RCMP get their man... eventually

MURDERER CAUGHT

By RUDY LANGMANN
and RICK McILWAIN

ALDERGROVE - An escaped murderer who had been living in this town for several months and had become known to neighbors as an all-around "good guy" managed to dodge authorities once more when police closed in following a domestic dispute complaint.

That happened last January.

The walk-away from Agassiz Mountain medium security prison was suspected to have crossed the international boundary south of here in his girlfriend's car. Vehicle was later picked up by U.S. police at the Seattle-Tacoma airport. Not everyone believed in this theory, however, and thought the escapee might still be in Canada, that the stolen car had been a ruse. But he was known to be armed.

Last Wednesday afternoon time ran out for Richard Alin Edward Martin. At 1730 hours Langley RCMP picked him up at the very same residence which he had left in such a hurry a few months previous. He was armed when police closed in on a house at 26866 - 32 Avenue. But there was no exchange of gunfire.

Martin was charged with being unlawfully at large from the Agassiz prison where he had been serving life imprisonment for capital murder and other offences.

He was also charged with having committed, while being at large, a number of other criminal offences, to wit: unlawful confinement, assault causing bodily harm, theft over $200, possession of stolen property, and possession of a prohibited weapon. When he was arrested, he had a loaded handgun in his possession.

Martin was arrested as he walked away from the quiet subdivision home.

It is not the first time Martin has escaped from prison during his 25-year term. According to officials he has been in and out of prison like a ping-pong ball.

Many think it won't be the last time either.

During this last "sabbatical", Martin apparently committed several burglaries in the Fraser Valley, searching out sporting goods stores where he picked up an arsenal of guns, knives and ammunition.

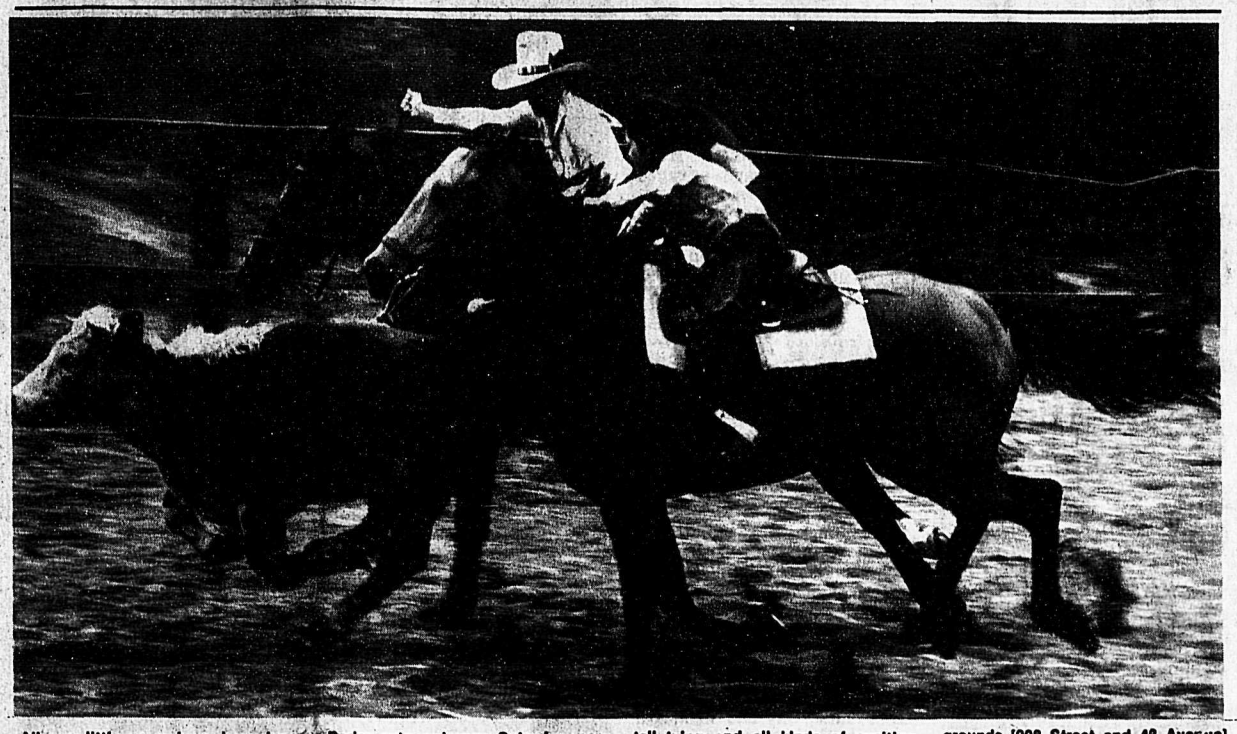
A midnight break-in at Aldergrove Sports Centre was attributed to the prison escapee. Here several guns were stolen, and one was found the next morning in the parking lot behind the store.

The rest of the weapons, bullets and knives were found at the 32 Avenue residence in January. At that time Martin had apparently threatened his common-law wife and her children with bodily harm.

Police are contemplating charges against Carol George of Aldergrove of being an accessory after the fact.

George is to appear in court at a later date.

Martin is back in Mountain prison. For the time being.



All you little cowgals and cowboys gather 'round, 'cause the Lil' Britches Rodeo is coming to town.

Langley Riders annual Lil' Britches Rodeo gets underway Saturday morning as all those little cowboys try for the crown of "All-round Cowboy". Barrel racing, bucking bronco, goat-tail tying and all kinds of exciting things await the adventurous spectator.

The place is Berry Road Rodeo grounds [208 Street and 43 Avenue] and the days are Saturday and Sunday.

Farm policies considered as Langley caught in rural-to-urban transition

By IAN CAMERON

MURRAYVILLE - When is a farmer a farmer?

And when is he an agriculturist, a commercial entrepreneur, or perhaps even an industrial baron?

Municipal councilors here don't seem to know. But they'll find out one of these day...or maybe (in case there is nothing in the law books on the subject) they'll make history themselves by rewriting the Magna Carta.

"What is agriculture, and what is commercial farming?" Ald. Carol Gran mused Monday morning, and then continued. "When someone puts thousands of chickens in a building, that I perceive as a commercial venture. And I don't think very many on this council would accept such a situation next door."

She was supported by Ald. John Rennie. "If you have property next to a poultry farm," this worthy stated, "that makes if very, very hard to sell that property. (Our policies) affect people seriously, economically."

But alderpersons Dan Williamson and Muriel Arnason disagreed with the idea of further restrictions being put on the farmer, although Williamson acknowledged that "serious discussions" should be held in order to solve the dilemma of rural-to-urban transition.

Williamson used the opportunity to criticize the township's planning policies which he claims to be grossly inadequate.

"We must allow farmers to get along with their very important business without serious interruptions from people moving here from the city," he said.

He said this could be guaranteed by "proper planning," allowing farmers and non-farmers alike to know the rules of the game before it got under way.

Arnason said she believed that her fellow councilors were "making it much more difficult than it really is" and that they had an obligation to listen to the farmers as well before imposing any more restrictions. "The farmers are the backbone of the nation," she said.

A farmer used to be a man in gumboots chewing on a straw. Ah, nostalgic memories.

Or is it perhaps that some council members still have that mental image? Could be, since being a farmer in the 1980s apparently disqualifies a man from doing his thing "as a commercial venture."

Chickens could be problem

MURRAYVILLE - Salmonella originating in a large chicken barn "could be a real health problem" to neighbors living close by, Ald. Elford Nundal said this week.

Nundal should know; he's a retired veterinarian.

Neighbors to a proposed broiler barn in south Aldergrove are upset about the proximity of the structure and have alleged, in a letter to council, that a salmonella outbreak could be possible.

Although the mayor intervened on their behalf with the chicken farmer and obtained some concessions in the process whereby the building would be modified, the neighbors say that the nuisance factor still hasn't been eliminated.

Councilors have decided that they will meet with public health inspector Art Bailey in order to get his advice in the matter.

Pay for play coming to local parks?

MURRAYVILLE - In the future it may cost to play soccer and softball in Langley.

There is a very real possibility that the township soon will start charging for the use of the parks, pitches and ball diamonds.

For the time being, civic officials are working on a formula that will "make it easier for people to understand," says the municipality's recreation director, Darch Oborne.

But it will come, sooner or later.

Charging for the use of sports fields is already being practiced in many lower mainland municipalities, says Oborne. "In one way or another."

Different districts use different methods.

Some charge by the hour, others by the season, and others again by levies against different sports organizations.

Man killed in auto crash

ALDERGROVE - Five people were taken to Langley Memorial hospital with extensive injuries suffered in a two-car accident near here Saturday morning.

Driver of one of the vehicles was pronounced dead on arrival at the hospital.

Killed in the spectacular crash was Robert Dale Olson, 19, of 32250 Hillcrest Avenue, Clearbrook. Olson's passenger, Bruce Alex Mesman of Matsqui, was later taken to Royal Columbian hospital in New Westminster where he was reported to be in serious condition.

Occupants of the other car, Stanley Bellamy, his wife and child are in Langley Memorial and are listed in good condition.

Accident occurred in the 26000-block of Fraser Highway at 12:58 a.m.

Recovery will pick up steam

ST. ANDREWS, N.B. - Most of the foundations for a strong and lasting economic turnaround are in place, but mounting government deficits and excessive wage settlements threaten to derail the recovery before it gets too far, members of the country's securities industry were told last week.

In a forecast of economic prospects for Canada, panel speakers told the Investment Dealers Asociation of Canada recovery will start off quietly this year and pick up steam in 1984 with the growing strength of the long-awaited global economic upturn.

All the regions of the country will grow over the next two years, although B.C.'s economy should outperform the rest of the country because that province suffered the most from the slump in U.S. housing and commodity markets.

In a later speech to the association's annual meeting, finance minister Marc Lalonde predicted the recovery will be "more than just a flash in the pan."

However, he warned that wage settlements similar to an 11-percent a year increase won by Nova Scotia pipefitters threaten to undermine the good done by Ottawa's wage restraint program.

Lalonde pointed to statistics in recent months that show the initial foundations for recovery are in place: rising housing starts in both the U.S. and Canada, improving Canadian retail sales, falling inflation, an increasing trade surplus, substantially higher industrial profits and a small but steady decline in unemployment.

The finance minister said he's confident Canada will have a durable recovery, telling reporters the real danger is that a rash of high-wage settlements similar to the Nova Scotia agreement could rekindle double-digit inflation and price Canadian products out of world markets.

While Lalonde focused on wage settlements as a major stumbling block to recovery, the dealers appeared more concerned about the prospects of mounting government deficits. Several

Retail outlook bright

VANCOUVER - The economic outlook for Canada's retail business sector is brighter than had been anticipated earlier this year, says the president of the Retail Council of Canada.

Alistair McKichan said in a speech to the annual meeting of the association's B.C. division that the organization's forecast "is now for real growth in the store sector of retailing of two percent or better."

"Employment levels are expected to grow, albeit slowly, from here on in so that for the year as a whole, we should average close to 10.5 million jobs, about 100,000 jobs better than existed at our low point of a month ago," he said last week.

He also said that consumer confidence recovered sharply in the first three months of 1983.

"However, the index with more immediate effect, the consumer buying intentions index still lags the consumer index by some 20 points.

"What this anomaly seems to say is that the consumers are feeling better about the economy, but not so good about it that they have strong confidence in their own personal situation and in the security of their jobs."

Councilors criticize chart

MURRAYVILLE - Who benefits? How is it distributed?

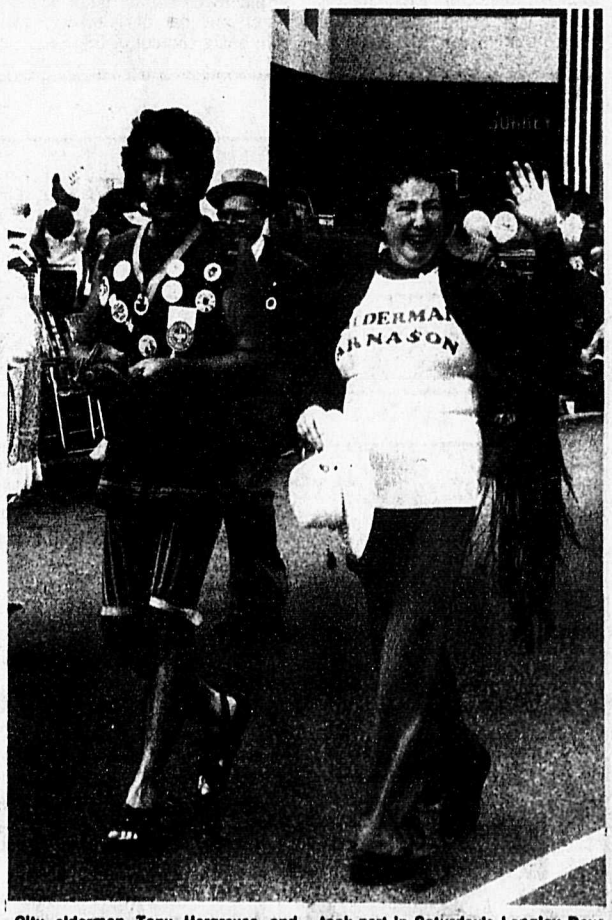
Those were questions raised by Ald. Muriel Arnason in connection with a sales pitch from the Aldergrove chamber of commerce for $1,200 worth of advertising in a new Aldergrove tourist map-brochure.

Ald. Dan Williamson said he also would like to get a description of the planned one-time publication.

And Ald. John Rennie said that if the map were to be of the same quality as one published by the Langley chamber, then he had his reservations as well. "That (Langley) map was the poorest one I've ever seen," he said.

Ald. Carol Gran was in favor of the public funds expenditure. "I see it as a grant," she said.

But she was out-voted, and the request was tabled for more information.



City alderman Tony Hargraves and district alderwoman Muriel Arnason took part in Saturday's Langley Days festivities.

Public borrowing too high for taxpayers

pointed to the $213-billion accumulated federal debt forecast by fiscal 1987 in the recent Lalonde budget. Not only would this debt push interest rates to crippling levels, but the $25 billion a year needed (at current interest rates) to finance the debt would paint governments into a financial corner they couldn't escape from.

An association position paper noted that this year public sector borrowing could be as high as 70 percent of total domestic borrowing and translate into about 50 percent of gross savings.

If this level of government borrowing continues while the economic recovery increases demand for corporate credit, mortgage money and consumer credit, the result would be serious "demand and supply bottlenecks in credit markets" - a development that would have serious repercussions on the recovery.

Arena problems kept in the dark

MURRAYVILLE - A planned council in-camera meeting remained just that in spite of objections from a couple of aldermen Monday morning.

Ald. Muriel Arnason and Ald. Dan Williamson said they would like for the meeting to be brought out into the open, leaving discussions ready for public scrutiny.

It had to do with changes to the operation of the public curling lounge facilities at the civic arena in Brookswood.

The curling club has asked for the charter to operate the lounge, which by rights should be a money-maker, but apparently is not.

It is being run by the local government.

"It has to do with staff," said Ald. Len Fowler, dismissing the public discussions.

"The staff and municipal property," said acting mayor Ald. Elford Nundal.

Williamson said he thought this to be a poor excuse, since discussions are normally only being held behind closed doors in instances where "disciplinary action, or assessment (of an employee)" are involved.

City of Langley also wanted the matter to be kept confidential, said Nundal. City and municipal governments are part owners of the arena.

"We shouldn't do anything secret, I agree," said Ald. Carol Gran. "But in this case both staff and municipal property are involved."

They voted three to two in favor of keeping the meeting closed, and dismissed the press representatives.

ICBC future on hold

VICTORIA - Private insurance companies are preparing for a transition of general business from the Insurance Corp. of B.C. to their accounts should the government decide to take away some of the crown corporation's monopoly.

Conrad Speirs, outgoing president of the Insurance Agents of B.C., says he believes the government "has no choice but to disband the general division" of the corporation.

But the provincial government has given no indication what its plans for the corporation's future are.

Insurers have set up a pool to "guarantee the marketability of all ICBC business" and that rates are "guaranteed at inception at ICBC rates plus six percent," said Speirs recently.

He said the government could adopt two other options: Make the insurance corporation a public, taxpaying company with shareholders like B.C. Resources Investment Corp.; or have it look after the bodily injury part of Autoplan claims while private insurers take over everything else dealing with auto insurance.

But ICBC officials say bodily injury is by far the costliest and least predictable portion of Autoplan, and that such a move would saddle the corporation with big costs while leaving the more lucrative business to private industry.

Last year the corporation handled more than 100,000 general insurance premiums dealing with everything from homes to boats.

Turning the insurance corporation over to the private sector has been a contentious item at every Social Credit convention since it was set up by the New Democratic government in 1973.

The minister responsible for the crown corporation, consumer affairs minister Jim Hewitt, said today that ICBC like all other government companies is under review and until the study is completed, "it's business as usual."

606 complaints to RCMP

MURRAYVILLE - A break and enter occurred at a Langley city truss company, and was discovered in progress at about 0400 hours on Monday, June 13. The culprits stole a truck from Surrey and utilized it in the break in. The vehicle had been hotwired. Approximately $600 worth of tools were taken such as a speed drill, a circular saw, and a grinder. Investigation is continuing.

A video store in the city was the victim of a break, enter and theft on June 14. Culprits had smashed the window in order to get in. Two video tape recorders were taken to the value of $2,600. The offense occurred at about 0400 hours.

A Langley couple left the keys in their vehicle on June 15 for about 45 minutes while they were downtown shopping. When they returned their late model van was stolen. The vehicle was involved in two gas thefts in the Surrey area and was later recovered empty at 192 Street and Fraser Highway on June 18.

Two Abbotsford women were charged on June 16 with theft under $200 after being caught shoplifting. The pair were in the Otter Co-op store at 248 Street and Fraser Highway when they were observed by store employees taking a pair of running shoes and a clock.

A townhouse unit in Langley city was broken into between midnight and 0800 in the morning. Burglars pried open a sliding glass window in the kitchen while the occupant was sleeping upstairs. A $800 video tape recorder was taken from the house. Police say the break and enter could have been avoided if a simple sliding window lock had been put on the window. These can be purchased from local hardware stores or locksmiths and can also be placed on sliding patio doors, to prevent the door or window from being slid out of the track.

COMPUTERS FOSTER INFORMATION EXPLOSION

Mankind on the brink of new frontier

SASKATOON - Computers with as much memory as the human brain, an information explosion, manufactured food and artificial organs better than the real thing may be just around the corner, an American futurist says.

Leon Martel, author of The Next 200 Years, and former executive director of the Hudson Institute's "think-tank," said in a speech to Futurescan '83 that mankind is on the brink of a new frontier.

"We are no longer wards of the earth," he said during the final day of the conference on the future. "We have domesticated the planet."

Martel, who is also a military intelligence specialist, said advances in computer technology will lead to artificial intelligence almost as good as the human mind for some purposes.

While admitting the prophecy is a chancy game at best, Martel said he sees wondrous possibilities ahead.

"We're moving from a time of penury to a time of plenty."

New agricultural techniques, ranging from genetically engineered plants and animals to a manufacturing process to make protein out of cellulose, will feed the entire planet, he said. Food production will grow faster than population, making famine a thing of the past.

In medicine, artificial organs such as the primitive heart installed in Barney Clark in Salt Lake City earlier this year will be improved to the point where "they'll be better than the real ones because they won't wear out."

Chemical technology will provide non-addictive painkillers and a far better understanding of the biological process of disease and aging.

But computers will make the real changes, Martel said. The traditional "three Rs" will be augmented by a "C" for computer.

"The important skills will be those dealing with information."

Like earlier speakers at the three-day conference, Martel said the burgeoning science of information and communication will mold a new society. He also admitted the spectre of such changes may produce modern Luddites, fearful of the future.

Those people, followers of a man named Ned Lud sabotaged the primitive machines of the early industrial revolution in fear of change.

"It's up to each of us to decide...whether we will find this vision of the future frightening or inspiring."

The conference heard varying views of the future, most prefaced with the caution that predictions are often a fool's game. But while the visions differed in many respects, the consensus was that the computer microchip will change the world as nothing has since the steam engine began to drive the looms and locomotives of the late 18th century.

Those changes may produce problems. Some may suffer permanent unemployment, their jobs lost to robots or obsolete processes. Fear of the future may leave some unable to deal with the changing society.

Stuart Smith, chairman of the Science Council of Canada, said these worries may not come true, but there should be contingency plans worked out now, just in case.

Beware of silo gas

ALDERGROVE - Life on the farm can mean death on the farm for the unwary who are exposed to poisonous silo gases.

These gases are produced by fermentation and form a deadly layer on the surface of the silage.

Although most often regarded as danger in the fall when new silage is placed in the silo, gases are produced throughout the year. Farmers should be cautious at all times when entering their silos.

U.S. school system gets failing grade

WASHINGTON, D.C. - A two-year study conducted for the U.S. department of health, education and welfare has concluded that the American school system has fallen to a level of mediocrity "that threatens our very future as a nation and a people."

The study, carried out by an 18-member national commission on excellence in education, represents one of the most serious indictments ever made of the present-day education system.

In its final report, "A nation at risk: the imperative for education reform," the panel says the average achievement of high school students on most stndardized tests is now lower than 26 years ago when Sputnik was launced. The report also discloses that in 19 academic test given to students from 12 different countries, American students were never first or second.

"The educational foundations of our society are presently being eroded by a rising tide of mediocrity that threatens our very future as a nation and a people," the report says. If an unfriendly foreign power had attempted to impose on America the mediocre education performance that exists today, we might well have viewed it as an act of war. As it stands we have allowed this to happen to ourselves."

The report makes five major recommendations:

- High schools should adopt higher standards in English, math, social studies and computer science, and universities should raise their admission requirements and demand foreign language study.
- The school day should be increased from six to seven hours in secondary schools and the school year from 180 to 220 days.
- High school students should be given "far more homework", up to three hours per night.
- Teacher salaries should be increased and their contracts should be extended from nine to 11 months to allow time for curriculum planning and helping students with special needs.
- Outstanding teachers should be entitled to merit pay, and a new class of "master teachers" should be formed to help train outstanding new teachers.

Life of Brian highlighted ambitions

By B.S. KELLY

NUREMBURG (OTTAWA) - Det vobis Deus idipsum sapere alterutrum; ut unanimes uno ore honorisicetis Dux nostrum.

Please indulge my little prayer for Brian Mulroney. One gets so little chance to use Latin anymore. But soon, I suppose, everyone will have to learn it as well as French before they can get a government job.

I feel quite smug having predicted Mulroney's victory all along. Still, it is amazing how this humble pious man, the son of a poor carpenter, born in the village of Bethlehem, on the banks of the St. Lawrence River, could somehow rise to become the leader of the most dynamic political organization in the whole world.

Not surprisingly, the convention was hot and horrible and a complete waste of time. What was there to contend anyway? Clark had been a disaster, Crosbie can't speak Latin and the rest of the pack were either too short, too boring or too simple to stand a chance.

No useful purpose can be served by cramming 10,000 sweaty bodies into a hockey rink the size of Memorial Arena except to make them hate each other for the rest of their lives. And emotions were running high, as they say on televison, meaning that an otherwise sedate, all white collection of businessmen, housewives and preppy undergraduates were snarling and spitting at each other in a big sauna bath. There was a lot of flesh here, but not much muscle, so most of the flare ups ended with threats like "I've got a big brother you know" or "Yea, sure, you and what army" or "Make me".

I did all I could to encourage actual physical violence for the sake of the television reporters who had run out of anything meaningful or original to say or film after a couple of hours, but it was no use. The problem was that many of the delegates had shot their bolt drinkwise on Thursday night and were altogether too sober on the convention floor. Remarkably, even the youth delegates, many of whom were away from home for the first time, were strikingly sober. However, the journalists, many of whom were also away from home for the first time, were another matter. When they weren't jostling each other to get to the bar, they could be found swooning on the auditorium floor, complaining about the heat, their bright red noses glistening under the TV lights.

There were nearly 100,000 delegates here from southern Vancouver Island, but I couldn't be bothered to speak to any of them. Besides I was in great demand as a sort of policy advisor to the leading candidates, a kind of strategist, someone they could trust.

One of the candidates, who shall remain nameless, except to say that he is John Crosbie, was worried about floating a big fat balloon over the audience just before making his speech Friday. I advised him against it, reminding him of the Hindenburg and its aftermath, World War II, but he couldn't hear me with loonie Brian Peckford bellowing in his ear.

When the blimp dropped and finally crashed into the ITV studios I knew it was over for John. And when he wouldn't listen to my suggestion to play the Orange Card in the hope of starting a religious war with his Papist adversaries, I just had to leave.

Clark wouldn't let me get too close to him for fear of giving me his cold, he said, even after I explained that I already had AIDS and was liable to drop dead any moment. It was a senseless, dignified decision, but it may have cost him the leadership. I was going to suggest that he adopt, as a last minute mascot, The Engineer, a sort of peace demonstrator who stocked the perimeters of the civic centre with a placard reading, "bankers are crooks". It may have won some of those noncommitted delegates to Joe's middle of the road platform.

Alas, only Brian Mulroney, the carpenter's son from Galilea, Quebec, would listen to me. Together we composed a terrific Guiness and Iron speech and won literally millions from the uncommitted delegates into our camp. I tried to get Brian to use the closing passage of The Ginger Man as a literary reference, about the horses running out to death which is with some soul and their eyes are mad and teeth out. But Brian said no, and selected a more conservative passage from James Joyce about history being a nightmare from which I am trying to awake.

On reflection I have to agree with his choice. In fact, I think it may even be a law now or a commandment that we have to agree with Brian about everything.

While Touche Ross and Co. were counting the final ballot, (one and another one, and another one...) I joined the throngs on the floor for the highlight of the convention; a kind of home movie slide show about the dawn of the new Progressive Conservatism sweeping the land, pictures of farmers and jovial businessmen and self sufficient ladies prospering against a background of mountains and trees. Frightening isn't it? All the more so because the young and impressionable evidently believed everything they saw and were either crying openly, as Lloyd Robertson put it, or gazing into the future and their eyes were mad and teeth out.

When the result of the final ballot was announced and Brian had won by a billion and a half votes we all gave three cheers for Mr. Clark, everyone kissed one another and the journalists scurried off to the press room to invent a bunch of stories about what would have happened if Joe Clark had gone over to Crosbie after the third ballot or Crosbie had gone to Clark or Wilson to Crombie or Pocklington to Crosbie and so on...

Now we are faced with the certain prospect of 100 self indulgent books on the convention. The Life of Brian and the future of the Tory party. Yech!

I went immediately to the victory celebration in a tent outside the convention hall where I quickly removed my press credentials, donned an "I like Ike" button and was rewarded for my savvy with dozens of free beers. Later, fortified with drink, I sidled up to 19-year-old Mila Mulroney, the wife of Brian, in the hopes of stealing a kiss, but no such luck. It could have been the stale smell of alcohol and tobacco on my breath or perhaps I was just wearing too much lipstick.

In the heat and the hangover of Sunday, I am struck by a terrifying thought. The Grits are next. -Juan de Fuca News

A tax saving here, a tax saving there

BURNABY - An economic analysis of the reasons behind B.C.'s growing number of hobby farms has earned international recognition for Simon Fraser University graduate student Doug Allen.

A master's degree student in economics, Allen submitted a paper on hobby farms which was judged best of the year recently by the Western Economics Association. The competition is open to MA and PhD students at universities throughout western North America.

The association will now present the SFU student with a $300 prize and plaque for his work.

Allen's paper reveals that the number of hobby farms in B.C. has doubled in recent years and it counters the romantic contention that this trend is the result of a growing dissatisfaction with today's crowded urban lifestyle.

He argues that the rise of the hobby farm has more to do with tax savings than love for the outdoors. His evidence includes reference to a pair of 10-acre parcels of land sitting side-by-side. The owner of one pays $5,000 less in land taxes than the other simply because he has declared his property to be a hobby farm.

Some other predictions in Allen's paper dealt with the changing size of farms, farm revenues and the location of hobby farms.

(Property can be designated as a hobby farm if it is the source of a minimum of $1,600 net sales per year.)

Allen's study raises questions about why the provincial government changed its land taxation laws in 1977 and what impact those changes have had on the use of farm land.

Allen says his parents are proud of his accomplishments, but his dad is less positive about his choice of topics to investigate. "My family lives on a hobby farm in Langley," he says.

A challenge to Star correspondents

By JACK PHILLIPS

Here's a record for some of you folk to shoot for: the Sentinel of Upper Dauphin, Pennsylvania in 1979 published a letter to the editor of 23,513 words, spread over 8 issues. Also from the Guinness Book of World Records: On August 18, 1975, the landlord of Blue Bell Inn of Litchfield, England, received a telephone bill for the equivalent of $4,386,800,000 US. It was later admitted that this bill contained an "arithmetical error." Can you imagine the trouble he must have had trying to get someone at the telephone office to take action on his complaint? "Sir, our computer doesn't make mistakes." I hope they graciously waived the $10 million penalty for late payment.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Looking out for whose interests?

Editor, The Star, Sir,

Vancouver International Airport is fogged in. All flights are rerouted to Abbotsford Airport. An aircraft, carrying roughly 90 passengers, runs into severe difficulty and is forced to crash. It runs short of the air strip and crashes into two or three homes in a nearby community, killing the occupants as well as the passengers.

Cause of the crash - a bird or birds from a nearby garbage dump have become caught in the aircraft's engine, causing it to malfunction.

Among the passengers could easily have been one of our friends. The unsuspecting home occupants could have been our families.

Fortunately, this mishap has not as yet occurred.

To avoid this type of thing from happening, the federal department of transport has recently passed a law, forbidding the dumping of garbage within the yellow zone of an airport.

And still, our Matsqui municipality persists in trying to find ways around this ruling.

Are they really looking out for our best interests?

Nothing could justify a tragedy such as this, which is why I strongly urge council to reconsider.

Humbling, mysterious experience

Editor, The Star, Sir,

For some time now, on several occasions I have seen a little car stop in front of the little church at the corner of 272 Street and 32 Avenue. This little car always stops as near the cross in the church yard as possible.

Usually there are three young men in this car, they always get out, and kneel and pray. Friday afternoon they were there again, and it seemed it might be the last time they knelt in prayer; then for some reason they shook hands and embraced each other. They were very humble. Once they returned to their car, they sat there for awhile, and then waved a goodbye. Would anyone know why this little corner is so sacred to these young men? Because of them I always drive slowly by that little church.

How would we deal with bigotry?

Editor, The Star, Sir,

Having followed the news coverage of Jim Keegstra's teaching and the community of Eckville, Alberta's reaction, the B.C. Human Rights Commission feels compelled to bring to your attention that combatting racism is not solely the responsibility of a human rights commission. The responsibility is universal. The circumstances that allow the mayor of the community of Eckville, Alberta to teach anti-semitism without comment for 14 years must be of concern to all thinking adults.

The commission has written to all school parents' committees and school boards in the province to re-emphasize the responsibility each of us has to protect our free and democratic society, and in particular our obligation to our youth. Too often, news coverage of incidents, and subsequent commentary, enjoy an undeserved comfort in the fact that the situation did not arise locally. We believe that a general unwillingness to speak out is what allowed Jim Keegstra to espouse his belief in a Jewish conspiracy in his classroom for 14 years. The question is whether similar situations exist or could happen in British Columbia.

How would an individual British Columbian deal with a Jim Keegstra in his or her church, school or city council? The commission would like to be confident that the teaching of anti-semitism, racial supremacy or racial hatred does not and could not occur in British Columbia undetected. The commission is making itself available to work with any concerned community to address intolerance and bigotry wherever it may surface.

Township keeps courses

MURRAYVILLE - If a private organization provides a recreational opportunity in the district, then the township's recreational department should not be competing with them, says Ald. Carol Gran.

Gran told councilors here Monday morning that the new Langley Y, operated by the New Westminster chapter of the YMCA, had asked the township to give up public swimming instruction in the district. The Y would then be prepared to take over, Gran said.

"We are not recommending that," said district recreation director Darch Oborne.

He added that "there is more demand (for swimming instruction) in Langley than anyone can possibly handle."

Ald. Len Fowler said the Y should be informed that the program they want to start at two Langley pools is already in existence, being run by the municipality.

"We don't want duplication, that's not necessary," he said.

Acting mayor Elford Nundal said that perhaps council should question the Y's "financial expertise and moral judgment", but Gran said she could not see how politicians could do that.

SURREY - Two Kwantlen College students recently received top honors for their achievements at the college. William Wong of Surrey was the winner of the governor-general's medal and Susan Zackon of Aldergrove won the lieutenant-governor's medal at the college's annual graduation ceremonies.

Zackon, like many Kwantlen students, returned to school last year after raising a family. She completed her program in office administration/secretarial in six and a half months. The program normally takes ten months to complete. Her grades were consistently over 90 percent. She is now training to be a legal secretary and hopes to find work in that field in the Fraser Valley. The lieutenant-governor's medal is awarded to the best student in a one-year program at the college.

The graduation, held May 14, awarded diplomas and certificates to more than 600 students.

Race track not welcome at Aldergrove Lake

ALDERGROVE - Municipal council members will not see a racing track at the Aldergrove Lake park.

They have nothing against motor sports, but it has no place at or near the regionally-owned park, they say.

Ald. Muriel Arnason brought the matter up Monday morning.

"We should protest it," she said.

"Has anybody said it is going to be there?" asked Ald. Carol Gran.

"Pretty well," said acting mayor Elford Nundal.

"The GVRD (Greater Vancouver regional district)" said Arnason.

Ald. Len Fowler said he had attended a GVRD meeting and no final decision had been made by the board members. No reason for Langley to protest until after the final recommendation had come down, he said.

"If we disagree (with a track at the park), is there any reason why we should not let them know?" asked Ald. Dan Williamson.

"I agree," said Nundal.

"Are we saying that we think it (a track) is a good idea, and that we are just against the location?" asked Gran. "Personally I think it is an excellent idea."

Williamson agreed that it probably was, but not at the park.

"Why are we always taking the easy way out?" he questioned the GVRD proposal.

"Are there any alternatives (to the site)?" asked Ald. John Rennie.

Williamson said there were several.

He could come up with at least six alternate sites, he said.

"I think we should give them (GVRD parks officials) the alternatives before we protest," said Rennie.

With the closing down of three racing ovals in the lower mainland, sports racing enthusiasts have for some time been looking toward a future site. They have won the support not only of the GVRD but also of the provincial government.

Vows exchanged at outdoor ceremony

ALDERGROVE - Graham Foster officiated at the late afternoon wedding, uniting in marriage Krystine Edna Spenst and Michael John Wallace.

Bride is the daughter of Mrs. T. Janze of Sechelt and Mr. N. Spenst of Creston.

The groom is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Dean F. Wallace of Aldergrove.

Given in marriage by her father the petite bride was radiant in a traditional gown of chiffon over satin. Venice lace with seed pearls adorned the bodice, waist and sleeve cuffs. A matching lace band with sequins and seed pearls held the full length veil. She carried a bouquet of pink roses, white freesia and baby's breath.

Honor attendant was Angela Janze of Sechelt who wore a pink full length dress of poly organza; the V neck was shirred from the shoulders with chiffon.

Bridesmaids were Karen Graf and Karen Friessen of Aldergrove. They wore matching blue dresses with chiffon over skirts. All attendants carried bouquets of pink and blue carnations with white daisies.

The groom was attended by Shawn Gould of Aldergrove as best man, and his brothers Stephen and Christopher Wallace, of Aldergrove.

The groom's attendants wore grey tuxedoes with pink boutonnieres.

Richard D. Wallace, youngest brother of the groom, was master of ceremonies for the reception at Patricia hall for about 130 guests.

The hall was beautifully decorated in pink, blue and white. Head table was flanked by two seven-candle free-standing candelabras. Pink and blue roses adorned the three-tiered cake that was topped with wedding bells.

The bride's mother chose a short afternoon dress in pink and white accented with a deep pink carnation corsage.

The groom's mother wore a short, full-skirted blue chiffon dress with a light pink rose corsage.

The bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Hale, of Mission, the groom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack S. Craig of New Westminster, and his grandmother Lois Wallace of White Rock, witnessed the happy occasion.

Many out-of-town guests attended coming from: Drumheller, Calgary, Ottawa, Creston, Vancouver, Mission and Chilliwack.

The bride and groom planned a trip to various Vancouver Island sites before taking up residence in Aldergrove.

MISSION - There's something new and exciting happening at Mission Raceway, Saturday, June 25 at 7 p.m. It's a two hour thrill show featuring the "Kaskader Daredevils" an international acrobatic stunt team from Euope. They have performed in hundreds of shows in Europe and also in European movies.

Hectic week at local pensioners' hall

By ERNIE CLUETT

ALDERGROVE - Spending the past week around the pensioners has been hectic for some of us. Monday was choral practice. Tuesday the choral group bused into Vancouver for a combined practice under emcee and conductress Elva Walters. Wednesday, due to the illness of Doreen Folkard and the withdrawal of both Tom and Doreen from the convention, Opal Thomas and I were pressed into service to replace them, so on Wednesday and Thursday, out of bed at the unearthly hour of 6 a.m. to be in New Westminster Royal Towers at 8:30 a.m.

Convention showed a marked improvement over the last one I attended at Williams Lake. Speakers to the resolutions were limited to three minutes and Jack Baker kept the stop watch and his bellow of "30 seconds" acted like a pitch fork to many speakers, cutting off their verbiage in full flower.

Baker was elected second vice president and will have the job of preparing the resolutions for debate next year. Rollo Boas was re-elected president. I am writing of the provincial OAP board and not branch 71.

The scholarship fund is now above $16,000 and is progressing very well. There will not be an automatic division of the lottery proceeds and from now on they will have to be applied for and the applications will be ruled on according to need, which ruling doesn't find much favor with me. Although it was not finalized, next year's convention will probably be in Penticton, although Vernon's bid was not ruled out.

The former lottery, which gave free membership cards to all who sent in the applications forms, was probably not too good an idea. We received grants from the lottery but we also had to pay to the provincial board dues based on a 650 membership when we only have 400 paid up members. Perhaps this is a reason some branches have not paid their dues and some were not represented at the convention at all.

The delegate to the national convention will be W. Sparrow.

Directors elected to the provincial board were Tom Slack, John Thornburn, Molly Robinson, Jo Arland and Ada Kells, all for a two-year term and Rolly Wilkins and Crosby Johnston for one year.

The motion to ask the provincial government for relief from school taxes for pensioners was defeated by a large margin, most pensioners feeling that the generous home owner grant was enough without asking for more.

Despite assurances from Pacific Stage with regard to a bus stop, buses still will not stop for pensioners at 273 Street and the highway.

The Lions housing ladies have now had a meeting with Bob McClelland and he has promised to get some action and also with a crosswalk at the same location. However, with a stop light at Jackman Road and a crosswalk at 273rd, there should be some real traffic snarls in Aldergrove in the not so distant future.

The strawberry tea was not in any way a success. The few dedicated workers whose work makes things possible and the faithful few who always come to patronise the events are all deserving the grateful thanks of the organization, but the large number of members who are quick to beef that we don't do enough for the older members stay away in droves, and discourage any efforts to entertain or do anything for them.

Ann Dolan won the door prize at the Saturday dance and the spot prize went to Rose Nelson and Frank Deal. Visitors were June Shupe of Burnaby and Jim Maddison from Vancouver.

Doris says that when she gets the urge to work, she always goes and lays down until the urge passes.

Folk festival is also big on homegrown talent

For the last five summers, the Vancouver Folk Music Festival has presented unusual and exotic types of music from the far corners of the world. The sixth annual festival will continue this tradition with an exceptional line-up from Bolivia, Sweden and Australia. However, an often overlooked aspect of the festival is the focus on Canadian performers. In a nation which has gone so far as to debate the existence of a genuine Canadian culture, it is worth noting the impressive array of traditional and contemporary Canadian performers who will gather at Jericho Beach Park, July 15-17.

Songwriting is an area where the diversity and richness of the Canadian music scene is evident. From Newfoundland to Dawson Creek the raw material of folks' daily lives is transformed; what were sorrows and joys become music. Bim is a good representative of this. In addition to performing haunting country classics and the best acoustic rock 'n roll anywhere, Bim writes and performs songs about growing up in northern B.C. What was it really like in Dawson Creek? Nobody has told the story better.

We'll be welcoming two exceptional women from the prairies, Connie Kaldor and Heather Bishop. Whether it be a ballad about the suppression of the Metis or the mellifluous and very silly "Alligator Waltz", Connie is writing a new page in the history of Canadian song. Heather Bishop is a fine singer in the blues vein. Her latest album, "I Love Women ... Who Laugh", fulfills earlier promise shown by songs such as "A Woman's Anger", which dealt with the sexual harassment of women in non-traditional jobs.

Starting 6 p.m.

Come to the Cabaret!

Following the success of last years annual fund raising event, "Cabaret deMonte Carlo", the Laurel Street Arts Center in Abbotsford will be taking the same theme this year and expanding on it.

The Abbey Arts Center (seating capacity, 700) has been booked for Saturday, June 25, and with an array of singers, dancers and an art auction to boot, all signs point to another successful extravaganza.

The focal point is of course to raise additional funds for the operation and maintenance of the Laurel Street Arts Center, where people are entertained by an assortment of productions, including dance, theatre and song.

This year offers two different packages that anyone who appreciates an evening of laughter and excitement can participate in. The dinner package will begin at 6 p.m. with cocktails in the Green Room, until 7:30, whereupon a fantasy feast, catered by their talented chef, will fill your senses. It will consist of a seven course continental dinner, complete with appetizers, beverage, entrees and a host of delectable desserts.

Covered in the cost of the dinner, and commencing at 8:30 p.m., will begin a schedule of events for the evening that will allow you to play until 2 a.m., if you choose.

A casino starts the festivities off with such games as crown and anchor, roulette, blackjack and arrows - easy to learn, with tension mounting, as you roll the lucky dice for the big win. The casino carries on later, after all present have taken part in the dream auction. This will be involving a series of approximately 30 items and/or services, which included last year anything from books, dinners and theatre tickets, to excursion flights, antiques and even a touch of mink!

The auction will be carried on with a bit of humour and farce by William Henke, a professional in this field, until approximately 10:30 p.m., when the real entertainment begins.

By now all of the Valley will be familiar with the superb vocalizations of Sophie Turko and Norman Slack, who have been consistently excellent performers for the Miss Abbotsford Pageant and most recently at the International Arts Festival. A brand-new repertoire of songs from hit Broadway musicals such as Gigi, The Sound of Music, My Fair Lady and Show Boat, will be sung by this delightful duo, as well as a few selections from the past operas they have been involved with in the Vancouver Opera Association.

Then Bonnie Jean Anderson, proprietor and teacher extraordinaire at the Dance Factory in Abbotsford, will bring to the stage some of the most exciting and originally choreographed dance pieces, recently heralded as such by the judges of the B.C. Dance Competitions in Surrey.

All this wrapped up into one neat package of which half the cost will be tax deductible.

As for the other package? Well, it will include everything that has been previously described with the exception of our exquisite dinner, and will be priced at only one-fifth of the cost.

Tickets for Cabaret deMonte Carlo are available in advance only at the Laurel Street Arts Center, Laurel and Montrose Streets, Abbotsford. For further information, call 852-2787 or 853-7755.

Album Review: Police, Kottke, Japan

By NOZ PARKER

Synchronicity
The Police
[A&M]

With previous albums the Police have brought out the Freud in their critics so it's not surprising that the platinum trio throw Jung's name on the cover and employ quasi-Jungian thought in some of the new song lyrics.

The band's extensive world tours have not only influenced Sting's music with elements of exotic foreign music; the travel experiences in such lands as Asia and South America shows in his lyrics, a bittersweet and reflective world vision. The open spaciousness and polyrhythms in his songs give Synchronicity a unique ethereal quality.

Andy Summers' sole song, Mother, shows the influence of his occasional co-hort Robert Fripp, with its use of closed-loop tapes, and Stewart Copeland's Miss Gradenko is typical of his humor as in previous records under his pseudonym, Klark Kent.

Sting is still writing the band's best tunes, (including Synchronicity I & II, Walking In Your Footsteps, O My God, Every Breath, King Of Pain, Wrapped Around Your Finger and Tea In The Sahara) and the new album's the best they've put out in all respects. Powerful and sublime, Synchronicity is a classic.

Time Step
Leo Kottke
[Chrysalis]

Kottke is an acknowledged master of guitar picking, slide and exotic tunings, but previous albums have been primarily instrumental, limiting his popularity as a recording artist. He should remedy this situation with Time Step, a collection of eight songs featuring his handsome, deep voice, with harmonies from Emmylou Harris and Albert Lee. Kottke's voice resonates with an authentic country-blues power not unlike Merle Haggard (he even includes a classic prison weeper, I'll Break Out Again Tonight).

Rings, the Reeves-Harvey love song, fits Kottke's vocal style beautifully, as does Kottke's original, Julie's House. The latter song also features the guitar work of both Kottke and Albert Lee (who has worked with Eric Clapton, Emmylou Harris and Ry Cooder among many others), as does Starving, and they make a lethal combination on the fretboards. T-Bone Burnett, the producer, also deserves credit for a crisp, driving sound while retaining Kottke's engaging friendliness.

Among the eight songs, Saginaw, Michigan and Kristofferson's Here Comes That Rainbow Again will bring a smile to your face, and old fans will enjoy the three 12-string guitar instrumentals.

Now all that's needed to cement Kottke's venture into commercial success is a local concert appearance. How about it, Leo?

Oil On Canvas
Japan
[Virgin]

At their best, Japan are making the sort of music that Roxy Music might be making if Eno had not left the band. David Sylvian's voice has an uncanny similarity to Bryan Ferry's, and Japan's music, while original, is derivative of early Roxy Music.

Recent Japan albums, like Tin Drum and Gentlemen Take Polaroids have been worthy and have expanded their audience considerably, and it is mostly songs from these two releases that are featured on their deluxe new live double album, Oil On Canvas. Japan has always been heavy on the mannered, cool pose, but this superb in-concert set captures a warm, living sound, augmented by their new fifth member, guitarist-keyboardist Masumi Tsuchiya - the first member of the band to actually come from Japan, the country. Japan, the band, is British.

Japan's music mixes oriental influences and sounds with modern electronic technology and Mick Karn's propulsive fretless-bass sounds -- an intriguing contemporary musical painting.

Canadian contingent at annual fest ever Irish folks have gathered to form a branch. 21 pipers, dancers, whistle players, singers and fiddlers of diverse backgrounds and occupations will present Deili Band style tunes, songs in Gaelic and English and traditional figure and old style Ceili dancing under the direction of two Ceili masters and with audience participation. To top it off, The Vancouver Morris Men will be on hand to share this colourful folk dance form, with roots stretching back to the pre-Christian rituals of England.

Finally, from the whirlpool of energy and talent that formerly produced the Original Sloth Band, we'll hear from Ken Whitely, a jass-swing-rhythm and bluesman whose expertise stretches back to the music of the '20s, and brother Chris Whitely, now teamed up with Caitlin Hanford to produce smooth as silk country music with just the right touch of swing.

It anyone is still entertaining doubts as to the authenticity, vitality, diversity and richness of Canadian culture, the Sixth Annual Vancouver Folk Music Festival has got what it takes to set those fears to rest. Check it out and travel Canada by by ear.

Children (12 and under) and senior citizens may attend free of charge. Weekend-long or daily tickets are available at the Vancouver Folk Festival office, 3271 Main St., Vancouver V5V 3M6, call 879-2931. Tickets are also available at VTC-CBO outlets, including Eaton's and Woodward's, at $15 Friday evening concert, $22 Saturday or Sunday, and $40 for the weekend pass. Special discounts are available for large groups or the unemployed at the Festival office.

Public paint-in at Douglas

On Saturday and Sunday, June 25 and 26, 10 a.m. until 4 p.m., the Langley Arts Council is inviting all artists (whether they be professional, aspiring, amateur, serious, not-so-serious) in the districts and neighbouring areas to join in the fun with a gala "Paint-in" session in Douglas Park, 20550 Douglas Crescent.

Artists may bring, if they wish, their original preliminary sketches to work from and a choice of painting materials, in acrylics, oils, watercolors, pastels, etc. with their favourite assortment of brushes and wiping towels. The canvas, which is fine-grained plywood in assorted sizes will be provided by the Langley Arts Council free of charge, or your own canvasses, mat boards, or what-have-you may be used instead.

Registration forms are available from the L.A.C. office, located at 5202 - 204 Street or phone 534-0781 for more detailed information. A registration fee of five dollars per artist is charged, and this fun-time event is open to all ages, from the youngster to the senior citizen.

A panel of judges will determine the winners on Sunday, June 26, at 2:00 p.m., and the winning entries will be awarded with generous cash prizes in first, second, and third choices in both adult and children categories.

Also on Sunday, along with the fun paint-in session, the Langley Arts council's affiliated members clubs will be on hand in Douglas Hall with mini displays and posters, and happily answer any inquiries which the public may wish to ask. Admission is free to the public and refreshments will be available.

Country Playhouse, the valley's first professional theatre company, in association with Actors Equity Association, presents this delightfully hilarious comedy about two characters named Doris and Felix - the zaniest and most mismatched couple of the 1960s.

For information and reservations, phone 852-ARTS (2787) or 853-7755.

Curtain time is 8:30 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. matinees. Tickets are $8.50 ($7.50 student or senior), except previews, $5.00 and matinees, $6.00, and are available at VTC-CBO outlets.

Community concert sales end June 30

The Valley Community concert series brings a series of live, professional concerts from all over the world for presentation at Abbotsford's new auditorium. The series is produced in association with Greengable Productions.

The first of this series is scheduled for Tuesday, October 18, featuring the Odessa Balalaikas, music from the Tsar villages, Gypsy camp, and from the faraway villages. On November 15, the Constanza Orchestra of Romania; January 18, 1984, the Manhattan Rhythm Kings with popular music, ragtime, jazz, and swing, all on March 10 of next year, pianist Andre La Plante, a 1978 Silver medal winner will be enjoyed by all.

Subscriptions are available through membership only, including all four of the above mentioned presentations for only twenty-five dollars. Membership forms are now available at the Langley Arts Council's office, 5202 - 204 Street, phone 534-0781, or the Laurel Street Arts Centre, Abbotsford, phone 853-7755 or 852-2787. ASK ANNABELLE

Dear Annabelle,

My neighbors and myself have a problem involving the neighborhood children. I don't have any children at home but the problem is right on my doorstep as well as our neighbors. Six families are involved. Three of our neighbors are truckers and they have contracts to haul away papers and magazines to be recycled. This involves, sometimes, over 20,000 girlie magazines. One trucker had a burlap bag taken from his van containing these girlie magazines. The young boy who took them was caught but not until he had played postman and delivered them to the neighborhood. Others he dumped in various places. We think we have found most of them. His friends who helped him in this little caper have been punished. We now feel that this matter has been dropped but want to know how to handle it if it should happen again. Please print my letter to protect the innocent kids in this neighborhood.

Signed: A, Aldergrove.

Dear A,

First of all, these truckers should have locked their vans. I hope if they were the fathers of any children involved they have learned that lesson by now. If you are worried about what these magazines can do to a young mind, don't. There is enough stuff thrust at kids nowadays that they probably know more about life that we did at their ages. If they have been raised in a healthy, loving atmosphere there isn't much that will turn their heads. The boy's prank (and I'm sure that is all it was) undoubtably taught him a lesson he won't soon forget. The nice part is this, if so many magazines are being recycled, how many people are buying them?

Dear Annabelle,

I have this neighbor who has 10 million cats (well, maybe that's a slight exaggeration). Every spring I plant my garden and every morning those cats have scratched up my newly planted seeds. I have talked to my neighbor but he doesn't seem to care. I am going nuts. I get very few vegetables during the summer because of his darn cats. People always complain about dogs, coyotes, deer and rabbits but as far as I'm concerned, cats are the worst. Do you know the solution? I don't have much time or money.

Signed: All out for cat poison, Aldergrove.

Dear All out,

Get yourself a very large dog. But then instead of cat scratching, you have large paw prints and Fido does love to bury bones. I'm afraid you are one of millions all over the world with the same problem but at least you are in good company. Apart from the stock answer I got at most nurseries I inquired at, which was, 'a carefully aimed shot behind the left ear' there really isn't much you can do. Buckerfield's has a product called Detour, but they don't hold out much hope for that either. If any readers have a solution maybe they could pass it along. We cat and garden lovers would be most grateful.

Star readers are invited to mail in their questions or problems to ASK ANNABELLE. Use a nom de plume if you wish. The address is ASK ANNABELLE, c-o The Aldergrove Star, Box 220, Aldergrove, B.C., V0X 1A0.

Government seeks atmosphere for job growth

By BOB McCLELLAND, MLA

A lot has happened since my last constituency column; our Social Credit government was returned to power in the May 5 election and I, once again, have the privilege of representing the people of Langley in the legislature. I would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone who supported me in the election and the many volunteers who worked tirelessly toward my re-election. Your dedication and support was much appreciated.

Cabinet has been extremely busy during the past month finalizing the budget and determining priorities for the coming year and for the next four years. We know that British Columbia is on the road to economic recovery, but it is very fragile, and we must direct all our efforts to ensuring that recovery continues and is enhanced. Our government is committed to providing an atmosphere in which small business and industry can develop and provide jobs for our citizens. We are committed to expanding and diversifying our economic base.

The government's plans for the coming year will be presented in the speech from the throne which will be delivered by lieutenant governor Henry Bell-Irving on June 23. I shall provide details of the throne speech in my next column. After debate on the speech the budget will be introduced by the minister of finance and debated by members of the legislature. Several important pieces of legislation will also be dealt with during this session.

As the premier has said on numerous occasions, some tough choices will have to be made and some tough decisions taken with respect to programs presently undertaken by the government. However, the people of British Columbia voted for responsible government, a government committed to controlling the cost and the size of government. I believe we have arrived at a plan which will preserve essential government services within the restraint on government program while encouraging economic recovery.

I look forward to representing the people of Langley over the next four years and I hope that you will continue to write to me about issues which are of interest or concern to you. I will make every effort to assist in resolving problems that you may encounter. Please write to me care of the Parliament Buildings in Victoria or to my constituency office at 20590 Fraser Hwy., Telephone 534-5975.

Lively rock club meeting

By ELLEN SPEERS

ALDERGROVE - Although the June 10 meeting of the Fraser Valley Rock and Gem Club was somewhat smaller than usual, it was nonetheless a lively one. Twenty members had attended the Rendez-Vous, a very good representation.

Club has been asked by the Langley arts council to put a display case of members' work in the Centennial library in Langley, from August 2 to 27. The club has also been asked to participate in the seniors' festival 83 at B.C. Place on June 21 with a case of members' work.

Jim Greenwood had been invited to the Alice Brown school in Langley to talk to the grade 4 students, his topic being 'rocks'.

Sam Kirkaldy, the club's most senior member, has donated all his rock collection to the workshop.

Elsie Young gave the rock talk, her subject being pearls. These little beauties are formed by reaction to a foreign body in the oyster. Cultured pearls are big business.

Kay Johnson gave a short resume of her experiences on a rock hound bus trip to Jack-Pot, Nevada, showing some of the petrified limb casts she picked up. The meeting concluded with refreshments.

Next meeting will be held July 8 at 8 p.m. in the OAP hall in Aldergrove. Visitors are welcome.

Aviation museum host open house

SURREY - British Columbia's only aviation museum will hold its 'annual open house' on Sunday, June 26 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Open for inspection will be the aircraft restoration and storage facility of the Canadian Museum of Flight and Transportation.

Visitors to the facility, at 13527 Crescent Road in Surrey, will see a large portion of what is Canada's third largest collection of historic aircraft. Several restored biplanes will be on display, as will such aircraft as a deHavilland Vampire jet fighter, presently under restoration. Tours of the museum's storage buildings will also be conducted; here about 30 rare aircraft are held awaiting workshop space.

TEN-SPEEDS RETURN SUNDAY

ALDERGROVE - Ten speed bicycle racing returns to the area on Sunday. The 1983 B.C. senior men and womens road champions will be determined in a 12-lap, 100-mile road race.

The best viewing area for spectators is the hill on 64th Avenue near 264th Street, or near 272nd Street.

The race will be travelling from 64th Avenue near 268th Street to 264th Street, north to River Road, along the river to 272nd Street and then south to 64th Avenue.

Spectators on bicycles can get the best view by riding the opposite way on the course.

Start is 10:00 a.m., with finish at about 2:15 p.m.

Make most of outdoors with UBC

Learning to make the most of the great outdoors is the general theme of many UBC non-credit courses this summer. There are no academic prerequisites for these programs.

Yachting, sailing, scuba diving, whale watching, land explorations, outdoor sketching and photography - including an outdoor nature photography workshop at Whistler Mountain - are among the more than 175 indoor and outdoor programs for adults. For children, there are courses on computers, chemistry, astronomy and geology.

Tours of and background sessions on the world-acclaimed UBC botanical gardens with David Tarrant, wine sampling, an introduction to West Coast Indian art, career development, music and dance and week long daytime learning programs are also among the summer courses.

Meals are available on campus and inquiries about on-campus accommodation should be directed to 228-2963.

Free course catalogues can be picked up at local library branches or ordered by phoning the UBC Centre for Continuing Education, 228-2181.

The Robbins family of 256 Avenue, became proud step-parents last week. A brave and imaginative junco cured her housing problem by nesting in the Robbins' hanging basket. No one suspected there were any tenants until the eggs hatched two days ago. The peeping of the chicks soon gave them away but the addition of three chicks has been welcomed by one and all.

Fruit trees need loving care, too

By DON ANSON

I think that the most neglected inhabitant of a garden is the fruit tree. So often they are given little or no nutrition to help them in their mammoth task of producing fine crops of fruit.

Whatever fertilizers were placed in the hole where the tree was originally planted are soon used up and those roots have meandered a long way from that hole.

Fruit trees do not require a tremendous amount of rich fertilizers but they do need to get something. If you take the trouble to mulch with some good rotted compost or spent mushroom manure, you will be amply rewarded the following season by more and better fruit. In addition, give the tree a good liquid feed every now and then and spread some of your wood ashes right out to the outside drip mark of the branches.

Don't worry overly much if your mulch is not fully composted. You are very unlikely to burn any roots even if the mulch is raw manure. However, I do not advise mulching with raw poultry manure as this would provide too much nitrogen and may produce too much green growth at the expense of fruit.

Next most neglected plants are the shrubs and ornamental trees. Try giving them some liquid nourishment and watch them respond. Some of these will also respond well to the liquid lime treatment. Just dissolve a handful of lime in a watering can and apply this to your lilacs, deutzias, pyracanthas and clematis.

Don't eat up all your rhubarb. Next year's crop depends on a number of leaves and stalks being left to mature naturally. You can cover the plant with half-rotted manure in the fall and get a much better crop next year.

Unfortunately I have mislaid a letter from a lady in Surrey who asked where she could get a hold of a small propagator with cable heat. She did not enclose a self-addressed envelope either. I am sure she will find no difficulty in finding such a unit at any of the larger garden centres. I bought mine several years ago from Buckerfield's and it has given me invaluable use in quick germination of seeds and a fine and fast method of striking cuttings throughout the year.

Once again I have noted the number of gardeners who try to make good compost out of grass cuttings alone. Needless to say they get very poor results. Your compost should include as much variety as possible. If you have put in a good layer of fresh grass cuttings, this should be topped by something else. It could be soil, wood ashes, kitchen waste (no fats), leaves, hair, any form of manure and, in fact, anything that is organic and preferably shredded. Don't hesitate to put on dog manure or kitty litter and don't forget to give an occasional wetting to the heap as it always requires moisture and air for the bacteria to work on.

You can convert subsoil to good topsoil by throwing some of this on the heap but not too much at a time.

Have you noticed any symptoms of magnesium deficiency in your garden? If you spot leaves that are yellow between veins, giving a marbled effect, it is likely you have a shortage of magnesium in the soil. Plants with red leaves may turn irregularly purple with the older leaves affected first.

Main plants affected by a shortage of magnesium include apples, tomatoes, brassicas, bedding plants and lettuce. An effective cure is to dissolve a good handful of Epsom salts in your watering can and pour over the plants. The same symptoms may occur with your acid-loving plants such as rhododendrons, roses, camellias, hydrangeas and raspberries but in these cases there is possible confusion with an absence of iron in a form the plants can use.

How can you tell if your plant needs potassium? With leafy vegetables, beans, tomatoes, potatoes, and many fruits the edges of leaves appear curled and brown or scorched while brown spots may develop on the undersides. Older leaves will be affected first.

If this appears widespread, you may have to dose with superphosphate but usually a good side dressing of sifted wood ashes will affect a cure. It must be remembered that the same symptoms may occur following excessive cold or drying winds.

No soil is perfect. There will always be slight shortages of this and that but as long as you build up your soil with a high organic content, you will not suffer much.

Overdoses of chemical fertilizers will do far more harm than good and will upset nature's balance. Overfeeding in any form is not only harmful to plants but also to soil life.

The author will endeavor to answer any questions on the subject of outdoor gardening. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: "Gardens", care of The Star, Box 220, Aldergrove, V0X 1A0. All letters will be answered personally, but some may be answered in this column.
