ACTION RACEWAYS MAY MOVE CLOSER TO TOWN

Raceway granted extension

MURRAYVILLE - Although decision still has to be ratified by Greater Vancouver regional parks board members, a Langley racetrack received a new lease on life last week.

Directors voted to grant Action Raceways another one-year extension on the lease of their oval inside the Campbell Valley park in southwest Langley.

Decision was approved by more than two-thirds of the delegates, according to Langley's representative on the GVRD, mayor Bill Blair.

Blair says he voted against the renewal of the lease, because he had been instructed by his council to do so.

The one year lease will give racetrack officials and various government bodies enough breathing room to find a new location for the oval, Blair says.

Provincial government is prepared to offer assistance, he says, and they are already looking for an alternate site.

"It could be Langley," Blair adds non-committal.

If that were the case, the only feasible option would be at the Aldergrove Lake regional park near the Canada-U.S. border.

Motorsport is a "big drawing card", says Blair, in that it attracts thousands of spectators and is an asset to the tourist industry.

Blair says the Campbell Valley location is ideal because the oval track is located in a bowl "created by nature." But residents in the surrounding area have worked for years on having it removed.

Naturalists have also been pushing to have the race track removed from the large acreage wilderness park. Blair says he cannot understand why, since he has "never seen any reduction in the action of the birds and the bees" in the park.

Anyhow, the lease extension, he says, will be for "one year, and one year only."

Councilors decided to stand firm on their opposition to any continued racing activity at the Campbell Valley park.

Tynehead has trouble attracting investors

MURRAYVILLE - It is still uncertain whether or not the Tynehead Zoological Society will proceed with the development of a huge game farm or zoological garden in north Surrey.

Society has sought a one-year lease option renewal with the owners of the Tynehead property, the Greater Vancouver regional district. Request has been granted although it still has to be ratified by the GVRD board of directors.

Board member, Langley district mayor Bill Blair says the society has been unable to come up with the necessary financing to proceed with the development. Not even pledges of funding support have been forthcoming, says Blair.

Multi-million-dollar project was based on support from the private sector as well as senior levels of government. GVRD were to provide the site at a nominal cost long term lease.

Aldergrove game farm owner Hugh Oakes has filed his objections to the option renewal. He says the development of a taxpayer subsidized zoological garden would spell disaster for his business which has been surviving for almost a decade without any public subsidies.

Oakes says he has the support of many politicians who agree that the Tynehead proposal would mean unfair competition.

He has been trying to negotiate the sale of his Vancouver Game Farm to the Tynehead society if their plans should materialize, but has had no positive response.

Right-wing slate elected to council

MURRAYVILLE - Voters in Langley district decided last week to add three conservative thinking men to their list of representatives on the local council.

Less than 16 percent of the registered voters bothered to go to the polls where they elected the slate of Len Fowler, incumbent Elford Nundal, and John Rennie to represent them for the next two years.

Next year's council will be somewhat unevenly split, with four aldermen leaning toward the political right, and only two toward the left.

Of the ballots cast, Rennie topped the polls with 2,632 votes of confidence. He was followed closely by Nundal with 2,541, and Fowler with 2,406. Allison and Bahr polled 954 and 1,249 respectively.

The new council members will join Muriel Arnason, Dan Williamson and Carol Gran on the 1983 council. Arnason, Gran and Williamson, along with mayor Bill Blair, will serve for another one year term.

New representatives will be sworn into office at council's inaugural meeting on Monday, December 6 at 2 p.m.

Residents list town's demands

ALDERGROVE - While the civic elections didn't draw much interest district wide, residents of this town again showed their well known interest in local politics by turning out in force for an all candidates meeting last Thursday night.

They listened politely to the five candidates, but when it came time for questions from the floor, the Aldergrove residents in no uncertain terms let the political hopefuls know what was to be expected from them.

High on the list of voter demands was a solution to the local sewage plant problem.

Residents also made it clear they want no prison in Langley or Aldergrove. They want no expansion of the bureaucracy at the local government level. And they want B.C. Tel to extend toll free calling to the metropolitan area to include the Aldergrove exchange.

About 100 people turned up for the meeting.

Hospital opens here tomorrow

By FIONA PULLEN

ALDERGROVE - Tomorrow will be a very important day for the residents of Aldergrove.

After years of careful planning and hard work, the Aldergrove Lions will officially open "Jackman Manor", the senior citizen intermediate care centre.

Original planning of the centre goes back to 1977 and was the idea of two independent landowners. In order for the much needed government grant for such a big project, a charitable organization was needed; the Aldergrove Lions were approached and decided to undertake the task.

Having taken a tour of the new centre, I was somewhat taken aback at the size and superb quality of the building, which will house 75 senior citizens who for some reason are not able to live totally independently.

The centre is equipped to handle all levels of intermediate care, and offers extremely pleasant surroundings for residents to spend their time.

A full time staff will be employed to take care of all the residents needs, including a kitchen staff, nursing staff, office staff and many more people fulfilling various duties.

The official opening will take place at 2:30 p.m. A most memorable occassion, not only for those responsible for its presence but also for the people of Aldergrove who should be proud to have such a housing unit in town.

Jackman Manor is located at 27477-28 Ave.

The Aldergrove Star will be doing a feature on the new care centre in our next issue.

Affordable housing on new mini-lots coming

MURRAYVILLE - Trend toward "triple A" or "acceptable, affordable, accessible" starter homes may not have an immediate impact upon Langley district or the lower Fraser Valley, but sooner or later it is bound to be felt here as well, thinks Mayor Bill Blair.

"Triple A" homes promoted by the Vancouver branch of the Housing & Urban Development Assn. of Canada are basically component built homes erected on small lots which can be added on to as a family grows.

A demonstration home will be built by HUDAC in Vancouver by next February.

New concept home is designed for city lots of only 2,500 to 3,500 square feet.

Blair says Langley officials have to be careful if they approve of the idea. Small lots could mean that more services such as sanitary sewers and water would be needed, he says.

But he agrees with other council members that the idea carries some merit for the metropolitan area.

"Although, I don't think we would authorize it for Langley at this stage," he says. "But planning (department) could recommend otherwise."

Municipal planner Kurt Alberts agrees with the mayor that "we have to be very careful in planning, if there should be a sudden request for smaller lots."

Councilors will support HUDAC's pioneer project for Vancouver, but it is doubtful whether or not they will accept an offer from committee chairman Barrie Letts to have a demonstration project go ahead in Langley district.

Rennie reflects grassroots

ALDERGROVE - A newly elected township alderman won the hearts of residents here when he told an all-candidates meeting last week that he realized the giant swim pool project - approved last year by the voters of Langley but subsequently scuttled because of lack of provincial funding - had not been supported by Aldergrove.

Instead of one "Cadillac pool", John Rennie said, two pools should be built, one in Brookswood and one in Aldergrove. But not until government funds were available.

"We should split that big pool into two," Rennie said.

Rennie also spoke against the hiring of a municipal manager, for an extension of toll free telephone calling to include Aldergrove, and against a garbage dump and a prison in Langley.

The Fort Langley man's platform won him solid support in the eastern polls at Saturday's election. Rennie, who ran unsuccessfully for council one year ago, topped the polls this year with a total of 2,632 supportive voters.

Surrey will take books and leave

MURRAYVILLE - It was a "sell-job" and it worked.

Voters in neighboring Surrey municipality last Saturday gave their elected officials the go-ahead on separating the district's public library branches from the Fraser Valley regional library system.

According to a contract Surrey officials signed with the FVRL three years ago, they have the right to leave, and also to keep half of the books now being circulated at Surrey branches. The agreement specifies that Surrey can keep these books in return for the payment of one dollar.

Contract may be contested in court if Langley's library board representatives have their way.

According to Langley district Ald. Elford Nundal the agreement is not legally binding upon the FVRL.

Provincial libraries act, says Nundal, makes the agreement invalid. Act states that a withdrawing member municipality is "not entitled to any right, title or interest in the assets, including books."

Councilors here earlier expressed the worry that Surrey's withdrawal from the FVRL would mean disaster for the Abbotsford-based library system. They also said Surrey officials, at the same time as they knew full well that the move would cost their taxpayers plenty, were promoting the separation prior to last Saturday's referendum vote.

Library director Jim Craven says the fact that Surrey is leaving will not adversely affect the FVRL.

New mill rates "confusing" to mayor

MURRAYVILLE - Variable millrates, as proposed in new provincial legislation, will "create a greater amount of confusion than you have ever seen," according to district mayor Bill Blair.

If the law goes into effect, says Blair, a municipality could assess residential and agricultural taxpayers at a lower millrate than that applied to commerce and industry.

"It doesn't make sense," says Blair.

Urged by the mayor to do so, councilors this week decided to write to municipal affairs minister Jack Heinrich and ask for further clarification on the proposed bill. They also voted to point out to the minister the "pitfalls" in the legislation.

Discrimination between private and corporate taxpayers is already taking place at the assessment level.

Canadian food prices dropped in October

OTTAWA - Consumers got a small break at the supermarkets in October, the federal agriculture department said in its monthly survey of food prices.

Prices dropped by 0.04 percent from September, putting the rate of increase for the previous 12 months at 6.9 percent. In June, the 12-month rate of increase was 10.5 percent.

Food prices this month are expected to remain largely unchanged.

The department has been forecasting an increase in food prices of eight to nine percent for 1982, making it the first year since 1977 that food price rises have been under 10 percent.

Lower prices for beef, poultry, egg and fresh fruits offset increases for dairy products, cereal and bakery goods and fresh vegetables, the department said.

The cost of a nutritious weekly diet for a family of four was $86.89 in October, a drop of 46 cents from September.

Montreal recorded the biggest drop in prices among major cities, 2.1 percent, while Regina recorded the greatest increase, 2.5 percent.

Retail beef prices dropped 1.6 percent in October and are 17-percent below the peak level of May. There may be some increases in future months.

Pork prices remained steady in October, although prices paid to farmers dropped 7.6 percent. Retail chicken prices dropped by two percent.

Egg prices dropped more than one percent while dairy prices rose 1.3 percent.

Fresh fruit prices dropped 10 percent, with steep declines in apple prices leading the way. Banana prices were down 14 percent but oranges increased.

Simpler laws urged by accountants

VANCOUVER - Simplified tax laws are a step the government could take toward putting Canadians back to work, the president of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of British Columbia told the Rotary Club of Kelowna last week.

George Morfitt, head of the 4,100-member institute said the government is not thinking its tax proposals through, and the complexities of applying them are costly and time-consuming.

"One of the cornerstones of our taxation system is that it is largely self-assessing. Employers deduct taxes at source and pay the government. The problem is that employers frequently do not know how much to deduct, or even if their employees will have to pay the tax at all," Morfitt said.

Morfitt told the Rotarians theCA profession is pushing the government to present enabling legislation at the same time as federal policies are announced.

Morfitt said simplifying tax laws will allow businesses more time and resources to plan for growth and generate more jobs.

"Accountants have been trying to tell the government to get out of factories and offices, make the rules simpler and then stand back and watch how quickly Canadians can generate the wealth this country needs to reduce the national deficit and get back on its feet," he said.

Langley MLA, labor minister Bob McClelland, makes presentation to Janet Primrose, local pioneer, at last week's Douglas Day banquet.

Taxi fee hike referred to CofC

ALDERGROVE - Chamber of commerce here will be asked by local politicians to submit recommendations on whether or not Abbotsford Taxi should be granted a fee increase.

Ken Bush, manager of the taxi service, has asked Langley district council to approve a rate increase from the existing of $1.30 to $1.40 for every start, and from $16 to $17 per hour for waiting stops. Rate of 85 cents per kilometre travelled would remain the same.

"I would like to see (application) referred to the Aldergrove chamber of commerce for comments," said mayor Bill Blair this week.

"A very good suggestion," said Ald. Muriel Arnason.

Councilor decided to follow this course.

New mail plant opened

LANGLEY - A $1.7-million mail processing plant was opened here last Friday.

Located in a light industrial area of the city, on Production Way, the new plant was declared open by Don Lanskail, a member of the board of directors of Canada Post.

He said it is expected the plant will, in the near future, be the main handling and distributing plant for the entire Fraser Valley.

Plans also call for the Langley plant to handle all incoming British and foreign mail.

The work force at the plant, now 21 persons, could increase by 19 once all plans become effective, Lanskail said.

Possibility of an increased work force, with its added payroll, was welcomed by mayor Aubrey Searle. He said he was pleased Langley was accepted by Canada Post as the "hub" for the Fraser Valley.

Postmaster Terry Mitchell said letter carriers will operate out of the post office on Douglas Crescent, but rural route drivers will operate from the new plant.

Easingwood chosen by City

LANGLEY - This city has a new mayor.

Long time alderman, Reg Easingwood won the voters approval Saturday, leaving another mayoralty candidate, Don Hansen, behind.

Idea supported but no money

MURRAYVILLE - "Moral support" is all that Outdoors Unlittered council will receive from district council in support of their Pitch-in '83 campaign.

Campaign officials had asked municipality for a financial contribution of $150 to be considered "a fee for service."

While agreeing with the objectives of Outdoors Unlittered, councilors felt that the organization should seek funding elsewhere.

Ald. Elford Nundal suggested they should go to the big fast food outlets for financial support, since companies such as McDonald's are major contributors to the "outdoors littered" in the first place, according to the council member.

Christmas Seals are a tradition

VANCOUVER - Every November, eleven million Canadian homes and businesses receive an envelope in the mail which contains one of Canada's longest enduring winter traditions, Christmas seals.

Since 1906, Christmas seals have served as decorations for Christmas cards and parcels, and have been the main fund-raising vehicle for lung associations across Canada.

Each year, the artist who creates the Christmas seals enjoys the thought that his work can be found in every Canadian home, and adorns millions of Christmas cards, parcels and letters during the Christmas season.

Vancouver artist Ray Boyer created the Canadian Christmas seals in 1978, 1980, 1981, as well as the seal which will be used in 1983. It has been estimated that his Christmas seal designs were reproduced more than a billion times, probably ranking him among the most reproduced artists of all time.

The British Columbia Lung Association is presently seeking designs for the 1984 Canadian Christmas seal and is asking amateur and professional artists to submit their designs before January 1, 1983. Lung association president, J. Gary Cooper, says the designs must carry a winter or Christmas theme, as well as the words "Canada" and the numberals "1984", and should be submitted in a 15 cm. by 12.5 cm format.

For more information, contact the British Columbia Lung Association, 906 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C., V5Z 1K7.

Students learn the horrors of the highways

VICTORIA - A grade 11 student from Aldergrove secondary school, Ken Arnold, was one of more than 450 province-wide students and educators who attended a three-day conference sponsored by ICBC and the ministry of the attorney-general, October 31 - November 2.

Delegates were addressed by international and local authorities on road safety issues and told that motor vehicle crashes are a major cause of death for young British Columbians.

Some of the shocking statistics include, seven children injured every day in a motor vehicle accident, 859 people killed and 44,123 injured in 1981 in traffic mishaps, accidents occurring every four minutes around the clock, with an injury every 12 minutes and an average of five fatalities every two days.

Delegates were also told that their own age group, the 16 to 24 year old drivers, represent only 20 percent of the driving population but are involved in 34 percent of the accidents.

Conference speakers included consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

Abbotsford voters return Ferguson

ABBOTSFORD - Incumbent mayor George Ferguson was returned to office for another two-year term when the ballots were counted here Saturday night.

Ferguson, a conservative, won close race against challenger Bernard Gerestein.

No elections were held in Matsqui district this year.

Our planet's getting smaller

CAMBRIDGE - Earth is shrinking at the rate of one tenth of a millimetre a year and has shed 305 kilometres since it was formed, says a British astronomer.

Raymond Lyttleton of Cambridge University's institute of astronomy said the contraction is caused by the melting of the hard shell around the earth's molten core. This distorts the planet's crust and thrusts up its major mountain ranges.

In a book entitled The Earth and Its Mountain, Lyttleton said the changes, due to heat released by decaying uranium and other elements, began about three billion years ago.

The professor says there was an orgy of mountain building when the earth's radius shrank by 64 kilometres in a few minutes.

Computers will indeed rule our lives

OTTAWA - Hang in there 17 more summers and a robot will mow the lawn for you.

Put up with the mailman until the year 2000 and your letters will be delivered within hours to your television screen.

Your car won't have to go into the shop for its spring tune-up--its computer will tell you when it needs fixing.

But be careful, two university engineering departments warn. You may just fall in love with your computer.

These aren't just elaborate pipe dreams.

The Ontario government thinks all of it could happen and asked the engineering departments at Carleton University and University of Ottawa to look into the impact of technology by the end of the century.

It's no news that computers are ready to take over. The departments say in their report that talking computers will be as common by the year 2000 as telephones now are.

More jobs will be performed at home, and two-way information systems will allow us to bank, read newspapers and attend school without going outside.

They say wrestling with the new technology won't necessarily be difficult. All you'll have to do is talk sense with your machine.

"Speech recognition and syntheses will make computers appear almost human," the report to the industry and trade ministry says.

That sounds convenient, but the departments warn it could get out of hand. Many emotions will be built into a computer's "personality," including sympathy and affection.

Psychiatrists may have to treat persons who have "deep emotional involvement" with the machines, they say.

There will be three-dimensional television by 2015. Holographic images will be beamed directly to the home, they predict.

More medical research will lead people to use meditation to control and prevent many illnesses now treated medicinally, the report says. And bio-technology will have come of age to produce food artificially.

Casey and Lucy de Vries

deVries couple share happy memories

ALDERGROVE - Casey and Lucy deVries of 3262-275 Street celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on November 21. Reminiscing, Lucy remembered being a little nervous as she was not very sure that Casey would show up for the wedding fifty years ago. Not that he did not want to, but as a marine engineer he plied the seas of the world on a passenger liner, and a storm or any other mishap could have spelled disaster for the wedding, at least temporarily.

He did show up in time, however, but left again two days later, leaving Lucy in charge of setting up house. A short honeymoon.

In 1953 they pulled up stakes in Holland and came to Canada. They made their home in Vancouver where Casey worked first for the T. Eaton Company and later as chief engineer for the Queen Elizabeth Theater.

After retirement they moved to Aldergrove in 1971.

The de Vrieses have two daughters and one son, all happily married, seven grandchildren, and two great grandchildren.

Recipe for a long life

SPOKANE, Wash. - Nobody rustles up a hot lunch or brags about a fellow's piano playing like Mom. Just ask 80-year-old Bill Schluter, whose 106-year-old mother still fixes his meals and sings along when he plays, When You and I Were Young, Maggie.

"I give him three meals a day and put him to bed on time - that's the best I can do," said Appy Kroll.

Schluter said he asked his mother to move in with him after his wife died about four years ago.

"I was alone and my mom was alone, so it seemed right to keep each other company," he said in a telephone interview Monday.

Kroll, who turned 106 in September, was born in Anderson, S.C., in 1876.

"I did work hard and I think that helped," Kroll said. "We'd go to bed early and get up early. That helps strengthen your life. That and common food."

Kroll says she never misses a chance to read from the Bible, even though she needs a huge magnifying glass to make out the verses.

Evolution goes on show

By LAWRENCE BRUNER

Not everyone believes in evolution, but creationists now have to contend with a powerful new assault on their position - a new exhibit at the Royal Ontario Museum.

Museum has introduced a gallery of stuffed animals, displays, pictures, diagrams and an audio-visual show to provide a defence of Darwin that would have impressed Clarence Darrow - even though Dr. Chris McGowan of the ROM says evolution needs no defenders.

"There is no discussion about whether evolution occurred," says McGowan, curator of the vertebrate palaeontology department. "The evidence is so overwhelming."

Many of the gallery's exhibits offer proof that evolution is common to all animals, from the Galapagos Island finches to the black moths that thrive in polluted cities.

Black moths were seldom seen before the 19th century, explains one exhibit, but after the industrial revolution moths had to camouflage themselves on urban tree trunks blackened by soot.

The exhibit points out that colored moths fare poorly in soot-blackened cities, and that black moths have declined in areas where pollution has decreased. This provides excellent evidence for what Darwin called "natural selection" - the theory that a species has a better chance of surviving if it evolves into a form that suits its environment.

Another exhibit relates Darwin's legendary journey to the Galapagos Islands west of South American, where he studied the many species of finches that live on the islands. Darwin made a crucial discovery when he realized these finches were unlike those found anywhere in South America.

He reasoned that finches originally flew from South America to the Galapagos, and their descendants evolved into species that were unique to the islands.

A simiar process has been occurring in North America. House sparrows have been evolving during the hundred years since European settlers introduced them here, according to ROM zoologist Dr. Allan Baker.

In a 1980 article in the journal Evolution, Baker said there are physical differences between house sparrows from North American, South American and New Zealand - even though all descended from the same 19th century European species. Even house sparrows from different areas of North American are different.

But the evolution of birds tells us little about humans and whether we have descended from other animals. The gallery attempts to answer this question with a display on an animal called a therapsid-an extinct species that may provide the missing link between reptiles and mammals.

The display explains that therapsids had small brain cases, just like reptiles and unlike mammals, but teeth were more mammalian. Therapsids, like mammals, had specialized teeth of different shapes, such as fangs for stabbing and molars for chewing, while reptiles have just one type of tooth.

Many of the exhibits share an overriding theme - that many widely differing species possess common characteristics. They show that humans, bats and extinct plesiosaurs all have five digits (fingers or toes) on each limb, suggesting that we have all descended from the same ancestor.

Humans didn't appear on earth in their present form (homo sapiens) until about 40,000 B.C., so there hasn't been enough time for us to evolve into different species. But insects such as beetles made their first appearance more than 100 million years ago and now consist of thousands of species.

In addition to the displays, the gallery contains sections that explain how animals evolve. They show that cells of all living things possess genes which determine the characteristics of offspring. Advanced organisms such as humans inherit half their genes from the mother and the other half from the father, so that all offspring differ slightly from the previous generation.

Genetic change is possible even among simple organisms generated from one parent. In most cases the parent and offspring may be different if the parent's genes have undergone a mutation or change, either by accident or by human manipulation, before it has offspring.

The gallery also explains how scientists are able to trace the history of life forms through the ages. It shows how some dead animals become embedded in rocks and hardened as fossils, which scientists can date by determining the ages of rocks. This enables scientists to reconstruct the history of different species.

Papers beat T.V. news

Despite the big splash round - the - clock news is making on television in the U.S., a student of the subject says most people get most of their news from a source they can hold, fold, clip, put aside, retrieve and retreat - the newspaper.

Lawrence Lichty, an analyst of the impact of television, says it is a myth - one widely accepted by TV personalities - that television has surpassed the newspaper as the chief source of news for most people.

Lichty, a professor of communications at the University of Maryland and co-author of American Broadcasting, drew his conclusions from an analysis of studies by the Simmons Market Research Bureau, which quizzed 15,000 people to learn how much exposure advertising gets in various mediums.

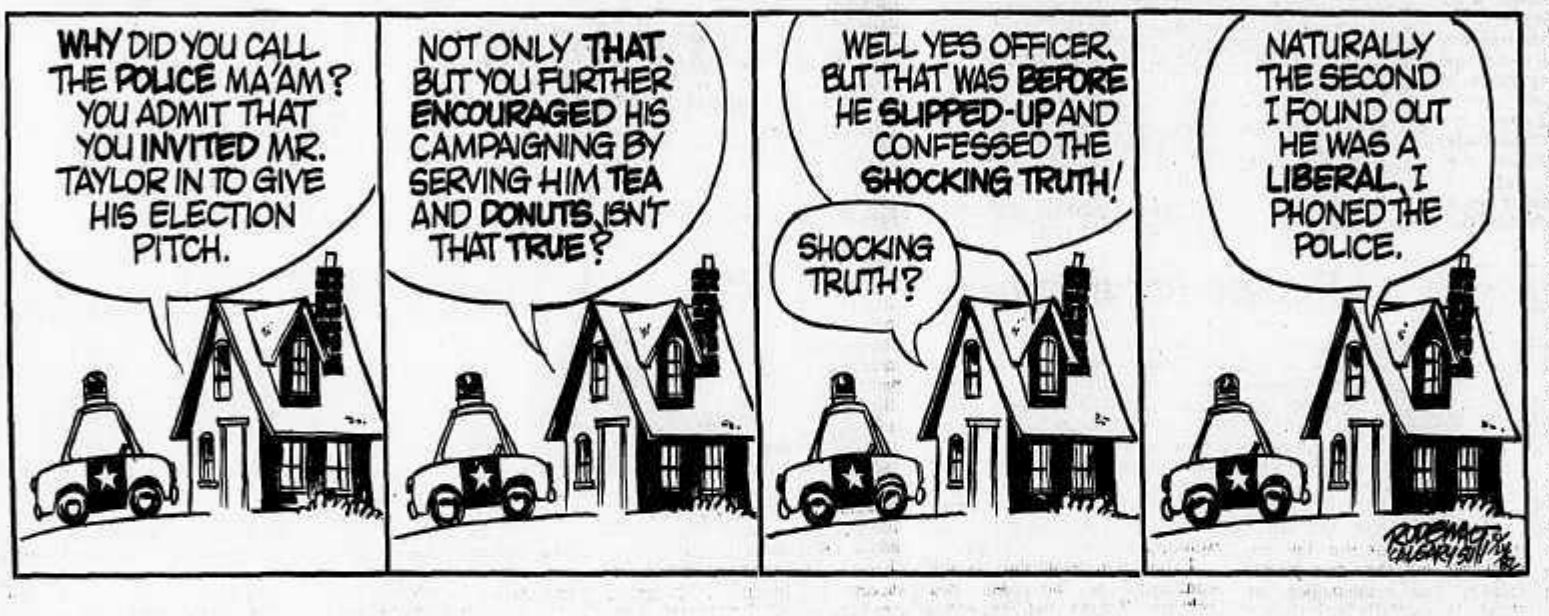
For years, an annual Roper Organization survey has fostered the notion that TV was North America's prime news source.

Last year, for example, 39 percent named TV and 22 percent said newspapers when asked the source of most of their news. Others cited radio, magazines and other people.

But, said Lichty, the more exhaustive Simmons studies show that while more than two-thirds of adults read at least a part of a newspaper every day, fewer than one-third of adults watch any TV news.

Lichty said television these days plays the role played by "yellow journalism" in the early 1900s, offering news, "as entertainment, as spectacle, as distraction."

Lichty published his conclusions in the Wilson Quarterly of the Smithsonian Institution's Woodrow Wilson International Centre for Scholars. -Calgary Herald



Characteristics ideal in the little towns

A little town is where you don't have to guess who your enemies are. Your friends tell you.

A little town is where few people can get away with lying about the year they were born. Too many other people can remember.

A little town is where people with various ailments can air them properly to sympathetic ears.

A little town is where, when you get the wrong number, you can talk for 15 minutes anyway.

A little town is where the ratio of good people to bad people is something like 100 to one. That's nice to remember.

A little town is where it is hard for anybody to walk to work for exercise because it takes too long to stop and explain to people in cars who stop, honk and offer a ride.

A little town is where folks say there is nothing to do, but those who live there don't have enough nights in the week to make all the meetings and social functions.

A little town is where everyone becomes a 'neighbor' in time of need.

A little town is where businessmen dig deep many times to help with countless fund-raising projects. - Canadian Publisher

"Some" will live

Edward Teller, an American scientist who played a major role in the development of the hydrogen bomb, in itself a curse on humanity has added insult to injury with recent pronouncements obviously intended to lull human beings into a false sense of security about what will happen in the event of a nuclear war.

Teller, in an article in Readers' Digest, says, as if talking to very young children, that nuclear fallout can easily be washed from skin, cans or other objects, and can even be easily filtered out of water.

Reaching to even greater height about why some of us should survive nuclear holocaust, Teller says that the only risk connected with food is if the fallout itself is eaten with food, but says nothing as to how this mammoth undertaking can take place.

Will every apple, every fish, every berry, every kernel of grain be washed, and-by whom?

One wonders why Teller broke into print in such a manner, unless he is well on the way to being a deranged madman, intent on creating further engines of destruction and deeming it therefore necessary to lull the legitimate fears of normal human beings.

Such pronouncements make is much easier for the military hawks of the world to justify a nuclear war, although Teller excuses himself by saying that if the Russians are led to believe Americans could survive a nuclear war, they, the Russians will be less likely to start such a war.

Perhaps Teller, Reagan and others have their own, well-stocked nuclear shelters, paid for by ordinary folk, and can therefore look with some excitement to someday looking out on a smoking, desolate planet reeking with radiation and contratulate themselves on their survival.

But then, who would relish a world sans fresh water, sans wildlife, sans farmers, livestock, clean air, food and hope?

Only the mad of the world.

Talk about hot air rambling

By ROBERT SKOGLUND

"Holmstrom just showed me how to put the clutch in my tractor," I bragged to Reeney as I washed the grease off my hands. "I couldn't have done it without him. He knows everything about automobiles and radio repair, too, A person who always helps me when I'm in trouble is a valuable friend."

Reeney sniffed and said, "That's the only kind of friend you have."

"That's not true," I said quickly. "I have a lot of useless friends."

Reeney had to agree with me later that evening when Greensleeves stopped by.

"It's the bank this time," he said by way of greeting as he dropped into a rocker. "Their computer messed up the Greensleeves For Council bank account I opened when I agreed to run. Some woman named Vera was issued a book of checks with the same computer number as mine. I've been destroyed, politically,."

"My bank doesn't need a computer to destroy its customers," I said proudly. "Cashiers throw all the deposit envelopes in a big bin out back and leave them there for a couple of weeks. By then we've all written checks on the money we know we've deposited. But our checks bounce because the deposit envelopes haven't been opened, and we're walloped with an overdrawn fee."

I didn't come in here to listen to your troubles." Greensleeves whined. "I've been defeated by electronics. It started when my computer cash card came - the code was wrong so the machine rejected it. At least three months ago I applied for a new card that isn't here yet. My new corrected checks were promised within a week - I waited a month."

"With some hefty campaign contributions in the account, we started writing checks. They all came back with a computer note saying the Greensleeves account was overdrawn and that we were being fined $10 for each check."

"That's how we discovered the Vera problem. I figured my money would be extra safe after that because surely the bankers were so embarrassed they would be very careful not to punch any more wrong buttons. But last week we got our bank statement and dozens of checks Vera had written. It took me out of the race."

"Look at the bright side," I said. "Now you'll have time to build that dream house you've been talking about."

Greensleeves nodded. "I'm kind of sorry my lot is next to the town dump - but if I complain about the smell to the pollution control people they'll shut it down."

"Whatever made a professional complainer like you run for public office?" I asked.

Greensleeves assumed what he hoped was a modest look and said, "A year ago my pictures appeared in a man-on-the-street column along with my comments on cable television. 'Your views on cable TV are in today's paper,' and I said, 'What do I know about cable TV?' Of course Gramp said, 'Obviously nothing.'

"The same day representatives of two political parties and an editor looking for an art critic came by to sign me up. They all swore they'd never seen anyone talk as long as I did without actually saying nothing."

CHANGING THE PHONE

By STEPHEN KAWAMOTO

In these days of computer-assisted switchboards, it's reassuring to know that operator-handled calls will be going through in step with the increased telephone rates.

But how can you tell the difference between computer-assisted calls and "old-fashioned" calls? Well, it might not be that noticeable unless you really strain your ears next time you phone your Aunt Meg in Winnipeg.

For one thing, the wait will be shorter between the last digit dialed and the first ring. Also, most of those clicks and buzzes plaguing the lines will be seldom but less often heard.

Still, if your phone makes funny noises at night, it's probably going on the fritz. Some telephones get that way, especially the old black ones with cloth-covered cords instead of shiney plastic ones. They're apt to get cranky after 30 years of occasionaly high-voltage line sweeps and the usual at-home wear-and-tear.

Anyway, after three decades of use, what phone wouldn't stop working half-way through a call, punishing your tender ears with a rash of clicks and buzzes that turn a simple phone into a shouting match with electronic crickets?

So, if you have a black bakelite monstrosity called a telephone, now's the time to lug the heavy beast down to the nearest phone store and plop it down on the sales counter. Though it certainly won't make your phone bill any less expensive, at least with a new phone you'll be able to sleep nights. It's doubtful you'll awaken when a pink princess phone bounces off the concrete.

How the U.I. hikes really hurt

By ROGER WORTH

For Canada's already hard-pressed smaller firms, Ottawa's decision to increase unemployment insurance premiums by about 40 percent carries not only a direct cost, but may affect the perennially positive attitude of the entrepreneurs who are so important in the job creation process.

At a time when more than 1.5 million Canadians are unemployed, this is bad news indeed.

The simple question is asked: will small companies lay off workers because employers have to pay as much as $4 per week more for each employee they have on staff?

As in all things simplistic, the simple answer is no. Yet there is a very real disincentive to add staff, and it's that much easier to justify layoffs. Mostly it's a matter of attitude.

The problem, of course, is that many smaller firms are already on the fringe, dealing with reduced profits or actually losing money.

So, under the circumstances, it isn't surprising that the unemployment insurance rate increase will play a minor part in the entrepreneurs' decision to add or subtract jobs.

The cost is significant. Companies now paying the top rate of more than $385 per week in insurable employee earnings, will now pay $12.40 per week in unemployment premiums for each worker, up from $8.09. Where employees earn less, the unemployment premium is obviously lower.

Employees will also be forced to pay premiums that are 40 percent higher.

But it is the attitudes of entrepreneurs, managers and proprietors of smaller firms that really count. If, as has been forecast, the economy turns around, it is these people who create the jobs we so badly need.

Only a year ago, for example, the smaller companies were still creating jobs, even while the multinationals and major companies were pruning the employment rosters.

The same thing may happen if the economy reverses. a surprisingly resilient small business community will be first to take advantage of the situation, creating jobs as they expand their operations.

What's important is that the positive attitude that exists among this group of risk-taking entrepreneurs is not stifled. There is no question the unemployment insurance rate increase has deflated a lot of the enthusiasm existed, and probably cost us a lot of jobs.

Perhaps it's time the bureaucrats in the nation's capital started to understand that attitudes matter, At some point, when taxes and payments to government become too high, there is less incentive to really succeed in business.

REPORT FROM VICTORIA

Province is attempting to assist unemployed

By BOB McCLELLAND, MLA

In the past, the focus of government employment programs has been to provide individuals with job training and work experience which would lead to permanent employment and ensure that the present and future skilled employment needs of British Columbia business and industry could be met. Over the past several years these programs have met with increasing success--that is, up until the last ten months when the employment situation has been made more difficult by the economic recession.

This week I would like to outline some of the employment programs being offered by the ministry of labor in response to the tight job market and poor economic climate. The government now operates a wide range of temporary employment programs designed to offer immediate assistance to out-of-work British Columbians while at the same time stimulating business activity in local communities and key sectors of the provincial economy.

The summer employment program helped to create jobs for over 8,300 young British Columbians. Provincial funding was devoted to job creation in key economic areas including tourism, farming, and small business, as well as the province's universities and colleges.

The employment bridging assistance program, funded jointly by the federal and provincial governments, is helping to relieve unemployment among workers in our hard-hit forest sector. Under this program, 243 projects have been approved to date, employing more than 2,300 unemployment recipients.

The concept of this program has been extended to a new employment program, the community recovery program. This program provides a challenge and an opportunity for local communities to retain their skilled work force by creating new jobs for recipients of unemployment insurance. Projects such as community clean-up, building renovations, improvement of recreational facilities or restoration of historic sites may qualify for funding under this program. The provincial government has allocated $5-million to help create up to 67,000 weeks of work in activities such as these.

The winter employment stimulation program will assist first-time entrants into the workforce, including women, young people, persons on income assistance, and those whose unemployment insurance is expiring. Ten million dollars has been set aside to help create approximately 8,000 new jobs in such sectors as tourism, agriculture, small business, and high technology industries. The program is now underway and funding for positions can run until March 1983.

To ensure that sufficient skilled workers are available once the recession is over, the government is adapting its ongoing employment programs to keep up with the times. My ministry has taken steps to minimize the disruption in training of apprentices on lay-off. We can rearrange technical training schedules so that apprentices may make productive use of their period of lay-off and we can help apprentices find alternate employers willing to take them on. The most important new initiative is a program which offers simulated on-the-job training for unemployed apprentices. Training under this program follows normal working conditions as closely as possible. Such training is now being offered for 20 heavy duty mechanics apprentices at Cariboo College in Kamloops, and has been approved for 16 apprentices in the same trade in Prince George. In the lower mainland details are now being finalized to mount programs for 20 first and second year plumbing apprentices, 12 third and fourth year plumbing apprentices, and 20 steamfitting-pipefitting apprentices. A similar program for 20 electrical apprentices is also nearing completion.

Finally, I would like to mention that the minister of labor is in the process of establishing a new provincial employment service--a one-stop shopping centre for employment information and services. This service will be of particular importance to young persons who are entering the workforce for the first time.

The programs I have outlined not only have and will create much-needed jobs for the unemployed, but they give private industry and communities the chance to assist their citizens to remain productive while building something of lasting value to the community.

For further information on these and other employment programs I would suggest that you contact the ministry of labor office in Burnaby at 120-4946 Canada Way, telephone 291-2901 or the office in Abbotsford at 201-2630 Bourquin Way, telephone 853-7497.

REPORT FROM OTTAWA

A fear in Canada over our future

By BOB WENMAN, MP

Speaking in the House of Commons last week, I raised concern over the creation of real, lasting jobs for Canadians.

"Mr. Speaker, Canadians are afraid, small business is afraid, the banks are afraid. The banks are tightening up credit markets, calling in loans, ... Canadians generally are afraid. They are afraid because business and jobs are falling and being lost around them again and again. As these credit markets tighten up, more real jobs are being lost and jobs that could have been created are not being created.

"Banks are tight for money because, in conjunction with the federal government, they are bailing out huge corporations that have proven themselves unsuccessful. How can we condone again and again and again corporations borrowing from the banks to bail themselves out, the government guaranteeing those bail-outs and further subsidizing them with extensive taxpayers' money?

"One billion dollars for Dome Petroleum, $34-million for Maislin, millions more for Chrysler, Massey-Ferguson and Canadair, tightens the money markets for small companies, making it impossible for them to borrow in order to sustain themselves in a cash flow crisis which at any other time would in fact not occur.

"The government attempts that solution again and again. The government borrows more money; the government taxes more. It takes more and more of the credit that should be available to small businesses. In effect, they have borrowed $21.2-billion so far this year. With a $23-billion deficit, they stand before us and threaten to borrow more.

"The perverse practice of encouraging mismanagement and failure to the detriment of a healthy atmosphere for successful enterprise has caused severe damage to our industrial structure and economic fabric. We have become a guaranteed society rather than the just society promised by our prime minister. The government will guarantee everything for unprofitable ventures."

I shall run installments of my comments in the next two columns. If you would like copies of this speech, phone my constituency office at 530-1424.

From the wonderful people who brought you the two MacEachen budgets, more study and advice and less action on the Canadian economy. Ian Stewart, former deputy minister of finance who recently, finally got the sack and announced he would be taking a year's sabbatical for reflective thought, is probably being fired into the breech once again. Rumor has it that the MacDonald royal commission on the economy will feature Mr. Stewart as a key advisor. Strike one, strike two ...

An apology from the prime minister? "As I said, if you want to invite me to the West, or anywhere, take me as I am, and don't feel insulted". So, who wants to invite him?

Roger Taylor, of Langley Gulf Service, recently brought some very interesting statistics to my attention.

Mr. Taylor feels he is a tax collector for the federal government! He is also subsidizing his own competition. Why does Mr. Taylor feel this? Because he collected over 1.7-million dollars in gas taxes as opposed to only pre-deduction profits of $91,000. Part of the tax collected is .72 cents on every litre for a Canadian ownership tax, i.e. his competition, the state gas company, PetroCan.

In this time of supposed 6 and 5 economic restraint in face of grostesque government waste and expenditure to the tune of a $23-million deficit, the Metric Commission has been rewarded with a 105 percent increase in costs to a $26-million budget for 1983. That is $25-million that could be spent on job creation programs. When asked in the House of Commons for a justification of this increase, the minister of consumer and corporate affairs replied that "more money is being spent under the metrication program because we (the Liberals) have decided to reimburse workers who have to buy new wets of tools as a result of the implementation of the metric system. The increase in expenditures clearly bproves that the metrication program in Canada is a success ..."

Right. A Government creates a success by forcing a program down taxpayers' throats and then has them pay $26-million tax dollars for it. Some success.

Field Naturalists keep busy schedule

By MARY PASTRICK

ALDERGROVE - The Pender Island field trip was hosted by Dan and Mary Rempel on November 11, for the Langley Field Naturalists.

The day-long tour began at the Queen of Sidney ferry, stopping at three islands, then ending up at Rempels for lunch and hiking. At the Galiano dock, the captain announced two minutes of silence to honor Remembrance Day. It was amazing how many memories return to mind in just minutes. And, while standing on the ship deck in the crisp air, several bald eagles were observed perched motionless on the odd tree top, as if they too paid tribute. Two minutes seems like a small price to pay for those who bravely fought in faraway lands for our freedom.

The hike along the sunny coves with the contrasting red berries on the arbutus trees and the yellow broad leafed maples mix and blend with the darker evergreens to add their own beauty to the landscape. From the ferry, large groups of cormorants were seen resting on the rocky shoreline. And a total of 30 species of birds were seen. Some late blooming plants such as the wild blackberry, Queen Annes lace, thistle, clover, yellow broom bushes and the yellow lupine, a native plant on the island, were in full bloom.

Bloedel Conservatory Field trip

The naturalists enjoyed the field trip to the conservatory on Nov. 14 where exotic birds and sunken gardens with numerous tropical plants and flowers were observed. Finally ending a tour through the Vancouver Museum to see over senventy original paintings of Robert Bateman.

Birds of Prey display - Ft. Langley

A total of sixty students per day, three times a week are analyzing 'owl pellets' at the museum. The pellets are supplied by the naturalists and the public has also participated, with barn owl pellets.

All birds of prey cast-pellets. Owl pellets are oval, grey, looking like matted felt, containing hair, whole bones and often fairly well-preserved skulls of mice and shrews. Barn owls are night-time hunters and can consume up to thirteen mice in six hours - if they can find them. Pellets are undigested food parts - regurgitated by owls, hawks, herons, crows and gulls.

Next Meeting

The naturalists meet every third Friday of the month at the Langley Arts Centre at 7:30 p.m. The Dec. 17th meeting will feature Dr. Fred Bunnell with a program titled 'wildlife in winter'.

New T.V. film series focuses on family

ALDERGROVE - "This is the life" film series, aired Sunday evenings from 7 to 8 p.m. for family viewing on Western Cable 10, addresses some poignant issues for many persons. "Lutherans and issues" is the program vehicle for these films.

Entitled "The ice cream conspiracy", the episode this Sunday, November 28, portrays a family which is breaking apart over issues of alcoholism, infidelity and loss of love. The consequences for T.J., the young daughter, are feelings of responsibility and guilt, tension in the feeling of being needed by both her mother and father, inadequacy in being able to deal with the situation in a way that would bring about reconciliation. An ice cream parlour is where T.J. meets a pastor who helps her see that her parents' problems are not her fault, but that all need to forgive one another and accept Jesus' love and forgiveness as a step toward loving each other again. T.J. grabs hold of this message of love and hope and in the closing scene pleads with her parents to learn to understand, accept and forgive one another in order to love and be a family once again.

Another film, "The harder they fall", to be shown on Sunday, December 5, deals with extra-marital sex in the context of a love relationship between Liv, a young widow who is a Christian, and Alan who is skeptical of her Christian beliefs and values. Alan and Liv are fundamentally split on such issues as marriage and commitment, altruism and egotism, values and life goals, sin and the need for forgiveness, sex and love as more than just a beautiful feeling for the moment, and Christ as a part of a love relationship that progresses to intimate oneness. Through it Liv comes to a realization that sometimes one has to give up something very desirable and good in order to have something even better.

They've raised the roof

The Vancouver Whitecaps new home now has a dome.

The 10-acre, 280-ton teflon-coated roof on the 60,000 seat B.C. Place stadium went up without a hitch on Sunday morning November 14 with 2,000 VIP guests in attendance, among them Whitecaps' defender Bobby Lenarduzzi.

Lenarduzzi was among 16 VIP's who pushed one of 16 buttons, starting the huge 100-horsepower fans which eventually raised the roof to its permanent height of 200 feet. After about two and a half hours the glowing white roof was visible from key vantage points in the city of Vancouver.

The $126 million stadium is due for completion in July of 1983 with the Caps opening the 1983 North American Soccer League season at the 29 year-old 32,000 seat Empire Stadium then completing the balance of the season at the new Dome, which will be officially named next spring. The stadium is also the scene of the NASL's 1983 Soccer Bowl championship game October 1.

The roof's cables were installed in three weeks, the fabric in eight weeks making the roof-raising a reality in just 11 short weeks. Consultant on the project was New York engineer David Geiger, a pioneer of balloon type roofing including the Silverdome in Pontiac, Michigan, the U.S. Pavilion at Expo 70 in Japan and the new Carrier Dome at Syracuse University.

After the official ceremonies, the doors to the stadium were open for general public viewing and more than 20,000 people lined up in Vancouver's downtown streets for their first glimpse inside the new stadium.

Legionaires tie Big Blue

By RUSS DAVIDSON

ALDERGROVE - Saturday, November 20, the Legionaires travelled to Whalley to play against the Big Blue at Kwantlen all-weather field. Big Blue started fast and scored two good goals before the Legion team woke up. Adrian Reglin took an indirect kick, and made the score 2 - 1 for the Big Blue at the half.

After the oranges, the boys shed their gym pants in favor of their shorts, and started to make things happen. Two goals were scored by the Legionaires only to have them rejected by the referee who seemed very much in favor of the Big Blue. On a penalty kick by Andy Brown, it was a two-all tie. Big Blue came back and scored to make it 3 - 2, but the Legion team put on a show of passing as Andy Brown sent Chris Bleau down the left side, and after going around several players, the ball was passed to Paul Liebel for the 3 - 3 tie.

Next game: Day 11 will be at Clayton park, at 2:30 p.m., on Saturday, November 27.

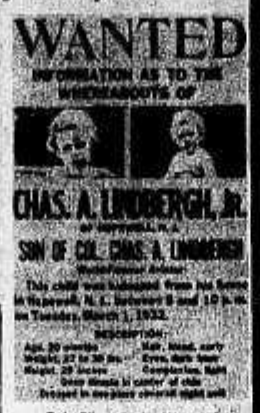
WEEKLY LISTINGS
NOV. 25 TO DEC. 1

James Farentino and Patty Duke Astin star in SOMETHING SO FINE, to air Tuesday, Nov. 30 on CBS. The "GE Theater" drama also stars Ricky Schroder as a boy who gets a Big Brother (Farentino) because his divorced mother (Mrs. Astin) feels he needs a dependable man in his life.

'Crime of Century' is reopened

It was sensationalized as "The Crime of the Century," even though Bruno Richard Hauptmann insisted he was "absolutely innocent" of kidnapping and killing the infant son of Charles Lindbergh.

Hauptmann died in the electric chair on April 3, 1936, more than four years after the crime he says he did not commit. Today, more than 46 years later, the case has been reopened by Hauptmann's widow. Her plight is examined in "Who Killed the Lindbergh Baby?" to air Wednesday, Dec. 1 on PBS.



Mrs. Hauptmann is suing for $100 million in damages. The special explores her case with the aid of previously unreleased trial footage, original evidence and contemporary testimony from Mrs. Hauptmann, her husband's best friend, the only surviving jury member and the first policeman to arrive at the Lindbergh's Hopewell, N.J. home on the evening of March 1, 1932.

After one of the most exhaustive manhunts in U.S. history, the German-born Hauptmann was arrested in the Bronx, N.Y. in September, 1934.

Many stories, including Lindbergh's, were altered during the three years leading up to the trial. Handwriting samples of the ransom notes were not conclusive and although $14,000 of the ransom money was found in Hauptmann's garage, a case can be made that Hauptmann was set up as a scapegoat.

As Mrs. Hauptmann emotionally reviewed the testimony, she says, "They knew they were lying. My husband was innocent."

THE FOLLOWING FISH WAS PRE-RECORDED

They call it The Fish Tape.

It's an hour-long videocassette that turns your TV set into a fishtank.

For 60 minutes, hundreds of exotic tropical fish float by on the screen, doing nothing but giving viewers the fish eye.

The soundtrack supplies the sound of bubbles a filter pump makes in a fish tank.

At $35 a copy, the Los Angeles company that made The Fish Tape claims it's selling like crazy. Kindergarten teachers use the fish to put the kids to sleep at naptime; dentists let root canal victims stare at an overhead TV screen on which fish float by.

Coming next from the same company: An hour of a waterfall, an hour of wheat blowing in a field and an hour of clouds.

THOU SHALT NOT WATCH

Add something called a Censorview to your list of inventions whose time has obviously come.

It's a little electronic box that sits atop your TV set and operates exactly the reverse of those timers that turn on videocassette machines.

Censorview can be programmed to block any channel on the set off, up to 10 occasions in a single week. It's obviously aimed at parents who don't want their kids watching what tiny tots love to watch most.

A California firm sells the device for just under $200.

MUSIC FACES:

Excitement on the concert scene

By NOZ PARKER

THE BASHERS

The Bashers will perform a showcase concert at the Commodore on Friday, December 10. Proceeds from the show will benefit the Vancouver chapter of Big Brothers, but the show organizer and Bashers drummer, Dave Thompson is hoping to also bring a little extra attention and benefit to the band in the process.

Thompson, a young Big Brother himself, says he sees the evening as an opportunity to present the band's talents to a number of the west coast music industry reps he's invited to the bash. The band has been working wholeheartedly toward a professional and ebullient stage show, in the hope of impressing the music agents and publicists in a convenient venue and with a festive atmosphere. It is another step in the career of a working "weekend" band, which started a couple of years ago as a two-man entry in a Vancouver "Gong Show."

Singer Kevin Bartram and keyboard player Rob Beattie didn't win any prizes as a gong act, but they were immediately hooked on the thrill of performing. They recruited four more players, including Rob's bass playing wife, Barb, saxophonist Pat Naylor, guitarist Abb Martin and drummer Dave Thompson. They started out playing dances for social clubs like the Corvette club, and slowly worked their way into weekend slots at lower mainland pubs and clubs where they proved themselves as a popular draw. The band members, who all live in the Aldergrove area, also sold close to a thousand tickets to three dances here in the last couple of months.

Their wide appeal is fairly easy to understand; although the band does cover versions of rock favorites from early Elvis Presley to recent ZZ Top, they always put their own character into the songs and they please the audience by injecting a party atmosphere into the proceedings. They may not be as faithful to the original songs as other local cabaret acts, but they've got panache and they entertain rather than give a slick, perfect but basically boring rendition of the material.

Still, for all their hamminess, the Bashers are talented and capable players too. Barb, for example, shows great promise as a singer - with a little more work she could become one of B.C.'s best vocalists. And as a unit, the Bashers provide some of the most danceable music around.

Tickets for the Commodore show are now available at VTC-Eaton's at $10 each and also available for $5 more is return bus transportation from the Fox & Hounds pub in Aldergrove. Fans are encouraged to have dinner and refreshment at the local before departing about 7:30 p.m. on the chartered coaches. For further information and reservations, call Syd Anderson at 856-8538 or 856-8111.

3-D

3-D, a "three-man electronic band, proved an interesting diversion from the run-of-the-mill cabaret rock act last week at the Fun Palace. Their selection of new material like Icehouse and Gary Numan, along with original material, is another welcome break from the familiar. The drummer plays syn-drums, and the two other men alternate on synthesizers, guitar and bass and all three sing. Through careful choice of songs, they manage to grab the audience interest as well as provide highly agreeable dance music.

MUD BAY & ALMOST BLUES

Mud Bay Blues and the Almost Blues Band shared the billing at Saturday's dance in White Rock's Star By The Sea hall, and it turned out a good party for the full house.

Mud Bay is a good band with the ability to tap a wide variety of blues rhythms and styles, but a muddled sound and a less than exciting vocal performance from Harold did leave a mediocre impression. The players are all fine, including Harold's harmonica work, but a great singer would pack the wallop the band is lacking. Bassist Mark Branscombe says they are soon to record and manufacture cassettes of the band for promotional use and sale to their fans.

The Almost Blues Band had a much better singer to their credit, and their choice of material proved much more accessible to the party crowd, who responded by filling the dance floor for the remainder of the evening.

DOWNCHILD

Downchild, a band which has more than its fair share of adversity, is back swinging with their ninth album, "But I'm On The Guest List," and will bring the goods to the Commodore this Friday and Saturday evening.

The new album, recorded live in Toronto is possibly their best yet as they rock the blues hotter than ever before. This new energy owes a great deal to their new singer John Witmer (late of Whiskey Howl), who as leader Donnie Walsh says, "...sings his butt off."

John Witmer and Donnie Walsh of Downchild.

Downchild has long been Canada's definitive blues band, but their records never seemed to contain the urgency and excitement of their live shows. Their new album has solved that problem.

Donny Walsh cooks up a storm on mouth-harp on "Gonna Tell Your Mother" and his slide guitar screams on "One More Chance" and "T.V. Mama". The rhythm and horn section jump into the thick of it, propelling Walsh and Witmer to new heights on all ten tracks, including old favorites like "Caledonia" and "Flip, Flop & Fly".

Walsh notes that the album is, "straight Downchild...no overdubs or fancy faking" and the result is an impressive party record, and a new lease on life for a tough, confident and fiesty work-ethic band that was devastated by pianist Jane Vasey's death earlier this year from leukemia.

Walsh says, "We just make people dance, have a good time... it's no big deal." But in times like these, perhaps it's one of the biggest deals of all. Tickets for both shows are available at VTC-Eaton's and CBO-Woodward's.

THE NYLONS

Perryscope Concerts has added a second Nylons show next week at the Orpheum. The December 2nd 9 p.m. show has sold out, but tickets are still available for the 6:30 p.m. concert.

The Nylons, of Toronto, have just released their second album, "One Size Fits All", a gorgeous, seamless blend of their four voices without instrumental accompaniment. The energy that these men bring to record is amazing and a pure unadulterated pleasure to listen to.

Their sound holds elements of classic doo-wop, gospel, rhythm & blues, soul and rock & roll in the tradition of The Persuasions (the newest member, Arnold Robinson was formerly with The Platters).

The Nylons first appeared on stage in May, 1979 as an experiment for a group of actor-singer-dancer friends and the public reaction has been overwhelming from the beginning. Record companies were initially more cynical of the Nylons' potential, but the Canadian Attic label signed them on and their first album was a runaway success. Their concerts, including six nights at Malkin Bowl and 2½ weeks at The Cave, have always sold out.

Their repertoire extends from the 1930s up to the '80s, including a large number of original songs. Live performances thread together vocal harmonies, complex rhythms and percussion, choreography, staging, and dramatic lighting into a refreshing musical and theatrical performance.

The new album comes highly recommended, particularly the tracks, "Up The Ladder To The Roof", "Silhouettes" and "Heavenly Bodies." Concert-goers can buy tickets at VTC-Eaton's and CBO-Woodward's, while they are still available.

THE ENGLISH BEAT

The English Beat's first Vancouver appearance, December 6 at the Commodore, sold out in a matter of three days, thanks to numerous successful records since their 1978 formation. Their seven-week concert tour began on November 2 in Milwaukee, and the seven man band is currently promoting their first album for the I.R.S. label, called "Special Beat Service."

Based in Birmingham, The Beat were caught up in the wave of ska bands like the Specials and Madness but they remain one of Britain's most popular bands long after the others have fallen by the wayside. They have a string of top U.K. singles and two top five albums to their credit as well as a reputation for selling out whatever venue they play. Their music also remains intelligent and articulate, for which they've earned critical respect.

Everett Morton, The Beat's drummer, called from Toronto last week to talk about the new directions that the band has been moving in. Although "Special Beat Service" is an eminently danceable sort of record, Morton says, "We're doing different styles...we've progressed from ska. We're quite different from them (Specials, Madness) now, although if they were still around, perhaps not. I think it was good for The Specials to split up and try something else and leave us to develop without getting caught up in this ska thing, which never really 'happened' anyway."

The band did a successful three-week U.K. tour before coming to North America, but their new album was not a runaway best-seller there. Says Morton, "It got up to the top twenty, which wasn't bad. The first two albums did much better but the music has changed...we've taken a different road. I think this one is for North America."

The band is bigger than ever, with a new sax player, Wesley Magoogan (ex-Hazel O'Connor Band) and Dave Blockhead (ex-tour manager) on keyboards. Guitarist Dave Wakeling sings lead vocals along with rap-vocalist Ranking Roger. Andy Cox (guitar, mandolin) and David Steele (bass, banjo) and Morton round out the new line-up. They all share the song writing credits.

The music has west African influences on cuts like "I Confess" and "Ackee 1-2-3", but "Save It For Later", their new single is western pop music with jangling guitars, a propulsive backbeat, a catchy melody, and even a string section.

"Yea, we had to try something different, we were gasping for a success. It's actually an old song from when we started. It's always been one of my favorites...I'd say 'Let's go back to that slow song again.' We recorded it and it didn't come off the way we expected it to, but it's the song we thought would do it for us."

The English Beat (clockwise from front centre); Wesley Magoogan, Andy Cox, Dave Wakeling, Ranking Roger, Blockhead, David Steele and Everett Morton.

Another song, "Pato and Roger" features a 'rap' or 'toasting' duel, "It's one of Ranking Roger's solo singles. This very good friend, Pato, meets him at toasting contests for friendly competition. Roger fell in love with his toasting, so they got together to record it."

"Spar Wid Me" is more of a rootsy reggae tune. Morton says, "Birmingham is reggae music..... there's lots of West Indian people. Walking down the street you hear reggae music blasting from the windows. You can't help but be influenced."

"I came from the Caribbean and calypso is in my blood, but calypso itself has so many influences too." The Beat were also invited to perform at last summer's World Of Music, Arts and Dance festival in England and are featured on the benefit double album. "Two days and quite an amazing show it was. Nice show but it wasn't organized properly, so it was a financial disaster. Still, we got to meet and talk with some very interesting performers."

As for the current tour, "We've had some amazing crowds. There's a feeling that it is happening all over again like in England a couple of years ago."

NASH THE SLASH

Nash the Slash performed last weekend at the Savoy after being stranded on the west coast when Iggy Pop cancelled the remainder of the concert tour. Pop apparently broke a few bones at an Edmonton concert last week, and returned home to convalesce.

"Dream" is a fantasy centred on nature of love

The Fraser Valley College Theatre Department production of William Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream will premiere on Friday, November 26, in the FVC Studio Theatre.

A Midsummer Night's Dream is Shakespeare's most romantic and festive comedy. Originally written to be performed at a royal wedding, the Dream deals in a highly fantastical manner with the nature of true love.

The main plot follows the adventures of four young lovers, during a midsummer's night, who fall under the spell of wood fairies in the forest outside their native Athens. During the evening the lovers and a group of amateur actors experience extremely bizarre happenings and magical transformations. To all concerned the evening's events seem grossly improbable, yet have the bizarre reality of a dream.

The FVC production of the Dream, directed by Theatre Department Chairman Ian Fenwick, is set in the 1920s period. Designing the sets and costumes is well-known Chilliwack artist Brian W. Banks.

The large cast of 19 performers is headed by FVC veterans Rick Mawson and Lynne Wells as the King and Queen of the fairies. Mike Vitow, another frequent performer in FVC productions, plays the central comic role of Bottom the Weaver. The young lovers are played by FVC students Paul Zurbier, Shelly Balbar, Brenda Lopez and Bob Lal. The group of amateur actors is played by Christine Newsome, Mike Berger, Stacy Britten, Netta Hutchings, and David Ethier. The King and Queen of Athens are played by Bill Harrison and Iris Sigurdsen. Liz Dungate plays the mischievious fairy Puck, and Lois Zacharias and Delores Jacobson play fairies. Ms. Jacobson also doubles as Theseu's secretary Philostrate. Rounding out the cast as Egea is the Theatre Department's Production Manager Jody Cameron.

A Midsummer Night's Dream plays November 26, 27, December 1, 2, 3, and 4 at 8 p.m., and December 5 at 2 p.m., with a preview performance on November 25, in the FVC Studio Theatre on the Chilliwack Campus. Tickets are $5 for general admission and $4 for students and seniors, and are available from FVC Chilliwack and Abbotsford, J. Beethoven's Pizza (Cultus Lake), The Bookseller, and Elliott-Clark Arts. For ticket information call 792-0025, local 451.

Blue Boy waiting in the wings

Christmas spirits are running high at the White Rock Playhouse, as work feverishly continues on their annual pantomime. This year's seasonal offering BOY BLUE, is a new script by Charlotte Johnson. Directing BOY BLUE is Franklin Johnson, White Rock's leading authority on pantomimes. BOY BLUE will open December 1st and run until December 26th.

This year's cast will feature many familiar faces as well as some welcome newcomers. As Ma Plunkit is Marc Bourrel, who will be remembered from last year as Ma Peddler. Boy Blue and Bo Peep are played by June Pentyliuk and Debbie Lick, who have both delighted panto audiences in the past few years. Sharing the role of Bo Peep with Lick is newcomer Charlene Barkhausen. Katie de Pencier is back again, this year as the Scarecrow. The villans are played by newcomer Vicki Penny as Lady Morticia, John Scott as Chancellor Clutch, John Vye and Al Reid as Fudley and Dudley and Gordon Mantle as the Squire. Returning to pantomime after a long absence are Darryl Walker and Vicky Rainer as the Duke and Duchess of Donnybrook. With lead actors of this calibre, BOY BLUE is destined to be a sure-fire hit.

Tickets for BOY BLUE are available at the following times only, 1-5 p.m. Tuesdays thru Saturdays. Call 536-7535 or come to the box office, 1532 Johnston Rd. for more information or tickets.

Children's book week celebrated at schools

ALDERGROVE - Most Langley schools celebrated children's book week November 15-21. At Shortreed elementary the library sponsored the second annual original book report contest to highlight books and the school library.

Students were invited to do an original project to tell others about a book they had read. The contest drew 112 entries which were all original. The library was filled with models, mobiles, dioramas, puzzles, posters, peep boxes, roll movies and poems. The contest was a valuable learning experience for the students viewing the displays who learned about some very interesting books in the school library. Chad's large checkered flags complete with Super Cars look very exciting. Jason's, Lesley's, and Kristen's roll movies rivaled any television show and the books they were based on increased in popularity.

The judges (an intermediate teacher, a parent, a primary teacher, and the library assistant) had a very difficult time choosing only three winners from each grade. All contestants received a special certificate and the winners, chosen after long deliberations, each won a book from the display of books that will be availble at Shortreed's book fair on Dec. 6. The winners are:

Kindergarten and grade one: a special award was given to each entrant; grade two: Sharon Griffen, Joel Luypen, Michelle Penner; grade three: Tracy Dudley, Joanne Krause, Chad Makela; grade four: Sherri Buckles, Denise Klassen, Maurice Lefebvre; grade five: Jason Brown, Bethany Malourno, Margo Thomasson; grade six: Cameron Penner, Liz Van de Veen; grade seven: Erin Kenwood, Jimmy Russel, Linda Schultz.

Hyack Christmas Carol Cruises still popular

Christmas, West Coast style, wouldn't be complete without a night out on the mighty Fraser River aboard the popular Hyack Christmas Carol Cruises.

The festive two-hour cruises leave New Westminster nightly from Saturday, December 11 to Thursday, December 16 with special matinee cruises for children on Sunday, December 12 and golden agers on Thursday, December 16.

Tickets for the carol cruises go on sale November 19 and early purchase is advised to avoid disappointment.

On the first three evening sailings the lead carol ship, the Malibu Princess, is accompanied by about 20 small light-festooned vessels. As the flotilla winds its way upstream towards the Port Mann Bridge the strains of Christmas carols echo in the air and the water and sky illuminate with a spectacular sight. The procession is visible to several neighboring communities and is a feast for the eye.

Aboard the lead carol ship there is singing, sipping of hot drinks and excitement for the children as Santa makes his nightly visit.

People waiting to board the ship can warm themselves to Christmas carols played by local bands. Choirs lead the carol singing aboard the boat each evening.

Choirs will be Queens Avenue United Church Choir on Dec. 11; First Presbyterian Church of New Westminster on Dec. 12; Gloria Rei Chorale of the Christian Reformed Church of New Westminster on Dec. 13; Olivet Baptist Church Choir on Dec. 14; Holy Trinity Cathedral Choir on Dec. 15 and Mount Calvary Lutheran Church Choir on Dec. 16.

The Douglas College Community Choir will lead carol singing on the golden agers cruise.

The yachts which accompany the lead carol ship are from the Royal City Yacht Club and other Canadian Power Squadrons.

One of the most picturesque sights as the boats head upstream is the historic Samson V, the only steam-driven paddlewheeler left in Canada, which is steamed up and decorated for the occasion.

The Hyack Christmas Carol Cruises have fast become a west coast tradition. They are sponsored by the New Westminster Hyack Festival Association, which sponsors the renowned Hyack Festival in May of each year.

Ticket prices are $7, except for the Sunday afternoon cruise when children's tickets sell for $3.50 and the Thursday afternoon cruise when golden agers' tickets sell for $5. Outlets are the Hyack Festival office, 204 Sixth Street and Woodward's ticket counter, Sixth & Sixth in New Westminster.

The evening cruises will be from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. with boarding at 6:30 p.m. at dockside, foot of Eighth Street; and the afternoon cruises from 2:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. with boarding at 2 p.m.

THEATRE REVIEW

"Two and two makes sex" is a laugh-filled hit

By NOZ PARKER

The Langley Players' production of the British farce, "Two And Two Makes Sex" is a smashing, diabolically witty, laugh-filled riot that's guaranteed to fill the Brookswood Theatre for the next couple of weeks.

The story is harmless fluff - there is nothing of any consequence in it. It is more similar to a series of anecdotes, as is typical of sexual farces. But when you put together great dialogue, ridiculous situations, terrific actors, director and technical crew, who will quibble over a lack of deep intellectual or moral message? Not I, kind reader. I'm prone to just sit back and enjoy the brash humor and scathing wit for what it is.

Director Martin Millerchip has already proved his worth in Abbotsford Little Theatre's production of the Tennesse Williams' drama, "Summer And Smoke" and his handling of "Two And To Makes Sex" will only enhance his esteem and respect among theatre-goers. He is versatile, and always first-class.

The actors are also uniformly brilliant and cohesive in their rapport amongst themselves. They are amateurs by name only, and are equal with any professionals. The two couples, George (Mel Stewart) and Claire (Jean Watson) and Nick (Tim Driscoll) and Jane (Caroline Gauthier) provide most of the action and dialogue along with Claire's friend Ruth (Marlene Dougherty) and Jane's father, Jack (Evan Williams).

Although a small minority of readers may find some parts "offensive", most of the dailogue, facial expressions and action suggest more than is actually said or done, and of course, none of the attempted infidelities are ever consumated, as is typical of that genre of theatre. I do think older children will understand and enjoy it too.

The play runs till December 4 in the newly renovated theatre, and ticket reservations and information can be had by calling 530-1730. Don't miss it!

New co-op may rise from Surrey's ashes

By CLARA DAWSON

ABBOTSFORD - Following the demise of the Surrey Co-op grocery department, a pro-tem committee of co-op minded individuals made as survey of the central portion of this area. Enough interest was found to have a meeting. It has been called for 11:00 a.m., Saturday, December 4, at the OAPO hall, corner of Essendene and Cyril, at which Hume Compton will address the meeting and show a short film.

Compton is from nanaimo and is the past president and one of the originators of the Hub Co-op in that city. This direct-charge or service-fee co-op is a new concept and has received national as well as world-wide acclaim because of its exceptional success.

Meeting is to determine whether a similar organization would be feasible in this community, and if so, to start the organizational wheels in motion.

A good attendance is desired so that a true consensus of opinion may be achieved before taking any further steps. All persons interested are invited and urged to attend.

Ancient Indian Petroglyphs

...communicating ideas with art 800 years ago and we're still using art today as an effective means of communication

These crude drawings etched into volcanic rock are easily seen near Albuquerque, N.M. They were done between 1100 and 1600 AD, and are among the best examples of ancient Indian art.

Today art has taken on a more polished look and its role in communications has taken on a greater meaning. In newspaper advertising, art helps communicate business ideas. This newspaper maintains an extensive file of art covering every major facet of retail business for use by its advertisers. This art, prepared by Metro Newspaper Services is provided at no cost except for the cost of advertising space.

Art from Metro Newspaper Service, along with copy, combined in an attractive layout created by one of our advertising staffers, can do an effective selling job for your business. We do the entire job, from the creation of the idea through the published ad. If your business could use a little more business, contact us today.

Work and learn program offered to students

ALDERGROVE - The 'work and learn' program is now offering day classes for twenty to twenty-four VAST III students at Aldergrove high school. Classes are held in the main portable used by the night classes and the day sessions run from 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. daily.

The purpose of offering VAST III instruction during the day is to allow serious students to complete grade ten with the intent of returning to school. "We expect a mature attitude from the day students and hope that with concentrated instruction available, and the opportunity to develop a disciplined approach to their studies, students' progress will steadily accelerate," says instructor Dave Coutu.

Having day sessions is a new approach for the program. Under these circumstances, students are expected to comply fully with all established rules and procedures. Students and parents must sign a contract agreeing to observe all regulations, to be able to attend the day sessions.

The program allows for continuous entry. New students are accepted as room becomes available. Students may attend night school until there is a seat for them during the day.

Students wishing information about the day program should call the school (856-2521) and ask for Dave Coutu.

Patricia officers returned by vote

ALDERGROVE - Patricia Women's Institute have installed the same slate of officers as last year.

Officers for 1983 are president Mrs. A. Wright, vice-president Mrs. W.S. Johnston, secretary-treasurer Mrs. R. Wilson, and directors Mrs. S. Halliday and Mrs. A.C. Durkie.

Conveners are Mrs. H. Goertz (agriculture), Mrs. H. Goertz (sunshine), Mrs. J. Petrie (home economics), Mrs. F.C. Johnston (cultural), Mrs. Wright (citizenship and education), Mrs. S. Halliday (public welfare), and Mrs. A.C. Durkie (publicity).

The institutes in the Fraser Valley will have a busy time for the next six months. Arrangements must be made to entertain and provide an evening meal for the delegates to ACWW. These ladies are coming to Vancouver for the conference in June. A lot of preparatory work lies ahead of all women's institutes in the province, as around 2,800 delegates are expected to attend. Buses are to be provided to bring the visitors to the rural areas, with stops at points of interest, some farms, and the day will conclude with the various local institutes being the hosts for the meal.

Ten members attended the November meeting, held in the home of Mrs. A.C. Durkie.

A letter was received from Canadian Mental Health asking if members can spare small gifts for their many patients. A donation is to be sent right away.

Patricia Institute is hosting a party in the hall on November 26. Arrangements were completed for this event.

Hostess prize was won by Mrs. R. Wilson. Next meeting, on December 13, will be the Christmas party at the home of Mrs. W.A. Johnston. There will be a small gift exchange.

Bridge club news

ALDERGROVE - Last Friday's bridge evening was successful for Fran Boyd who scored 7,160 points. Donna Costello came in second with 6,180. Good work, again by the girls, although also the low score went to the weaker sex. Stella Bowes ended at the bottom with 1,640 points. Three new faces showed up and we love to see that. Bridge club starts playing again on Friday at 7:30 p.m. in the OAP hall on 273 Street.

Your support is most appreciated.

My sincere thanks

John Rennie

Watts in store for weeds

WINDSOR - In the near future, farmers may electrocute weeds rather than killing them with poisonous chemicals. Dr. Reuben Hackam, professor of electrical engineering, University of Windsor, has developed an electrical weed-killer.

The device is powered by a generator attached to the farmer's tractor. A long metal bar, delivering a strong electrical shock, brushes against the weeds as the tractor moves through the field. A wire trailing behind the apparatus completes the electrical circuit.

Many weeds are more sensitive to electricity than crop plants, so by selecting the appropriate voltage the farmer can kill the weeds but leave his crop unharmed.

Hackam has demonstrated that his device, which he hopes to patent, will kill at least 60 kinds of weeds. His research was funded by the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council.

GARDENING IN THE VALLEY

Potato scab is common problem

By DON ANSON

There is no doubt that potato scab is very prevalent in this area. This fungus disease, besides affecting potatoes, can also attack radishes, beets and turnips. It is caused by a soil fungus which normally lives on organic matter.

When organic matter is in short supply, the fungus changes from being a saprophyte and attacks a live host such as potato tubers. It is always at its worst on soils that are deficient in organic matter or in soils which are highly alkaline due to applications of lime or wood ashes.

When preparing the land for a potato crop, liberal quantities of humus-forming materials should be added and the use of lime or wood ashes avoided.

Once this fungus disease attacks, it can take a few years to bring it under control but the infection is gradually reduced annually as the organic content of the soil is improved.

If your soil has been infected, I suggest you try growing potatoes in plastic bags or other types of containers. Use soil from another area.

Buy certified seed potatoes and ask your dealer for a variety that is resistant to scab.

Many people have recently planted roses. It is essential that the soil was made firm when the rose was planted and you must maintain this firmness if the rose is to do well. After a frost, tread the rose in again to be on the safe side. It is unlikely that we will get a severe enough winter here to do much harm to roses, but, just in case, it may be advisable to hoe up some earth around the plants for protection. This must be removed before growth starts in spring. Prune back any long, straggly shoots now but do your major pruning in March.

I think there are more people growing broad beans these days and I am not surprised because I think they are delicious. There was one problem brought to me this summer. This gardener had good beans half way up the stems but there were only small black and dead pods at the top.

This is not a disease. What happened was that there was not enough plant food to ensure a complete crop. As a result, the top flowers failed to set through lack of pollen and the small, sterile pods turned black and died. Broad beans require a very rich soil to do their best and plenty of compost or rotted manure must be worked into the soil before the seed is sown in March or early April.

Jerusalem artichokes are hardy, tuberous-rooted relations of the sunflower and make a handy substitue for potatoes. They thrive in the poorest soils. Tubers are knobbly and should be planted between late January and March at one foot intervals in rows spaced three feet apart. They are very easy to maintain and apart from keeping the weeds down, nothing further is required.

They are usually lifted for the kitchen from November onwards. As the tubers are frost resistant, they may be left in the ground and lifted when required.

Many hardy annuals can be sown now. Not only will you get earlier flowers but the plants will be healthier and stronger. Among popular annuals that should be sown now are the Shirley poppies, cornflowers, Virginia stock, candytuft, clarkia, godetia and dianthus.

Young shrubs, particularly evergreens, are very vulnerable in the cold weather. This can lead to browning of needles and lower leaves. Remedy for this is to give a really good mulch around the plants after a heavy rainfall. Any organic mulch is good but in the case of acid lovers such as rhododendrons and azaleas, the mulch should be peat moss or one without lime.

Any established shrub can be transplanted from early fall to late spring provided the soil is neither frozen nor waterlogged. Main danger is that the roots can be badly damaged. To avoid this, dig deeply all the way around the shrub and take with it as much soil as possible.

Lever the shrub out with a shovel; crumble away surplus soil to lighten the load and replant as though you were putting in a new balled-root shrub. Water in well and mulch. It may be necessary to provide a stake if you are in an area with high winds.

If this job is done very carefully, it is possible to transplant quite large shrubs but if roots are damaged in the process, they should be carefully trimmed.

Simplest way to propagate many hardy, deciduous shrubs is by taking hardwood cuttings now. They should be taken from vigorous stems that have just completed their first season's growth.

Most shrubs need only to have their dead, straggly, and weak wood pruned as a matter of general upkeep. This can be done at any time of the year. Usually the more pruning you do to a shrub, the fewer but larger flowers will you get.

The author will endeavor to answer any questions on the subject of outdoor gardening. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: "Gardens", care of The Star, Box 220, Aldergrove, V0X 1A0. All letters will be answered personally, but some may be answered in this column.
