever. He had 14,000 sheep, 6,000 camels, 1,000 yoke of oxen and 1,000 donkeys. Property, family, friends, reputation were his again. Job 42:15 described his daughters as fairer than any in the land and that he included them in the inheritance with their brothers.

Just as Job's life was part of a great controversy between good and evil so our lives will have difficulties, but we can learn from Job's experience lessons of trust and confidence in God.

Dr. Schoun concluded with the thought: God leads his children by a way they know not; but he does not forget or cast off those who put their trust in him.

'Have faith! And look into the master's face...
Have faith! In him there is a hiding place...
Trust on! No cloud his promise can erase,
Have faith and know this is the master's way.'

Energy on the farm: What's in the future?

By PAUL JACOT

The old joke about knowing a farmer who was outstanding in his field never seemed more apt than it does today. All Canadian farmers have to be a cut above these days in order to survive. Never before have farmers had to make their operations so efficient due to the current economic climate.

And farmers across the country have to continue their task of feeding a growing domestic population amid increasing financial constraints. Ontario's population, for example, is expected to grow to over 10 million, from the present eight million in the next 20 years.

One of the ways Canadian farmers can reduce operating costs is to use less energy in their operations. In the years to come, there will be increasing emphasis on farm fuel alternatives and general energy conservation. Many farms in Canada today have adapted to new methods as a way to pare operating expenditures.

Reduced tillage, the insulation of the animal housing and upgraded greenhouse thermal efficiency are all seen as future energy savers. Agro-chemicals have gone a long way in increasing food production to keep pace with demand.

Farmers in the future will probably produce more of their own energy. Wind power, heat pumps, biomass, passive solar systems and the use of alcohols and vegetable oils for machinery are all expected to become significant contributors to energy on the farm in the next few years.

Both propane and natural gas will become more and more vital for crop drying and space heating, with long-range potential as an alternative for tractor fuel.

These are just a few of the energy efficiency and conservation measures that will be available to farmers in the future in their attempts to meet demand and maintain economic security. But even more fuel alternatives will have to be developed as the demand of global food pressures continue.

Stedmans notes 3/4-century of family service

ALDERGROVE - The year 1907 and Brantford, Ontario, saw the birth of Stedmans.

Since the beginning, 75 years ago, Stedmans has grown into one of Canada's largest franchise general merchandise retailers with over 280 stores in rural Canada from coast to coast.

The success of "the family store with that hometown feeling" can be attributed largely to the ongoing efforts to meet the needs of their customers by providing a good selection of quality merchandise at competitive prices with convenient shopping and friendly service.

To celebrate their 75th anniversary, Stedmans is launching a giant sweepstakes event ..... one of the largest consumer promotions ever to be undertaken by a national retailer.

The "It's just the beginning" sweepstakes promotion will commence in February, running for 10 months and will be supported by two "instant win!" promotions in May and September.

Over 500,000 consumer prizes will be given away during the 75th anniversary promotion including:

10 Quasar microwave ovens, a 1982 Oldsmobile Cutlass "Ciera", a two week trip for two people via British Airways to a choice of seven exotic destinations.
