WILLEMS AND SETO KILLINGS

Man charged with murder

CLEARBROOK - Last Friday morning, a 21-year-old Matsqui man appeared in provincial court here and was arraigned charged with two counts of homicide.

Wesley Garth Evans stands accused of the murders of Lavonne Cheryl Willems and Beverly Maryanne Seto.

Willems, 27, a municipal employee, was murdered while alone in a friend's house on Sunday, November 25 last year. She was stabbed to death.

Seto, 37, was murdered on Sunday, March 21. She also had been stabbed to death.

The slayings had occurred within a one-mile radius, and police investigators were convinced of a link between the two crimes.

Both women were alone when they met with their killer. Willems was house sitting for a friend, and Seto, a real estate agent, met her death as she was waiting to show an unknown customer an open house.

Substantial rewards were posted shortly after the Seto killing, and police investigators at the time admitted that they were stumped. All they could say was that the two murders were sex related and similar in the way they had been carried out.

Investigation involved up to 16 detectives working full time on the Willems-Seto murders.

"It was the most extensive and costly manhunt in the history of the Matsqui police," says chief constable J.T.A. Steward. "During the course of investigation, Matsqui police received hundreds of tips that were checked out by investigators. Most of the original suspects in these homicides were eliminated, and the arrest of the suspect was made from the small number of suspects which remained."

Stewart said public assistance received during the past four months had been invaluable in helping the investigators.

Medalist returns

ALDERGROVE - Fifteen year old Randy Lamb took home seven medals from the swim competitions at the B.C. Summer Games in Nanaimo last weekend. Lamb won two silver and five bronze medals.

Lamb is a resident of north Otter and attends Jericho Hill School for the Deaf where he is coached by Doug McCarthy.

Young gunmen arrested

LANGLEY - Four men have been arrested by RCMP in connection with an armed robbery last week.

A pizza delivery boy working for Langley's Mother's Pizza was held up at gunpoint at about 1:15 a.m., Friday, outside at 22159 - 52 Ave. Two men wearing masks, armed with a .22 calibre rifle forced him to turn over $38 and the food he was delivering.

RCMP arrested and charged four men on Saturday. They are Darren Newton, 18, of 22159 - 52 Ave., William Shaw, 18, of 20542 - 93A Ave., Larry Block, 20, of 20875 - 96 Ave. and Marcel Clairoux, 18, of 20423 Telegraph Trail. They appeared in Langley Provincial Court, Tuesday.

SURVEY SHOWS

Most want recycling

BURNABY - The great majority of metropolitan area residents support the idea of legislation to require recycling of materials such as newspaper, glass and metal, according to a recent survey done in the area.

The survey, done by a private firm in April this year, showed that 83.5 percent agreed with laws requiring recycling and that the majority felt strongly about the idea.

Only 15 percent of the respondents said they are opposed to recycling legislation.

A total of 318 interviews were conducted.

The results of the survey were given to the Greater Vancouver regional district's recycling committee.

While there is no legislation requiring recycling in this area, there has been a sharp increase in the amount of material being recycled, particularly newspaper. A number of municipalities around the lower mainland have contracted with private companies for regular curbside newspaper pickup.

Locals to do well at Games

ST. JOHN, N.B., - Two young athletes from Aldergrove, B.C. will be at the Canada Games here August 11 to 24.

They are Elden Pfeiffer (track and field), and Peter Turbanisch (cycling).

Pfeiffer and Turbanisch are just two of the 327 athletes from 53 communities in British Columbia (3,000 athletes from all of Canada) who will be competing for top honors in their particular field.

British Columbia is the only province that has ever broken the Ontario stranglehold on top spot at the national games. That happened in 1973, but with a larger contingent of athletes than ever before, coaches and individual athletes from the Pacific province hope to duplicate this feat this month. Team B.C. athletes are ready to add many more medals to the 117 gold, 111 silver, and 92 bronze picked up in previous Canada Summer Games.

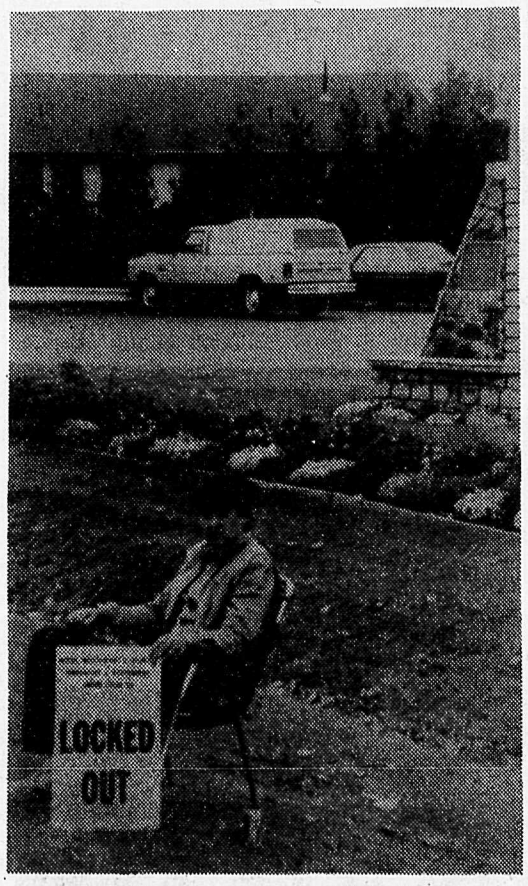
Tougher action promised

VICTORIA - The provincial environment ministry has announced a stepped up enforcement program aimed at controlling the smoke and flyash emissions from woodwaste burners on the north side of the Fraser River along Highway 7 between Albion and Mission.

"A number of these burners have been discharging smoke and flyash well beyond allowable limits and causing public complaints," says minister Austin Pelton. "Ministry investigations in the area have confirmed the problem and corrective action by the offending mills is needed to improve the situation."

The minister says his officials will attempt to resolve the problem by negotiation with the six or seven mills that seem to be causing most of the problems. "If corrective measures are not forthcoming, action will be taken against those who fail to conform to the conditions of the existing permits," Pelton says.

Recently a company, operating a burner just west of Mission was convicted for discharging smoke without a waste management permit and was fined $1,000 in Matsqui provincial court.



Picket lines went up outside the Royal Canadian Legion Friday morning as members of the Hotel, Restaurant & Culinary Employees & Bartenders Union Local 40 were locked out.

Branches of the Legion were also closed down in Langley, Abbotsford and Chilliwack.

Four employees are involved in the labor dispute at the Aldergrove branch.

Lock-out followed a stalemate in negotiation talks that have been going on for the last couple of months between unionized employees and management.

Locally, most people honored the picket line, a union spokesman said.

ON THE ROAD

What's the moon doing to us?

By LISA HATTON

Did anyone else have trouble with the full moon last week? I think it was working overtime. My truck wouldn't start Thursday morning, nor on Friday morning. And Saturday morning I had a flat tire. My daughter came down with the flu, my son hurt his foot on a trampoline and I hurt my foot on the waterslides. My children caught four trout which I had to cook and which nobody ate. Writing about it I'm tempted to laugh, but I sure didn't feel like laughing at the time.

May I extend my sincere thanks to all our loyal subscribers who have post office boxes here in Aldergrove, and especially those who have mailed or brought in their renewals after my sending them notices in the mail. I do not know how to reach most of you, except through the mail, so your willingness to respond through the mail is very much appreciated by me and The Star.

The month of August still looks fairly quiet around Aldergrove. Although there is one major event scheduled out in the suburbs for August 9 to 11. That's the Abbotsford International Airshow at the Abbotsford airport. I hope nobody from Vancouver gets lost. They might end up in Aldergrove.

There are some interesting events scheduled for September, though. On September 3 is a main event that some anticipate and some dread every year. Our schools re-open that day, and mothers anticipate it while students dread it. I'd still like to know why my children never bring home as many notebooks in June as they took in September. Does anybody have a reasonable explanation for the disappearance of so many notebooks? If they are not used up, then why do I have to buy so many to begin with? I would appreciate hearing from anyone who has the answer to this one. It might save us all some money on school supplies.

Scheduled for September 7 and 8 at the arena in Aldergrove is the Aldergrove fall fair. Flora Greenough has told me that attendance last year exceeded 2,000 people. I'll be there this year, selling subscriptions and renewals and having some fun as well. Then on September 21, I've heard that Burt Mazerall and his band, Country Freedom, have been booked to play a dance at the Aldergrove Centre Mall. You're looking good, Aldergrove!

A question for the week: - Why do we work all winter to "get it all" and then spend summer trying to "get away from it all"? See you around.

ONE-PUFF CASE

Supreme Court ruling quashed

VANCOUVER - The B.C. Court of Appeals has overturned the ruling of the B.C. Supreme Court in the case of the 13 year old Aldergrove secondary student suspended last year for taking a puff from a marijuana cigarette.

The ruling upheld the Langley school district's policy of suspending students who use drugs or alcohol during school hours or at school functions. The Court of Appeals, in a split decision, found that Supreme Court Justice McKinnon had made an error in his interpretation of the B.C. School Act, and ruled that informing students of the rules in assemblies and through newsletters at the start of the school year is sufficient warning.

Justice McKinnon had ruled last December that the school board had exceeded its authority when it suspended the 13 year old girl, and had ruled that students must receive individual prior warning before they can be suspended for a drug or alcohol offence.

Justice McKinnon ordered the school district to return the 13 year old girl to Aldergrove secondary. When the school board voted to launch an appeal of Justice McKinnon's ruling, it was pointed out that the board only wished to establish legal precedence and would pursue no further action against the 13 year old girl.

Music's in the air

LYNDEN - 'There's music in the air' at the annual Northwest Washington Fair to be held here (eight short miles south of Aldergrove this week and the next).

Such famous performers as Donna Fargo, Mickey Gilley, Jan and Dean, and the Fifth Avenue group will be there to entertain.

There will be a demolition derby, a tractor pulling contest, draft horse hitches, kids horse racing, and chariot and chuck wagon races.

Admission is US. $4.50 for adults, $3.50 for seniors, and children between 6 and 12 years old $2.50. Admission includes an assortment of free entertainment as big as the sky.

As you tour the fair grounds, take in the 4H and FFA youth exhibits and see what the young folk have been up to. Learn the art of tatting from someome who still remembers. Admire fresh picked vegetables and smell the fragrant flowers. The livestock barns are a great place for Canadian farmers to make new American friends, with over 1,000 animals on display. Shake hands with your favorite Shirt Tales character strolling the grounds. You are also invited to the People's Place, sponsored by a seniors group, for impromptu performances and cooking demonstrations.

Over four acres of rides and games await the young and the young at heart. Thrilling rides for teens and adults, games of skill and chance, plus kiddie rides for the little ones.

There's a fair in the air at Lynden. From Saturday, August 13 to Wednesday, August 17, 8:00 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. every day.

For detailed program, see advertisement.

Centre 'sprung' on residents

MURRAYVILLE - When neighbors heard of the plans for a 'Christian education centre' near Fort Langley they reacted quickly. Within a few days they had gathered some 70 names to a petition opposing the project.

Township councilors listened to some of the arguments Monday afternoon, and they quickly decided to plug up a loophole in a municipal bylaw which would have allowed Allan George Goodbrand to proceed with the centre-retreat on 28 acres of farmland.

"It could have been built," said Ald. John Rennie, who is himself a neighbor. "It would have been a travesty of justice."

He added that it was "sprung on the residents."

Councilors decided to amend the zoning bylaw, thereby stopping the project. While this is in the process, they decided to recommend non-support for the farmland exemption sought from the B.C. Agricultural Land Commission.

The gift of friendship

It is a privilege not given to everyone to have friends, but most of us take it for granted. Here we consider the unusual thing called friendship: What it is, what it means, and what to do to keep it alive . . .

□ Was there ever a sadder man than Howard Hughes? With all his wealth, he could have had anything money could buy. But what he did not have and could not buy left him in the most miserable spiritual poverty. For, as far as anyone knows, he was without a friend in the world.

A thousand popular songs have been written to tell us that a life without love is not worth living. It was Hughes's apparent fate to live and die without love, because friendship has love at its core.

When most of us think or speak about friendship, however, we rob it of its rich emotional value. We have been conditioned to see love as the romantic passion celebrated in popular music, overlooking the less effusive and less volatile love that exists between friends.

This is partly because we use language loosely. We will say that "so-and-so is a friend of mine" when what we mean is that he or she is an acquaintance or an associate or a companion. We are not really talking about someone who is joined to us "in intimacy and mutual benevolence independently of sexual or family love," as the Oxford Dictionary describes a friend.

The great thinkers of history applied an even stricter definition. They lavished attention on the question of what constitutes friendship because of the importance they attached to its role in civilized society. They recognized that if people did not love one another outside of their family or tribal groups, the whole social structure would crumble. Perhaps because they put so much stock in it, they tended to idealize the relationship as an exalted condition towards which people must strive.

Modern men and women think of friendships in categories and degrees: business friends, social friends, good friends, best friends, etc. The philosophers and writers of earlier times made no such distinctions. To them friendship existed only in its highest and closest degree.

The intimacy demanded by their uncompromising criteria was no less (and in many cases, more) than that which exists in a happy marriage. Aristotle said that friends are "one soul in two bodies." Francis Bacon characterized a friend as one "to whom you may impart griefs, joys, fears, hopes, suspicions, counsels, and whatsoever lieth upon the heart to oppress it." Clearly friendship of this order of intensity is extremely rare.

"One friend in a lifetime is much; two are many; three are hardly possible," wrote the historian-philosopher Henry Adams. Dr. Samuel Johnson went beyond this to say that "so many qualities are requisite to the possibility of friendship and so many accidents must concur to its rise and continuance" that the greatest part of mankind must content themselves without it and engage in alliances of interest and dependence instead.

It may indeed be that lesser creatures than Dr. Johnson and his partners in wisdom must make do with lesser forms of friendship than the ideal state which they envisaged. But we ordinary souls can at least try to approach it by keeping in mind that it is not a passive state, which means that it cannot be taken for granted. True friendship is not beyond our reach if we give our friendships the care and attention they deserve.

What are the qualities that make true friends? Probably the first one a person asked this question would name is loyalty. It is easy to keep up a friendship of sorts when everything is bright; it takes effort and perseverance to remain a faithful friend when another's life is plunged into darkness. The expression that you can only tell who your friends are when you are in trouble dates back at least as far as the ancient Roman philosophers. The other side of the coin is that you can only tell if you are a real friend to a person if you are willing to stand by him or her in times of distress.

Whether friends should lend or borrow more than minor sums of money between themselves has always been a tricky question. The balance of opinion is that they should not, if they wish to remain friends. Still, one test of real friendship is whether you are willing to do what you can to come to another's financial aid in an emergency without a firm expectation of repayment. An even greater test is presented to the other party — to do everything possible to see that the sum is repaid.

Yet another test of loyalty concerns reputation. It may be expedient for business or social reasons to put a distance between you and friends when their fortunes are at a low ebb. Even more trying circumstances could arise. Say a friend is charged with a disgraceful crime: Would you insist on his innocence at the risk of your own reputation in the face of overwhelming evidence to the contrary? Say he is convicted: Would you continue to uphold your friendship no matter what people might say?

Sharing what a friend is entitled to share

A friendly relationship of any degree entails a measure of sharing. Friends routinely share experiences, ideas, efforts, wishes and material things. As an intimate friend you might be called upon to share mental pain and heartbreak. Much as you might dread it, you might have to see a friend through the fear and loneliness of a serious illness or the death of a loved one — knowing that he or she would do the same for you.

Oscar Wilde had a good deal to say about the pure spirit of friendship when he wrote that if a friend had a feast and did not invite him to it, he would not be upset in the slightest. "But if a friend of mine had a sorrow and refused to allow me to share it, I should feel it most bitterly. If he shut the doors of the house of mourning against me, I would move back again and again and beg to be admitted, so that I might share in what I was entitled to share."

It should not, however, take a crisis to test the strength of a friendship, because "the one who will be found capable of great acts of love is ever the one who is doing considerate small ones," as the English preacher and man of letters F.W. Robertson put it. Though friendships are often forged in the crucible of mutual adversity — as witness the lasting devotion of old armed service buddies — they are more commonly constructed piece-by-piece of little kindnesses over the years.

The saying that there is no friend like an old friend mirrors the simple truth that a friendship must stand the test of time to confirm itself. It is true, too, that the older we grow, the more we cherish our friendships; and the friends we are likely to cherish most are the ones with whom we have travelled long and far over the rough patches of life along with the smooth.

It carries us far towards our main goal in life: happiness

The benefits of friendship in those good, smooth times should not be underrated. People do not strike up friendly relations as insurance against future adversity. They do so because, if their psychological make-up is somewhere near normal, they must have contact with their fellow human beings. The everyday conduct of friendship satisfies this deep instinctive need.

The basic appeal of friendship is the pleasure we derive from it. Our enjoyment of the world is magnified when it is shared with someone of similar attitudes and tastes. One of the chief things we share with friends is laughter. Friends find the same events and situations funny because they have roughly the same slant on life.

The philosopher William James once made the point that the only goal which is common to all mankind is to attain happiness. Friendship carries us some distance towards that most desirable state. It "doubles our joy," as the great essayist Joseph Addison phrased it. We formally acknowledge this fact when we make sure that close friends are on the scene of such joyful occasions as weddings and birthday celebrations. But many of us fail to appreciate the happiness they bring to our lives day in and day out.

In our modern mobile society, it is sometimes impossible for friends to keep in regular touch because they are separated geographically. We can become quite lazy about showing our faraway friends how much we value them with cards, letters or telephone calls. For those of us who are thus remiss, there may be some comfort in Ralph Waldo Emerson's thoughts on the essence of friendship: ". . .To feel and say of another, I need never meet, or speak, or write to him; we need not reinforce ourselves or send tokens of remembrance; I rely on him as on myself. . ."

Where friends are concerned, absence may indeed make the heart grow fonder. When two people are regularly together, they grow all too well aware of each other's moods, failings and faults.

But friendship is a matter of give and take in every way, including the allowances that must be made for each party's lapses. We are obliged by the nature of the relationship to accept our friends as they are, flaws and all.

This is not a bad thing, since it teaches us the valuable lesson that even we are not exactly perfect. If a friend with whom we share so many characteristics can have so many faults, it follows that we must have a few of our own.

No one can keep a friendship alive without practising consideration, which is the reason exceedingly self-centred persons are almost invariably friendless. It is the essence of consideration to refrain from saying things that may wound our friends' feelings. When they inadvertantly hurt our feelings, we should be equally silent. The observation has been made that the chief qualification for partnership in a successful marriage is to be a "good forgiver." The same applies among friends.

On the other hand, tact can be carried too far in some cases. There may come a time when it is your bounden duty to call attention to the potential folly of a friend's acts. We would not, after all, stand by in silence and watch a friend suffer an injury from a third party without intervening. By the same token, we should not stand by and watch a friend injure him- or herself.

A Middle Eastern proverb defines a friend as "one who gives you warning." That nicely delineates the difference between criticism of a friend for his own good and criticism for its own sake. Human nature being what it is, people are far less zealous about seeking out their own failings than those of others. It is not the function of a friend to be a judge or censor, and we should guard against the habit of gratuitously nagging people when their welfare is not clearly at stake.

When one is unquestionably obliged to let a friend know where he is going wrong, one is just as strongly obliged to see that the criticism goes no further. "Reprove your friends in secret, praise them in public," is advice that goes back to the 1st century, when it was written by Syrus, the Roman slave-poet. Unfortunately, it is often honoured in the breach: "If men knew what others say of them, there would not be four friends in the world," wrote Pascal. If you can find nothing good to say in public about a friend in a given situation, say nothing at all.

"There is a friend who is a friend in name only," the Bible warns. By their ultimate disloyalty you shall know them. From Adam and Eve forward, men and women have been betrayed by seeming well-wishers who were secretly acting for their own advantage. Drama and fiction over the centuries would have been lost without the sinister figure of the false friend.

In real life such figures will be found at work currying the favour of more powerful or more popular individuals. Several vulgar names are used in plants and offices for those who make a point of cozying up to the boss to advance their careers. They appeal to their victims' vanity by feigning admiration and affection. The objects of these bogus sentiments should "be advised that all flatterers live at the expense of those who listen to them," which is the moral of La Fontaine's fable of The Crow and the Fox.

The more power people amass in business, politics or other walks of life, the less they can be sure of who their friends are. The story is told of a newly-appointed bishop who remarked that there were two experiences he would never have again: eat a bad meal and hear the whole truth. He might have added that he would never again make a friend he could trust entirely. The friendlessness of the high and mighty is compounded when they have dropped their old friends on the way up the ladder of earthly success.

"Friendship is the privilege of private men; for wretched greatness knows no blessing so substantial," wrote Nahan Tate, a 16th century poet and dramatist. This is partly so because the relationship between the great and their social inferiors is essentially unequal. The most fulfilling friendships, like the most fulfilling marriages, are between equals who treat each other as such.

In any case, there can be no authentic friendship where one party contrives to get more out of it than the other. It may in fact happen that one helps the other more than vice-versa, but that is immaterial to the nature of the relationship. In a real friendship, the less fortunate party would be just as forthcoming if the roles were reversed.

'Absent friends:' the immortal figures who live in our hearts

It is therefore debatable whether people can deliberately "make friends" for any purpose but friendship itself. We are sometimes advised to strike up an association with more admirable souls to improve ourselves, or to replace old friends with new ones because the old are bad companions.

Faced with this advice, one might do well to think of the young man whose father gave him a copy of How to Win Friends and Influence People which he returned with a note saying, "too artificial." It may be possible to seek and find true friends as it is possible to seek and find true lovers; but, as in romantic love, the best results are obtained by letting nature take its course.

Dr. Johnson apparently thought otherwise. He said, "If a man does not make new acquaintences as he advances through life, he will soon find himself alone." But though it is true that we lose friends to death as we grow older, in a way they are immortal. Those who have passed out of our lives in the physical sense will live on in our hearts as long as we do. This phenomenon is recognized in the old army toast to fallen comrades — or, as soldiers say when they raise their glasses, "to absent friends."

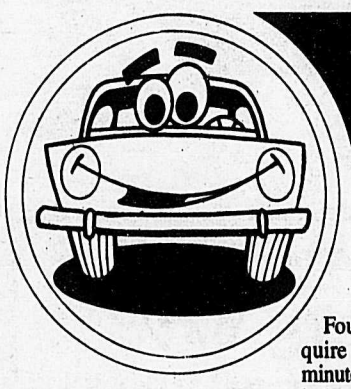
While they are still alive, friends should be treated as the precious gifts of fortune they are. In his classic essay "Of Friendship," Emerson wrote: "We take care of our health, we make our roof tight and our clothing sufficient, but who provides wisely that we should not be wanting in the best property of all? — friends?"

'The only way to have a friend is to be one'

The same essay carried Emerson's famous pronouncement that "the only way to have a friend is to be one." To be a friend in the classical sense is no light undertaking. Consider the qualifications for the role, as listed by the Earl of Clarendon: "The skill and observation of the best physician, the diligence and vigilance of the best nurse, the tenderness and patience of the best mother." Bishop Jeremy Taylor was, if anything, more demanding: "The greatest love, the greatest usefulness, the most open communication, the noblest sufferings, the severest truth, the heartiest counsel, and the greatest union of minds of which brave men and women are capable."

There are sacrifices to be made in attempting to raise our friendships to their highest potential state, but the fortunate part of it is that friendship is one of the few human pursuits that makes sacrifice a pleasure. It is also one way in which ordinary men and women can reach for spiritual nobility. This is because "an effort made for the happiness of others lifts us above ourselves," as the American humanitarian Lydia Child said.

The qualities of character required for true friendship are quite simply the best qualities a human can possess: unselfishness, tolerance, forebearance, trustworthiness, faithfulness, honesty. If we fragile mortals feel unequal to the effort of applying all these qualities all the time, we might try a little harder if we remember that we are doing it out of a kind of love which yields love in repayment. And to love and be loved is worth all the effort we can possibly make.



DRIVE A HAPPY CAR

As cars continue to "shrink," the need for maintenance will grow

Smaller cars may bring motorists the extra miles per gallon they are seeking, but the fuel savings could easily "slip out the exhaust pipe" if they neglect the maintenance small cars require.

"Because parts are fewer and smaller in size, four-cylinder engines have to work harder than larger engines to provide the same performance," explains Dave Bowman, Technical Services Manager for Fram/Autolite, a major automotive parts manufacturer.

"Engine miles"

Four-cylinder engines require more revolutions per minute than six- or eight-cylinder engines to travel the same distance.

For example, Mr. Bowman explains, the average eight-cylinder engine in a large car with an automatic transmission requires 1,663 revolutions to travel one mile. The average four-cylinder engine requires 3,130 revolutions to travel that same distance.

"These figures can be translated into 'engine miles.' When the odometer reads 10,000 miles, the four-cylinder engine will have worked the equivalent of 18,800 miles," says Mr. Bowman.

"Smaller engines need to be protected against engine miles. The best way is through more frequent preventive maintenance. It is vital for keeping your small car healthy and fuel efficient."

"Unfortunately," he adds, "most motorists are not aware of the importance of small car maintenance." In a recent national survey of 22,200 motorists conducted for Fram/Autolite by Market Facts Inc., more than two-thirds said they do not believe small, four-cylinder engines require more frequent maintenance.

"These owners need to learn how small cars operate and should look at frequent maintenance as low-cost insurance that can keep up the vehicle's resale value and save them money at the gas pumps," he adds.

Severe driving

Mr. Bowman suggests motorists base maintenance schedules on their driving habits.

"Severe" drivers are those who primarily drive short, stop-and-go trips of 10 miles or less, who drive in dusty areas, who idle extensively, as in heavy traffic, or who tow heavy loads.

Fram/Autolite surveys show that nearly 85 percent of the country's drivers fall into this category. "Severe drivers, particularly those with small cars, should maintain their vehicles more often, at least according to the severe driving schedule listed in owners' manuals," says Mr. Bowman.

FOUR-CYLINDER ENGINES ARE LESS "FORGIVING" of maintenance neglect than eight-cylinder engines because parts are fewer and smaller. With half the number of spark plugs (above), the performance loss from one bad plug in a four-cylinder engine is much more noticeable than one bad plug out of eight in a larger engine. Oil filters (below) also work harder in most four-cylinder engines, handling a greater oil flow than those in larger engines, even though they are smaller in size. This makes tune-ups and regular oil/oil filter changes crucial for extending the life of your small car.

To keep small cars running smoothly and efficiently, Fram has these maintenance tips:

- Oil & oil filters — Since combustion temperatures in smaller engines are hotter, the motor oil works harder lubricating, sealing and protecting parts and may break down sooner. Smaller engines also have smaller oil capacities so there is less oil to do this job.

Oil filters also are smaller and there is twice as much oil flowing through these filters. Fram tests have shown smaller filters for most small cars clog faster than the larger filters usually found in eight-cylinder engines.

If you are a severe driver, change the oil and oil filter every three months or 3,000 miles, whichever comes first. If you drive under "ideal" conditions, such as constant highway driving, change these parts every 6,000-7,000 miles or six months.

- Spark plugs — "When RPMs increase, so do the number of times spark plugs must fire," Mr. Bowman says. "This can shorten plug life and lead to misfiring."

"If one out of four plugs in a four-cylinder engine misfires, it could shake your back teeth out; one bad plug in a small engine is more apparent than one in larger engines. So give your small car a tune-up at least once a year and be sure to replace all four spark plugs at the same time."

- Fuel filters — Many small cars are, or will be, equipped with fuel injectors which improve performance. Therefore, check the fuel filter at each tune-up and replace if necessary. A clogged fuel filter can reduce gas mileage and allow contaminants to enter and damage the fuel injectors.
- Wheels and tires — Smaller tires revolve more times per mile than larger tires. This can produce more heat and increase tread wear. Check the treads monthly and replace the tires when necessary.

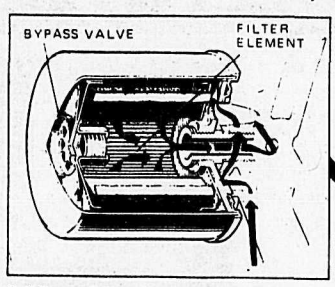
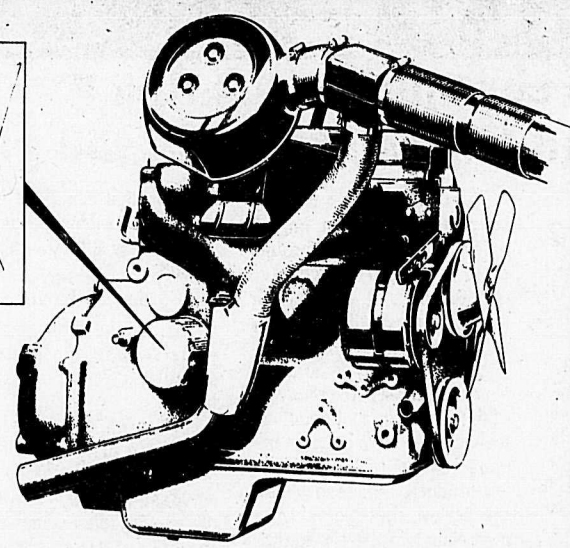
Replacing an oil filter



Full-flow, oil-filter bypass valves allow oil delivery, even if the filter clogs.



The oil filter on your car is probably a full-flow filter. This means that the oil pump delivers oil through the filter before oil is distributed to the engine.

However, in the event that extremely cold weather causes the filter to clog or the oil to become too thick to flow through the filter, a bypass valve will route oil around the filter element to the engine. This way, your engine will never starve for oil. Oil delivered to the engine through the bypass will, of course, contain abrasives and sludgy elements that will accelerate engine wear.

Filters get clogged with sediment and particles if they are kept in use too long. Therefore, it is important that you replace an oil filter at the time intervals recommended in your owner's manual. In many cases, this schedule calls for installing a new filter in a new car the first time the oil is drained and every second oil change thereafter. If you use the vehicle under severe conditions, such as pulling a trailer, extensive short-trip driving, idling for long periods, or driving in dusty areas, replace the filter each time you change the oil.

1. Place a drain pan under the oil filter before adding fresh oil to the engine.

This will catch any of the fresh oil that may spill while you work.

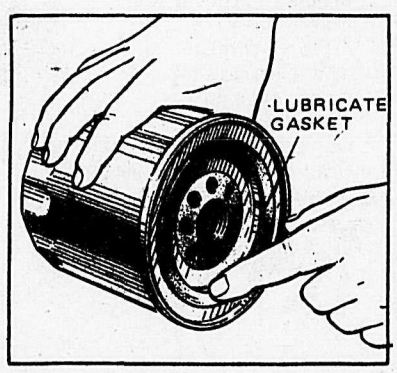
2. The filter may be reached from inside the engine compartment, depending on its location on the engine. If it's not accessible, you'll have to get beneath the car. Be careful that you don't grab the filter with your bare hand. Since the engine was warmed up prior to draining the oil, the filter will be hot.

3. Place an oil-filter wrench around the filter. If you are just now purchasing a wrench, make sure that it's the right size because not all wrenches fit all filters. Be ready to tell the salesman the year, make and model of your car and the cubic-inch displacement of the engine. You'll also need this information if you want to purchase the correct filter.

4. Turn the wrench counterclockwise to remove the filter. If the filter is frozen to the engine, remove the wrench and drive a chisel through the filter canister, but watch out for hot oil that may splatter. Then hit the chisel with a hammer to loosen the old oil filter.

5. If old gasket material sticks to the filter seat on the engine after you have removed and discarded the filter, scrape the seat clean and wipe it with a dry cloth.

6. Wash your hands, and then dip a finger into some clean engine oil and lubricate the gasket of the new filter. Also lubricate the filter seat on the engine, Lubrication assures that you will have a secure fit between the two.



Apply oil to the gasket of a new filter to secure a tight fit with the engine.

7. Thread the filter by hand onto the engine. Be careful not to cross or strip threads on the filter. When the gasket touches the filter seat on the engine, hand-turn the filter another half to three-quarter turn to secure it.

In the past, manufacturers have warned not to tighten the filter with a wrench, because the filter may be difficult to remove next time you have to replace it. Some now say to use a wrench to assure a tight, leak-proof seal. Take the moderate approach. Tighten the filter by hand. After you have filled the crankcase with oil, start the engine and check around the filter for leaks. If you find one, tighten the filter with the wrench until it stops.

ASK ANNABELLE

Dear Annabelle,

What do you think of a 77-year-old man who is still a mama's boy? If mama said the world was square my brother would agree and that was that. He never did a thing in his life that mama disapproved of. He built his house to mama's design (no consideration for his wife and family). My mother led our father around by the nose; she was never sincere with my father or the rest of us - the exception was my brother. He is so phony all he thinks about is money. If you have money, in his opinion, you are upper crust, but he has the manners and attitude of a tom cat. The only decent woman he brought home was his wife and she wouldn't have married him if she had known what her life would be like. Now that our folks are dead he does as he pleases, he is a rich man but the money came from his wife because she worked. He had never done anything for his family, but when the time comes and he is gone his wife knows that she can count on us to be there and help her.

Signed: Babbette of the Valley.

Dear Babbette,

I find it truly incredible that a man of your advanced years should have spend a life time being bitter about his brother. Now that you have told me and hopefully feel better for having written it all down, why not try talking to your brother? If you can't bring yourself to confront him face to face then a letter would do to start. The past is past, your mother is dead and has probably gone to a more peaceful place than she found on this earth. Before you and your brother go to your rest try to work something out together. You may be quite surprised and pleased with the result. Bitterness is a terrible burden to carry to your grave.

Dear Annabelle,

In the last couple of years most of my friends have been divorced. I would like to get a divorce too but the trouble is - I'm not married.

Signed: A Follower.

Dear Follower,

Listen, do us all a favor and never get married.

Obituaries

KRAUSE - Passed away on July 30, 1985 at Menno Home in Clearbrook, Maria Krause in her 83rd year. She was formerly of Aldergrove.

Mrs. Krause was predeceased by her husband Arnold. She is survived by daughter Elvera Tetzlaff of Vancouver, granddaughter Thelma Zacharias of Langley, and grandson Gerald Tetzlaff of Vancouver. Also great grandchildren Mark and Darrin Zacharias of Langley.

Funeral service was held August 6 from Woodlawn-Henderson. Burial at Aberdeen cemetery.

SIMPSON - Lillian May Simpson, late of 24488 Fraser Hwy. and a resident of Langley since 1931, passed away in Cedar Hill extended care unit of Langley Memorial Hospital on July 30, 1985. She was 95 years of age.

Mrs. Simpson (nee Pearce) was born May 5, 1890 in the County of Bruce, Ontario. She was raised and went to school in the town of Paisley. When she was fifteen she moved to Battle Creek, Michigan to live with her aunt and uncle, Dr. Roy McCartney. When she was 28 she went to China as a missionary nurse.

At a social gathering Lillian met her husband Bertram Joseph Simpson, who had taken a position in China with the Standard Oil Co. of New York. He was supervisor for the construction of an oil installation at Chungking. Bert and Lillian were married in February of 1920. Three boys were born to the Simpsons while they were in China.

During the Boxer uprising in 1926 the Simpsons left for Canada, arriving in Victoria in September of 1926.

They took up residence in the Point Grey area of Vancouver

Early in 1931, they moved to the Fraser Valley, built a home on 10 acres of land on the Old Yale Road in the Otter district. The children attend Otter elementary school and Langley high school.

Mrs. Simpson joined the Otter Women's Institute in 1931, in which she was a life member. When the Otter branch closed she went on to the Langley Women's Institute where she received the provincial long service pin in 1984.

Mrs. Simpson was a life member of the Ladies Orange Benevolent Association, with Lily of the Valley Lodge at Otter from 1945 to 1971. When they dissolved she carried on with the Queen Victoria Chapter.

She was also a charter member and life member of the Otter auxillary to the Langley Memorial hospital.

Other community organizations she belonged to were: 10 years with the Otter Community Association. From 1934 to 1939 with the Otter Girl Guides and Boy Scout Association, five years with the Otter School Parent Teachers Association. She also received a medal of merit for work done with the Red Cross during World War II.

Left to mourn her passing are: a daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Mayes (Beth) of Langley; three sons, Bill and wife Vera of Burnaby, David and wife Vera of Richmond, Emerson and wife Greta of Vancouver; 14 grandchildren and 15 great grandchildren; three sisters, Catherine of Elmira, Ontario, Isobel of Walkerton, Ontario and Ada Hanover, Ontario; a brother, Charles of Owen Sound, Ontario.

She was predeceased by her husband, Bertram Joseph, in 1963, one son Robert, two sisters, Nesta and Ethel, two brothers, Emerson and Jack.

Funeral services were held from the chapel of Henderson's Langley Funeral Home on Wednesday, August 7 at 10 a.m. Interment was at Valley View Memorial Gardens, in Surrey.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Langley Memorial Hospital in memory of Lillian Simpson.

VAN DE BURGT - Passed away suddenly at Chilliwack on July 19, 1985, Leonard Van de Burgt in his 25th year.

Survived by his parents Jan and Aartje Van de Burgt of Mt. Lehman, brothers John of Abbotsford, Bertram and wife Diane of Aldergrove, Alexander and wife Betty of Aldergrove, Michael at home, sisters Elizabeth and husband Jake Van Laar of Abbotsford, Wilma and husband Auke Bergsma of Carman, Man., Mary Van de Burgt at home, Irene and husband Stan Viersen of Neerlandia, Alta. Also loved by many nieces, nephews and friends.

Mr. Van de Burgt was a truck driver.

Funeral service was held July 24 from Canadian Reformed Church with Rev. Martin Vanderwel officiating. Burial at Hazelwood. Woodlawn-Henderson in charge.

Tim and Opal celebrate

By DOREEN FOLKARD

ALDERGROVE - Although the weather was warm, the Saturday evening had a good turnout.

Tim and Opal Thomas celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary this week. Door prize was won by Leo Harcourt and Bob Coutts, the spot prize by Fred Metzger and Bunny Hamilton.

I see the descendants of Levi Strauss wish to buy back the company that has made billions by selling jeans.

I have often wondered what teenagers wore before the jeans came in. I have seen little girls cry and beg their mothers to buy them a dress. One little girl told me she has never worn a dress.

When Jackie Coogan was a child star in the twenties, he wore the jeans in the film The Kid.

Today the dress trade is losing. It seems that only the manufacturers who are making jeans are making a fortune.

House levelled by fire

LANGLEY - An early evening house fire last Saturday completely destroyed a home at 19874 - 8 Ave.

Two Langley firehalls, with the assistance of a South Surrey firehall, were called to the blaze about 7:30 p.m.

Residents were away at the time and there were no injuries. Neighbors removed two dogs and two horses from an adjoining barn.

Cause of fire has not been determined, and RCMP and fire officials are investigating.

Horse clubs achieve

ALDERGROVE - The local 4-H horse clubs, Otter and Double-T, held their achievement day on Sunday, July 21, at Campbell Valley regional park. Judging the entries was Douglas MacArthur.

The results for Otter horse club were: High points: Unit 4 - Andrea Blamire, Unit 2B - Shannon Tracey, Unit 2A - Denise Allen, Unit 1 - Sara Allen. Reserve high points: Unit 4 - Sandera Murray, Unit 2B - Glynis Heather, Unit 2A - Sonia Evans, Unit 1 - Susan Chenier.

Andrea Blamire was grand champion showman and Sandra Murray was reserve champion showman. High aggregate of the day was Andrea with 184 points.

Following the achievement with project animals, members went for a leisurely ride around Campbell Valley park, or just relaxed in the shade.

The day was completed with a picnic supper. Thanks to parents who helped out as ring clerks, whipper-ins, and with scoring.

Next on the club's agenda will be competition at the PNE. The eight members representing Otter are Andrea Blamire, Sandera Murray, Cindy Mortimer, Nick McNair, Kim Sauder, Alison McNair, Glynis Heather, and Laurie Rippon.

Fall Fair four weeks away

By
Flora Greenough

ALDERGROVE - It is now only four weeks to wait until the doors of the Aldergrove ice arena will open for the 73rd annual agricultural fall fair. 73 years of growing, changing with the times and changing with the general lay of the land. During the first few years of the "annual exhibition", settlers would come from miles away; whole families to enjoy the friends and neighbors who in the early days were together only on rare occasions. Primitive roads, distance and farm chores kept families close to home. An early trip to the exhibition usually meant the head of the family would bring in his prize cow or best chicken; maybe a newly acquired animal or piece of farm equipment to show off. While the menfolk talked of animals and got caught up on the advancement of each farm, the ladies were laying out and displaying the mouthwatering art of home baking, canning and pickling which we of today would surely envy. Quilting, rug hooking and braiding along with the sewing all made more comfortable their homes and contributed to our history.

Children would get together to play the time honored games of skip rope and racing. Girls to show off dolls and their dresses while boys roughed about during the last hot days of summer. New teachers and school news gossip probably high on the list of priority.

Family picnic style eating was another highlight of the day; when the basket would be opened to many a hungry stomach and the food washed down with home-made apple juice or other "out in the barn" cooling off batches of their proud makers.

The annual trek to the fair was looked forward to and prepared for, for months in advance; then looked back on with fond memories. Many a lady vowing that next year, "Mabel, down the road", would not win the blueberry pie entry, or bring in the most entries. Our settlers of years gone by had it a lot harder that we of today, but their hearts were stout and their determination of putting down roots strong. They shaped Aldergrove into what it is today and through it all the fair grew and flourished to what it now is: the agricultural fall fair of Aldergrove.

Benefit features variety

The Central Valley Academy of Music Society will sponsor a super colossal variety benefit concert starring the faculty members of the Central Valley Academy of Music, on Saturday, Sept. 14 at 7:30 p.m., at the Abby Arts Centre on 2329 Crescent Way.

Featured artists will include Katherine Harder and Betty Suderman, who have just returned from the Montreal international vocal competition and a European tour. The flute and violin duo of Kathleen Isaac and Thomas Schoen will be playing virtuoso pieces in the French and Spanish tradition, as well as joining forces with cellist Susan Spencer to perform as the Gagliano trio, a group which has concertized throughout Western Canada.

Also performing are Hedi Hain, Julia Toews, (Fraser Valley symphony) and Eileen Deros, the academy Suzuki instructors. C.V.A.M.'s youth orchestra conductor and violinist Lloyd Blackman will perfom Beethoven's "Spring Sonata," and clarinetist Sandy (Stewart) King will play the Krommer Cencerto for Two Clarinets with her husband Gerry King, music instructor at Mouat senior secondary.

Tickets are only $5 (adults) or $3 (C.V.A.M. members, students, seniors).

Phone 854-1848, or 852-9358 for further information.

Bed and breakfast a hit for Country Style

The Bed & Breakfast registry being compiled by Country Style 86, Langley's Expo Task Force, got its first use recently during a five day program hosted by the Langley Arts Council.

The program called "Exploring Art", brought people from various areas who required overnight accommodation. Working from the list of homes already registered a number of people were accommodated in Langley area homes, and from reports received were very pleased.

Country Style 86 is working to expand the registry of Bed & Breakfast homes in Langley and is encouraging local groups to make use of this service which offers an affordable alternative to other forms of accommodation.

For further information, please call Wendy Wallace at 533-EXPO (3976).

Otter 4-H Holstein club earns rosettes

By DENNIS RANKIN

ALDERGROVE - You might say the Otter Holstein 4-H club scored impressive results at this year's Surrey Farm Fair. Club members earned rosettes in four of the five individual events.

The three seniors from the club who attended qualified for the senior championship class in dairy showmanship. Dean Wautier, Jeneen Rankin and Terri Giacomazzi finished 1-2-3 from among the 33 seniors. Repeating his success at Matsqui Agrifair, Dean claimed grand champion showman while Jeneen claimed reserve champion.

Kira Rankin moved up from the second row along with James Parent to claim blue ribbons with fellow club member David Van Dongen. Charlie Crane and Karl Nornberg earned red ribbons among the eleven-year-olds. Jeff Crane picked up a red ribbon for his efforts among the nine and ten-year-olds.

The seniors continued their success during the calf placings. Terri, Dean and Jeneen led their calves into the top three places in the same class. Terri's Brondell Warden Talent claimed the Bank of B.C. award as the champion 4-H calf.

Among the younger calves four placed in the first row and the other two stood in second.

The club faired well in the two inter club events. The group of four calves claimed first place in Sunday's competition and second place on the Monday afternoon.

This year the program included a round robin showmanship event. A group of twelve who had excelled in the various projects participated in an exercise requiring each member to show animals from the dairy, beef, swine, goats, sheep and rabbits projects. Both Dean and Jeneen gave a good accounting of themselves with Jeneen receiving third among five final placings.

Monday was indeed a long event-filled day. Members started early in the morning with clean up and feeding followed by the grooming and fitting which in turn gave rise to the series of events which concluded late in the afternoon. The club may well be proud of its achievements as it readies for the PNE.

TRAVEL TALK

By MICHAEL VAN DE LAAR

In the staggering variety of possible holiday destinations, one stands out brightly, appealing to all tastes, satisfying the most demanding standards, amazing the most worldly traveller; Hong Kong, one of life's great adventures.

In the hustle and bustle of one of the world's major commercial centres, riots of color and light fill a city that never sleeps. You can take advantage of unbelievable bargains in everything from hi-tech electronics to ivory and jade carvings, from cameras to the latest fashion accessories. The hotels are among the world's finest, with service you didn't think existed anymore. Experience the picturesque serenity of traditional Chinese gardens and temples, and the junks in the harbour, unchanged after thousands of years. You can tour the 235 outlying islands that dot the South China Sea or visit the Mainland; enjoy the ancient arts of Chinese opera, dance and acrobatics, or get caught up in the excitement of world-class horse racing and the inexpensive nightlife.

A paradise for gourmets, shoppers and sightseers, dazzlingly exotic, breathtakingly beautiful ... truly the adventure of a lifetime. Starburn Travel can make it happen for you.

Beef club shows well

OTTER - This past weekend seven members of the Otter 4H beef club went to the Surrey farm fair. Showmanship was held on Saturday, August 3. Heather Anderson, Rod DeGianni, Lynn and Shawn Ingeberg were all in the second row. Sarah Reeves was the intermediate grand champion showman while Sherri Jensen was the intermediate reserve grand champion showman. In the beef classes, Rod, Heather, Sherri, and Sarah were all in the first row while Heather Follett was in the second row. In the heifer classes, Heather Anderson, Heather Follett, Lynn and Shawn were all in the first row. In the cow and calf class, Sherri was first in her class and Heather Follett was third in the first row. She was also first in her class of special interest projects.

This coming weekend, the Otter beef club is going to the Chilliwack farm fair to show their animals again.

Explorers (PG-Paramount) Starring Ethan Hawke, River Phoenix, Jason Presson. ★ ★

By J.T. YURKO

Exploring seems to be the theme for this summer's movies. "The Goonies" explored old caves to find pirate's treasure. "Back to the Future" explored the realm of time travel. And "Rambo" explored (and destroyed) most of Southeast Asia.

So who are these intrepid "Explorers"? They're three kids who boldly go where no kid has gone before. That's right, three kids — barely teens if that — build a machine and head for outer space. Does it sound a bit implausible?

It is, but it is to the film's credit that we buy as much of it as we do. It seems some aliens are beaming messages to these childen during their dreams. One of the three, a computer whiz-kid, hooks up one of the dreamed circuit diagrams to his Apple computer, and a little bubble, which is capable of defying gravity and moving through brick walls, appears.

Pretty soon, the kids manage to make the bubble large enough so they can fit inside. They then use some junkyard parts to assemble a rude vehicle for their travels about the sky. (Remember when kids used to get baby-carriage wheels and make a go cart?)

When the kids plug in a newly dreamed circuit, zap — off they go into hyper-space and a visit with the aliens sending the messages.

What starts out as a kids-in-space mystery soon turns into a vaudevillian series of one-liners. The film has the feel and the depth of a short story and might be a fine addition to a collection of sci-fi tales, but as a feature film it takes far too long to get anywhere, and the kicker ending turns out to be just plain silly.

Joe Dante of "Gremlins" fame directs, and the pacing is far too slow. When the boys finally reach the alien spaceship, they explore it for what seems like hours. There's not much suspense over the appearance of the aliens since they have already appeared in the video based on the film, and the few special effects are noteworthy but not dazzling.

If aliens are your thing, head for a reissue of "E.T."

Exchange students welcomed

After a three-week stay with several support homes in the Aldergrove area, these 19 Japanese students will return home Sunday. They have been participating in a non-profit educational exchange program arranged through the Canadian Homestay Institute and co-ordinator Juanita Copp.

As part of this exchange program a group of approximately 60 people will be travelling to Japan next July to stay with several families there. Any highschool students or adults that are interested in possible involvement can contact Bob Waugh at 856-4458 or Dave Hunt at 856-2200.

Ministry of Agriculture and Food
FARMLAND FOR LEASE
PROVINCIAL AGRICULTURAL LAND COMMISSION

Applications are invited from persons interested in a long term agricultural lease on the following Crown land:

1) 11.18 acres (4.5 hectares) partially cleared, located on 72nd Avenue and approximately 236th Street in the Municipality of Langley.

2) 5.8 acres (2.3 hectares) partially cleared, located at 27004 - 52nd Avenue, in the Municipality of Langley. Only intensive agricultural proposals will be considered.

3) Approximately 15 acres (6 hectares) of forage land within the Vedder River Management Area. Located at the foot of Brown Road on the south side of the Vedder River, in the Municipality of Chilliwack. Because of the sensitive environmental issues, only forage production can occur.

Leasing of these properties is being handled by the Property Management Program, Ministry of Agriculture and Food. Plans, factsheets, application forms and other lease information may be obtained by contacting this Branch directly by phone at 859-5281 or in writing to #203 - 33780 Laurel Street, Abbotsford, B.C. V2S 1X4.

Applications for lease must be returned prior to 4:30 p.m. on August 21, 1985. 31-19985-2

New phone book heralds growth and changes

ALDERGROVE - Central Fraser Valley telephone users can expect to receive their new telephone directories by August 15, says B.C. Tel.

The Central Fraser Valley directory which serves Abbotsford, Aldergrove, Matsqui and Mission, has grown by 115 white and yellow pages over the last year and now totals 600 pages.

The new directory contains information about "1+" dialing which B.C. Tel plans to implement province-wide starting September 29. This method of direct dialing long distance calls will replace the present '112+" dialing code.

B.C. Tel produced 49 different directories in 1985 and some 3.5 million telephone books were distributed throughout the province.

One of the earliest directories produced in British Columbia, the New Westminster and Burrard Inlet Telephone Company directory, was produced in 1890 and contained 29 pages with telephone numbers which were a maximum of three digits in length. The Vancouver Wine Company had the telephone number of "1", Tilley's Book Store on Carrall Street in Vancouver had the telephone number of "3" and City Hall (listed under C) could be called by asking for "6".

Orchestral auditions

Pharaoh's curse debunked

STRASBOURG, France - "I have succumbed to a curse," British Egyptologist Hugh Evelyn-White wrote in his own blood in 1924 just before he hanged himself.

He was among the first to enter the tomb of the Pharaoh Tutankhamen following its discovery in November 1922, and one of two dozen explorers who were to die shortly after entering the tomb. The Pharaoh's Curse theory was born.

Now a French physician says the "curse" was mostly severe allergic reaction to mould.

Dr. Caroline Stenger-Philippe has concluded at least six of the deaths were directly linked to the penetration of the tomb. Evelyn-White's suicide and the mysterious demise of many others were not among them.

The tomb of Tutankhamen, dating to about 1350 B.C., was found in the Valley of the Tombs near Luxor, Egypt.

In her doctoral thesis submitted recently to the Strasbourg University School of Medicine, Stenger-Philippe concluded the directly linked deaths were due to the same illness from the same cause -- allergic reaction to fungi, or mould, which grew in the airtight chambers of the tomb.

Stenger - Philippe said the victims contracted allergic alveolitis, a severe inflammation of the tiny air chambers in the lungs, and died of pulmonary insufficiency.

She said fruits and vegetables the Egyptians placed in the tomb to nourish the pharaoh through eternity, as well as all other organic substances, decayed over the centuries, creating moulds and later organic dust.

Much of the fungi did not survive the millenia, but the microscopic dust did "and may have, in fact, increased its antigenic properties," she said.

Stenger - Philippe said the dust could have remained in the tomb for up to two years after its opening, but then it dispersed and there were no more victims.

She said the explorers "came to look for gold and treasures and paid no attention to the pink, grey and green patches of fungi on the walls. That's what killed some of them."

She dismissed theories such as the presence of deadly rays, bacteria or dormant viruses as unsupported hypotheses.

"Many more would have died if there were radioactive materials or bacteria deliberately placed in the tomb," she said.

Dr. Arthur Maier, one of France's pioneers in allergy studies, agreed. As head of pneumology at the Saverne hospital in eastern France, he supervised Stenger-Philippe's research and was among the physicians to review her findings.

But he admitted the thesis offers no more than "a very plausible" scientific explanation.

"We can never recreate the original conditions and we will never have absolute proof," he said.

Those who believe in the pharaoh's curse, he said, "may go on believing."

It was a blue moon

NEW BRITAIN, Conn. - Astronomer David Menke says there's no such thing as a blue moon, but agrees it wouldn't sound right to say: "I haven't seen you since two full moons occurred in the same month."

Menke, who has tried to determine the origin of the phrase blue moon, which refers to the occurrence of two full moons in one month, has traced the use of the phrase to 1526.

Wednesday, the last day of July, provided the first blue moon since Dec. 30, 1982.

It looked like an ordinary full moon.
