LOCAL MUNICIPALITIES "SKUNKED" BY YANKS

120 jobs exported to U.S.

SUMAS, Wash. - A business now under construction here will be providing employment for about 120 American workers.

Why is this newsworthy to a Canadian citizen living in the Fraser Valley? our readers may ask.

Well, it is a Canadian business, and it is relocating from Mission City - not to Abbotsford, Matsqui or Langley - but to this small, quiet border town in Whatcom county.

Larry Poulson, president of Roto-Matic Food Systems Inc., started his company in Mission three years ago, but has now decided to move to "greener pastures", taking with him the 120 job opportunities.

Company manufactures a commercial oven which 46-year-old Poulson claims will "break loose...like the Pac-Man video game."

Roto-Matic's new 10,400 square foot plant is expected to be completed this week. It is located at the city limits just west of town and adjacent to Front Street.

When it opens later this month it will employ 40 people, but the workforce will increase substantially during the next 12 months, according to Poulson.

Future growth plans, for another 10,400 square foot building on the company's eight-acre site are already in the making.

Plant foremen and managers are being hired now. The workers to be hired will be doing electrical assembly work on the stainless steel oven shells manufactured in Korea and shipped here via Seattle. Workers will all be hired locally.

Oven is the culmination of three years and $2-million spent on research and development, Poulson says. He purchased the rights to the invention but says there is no comparison between what it looked like before and the product which will soon be manufactured here. "I made a Cadillac out of a roller skate," he says.

The 96-pound 22-by 24-inch oven was developed to replicate the taste of deep-fried products without using oil, grease or fat. It cooks food, placed in rotating baskets, by means of a highspeed hot air process. It is specifically designed for cooking french fries, but 38 other food products can be cooked on it as well. The resulting food product is said to be highter in nutritional value than ordinary deep fried foods because of the absence of oil, yet taste is nearly identical.

Oven is being test-marketed on site in Alberta and British Columbia restaurants, Poulson says.

Company's primary marketing objective is North America with an eye to worldwide distribution. 40,000 units have already been ordered by the distributor in the U.K.

Roto-Matic senior engineer Mike Edley says the initial output, with a workforce of 40, will be about 200 units a day.

And why did Poulson decide to move his entire plant to another country?

Well, he sums it all up neatly in one sentence:

"Because we have never had so much help in our lives from city officials."

The company first approached the city of Sumas about the project last summer. A building permit was quickly granted.

"The welcome was overwhelming," says Poulson. "The city couldn't do enough for us."

Sumas mayor Robert Mitchell is indeed delighted.

"It's great they are coming in," he says. "It will mean help to solve some of the unemployment problems that have existed in Sumas and around the county."

Lack of employment opportunities often lead younger Sumas residents to seek work elsewhere, Mitchell says.

It is Whatcom county's gain and the Fraser Valley's loss.

Gloucester under scrutiny

MURRAYVILLE - Planners and engineers in the municipal hall here are currently busy scanning through a "series of reports" they have received from Gloucester Properties.

Reports detailing various aspects of the long-planned Fraser Industrial Centre have been prepared by Gloucester's engineers. They deal with access and internal road network inside the north Aldergrove industrial park, and services such as water and sewers to facilitate the 640-acre site.

According to deputy administrator Jim Godfrey the municipal study has not yet progressed to the stage where he can comment on whether or not there are "shortfalls" in the material submitted.

It requires a complete analysis before the municipal planners can comment on just how detailed the Gloucester reports really are, Godfrey says. And not until such time can the departmental engineers recommend a "next step."

"It (Fraser Industrial Centre) is a big project," Godfrey points out. "And we want everything done in such a way that nothing can go wrong."

Godfrey says he expects the planning departmental heads will have their study completed by the end of February, and that a report will then be submitted to council recommending the steps to take from there.

Municipal planners began studying the detailed plans in October 1982 after regional directors voted in favor of removing the last road blocks from in front of the industrial development.

Guns still missing

ALDERGROVE - Police have no leads in the case of a burglary which took place at an Aldergrove sports shop last week and which netted the thieves seven long guns and a quantity of ammunition.

Guns that were stolen during a break-in at a Langley business the same night were later recovered when RCMP in Burnaby searched a residence there and arrested two men.

The Vancouver area has been hit by a rash of gun thefts and armed robberies in recent weeks.

Janitor charged in Rempel murder

CLEARBROOK - A 26-year-old Mission man, Garry Chris Simpson was charged last week with first degree murder in the slaying of Carole Anne Rempel at Abbotsford Airport on Dec. 12.

Simpson, who up to the time of his arrest was working as a janitor at the airport, appeared before a Matsqui provincial court judge here last Tuesday afternoon.

A Matsqui police detective said Simpson came under suspicion early during the murder investigation. Simpson, whose wife was present in the courtroom as judge E. A. Sather read the charge, had been working for a small janitorial company for less than two months and was unemployed before he started work at the airport.

He had been living in Mission for about two months and was originally from Abbotsford.

Rempel's body was found in a washroom at Frontier Helicopters on Sunday, Dec. 12. She had been bludgeoned to death in a manner which police called "brutal, sadistic, and apparently motiveless."

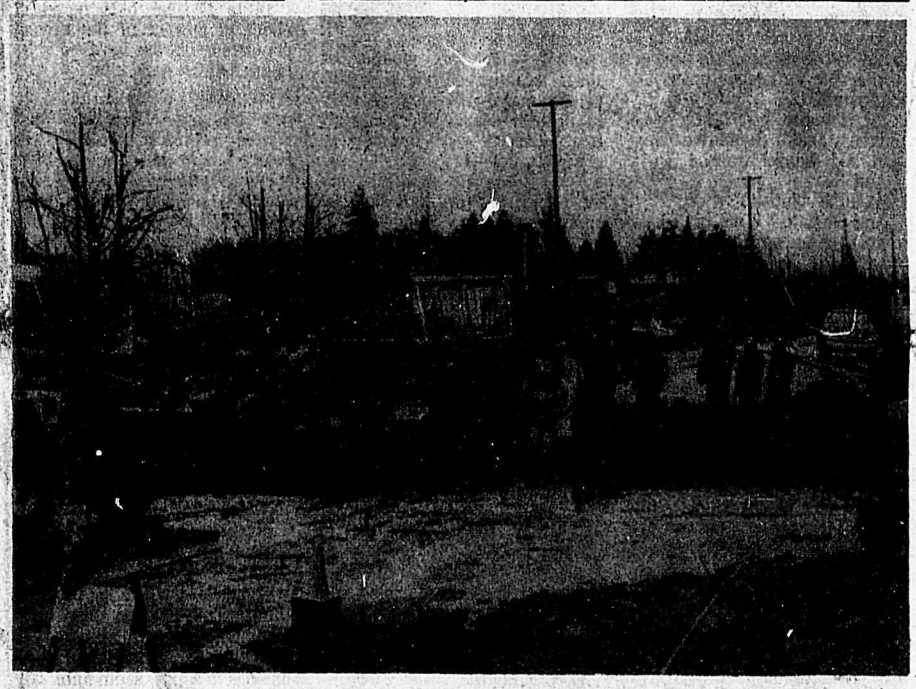
Rempel, 21, was the holder of a commercial pilot's license and worked in the office of Frontier Helicopters while she waited for a call-up to the Canadian armed forces. Her career was set at becoming an RCAF jet pilot.

Food bank now open

LANGLEY - An emergency food bank has officially opened here. While it has been operating on an ad hoc basis for the past six months, the service is now open Monday to Friday at Langley Family Services, 5339-207 Street. A full-time co-ordinator has been hired under a Canada Community development grant, and funds and food have been donated by community organizations, businesses, and individuals.

Donations of food and money will be solicited to keep the food bank open.

"At Langley Family Services, we feel the food bank is an opportunity for neighbor to help neighbor in these difficult economic times," says director Betty McClurg "it is open to anyone in need, and we feel sure the community will continue to respond to this r ed with donations of money and d."



ALDERGROVE - Fraser Highway was closed for five days last week between Bradner and Ross roads, after a section of the pavement disappeared into a "sink hole".

Engineers from the provincial highways department were baffled as to the cause of the cave-in, not knowing why the road bed had been undermined at this particular point.

While traffic was rerouted north of Fraser Highway, crews worked through the weekend on restoring the collapsed road. It was reopened for traffic yesterday morning.

COUNCIL PONDERS "CHAOS"

New tax system "uneven"

MURRAYVILLE - Municipal councilors here are worried that a change in real estate assessments coupled with a "variable millrate" this year will create chaos when it comes to property taxation.

"Agricultural land assessments have not been reduced along with those of residential properties," says Mayor Bill Blair, adding that this will create a gross inequality when the municipality later this spring applies its 1983 mill rate to the assessments just announced by the provincial authority.

Assessments on residential properties have dropped between 30 and 35 percent, according to Ald. Carol Gran. Commercial assessments have been reduced by only about 10 percent, she says.

"It is all pretty uneven," Gran says.

In order to make up for the loss of revenue anticipated from these reductions in assessment, the millrate, which is established by the local municipal government's needs, will have to be drastically increased, the finance committee chairwoman says.

"If the millrate is increased by 30 percent," she says, "then taxes will increase by about 20 percent for business people."

And since agricultural land assessments have remained more or less static, such an increase would also mean that a farmer's tax bill would be up about 30 percent from last year's.

"It is all so nebulous," says Ald. Muriel Arnason.

The provincial government in announcing the change to the assessment values a few months ago, informed British Columbia's municipalities that they could adjust the situation to suit themselves by introducing a new concept of variable millrates.

This suggestion is not looked upon with favor by local politicians who feel that such a system would create added work and perhaps confusion within municipal tax departments.

Guide to appeal

VICTORIA - An instruction leaflet to assist property owners intending to appeal their 1983 assessments is now available.

The leaflet, entitled Appealing your property assessment, offers a variety of suggestions to the would-be appellant as well as detailing the purpose and functions of the courts of revision.

Copies of the leaflet are available from any government agency, area assessment office or local municipal office.

Assessment too high? Act immediately!

MURRAYVILLE - Deadline for property owners who wish to appeal their 1983 tax assessments is only one week away.

Written notices must be forwarded to the area assessor for Langley - Matsqui - Abbotsford no later than Thursday, January 20, from property owners who wish to have their appeals heard by the local court of revision.

This doesn't give homeowners, farmers and businessmen much time to prepare an appeal, municipal council members here agree.

Although residential property assessments this year have been adjusted downward in the wake of a slumping real estate market, taxpayers still don't know how much of a bite the taxman will take this year. They can only guess that it will be more than it was in 1982. Not until the municipal budget is finalized, approved by council, and pulicized later this spring, will a property owner be able to accurately calculate his 1983 tax bill. And by then it will be too late to protest.

The tax man will then take your money, thank you, and if you cannot pay, he will take your property.

If people feel that their property has been assessed at more than it would be likely to fetch on today's real estate market, then they should launch an appeal - now.

Appeals should be addressed to the court of revision, and forwarded to the B.C. Assessment Authority at 2670A Minter Street, Clearbrook, B.C. V2T 3K2.

But remember, they must be received by the area assessor no later than Thursday, January 20.

AND BEATS CITY HALL

Angry man has day in court

FRASER HWY. - A home owner who says he was "antagonized" by local officialdom to the point where he went and threw a rock through a plateglass window at Langley municipal hall has had his day in court.

It was the chain of events that led up to the action by the frustrated man that was heard in B.C.'s supreme court.

And seven court appearances later, Bill Griffiths, the disgruntled taxpayer, won.

He is delighted, of course, with the ruling by Mr. Justice Meredith that it is not any longer and never was his responsibility to look after the water and domestic sewer needs of his four neighbors. An agreement reached years ago between the owners of the five properties was found by Meredith to be "not a convenant of necessity."

When Griffiths bought his home he learned - by and by - that he had to look after these needs for his neighbors. They, in turn, were supposed to pay for the services.

They never did, according to Griffiths. They wanted the water and the sewage facilities, alright, but they forgot to pay their monthly bills. As a result no money was available for the upkeep of the Griffiths septic field system; it deteriorated; and soon raw sewage started flooding across the Griffiths property and into a ditch at the south side of Fraser Highway in the 23700-block.

That's where the provincial health department came into the picture. Health inspector Art Bailey demanded that Griffiths clean up his act - or that of his neighbors.

I have no money, said Griffiths. And my neighbors refuse to pay.

No matter, said Bailey. Do it.

Then followed a bizarre mexican standoff.

Griffiths went out into his back yard and turned a few valves, shutting off water to and sewer lines from his neighbors.

Screams were heard. People could no longer use their bathrooms, and they did not have the water to cook their food.

You can't solve it that way, said the health department, demanding that Griffiths re-open the lines.

Neighbors, who were asked to contribute toward upgrading of the system, still did not pay. Why should they, after all they had their services back.

Health inspectorate then de-

First come services, then housing, says Ald. Gran

MURRAYVILLE - No more housing in Langley, says alderwoman Carol Gran. At least not before the municipality looks after services such as water, sanitary and storm sewers.

But it looks like Gran is fighting a one-woman crusade.

Her objections to three new bylaws which would give the green light to two new mobile home parks in the Fernridge area were overruled by five other council members.

Gran voted against the Fernridge and Noort Development parks when council sat here Monday afternoon.

She made it plain, however, that she is motivated by a fear that council, by granting approval to more concentrated development in the southwest Langley area, is leaving itself open for serious trouble in the future.

Last spring, following flooding of nearby Anderson Creek, a housing subdivision in Brookswood suffered extreme damage, and township councilors were severely criticized by groups of angry homeowners for having approved the development in an area which engineers and planners should have known to be a potential trouble spot.

Angry man has his day in court . . .

manded the waste from the five homes be pumped from the malfunctioning treatment tank on a daily basis. And here the township entered the scene. Because the question arose: Who is to pay the $100 for each pump out?

Not us, said the provincial department.

Certainly not us, said the municipality.

A contractor began to empty the inadequate treatment system on a daily basis. Bills were sent to municipal hall who redirected them to Victoria.

Nobody paid, and the contractor now has some $27,000 outstanding for his services.

"I was used all the time as a ball in a game between Langley municipality and the provincial government," says Griffiths. And that was when he decided to go to Murrayville and display his annoyance in a visual manner. And was arrested in the process.

What will happen next in the bizarre case?

Nobody seems to know for sure.

Except that Griffiths says sewage will soon once again begin to flow alongside Fraser Highway. The tank, he says, is now caving in, and the effluent keeps on coming. The service contractor is tired of pumping out the system two or three times a day and not getting paid.

Local officials say the problem originated when the provincial health inspectorate approved of this unique system a few years ago without sealing all the legal loopholes which would have made the five property owners responsible for proper upkeep of the system.

"It is really their fault," says council's health committee chairman, Ald. Muriel Arnason.

And so it goes, with no immediate solution in sight.

And Griffiths? Well, he'll have to go back to court in Langley on May 19 this year and explain to the judge why he felt so utterly frustrated that he decided to take it out on an innocent plateglass window.

"They can only push a Welshman around so far," he says.

"Hot" ammo

MURRAYVILLE - A Langley city man Mario Bruno McKay, has been charged by the RCMP with setting off explosives and endangering the lives of other people.

CANDLE-LIT VIGIL AT BORDER

Tragic deaths make people MADD on both sides of the border

By GRACE REAMER

"We're here not as a vicious, vindictive group," the pastor told the crowd of mourners. "We're here in peace and hope."

Dozens of candlelit faces bowed and tears fell silently as the victims of drunk drivers were remembered and honored.

People of two countries huddled together in a wet and muddy night under the Peace Arch in Blaine. Above them the inscription "Children of a Common Mother" seemed especially appropriate for the gathering of local Mothers Against Drunk Drivers chapters.

The Rev. Don Piro of the Assumption Church in Bellingham spoke of finding a new direction for the people whose lives are shattered by alchol-related tragedies - the survivors.

"We are sad, yet we are mad," he said. "People all over the country are becoming incensed about something we should be incensed about."

The gathering just after dark Dec. 12 was part of a nationwide candlelight vigil honoring those killed by drunk drivers, the beginning of National Drunk and Drug Driving Awareness Week established by President Reagan. People concerned with the problem were asked to drive with headlights on during daylight hours that week.

The newly formed Bellingham MADD chapter and several chapters from lower British Columbia were represented at the interdenominational ceremony.

"We have many concerned citizens here, not all victims," said Rita Akselroid of the Vancouver MADD chapter. She got involved when her 24-year-old daughter was killed by a drunk on the road.

"We know it's going to take a long time," she admitted, but the goal of the MADD movement is "to increase awareness and to change the attitudes of people against drinking and driving."

Akselroid delivered a message from a Vancouver rabbi involved in the campaign against drunk driving.

"The parents go on, but they are constantly trying to make sense of the insensible and cruel accident," the rabbi explained in his message. "It really comes down to caring - caring enough to make sure the drunk driver never drives again."

Messages from Vancouver's mayor and British Columbia's deputy premier also supported the goals of MADD.

A woman from Surrey said the candlelight vigil was her first participation with MADD. Her two young daughters held candles carefully while their mother carried a bundled baby.

Most of the people came in families - grandparents, grieving mothers and fathers, solemn teenagers and young children.

One woman from Vancouver was by herself. She said she wasn't involved with MADD and didn't know any victims. But she brought a candle to the gathering because she said she was very concerned about the social problem of drunks behind the wheel.

Of nearly 900 highway deaths in Washington last year, statistics show that 59 percent were alcohol-related.

In response to the increasingly tragic statistics, MADD was born two years ago in California, quickly spread across the country and now is known internationally.

Piro got involved in the MADD movement through his work with the family of Dan Rick, a Bellingham man who was killed recently by a drunk driver.

Tragic deaths such as that, he said, are the reason people should not let drunk friends or relatives out on the road. And any drunk driver spotted on the road should be reported to the police immediately.

Piro said he was glad to see so many people getting involved because, "How many people want to go back and remember the heartache of the tragedy?"

That pain was reflected in the careworn faces of the people under the Peace Arch. They listened to the songs of peace and unity, shed a few tears, exchanged hugs and trudged home across the muddy lawn.

Ms. Reamer writes in the Lynden (Wash) Tribune

Statistics reveal facts about auto accidents

VICTORIA - In 1981, 859 British Columbians were killed in traffic accidents, 44,123 were injured.

There is an accident every four minutes, an injury every 12 minutes and approximately five fatalities every two days.

One in seven vehicles is damaged.

From 1978 to 1981, motor vehicle accidents, injuries and fatalities increased at an annual rate of over 10 percent.

In the first six months of 1982, fatalities decreased by 32 percent and injuries decreased by 25 percent despite the fact that more vehicles were involved in accidents.

In 1981, traffic accidents cost the citizens of British Columbia approximately one billion dollars, representing more than $1,300 for every family in the province.

In 1981, ICBC paid out $1.5 million a day in claims for a total of half a billion dollars.

It is estimated that every one percent increase in seat belt use will realize a cost saving of $1.35-million for the citizens of British Columbia.

Motor vehicle accidents are the major cause of death in the five to 30 age group.

16 to 24 year olds represent about 20 percent of the driving population, but are involved in 34 percent of the accidents.

In British Columbia, 16 to 24 year olds are being killed and injured in traffic accidents at nearly twice the rate of their peers in Ontario.

In 1981, 5,850 persons were injured and 330 killed in alcohol-related accidents. Up to 50 percent of the drivers killed had been drinking.

Drinking drivers account for 40 percent of all traffic fatalities.

Drinking drivers kill three times as many people as all other crimes combined.

More than one of every three people in provincial jails are there for drinking-driving offences.

About 50 percent of provincial court cases are made up of drinking-driving charges.

$78 of every auto insurance premium in B.C. goes to clean up after drinking drivers.

....Throughout the world

90 percent of all accidents involve human error rather than vehicle or environment factors.

250,000 people are killed and ten million are injured in traffic crashes every year.

Execution for impaired driving

So you think our drinking and driving law is tough? Drunk driving isn't a "crime" particularly in North America. Here are penalties that can be imposed in several other countries.

Australia: the names of the drivers are sent to the local newspapers and printed under the heading "He's drunk and in jail".

Malaya: the driver is jailed and if he is married his wife is jailed too.

Finland-Sweden: automatic jail term of one year.

South Africa: a 10-year prison sentence and the equivalent of a $10,000 fine, or both.

Turkey: drunk drivers are taken 20 miles from town by the police and are forced to walk back "under escort".

Bulgaria: a second conviction results in execution.

San Salvador: your first offense is your last. Execution by firing squad.

Canada's law of a probable three month licence suspension for first offense compared to execution by firing squad does, one has to admit, seem light.

POLL RESULTS SHOW

Courts are not harsh enough

MONTREAL - Nearly four out of five Canadians believe the courts do not deal harshly enough with criminals, a recent Gallup Poll suggests.

Gallup said the proportion was the highest since it first asked the question in 1966, and that concern about the issue was somewhat greater in the four western provinces and among those over 50 years old.

The pollsters say the survey is accurate to within four percentage points either way 19 times out of 20 - meaning that if another sample had been used, as many as 83 percent of respondents, or as few as 75 percent, could have said the courts were not harsh enough.

Statisticians stress that the margin of error in the 20th instance could be much greater and provide completely different results.

Out of 1,066 in-home interviews conducted across Canada in early November, 79 percent said that, in general, courts in their area do not deal harshly enough with criminals.

Four percent felt they acted too harshly while 11 percent described the courts' practices as "about right." Another six percent said they didn't know.

A similar poll conducted two years ago found 63 percent of respondents saying the courts were not harsh enough.

Aldergrove bridge club news

Our club started the new year with a pot luck dinner and bridge for dessert. And some dessert it was for a few players. Jean Brown and Jan Vanderend bid and made grand slam. Jan was also high scorer with 8470 points. Garfield Traeman came in second with 5770. Colleen Gates was low with 1770. This week we will play on Thursday. Next week on Friday again as usual in the OAP Hall at 7:30.

Council still hot over BC Tel rate hike

MURRAYVILLE - Councilors here will fire off another letter to the Canadian radio-television and telecommunications commission to protest B.C. Tel's recent application for a general hike in subscriber rates.

"A little stronger letter, perhaps," suggests Mayor Bill Blair.

Central Fraser Valley regional directors voted last month to protest B.C. Tel's application to the CRTC.

B.C. Tel applied to the governing body in the beginning of November, and a copy of the tariff notice was received by the CFVRD and read at their Dec. 16 general meeting.

The telephone company proposed the rate hike would take effect on May 1.

Increase is based on the application of the federal government's six-plus-five restraint program spread over a two-year period.

According to B.C. Tel, the revenue increase would boost the company's income by $27-million.

Fernridge factory is now "legal"

MURRAYVILLE - After some haggling between themselves, township councilors this week voted to approve a new zoning bylaw amendment which will make a Fernridge factory legal.

But it was a close vote. Aldermen Elford Nundal, Dan Williamson and Muriel Arnason were opposed. The first two because they wanted Beales Steel Products Ltd. to consolidate two parcels into one piece of property before approval was granted, and Arnason simply because she is opposed to the zoning change, period.

"It is sad," Arnason said, "to think that we are doing like the provincial government - bailing out business people."

"It is not a good enough reason for zoning change just because a company can't raise money."

Beales steel fabricators, who have been at 20190-24 Avenue location since the early 1960s (when there were no zoning regulations in Langley district), last year applied for a zoning change.

Because of the non-conforming status of the business, management was unable to raise bank financing for a needed expansion.

Plant has been a controversy in this southwest Langley neighborhood for a couple of years.

Neighboring residents have lobbied council to try and stop the zoning change and expansion. Plant employs about 60 people.

ALDERGROVE - One of the new residents of the recently completed Jackman Manor, Jessie Kilby, was born in Clinton in 1896 and later became a well known figure in the Fraser Valley.

Born Jessie Barton, she taught school in the Cariboo for many years.

In December 1919 she came to Harrison Mills as the bride of Acton Kilby, who along with his father Thomas had the general store there.

After Thomas Kilby's death, Jessie ran the store together with her husband until they sold it to the provincial government in 1972. It became the Kilby museum and they continued to manage this for five more years.

Failing health forced the Kilbys to retire for good in 1976.

Heritage site

MURRAYVILLE - Township councilors have ordered a bylaw to be drafted making the old United Church building on Glover Road and 216 Street in Milner a Langley heritage site.

ALDERGROVE - Local resident Sheila Boshard won a gold and diamond pendant from Aldergrove Super Valu for her recipe of Salmon Mousse that won first prize in the appetizer category of Super Valu's Food for Thought.

Sheila Boshard's prize winning recipe was printed in a recent issue of the Super Valu publication and is reprinted below:

SALMON MOUSSE

Sheila Boshard, Aldergrove

2 - 7.75 oz. [2 - 220 g] tins salmon
½ c. [125 mL] finely chopped celery
¼ c. [60 mL] minced onion
2 T. [30 mL] unflavored gelatin
½ c. [125 mL] cold water
½ c. [125 mL] ketchup
¼ c. [60 mL] vinegar
½ c. [125 mL] mayonnaise

Drain and flake the salmon, reserving the liquid.

Mix together, in a medium bowl, the flaked salmon, celery and onion. Set aside.

Soften the gelatin in cold water.

Combine the salmon liquid, ketchup and vinegar in a small saucepan; bring to the boil. Stir in the softened gelatin and cook gently until the gelatin is dissolved.

Blend this gelatin mixture with the salmon, celery and onion. Stir in the mayonnaise.

Grease a 1 quart (1 L) decorative mold or several individual molds with more mayonnaise. Pour the mixture into the mold(s). Chill at least 2-3 hours.

Famous 1982 psychic predictions were well off

NEW YORK - By anyone's estimate, 1982 should have been an interesting year.

It was to be the year when Reaganomics would bring prosperity, when space scientists would make contact with alien creatures, and when the Loch Ness monster would finally be captured.

At least that is what the best psychics in the United States were predicting a year ago in the National Enquirer, the weekly tabloid that more than five million people buy every week.

Each year The Enquirer and the other supermarket tabloids in the U.S. offer reams of predictions for the next year from people who supposedly can see the future.

But if the predictions for 1982 are any guide, it's a good bet that most of what they are predicting for 1983 will not happen. In 1982, the soothsayers were wrong 90 percent of the time.

Take away the vague forecasts of lucky guesses ("Princess Diana's first baby will be a boy") and one might conclude that the crystal balls had some embarrassingly large cracks in them.

For example, The Enquirer quoted Atlanta psychic Bill O'Hara as saying that: "Reaganomics will be synonymous with prosperity and a strong economy."

Dorothy Allison, the psychic who failed to help in the Atlanta child murder cases, agreed that "by the end of 1982 the economic rainbow will be gleaming boldly over our great land."

Mickie Dahne of Miami, who claims to have predicted the collision of two jumbo jets in 1977, foresaw a heart attack for Fidel Castro. He said the Cuban president would enter a Houston hospital and "The US.-Cuban Cold War will end."

Dahne also predicted that actress Elizabeth Taylor and baseball star Reggie Jackson would get their own television series. They did not.

Astrologer Frederick Davies' astonishing prediction was that "the skeletal remains of an incredible creature - half man, half fish - will be discovered in the Indian Ocean, shocking the world." He neglected to mention which half would be human.

One apparent successful prediction is revealing for another reason. Davies said "a secret scandal would force state secretary Alexander Haig to resign."

Haig did resign, but Davies offered no details of the scandal. Apparently, you can keep a secret from someone who sees it all.

PREDICTIONS FAIL

Other startling events that should have happened in 1982 said the Enquirer's 10 top psychics:

- The Eiffel Tower will begin to lean like the Tower of Pisa. It did not.
- The Loch Ness monster will wallow ashore in Scotland to be captured with gigantic nets. Nessie is still at large.
- Senator Edward Kennedy will be absolved of all blame for the drowning of Mary Jo Kopechne at Chappaquiddick when a mystery man reveals the true story. The mystery man did not surface.
- A giant tidal wave will smash the Hawaiian Islands in August, causing great loss of life. It will continue and strike the West Coast. If there was such a wave, it washed over people unnoticed.
- Rosalynn Carter will announce that she is separating from Jimmy Carter. Never happened.
- Strangely, although two psychics agreed that 1982 would be the year we would receive signals from extraterrestrials, they could not agree on how.

One said the space shuttle Columbia would receive the signals, while the other said the signals would come to the Voyager I spacecraft.

Neither suggested that the extraterrestrial would be E.T. and that he simply would telephone home.

Hope for 1983

Is there now hope that this country, indeed the whole of the western world, is beginning a new growth period? Yes, but don't let your breath out all in one go.

With a feeling of confidence building in the auto industry and with some notable signs, the lumber markets are turning around - U.S. housing starts are up significantly - there is a cautious atmosphere that 1983 is going to be better. And keep in mind, as the housing industry improves, so will the markets for base metals, copper especially.

But there are a hell of a lot of clouds around yet. The international debts are huge and many of the world's lands are in deep trouble. Chase Manhattan, said to be the largest financial institution in the world, is said to be technically bankrupt. Many of the eastern bloc countries are in the glue worse than any country in the west, and that includes Russia. Japan is experiencing a powerful resistance to its products and that country lives or dies on the basis of its exports.

There is still a surplus of crude oil around and oil prices have everything to do with the stability of our economy.

With interest rates moving down and some indication they are going to stay at reasonable levels, it seems some of that huge amount of accrued savings is beginning to move back into circulation.

In Canada there are flags that the governments may be moving away from panicky band-aid programs to addressing some of the underlying and fundamental weaknesses in the economy. This could very well include such things as limits on mortgage rates, and forced provision of five to ten year money for commercial purposes at fixed rates. In themselves they would give a tremendous boost to capital investment.

Wage settlements have moved away from comparative demands to recognition of actual industrial incomes and costs, a maturity that could bode well for the future.

And the family has become important again along with self-reliance and frugality. Many are coping well with the current situation and will keep the memory of the experience alive for many years to come. As the depression of the 30s was a powerful brake on extravagance for the people who lived through it, so will the crunch of the early 80s be a sobering influence on the current and next generation.

It is a hopeful 1983 we are beginning and given dedication to reality, it should be a fair year. -Smithers Int. News

Someone must use PT

By ROBERT SKOGLUND

"When 5 a.m. comes, I'm tired," I said to Eddie Cator, the schoolteacher. "I should probably eat more salad."

Eddie threw back his head and hollered, "Hah. That's an example of newthink. You've been subjected to hippie propaganda for so long that you think any diet can be improved by eating more salad. What you probably need is a nice piece of salt pork."

"You're right," I said. "But people don't think or talk the way they used to and I've probably changed like everyone else. When I was in college, I took history courses. Now Reeney is taking a history course but it's called Man's Cultural Heritage."

Eddie rolled his eyes and threw up his hands like Maw Green. "Methods change even faster on the grade-school level," he said. Every year we go to teachers' conventions and hear some nut wave flags and blow trumpets about a great new teaching method. This year they had a module on precision teaching - they call it PT."

"A module?"

"That's a new word for class. All the PT teacher needs is a stopwatch and a nervous stomach - the kids each get a magic marker and a mimeograph sheet which they cover with a piece of clear plastic. When the teacher hollers 'Go', the kids scribble answers on the plastic like crazy."

"But that sounds like a good old drill where students did a thing over and over until they learned it," I said.

Eddie shook his head, "It's different from meaninless repetition because the teacher now makes a graph that measures each student's progress. If answers can be counted and measured, the kids are learning. Understanding can't be measured, so it's not learning. PT has combined the mass production industrial mind with the mindless athletic kick the country is on. Kids work to beat their own records."

"Even world records are continually being broken," I said. "Some people would die to break them. That's why Guiness has dropped lots of their most popular old categories - they realized that someone would perish trying to eat the most tons of coal or the biggest oak tree."

Eddie said, "I used to have a student who was so fast he could name all the countries in Africa before they changed. No one else has ever been able to do it."

"You were telling me about PT," I said.

"Yes. It was invented by Sherman in Minnesota at the same time Glasswear invented it in California. But Sherman has a six dimension graph and Glasswear had a three dimension graph. They once met at a convention on the same platform and actually came to blows over which graph best showed the child's progress. It was silly of them to fight because no one in the world except those two could understand what a dimension graph was anyway."

"Do you use PT with your students?"

Eddie rolled his eyes and laughed bitterly. "The school would never buy me enough of the specil magic markers or the little sponges the kids used to erase the work. And when I borrowed the special materials, someone in the back row always raised a hand and whined, 'I can't find my marker,' or 'So and so took my sponge'."

"Someone must be using PT," I suggested.

"That's not necessarily so. Left-handed students smudge or erase everything they've written, and kids with sticky hands can't get over the plastic fast enough. They can know the facts but flunk the speed. Students who do well are soon addicted to talcum powder and are later unable to function as productive adults in society."

"Why is that?" I asked.

"They become speed-freaks - everything they do is over in a minute."

"Save yourself the trouble of going to teachers' conventions next year," I said. "The only way they can improve PT is by giving each child a piece of chalk and a slate."

Newspapers are best for full information

Despite the big splash round-the-clock news is making on television, a student of the subject says most people get most of their news from a source they can hold, fold, clip, put aside, retrieve and retreat - the newspaper.

Lawrence Lichty, an analyst of the impact of television, says it is a myth - one widely accepted by TV personalities - that television has surpassed the newspaper as the chief source of news for most people.

Lichty, a professor of communications at the University of Maryland and co-author of American Broadcasting, drew his conculsions from an analysis of studies by the Simmons Market Research Bureau, which quizzed 15,000 people to learn how much exposure advertising gets in various mediums.

For years, an annual Roper Organization survey has fostered the notion that TV was North America's prime news source.

Last year, for example, 39 percent named TV and 22 percent said newspapers when asked the source of most of their news. Others cited radio, magazines and other people.

But, said Lichty, the more exhaustive Simmons studies show that while more than two-thirds of adults read at least a part of a newspaper every day, fewer than one-third adults watch any TV news.

Lichty said television these days plays the role played by "yellow journalism" in the early 1900s, offering news, "as entertainment, as spectacle, as distraction."

Lichty published his conclusions in the Wilson quarterly of the Smithsonian Institution's Woodrow Wilson International Centre for Scholars.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Uncontrolled profits have caused recession

Editor, The Star, Sir,

We are now into a new year, and I wish all a happy and less-robbed -by-price-fixing-by-government-and -their-partners, the multi-national-corporations year.

While we hear much from politicians and their economists of the end being just around the corner, I would not take much stock in such talk. I am not an economist, but am of the opinion that recessions are planned by the multi-nationals and put into motion by government. This brings to mind a report in the Co-Operative Consumer in the spring of 1975, quoting the chief executive officer of the Federated Co-Operative speaking to three federal MPs in Saskatoon. The MPs were ministers Richardson, Gillespie, and Whelan, and they must have been pleased, for after attacking labor for inflation, he said, (quote) "A recession from time to time may be a necessary evil in controlling the economy, government can and should control the supply of money even if it means a recession." (I don't think he dreamt that his solution to high prices was to wipe out the Surrey Co-op?)

When we think of the recession and a recovery, it would be well to go back to 1939. We spent ourselves out of that depression, on war material and then rebuilding countries that we destroyed by the war, but it is also possible to spend for peace and the future instead of destruction.

It is not the retired railroader getting a pension of $2000. per month or the retirement pension of a fireman of $1800. per month (which some would like us to believe), or wages paid to workers or prices paid to farmers that have caused the unemployment and bank foreclosures. It is the uncontrolled profits of the banks and multi-national corporations.

Let us go back to 1975 when Mr. Bergen said it may be necessary for government to bring on a recession. Safeway Ltd. for 36 weeks had a profit of $21,348,000. International Harvester Co. in its 24-week financial statement had squeezed $23,640,000. profit out of farmers, and what were profits like in gas and oil before Ottawa was forced by the Conservatives in Alberta to increase gas and oil prices? Jan. to Sept. 1974 profits of Canadian Gas and Oil Calgary were $10,573,000 after wages and all other expenses. Total Petroleum (North America) Ltd. Calgary increased profit by 137 percent in the first nine months of 1974. $27,592,000 for Falconbridge Copper for nine months. Brinco? It controls Abitibi Asbestos, actual profit for nine months was $92,750,000 and they got a tax credit of $436,000

These are only a few. But where have they taken the billions of dollars that has been exracted from Canada's resources and Canadian labor?

Don't be afraid of the future

Editor, The Star, Sir,

I don't know if there is a connection between the nuclear threat and unemployment, but it makes sense to assume that people living in fear are afraid to tackle the future.

This fear can lead to a very passive attitude, which in the end leads to total stagnation. An unemployed, after endless tries to get a job, just gives up all hope, or a fanatic believing the end has come, will sell all his goods and cut all ties with living.

We all need hope and faith in a future to carry on. But don't we have to remove the threat first before we can hope for a new beginning? If there is a bear terrifying a community the first thing to do is to get rid of the bear. So it is with the nuclear threat; it affects all our lives, our economy, and our future.

THROUGH UNITED WAY

Counselling available for the unemployed

LANGLEY - Becoming unemployed can be a bewildering experience, especially for someone who has not had the experience before. There are the overworked agencies to contact with their unfamiliar forms to complete. Job applications must be pursued in the knowledge that there are few jobs left to compete for. Family life becomes tense; bills go unpaid; and it is sometimes hard to know how to cope, or even where to start.

The United Way has secured funding from the federal and provincial governments to set up a network of support counsellors to assist unemployed persons throughout the lower mainland. The counsellor placed at Langley Family Services is Harry VanderMolen, who previously worked as a debt counsellor in Surrey.

VanderMolen is presently working on the details of his plans for a program of services to residents of this area. For general inquiries he expects to be available on a regular basis at shopping malls or offices in Langley, Fort Langley, and Aldergrove. Community members are also encouraged to contact him in person at Langley Family Services or by telephone at 534-7921.

REPORT FROM PARLIAMENT

Crown corporations are not entirely accountable

By BOB WENMAN, MP

Many constituents from Fraser Valley West have expressed to me their surprize and concern over the 1981-82 auditor general's report, an unbiased look into the action of our government.

This is an understandable reaction when one examines the report, which is a chronicle of this government's mismanagement and waste.

Many of the points raised by Mr. Dye are ones that I have spoken out on numerous times in the past. Regular readers of this column will know that crown corporations, corporate bail-outs, uncontrolled bureaucracy and sloppy money management by the federal government are issues I have often raised.

The auditor general found that crown corporations are simply not accountable to Parliament hence the people of Canada. There are at least 306 crown corporations, plus an unknown additional number no longer required to be on the list. Crown corporations now employ more people (263,225) than the government (239,000), excluding armed forces personnel.

Total revenues for crown corporations were $31.9 billion last year, while expenses were $33.6 billion. The difference of $1.7 billion, plus interest, comes out of the taxpayers pocket and the public is losing control over how that money is spent.

The auditor general has found that often new crown corporations are created without any parliamentary review of their mandate or financing (Does the name Canagrex ring a bell?). Dye found more merit in the 1979 Conservative crown corporation bill C-27 which provided "an effective framework for the control, direction, and accountability of crown-owned corporations" than in the present government's C-123, which "advances no provisions dealing with the audit of crown-owned corporations".

If it were not such bad news for Canadians, it would be gratifying to see ones convictions being documented and proven. Most crown corporations are unnecessary and inefficient. Financial assistance to crown corporations in 1981-82 amounted to $6.5 billion, or 9 percent of the government's budget.

A perfect example of how a crown corporation can get out of hand is Petro Canada. As originally approved by Parliament, its mandate emphasized energy exploration and development, yet its major undertaking to date has been to invest $1.7 billion in oil refining and marketing by purchasing Petrofina and approximately $650 million for British Petroleum, making if the fourth largest gasoline retailer in Canada.

Many have accused the Liberals of being "creeping socialists". The auditor general's report clearly shows that it is not creeping. I will continue an analysis of this report in the next two columns. Next week I will discuss corporate bail-outs and government contracting practices.

I am at present very busy coordinating and contacting speakers and officials for Survival and Recovery, our informal seminar to be held on January 31, at Cloverdale secondary school.

On hand will be as many different representatives from the private sector and all levels of government as possible. Persons participating will be from the many areas of society that are active in the planning and practice of survival and recovery during this difficult economic period.

In addition to receiving helpful information the citizens of Fraser Valley West will have an opportunity to offer their input and solutions to the economic difficulties facing Canada today.

Representatives will be available to talk about UIC, manpower, welfare and human resources, banking, mortgages, taxation, small business, legal aid, debt counselling and bankruptcy. All three levels of government will participate.

Information on government and private industry programs will be abailable. If you are encountering a problem in any one of these areas I urge you to attend. If you have any questions, ideas or concerns about any or all of these aspects of our current economic situation, you will want to participate. Plan to take part in this informative session.

If you would like more information, or would like to be involved in setting up this workshop, please contact my office at 530-1424.

Laura Belle Rossiter passes away at 90

ALDERGROVE - A well known local figure died in Langley Memorial hospital last week.

Laura Belle Rossiter, who was born in Pohocco, Nebraska on March 25, 1892, was a familiar sight when she walked back and forth to Aldergrove from her retirement home at 26657 Fraser Highway. Although she was 90 years of age, she continued her daily walks right up until shortly before her passing.

Prior to retirement she used to operate a mixed farm on 264 Street.

Friends of Rossiter say she always during her life showed generosity to others, taking unfortunates in and giving them a home and companionship. She was only five years of age when she first came to the Aldergrove area and came to live on her parents farm at Coghlan.

Out of town friends who came to pay their last respects to the deceased arrived from Lynden, Wash., Dole and Campbell River, B.C., and Red Deer, Alberta.

Memorial service was held Friday, Jan. 7 in the Aldergrove Kingdom hall of Jehovah's witnesses, with graveside service at the Murrayville cemetery. Gary Robinson officiated.

TOTEM TALES

Back into the books

By UTA GOTTSCHALK

ALDERGROVE - Well, the holidays are over, and it's time to hit the books again. Most of the students at Aldergrove secondary have recovered from the shock of getting back to school. Some are still stumbling around the halls in a daze, trying to figure out where their algebra textbooks disappeared to, or remember their locker combinations.

The new year will bring some changes to the school, as the new cafeteria is finally beginning to operate. The students who took the cafeteria course will at long last be able to do something besides take notes and have tests. Everyone is looking forward to seeing what they'll "cook up" for us.

Our spring break will come earlier this year, and will also be extended from one week to fifteen days, much to the delight of the students, (and teachers?), I'm sure!

But more holidays obviously mean less school time, and many students, especially the grads, will be pushed to the limit to complete their courses by June.

Hopefully in 1983 we'll all be able to settle down and get back to normal again. Our principal, Mr. Baker, has given us something to think about. He calls 1983, "The year of survival", and says..."It would seem that success this coming year will be measured in terms of making the best out of difficult times. To do this will require ingenuity and a strong, positive outlook. Even in adverse times, however, significant gains can be made by those who have will power. I would hope that in the forthcoming year we will avoid overdwelling on the insurmountable problems, and instead seek satisfaction from being able to survive and even to gain strength."

Keep the stub

VANCOUVER - The federal government has issued a warning about family allowance cheques to be mailed in January.

"Most January family allowance cheques will have a three-part stub attached," Les Barrington, a Health and Welfare Canada spokesman said last week. "This stub, called a TFA-1, is for income tax purposes. The number of children on the account in 1982 and the amount paid will be reported on this form."

Barrington said the stub must be submitted to Revenue Canada with the income tax return.

COWICHAN TAKES FIRST

Top teams compete at Aldergrove

This past weekend girls basketball team hosted the 3rd annual Aldergrove Invitational which saw some of the top girls teams in the province at Aldergrove Secondary School.

The tournament opened with the No.1 ranked Single "A" team in the province - Vanderhoof, pitted against highly ranked Double "AA" school Abbotsford. This game also featured 2 of the top girls in the province - Sue Ewanick of Vanderhoof and Erin Carson of Abbotsford. The game was a see-saw affair with Vanderhoof building up a lead only to see the Abbotsford girls close the gap in the latter stages to a 5 point loss for the Abbotsford girls. Sue Ewanick scored 28 points while Erin Carson hit for 15.

The second game saw Cowichan and Mountain play a tough, grinding 1st half but Cowichan's height eventually wore down the Mountain girls. Cowichan won by a 58 - 34 score with 6'3" Carol Bot hitting for 17 points. Mountain was led by Loretta Isaak with 7 points.

Aldergrove played Port Moody in the 3rd game of the day. The Aldergrove girls played a strong game against the highly rated Port Moody team but fell short in a 55-52 loss. This was only the 2nd defeat of the season for the girls who are now 18 - 2 on the season. The game was one of the most exciting of the day with the home crowd solidly behind the young Aldergrove team throughout this see-saw affair. Leading the way for the Port Moody team was No.13 Leslie Buhr with 15. Allison Wells led Aldergrove with a game high 24 points.

Game 4 saw Centennial go up against North Delta, two highly ranked "AA" teams. The Centennial squad led by Brenda Giesbrecht with 30 points was too much for the North Delta girls and fell 61 - 47. North Delta was led by Jolene Harwood with 21 points.

On the consolation side later in the day Abbotsford beat Mountain 73 - 36 with Erin Carson hitting for 18 and Nancy Innes with 15 for Abbotsford. Leading Mountain was Caralyne Goose with 13 points.

Aldergrove was pitted against North Delta and came away 64 - 52 winners with Allison Wells netting 26 points for Aldergrove and Jolene Harwood with 17 points for North Delta.

Top scorer for Aldergrove, Allison Wells sinks another basket during the hotly contested game between our local girls and Abbotsford. The rivalry between the two squads was obvious as the emotions flared and the game became quite physical. Fouls dominated much of the play and the closeness of the game kept local fans on the edge of their seats to the last second of play. Final score was 38 Aldergrove, 36 Abbotsford. R. McIlwain photo

Saturday morning brought some exciting basketball with Vanderhoof taking on the highly regarded Cowichan side. Vanderhoof made a game for a while but the size of the Cowichan team eventually won out 60 - 48. Carol Bot led Cowichan with 19 as did Ewanick with 19 for Vanderhoof.

Port Moody overcame a game Centennial by a score of 65 - 60 with Sandy Brown leading Port Moody with 14 and Karen Minato with 20 for Centennial.

In the battle for 4th place Aldergrove defeated Abbotsford in a hard fought game 38 - 36. The Aldergrove - Abbotsford games are developing into somewhat of a rivalry as the games are action packed and filled with emotion. These 2 teams will go at it again on Thursday Jan. 27 at 7:30 in Abbotsford.

Leading the way for Aldergrove was Allison Wells with 16 points and Erin Carson hitting for 15 for Abbotsford.

In the battle for 3rd place Vanderhoof defeated Centennial 64.57. Sue Ewanick hit for 31 points for Vanderhoof while Karen Minato hit for 23 points.

The final proved to be a classic basketball game. The game was fast, close throughout and highly entertaining for a packed Aldergrove crowd. Both teams played their hearts out with both benches playing up to the calibre of a championship game. The final outcome resulted in a 63 - 61 win for Cowichan. Leading Cowichan was Irina Saledeek, Carol Bot, and Val Larsen with 16 each and Sandy Brown had 16 for Port Moody.

Quality tournament, quality people

By PAT LEE

In any successful basketball tournament the result of its success is due to the support of the "behind the scenes" people.

This past weekend saw the 3rd annual Aldergrove Invitational basketball tournament underway with the top girls basketball teams in the province in attendance. The tournament attracted media coverage from the Aldergrove Star, Langley Advance, Abbotsford News, The Province, Columbian, Vancouver Sun and Ron Manz of B.C.T.V.

The success of this tournament was, of course, due to the great efforts of the teams present but was also a reflection of those people behind the scene that made it the success it was.

All great tournaments have to have a dedicated tournament director which Aldergrove had in Lawrence Fraser. He kept the tournament running smoothly, handled problems, talked with the media and was in charge of the all star selection.

The program was put together by 2 hardworking young ladies at Aldergrove secondary in Tracy Dixon and Pam Pike. They spent hours working on the program and did a great job in putting it together.

The scorers and timers did a good job throughout the days and should be given special praise for their efforts. A special thanks to Andrew Hanon, Tim Bridge, John Okayaki, Mike Renny, Kelly Willis, Steve Hasegawa, Doug Soderholm, Ron Hunt, Jason Mortimer and Tracy Dixon.

The cleanup after the final game was handled by Andrew Hanon and John Okayaki without whose help would have resulted in a messy Monday morning for students.

The teachers and students at Aldergrove deserve special merit because of the disruption during class time on Friday and their support was much appreciated by both players and coach.

In closing, the coach and players of the Aldergrove Girl Totems would like to thank all those who contributed and supported the girls throughout the tournament.

Field naturalists count 112 species

ALDERGROVE - A total of 112 species of birds were found on the National Audubon Society's 83rd annual international Christmas bird count held on January 2.

This was four species less that the count in January of 1982. Birds vary from year to year and inland birds like pinesiskins, evening grosbeaks, towhees and stellars jay were very scarce this year, and, many of the shorebirds were not around either, on the day of the count.

A 15 mile radius starting at Crescent Beach, north to Fort Langley and east to 232 Street, then south to Zero Avenue including a small area just south of the U.S. border at Blaine. The circle is divided up into eight sections and the total mileage covered by car and by foot is also recorded. Members of the Langley Field Naturalists has helped the White Rock-Surrey naturalists on this count.

Some of the highlights after combing the country, wooded valleys, spreading fields and hardhack thickets include: section A, with 47 species, this area had yellow rumped warblers, European widgeon, tree sparrows and great numbers of Canada and snow geese. Sec. B, 73 species with large numbers of dunlins, 623 western sandpipers, only one western meadowlark, very few woodpeckers and no canvasback ducks. Section C, 71 species, but, very low numbers of waterbirds, especially the grebes. There were eight annas hummingbirds found here and a part albino fox sparrow. Sec. D, 29 species, very cold and rainy and most birds found were around farm buildings. Setion E, large flocks of killdeer, dunlins, crows, American widgeon, a few pileated woodpeckers. Section F, 32 species, large flock of American widgeons, short eared owls, were the highlight. Section G, 23 species in the Milner and Langley airport area, large numbers of Canada geese and twelve red tailed hawks. Section H, 42 species from Murrayville to 32 Avenue with 31 evening grosbeaks, the only high number of these birds, where other years they were quite numerous. Ring necked pheasants, brown creepers, bald eagle and immature shrike were seen, but, the lone swan that occupied the Langley sewage pond for the past two weeks, was not there on the day of the count.

Section I, 48 species, nineteen brown creepers, two saw whet owls, one screech owl, two shrikes, very low in finches, two hermit thrush among some of the varied thrush were found by Glen Ryder. Glen was given credit for the hermit thrush as being the most unusual bird of the day.

Section J, large flocks of pintails, 635 American widgeon, red throated loons and an osprey were counted just south of the U.S. border.

Birds of Langley books are still available for $5 each, call 888-3669 or 534-3886.

Next meeting on January 21 will be the first gathering of the new year. Time, 7:30 at the Langley arts centre.

Red Cross swim lessons

MURRAYVILLE - National Red Cross learn-to-swim program enters its 21st year in Langley township, with the last seven levels being offered in both indoor as well as outdoor pools. The eight level system was initiated over one year ago, and has proved very successful. In 1982, the township offered the Red Cross program to 2,539 people at both indoor and outdoor pools.

The first week of registration was heavy but registration will be taken up until January 14 for classes starting the week of January 17 for 10 weeks. Aquatics staff will be at the township hall from 10 - 12 and 1. - 3 on Thursday, January 13 to process registrations. Mail-ins will be accepted anytime Monday to Friday 8:30 - 4:30 but will be processed on January 13.

Classes from babies to adults, and from fitness to synchronized swimming are available. For more information, call the parks and recreation department at 534-3211, extension 247.

THANK YOU

A special thank you to the Aldergrove Fire Department for a job well done. They installed and removed the Christmas lights in Aldergrove, on their own time. That's community spirit for you. Thanks again, Chief Ferguson and all department members.

Crude-and-rude murders help make soaps popular

By Connie Passalacqua

If love is the No. 1 subject of daytime drama, surely murder is an extremely popular subtopic. The last two months have seen three major murders on soaps.

The victims have included "As the World Turns'" longtime villain John Dixon (Larry Bryggman); "Edge of Night's" psychotic Nora Fulton (Catherine Bruno) and "General Hospital's" alcoholic Susan Moore (Gail Rae Carlson). Yet another murder — that of an "All My Children" villain, is in the offing before the end of the month.

What has created this spree?

Nothing keeps a viewer glued to the screen of his favorite continuing drama more than suspense. If the writers play it right, the search for the identity of the real criminal can be stretched into months of riveting drama and be the highlight of a soap's year.

Unfortunately, soap murder investigations are usually so drawn out that by the time the culprit is revealed the audience couldn't care less who did it.

How can you tell when a murder is impending on your favorite soap? Prior to such an act the writers will usually "stack the deck" against the potential victim. Just about everyone in town will be given a reason to hate him or her — a good motive for murder. That way there are lots of suspects — and many months of drama and accusations.

Undoubtedly the soap that does murder best is "Edge of Night," which also specializes in suspense. Noted mystery writer Henry Slesar, the headwriter of the show since 1956, is the acknowledged master of this soap genre. His murders are intricately planned and expertly played out.

Paul Michael Glaser (formerly of "Starsky and Hutch") teams with Dee Wallace of "E.T." fame in WAIT TILL YOUR MOTHER GETS HOME. Glaser portrays a high school football coach who learns to appreciate his wife (Miss Wallace) and housework even more after spending a summer vacation as a househusband. The first-run production airs on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" on Jan. 17.

HOOPER

Burt Reynolds stars as a daring Hollywood stuntman in the action-adventure film, "Hooper," to be rebroadcast as a special movie presentation, SATURDAY, JAN. 15 on CBS.

This Week in Canada

On January 15, in 1878, the Conservative convention at Toronto adopted the "national policy", and in 1962, the RCMP musical ride was placed on a permanent basis.

Everyone's favorite pooch, Snoopy, joins the circus after meeting a friendly poodle on the animated special LIFE IS A CIRCUS, CHARLIE BROWN. The half-hour show airs Monday, Jan. 17 on CBS.

Paperbacks

Following The Hitch-Hiker's Guide to the Galaxy and The Restaurant at the End of the Universe is Life, the Universe and Everything, number three in Douglas Adams' warped series, all of which feature a very peculiar, very British, modern sort of humor. Time and space can be conquered by a Paisley Chesterfield sofa that wafts over a field in prehistoric Islington (Pan, $3.50).

A woman wakes up in hospital, her memory gone, and with a naive new view of things — she is fascinated by clouds, the "fat, white creatures" that live in skyscraper canyons. Author Martin Amis has a disturbing, blackly comedic style that makes it sometimes uncomfortable to read Other People, but his skill with altered perceptions is admirable. The woman who calls herself Mary Lamb is lost in the worst parts of London, falls in with all the wrong people, and is tormented by disturbing dreams and slow revelations about the awful things she might have done before, when she was somebody else (Penguin, $3.95).

If you buy the farm, you're dead. Someone who has the ork-orks is suffering from delirium tremens. And dancing the matrimonial polka is self-explanatory. There are over 13,000 entries in Slang And Euphemism, a dictionary of curses, insults, sexual metaphor and drug slang, by Richard A. Spears. If you want to insult your favorite oaf, there are several hundred synonyms you can use (Signet, $4.50).

Kathy Vey

"A lot of people tell me: 'We just have a small racial problem in Canada.' I think the acid test to the problem here in Canada will be if every white person would go to bed and imagine waking up tomorrow morning black. I think then they would be aware of problems."
— Activist Dick Gregory, 1965

STILL BREAKING NEW TERRITORY

Valdy treks the globe

Valdy, a contemporary Canadian folk performer is commonly referred to as one of the best loved and hardest working pop music artists in Canada today.

With 9 albums released (4 of which are certified gold) 2 Juno awards (the Canadian equivalent to the covetted Grammy), and a host of musical accolades, Valdy was recently referred to in the Canadian magazine Macleans as "...the most underrated singer-songwriter in the country" by editor Peter Newman. Any apparent lack of recognition has not affected Valdy's attitude, as he continues his gruelling schedule, filling halls and theatres from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, and to European audiences.

Preceded by the release of his music in England, the U.S.A., Holland and Australia, Valdy is currently touring the continent in conjunction with CP Air, playing in Austria, Switzerland, Germany, Denmark and Sweden. He returns in January and February to Holland, Belgium, Germany and Austria, and then again in June to Italy and Greece.

His music is moving, personal, and far more varied in style than most artists. Recently, he has completed and released "Valdy's Kid's Record", distributed by A & M Records, adding yet another dimension to his long list of credits.

His television and film exposure includes an acclaimed stereo "simulcast" super-special for Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, a musical documentary for the BBC in Britain, a musical narrative from the 1981 international Boy Scouts Jamboree, two film scores, songs placed in Peckinpah's film "The Getaway", and innummerable variety and talk show appearances.

Breaking new territory in the music industry is a slow and arduous task, but given the strengths of this man's abilities and reputation, Valdy is a name the international music world will be aware of in ever increasing proportion.

Valdy will perform at the Maple Ridge Council Chambers on Friday, Jan. 28 at 8 p.m. Advance tickets are $10. and reservations and further information are available by calling 467-9089 or 463-5128

VAMPING THE COACH

We whisk you now to a hockey arena in southern Ontario, where two midget-age kids' teams are playing.

Alas, it is also the night of one team's coach's birthday. Guess what the kids are giving the coach?

The little dickens have ordered him a strip-o-gram.

About mid-game, the hit-and-strip lady skips down to the bench and — as the fans and kids go wild — whips off her pads and equipment.

The badly frightened referee blows his whistle to halt the proceedings just as the stripper gets down to her G-string.

My, how the little midgets jumped up and down.

We doubt the red-faced coach will ever forget it.

Remember this sage advice: Never trust little people. They bite your knees.

A musical evening premieres Arts Club Revue Theatre

The Arts Club Theatre is proud to announce the grand opening of the Arts Club Revue Theatre, the first permanent facility of its kind in Canada. Two hundred patrons can relax in the intimate, "cabaret-like" setting with tables and chairs on several different levels and watch exciting musical entertainment featuring the finest of Vancouver's musical talent.

Shows like Jacques Brel ..., Side By Side By Sondheim, El Grande De Coca Cola, Mabel Leaves Forever and Tom Foolery give a taste of what's to come at the Revue Theatre. Bill Millerd, Artistic and Managing Director of the Arts Club Theatre, looks forward to the new space being "a wonderful incentive for the writing and performing of new work. Finally our dream of a home for our musical performs has come true!" And what better way to kick it all off than with Ruth Nichol and Leon Bibb, performing a medley of your favourite songs.

Ruth Nichol is well known to Vancouver audiences for her roles in Same Time Next Year, Chapter Two, Pippin and last summer's smash hit, They're Playing Our Song. Children and adults alike will be familiar with Leon Bibb, whose concert and Christmas galas have delighted thousands. Ruth and Leon first performed together in the Arts Club's highly successful production of Jacques Brel ..., and again in the hit revue Side By Side By Sondheim. This grand opening marks the third time that they have shared the Arts Club stage, and promises to be just as memorable.

Come listen to Vancouver's favourite musical performers at a series of special gala evenings January 27, 28 and 29. Ticket holders will be treated to a buffet and refreshments as well as taking their place in Vancouver theatre history. Tickets are available only through Michael Shuster at the Arts Club administration office, 687-5315, Monday to Friday 9:30 to 5:00 at a cost of $25 for the Thursday and Friday nights, and $50 for the grand opening Saturday. All but $10 of each ticket is tax deductible, too.

Can't make the gala? Have no fear, for Ruth and Leon continue their shows Tuesday to Thursday at 8:30 p.m., with two shows on Fridays and Saturdays at 6:30 and 9:30.

Skywalk return to Soft Rock

One of Vancouver's finest jazz aggregations, Skywalk return to the Soft Rock Cafe this Sunday evening by popular demand. Their inimitable blend of melody and rhythm won "best jazz act" award at the 1982 West Coast Music Awards, and has won praise from tasteful critics such as Marke Andrews (Vancouver Sun) and Noz Parker (The Star).

Skywalk consists of Tom Keenlyside (horns), Graeme Coleman (keyboards), Rene Worst (bass), Kat Hendrikse (drums), Harris Van Berkel (guitar) and Jim McGillveray (percussion) - all stars on their own.

The shows begins 8 p.m., Jan. 16 at Soft Rock Cafe, 1925 W. 4 Ave. Tickets are available in advance, also at Black Swan Records, and at the door. All ages are welcome as the Soft Rock is not licensed for alcohol sales.

For reservations call 734-2822.

Kid's clown at campus

Hobby Hill Pre-School and the Fraser Valley College Theatre Department are combining their efforts to bring to Chilliwack the popular children's clown Gumboot Lollipop.

Gumboot Lollipop has developed a faithful following in the 10-and-under crowd throughout the province, wooing the kids with her gawky little-girlish charm, and mischievious capers. This red cheeked, brightly colored clown always seems to find herself in difficulties. Her problems are humorous versions of the kinds of situations young people face in real life. With the enthusiastic support of her audience, Gumboot Lollipop successfully overcomes these dilemmas and through active participation children realize they too can solve their own problems.

Gumboot Lollipop has entertained at Vancouver's "International Festival for Young People" for the past three seasons, and more than one hundred schools throughout the province have been visited by Gumboot's touring show. She has appeared at the Vancouver East Cultural Centre, C.P. Air's Family Day, Eaton's "International Year of the Child Celebrations" and on CBC-TV. Her month-long, one-woman clown show at Vancouver's Waterfront Theatre on Granville Island was sold out. Tourism B.C. has adopted Gumboot as their magazine cover girl and official clown.

Gumboot Lollipop will perform in Chilliwack on Saturday, January 15, in the Fraser Valley College Studio Theatre. She will do two performances of her show Gumboot - The Ballerina which is geared for pre-school children. Performance times are 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Tickets are $2 for children and $3 for adults and can be obtained from Fraser Valley College in Chilliwack and Abbotsford, and from The Bookseller in Chilliwack.

GARDENING IN THE VALLEY

Gardening books are fine, but they can't be perfect

By DON ANSON

Don't believe that anything you read in a gardening book must necessarily apply to you. Many of you will have received books on gardening this Christmas. I certainly did. Find out where they were printed. Maybe you got one of the "Sunset" books. I have most of them and find them very interesting with all kinds of good ideas. But for heavens sake don't follow their instructions to the letter as these books are published for gardeners in California and southern states.

Even those few books that are published in British Columbia must cover a multitude of miniclimatic conditions. There are no books that are written especially for your garden. You have to find out for yourself how many variations of soil you have and how micro-climatic conditions vary from one part of your garden to another.

One can easily become very disappointed in a book. Let me digress a bit. When I was a small boy, I was keenly interested in moths and butterflies. We had no radio or television in those days and had to find our own amusements. Consequently we collected things such as stamps, sea shells, birds eggs, moths or cigarette cards. I had quite a large collection of moths and butterflies and one day, in a secondhand shop, I saw a book entitled "Hints for young Mothers." Needless to say, there was nothing for the young lepidoptrist in this book but plenty about diaper changing.

What you need to know from gardening books is an understanding of the soil and the basic needs of individual plants. The rest you should learn from practical experimenting. Our horticultural scientists are making it easier for us. They are producing hybrid plants that will grow under adverse conditions.

We no longer have to go along with a hit-or-miss conception of gardening. We can grow tomatoes or melons that have been especially bred to grow in the area in which you live. If you have found that the tomatoes you have been growing never seem to do well, why not try for something entirely different? Try something that has been hybridized to grow in colder climates, such as "Sub Arctic" varieties. You may not be able to get seed locally but all the seed catalogues will have them. You can buy seeds for watermelons, cantaloupes or aubergines that will grow quite well in your garden.

All the seed catalogues now list seeds for areas, seeds for pest resistance and seeds for plants that are disease resistant.

Unfortunately our heavy rainfall in British Columbia attracts quite a large number of pests that they don't have elsewhere. California is not much troubled with slugs. They just get different pests. Their gardening books are full of how to get rid of them but do not dwell on our problems such as mildews and moles.

California can grow exotic plants with ease. Why should we grow exotic plants that need special care when there are dozens and dozens of plants that we can grow that almost look after themselves? There are so many things we can do that will make our gardening chores so much easier. Why grow tall plants in a windy area when nearly every variety of plant can now be purchased in a dwarf form? Why don't we borrow some of the many good ideas in the "Sunset" books about low maintenance gardening? Sunken gardens for dry areas and raised beds for wet areas or those gardens that have poor drainage or too much clay.

Many people are now gardening for one reason only - to grow vegetables. This sometimes leads to further gardening interests but to many, if you can't eat it, why grow it?

To me, vegetable growing is a very secondary interest. If I had to do this only, I believe it could become a drudge. Book knowledge is all very well, but how much better to have an inquiring mind and find out for yourself what makes plants tick. Darwin didn't know, he had to find out for himself. It is this that makes true gardening such a fascinating hobby.

Don't forget to keep those wood ashes from bonfires and wood stoves dry. You can use them now to good advantage on the following. Spread them around the base of black currant bushes, gooseberries and fruit trees. Liberally spread the sifted ashes on ground where you intend to grow onions. Spread the dry ashes wherever you have planted bulbs and anything you have left over you can sprinkle all over your lawn.

Plants lift out of the ground very easily after frosts so when the ground softens you should make sure they are back in place by firming the ground again. Do this gently otherwise you will compact the soil too much and cause lack of sufficient aeration.

There is not much to do in the vegtable garden except to add all the humus you can. Every time you turn the soil over, you are exposing many pests. These will either be eaten by the birds or killed by the cold. Keep any liming until spring. Our heavy rains will leach away any dressings of lime or fertilizer given now.

The author will endeavor to answer any questions on the subject of outdoor gardening. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: "Gardens", care of The Star, Box 220, Aldergrove, VOX 1A0. All letters will be answered personally, but some may be answered in this column.

Alderhaven council elect officers

By IRENE ORWICK

ALDERGROVE - First meeting of the new year was held in the lounge in Alderhaven on January 3. Business was to elect a treasurer as Cathie resigned. Don Perry was elected to that position. Residents decided to hold their first pot-luck dinner on Wednesday January 26.

Would like to thank the lady who brought us the lovely poinsettia plants at Christmas time. There were four birthdays, Audrey Perry, Elizabeth Norda, Hans Egli and Joe Martin.

On January 10, we planned a surprise party for Cathie Richardson and Minnie Franklin. But we got the surprise. Eric Turnquist, Helen Bend and Cathy Parton came in from Whalley and entertained us for two hours of music, and a contest naming the tunes as they played them. Winners then had to sing the songs.

A delicious cake and ice cream was served, and a presentation was made of albums to the two ladies, with pictures of people who lived here while they were tenants. Each also received a suitable card and corsage. Thus ended a very jolly time...but we will miss these two who did so much for us. Hope they will enjoy their new homes.

Sasquatch sighted

SEATTLE - Footprints taken after the reported sighting of a sasquatch - a hairy creature that supposedly roams furtively through northwest forests - appear to be authentic, says a Washington State University anthropologist.

Grover Krantz, an associate professor of anthropology, said he had examined footprint casts taken after forest service patrolman Paul Freeman reported seeing a two or three-metre-tall hairy creature in the Tiger Creek area northeast of Walla Walla, Wash., last June.

Krantz said he believes the footprints are from a "bigfoot" - as the sasquatch is also known - but declined to reveal how he reached that conclusion.

The professor at WSU, located in Pullman, Wash., said he planned to discuss details of his findings at a meeting of the International Society of Cryptozoology in Vancouver.

Cryptozoology is the study of hidden animals, and Krantz is a member of the society's board of directors.

Freeman said he feels vindicated by Krantz' findings.

"He's an anthropologist, he ought to know," said Freeman, who now works as a meatcutter in Camas, Wash.

Freeman said he quit his forest service job soon after the bigfoot sighting because of the flak he was taking over the incident.

He said his superiors tried to discredit his report.

But Freeman said he since has made casts of other prints.

Newspapers will change, but they're here to stay

Despite declining newspaper readership and the proliferation of new information and entertainment delivery systems, newspapers are here to stay in the opinion of Sydney Gruson, vice chairman of the New York Times who recently delivered the keynote address to a group of newspaper controllers holding their annual meeting in the Detroit area.

Stated Gruson, "Let me put things in historical perspective. No media ever goes away. Newspapers did not kill books. Movies did not kill radio. Television did not destroy magazines. We have good reason to believe that newspapers will survive the new technology as well."

In fact, Gruson continued, newspapers will profit from the new technologies: (1) Publishers will make their newspapers more immediate and attractive (b) Newspapers will be able to perform certain tasks that no other medium can now achieve (c) New technology has already helped newspapers improve their quality in better reproduction and dramatically improved the attractiveness of the newspaper (d) Color processes continue to improve (e) Satellite distribution of newspapers keeps them immediate and up-to-date.

"Video and teletext do have certain limitations, of course, which I believe will prevent them from replacing the newspapers. The medium requires readers to change information habits in dramatic ways. Electronic media does not allow for browsing and it would take 1,200 screensful of electronic material to equal a single page of classified advertising, Gruson said.

Summarizing some of Gruson's remarks: (1) E.F. Hutton tells investors that readers pay for access to news, information, advertising and entertainment arranged in a convenient, predictable, cheap package -- the newspaper (2) Newspapers carry 30 million bits of storable information; weigh less than three pounds; provides hard copy; handles both text and graphics; allows random access; is completely portable and costs less than 30 cents a connect-hour (3) Newspapers can provide not only the "what" in the news stories, but also the "why" which is becoming increasingly important (4) Newspapers can provide expertise from the editor in the news judgment of the content (5) Newspaper readers are highly educated with 79 percent of daily newspaper readers having college, or advance, degrees and earning more than $35,000 per year (7) The financial independence is a key element which contributes to editorial independence making it a unique product (8) No single segment of our society -- no individual, no corporation, no government agency -- controls the newspaper business. Only the readers are in control.

ALDERGROVE OAPO NEWS

Winery bus trip planned

By ERNEST CLUETT

ALDERGROVE - The general meeting for January, despite pouring rain had exactly 100 members in attendance. This number of members turning out surprised everyone, as the downpour of rain was continuous all afternoon. The dinner tickets given by Chessmen's restaurant were won by Don Eve and Al Rankin.

There will be a bus trip to Ste. Michelle Winery to sample the products on Thursday, January 20, leaving the hall at 10:30 a.m., with a lunch break in White Rock. Fare is $4.

New members joining at the January meeting were H. Reimer and B. Reimer, Betty Bustin, Helen Tompkins and Helen Fraser all of "Upper Crust Manor", also Marie Volk.

Bill Allen is in the Columbian hospital in New Westminster. He is having problems with his pacemaker.

Edith Prozesky has to have a cartilage removed from her knee. Edith Grey has to go to hospital, lung cancer is suspected. Hilda Goodison, who fell and broke a vertebra in her back is convalescing at home. We all wish these members a speedy recovery and return to health.

The pot luck supper scheduled for January 20 has had to be postponed to February 3, the day prior to the February meeting. Please pass the word around. The slide show will be by Bill Plishka and will be of Egypt, Jordan and Israel.

My prediction regarding the Ontario Chrysler workers would seem to be coming true. Despite a large pay increase secured by the union, 500 employees are loosing their jobs in the spring plant of Chrysler in Windsor, Ontario. The large car plant in Windsor is to close with the loss of 2,600 jobs and the diesel plant has been cancelled, loosing 1,100 jobs. If the diesel plant is ever built it will be built in the U.S. Quite a union victory!

A letter was read at the meeting written by Pat Prozesky on behalf of the choral group, thanking branch 71 for the dinner at Chessmen's restaurant. This group does a tremendous service to the hospital shut-ins with their choral offerings and the band that travels with them by their lively music. Muriel and I attended the Lions housing wine and cheese party in their recreation center. The hall was packed and additional chairs had to be brought in from time to time. Pat Brady was in charge of the entertainment, which featured a quartet under Gordy Keith called the Dreamers. Their performance was much enjoyed by all present. Lillian Davidson led the community singing on the piano and Jack Dospital played several selections on electric guitar.

At the OAPO hall a large crowd enjoyed an evening of dancing. Door prize went to Carmen Malcolm and the spot prizes to Mary Sergent and Mae Lafonds. Visitors were Ann Brehula and Ruby Cronk of Aldergrove.

A large number of people attended the open house in the hall on Sunday, Jan. 9 honoring Carl and Lillian Jeffrey on their 60th wedding anniversary. Congratulations were received from the Queen, as well as the queen's federal and provincial representatives. The federal heads of government, the opposition and the provincial 'big wigs'. The choral group sang selections and a souvenir copy of the "Bells of St. Mary's" was presented to the happy couple.

Was there really a King Arthur?

There may really have been a King Arthur behind the legend of the knights of the Round Table, seekers of the Holy Grail and symbols of chivalry for more than a thousand years.

Documents discovered by a U.S. historian are said to support the theory that Arthur was more man than myth.

He is mentioned in three early French chronicles "that nobody noticed before," said Geoffrey Ashe, a British writer, lecturer and specialist on the Arthurian legend.

"The research by Prof. Barbara Moorman of the University of Southern Mississippi confirms my long-held feeling that Arthur was more than a legend," Ashe said.

HOME IMPROVEMENT

Add insulation throughout home to save on heating, cooling costs

Adding insulation to walls, ceiling and floors is bound to save money on the cost of heating and cooling your home, says the Mineral Insulation Manufacturers Association. Savings vary. Find out why in the seller's fact sheet on R-values. Higher R-values mean greater insulating power. Fact sheets are available from building material dealers and insulation contractors.

Kero-Suns are 99.9% efficient

Forget what you've heard about kerosene heaters in the past. Kero-Sun introduces a whole new age of advanced heating technology.

The key is fuel efficiency. Kero-Sun heaters are 99.9% efficient. They're smokeless and odorless in operation. They don't need a flue or chimney; so you can pick them up and take them almost anywhere. They give you warmth only when and where you need it. They cost you only pennies per hour to operate -- and they're easy to use. They've met the highest international safety standards -- and have been safety-tested and listed by Underwriters' Laboratories of Canada.

With heating costs so high, it's startling to realize that Kero-Sun heaters cost only pennies per hour to operate.

That's true whether you use Kero-Sun heaters as your main source of heat -- as in a vacation cottage. Or, as a supplement to your primary heating system -- to heat an add-on room, or for use where you work -- in an office, factory or store.

Another way to save is in the autumn or spring. You don't need to start up your central heating system, so just start up your Kero-Sun to take the chill off.

One of the most distinctive Kero-Sun features is the automatic safety shut-off system, which features a positive action. If the heater is ever jarred or tilted, the extinguisher snaps shut over the wick, literally cutting off combustion.

Other built-in safety factors include: Push-button automatic lighting that eliminates need for matches; fuel is wick-fed, unpressurized, so if combustion stops, fuel does not continue to feed; low center of gravity makes Kero-Sun heaters resistant to tilting or tipping over accidentally.

A safety checklist for woodstove purchase, installation, operation

What should you look for when selecting a woodstove?

- Make sure the heating capacity of the stove is not too great for the size of room it will be heating.
- Inspect the stove carefully for broken parts or cracks. Two important places to check are the firebox area and the flue outlet collar.
- Make sure the manufacturer's installation and operating instructions are included with the stove.
- Look on the stove for the UL listing mark. This indicates the stove complies with nationally recognized safety standards.

Survey installation

How can you make sure the woodstove's installation is correct?

- Follow manufacturer's installation and operating instructions.
- Place the stove on a non-combustible floor or place the stove on an approved floor protection material consisting of the dimensions and material specified by the manufacturer's instructions.
- Check with your local fire department; they may be able to provide information about installation.
- Have the local building inspector approve the installation.

Installing stovepipe

What are the special factors to be considered in selecting and installing the stovepipe?

- Do not pass the stovepipe through a wall, ceiling, floor closet, or concealed space, and do not allow the stovepipe to enter the chimney in the attic.
- Use a 22 or 24 gauge stovepipe to connect the stove to the chimney.
- The diameter of the stovepipe should not decrease between the stove and the chimney flue.
- The total length of the stovepipe should be as short as possible.
- Make sure that the space between the top of a horizontal stovepipe and the ceiling or other combustible material is at least 18 in. unless specified otherwise in the manufacturer's instructions.
- Slope the stovepipe upward toward the chimney (at least ¼ in. rise per linear foot) so that it enters the chimney at a point higher than the flue outlet of the stove.
- The stovepipe should not project into the masonry chimney beyond the chimney flue linings.

Check chimney

How can you make sure the chimney installation is correct?

- Do not connect the woodstove to the same chimney flue that is used to vent another appliance.
- Use a masonry chimney constructed in accordance with the local building code or use a Listed Residential Type and Building Heating Appliance chimney having the label of a nationally recognized testing laboratory.
- Make sure the chimney is in good repair, and the flue lining is clean and not blocked.

Operating pointers

What can you do to make sure the woodstove is being operated properly?

- Check stovepipe and chimneys frequently and remove any buildup of creosote, the result of unburned gases condensing on these surfaces. Creosote looks like a layer of sticky, black gum.
- Creosote buildup is accelerated by smoldering fires in the stove. Regularly maintaining a hot flaming fire will assist in creosote burnoff.
- Never use flammable liquids, such as gasoline, to start the fire.
- Don't store flammable fuels, including wood, near the stove.
- Keep solid wooden furniture more than three feet from the stove; and upholstered furniture should be kept at much greater distances.
- Keep the damper open while the fuel is burning.
- Make sure all ashes are thoroughly cooled before you throw them away.
- Use a metal container with a tight-fitting lid for ash disposal.
- During operation, the stove surfaces are hot; keep children away from the stove.
