Rotten smell baffles experts

ALDERGROVE - Problem is that the Aldergrove sewage treatment plant has reached capacity far sooner than expected, a consulting engineer told a delegation of volatile Aldergrove citizens at a municipal townhall meeting Monday night.

Bill Hyslop, of Willis, Cunliffe and Tait, had been called upon by council to explain what went wrong at the Aldergrove plant.

He indicated that both he and his colleagues were baffled by what had happened at the treatment plant. But he said the input flow was "much more than you would expect from a municipality this size."

People living near the plant are angry.

The rotten-egg smell of escaping hydrogen sulphite has become too much for them, and they want council to relocate the plant.

They say the smell has been hanging over the neighborhood almost constantly since 1978. Sometimes the odors almost disappear, only to return in full force. And some old time residents say the smell has been there since the plant was first built in 1969.

Delegation spokesman Dennis Trotman urged councilors to "eliminate the sewage plant. It's an eyesore to Aldergrove."

He said the land instead could be used for a park or for recreational purposes.

"The best solution is to relocate," Trotman said. Aldergrove is on the short end of the stick, and it's getting shorter."

Mayor Bill Blair said the odor is caused by overloading of the two aeration lagoons.

Immediate steps already taken towards a short term solution include a decrease in flow and a lowering of the acidity of the lagoons by spraying with lime and possibly with sodium nitrate.

"While the odor is extremely disagreeable, there is no health hazard attached to it in concentrations that may be generated from this source," Blair said.

Council will work to a permanent solution as quickly as possible, he said.

Blair added that "...allegations that the public water supply has been affected are unfounded. Tests conducted by a private firm and separate tests by the health unit have all proven negative and there is no contamination of the public water supply."

Miss PNE for 1982, Aldergrove's Sandi Friesen, shows off her two year-old Hereford cow, Miss Charming and its six month old heifer calf, Justa-Charming. Both are competing in the PNE show.

Gloucester to the rescue

MURRAYVILLE - Ainslie Loretto says she has the solution.

And she was loudly cheered by Aldergrove residents when she made a pitch for "job security, lower taxes, and clean air" at a township council meeting Monday night.

Loretto, a director of Gloucester Properties, said an agreement had been reached between herself and a member of council three years ago, to build a joint sewage treatment plant at the Fraser Industrial Centre designed to serve the town of Aldergrove as well as the proposed industrial park.

Such a plant could easily be built within 15 months, she said, and would not cost the taxpayers any more than it would to upgrade the existing treatment facilities in Aldergrove. As an added feature, it would remove the plant from a heavily built up residential area, Loretto said.

She was applauded by a group of Aldergrove residents who had just delivered a petition to council demanding a solution to the present stench in town.

Loretto asked council to call immediately for a public hearing for rezoning of the Gloucester lands.

"We offered to build a plant, and the offer still stands today," she said. "But we must have zoning first."

Loretto said there would not be an "adequate opportunity for public input" if Gloucester were to proceed further with their development plans before council decided to hold the required public hearing. "I am asking council to not leave the public out," she said.

Councilors referred Loretto's proposal to further discussion by themselves behind closed doors.

From the mouths of babes

MURRAYVILLE - Timing was perfect.

Mayor Bill Blair had just explained to a group of very angry Aldergrove residents that his council had considered the relocation of the Aldergrove sewage treatment plant ... "but, it is only an idea at the present time..."

Then an unidentified six-month-old Aldergrove resident piped in with what sounded like "yeah, yeah, yeah."

When he regained his composure, Blair remarked, "I must say you start them pretty young on heckling in Aldergrove."

FOR WHOM THE BELLS TOLL?

So long, DeJong? rather than 'ding-dong'

PURELY CHICKEN . . . ., SAYS HARRY

MURRAYVILLE - "I apologize. I should never have called him 'ding-dong-DeJong'," said Ald. Ian Strachan. "He has done a wonderful job for Matsqui."

The back-handed eulogy came in the wake of an emotional outburst from Matsqui's mayor, Harry DeJong, at a recent meeting of the Central Fraser Valley regional district board. At the August 19 meeting in the Aldergrove board room DeJong had made reference to earlier comments and name-calling by Strachan. According to a report in the Abbotsford, Sumas and Matsqui News, DeJong was fuming mad when he told other directors that he found "this kind of stuff from the Aldergrove Star and Langley council is purely chickenshit."

The Star had merely reported on what went on at a Langley council meeting on July 26 when Strachan opined that DeJong was "surely committing political suicide." It all had to do with ...what else?...the Gloucester industrial development.

"I couldn't understand him taking such a vehement stand against the Gloucester proposal in the first place," Strachan said this week. "But now I can see why he was so adamant. They have 800 acres of potential industrial land in Matsqui.

"But as one of his citizens (Strachan owns property in Matsqui), I could not understand it. Especially since I have talked to many of my neighbors in that district, and they are all in favor of Gloucester.

"That was why I said he had to be totally out of touch with his constituents."

And then, to round off his latest extravagant praise of Matsqui's mayor, Strachan added, "I should not have said 'ding-dong-DeJong,' but perhaps it should be 'so long, DeJong'."

SPECIALISTS ON THE HIT LIST

Gran to end all grants

MURRAYVILLE - Professional 'grantsmen' will soon be in the soup kitchen lineups in Langley if Ald. Carol Gran has her way.

Gran has served notice of motion for a proposed change in council policy which would do totally away with all municipal grants.

"No grants, period?" asked Ald. Ian Strachan when Gran presented her proposal.

"No grants, period," said Gran.

Strachan said he heartily concurred with his colleague's sentiments.

"We should let the citizens decide where their charities should go," he added.

Ald. Dan Williamson agreed that council's present grants policy is "certainly not very good." He did not comment further on Gran's proposal.

"There will be a lot of discussion when the motion is brought forward," said Mayor Bill Blair.

During the affluent 'seventies colleges taught courses on how to become a 'grants person', i.e. someone who knew the ins and outs of government and how to apply and be reasonably sure of receiving grants, regardless of the intended purpose behind this public subsidy.

Sort of a modern day gun-for-hire.

Local farmgirl chosen Miss PNE

VANCOUVER - 18-year-old Sandi Friesen of Aldergrove remained poised and smiling when it was announced she had won the title of Miss PNE for 1982. The slim, brown-eyed brunette impressed judges with her ability to speak in public and her personal charm and appearance during a busy five-day schedule that prepared 40 representatives from all over British Columbia for the event.

Sandi, who for several years has been very active in 4-H competitions and the B.C. Junior Hereford Association, received some exciting prizes as the new ambassadress of the fair. She was awarded a cheque for $1,000 and a lifetime pass to the fair from PNE president Erwin Swangard, a bouquet of red roses and a kiss from labor minister Bob McClelland, and plenty of good wishes from last year's Miss PNE Devi Brar.

In addition, Sandi received a $500 wardrobe from the PNE, a $1,500 set of encyclopaedias from Encyclopaedia Britannica, and a professional modelling program from the Blanche Macdonald School of Modelling.

Sandi says her hobbies include singing, playing piano and skiing. She is looking forward to a challenging year during which she will act in a public relations capacity at a variety of events in Western Canada as well as host VIPs at next year's PNE. Her reign will provide her with valuable experience for a career in agriculture, she feels.

Jill-Marie Shaw of Langley was chosen as this year's Miss Lady Fair and will assist Miss PNE in fulfilling many of her duties.

Dennis Trotman holds up a glass jar of water poured from the household taps.

Issue of whether or not the water holds potential health hazard remains as cloudy as the content of the jug, Trotman contends.

Officials point out that there is absolutely no inter-connection between domestic water and sewer lines.

According to health inspector Art Bailey, all water samples taken in the area are free from bacteria and "the likelihood of contamination is extremely remote, probably less than one in a million."

Dancing girls are the developer's solution

MURRAYVILLE - "I give up," sighed Ald. Muriel Arnason. "I am going to put dancing girls on my property."

Arnason was the only council member voicing her opposition Monday morning to a rezoning which will allow Peter Soo to operate a convenience store and gas pump at the corner of 96 Avenue and 208 Street. Area is zoned rural residential.

It was Arnason against a solid pro-business vote of council. She lives on a small hobby farm in south Langley.

Ald. Ian Strachan said he wondered where Langley would be today if planners had been allowed to quash a rezoning application from the Hudson's Bay Company at Fort Langley some 150 years ago.

"So we get the bureaucrats in first and then discover America?" he asked.

Prospects not pretty for politicians

By IAN CAMERON

MURRAYVILLE - If you think things are tough today, then you probably wouldn't want to be an elected municipal official looking ahead to the undertainty of 1983.

Like most other institutions, local governments have been experiencing a steady growth in recent years; and politicians - even more so than businessmen - saw no end to prosperity.

Mute testimony can be seen in the vast number of glass-and-brick 'government services centres' that have shot skywards in recent years, housing ambitious political climbers and their retinue of pencil pushers.

But some - if not all - politicians now have come to believe that the time has come to pay the piper.

They are looking ahead, perhaps for the first time ever in their lifetime, with tremulations.

What will 1983 bring?

Costs are soaring. Revenue is shrinking.

"Every dollar we can save is going to be important," said Ald. Mal Harper this week.

The council member pointed out that revenue is down drastically in the building department since new construction and developments have come almost to a standstill.

Department, traditionally one of the revenue makers for the municipality, will likely see its anticipated 1982 revenue slashed to 50 or perhaps 30 percent of what was expected last fall.

And at the same time, said Harper, the housing boom is over. The value of real estate has returned to its 1977 level. This, according to Harper, will mean that taxes collected by the township will take a big dip next year. Unless, of course, the mill rate is increased to as yet unheard of levels.

Canada ranks twelfth in quality of life

PHILADELPHIA - Life is dandy in Denmark and the pits in Ethiopia, with Canada and Switzerland tied for 12th place among countries in quality of life, says a university researcher.

A study completed by Richard Estes, research director at the University of Pennsylvania school of social work, ranks the United States 41st among 107 countries in the survey.

Estes, in his quality-of-life report, includes such factors as health services, literacy, women's rights, political stability, inflation and economic growth.

Estes says the low U.S. ranking is partly due to the fact it has bad luck with earthquakes and volcanos.

Denmark was in first place and Ethiopia was last.

Estes said the U.S. ranking has improved in the last decade, but things are getting worse in the Soviet Union. Behind the US., improvement was the end of the Vietnam War and social unrest of the 1960s.

"The major differences between my index and others is that the others emphasize economic development as an indication of social progress," Estes said.

"That's why the United States always comes on on top. America generally produces wealth in spectacular dimensions.

"But in my index, only four of 44 factors were economic."

PRESENTING FINDINGS

Estes was presenting the findings at the interuniversity consortium for international social development being held in Brighton, England.

In his analysis, the Soviet Union ranked 43rd, two places behind the U.S.

The study examined two periods, 1979-80 and 1969-70. It found the U.S. ranking improved to 41st from 51st. The Soviet Union dropped to 43rd from 31st.

Ten of the top 13 countries were European.

After Denmark, the top dozen countries were: Norway, Austria, the Netherlands, Sweden, New Zealand, Australia, Ireland, Belgium, Finland, West Germany, Canada and Switzerland. Japan was ranked 20th.

The U.S. ranked 22nd among the 24 rich countries Estes compared.

U.S. health and education services are as good as those in Europe, but "the administration of these programs is poor," he said. The disparity between racial minorities and whites, as evidenced by infant mortality rates among minorities, also "pulls the U.S. down."

Another negative factor for the U.S. was the eruption of Mount St. Helens in 1980. Estes said that of the 937 major natural disasters in the world between 1947 and 1979,326 were in the United States.

Estes created a second index eliminating geographic factors. In it, the United States improved to 24th from 41st overall and to 18th from 22nd among the 24 rich countries studied.

IN THE TOP FIVE PERCENT

Valley has rich farm land

By BRENDA DALGLISH

ABBOTSFORD - In British Columbia only five percent of the land is suitable for agriculture and rich farm land is as rare as a vine-ripened tomato in winter.

But the delta soil of the lower Fraser Valley is some of the best in the country and has the additional benefit of a mild climate which allows certain crops to grow almost year round.

Dairy cattle grazing on green rolling pastures, neat rows of fruit and vegetable crops, roadside produce stands and the occasional orchard of flowering fruit trees make the valley's chief industry seem more like pastoral landscaping.

The land feeds the 1.3 million people in the area, which includes Vancouver, but there is little produce left over to export.

The wide, flat valley edged by rugged mountains is also choice development land. As Vancouver continues to sprawl, land becomes more valuable for housing and the farms are threatened.

Farms are getting smaller but with greater efficiency they produce more than ever.

DISLIKE PIGS

Farms already sit next to clumps of suburban development and farmers complain about city people who object to the drift of pig barn smells or the occasional lump of horse manure along the highway.

Farmers remember when Richmond, now a suburb of townhouses and shopping malls just 20 minutes from downtown Vancouver, was covered with fruit and vegetable farms. Sea Island, once acclaimed as the best farm land in the province, now is Vancouver International Airport.

A major turning point in this erosion came 10 years ago when rising land prices attracted foreigh buyers who purchased large tracts of land for speculation, often renting it back to the original owners who used the capital to expand their farm operations.

The New Democratic Party provincial government of the time introduced the agricultural land reserve, which froze all land in agriculture production so it could not be used for any other purpose.

The freeze has not been removed by the current Social Credit government, in spite of strong opposition from farmers, because British Columbians are alarmed at the prospect of running out of food.

Bill Robertson, a dairy farmer whose son Bob works the same land in North Delta that his grandfather bought in 1879, says the concern about the shortage of farmland is an example of a misinformed city mentality.

COULD GROW MORE

"People think they're going to starve but in fact the world is capable of growing many times more food than it does now and a country like Canada has tremendous capability," Robertson said.

Bob Robertson says that if there was a market for it, he could increase the amount of milk his 32-hectare farm produces.

The Robertsons decided to concentrate on the dairy business instead of raising cash crops because dairying is heavily regulated by government and provides a more stable income.

Each of the fruit and vegetable crops has its own marketing system, some more regulated than others, but few have a stable pricing system. Many of the cash-crop farmers don't even know what price they will get for their produce until several weeks after it has been delivered.

In the past, the Chinese operated many of the vegetable farms but in recent years East Indians, thanks to a labor pool including many new immigrants, have gained a substantial share.

Efforts by fledgling unions are showing growing success in organizing workers and, among other reasons, might lead in the future to more mechanization. Already there are machines that can do just about every major farm operation - including such delicate jobs as harvesting raspberries.

But Tom Lowe of the Fraser Valley Milk Producers Association says dairying is the largest industry in the valley.

"I hope that the Fraser Valley never becomes one large parking lot," says Lowe. "If that happens, we are at the mercy of California. Right now California tends to set the price limits on crops.

"It serves no one any good to see a farmer put out of business."

Truckers to bid on contract

MURRAYVILLE - Municipal council has okayed the tendering for a towing contract in Langley district.

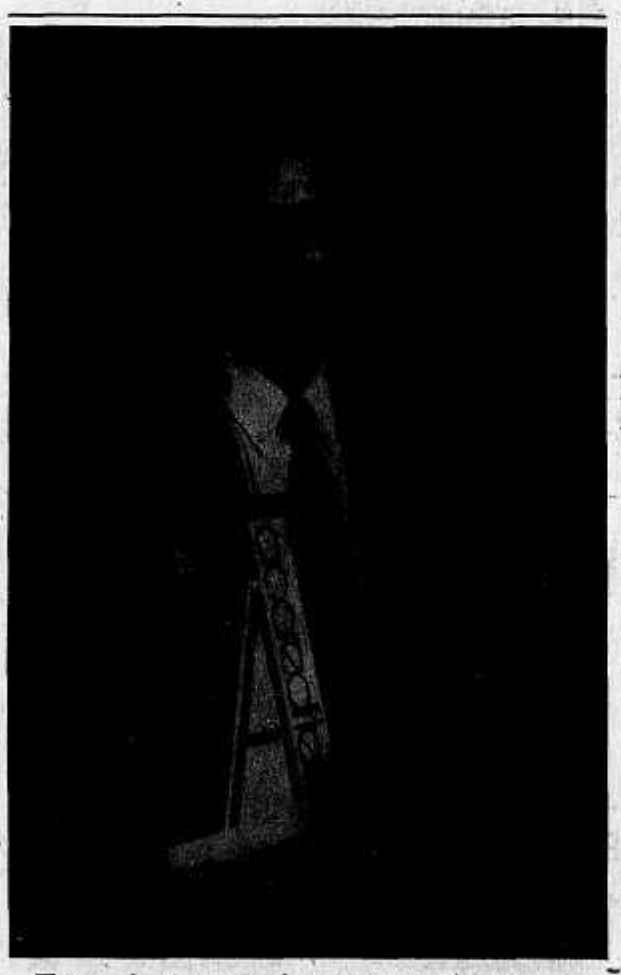
"I sometimes wonder if we should get involved, but I can see that an (police) officer would wonder who to call," said Ald. Ian Strachan.

Strachan believes in letting free enterprise look after most public services.

RCMP inspector Cam Munro told council that it doesn't work to have more than one towing service to look after disabled vehicles. They (the towing companies) don't want it," he said.

"I have asked them, for chrissakes, can't we give a bit of business to everyone? But they don't want it."

Council will call for a one-year contract.



Top photographer Is up in the air

ALDERGROVE - The Aldergrove Photohouse is celebrating six years of business this October, but John and Aveline MacKenzie are also excited about John's recent instalment as one of Canada's ten accredited aerial photographers.

It hasn't been an easy road for John and Aveline. For years photography was just a hobby - six years ago it became their livelihood. Business was slow for the first three years, then through repeated displays of photographic beauty, their business grew and prospered. Weddings, portraits, copy and restoration of old photographs, gave the Aldergrove Photohouse a quality name. Their reputation as fine photographers grew and many people were pleased with their results.

Many certificates, awards, and trophies adorn their studio. Prize winning photos are proudly displayed. John and Aveline relish their accomplishments of photographic beauty, for photography has become their love, and they continue to take courses and attend seminars to upgrade the quality and artistry of their photohouse.

Education in an adult manner

ALDERGROVE - Interested in upgrading your education? Such an opportunity does exist locally. The Work and Learn program operating at Aldergrove high school offers adults (15 years or older) the chance to complete a basic grade 10 (level III) or grade 12 (level IV) equivalency.

"What do you have to offer a prospective employer? Without a minimum level of education your chances of employment dwindle from slim to non-existent. Successful completion of this program can cause a personal increase in value and possibly open up new opportunities in the job market. Think about it and then register on September 8 between 7 and 9 p.m. in the portables at the back of Aldergrove secondary school.

Regular classes begin September 13 and will be held every Monday and Wednesday from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. The cost is $15 a course; $10 of which is refundable. Textbooks and workbooks are provided.

A VAST level III program with morning classe (8:30 a.m. to 11:30 .m.) will begin Monday, September 13.

For those who have yet to complete grade 10 this alternate time may be more convenient. A maximum of 30 students will be accommodated in the morning session.

In addition to teaching instruction the student who registers in either of the Work and Learn sessions will have access to vocational testing and counselling. If you are uncertain about suitable career goals or desire a change in your life schedule, talk to the counsellors in this program. For further information call Dave Coutu at Aldergrove secondary school, 856-2521.

All things quiet ...well almost all

MURRAYVILLE - "Things are reasonably quiet in the (municipal) hall," said Mayor Bill Blair this week. "We don't have any building or development taking place."

This was interpreted by Ald. Elford Nundal as "the staff has a lot of slack time on their hands."

"I didn't say that. I didn't say 'lots'," Blair hastened to say.

Councilors were discussing the possible implementation of a $10,000.00 study by a firm of management consultants who would be looking at the existing filing system and the development of a new 'records management system'.

"I don't think we should spend money at this time," said Ald. Ian Strachan. "This $10,000 study is really the thin edge of the wedge. I would like to see us getting smaller instead of larger."

"Planning will probably do that," suggested Blair.

"A good (filing) system is important," said Ald. Dan Williamson. "It could cut way, way down on paper."

Ald. Muriel Arnason was also opposed to spending money on a study.

"Staff can wait," she said. "I want something for our people."

"Once you get something, it seems there is only one way, towards more and more," said Strachan.

Nundal suggested municipal staff could use some of their "slack time" to conduct the study on their own.

"They might as well do something productive," he said, adding that, "Well, that's a fact."

He did not fail to notice the mayor's frown.

Politicians, dogs and the moon

MURRAYVILLE - It is not only Fraser Valley politicians who have been known to "bark". Dogs do it, too.

As a matter of fact, says Langley district mayor Bill Blair, "...as long as you have dogs and the moon, you are going to have barking."

Baying canines is only one of the many serious problems council members here have to deal with. But it is a recurring dilemma for the stern-faced politicians.

"Well, at least Matsqui said they are not going to do any barking here in Langley," commented Ald. Ian Strachan with reference to recent statements by Matsqui mayor Harry DeJong that he would "not go to Langley municipality to bark."

The two local politicians, both appointed directors to the Central Fraser Valley regional district, have a political feud going between them at the moment.

Business encouraged

MURRAYVILLE - A village concept is good, according to a Langley district alderman.

A place people can "walk to and have their hair done," and perhaps also let it down.

Ald. Ian Strachan told fellow council members here Monday morning that it would be foolish for the municipality to deny a zoning request from a handful of businesses in the Fernridge area, because all it would achieve would be to chase industry out of Langley and into other lower mainland municipalities ready to welcome it with open arms.

Petro Canada, IGA, and Beales Steel, are three of the companies seeking specific site zoning in the southwest Langley community. At present they are operating in the area in a non-conforming way.

Stress managed at seminar

SURREY - What is stress? How can you cope with it? For answers to these questions, there will be a free two-hour stress management seminar at Surrey Centennial library, 15105 - 105 Avenue, (by the Guildford town centre), on Wednesday, September 29 at 7 p.m. There is no charge. Registration is necessary and can be done in person at the library before September 29 or by phone (588-5015).

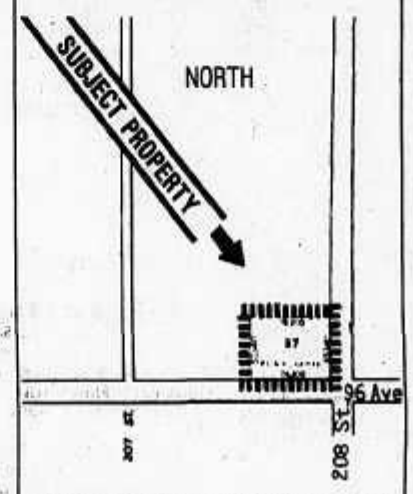
"Langley Zoning By-Law No. 1302 Amendment By-Law 1982" No. 2130

A PUBLIC HEARING will be held in the Council Chambers of the Municipal Hall, 4914 - 221st Street, Langley, B.C. on MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 13th, 1982 at 1:45 p.m.

THE PURPOSE of the Public Hearing is to consider an amendment to the Zoning By-law by changing the zoning of:

Lot 37, District Lot 252, Group 2, Plan 42039, New Westminster District FROM Rural Residential One (RR-1) TO Rural Commercial District Two (CR-2).



THE PROPOSED re-zoning will make the 0.4064 hectare (1 acre) property and its existing convenience store and gas bar a conforming use in respect to its zoning; the subject property is located at 20793 - 96th Avenue being the North West corner of 96th Avenue and 208th Street, Langley, B.C.

ALL PERSONS who deem their interest in property to be affected by the Amendment By-law may attend and be heard.

COPIES OF the By-law may be viewed in the Municipal Hall, Clerk's Department, Monday through Friday, 8:30 A.M. to 4:30 P.M.

Come and meet the "smilingest" salesman you could ever wish for - Joe, Graham and John.

Hippies are now the saviors of all mankind?

By ROBERT SKOGLUND

"College students are nothing but hippy-agitators," said Gramp Wiley. "You can't pick up a paper but what you see them protesting about something."

"Don't knock the hippies," I said. "They're breeding the next generation of conservatives. Some of us consider hippies the saviors of mankind and even send them money to pay their defense lawyers."

Gramp pounded his fist on the arm of his rocker and said some things that weren't nice about people who couldn't see the truth in every situation as easily as he could.

Then he shook his newspaper in my face. "What do people know?" he shouted. "Some soap company mailed out small samples of their new detergent and people put it into drinks just because it has lemon juice in it and has a large picture of a lemon on the bottle. Dozens of them complained to the poison center that drinking dishwashing soap made them sick."

"The company probably hired them to drink it just to get more publicity for the soap," I said. "If I were the president of that company, I'd put some lemon detergent in my own ice tea and then make sure every newspaper reporter in town got a picture of me being rushed to the hospital to have my stomach pumped! When the paper came out the next day, lemon detergent would be on the tip of everyone's tongue."

"Most people just can't see things as clearly as I can," Gramp said, "That stingy Nat Worth bragged to me that he took a day off just so he could take his kid into town to see the parade, but I bet he dressed the kid up in a monkey costume, put a chain on him, and made him run through the crowd with a tin cup collecting change."

"Yesterday you said that Pac Man and Star Wars are subsidized by the Pentagon just to train kids to shoot straight," I said. "I don't know how you think up the things you do."

"A person my age don't need to think," Gramp exclaimed. "We've seen it all. Greensleeves' cousin in Texas kept writing about his $500. a month electric bill, and Greensleeves took what he thought was a hint and sent the poor cousin little packages of food and clothing. I told Greensleeves later that a $500-a-month electric bill is not unusual when you're running electric motors on six oil wells."

"That's why half the world's at war and the other half is worrying about it," I said. "Even friends see things differently. When Uriah Latouche was out fishing with Derek Beal last week he took a drink out of a bottle that was in a brown bag. Derek, who does most of his drinking in private with his curtains pulled down, almost had a fit. 'Don't do that,' he said. 'They've got glasses. They can see you from shore.'

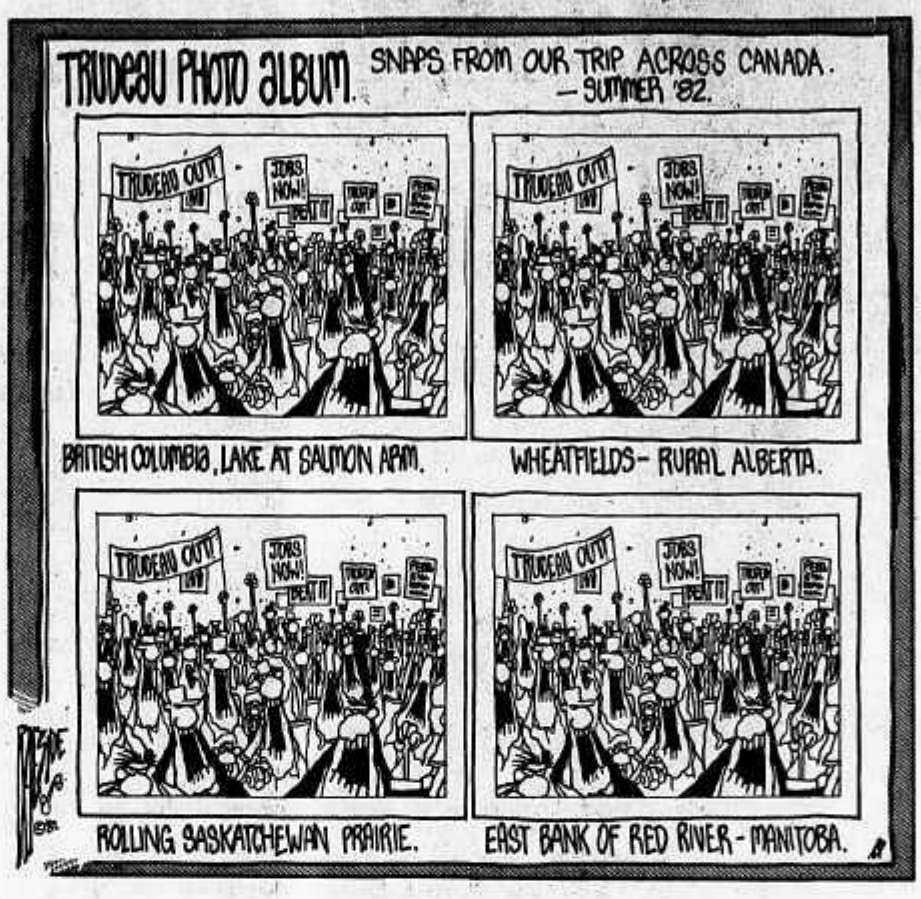
Uriah smacked his lips and hollered, 'Heck with 'em. Let 'em fill their glasses from their own bottle. There's barely enough here for you and me.'"

Gramp Wiley continued to pound his fist on the arm of his rocker. "I'm not at war and I'm not worrying," he shouted. I'm just a reasonable old man who stays home minding his own business, which is pretty remarkable today. I was at the post office this morning when old Mrs. Thistlewood pulled up in her '51 Chrysler. How she got her licence renewed I don't know. It took her five minutes to open her post office box and then it was empty. For the first time in 63 years her weekly paper wasn't in there.

"At first she didn't believe it and just stood there poking her hand in the empty hole. Then she swelled up like a banty rooster and hopped over and lit into the postmaster as if it was his fault. I heard him call the editor of the paper and he had to drop what he was doing and rush one over to her. She wouldn't leave the post office without it. Said after 63 years she wouldn't have known how."

"You're as old as Mrs. Thistlewood," I observed. "Why isn't there anything wrong with you?"

Gramp rubbed a sore spot on his fist and shouted, "I never complain. I keep my own counsel, and I don't let myself get excited about nothing."



Gaseous visions

By BRUCE RAMSEY

With all the bad news floating around today, we certainly do not need an engineer by the name of Robert Craig strolling onto the set.

Mr. Craig has gained the headlines in these tumultuous times by declaring that the Loch Ness monster, Nessie by name, is nothing more than a pine log propelled to the surface by a build-up of natural gas!

Good heavens! That pronouncement sounds like the blitherings of our politicians trying to explain why the economy has gone to the dogs.

Listen to what Engineer Craig said: "The gas would make the log rise to the surface for another "Nessie sighting". The gas then would be expelled and the log would sink again, to rise at some later day when the gas has built up again."

(We reserve comment on the fact that both the House of Commons and the Legislative Assembly of the province of British Columbia have taken a break but will rise again in the fall.) -Sparwood Free Press

Change is shocking

When it comes to change, the difference between us and our ancestors is that we know more about it, and are thus more sensitive to it. In 1805, it took six weeks for word of Nelson's victory at Trafalgar to reach Montreal. Now the news of an armed skirmish somewhere in the Middle East is flashed around the world in a matter of seconds.

Fifty years after the invention of the storage battery in 1798, only a handful of scientists had any idea of what a storage battery was. Today a ten-year-old can tell you all about laser beams or micro-circuitry.

Beneficial change is easy to take - so easy that we barely notice it. We have difficulty, however, in accepting changes that inconvenience us in any way.

A generally favorable opinion of technological change prevailed through good times and bad for more than a century. And indeed - excepting its destructive role in the two world wars - technology did bring to the common people of the industrialized world a degree of material comfort, convenience, prosperity and enlightenment undreamt-of in generations past.

Then, almost exactly 20 years ago, a tidal wave of social change swept the western world, threatening to smash everything in its path. All the tried and true social structures - marriage, the family, law and order, established religion, the work ethic, the democratic political system - came under attack by disillusioned young people, following leaders who were not so young.

Victims of future shock, wrote Toffler (author of "Future Shock", published in 1970), attempt to hide away from change in different ways. They may 'block out' unwelcome reality and refuse to take in new information; they may look for a simple solution of all the world's ills in a single doctrine; they may withdraw into a cocoon of specialization; or they may turn their minds back to an earlier and less troublesome time, and try to apply the solution of the past to the problems of today.

This last course, he implies, is the most self-defeating of all, not only because old solutions won't work, but because they will only compound the agony of adjusting to any entirely new phase of history. For, he declared, 'we are creating a new society. Not an extended, larger-than-life version of our present society. But a new society. Unless we understand this, we shall destroy ourselves in trying to cope with tomorrow.'

With these apocalyptic words, Toffler challenged the traditional wisdom about change, which is more or less summed up in the old saying that "history repeats itself." He served notice that there could be no looking back for the guidance and comfort of precedents. By the time he was ready to publish "The Third Wave" in 1980, he was convinced that we have entered not only a new society, but a whole new civilization - one that 'blind men everywhere are trying to suppress.'

By making imaginative use of change to channel change, we can not only spare ourselves the trauma of future shock, we can reach out and humanize future tomorrows,' wrote Toffler. We now have it in our power to anticipate change or to resist it. Which shall we choose?

The prospect of a new civilization comes almost as a relief - a sure way out of what looks like an insoluble mess socially, economically, politically, etc., etc.

If Toffler's words are correct, individuals have a choice to make - to resist, suppress, or attempt to avoid change, or to participate in it.

If change of such magnitude is on its way, pretending that it isn't happening will have negligible effect on the overall movement of events.

The benefit of a debt

By STEPHEN KAWAMOTO

Well, in Canada there's one bright light on the horizon. Our national debt may be keeping us from the dark edge of despair. We have seen layoffs due to the recession add to the ranks of the unemployed, a few of them even treading the poverty line. But luckily, no depression.

Meanwhile, a few lucky businessmen are prospering slightly as inflation rises. Yet, salaried employees and people on fixed income cannot keep up with the rising prices. And the national debt keeps those prices up.

So, it appears that national debt and inflation have struck an uneasy bargain. From our viewpoint we find it nearly impossible to imagine a workable solution to the whole mess, much less one at six percent. Especially considering the recent government examples, both federally and provincially.

Still, we have been in the dark about our economy too long. For that bright light on the horizon is suddenly blinding. It will take some time getting used to the idea of any benefit in debt, national, or local. Though, we will get by.

As for now, could somebody please turn out the light?

Canadian drivers have poor image in U.S.

The following letter to the editor of the Lynden, Wash. Tribune outlines what the writer, and perhaps many other Americans as well, thinks of the Canadian motorist.

Lynden resident Ferdinand Joosten says we just don't obey laws in this country. Perhaps he's got a point there?

Regardless, many Canadian drivers travelling in Washington state contribute heavily to various county and city budgets through fines imposed by state highway patrolmen and deputy sheriffs.

Whenever they stop a motorist for speeding, he or she is almost always invariably a Canadian.

But here is what Joosten has to say:

"Your column of July 14 contained a mention, under "Speed Traps", that it is frequently noticed that many speeding trucks and cars bear Canadian license plates where speed limits are higher."

"Not necessarily so. The speed limits in Canada are 80 km or 50 mph, for the major highways. Only the Trans-Canada Highway on the divided section from just west of Chilliwack to just east of the Port Mann Bridge is 100 km or 60 mph. The side roads are 60 km or 35 mph; the roads through towns and villages are 50 km or 30 mph, and near schools it is 30 km or 18 mph. Abbotsford Airport roads are all 40 km or 25 mph, and 30 km or 18 mph. Road construction is 20 km or 10 mph.

"Canadians as a rule, do not obey their traffic and other laws. And if they get caught, they run to their minister of the legislative assembly or their member of parliament, to get the "offending" officer of the police, a severe reprimand. Most police officers do no seem to bother anymore, as speeding does not seem to be a crime in Canada.

"I recall the letter to the editor, a number of years ago, in which a Canadian driver bitterly complained about the "treatment he received" from the local Lynden police, for driving faster than the allowed speed limit on Main Street. He was "arrested and taken to jail, while his wife was left in the car." Apparently, the Canadians did not carry U.S. funds with them, and were of the wrong opinion, that their "Canadian funds would be valid anywhere in the world." Had he obeyed the posted speed signs, he would have been able to drive in Lynden, without being subjected to "discomfort in jail".

"However, many good citizens of the U.S., also seem to have a disregard for their own speed laws, and there are many living in Lynden. I have been told by many of my acquaintances on both sides of the border, that I am driving too slow, because I drive according to the conditions of the road, and the speed-signs. I have found, that I have a better gas-mileage and have to refuel less frequently on any given trip, which in turn saves me a lot of money, and I arrive relaxed at my destination."

What's wrong with system?

By ROGER WORTH

Canadian trade union leaders argue vehemently that government workers are not using the powerful strike weapon to win settlements that exceed those in the private sector.

Yet there is a growing amount of hard evidence that suggests otherwise.

Consider what's happening.

In the first three months of this year (latest figures available), public sector workers in Canada won increases that averaged 12.4 percent per year. Settlements in the private sector, on the other hand, averaged only 9.7 percent, almost three percentage points less than the civil servants.

By comparison, U.S. public servants, who don't have the right to strike, won increases of only 4.8 percent last year, and 5 percent in 1980.

It's true, the inflation rate in that country is much less than it is in Canada, but at least civil service increases are below those awarded to workers in the private sector.

What's important is that we've somehow developed a system in Canada where the cart appears to be attempting to pull the horse, an impossibility at the best of times.

The nation's relatively untrained postal workers, for instance, are paid about $25,000 per year, while many skilled tradesmen employed by the private sector earn much less. The differential is even more significant in slow growth regions.

The problem, of course, revolves around the public sector right to strike, and the concomitant overwhelming power to shut down major parts of the economy.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Pleasing – except for delivery date

Editor, The Star, Sir,

First of all I would like to congratulate your staff on a very informative newspaper.

We first subscribed to it to get the McClary stock report but find your variety of news coverage gives us a better idea of coast news than the bigger dailies.

I have also purchased items through your classified section and have been pleased with the quality.

In fact the only thing about your newspaper that does not please me is the delivery time. I have today (Aug. 18) received my July 14 edition. This is about average time. The quickest delivery was 2½ weeks after publication, although last week I received a mid-June issue.

Such service in today's economic troubled times is mind boggling. Since no private enterprise could survive offering such rotten value I can only assume the fault lies at the door of the post office.

To whom should I address my complaint? My local MP? The postmaster-general? With the cost of postage I wouldn't want to send it to too many departments.

The shoe's on the other foot

Editor, The Star, Sir,

Bradner residents should be somewhat concerned over the Gloucester Properties Fraser Industrial Park plan to put a sewer plant in their development which they say will take care of all of Aldergrove's sewage:

July 17, 1982 Columbian

"Also under discussion with the municipality is a re-routing of sewage from Aldergrove to a sewage plant to be established on the Gloucester site.

The trouble-plagued Aldergrove sewage plant would then close, Loretto said.

She said the Gloucester sewage plant would be designed to cope with Aldergrove's future needs as well as Gloucester's".

If one has travelled near the Aldergrove Safeway recently, a distinct stench can be frequently detected in the air from Aldergrove's present sewage plant. Not much to look forward to for many of us Bradner residents who are already concerned with the future noise and traffic pollution, etc., which will result from the proposed development.

We feel that it's rather hypocritical for some members of Langley district council to be up in arms over a Surrey dump being located near the Langley border.

May, 1982 Vancouver Sun

"Council agreed that the district should consult its lawyers to see if the burning of debris can be halted.

Blair said he plans to send the ministry a map of Langley pointing out paths of prevailing winds and population centres.

Arnason said she will get the community mobilized against the plan. 'We have to let Surrey and everyone else know we strongly disapprove of the dump'."

When the shoe's on the other foot one does not hear Langley council showing any concern whatsoever in allowing another sewer plant to be located near Matsqui's border.

Mr. and Mrs. Terry Allen St. Onge [nee Margaret Johnsen]

Johnsen-St. Onge wed

ALDERGROVE -Guests came from Alberta and B.C. to witness the marriage bond between Margaret Eilenor Johnsen of Aldgrove and Terry Allen St. Onge of Kamloops.

Rev. H. Paul Schmidt officiated at Saturday, August 14 wedding in Immanuel Lutheran church.

The bride wore a gown of organza over taffeta and chantilly lace. Lace trimmed bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline seeded with pearls, full bishop sleeves and tight band cuffs. A raced semi-empire waistline held the lace trimmed A line skirt forming a full laced circle entrain. Her veil was floor length. Bridal bouquet was formed of blue daisies, white carnations and red roses.

Bride is the daugher of Mr. and Mrs. Irvan Johnsen of Duncan Avenue.

Matron of honor was the bride's sister, Mary Shirk of Kamloops, who carried a bouquet of blue daisies and white carnations.

Bridesmaids Irma Regier and Ronda Russell wore light blue gowns and carried white daisies.

Flower girls Leah and Colleen Boynton were dressed in pale yellow gowns and carried baskets of blue daisies.

Grant Friesen of Kamloops was the groom's best man.

Shawn McArthur carried the rings. Ushers were George and Edward Johnsen, and George also acted as master of ceremonies. Kathy Johnsen looked after the guest book.

Out of town guests included the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gus St. Onge of Andrew, Alberta, Mr. and Mrs. Gary St. Onge of Likely, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Friesen of Kamloops, Mr. and Mrs. D. Davies of Surrey, and the bride's grandmother, Eva Davies of Burnaby.

The newlyweds will live in Andrew, Alberta.

Political philosophies suffer from stagnation

By WILF BANGERT

Our gradually faltering economic fortunes are regarded by most people as an inescapable aspect of the eternally recurring boom-and-bust cycle of the North American economy, and they reason that, as surely as the sun will rise tomorrow, another boom should be just around the corner.

Little do these people realize that current events may be the first visible hint of deeper, as yet unrecognizable forces that may herald the ultimate demise of society as we know it, along with affluent living, annual pay raises and indexed pensions.

No, the world is not coming to and end, but present-day society, with all its political, economic and social institutions, may be doomed. For decades, we have been living in a world of fantasy, surrendering all common sense to a plethora of unrealistic desires, demands and aspirations. And we have neglected the very people who made our dreams possible: the farmers, the miners, the loggers and the tradesmen.

But we have favored the non-producers: the bureaucrats, the speculators, the middlemen and a veritable host of parasites who, under the guise of "need", have for years been mooching on the life blood of the nation.

Now the bills are coming in, and we realize that we cannot pay - we are bankrupt! We are bankrupt not only economically, but also morally, ideologically and politically. We have become, permissive, soft, mealy-mouthed and weak. Our system of education is a costly blunder, our penal system a sad joke. Cradle-to-grave security has become an article of faith, achievement a dirty word.

Our political institutions are failing us increasingly: venerable though they may be, they are, after all, centuries old and cannot do justice to this age, just as a factory couldn't possibly function with centuries-old machinery.

A totally new and different age may now be dawning, an age many now living will not understand, or like. But we shall have to come to terms with it.

Inexperienced occupy highest positions

Science, the most consistent and vigorous component in the entire area of human endeavor, has completely left behind any other attempt by man to achieve excellence. Such is particularly true in regard to politics; there we have the unique phenomenon of people totally devoid of relevant training or experience occupying the highest positions society has to offer.

While science scrupulously obeys the law of continuity, party politics is completely unaware of this natural law, and therefore appears as anachronistic as witchcraft and alchemy. Continuity means gradual yet definite change at all times.

Sudden change, such as a natural cataclysm, or a political revolution, is always catastrophic, and inimical to life. Lack of change, however, means atrophy and stagnation. Thus, continuity represents the fluidly meandering path along which life manifests itself to its greatest advantage.

Our current political philosophies, being at odds with the law of continuity, all suffer from abysmal stagnation; the political parties representing them are antiquated structures unable to meet the very special demands of this age, in the unfolding story of man.

Is there nothing else? Nothing to do justice to this potentially greatest of ages? Nothing to capture and to articulate its spirit? Nothing far more heroic and noble than either capitalism or socialism?

Totally new system needed

We require a totally new system, a totally new method of running our affairs, a non-political system if at all possible, one seeking out the very best people in their respective fields; a system rewarding the best traits, the highest aspirations, the greatest kindness in man.

Party politics has debased public office through corruption, patronage and dishonesty. It has also had a negative effect on civic unity, inciting irrational passions and loyalties in otherwise reasonable people. Above all, politicians have been too self-centred, dull-witted and insensitive. And, being snugly ensconced in party doctrine, they fail to comprehend the demands of our time even remotely.

The parties representing capitalism are completely unimaginative and unresponsive when faced with fresh developments that lie outside the realm of monetary manipulation. The socialists, on the other side, delude themselves into believeing that their ideology alone is sufficiently broad, modern and relevant to deal effectively with any new situation as it arises.

Little do they know how deeply they are trapped in the morass of their out-dated and debilitating philosophy.

In a workable new system every plan, law or course of action should be answerable to these three criteria: necessity, feasibility and desirability. Any endeavor affirmative to all three would be deemed to be beyond reproach. Singly, or in pairs, these criteria could spell disaster.

Without desirability, tyranny could result; without necessity, a dissipated and degenerate society might evolve; and without feasibility, total bankruptcy would be the inescapable outcome. As a triple unit, however, the three criteria will be found to be a foolproof means of replacing permissiveness with discipline, corruption and integrity, wastefulness with thrift, and international suspicion with honest rapproachement.

Thus, the most important aspect of our earthly striving - the way we govern ourselves - has yet to break into the 20th century. The absolute inadequacy of present-day political workings is widely recognized. But where is the extraordinary personage to come forward and articulate the spirit of a dawning age? Where is the herald of a non-political future?

Mankind has to break molds

Mankind simply has to break the old molds, discard the antiquated patterns of a former age. Already, governments are becoming irrelevant, with steadily diminishing dialogue between rulers and ruled. As the new spirit makes its presence felt governments will become increasingly autocratic, a natural reaction to the threat of their own redundancy.

But history unfolds as it must, and new structures will come into being - quite gradully, unobtrusively, as the law of continuity demands. Man will effect the coming changes intuitively, for goals and directions are not yet discernible to him.

They will materialize from the mists of time. Stagnation will be broken, and mankind will be on the move again - into a dawn that once again holds promise!

ALDERGROVE O.A.P.O. NEWS

Meeting set for Friday

By ERNEST CLUETT

ALDERGROVE - You are asked to remember the first fall meeting of the pensioners on Friday, September 3 at 1:30 p.m. Please attend as several important problems need your opinions.

First choral group practice will be on Monday, September 13 at 7:30. The bridge club will be switching from Fridays to Thursday evenings, which will leave all but one Friday vacant for the pensioners' pleasure. It is hoped to put on a fair in the hall displaying the handicrafts of members and perhaps a date can be set at the next meeting. Perhaps you would like the idea of a monthly "flea market" enabling you to obtain handicraft and other Xmas presents. We need your ideas, so show up at the September meeting.

Bill Allen is confined to home recovering from his operation, but hopes to be around in a couple of weeks. Susan Corbet is still in hospital. Her recovery to health seems very slow.

Two of our members, Clarence and Lillian Jeffrey will be celebrating their 60th wedding anniversary in January, and also in January, Art and Dolly Cross will celebrate their 50th.

According to "Stats Canada", I read that all the inflation problems can be laid at the door of the federal government with their wild and irresponsible spending of our money and their firm belief that what they couldn't get out of the taxpayer could very easily be borrowed to pay the bills. There should be some way politicians and the senior civil service could be made responsible in the years to come for their own mismanagement. Provincial governments could then be treated the same way.

There seems to be a real worry in the early 50-year-old class of workers that when they reach retirement age there will be no money available to pay ...A North Vancouver school trustee is advocating that the B.C. government go out and borrow money to pay the increases in the teachers contracts which means in all fairness that John Fryer's BCGEU should have all they ask for. So every other union would insist on the same treatment...The head of the Canadian Labor Congress now insists on the federal government borrowing to meet union demands, the repayment of these borrowings would fall on the average taxpayers' shoulders for years to come... It all adds up to the inescapable conclusion that some union leaders want more and more for their members and have no though at all for their fellow Canadians who would have to foot the bill. Doubtless all bankrupt businesses will, according to this thinking, have to be kept in operation by massive subsidies of borrowed money in order to keep labor employed. So the borrowings will multiply until the credit runs out and then what?

The dance, with emcee George Armstrong drew a large crowd. Door prize went to Georgina Emerton and the spot prize to Addie Baker and Jim Patten. Visitors were Pat Rouse from England, Doris Neilson of Surrey and Eileen Raffey, Peter VanDyke and Irene Blades from White Rock. The birthdays of Mary Sanderson and John Sereduck were suitably celebrated.

Doris says, when she was sixteen she spent half an hour per day in front of the mirror with makeup trying to look like she was 21. Now, at 70 she spends two hours per day trying to look the same.

Mr. & Mrs. James Edward Dial [nee Elizabeth Margeret Norton]

Norton-Dial wed

ALDERGROVE - Immanuel Lutheran church here was the scene of a wedding ceremony on Saturday, Aug. 21 that saw Elizabeth Margaret Norton become the bride of James Edward Dial of Parksville. Rev. Paul Schmidt performed the nuptials.

Bride wore a white satin gown trimmed with lace flowers and featuring a high lace collar, full length train and white tulle veil with a lace flower crown. She was given away in marriage by Norman Hrynkin.

Honor attendant Theresa Norton wore a floor length blue gown and jacket trimmed with lace. Bridesmaid Diane Anderson wore a floor length yellow princess style gown also trimmed with lace.

Mother of the bride, Pearl Norton, had chosen a mid-length sundress in white with multi-colored feathers and a sleeveless lace trimmed jacket.

The mother of the groom, Margaret Dial, wore a sundress with orange, purple and yellow flower arrangement and a chiffon over dress.

Junior attendant Starlene Azyan was wearing a floor length pink gown with lace on the bodice and a high neck collar.

Ted Caplette was the best man.

Steve Norton and Rockie Hrynkiw were the ushers and lit the candles.

Pay as we say or else

MURRAYVILLE - Councilors here have unanimously approved a lease arrangement with the Langley curling club for the use of the rink at the Brookswood civic center.

Club has not yet accepted the terms.

Township wants payment of $18,629.00 for the entire 1982-83 season, with 57 percent of this amount payable by October 30, and the balance by April 30, 1983. That is the minimum required to operate the center on a break-even basis, according to council's recreation committee.

If terms are not acceptable to the club, then the municipality is prepared to step in and take over the operation of the rink, according to council.

This would mean an increase in user rates, which might happen in any instance.

Rates are now considerably less than Langley's two closest competitors, Cloverdale and Coquitlam, says recreation director Darch Oborns. Center could still operate without a loss if rates were increased to a level where they would be "no more and no less" than the other rinks, Oborne says.

This Week in Canada

On September 3, in 1939, Britain and France declared war on Germany, and in 1962, the Trans-Canada Highway was officially opened.

Carpenter win three in a row at bridge club

Ed Carpenter managed to come first again last Friday which makes it 3 weeks in a row. He must do something right, eh? Wilf Wood was a close second though. Keep it up, Wilf. It looks like we will be playing every week from now on though it will not always be on Fridays. The second week will be on Thursday. We start at 7:30 and we play in the OAP hall at 273 Street and Fraser Highway. Everybody is welcome.

The fifth annual summer camp for the mentally handicapped got underway at McLean Scout camp Friday. The camp is put on each year by Aldergroves Sunshine Club and is the only recreational opportunity for most of those attending. The Sunshine Club is totally dependant on local residents, businesses and service clubs for their continuous support. Throughout the year the club provides a social training program as well as unofficial counseling and advisory service to the mentally handicapped.

Heavyweight is here

VANCOUVER - Heavyweight, world ranked Scott LeDoux will be arriving Air Canada, Flight No. 245 at 3:10 p.m. Wednesday, August 25.

Interest is running high for this fight. Most experts expect it to go the distance. A turnaway crowd is expected and speculation has it that this fight could be one of the most entertaining and exciting matches ever, in the heavyweight division. Both fighters realize a loss will devastate their career and as a consequence any future hopes at a title shot. Both are confident of a September 23 victory.

Recreation looking for instructors

MURRAYVILLE - Langley township is accepting applications from individuals wishing part time employment in the recreation department as instructors or supervisors in its fall 1982, winter 1983 and spring 1983 program.

People with special qualifications or skills in babysitting, arts and crafts, aquatics, fitness, sports, preschool, disabled and special interest classes are invited to fill out application forms indicating their abilities.

Applications are available at the municipal hall at 4914 - 221 Street.

FOR SEASON OPENER

Eagles host ex-Langley Lords

LANGLEY - This Sunday evening the Langley Eagles will open the hockey season with the annual exhibition game of the Eagle rookies vs the ex-Langley Lords.

With over 80 eager rookies currently competing for a slot on the Eagles, the play promises to be high spirited and in dead ernest. Head coach Gil Lundihn expects to make a cut before Sunday to bring the number of hopefuls to 30. The selected 30 will be giving it their best as only 19 players will remain by the end of December.

Lundihn is excited with the prospect and potential of the rookies and has great hopes for this season's club.

With many ex-Lords expected to be dressed for Sunday evening's game, the young rookies will have their work picked out for them. Will youth triumph over experience? Only the fans will know.

With a general admission of $2.00 this game will be the best entertainment value of the year. Sunday evening, 7 p.m. at Langley Civic Arena the Langley Eagles will meet the ex-Langley Lords in the hockey game of the year.

Come out and support the rookies as they give it their best and just maybe the ex-Lords might need all the help you can give them.

Concerts and more in the works

THE LAUREL STREET ARTS CENTER needs more volunteers to assist them in many areas. If you are interested in any of the following please call and volunteer (even if it's only a few hours):---plumbing, carpentry, painting, ushering, concessions, box office, typing, promotion, publicity, set building, on stage production work---and many more interesting diversions to the normal work day.

The Laurel Street Arts Centre is preparing a community concert series for the center, using local talent as well as professional. If you are interested in auditioning for the series please call the Arts Center for an appointment. We will be sending out a brochure very shortly, make sure you are on the mailing list by calling 853-ARTS (2787). The series will include pianists, vocalists, choral music, chamber music and other interesting performers. The Laurel Street Arts Center lends itself to this area of performance, because of its excellent accoustics, its intimate surroundings for the audience and its downtown location. So, there is a lot happening at the Laurel Street Arts Center, it's there waiting for you to get involved.....so call 852-ARTS (2787) and get involved and have fun!

Sheep show a family tradition

VANCOUVER - PNE's sheep show which finished up three days of competition on Tuesday, August 24, is something of a family tradition among B.C. breeders.

Don Jones of Wild Country Dorsets of Mt. Lehman, in his fourth year of showing at the PNE, won grand champion Forset ram, with an animal which brought a record $2,000 at the national sheep sale in Brandon, Manitoba in June 1981. Its son won the 'ram lamb' class. Don also walked away with a grand championship ewe and a reserve championship ram.

Even the judge, Roy Mouritsen, who has been well known as a breeder of Suffolks and Hampshires in Vanderhoof since the 1950s, brought a family feeling to the show. He had his wife and tenth child, three month old baby boy Boyd, with him.

Jones and Judy Thom of Wild Country won a total of four first placings, three fourths and one fifth.

Film to be shot in Langley

MURRAYVILLE - Hollywood is coming to Langley.

A Los Angeles movie production company, Leprechaun Inc., has proposed to shoot a full length comedy-adventure drama in Langley and will be using a local racetrack and several municipal roads for the action.

Movie will be called 'The last race.'

"There is money to be made in pictures," producer Michael O'Donnell told council members here Monday night.

Movie will cost about 1.5-million to produce, and a portion of the box office receipts will go to raise money for Langley's Action Raceways, O'Donnell said.

Action, located in a corner of the Campbell Valley wilderness park, has been evicted by the Greater Vancouver regional parks board at the end of this year.

Fund raising effort will help the racetrack relocate, according to O'Donnell.

Councilors were receptive to the idea, although Ald. Carol Gran pointed out that it couldn't be all that easy to close off seven Langley streets for action filming.

They withheld their blessing until after they have discussed the venture at a closed meeting.

"Langley could become known as the Hollywood of the north," suggested a pleased Mayor Bill Blair.

Californian company will be hiring local people for crowd scenes in the movie.

Props needed

Abbotsford Little Theatre needs a rattan chair and sofa for it's upcoming production of Neil Simon's "I Ought To Be In Pictures" at the Laurel Street Arts Centre. It has to be used looking and needs matching end tables and a coffee table. If you have any furniture you think may be what they are looking for, please call the Arts Centre at 852-2787. Stage Manager Sandy Yeats is also looking for additional backstage helpers, so if you are interested in helping on the crew as a carpenter, set painter, assistant stage manager let the Arts Center know by calling them at 852-2787.

ALBUM REVIEW

Melanie and Nelson releases are cream

ARABESQUE
MELANIE
(Big Time-PolyGram)

I was prepared to write Melanie Safka off, as 'just another flower child' singing about the tribulations of growing up worrying about joining the ranks of the unemployed, etc. but this record is not at all that boring or stupid. And while I don't generally care for the vibrato of vocalists such as Glenn Yarbrough, Melanie's voice, like Buffy St. Marie's, is seductive and highly attractive. Each time I hear "Arabesque" I enjoy it more and more.

This is due mainly to the variety of songs, the interesting arrangements, and her approach to the songs.

The straight-forward country treatment of Michael McDonald's "It Don't Matter Now" suits her voice eminently, as does her Paul Simon-style treatment of Liberty DeVito's "Fooling Yourself." A Cathy Evans song, "Imaginary Heroes" is a touching story of a child's dreams. Melanie also does one of the best covers of "Any Way That You Want Me" that I've heard.

The best songs are still the ones she wrote with her producer and husband, Peter Schekeryk. "Love You To Loath Me" is a very funny parody of the dross love songs we've all become so sick of hearing, but under this surface is a hefty rock ballad complete with the sort of stinging guitar Big Brother and The Holding Co. would have supplied for the late Janis Joplin.

"When You're Dead And Gone," with Melanie's yodel, is almost as off-the-wall as her old hit, "Brand New Key". The title may appear morbid, but it could well be the most popular song on the album thanks to its whimsical spirit and wit.

The three other original songs, "Standing On The Other Side", "Too Late" and "Roadburn" are also exceptional. Overall, "Arabesque" is a superior and highly recommended album - one which goes beyond the trends and will sound good anytime. (9)

LEXICON OF LOVE
ABC
(Neutron-Polygram)

Aside from having the best artwork and concept in packaging that I've seen this year, ABC offers three of the better electro-pop songs currently available, "Poison Arrow", "Tears Are Not Enough" and "The Look Of Love". The dance clubs which enjoyed so much success with the Human League singles may get even further mileage out of ABC.

Singer Martin Fry is a much more exciting and interesting vocalist than those of the other Sheffield-area bands like the League and Heaven 17. The more traditional sounds of electric bass, guitar and drums are emphasizing more than the synthesizers, and Stephen Singleton's alto and tenor saxophones are an additional highlight. (6)

CUPID'S IN FASHION
AVERAGE WHITE BAND
(Arista-PolyGram)

Limp, lame and without any redeeming quality. To paraphrase one of their early, great hits, this one doesn't cut the cake...or mustard. (0)

THE LORDS OF THE NEW CHURCH
(I.R.S.-A&M)

The Lords are a basic power trio with a lead vocalist, Stiv Bator, and as such don't offer much of anything new. Matter of fact, the best cut is a cover of the psychedelic oldie, "Question Of Temperature".

Lyric-wise their hearts and minds may be centered on important issues, but their words are awkward and self-righteous. The Lords have made an inauspicious debut, to say the least. (3)

THE LOVE THAT WHIRLS
BILL NELSON
(Passport-A&M)

Nelson, the genius behind the now disbanded Be-Bop Deluxe and Red Noise has been busy producing records for the likes of A Flock Of Seagulls and the Skids in recent years, and "The Love That Whirls" is the first new vocal recording he's made in three years. Included in the jacket is another album, "La Belle Et La Bete", a soundtrack he composed for the Yorkshire Actors Co. production of Jean Cocteau's classic 1946 film. Otherwise known as "The Beauty and The Beast", this record comes complete with scenario printed on the sleeve.

Although Nelson is a fine guitarist, these recordings feature Nelson only on synthesizers. Nelson plays all the instruments too; possibly because of his dissatisfaction with sidemen in the early Be-Bop days he's decided to keep in total control of his recordings.

Nelson conjures some interesting sounds - the piano instrumental, "Portrait Of Jan With Flowers" is pretty as the synthesized "The Crystal Escalator In The Palace Of God Department Store" is other-worldly. Curious lyrics and amusing titles round out an entertaining double-album. (8)

"Thoroly-good" but "bad to the bone"

George Thorogood brings his high-energy rocking blues show, appropriately named the Destroyers back to Vancouver, Thursday evening, after a too-absence. Their last appearance, a standing room only Commodore show, was a raucous, joyous show of rock standards at its most basic and stunning.

Thorogood alternately coaxes a sweet slide melody and hammers out Chuck Berry-style riffs on his vintage Gibson ES125 guitar, as he duck-walks, dances and leaps about on and off stage. He is pure showman, but he has the driving music under full control at all times. He has an amazing non-stop energy, linked to his athletic nature and aversion to drugs.

In addition to fronting a highly successful band, Thorogood, and the other three Destroyers are also members of their hometown semi-pro ball team, the Delaware Destroyers. The band has been taking every summer off the road in May for the baseball season, although their continuing and growing success as a concert act may put a stop to this. They were chosen by the Rolling Stones as an opening act for 23 dates in Europe and North American, and the Destroyers also made headlines with their grueling "50 states in 50 days" marathon tour. They played a different state every single night, traveling as they did in their early days - driving a Checker cab up to 400 miles every day and performing a two hour show every night.

The relentless, metronome-perfect rhythm section comprises bassist Billy Blough and drummer Jeff Simon. The line-up was augmented by saxophonist Hank Carter last year, and he appears on their fourth album, "Bad To The Bone." Attuned to, and sympathetic with Thorogood's flashing guitar, The Destroyers together create an original, individual style. Although the band writes few new songs - according to Thorogood there's no need to, because Elmore James, Chuck Berry, etc. have written them all already - it's the essence of a song that determines if it works for The Destroyers. Two of their best-known songs are "Move It On Over" and "Cocaine Blues", songs written by country artists Hank Williams and Johnny Cash respectively, which bear little resemblance to the originals.

Ounce for ounce, no other band can match The Destroyers for buoyant, bouncing energy and good times. As Charles M. Young once wrote in Rolling Stone, "If Thorogood gave off any more energy, the government would lock him in a lead barrel and dump him off the coast of New Jersey." Tickets for the September 2 Kerrisdale Arena show are available at VTC-Eaton's and CBO-Woodward's.

"Pirate Movie" is a dream

Washed ashore on a small island in the South Seas after capsizing her boat, lovelorn Mabel, abandoned by her girlfriends who have sailed off with the boy of her dreams, lies unconscious on the sand.

Suddenly she sees lofty sails appearing on the horizon. Flying the mast are a black skull and crossbones. And manning the decks are a crew of cutthroats, reveling over a routing of rival rogues--in three part harmony.

Kristy McNichol is Mabel and Christopher Atkins is Frederic her amorous apprentice pirate, in the swashbuckling musical-adventure "The Pirate Movie", a 20th Century-Fox release of a David Joseph Presentation, filmed on location in Australia by director Ken Annakin.

The story is structured as a long dream, set up and resolved by contemporary sequences at the beginning and end. These parenthetical sequences establish Kristy as Mabel, a plain-looking teenager, taunted by her more attractive and socially assertive peers. She meets and falls for Chris but any chance for a real-life romance between them is thwarted by her girlfriends. When they leave her on the dock and sail off with him in his cozy yacht, Mabel pursues them in a small motorboat which capsizes near a deserted island.

The tides carry her safely to the sand where she slips out of consciousness and into a reverie of seafaring adventure and romance. In her fantasy, she changes from a mousey modern teenager to a vivacious Victorian-era young lady.

Mabel's dream also transposes Atkins' character from the popular local boy she last saw sailing away in his small boat, accompanied by her girlfriends, to a pirate's apprentice who only has eyes for her.

On the high seas, the pirate crew is engaged in hand-to-hand combat with another band of brigands. The Pirate King (Ted Hamilton) has personally arranged this battle as a birthday present for his beloved apprentice, Frederic.

But, when Frederic and the crew have soundly rousted their rivals and begun reveling in their victory, Frederic shocks his compatriots by announcing that he is leaving them. And, regretfully, he tells them, he is honor bound now to seek their destruction.

The Pirate King is heartbroken, as is Frederic's love-starved nurse, Ruth (Maggie Kirkpatrick), who was looking forward to the occasion of his 21st birthday to personally initiate him into the pleasures of manhood.

Unswayed, Frederic sets out in a tiny rowboat to seek a new life, paddling to a cove where he spots Mabel and her sisters picnicing on their island home. Frederic gazes at Mabel through his telescope and falls hopelessly in love.

Mabel's dream follows Frederic's attempts to convince her father (Bill Kerr), a major-general whose fortune was stolen by pirates, of his good intentions, and her own efforts at raising an army, with the help of a cowardly police sergeant (Garry McDonald) to defend her home from the invading privateers.

"It's a love story told with comedy, adventure and terrific music," states producer Joseph.

"It's a film which I think teenagers will enjoy because of the adventure and character identification. And I think it's one of those rare films that parents will have fun taking their kids to see."

Broadway Joe, the actor

Would who've ever guessed that when recurring knee injuries caused Joe Namath to retire from football, he would return as a dancer?

After leaving football in 1978, Namath made his dramatic stage debut the next year starring in "Picnic." He has gone on to appear in "Li'l Abner" and last year made his New York stage debut in "Damn Yankees." He admits that his surgically-scarred knees are a little balky sometimes, but he continues in the show-must-go-on style.

Whatever the steelworker's son from Beaver Falls, Pa. does, it makes the news. Few people remember he was known for his running ability as a quarterback at the University of Alabama, but upon joining the New York Jets in 1965, he become known as Broadway Joe, the guy with the $400,000 arm.

He enjoyed a memorable and controversial 13-year football career and has managed to keep his popularity through appearances in several noteworthy advertisements.

Despite this Namath fans will always best remember No. 12 for his role in the biggest Super Bowl upset of all-time. He went on record saying the Jets would beat the heavily favored Baltimore Colts in 1968, and went out and led the team to a 16-7 I-told-you-so victory.

In 1970, he made his movie debut starring with Glenn Campbell in "Norwood." This was soon followed by "C.C. Rider & Company" with Ann-Margret and "The Last Rebel." The performances were met with less than standing ovations and soon after, he began taking acting lessons.

On BENSON, the Governor (James Noble, l.) hires a television crew to do a political announcement when he throws his hat into the ring for the upcoming election. Rene Auberjonois (c.) and Ken Olison (r.) co-star in the "Black Tuesday" episode, to air Friday, Sept. 3 on ABC.

Playground or Paradise?

Leslie Nielsen narrates "National Parks: Playground or Paradise" to air Tuesday, Sept. 7 on PBS.

The National Geographic special focuses on the debate being waged over "the best" of our national parks. Can the parks be preserved and yet used as vacation wonderlands?

This dilemma has been debated between Roderick Nash, professor of history and environmental studies at the University of California, Santa Barbara, and attorney Eric Julber.

Julber contends that taxpayers are entitled to maximum use of the parks while Nash argues that if wilderness is easily accessible it cannot be preserved.

Three of America's biggest and most scenic parks — Yellowstone, Yosemite and the Grand Canyon — have been marred by people, congestion, pollution, commercialization and crime. Even though these parks have managed to maintain their timeless grandeur, parks such as Alaska's Denali and Gates of the Arctic National Parks serve as reminders of what scenic parks looked like more than 50 years ago.

The National Park Service is currently working on the idea that parks should be brought to the people through the creation of urban parks such as the Gateway National Recreation Area in New York.

Gary Dunford

OH BOY DO I LOVE BEARS?

Last year it was of Bob and Doug McKenzie's secret hoser record sessions and the strange attack of an Alberta bar band on eastern airwaves with the delightfully dirty Rodeo Song record.

We are now pleased to alert you to the existence of Larry Clark, Canada's own Singing Forest Ranger!

Clark is a real-life Manitoba ranger, normally on guard for thee with Smokey the Bear. But he comes in from 'coon country once in a while to record one-of-a-kind songs like Have You Ever Been Drunk As a Skunk and Met One and his hopefully hit single Oh Boy Do I Love Bears.

A Cook's Tour through the Keg's Kitchen

HOLLANDAISE SAUCE SECRETS

5 egg yolks
1 tbsp. white wine
1 lb. clarified butter
Dash of lemon juice
Dash of white vinegar
Few drops of worcestershire
Salt and white pepper to taste

In double boiler whip egg yolks and white wine until you have a stiff warm foam.

Add slowly under constant whipping the clarified butter. Add lemon juice and vinegar; season to taste.

(To clarify butter: place butter in a double boiler and leave until the fat seaparates from the butter milk. For the Hollandaise, use only the clear fat.)

This recipe yields approximately 8 - 2 oz. servings.

Ask for our free recipe cards the next time you visit the Keg.

The Keg Experience
ONLY THE BEST!
Centre-Cut Beef
A Better Steak
It's that simple. If your steak comes from the centre of the loin, it's a better steak. Less fat, better texture. And maximum aged. That means more tenderness and more flavor. It adds up in quality. In every Keg steak.

Landmark case nets modest sum for widow

NEW WESTMINSTER - A supreme court judge here has awarded a 70-year-old German woman the sum of $31,272, due to the loss of her son in a farm accident.

The tragedy took place in October of 1975, when three men died from inhaling poison gas in a corn silo.

Farms are proven to be the most dangerous peace time working environments, and events of October 8, 1975 would confirm that.

The three men were Paul Schaloske, his father Albert Schaloske and a family friend Siegfried Stachoske. The first to succumb was Albert who entered the silo before noon and was overcome by the noxious fumes.

Missing his father at lunch time, Paul, the owner-operator of the farm, checked the silo and saw his father collapsed in the feed. He immediately jumped in to rescue him and was also killed by the fumes. Stachoske followed close on his friends' heels becoming the third victim of the poison gas.

Not until neighbors were called to assist did anyone turn on the blowers to disperse the gas, but it was too late to revive any of the victims.

As a result of that day's events, the mother of Stachoske sued the estate of Paul Schaloske for damages under the province's Family Compensation Act.

She claimed that arrangements were being made at the time of her son's death to have her flown to Canada and be lodged the rest of her days in his home. Siegfried was to provide her with: a self contained suite in his home; food expenses; utilities; medical coverage; furnishings and other expenses such as transportation, church dues, and so forth.

By finding in favor of the plaintiff, supreme court judge A.G. MacKinnon, handed down what some feel is a landmark decision. He held that although it is standard practise on most farms not to turn on blowers before entering silos, and although few farmers issue written or verbal warnings about danger areas on their farms, the farmer can still be held responsible if someone is killed or injured in a dangerous area.

In handing down his verdict the judge cited the words of Lord Tomlin in a 1930 trial between a bank and a casualty company. The quotation read:

"Neglect of duty does not cease by repetition to be neglect of duty."

This means that anyone who has a dangerous area on their property should mark that area with a clear and visible sign. Otherwise they may be held responsible for resulting deaths and injuries.

In the case at hand, although the legal implications are clearly in favor of the plaintiff, the final award could be considered a modest one. This is because, although the judge chose to forge a new trail in determining legal responsibility, he conversely chose to remain faithful to an ancient principle that states that collateral benefits are to be deducted from final awards.

In other words, when a judge awards you a figure at the end of a law suit, he may deduct from that figure any money you might have received notwithstanding the judgment.

In the case of Stachoske's mother, she did receive $10,000 worth of real estate from her son's estate plus cash totalling $468. These sums were deducted from the settlement of $32,990. After various other calculations, such as interest, the final payment to the plaintiff was $31,272 less legal fees.

Lawyer R.B. Kearl, who acted for the plaintiff, said he was pleased with the outcome of the trial although he did admit that the settlement was a modest one to represent lifetime support, even for a 70-year-old woman. He said the deduction of collateral benefits is applied only in certain cases such as those involving the Family Compensation Act.

"This is the last vestige of this archaic concept," he stated.

Kearl said there has been some indication that the defendant's insurance firm may appeal the decision. If that happens the plaintiff will probably cross-appeal to have the award figure enlarged.

The lawyer suggested that $50,000 to $100,000 would have been a more realistic settlement.

Hi-lux exports exceed 2,000,000 units worldwide

At the end of April cumulative export total of Hi-Lux exceeded 2 million units. Following the Corolla, this is the 2nd Toyota vehicle to achieve this record. It was in 1968 that export of this vehicle was started, and in 10 years and 8 months, that is, in 1978, 1 million Hi-Luxes were exported. However, export of the next 1 million units was accomplished within a short period of 3 years and 5 months. This indicates a sharp rise in the export of Hi-Luxes in recent years.

Reasons for this spurt in export of this vehicle can be attributed to noticeable increase in exports to the U.S. which is the main market, where the ideal multipurpose Hi-Lux is in growing demand as a leisure vehicle. Also in developing countries, it is being widely used in distribution of goods. On top of that, the addition of a 4WD model in January 1979 followed by a diesel model in September of the same year, have greatly helped the export increase.

Exports classified by regions: North and Central America, 1,002,000 units; Near and Middle East, 522,000 units; Australia, 217,000; and Africa, about 210,000.

Mistaken identity

ALDERGROVE - Doris Gibbon informed The Star last week that she is not the author of the letter-to-the-editor-poem "The rising of the Lion Grove Estates."

Gibbon says she would like to know who wrote the poem, which she submitted for publication.

Would the author please step forward?

August 27 the Langley Lions Club presented a van to the Langley Senior Citizens Resource Society. The van, which carries eleven people, will be used to transport clients to the Day Care Centre. It will be used also to bring the handicapped clients to shopping centres, swimming pools, bowling alleys, etc.

The van has a lift that will raise wheel chairs to the floor level.

On hand for the presentation from the Lions Club were Mo. Bhogal, Wes Goddard, Ken Lerner, Leo Murray, Len Nicholas, and Dennis Whiteley.

Sharon Birney and Eleanor Farley from the Day Care staff received the van. Len Nicholas is president of the Langley Senior Citizens Resource Society.

No reprieve for B.C. school district cuts

VANCOUVER - B.C. school districts will not get a reprieve from the provincial government's announced $60-million education budget cut this year, education minister Bill Vander Zalm says.

The school districts had pleaded with the ministry to postpone the cuts until next year.

But VanderZalm says a postponement would only mean delaying the tough, unpopular decision until the last moment.

However, the minister offers some hope for the future, saying he would not tie the districts down to any specific figure yet for 1983-84 because economic circumstances could change by then.

School trustees have said that if the provincial government insists on implementing the budget cuts immediately, thousands of teachers could lose their jobs.

Meanwhile, teachers face the question of choosing between salary rollbacks or massive layoffs.

They are also considering a counter-offer under which they would agree to take time off this fall in exchange for improved learning and working conditions.

The proposal, under discussion by more than 400 teachers attending a strategy session in Vancouver, would avoid layoffs and save the school system millions of dollars, while protecting teachers' base salaries and strengthening existing contracts.

A RELEVANT QUESTION

What is your land worth?

By DR. MICHAEL ROWELL

Confronted with an overturned oil truck on your land or a mining company wanting to gain access to their sub-surface mineral rights - how would you value damage to your soil? Not a question many farmers may have to face but one worth consideration in these financially troubled times.

On one hand farm land may be sold in relation to its intrinsic productivity or to economic considerations of proximity to markets or transportation. Farm prices may become inflated due to urbanization of hitherto rural areas and expected future sales for building development. At the other end of the spectrum is valuation based upon loss of productivity due to deterioration of soil from poor management, industrial activity, mining or a great variety of other sources.

At present, in most legal settlements soil damage is assessed upon current market value of land, cash value of reduced crop growth and superficial measures to restore productivity such as manure, fertilizers and lime. Very little consideration is given to the fact that soils, which have developed over a time scale of thousands of years from bare rock, require restoration measures that are more directly related to the soil properties changed. Thus the loss of all or part of the organic component from surface soil may for a short while be corrected by addition of manure and fertilizers but in the long run the sustained productivity may deteriorate markedly. At this time those responsible for deteriorating the productivity of our soils are unwilling to pay costs of reclamation that outweigh the market value of land. The courts seem to largely hold this view as well. The general comment is "we might as well buy the land off the farmer".

The recent decision (No. E76-82) of the Surface Rights Board of Alberta involved a dispute between a group of farmers and the constructor of a natural gas pipeline. A well constructed pipeline, where care is taken to salvage top soil, can cause only slight damage to the productivity of farmland. In this particular case, although soil reports prepared both for and against the action differed in their interpretation of results and degree of soil damage there was some common ground. Depending upon the area concerned there had been some loss in top soil by soil mixing that resulted in reduced organic matter, increased clay, and increased alkalinity. Soil tilth, that vague term used to describe soil structure and workability, had deteriorated with an increase in compaction in some places.

The respondents proposed a restoration program of top soil replacement and manuring at a cost in the $5,000 per acre range. The farmers "won" the case but were awarded incidental costs for current crop losses, rock picking, fertilizer application, and inconvenience. Compensation for damage to land productivity was set by the Board at $187.00 per damaged acre based upon projected crop losses over ten years and a possible 10 percent error in their calculations. The farmers could also opt for a restoration program of manure additions at 20 tons per acre for three years instead of the $187.00. On commenting on the soil reports prepared by Professional Agrologists from our company, Norwest Soil Research Ltd. and Soiltech, the Board stated "with all due respect to the soil scientists who have recorded their analyses in detail in the two reports, those are conclusions which could have been reached by simple logic alone without the need for expert evidence, simply from a knowledge of the nature of the operation carried out by the operator". The final comments were "how can $5,000.00 material damage be done to a commodity having a value in exchange of only $500.00?" To this I would probably rely "Are we to value the planet on its sale value - and its sale to whom?"

Raising calves for the future

By LYNDA FRANZ

One of the most enjoyable experiences for anyone is watching one of your cow's give birth to a calf. The love and care put in by the mother should also be put in by the owner. Caring for the mother and for the calf is of utmost importance if you want a healthy twosome.

The mother should be kept in a stall separate from the herd to prevent various diseases from spreading. The stall that she is in should be clean, dry, and well-bedded. Suitable water and feed facilities is a necessity.

The symptoms that indicate calving vary among cows. Swelling of the udder with teats having a waxy appearance or even leaking milk. Swelling of the vulva and general restlessness are other signs. The majority of cows have little difficulty in delivery. If you suspect any difficulties or abnormalities in calving, call a veterinarian. Do not wait until the cow is stressed or exhausted before getting help. After freshening, provide her with fresh, lukewarm water. If she is hungry give her some good quality hay and bring her back to full feed gradually.

The calf needs clean, well-lighted and properly ventilated quarters. Damp stalls, drafts, and wet bedding may lower the calf's resistance to certain diseases, especially pneumonia.

The ideal housing for your calf varies. Basically, there are three types of housing that are being used successfully, Calf Hutches "Cold" type housing and "Warm" Nursery Building. Whatever type of housing you choose, make your goal successful calf raising, not just convenience of the saving of labor.

Calf Hutches are a portable stall with shelter which the calves are allowed to use as he wishes. He is on a leash so he can reach his food, water, and get his exercise. The climate and additional labour have discouraged some from using this type of housing but it can provide an ideal environment for raising healthy calves.

The "Cold-type" Housing has had limited success in areas having favorable conditions. Three tightly closed sides and one open side with natural ventilation is the type of building used. The recommended space for each pen is 24 to 32 sq. feet, to prevent overloading the natural ventilation. Drafts must be eliminated and well-bedded pens provided.

The "Warm-type Nursery Building" have advantages and disadvantages. The advantages include greater convenience and labour savings. Less space is required and a tailored environment for calves during the critical period of their life. Relying entirely on continued ventilation and exposure of all calves in the building to possible outbreaks of disease are some of the disadvantages.

The calf's housing is important but feeding is also important. For the first 2 or 3 days, fresh colostrum milk should be fed to the newborn calf. Colostrum acts as a laxative and is rich in vitamin A and antibodies which help build up resistance to diseases. Gradually adjust the calf to whole milk on the third or fourth day. Calves should be completely weaned at the end of 6 weeks.

The best way to learn anything is by experience. What works for some doesn't for others. Good management and common sense will help to achieve success in calf raising.

Sick soil is root cause of crop failure

By DON ANSON

Question. I have planted tender pod peas and sweet peas in the same place for the last seven years because it is the best place for them - for me. It is a west facing part of our carport and I string up fish net for them. Last year the yield was not so hot in either case but this year it is terrible. A lot of the peas failed to germinate and I replanted them when they were bare. The vines were not very strong and we only got six plants out of all the sweet peas. Other years we had excellent yields of both but this year it was very poor. I limed it and fertilized it with 6-8-6 and used compost before I planted them. Have I planted them too long in one place Have you any suggestions?

Also, I have has great success with multipliers but right now they are falling over and going to seed. How long do I have to dry the bulbs before I could plant them for a fall crop of green onions?

H.C. McLeond.
1426 Barberry Drive.
Port Coquitlam.

Answer. When any crop that has been successful for a long time in one area begins to fail, the reason must be that that piece of land is getting soil sick. Every plant takes out different nutrients from the soil and your plants have taken out one element which is now missing. It cannot be nitrogen because peas are leguminous and fix their own nitrogen in the soil. So it has to be something else. Probably one of the trace elements is now missing although generous use of compost usually replaces all trace elements. How much lime did you use?

Peas need plenty of lime and plenty of phosphorous in the form of bone meal. They also like a dressing of wood ashes to provide potash.

Lack of successful germination is common with peas. They rot easily in wet weather and are often plagued by the depredations of field mice.

I would suggest you change ground completely for a year or two and that you use more compost and less fertilizer from a bag. Try the trench method if possible. Dig a trench now about two feet deep and gradually fill it with semi-rotted compost, manure and particularly seaweed.

This should be nearly filled and firmed in February and the top few inches filled with good soil. Sow your seed in April and I'm sure you will get better results. Do not sow seed if the ground is excessively wet.

Your multipliers that have gone to seed will not be good for replanting. Choose those that are firm and ripe. Lay them on raised wire netting in full sun for about two or three days and then store them in a dry, well ventilated place. You could try replanting some of them for fall green onions but why not sow seed? Seed furrows or replants must be kept moist at all times.

Personally I grow shallots and not multipliers as they are excellent for pickling and are of a more uniform shape. Green onions are far better planted from seed and are quick to mature.

Plants suffer from ordinary droughts when there is a complete absence of rain and they also suffer from what may be termed "physiological drought". This occurs when the uptake of nutrients from the soil is stopped for whatever reason. It may stop when the weather is too cold; when the temperatures are too high or low or when the plants have been overfed or grown in the same soil too long. The latter is typical in greenhouses.

Easily the best corrective is to give the plants a foliar feed. When dry weather starts to check growth, plants cannot get their necessary nutrients from the soil, even if they were there, because they have to be in solution. So leaf feeding is doubly advantageous. It feeds the plants through their leaves and economises in watering.

All kinds of foliar feeds are now available at garden shops and nurseries. Some of them are for specific plants but all contain nitrogen, phosphates, potash and a range of trace elements. My own preference is for liquid seaweed manure.

Not only will foliar feeding make better growth, it will also assist the plant if it is being attacked by disease or pests. It is also most helpful in enabling newly planted stock to establish roots quickly.

Foliar feeding is given as a fine spray that will wet all surfaces of leaves and all top growth. Avoid use on actual flowers. Any spray that runs down to the soil will benefit roots.

For shrubs and trees, it is better to apply the spray with a spray-diluter attachment to your hose.

One of the main advantages of foliar feeding is that it benefits the plants almost immediately. Never use these foliar feeds at a strength higher than recommended on the label. They should be very dilute solutions and therefore very economical.

Plant surfaces have only to be wetted, not saturated and all plants, including indoor plants will benefit. Early morning or early evening are probably the best times to do your spraying, otherwise there could be some quick evaporation from the sun.

PNE horse show winds week of excitement

VANCOUVER - Action and excitement, grace and elegance, it was all part of the PNE horse show, which wound up its second week of competition on Wednesday, August 25. Horse shows continue throughout the rest of the fair, September 1 to 4, with the evening performances in particular designed to give audiences a taste of the many different styles of horsemanship judged at the exhibition each year.

Show jumping was a popular favorite during the week. Crowds clapped and cheered as young riders raced the clock, hooves thudding, and bodies tensed to make the supreme effort of clearing each jump. And that was only part of each day's excitement in the showring. Often the pace changed to that of a gentler era, a feeling came over the ring of 'Sunday-going-to-church' back at the turn of the century. Ladies in straw hats and white gloves trotted their pony buggies primly round the ring, and gentlemen, sartorially dressed in tailored saddle suits and fedoras brought back memories of a more elegant age.

The old west came to the ring too, as riders in fancy stetsons showed off their magnificent stallions, decked out in thousands of dollars worth of silver studded saddles and bridles.

There was even a touch of the exotic middle east when the competitors of the Arabian mounted native costume class rode in with their flowing gold embroidered robes, carrying a breath of desert air, and the whisper of romantic Arabian nights to the fair.

Five Aldergrove equestrians placed well in the show ring.

Brenda Driediger of 5778 - 248 Street won a first place with her Arabian yearling Babaska. Moondance won her owner a second place, and Baskfire a second and a third.

Snow Prince, a five-year-old gelding owned by Elly Preast of 29837 Fraser Highway, won a first and a third spot in two different classes.

Elsie Sands of 26246 - 24 Avenue won second and third place honors with the Anglo-Arab English Bay.

Vicky Chester of 25464 - 12 Avenue also won a second spot with Varsity Blue.

And Russell Combs of 25346 - 64 Avenue placed third in pony jumper class with Irish Mist.
