"WE MUST EMBARK ON A CRUSADE"

Dump protest gathers momentum

FERNRIDGE - It was the first protest meeting of probably many to come, and it was held last Friday night at the small community hall in this southwest Langley neighborhood.

Hall was packed to the rafters with residents of the Brookswood - Fernridge area who had come together on short notice. More than 125 people were present.

They were all upset about the possibility of a large garbage dump being established in Langley, but especially at a mined-out gravel pit at 200 Street and Zero Avenue.

"It appears as if we've been kept in the dark since March," said the organizer, Bob Irvin. He was later chosen as chairman of the new citizens group which is to fight any expropriation attempts by regional and provincial powers which could turn the Border Gravel pit into an enormous refuse dump.

"A lot of the information they still want to keep under wraps," Ivin said of the Lower Mainland Refuse Project committee that was commissioned early this year with finding the answers to garbage disposal in Vancouver and the lower mainland for the remainder of this century and the first half of the next.

Irvin came well armed to the meeting, aided by volunteers among his neighbors who had gathered a lot of information about the planned dump. He lives next door to the gravel pit himself.

"My personal view is that somebody is going to get a garbage dump (next door)," he said! "The thing is bigger than us."

But it would not be the Fernridge residents, he said.

Irvin said he also had spoken to the mayor of Blaine in neighboring Washington State and that the U.S. official was "quite appalled" when he heard of the plans. New suburbs of the seaside city are very close to the proposed dump, only being separated by Zero Avenue and the imaginary 49th parallel. If the LMRP still would try to push ahead with the south Langley dump, the Canadian authorities could find themselves into "a legal situation with Whatcom County," Irvin said. "We have a fairly strong ally across the line."

Irvin has organized what he hopes will become a mass rally of Langley residents. It will be held tonight, Wednesday, July 18 at 7 p.m. in the Langley secondary school just north of the municipal airport. "We have to have more than 1,000 people at that meeting," he said exuding confidence. He hopes to have the support of other groups from different parts of Langley township, although he stressed at the first meeting that "we have to organize our own group here (in Fernridge)." And, to Aldergrove people present, "Form your own committee."

John Clifton, a north Aldergrove resident who also is facing the possibility of a dump next door to his own home, warned that "they can't be allowed to pick us off one by one."

Clifton won the sympathy of Fernridge resident Brian Westwood who agreed with his concept of a united front being taken by all Langley residents.

"We must embark on a crusade," said Westwood, a former political figure himself. "Or they will try to drag us down."

Finally subcommittees to the as yet unnamed group were appointed and chairmen chosen. Clifton was selected as chairman of a "public relations" committee.

Invitations have gone out to lower mainland politicians to attend tonight's meeting. Special invited guests are Langley district mayor Bill Blair and his Surrey counterpart, Don Ross. Also local member of parliament Bob Wenman, and, in her capacity of Langley alderwoman but also as executive secretary to labor minister MLA Bob McClelland, Carol Gran. American civic officials are expected as well.

It is not known yet if they will all respond to the call.

Protestors to meet at County Line

ALDERGROVE - An information meeting for the residents of Aldergrove who are opposed to a garbage dump at 72 Ave. and 264 Street will be held at 8 p.m. on Monday, July 23 in the cafeteria of the Christian Fellowship Church at 52 Avenue and 264 Street.

Meeting organizer John Clifton says all residents in the area are upset by the report of the land fill committee of the Lower Mainland Refuse Project and by the proposal to take existing farmland and turn it into a one square mile regional dump for the lower mainland.

Natural gas rate boost is likely

VANCOUVER - The board of directors of British Columbia Hydro have decided to apply to the B.C. Utilites Commission for permission to pass on to customers an increase in the wholesale price of natural gas paid by Hydro.

If approved, the new rate - which would take effect Aug. 1 - will add about two percent or about $1 a month to the average residential natural gas bill, says a Hydro spokesman.

The Crown utility says it has been notified that the wholesale price it pays for natural gas will increase Aug. 1 to $2.87 per thousand feet from $2.78.

"Open wide" - Veterinarian Dr. David Paton inspects a Holstein dairy cow for infection. Paton has been the Pacific National Exhibition's show vet for the past three years and will be in the barns again this year for western Canada's biggest summer agriculture show, August 18 to September 3.

PNE cows under Paton's care

VANCOUVER - The difference between a quiet pasture in the Fraser Valley and the hustle and bustle of the Pacific National Exhibition's show barns can upset the smooth internal rhythms of a farmer's livestock. It's Dr. David Paton's job to make sure that disruption doesn't lead to anything worse.

"Animals are like people in many ways. There's stress involved in moving them and then the unfamiliar surroundings of the show barns. This can make them anxious, over-tired and susceptible to viruses when their immune system breaks down," he says.

Dr. Paton, an Aldergrove veterinarian, has been the PNE's show vet for the past three years, and when Canada's largest summer agriculture exhibition opens again this year August 18, he'll be there again, spending at least eight hours a day on the grounds taking care of exhibitor's animals.

And the quality of the animals shown at the PNE makes his job especially important. "It's nothing to be working on a cow worth $5,000 to $10,000," he says.

Jobless rate up in area

VANCOUVER - The jump in the jobless rate in Greater Vancouver has created crisis for the Vancouver Food Bank, the executive director of the organization for the needy says.

Sylvia Russell was responding to the latest unemployment news which showed the Vancouver area had the worst unemployment rate of any major metropolitan area in Western Canada during June - 14.7 percent - while the national rate continued to decline.

British Columbia's jobless rate also rose last month - to 15.7 percent from 15.6 in May - while the national rate fell to 11.2 percent from 11.7 percent, according to figures released by Statistics Canada.

The percentage figures mean there were 102,000 unemployed workers in the Vancouver metropolitan area last month compared with 96,000 a month ago, when the area's jobless rate was 14.1 percent.

Russell said food bank operations in Vancouver and outlying metropolitan communities, gave out more than 10,000 bags of food in May, compared with 4,000 at the same time last year.

"We've got a crisis," said Russell. "We've already reached our maximum level, and we've had to turn people away. It's a dire situation in terms of feeding people."

Russell said Statistics Canada's figures did not truly reflect the unemployment situation.

"It's much worse than it always appears to be," she said. "Statistics Canada doesn't include everyone who isn't working. They're usually out three or four percent.

Liability for hunters

MURRAYVILLE - In the future, hunters in Langley will be required to carry $1-million in public liability and property damage insurance.

Previously the minimum amount required was $100,000 insurance policies.

It will be "no imposition" to individual hunters and small hunting clubs, says Ald. Elford Nundal.

The administration committee chairman says the small two-man clubs can join forces with the Langley Rod & Gun club.

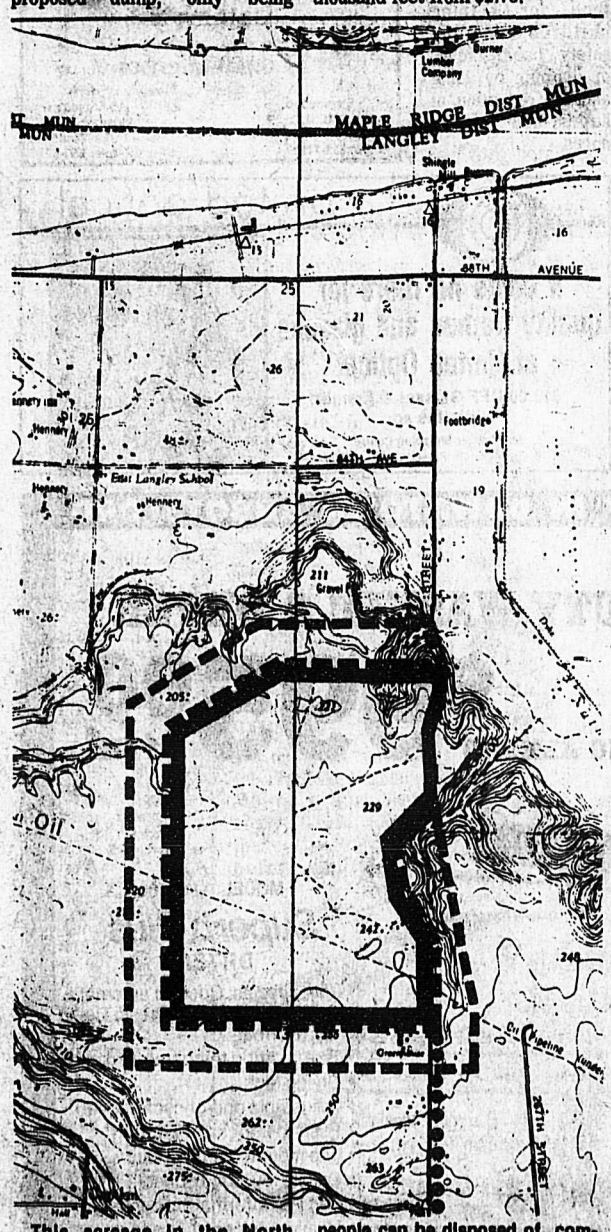
Tynehead lease approved

SURREY - The lease of about 30 acres of Tynehead regional park to the Tynehead Zoological Society, for a period of five years, has been approved by the board of directors of the Greater Vancouver regional district.

Tynehead is one of the GVRD's 14 parks in the lower mainland.

The purpose of the lease is to give the society an opportunity to get started on the initial component of its plans to develop a zoological garden at Tynehead. If the society meets the conditions under which it is granted the five-year lease, there is provision for additional land at Tynehead - up to about 450 acres - to be made available to it, in stages, for its full, proposed zoological garden development.

The GVRD holds 640 acres in total at Tynehead.



This acreage in the North Aldergrove - County Line area could be picked by a lower mainland study group as the site for a dump to serve most of the Fraser Valley for the next 15 to 50 years. Located as it is on a plateau overlooking Glen Valley it ranks high on a list of potential sites chosen by the Lower Mainland Refuse Project committee. Commissioned by the provincial government and three regional districts to find a place where the garbage from some two million people can be disposed of, committee has representation from most of the municipalities that would become directly affected. Langley's representative is chief engineer Bill Lakevold, and Matsqui's Ed Regts.

Since there is no natural or man-created indentation in the property at the 7800 block of 264 Street, the garbage from a million households could eventually build a new mountain on what is now agricultural land.

Town Talk

By LYNDA FRANZ

What do you think would improve prosperity as well as living and social conditions in Aldergrove?

Charlie Ness: I think the most important thing to do is for council to stop fooling around and get some more jobs in the area. Proposed industrial parks should be discussed more openly.

Bruce Wellenbrink: Faster cars, faster women, and longer summers would improve Aldergrove.

Melvin Ormel: Industry should be more developed. With more industry, there will be more construction; and so more employment will be available.

Tracey Nordeen: For the youth of Aldergrove, more activities should be organized. Business could probably be stimulated by better shopping facilities. When I go shopping, very rarely do I stay in Aldergrove. We are supposed to be part of the Langley municipality but it seems that Aldergrove gets left out while Langley continues to grow.

Billie Bosley: A shopping mall with late shopping hours or a theatre would definitely help to improve Aldergrove. What Aldergrove really needs though, is a facelift.

Alex Paul: The government should promote large industries so that Aldergrove can prosper instead of laying dormant.

World population could reach 10-billion by 2050

WASHINGTON - The world population explosion is threatening to "plunge countries into chaos" by halting developing in the poorest developing countries and threatening the quality of life in others, World Bank President A.W. Clausen says.

Clausen says if the bank's projections are correct, the world population will rise from almost 4.8 billion today to nearly 10 billion by the middle of the next century.

"For the poorest countries, development may not be possible at all unless slower population growth can be achieved soon," he says.

Clausen spoke in Nairobi, Kenya - The country where the number of people is probably growing faster than anywhere else. Kenya has a population of 19,700,000 and it will grow by some 750,000, or 3.8 percent, this year.

Copies of the speech before the National Leaders Seminar on Population and Development were released in Washington.

"By the time the world's population stabilized at over 11 billion in about the year 2150, the population of India would be 1.8 billion, making it the most populous nation on Earth," Clausen said.

"And Kenya's population would have risen ... to a staggering 160 million, a situation surely as impermissible as it is unimaginable.

In the United States and other more prosperous countries, population now grows at less than one percent a year. Of the 80 million by which the world's population is increasing annually, more than 70 million live in poor countries, Clausen said.

Clausen noted that a survey made in 1977 and 1978 indicated Kenyan families would like to have about seven children but each mother was having an average of eight.

Studies by the World Bank show that people in poor countries want large numbers of children because traditionally so many babies die, to support them in old age, and to help in farm work.

To counter that, Clausen called for better health service to reduce infanct mortality; better education; old age insurance and family planning services.

He said 26 countries have no family planning services - almost half of them in Africa where incomes are the lowest, population growth the highest and potential benefit from such services the greatest.

Clausen said there are proper policies for governments to reduce fertility, even though private rights are paramount, and that many poor countries have shown that quick and effective measures can be taken to enforce such policies.

He cited Colombia, China and Thailand as countries that have achieved population declines in the last 20 years.

Kids and cars

Accident statistics show that children between ages two and six are more likely to die in traffic accidents than from any other cause. In British Columbia, motor vehicle branch records for 1983 show that 306 pedestrians under 10 died or were injured in traffic accidents.

To help ensure a safer summer, parents should understand the limitations young children have regarding traffic. A young child's ability to think logically, discern where sounds are coming from and determine which direction objects are moving are underdeveloped.

Usually children under six are farsighted, their side vision is not well developed, their eyes are not well co-ordinated and focusing takes longer than it does for adults. Height also impairs their vision. All these factors, combined with a short attention span, give them a vastly different view of the world.

If allowed complete freedom, youngsters will act beyond their capabilities. They tend to run across streets, play in driveways and streets and, in general, disregard traffic. The most effective method for helping children develop safety habits relies on learning by doing and the repetition of supervised experiences.

Universe's origin being studied

NEW YORK - It involves notions like matter emerging from nothing, but studying the beginnings of the universe is in some ways easier than forecasting weather, a physicist says.

"The early universe is in many ways much simpler than the weather," says Alan Guth, an associate physics professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in New York, Guth discussed why theorists have confidence about happenings 12 to 20 billion years ago when weather forecasters can't tell reliably what will happen a short time in the future.

While weather forecasters face an atmosphere riddled with local variations, theorists deal with what they believe was a highly uniform environment that gave rise to it all, Guth said.

Over the past four years, Guth and Paul Steinhardt of the University of Pennsylvania have developed what they call an "inflationary universe" explanation for how the observable universe was created.

Supporters say it solves some problems posed by the standard Big Bang theory, which says a massive concentration of matter exploded to produce the current universe.

Steinhardt said the Big Bang theory can't account for why matter is spread so uniformly through the universe, and why the "bang" was just strong enough to produce the known universe.

According to the new theory, the universe earthlings can observe - so huge it takes light 10 to 20 billion years to cross it - emerged from a tiny bubble of space, far smaller than an atom, in a chaotic cosmic foam.

The bubble became unusually hot and then expanded and cooled. At some point it cooled enough that it began to congeal like water slowly freezing.

Then it began to expand at a tremendous rate.

Energy given off in that expansion turned into subatomic particles, creating virtually all the matter to be found in the new universe.

"Virtually everything we see is produced after the universe is in some snse verse in in some sense already begun," Steinhardt said.

Smith raps new offenders act

VICTORIA - Classifying 17-year-olds as young offenders is nonsense and will cost British Columbia taxpayers $70 million over the next four years, attorney general Brian Smith said.

Smith says justification for the recently-proclaimed Young Offenders Act, which raises the juvenile age to 18 and advocates less use of lockups and the judicial system, pales when one considers the increased financial burden put on the province.

He says juvenile caseloads in British Columbia are expected to increase by 45 percent to about 55,000 a year.

"It is absolute nonsense to include 17-year-olds as young offenders. They are more than old enough to take responsibility for their own actions and they should be dealt with in adult courts."

Smith says the additional financial burden, including new facilities and staff, will force the provincial government to "put a hold on the continuation of expansion and replacement programs for some of our adult detention centres."

Smith also criticized the new legislation for guaranteeing accused young people representation by legal counsel in virtually all circumstances.

"In my view this is beyond the guarantee established by the Charter of Rights and it is beyond common sense," he says. "The unnecessary involvement of lawyers in the disposition of young offenders matters will result not in due process but in overdone process and overdue justice. Justice must be dispensed in a timely as well as fair manner."

Solicitor general Robert Kaplan says the legislation is not without problems, noting that there still is no agreement on who pays legal aid for young offenders.

He also admits it will mean extra costs for the provinces, saying that "16 and 17 are the ages where greatest delinquency exists."

Kaplan discounts predictions that young people will be sentenced to custody more frequently and for longer periods.

Leclair chosen by NDP

SURREY - On Sunday, July 15 at Clayton community centre former NDP candidate Joe Leclair was elected by acclamation as the party's candidate for Fraser Valley West. Constituency takes in north and east Surrey, Langley city and Langley municipality to the Matsqui border.

Leclair, who in 1980 received 33 percent of the vote, spoke on the need for a full time member of parliament and the creation of permanent employment in Fraser Valley West.

Child abuse: A survivor's view

There's a silent epidemic going on, one more devastating than any disease. The epidemic is child sexual abuse, and the only cure is to break the silence and talk about it.

Shirley Turcotte, a comination-man with B.C. Tel's business communications group, is one person who has broken the silence so completely that she is making a documentary film on the topic with the National Film Board of Canada.

The film, which will be ready in 1985, is a very personal experience for Turcotte as it is based on her as yet unpublished autobiography, "Breaking the Silence."

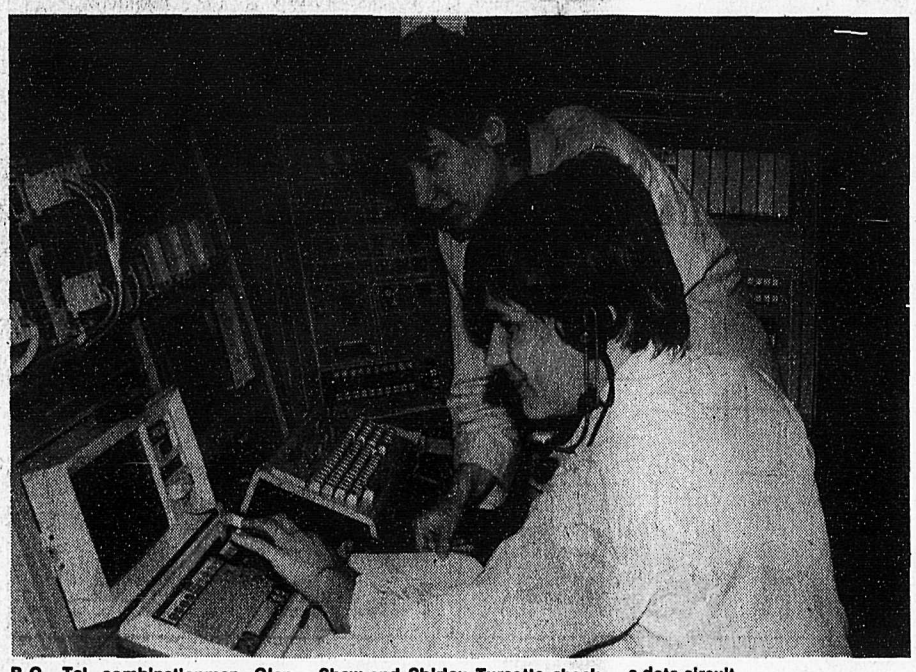
The book chronicles Turcotte's struggle and survival with a past that is shared by one in four girls and one in eight boys, according to figures used by the ministry of human resources. Less than half of these children will "survive" to lead normal lives -- many become involved in drugs, prostitution, crime or commit suicide. These statistics are the reason why Turcotte decided to speak out.

"Talking about it is so important. It doesn't really matter if a child has been abused once or a thousand times, it's the silence that's so damaging," says Turcotte, who conducts workshops and speaks to school and community groups on the subject.

"I wrote my autobiography so that other abused children would realize they aren't alone and that it is possible to overcome the past and grow up to be a whole person," says Turcotte. "I now have a wonderful three-year-old son, a loving supportive husband and a great career." Turcotte was in Bell Canada's central office maintenance for eight years before joining B.C. Tel four years ago. Her job entails analysing trouble reports on special services telephone circuits.

"I was 18 when I found out from a doctor that what I had experienced wasn't unique. This shocked me because I'd always felt I was the only one in the world it was happening to -- that I was a freak. If there'd been a book or film, or even if I'd heard about someone else with the problem, I wouldn't have felt so isolated."

Turcotte says being an abused chile "is like walking around with a ball and chain for the rest of your life. The memories can flood back at any time. Either you learn to deal with it and be a survivor, or you give up and remain a victim. The choice is yours."



B.C. Tel combinationmen Glen Shaw and Shirley Turcotte check a data circuit.

Turcotte points out that child sexual abuse usually occurs from ages three to nine years of age. However, it can also occur much earlier. If the abuse is occuring in the home, it may continue until the child leaves.

There are no social or economic patterns when it comes to child sexual abuse. Offenders can be laborers, teachers, doctors, lawyers, the unemployed, the wealthy, the young or the old. The offender usually is known to the child, such as a parent, a grandparent, an older sibling or other relative, a family friend, a neighbor, or the babysitter.

The abuse is self-perpetuating because if an abused child grows up, he or she often becomes an offender, or enters into an abusive situation. For instance, a woman who was abused as a child may blot out the memory so that she has trouble accepting that her own child is being abused. Abused boys may grow up to abuse their own children, explains Turcotte.

The way to break this cycle, she says, is to become politically and socially aware of the problem, educate children to say "no" and to "tell someone", and get the offenders to admit to themselves and others what they've done. The latter is based on the same principle as Alcoholics Anonymous.

Turcotte says children as young as two years old can be told that certain body parts are private and that no one else should touch them. This can be mentioned casually, tactfully, perhaps at bathtime.

As children get older, information should be made available to them and questions answered honestly. Point out that not all adults do these things, but that you want them to know about it so that if approached, they will say "no" and then "tell someone". Parents need to give their children permission to tell. This destroys the element of secrecy so vital to child sexual abuse relationships.

Turcotte stresses that young children don't lie about sexual abuse. "They have nothing to gain by it and are too innocent to understand what's happening. Always believe a young child who tells you that he or she is being abused."

She adds that sexual abuse is often difficult to detect, aside from obvious medical evidence. While not conclusive evidence of abuse, certain behavioral traits have been compiled by medical and lay people to alert adults that sexual abuse may be occurring.

For instance, withdrawal or extreme fear when asked if someone has touched his or her private parts; extreme reluctance to go to the sitter or daycare; sudden poor personal hygiene; problems at school; constantly sick; running away from home; interest in or imitating sexual behavior that is inappropriate to their age; fear of closed doors, or rooms with one exit, wearing excessive amounts of clothing; self-destructive behavior; frequent sleepless nights; nightmares; and bedwetting.

Turcotte says it's not enough to protect our own children. "We are also responsible for our community's children. If you know or even suspect child abuse is taking place, it is your duty and legal responsibility to report it to the authorities.

"We must ensure that all children grow up in loving circumstances, so they will do the same for their own children," says Turcotte.

LANGLEY - The staff of Wendy's Restaurant are holding a car wash at 19644 Fraser Highway from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday July 21, with donations to go to Langley Family Services.

Family Services provide services such as lay counselling, crisis and help line counselling, school for parents and food bank.

Motion sickness studied on shuttle

SASKATOON- Those who suffer motion sickness may benefit from research that will be carried out by Canadians participating in the American space shuttle program, says Kenneth Money, selected recently to be one of the first Canadians in space.

"It's a little-known fact that about 15 percent of all fatal aircraft accidents are the result of pilot disorientation," said Money, one of six scientists chosen by the National Research Council to participate in the program.

Application of the Canadian space program's research includes treatment of the motion sickness at sea, on buses and in elevators - as well as prevention of air disasters, he told a Canadian Federation of Biological Societies conference.

Money invented the Precision Angular Mover, a chair-like object which turns the occupant into a human centrifuge and induces motion sickness.

"I'm guilty of inventing it, but I was also the first subject," he said ruefully.

Hour of decision

Since he didn't invent the rules by which the game is played, John Turner can hardly be faulted for calling an election when it seems most likely that his party can win it.

That his decision involved cancellation of a visit by the queen certainly shows slight respect for Her Majesty, but no doubt he will suffer some political punishment for that from voters in the communities she was to have visited.

For the average voter the question is simply whether he or she thinks that the Conservatives under Brian Mulroney are likely to do a better job of governing the country than the Liberals under John Turner.

The difficult part is that for neither alternative is there much of a record to judge on. Turner did not choose to perform as prime minister long enough for many to get much of a handle on him, and Mulroney has never had the job. The Conservatives are also almost untried. Their brief term in office five years ago certainly had its ups and downs, but didn't leave much of a mark on the nation.

All that is known for sure is the record of the Liberal government under Pierre Trudeau, which Canadians over most of the country demonstrated an overwhelming urge to do away with. Is it really possible to change the government completely by changing the leader? If most Canadians decide that a Turner government will be just the same old gang, they will probably vote to defeat it.

It seems to us unlikely that there will be any great swing towards either party. Probably the Conservatives will finish with a solid majority in the West and the Liberals will win almost all the seats where the majority of voters are Francophones.

Ontario, and particularly the Toronto area, will then be left to make the final decision.

So what else is new?

Gov't. must sometimes intervene

By BILL BENNETT

Big government not only burdens taxpayers, but as it increases in size, it tends to become more intrusive.

Here in British Columbia, where we've reduced the size and cost of government and its involvement in areas more appropriate to the private sector, we believe government's role should not be interventionist.

It's an attitude that's reflected in our approach to labor relations. Since becoming government in 1976, we have never had a policy of legislating workers back on the job.

There are, however, exceptions to every rule, and situations do develop where the ripple effect of a lockout or strike broadens to damage the provincial economy and the rights of innocent third parties. Even so, our government has and always will, exercise the utmost discretion before intervening.

One of these few occasions occurred in the recent pulp dispute which had idled thousands of British Columbians and threatened our reputation as reliable suppliers.

Our action in ending the work stoppage and establishing a framework for new talks came only after it was clear all the processes had been exhausted. Our concern was to get the parties back together, not to impose a legislated settlement, and in this, we were successful.

The subsequent negotiations were difficult and protracted but a settlement at the bargaining table was reached and recently ratified.

Because the parties finally recognized their responsibilities, the integrity of the collective bargaining process was preserved and a meaningful agreement is now in place.

That's especially important for those communities where pulp mills are the mainstay of the economy. They can look forward to a period of labor peace in which steady paycheques will generate economic activity for local business, and at the same time, increase consumer confidence.

But while government intervention is sometimes essential, to use it only for expediency would in the long run, be counterproductive.

Our government believes that labor and management must assume the major responsibility for resolving their difficulties and that our major role in the process, is to assist by supplying mediation and other services where they are appropriate.

If economic recovery is to take place, labor and management have to learn to work together realistically, and to bargain settlements which bring stability and at the same time, increase productivity so British Columbia can stay competitive in tough world markets.

Given today's economic conditions, it's simply no longer realistic or valid to accept the "Them and us" approach which has been traditional in the field of labor relations.

Confrontation and costly work stoppages have to give way to a new era of co-operation in which labor and management - working together - can find and develop innovative and imaginative new techniques to resolve disputes.

If they can, and I'm confident that a more mature attitude is developing, we can forge a partnership that will allow our province to meet the difficult challenges we all know lie ahead.

Comment

An obvious choice

Canadians go to the polls Sept. 4 to choose a new government and despite claims to the contrary, there are considerable differences in the two major party leaders and some very obvious choices are going to have to be made by the electorate.

At issue may be, as Tory leader Brian Mulroney insists, the record of the Liberal government over the last 20 years and given the fact the John Turner called this election, by his own admission, before the economic picture darkens any further, it may be that Canada now has its best chance in our lifetime to change directions.

We cannot continue in the pattern of deficit financing of our current federal government for another decade without exhausting all our reserves of cash for generations to come.

As we go to the polls, every taxpaying Canadian faces the reality that he owes this current government $16,500 per year in terms of the $187 billion dollar deficit built up from a $9 million beginning when Turner was minister of finance.

Turner introduced the principal of deficit financing to Canadian political life and as a nation we have been driven deeper and deeper into debt ever since. We no longer have the capacity to pay out the debts we owe, particularly when the money has been borrowed from financial institutions in the U.S. which even now are driving interest rates through the roof and the value of the Canadian dollar through the floor.

Somewhere, by somebody, that revolving door to economic oblivion must be slowed and then stopped. Since Turner was the author of the policy of deficit financing, there is little hope for us if we seek relief from that direction.

We must look then to the only other political party in Canada capable of providing the brains and muscle to meet our national responsibilities.

Mulroney's Tories are vastly different than the John Diefenbaker or Joe Clark Tories. Neither Diefenbaker nor Clark had ever been schooled in business management and the lack of formal training showed up when they were elected to head a government.

The same can't be said of the boy from Baie Comeau, Mulroney. He may have begun his working career as a truck driver, but he put himself through law school and parlayed that training into the major management position of a failing national company.

It is history, whether his opponents care to admit it or not, that Mulroney brought the company back from the brink of bankruptcy to affluence and in the process established his credibility with the labor movement because of his handling of the unions involved.

It is that very scenario into which Mulroney must walk when he is elected as prime minister and since he has at least had on-the-job training, the fact that he faces those onerous responsibilities with enthusiasm indicates that he at least knows a major change can be effected.

The choice is clear. More of the same with Turner, or a new beginning with Mulroney. The NDP can't seem to manage any more national credibility under Ed Broadbent than they did under Major Coldwell or Tommy Douglas.

Bubblehead Ed may claim Turner and Mulroney are the Bobbsey twins from Bay St., but he is still the Oshawa washout in Canadian politics. He couldn't put together a government if he fluked an election victory!

Too many promises

By ROGER WORTH

Promises, promises, promises. That's what Canadians can expect to hear during the next few weeks as campaigners for the three major political parties (plus those from a few minor parties and independents) hit the campaign trail.

Indeed, if all the promises made between now and the September 4 election day could be fulfilled, we'd be living in Utopia.

There would be full employment, and no need for unemployment insurance. Interest rates would be low, and home ownership would be possible for virtually everyone. The Canadian dollar would rise in value, rather than fall, compared to its U.S. counterpart.

Wage levels would rise substantially, while inflation would hover around the one percent mark. Needless to say, farm and fish prices would be much higher than they are now, and we'd be exporting more resources at higher prices.

The list of promises that will be forthcoming from our potential federal representatives is endless.

Alas, everything that will be promised is simply not possible to achieve, and most Canadians understand fully that such is the case.

A 1,000 year error

Any newspaper editor will tell you typographical errors -- and even factual errors -- are an unfortunate but sometimes unavoidable part of the business.

Nevertheless, there had to be some embarrassing moments for editors of the Toronto Star a couple of weeks ago. A photo caption not only gave the wrong name for Gord Gatch of Orillia, Ont., but it also gave his incorrect age -- and was off by a mere 1,000 years.

Last week, The Star ran a correction saying the newspaper "seems to have been carried away by the party his friends held in his honor. We published a photo of Mr. Gatch but the caption identified him by another man's name and, in some editions, it also said he was 1,100 years old."

The newspaper, which reran the picture of the rather spry-looking Gatch, said it regretted the error.

Learn to laugh at yourself

Walking across a night club with the back of your cocktail dress tucked in the top of your pantyhose can be embarrassing.

So can telling a Mexican cab driver that you're a "very hot lady" - in rusty high school Spanish - when you think you're talking about the weather.

But situations like these can also be funny, says the woman who had both of these potentially demolishing experiences.

"Ask yourself the question: If this happened to someone else, would it be funny?" broadcaster Leslies Hughes advised about 150 people at a Winnipeg workshop on humor as a survival tool for women.

"Honest to God, it really works," said Hughes, recalling the time she decided to laugh when she found her hitched-up dress turning heads in a fancy night club.

Hughes, who has worked for the CBC in New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, is now with the CBC in Winnipeg where she also writes a column for The Sun.

Economic pressures keep women at work

OTTAWA - The women's liberation movement may have lured wives out of the house in the 1970s and early 1980s, but economic pressures helped drive them to work, a Statistics Canada analyst says.

The economic health of families improved at a slower pace throughout the 1970s and finally began to deteriorate by 1979, says a report prepared by Edward Pryor and released by Statistics Canada.

But the incomes of families would have declined sooner and further had it not been for the increasing contribution from working wives, says Pryor, director general of Statistics Canada's census and household statistics branch.

"I think there has been the view that women have just entered the labor force more and more for 'self-fulfilment, newfound freedom or equality,' " he said in an interview.

"That may be true, but they're also out there because they've got to provide economic support to the family to make up for what's happening in the labor market for men.

"The economy has been a major preoccupation of the 1970s and early 1980s under unprededented and largely unanticipated conditions," says the study which reflectgs Pryor's personal opinions.

"Surges in interest rates, the dramatic rise of energy prices, and increased foreign influence on consumer markets made the economy one of the major issues of this period.

"These economic developments worked their way down to the family level where they were manifested in mortgage rates, consumer loan rates, home heating costs, purchasing power of pensions, transportation costs, property taxes and shelter costs in general.

"These are all part of the litany of economic pressures which families had to face," it says.

Figures show the breadwinning role of wives increased during the decade. They contributed only 25.2 percent of average family income in 1971, but were contributing 28.1 percent in 1981.

In inflation-adjusted or real terms, the average incomes of husbands grew by only 12.6 percent during the period, while wives' incomes grew by 34.1 percent.

In 1971, more than one-third of families depended solely on the husband's income. By 1981, that proportion had fallen to 18 percent.

"The data presented here indicate that the family economic position would have deteriorated significantly without the escalating contribution from wives," the report says. "The income of wives during the period was the significant factor in preventing family incomes from declining in real dollar terms prior to that."

In effect, tough economic times have contributed to the move toward equality for women, Pryor said. Families would have been in rougher shape today if it hadn't been for the increase in the number of working wives.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

"Writ" off the Grits

Editor, The Star, Sir,

So the writ has been dropped, as the politicians say. September 4 is the date of the federal election.

Let us all take the oath on this 'Day 1' of the campaign and promise ourselves we will not be swayed by Beautiful Blue Eyes Turner no matter how convincing he may sound. He and his Liberals don't have the answers to restoring Canada to a healthy prosperity.

Every morning, for the next 50 or so, look at yourself in the mirror and say, "I will not forget the Trudeau years. I will not vote Liberal on Sept. 4."

Pool money could be better spent on two

Editor, The Star, Sir,

It seems to me that $4.6-million is too much for a swimming pool, although I agree with council and Ald. Arnason who brought forth a motion that the project be revived. I would like to see Langley receive maximum value for that kind of investment.

I have talked with a contractor and was told that $4.6-million for a pool complex was indeed a large price tag. He said fancy architecture was extremely expensive and can raise your dollar per square foot costs considerably.

My suggestion is that perhaps two pools be built and make each pool an efficient, safe but modest complex.

People in Aldergrove deserve a pool just as much as folks in Brookswood or Langley city. The objective is to build a swimming pool, not a monument to modern architecture.

Since Ald. Carol Gran does not like me to come to council as a delegation too often I will just suggest this from afar.

I thank the Aldergrove Star for the opportunity to communicate this idea to the readers of this paper.

A member of the Super Socco Big Apple Breakers, one of the top breakdancing groups in the world, spins like a top at a recent exhibition of breakdancing in Vancouver. This year, the Pacific National Exhibition, August 18 to September 3, hosts Breakdance '84, the biggest breakdancing competition in Western Canada. Mr. T. of the A Team, the Big Apple Breakers and the Mini-Pops will be on hand to entertain fair-goers.

Doing head spins during break dance performance at Aldergrove Centre mall are Marc Merali and Chico Gaucher from Montreal's "Street Machine Crew". Other members of group are Randall McClure, Andre Girard and Bobby Gaucher in background.

Break dancers bring the coasts together

ALDERGROVE - Break dancing brought young people together from eastern and western Canada last week.

The "Street Machine Crew" from Montreal, Chico Gaucher, Marc Merali and Bobby Gaucher brought their eight months knowledge of break dancing to the Aldergrove Mall. Local shopping center was the host for a week of demonstration of mime, head spins, rhythmical body movements that intrigued and entertained the onlookers.

The "Body Breakers" from Aldergrove, Andre Girard, Stephen Gilmore, Randall McClure and Bryan Krauchyshyn, have been into break dancing for two months, taking instruction from Russ and Linwood of Shape Fitness Fair in Langley. Other dancers are Michael Morall, Ricky Morall, Chriss Allen and Brad Bacon.

"We have learned much from the advanced dancers from New York, picked it up from videos, the streets and previous to this have not had any dance training," said Gaucher. "It's a lot of fun, painful, it takes a lot of work to be good at it, the same effort that it takes to be good in any sport. It is a dangerous dance, so caution should be taken. These guys in Aldergrove have the right idea to move slow and take it easy."

In 1976, break dancing turned street fights into competitions; instead of fists and knives, it is now body movement and music Some of the groups have been seen on the Merv Griffin show and much of this unique dancing is being done on commercials and rock video shows.

Summer Games open tomorrow

BURNABY - On July 19 the B.C. Summer Games kick off at 6:30 p.m. at Swangard Stadium. Admission is free but spectators should get there early for a good seat.

The opening ceremonies begin as over 150 dancers troop on to the field to entertain with the theme "Then and now". Following their performance athletes from all over B.C. will march on to the field displaying each zone's colors. Keep an eye out for the blackpowder competitors.

Following opening speeches, two Burnaby runners, Don and Dan Steen, a father and son team, will carry the flame and light the torch to officially open the games.

ASK ANNABELLE

Dear Annabelle,

Congratulations on winning a prize in the Aldergrove baking contests, that was real nifty. All your readers are proud of you. Your strawberry concoction puts me in mind of a true story which happened to a friend of mine when he went to Hawaii and wanted to eat some poi - a local native delicacy. It seemed he was told that someone on a remote island made the world's most famous poi and so he rented a dugout canoe and paddled for many days through storms and other bad weather. He got to the island and then had to climb a steep mountain with lava streaming down from a volcano. When he got to the top there was a little grass shack with a large sign on it, "World Famous Poi."

"Give me some poi," said my friend, staggering and drenched.

"Certainly," said the proprietor, "What kind do you like - we have apple poi, lemon meringue poi, raisin poi, steak and kidney poi, pork poi." Isn't that cute?

Signed: Poi.

Dear Poi,

And that's the silliest story I've ever hoid.....

Dear Annabelle,

Here is a little trick that I've known all my life for those moments when life becomes too hectic. I taught myself this trick and so it is mine, not anyone else's. I own this trick. Here it is: Just close your eyes for a minute, empty your mind, think of nothing and there you are. I thought you and your readers would like that, remember - it's my trick.

Signed: Not a Loony.

Dear Not,

Now if you could teach yourself to bring your mind back from where ever you left it. That would be some trick!

Star readers are invited to mail in their questions or problems to ASK ANNABELLE. Use a nom-de plume if you wish. The address is ASK ANNABELLE, c-o The Aldergrove Star, Box 220, Aldergrove, B.C., V0X 1A0.

GARDENING IN THE VALLEY

Grapes need severe pruning for results

By DON ANSON

If you are planting a grape vine for the first time you must realize that a considerable amount of pruning is necessary to get good results.

Young vines should be cut back to within one foot of the base in order to encourage strong growth. When growing as a cordon, allow about four feet of growth each year, pruning back in the winter the main shoot to just above a bud.

All side shoots or laterals that develop should be pruned back to within one eye of their base.

If grown as an espalier, cut the main shoot to within eight inches of soil level immediately after planting. Probably three shoots will grow out of the top in the summer. Train the lower two left and right and the upper one vertically. In the winter, take half off half the lengths of all three shoots.

In the following year, train two further side shoots from the vertical shoot about 18 inches from the previous side shoots. Continue like this for three or four years until the requisite layers of branches have been formed.

Once your vine has been formed, you should prune back the horizontal branches each winter. Cut off at least half of their leaders or one-year-old growths. Also remove any side growths in December to within one bud of the base.

Grape vines can get into a terrific tangle because of lack of pruning. You have to be quite ruthless with your winter pruning. About the only summer pruning that should be done is to rub out the weaker laterals and retain the strong ones.

Don't allow the vine to overcrop in its early years. Allow one good bunch in the third season, five at the fourth, eight at the fifth and so on.

Apply liquid manure once every two weeks in the summer and mulch the soil with well rotted manure or compost.

This is the time of the year to sow seeds of all those popular biennial flowering plants that cost so much to buy in the spring. Such plants as hollyhocks, sweet williams, aquilegia (columbines) and Canterbury bells all make such a colorful addition to the garden. From any one packet of these seeds you can get hundreds of plants. They can be sown outside in a prepared seed bed or grown indoors in a flat.

All that is required is to keep the seed bed moist at all times and not allow the young seedlings to get too leggy before thinning out. All your perennials can be sown now and will bloom next year. Get the best seeds obtainable and make sure they are fresh seeds.

All recently planted trees and shrubs should be mulched as a matter of course and all plants grown near walls or under an overhang should be mulched for most of the year. Do your mulching after a heavy rainfall or watering. If compost or farmyard manure is used as the mulch, this has the additional advantage that nutrients will be carried to the plant's roots every time it rains.

There is a lot of bark mulch sold in this area. It has its value as a mulch for evergreens and shrubs but don't try to dig this in or use it in the vegetable garden. It would take a tremendous time to rot away and contains hardly any plant nutrients. The same applies to pine needles, which should only be used as a mulch for acid loving plants such as rhododendrons and azaleas.

If you are growing delphiniums, cut back the plants as soon as they have finished flowering. Cut them down to about a foot from the ground and then give the plants some liquid fertilizing. A second crop of flowers can then be expected in late August or September. Only do this with two or three year old plants as first year plants will be retarded by second-crop blooms. Effective plant life of the delphinium is about three or four years, after which they start to deteriorate. Then is the time to divide the clumps or to take cuttings.

Early July and August is the time when rhododendrons form next year's flower buds. It is also the time when many gardeners forget all about them. Soak them thoroughly once a week in dry weather but stop all watering by the middle of September.

Many plants are now showing a scorched appearance on their leaves. I have noticed this particularly with hydrangeas and crab apples. This is not a disease but a hangover from all the cold wet weather that we had early on in the season.

OR SO THEY SAY

Conservatives would help farmers

VANCOUVER - A federal Progressive Conservative government would provide long-term, reasonable loans to farmers, say members of the party's British Columbia caucus.

Four caucus members, a nominated candidate and Murray Cardiff, the party's deputy agriculture critic from the Ontario constituency of Huron-Bruce, met with 10 B.C. agriculture groups last week to hear their concerns.

The group's spokesman, Gerry St. Germain, MP for Mission-Port Moody, said interest rates and financing are the primary concerns of the farm groups.

He said without stable interest rates and long-term loans, "the viability of it (the agricultural sector) is in jeopardy."

Lorne Greenaway, MP for Cariboo-Chilcotin, said "agriculture is at the 12th hour" and needs government help if its viability is to be ensured.

St. Germain said the caucus agrees with the B.C. federation of agriculture that the federal tax on farm fuels should be lifted.

He said, "With the election of (Tory leader) Brian Mulroney that would be done."

The farm groups also stressed the importance of putting more money into research and development and St. Germain said a Tory government would "address the matter."

Although the caucus criticized the Farm Credit Corp. for becoming a lender of last resort rather than being a cheaper credit source to the banks, the members could provide no details about what a Tory government would do.

They could not say what a reasonable interest rate is for farmers. Cardiff said the Farm Credit Corp. studies show an average return of investment by farmers of three percent.

But he said obviously it would be impossible to lend money at that rate.

Another member said half of prime rate plus one was a possibility and St. Germain said 10 percent might be reasonable.

They also weren't specific about how a Tory government would pay for the reduced interest rates.

Fred King, Okanagan-Similkameen MP, said agri-bonds might be the answer.

Agri-bonds would be set up so individuals could make long-term investments into agriculture and loans for farmers in return for a tax write-off. This would be similar to the scheme a few years ago where investors could put money into developing multi-unit residential dwellings (MURBs) and get a tax benefit.

When asked why the Conservatives in opposition supported changing the statutory Crowsnest Pass freight rates, which increased farm transportation costs, King said the Conservatives did get some amendments.

However, St. Germain said a federal Conservative government would look at the new freight pricing formula and consider changes if farm groups could show the need for it.

Farm equipment sales still sluggish

TORONTO - Farm equipment sales in Canada are still sluggish, says the Canadian Farm and Industrial Equipment Institute.

After four consecutive years of slumping sales, the industry had hoped for a turnaround in 1984, but the latest figures show the recovery is spotty.

"The Canadian farm equipment industry is not likely to finish 1984 in spectacular fashion," says the institute's recently released mid-year outlook summary.

"This year is going to be, and indeed, already is, a difficult business year for our industry."

It adds, however, that "the worst of the unfavorable economic conditions that affect our industry are now well behind us."

Tractor sales rose 7.6 percent from last year, but are still lagging below 1982 levels. The bright spots are for sales of mid-sized two-wheel-drive tractors, up 29 percent, and four-wheel-drive tractors, up 26 percent.

Total combine sales are down from last year but sales of big, self-propelled combines are holding their own.

Low wheat prices for western Canadian farmers have dampened prospects of a sales boom on the Prairies for combines.

MARQUEE - Film Review

RHINESTONE (PG-20th Century-Fox) Starring Sylvester Stallone, Dolly Parton and Ron Liebman. ★

This is no knock-out

By J.T. YURKO

There have been some strange pairings of actors in motion pictures, but none can match the duo of Sylvester Stallone and Dolly Parton. If opposites truly attract, these two would be stuck together forever.

Stallone is having a tough time making people forget that he ever played anyone but Rocky Balboa. In the "Rocky" films, he played a well-meaning but slow-witted Italian Stallion heavyweight boxer. With "Rhinestone," he appears as a well-meaning but slow-witted Italian cabdriver instead.

Miss Parton comes into the act when she bets that she can make the next person she meets into a country/Western singing star. Guess who the next person she bumps into is?

With this film, Stallone actually gets to sing country/Western songs with Miss Parton. Does he have a voice? Let's put it this way, the Italian Stallion has now become the Nashville Nag.

This down-home "Hee-Haw" version of "Pygmalion" would be even more tedious were it not for the highly engaging personalities of its stars. They are on-screen almost the entire movie, acting out the barest excuse for a script seen since the last Irwin Allen disaster film. Stallone's comic asides provide the only laughs in the film and also enable him to get co-credit for the screenplay.

But as a musical comedy team, Stallone and Miss Parton do not make beautiful music together. When Stallone sings his final song, the audience on-screen is applauding wildly, but the theater audience will be giggling noticeably.

Miss Parton and Stallone both have their faithful legion of fans, and each group will be pleased with their respective performer. One must give credit to Stallone for having guts enough to plunge into country/Western singing, but in this case discretion in his choice of roles would have been the better part of valor.

Field naturalists from across continent enjoy sights at Campbell park

By MARY PASTRICK

ALDERGROVE - Every province was represented at the conference for the Federation of B.C. Naturalists held at UBC from July 5 to 8.

It was one of the best organized meetings with naturalist displays showing the projects that each club is participating in, interesting field trips and guest speakers, hosting 200 attending visitors from Newfoundland, North Carolina, New Brunswick, Osoyoos, Victoria, Edmonton, Red Lake, Manitoba and many other places.

The business meeting ended up on Saturday night with three group discussions and with Dr. Ian McTaggart-Cowan presenting an illustrated slide program on the mammals of the North Pacific.

The Langley Field Naturalists hosted the hikers with a luncheon at the Coyote Group campsite after a hike through Campbell Valley Park, beginning in the morning and ending with a circular loop-walk at the historic Rowlat farm and back through the daisy-filled meadows where dozens of wildflowers were in their prime as well as the white and yellow waterlilies decorating the smaller ponds in the park.

The hikers were very impressed with the sight of two young great horned owls begging for food from an adult that was nearby in an evergreen tree. A rhinoceros beetle was photographed on the hairy-hand of an insect-lover and a friendly pair of rabbits romped and thumped on the lawn as the group enjoyed refreshments supplied by the naturalists.

Wednesday evening walks continue throughout the summer momths - meet 7 p.m. at the Langley Arts Centre.

Information is needed on bird nesting in the valley. Anyone that has sightings of any nesting birds and the results of the outcome of the young, can call 534-3886. Information such as the date you first saw the nest being built, the species of bird, number of eggs, and the location, is important, Any and all species are needed, such as mallards, owls, housefinches, starlings, green herons, and more. If the nest is damaged or deserted it is also important to record all information and it will be passed on to Victoria to be used for scientific purposes and will be kept of file.

B.C.'s youth art is now on show at Centennial museum

FORT LANGLEY - Until July 29, the Langley Centennial Museum is hosting an exhibition of art work by students from throughout B.C. British Columbia youth artists is a biennial show coordinated by the Emily Carr College of Art and Design outreach programs in association with a provincial advisory committee of educators. The first two B.C. young artists show, 1979 and 1981, along with their predecessor "Children's art from Great Britain", attracted more than 100,000 viewers on their tours throughout the province.

Says one of the adjudicators, Sam Black, "This is an important exhibition. In these calamitous 'eighties, visitors to the exhibit will sense a promising optimism and a zest for living.

"This healthy and direct acceptance of life by the young and their evident interest in using art media to communicate - and to share - their individual experiences is refreshing as well as most encouraging."

Above all else the show is fun to view. To witness the change of expression from a pre-schooler to an eighteen year old reveals a great deal about the changes in attitudes and perception of each age group. The bold, highly colorful yet simple images of the young child are replaced by more refined, detailed and subdued renderings of the more mature child. The subjects clearly illustrate an increasing range of experiences, too. Early titles include "Jungle", "Daddy getting his hair cut", "Visit to the dentist", while later themes include "Government 'flu", "Linear pattern" and many neighborhood scenes and portraits.

Chili champ sought

The Westin Bayshor, Molson Brewery and WX 1130 are once again pleased to announce that the fourth annual "Canadian Chili Championship" will be held Saturday, August 25 at the Westin Bayshore.

This year's event will be a one-day affair with activities beginning in the morning and leading up to the exciting afternoon cook-off.

There are a number of ingredients that make the Canadian Chili Championship such a success, one of which is the great music provided by Elmer Tippe and Supercountry.

The "Canadian Chili Championship" is a sanctioned event by the International Chili Society and the grand prize winner will advance to the 1984 World Chili Championship to be held in southern California this fall.

Persons interested in obtaining further information and registration forms can drop by the Westin Bayshore, 1601 West Georgia Street, Vancouver, Molson Brewery, 1550 Burrard Street, Vancouver, WX 1130, 1275 Burrard Street, Vancouver, or call 684-5131. Registration deadline is Friday, August 3, 1984. There will be a limit of 50 competitors, as drawn from all entries received.

ALDERGROVE O.A.P.O. NEWS

Pensioners lose to thieves

By ERNEST CLUETT

ALDERGROVE - The break-in of the OAP hall resulted in the loss of the PA mixing amplifier. However, all the valuable equipment had long ago been farmed out to members for safekeeping and so was no longer stored in the hall. If, as suspected, kids were the culprits, what sort of Aldergrove parents are they that allow their offspring to be running the streets at two o'clock in the morning? As several kids have been chased away from the hall parking lot trying the car doors, all parked cars should be locked upon leaving the cars or trucks. Also, if members without going too far out of their way, upon returning homeward could swing around by the hall and observe if all is okay, especially in the early hours of the morning, it would be an added protection for which the pensioners would be very grateful. The actual monetary loss is nominal, but the mess created by the scattering of the preschool and rock and gem material creates a major clean up effort. We are grateful to Steve Galligan for repairing and replacing the damaged locks in the hall.

As all the political parties are now telling us the wonderful things they will do for us if we elect them and pay them the large wages they think they are worth we shall probably have an impossible task paying for all their promises.

With Trudeau out of the way, the Liberals have the answer to everything, which is saying in effect that the sixteen years of Trudeau's mismanagement are responsible for the mess we are in. This is born out by the irresponsible act of raiding the taxpayers money to pay large sums of money by the way of senate and job appointments to all of the Trudeau cronies. In other words, public paid welfare for the wealthy. Now if Mr. Turner would make it an election promise to strip all these welfare recipients of their ill gotten gains, I might even vote for him.

Congratulations to Monique Begin who refused to sully herself at the public's expense. She got herself a job teaching in the U.S.

At the Saturday dance, the 44th wedding anniversary of Stella and Paul Samec was celebrated. Door prizes went to Evelyn Johnson and Mary Sorznick and the spot prize to Mae Lafonds and Ben Garbet. Visitors were Flo Sherwin of Aldergrove, Joe and Mary Silinski of Toronto and Vic Sortie of Prince George. Elsa Emans is back visiting family and friends in the valley. She now resides in Prince George.

Art Cross is now recovering at home after his two weeks stay in hospital. We wish him a complete recovery.

My thanks to Opal Thomas for writing the column while I was away drowning worms in Machette Lake. The worms were lucky, for I was eaten alive by mosquitoes and black flies.

Doris says her muscles are developing hugely since she took up playing tennis. She also rides horses.

Don't neglect...

Check the cooling system yourself and save

More and more people are doing it themselves. Self-service gasoline sales now make up a record 71 percent of total U.S. sales. Motorists are choosing self-service in greater numbers, and more often then they used to, according to a gasoline industry newsletter.

With full-service stations becoming harder to find, motorists are pumping their own gas, checking under the hood and doing their own minor repairs.

Save money

This do-it-yourselfer not only saves money but he or she also has the enjoyment and satisfaction of a job well done.

One of the most important and, according to The Gates Rubber Company, most neglected areas of the automobile is the cooling system. This is also an area that you can quickly and easily check yourself.

With summer coming on, now is the time to take 30 minutes and thoroughly check out your cooling system.

Tune-up suggestions

Gates suggests the following cooling system tune-up and checking procedures:

Start by taking a stiff fiber brush or a garden hose and clean off the radiator. Brush gently as the fins are delicate. The radiator can do a better job when it is clean of dirt, leaves and bugs.

Remove the radiator cap and check the rubber gasket. Make sure it is not broken, dried out or missing. Is the spring working properly?

Properly sealed

Now, take a close look at the filler neck. Look for nicks, dents or burrs that might keep the cap from sealing properly.

Check the coolant. If it appears rusty or red-brown in color, it should be drained, the cooling system flushed, and new coolant added.

If the coolant looks all right, check the level. It should be within an inch of the filler neck on cars without a coolant recovery system — on those with a coolant recovery system, the coolant should be up to the neck. The coolant should be a 50/50 mixture of water and antifreeze.

LEISURE AND VACATION SUMMER DRIVING is not the time to be forced off the road because of a cooling system problem. At the very least, the condition of all belts and hoses, and the level of coolant should be checked this spring, advises The Gates Rubber Company. An annual minor tune-up will provide even greater security against an inconvenient and costly road service call.

Inspect for leakage

Inspect the radiator for leaks or seepage. Closely examine all the cooling system hoses and clamps. If the clamps are corroded, replace the hose and the clamps. Replace any hoses that are leaking, have cracks, or are soft and mushy when you squeeze them.

Check the thermostat to be sure it is opening when the engine reaches its normal operating temperature. After running the engine for 10 to 15 minutes, you should be able to feel warm coolant surging through the upper radiator hose.

Check the engine for excessive grease or dirt. This can insulate the engine, causing it to run hot. Worse, dirt can hide leaks. Steam clean the engine if necessary.

When the engine is running, listen closely for unusual noises from the water pump. You can check out the pump bearings by removing the V-belt and turning the pump pulley by hand. Roughness, looseness or noise in the bearings warrants replacement.

Check all the engine V-belts for wear or cracks. Statistics compiled by The Gates Rubber Company show that after four years' use, a belt can fail at any time. If any of your V-belts are over four years old, replace them now.

Adjust the tension on all V-belts. If the belt squeals, it should be closely checked for wear and properly adjusted.

Check over your cooling system as carefully as possible. Fix any problems now. Why wait for something to break 25 miles from the nearest service station?

270,000 Missing

There presently is a ratio of one mechanic to every 238 cars and many maintenance experts believe the optimum ratio is 87 to 1, the Automotive Parts & Accessories Association reports. With 106 million household-owned vehicles, this indicates a mechanic shortage of some 270,000, APAA estimates.

Don't neglect the interior when cleaning a car. Here are some tips from the Automotive Parts & Accessories Association:

- Thoroughly vaccuum the carpeting. If there is a soiled spot, it may be removed with carpet cleaner. Make sure carpets are dry before closing windows and doors.
- Wash bright metal parts with lukewarm water and a mild soap. Rinse. Do not use metal polishes.
- Remove dust and loose dirt that accumulate on interior seat fabrics with a vacuum cleaner or whisk broom. Soils, stains and spots can usually be cleaned away with a good-quality fabric cleaner.
- Clean seat belts with a mild soap solution and lukewarm water. See that they are not frayed — and use them.

Big Business

The largest segment of automotive service is ignition service, including tune-ups, according to the Automotive Parts & Accessories Association's market research department.

Exhaust system repairs are second. Exhaust system parts sales, including mufflers and tailpipes, rank third behind tire and battery sales.

Care for Your Car

Trouble-free summertime travelling

By JOHN STURGEON
Service Manager - Langley Nissan

If you are planning a holiday this summer that involves a lot of driving, it would be wise to think about the following tips to ensure a safe and fun vacation.

First off, it is important that you change the oil and oil filter in your vehicle every 6,000 km, or every four months at maximum. This will help to extend the life of the engine by keeping wear and tear to a minimum.

It is a good idea to have a general check-over before you go on holiday. Make sure that your cooling system is inspected to prevent over-heating. Check to see that you have sufficient anti-freeze and that your thermostat is functioning.

Be sure to have your alignment inspected to get the maximum life from your tires.

For those with automatic transmissions, it is a good idea to have the bands adjusted and the fluid level checked.

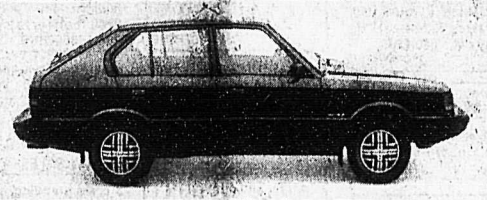
Fan belts should be inspected for wear, because they are an intricate part of the cooling and charging systems. A poorly charged battery can damage the alternator.

Have your brake pads and shoes checked for wear. Heavily worn pads or shoes can cause damage to the discs or drums. Check for leaking wheel cylinders as well as seized brake cylinders.

For further advice or a check-over on your vehicle call the service department at Langley Nissan. Phone 534-7957.

Happy motoring!

INTRODUCING THE AMAZING NEW PONY.



IT ISN'T EXACTLY NEW, BUT IT IS AMAZING.

How can you call a car that has been rolling off the production line ever since 1975 "new"?

Proven, yes. Improved, refined ... certainly. The rest of the world, however, is thoroughly familiar with the Pony. It has scaled the Andes Mountains of Chile. It has cruised the length and the breadth of Great Britain. It is the favorite car of its home country, South Korea.

Now Canada can meet the new Pony and come away amazed.

Amazed by the features. The Pony L has fully reclining front bucket seats, a rear window defroster, full interior carpeting from the tip of the driver's toe to the end of the cargo space. It boasts Michelin all-season steel belted radial tires, childproof door locks, even a cigarette lighter. $5,995 buys a Pony L. (*Plus P.D.I. and freight.)

Amazed by the choices. You can get a more deluxe package in the Pony GL. Or go all the way and splurge for a Pony GLS.

Amazed by the thoughtfulness of the Pony. Its engine uses regular gas, which means you save pennies a litre. Before the Pony leaves the factory, it receives a thorough rust-proofing with Tuff Kote Dinol, a proven Swedish formula.

When you've recovered from your amazement, gather yourself up and head to a Pony dealer for a test drive. You'll be astonished.

Pony gives you a price break on fuel. Its engine takes regular, leaded gasoline.

TAKE A PONY FOR A RIDE.

Easy precautions will help fight off food poisoning

By KURT LANGMANN

Health and Welfare Canada is currently promoting care and caution in the handling of foods and preserves during the summer months.

Lorna Whitley and Terri Brandmueller of the Health and Welfare dep't. recently visited Aldergrove in their campaign to reduce the incidence of food poisoning. According to statistics, about half a million Canadians suffer a food-borne illness each year.

About 60 percent of these cases result from eating foods improperly handled in food establishments, and another 10 percent result from mishandling in the home. The causes of the remaining 30 percent have not been ascertained, but research shows that the incidence can be greatly reduced.

The following safety tips are obvious and intelligent procedures to protect yourself and family against salmonella and staphylococcus aureus - two of the most common poisons:

Packaging a safe bite

- Store your lunch in a cool area until mealtime; if refrigeration is not available, consider the next two tips.
- Use insulated containers or freeze water in used 35mm film canisters or other leak-proof containers to keep lunches cold.
- Pack a small can of juice that has been frozen overnight to both chill your lunch and become a part of the meal.
- Wash fresh fruit and vegetables well before packing.

Buying a safe bite

- Make sure "hot foods" are piping hot and "cold foods" are refrigerator cold when bought from vending machines or food outlets.
- Check the "Best before..." date on products such as milk, yogurt and cheese, to ensure freshness.
- Select wholesome-looking foods; those with mould, discolouration, a musty or abnormal smell shouldn't be purchased or eaten.
- Consider the general appearance of food outlets; dirty utensils, messy tables, unkempt uniforms, etc., can be signs of poor food handling practices.
- Check to see whether a sneeze-guard panel is used at the service counter of cafeterias and salad bars to protect foods from floating germs.

Eating a safe bite

- Wipe lids of canned fruit juices, puddings and soups if you are going to consume contents directly from cans.
- Avoid eating or even tasting foods from cans that are badly dented, bulging or leaking as well as those which, when opened, appear bubbly or spurt out their contents.
- Send back ground meat, poultry and pork if they are not well cooked.
- Wash your hands thoroughly before eating and ... enjoy your bite.

Whitley points out that the problem of undercooking of meats and legumes is not as simple as some people think.

"When canning, you're best advised to upgrade to a pressure-cooker type of canner. The additional safety margin is worth the extra cost," says Whitley.

"If you have problems with canned foods purchased from a retailer, we want to hear about it. We handle these complaints, and if you have suspicions, we want to know the brand and lot number of the offending can, as well as the sample for testing," adds Whitley.

"Another problem has been home-smoked meats and fish. People may think smoking is equivalent to cooking, but it's not. The number of cases of food poisoning each year bears me out on that fact. You have to cook the meat as well as can it if you want to store it," concludes Whitley.

A new strain of parasite has been discovered in B.C. bears that is resistant to everything but heat.

A type of trichinella, it can cause trichinosis, a painful muscular condition caused by the worm migrating into muscle tissue.

Fish and Wildlife spokesman Don Morbert warns that the practice of smoking bear meat over a low fire is not sufficient to kill the parasite. "Our advice is to thoroughly cook any bear meat before eating if."

For further information and assistance, the public is welcome to call Health and Welfare offices at 666-2083 or write to P.O. Box 11166, Royal Centre, Vancouver, B.C. V6E 3P1. A number of informative brochures are available free of charge to the public.

Local athletes in Summer Games

ALDERGROVE - United Olympias of the Fraser Valley first division will be representing zone 3 (Surrey to Hope) at the B.C. Summer Games. This latest honor follows on the heels of this year's Bradner cup win, and the previous season's league championship, Packingham cup finalist and zone representation in the provincial cup championship; an impressive list of accomplishments for a team which serves as a reserve side for Aldergrove Oly's from the Fraser Valley premier division.

The "reserves" will be in for a tough "round robin" series in group "A". Zone 1 representative Cranbrook Rovers and zone 7 reps Terrace - Skeena are in the middle of their soccer seasons and match fit. Zone 5 representatives North Shore Pegasus are a Pacific Coast "under 21" side who can run all day.

Aldergrove is a "run and gun" team who will have to return to mid season form in a hurry to survive the hectic summer games schedule.

Aldergrove Olympia team consists of club officials Glen Clark and Rob Richardson; goal keeper Dean McAvoy; defenders Dan Reid (assistant coach), Dave Major (team captain), Hardy Neu, Peter Hunter, and Randy Keeley. Midfielders are Alan Alderson, Randy Ormsby, Norm Williams (player - coach), Ed Loewen, Bill Docherty, Brendan O'Leary, and Brian Kerr. Strikers for the team are Gordie Clark, Werner Toews, Reg Phillips, and Bruce Friesen.

Former Aldergrove premier defender Mark Breier, now living and playing in Duncan will be appearing in the group "B" series and may see medal round action against his former club.

All opening round games will be played at the Burnaby Lake complex, just ¼ mile north of the freeway on Sperling avenue. Aldergrove's games will be Friday at 8:30 a.m., kickoff vs. zone 1 Cranbrook Rovers; Friday at 1 p.m. vs. zone 5 North Shore Pegasus; Saturday at 10:30 a.m. vs. zone 7 Terrace - Skeena, and at 3:00 p.m. the semi final will be played. It will be the group "A" winner vs. group "B" runner up, and the group 'B" winner vs. group "A" runner up. Sunday morning at 8:30 a.m. will see the bronze medal final, and the same morning at 10:30 the gold medal final.

As the second largest sporting event in Canada's history (next to the Montreal Olympics) there will be many events of interest and local athletes to cheer on. Aldergrove Olympia soccer club hope for local support.

Outstanding young farmer named

ABBOTSFORD - Harvey Schroeder, provincial minister of agriculture, was the guest speaker at the 1984 British Columbia 'Outstanding young farmer' award banquet held in Abbotsford on July 7. Winner of the competition for British Columbia is Louis Schurmann of Wellsline Road in Abbotsford, who was chosen from eight finalists. Schurmann has been a dairy farmer since 1973 and he and his wife Elizabeth have been the principal owners of their farm since 1980. The Schurmann's have two children, Mark and Melissa.

As the outstanding young farmer for British Columbia, Schurmann will travel to Calgary in October to attend with the winners from the other seven regions of Canada at 'Round-up '84,' a major agricultural event. The three outstanding young farmers in Canada will be chosen at that time.

Witnesses convene

VANCOUVER - Sunday, July 8 ended a four-day conference of Jehovah's Witnesses at Pacific Coliseum. The program was put on by the Watch Tower Society "to strengthn the global unity of the Witnesses and to increase their appreciation for God's word."

The theme of the convention was "Kingdom increase". Valley resident Mervyn Kreishman paralleled the preaching work of the Witnesses to Jesus' prophecy that "This good news of the kingdom will be preached in all the earth and then the end will come". Statistics given indicated that acrive JW preachers, world-wide increased from 101,794 in 1943 to 2,501,722 in 1983.

As local indication of the stepped up ministerial activity came the announcement that four new kingdom halls are to be built in the Fraser Valley, each one by a 48-hour method designed by the Witnesses, whereby the entire structure including the interior decorating and landscaping is completed during a weekend by volunteer tradesmen and helpers.

IS MANURE STORAGE A PROBLEM?

Consider these facts about the Slurrystore® system:
- eliminates daily hauling
- is like having a "fertilizer factory" on your farm
- pays for itself through fertilizer savings
- improves crop performance
- reduces odor problems
- eliminates risk of children or livestock falling into pit

And now for a limited time only Okanagan Harvestore® Systems Ltd. has new 1984 Slurrystore® structures available at 1981 prices.

Call today and turn those Manure Storage problems into Profit Opportunity.
