LANGLEY - A young VanderZalm booster was pinned by Lillian VanderZalm at a local Sunday afternoon garden party for the Socred leadership candidate.

"Queen Lilliana", as her good-humored husband called her, has been actively campaigning with him throughout the province, and they've racked up an impressive lead over most of the other candidates in recent weeks. The couple made a good impression on most of the audience at the Langley affair, too. - Staff photo

TWICE OVER

The big sting

MURRAYVILLE - In the village of Fort Langley children are sick in bed and grownups do not dare to go outside their front door, says a local alderman.

And it is all because of mosquitoes.

They are big, they are mean, and they are definitely bloodthirsty this year, says Ald. Len Fowler. This year perhaps more than ever.

So Fowler, who is also chairman of the Central Fraser Valley regional district, has persuaded the board to spend $50,000 on waging war on the critters. The provincial health department has approved aerial spraying, something they have refused in the past.

Ald. Muriel Arnason says the spray used, malathion, also kills fish in the river and tributary streams. And it kills birds and other insects who feed upon the mosquitoes and their larvae, she says.

Arnason would like the spraying process halted and for Fort residents to tough it out for the remainder of the 1986 season.

And Ald. Carol Gran sort of agrees. Spraying is not going to work and is just a waste of taxpayers money, she says, because it cannot be done effectively anyhow. Spraying would have to be done by ground crews at close proximity to waterways, she says, and Fowler admits that there are many places where these crews simply "can't get in."

Arnason says fisheries officials agree that the use of the pesticide will cause fish kills.

Besides these possible side effects, chemical spraying will cost Langley's taxpayers $25,000 this year.

SCORE ONE FOR MURIEL

Council to meet at night

MURRAYVILLE - "You can't invoke closure on me; I protest," said Ald. Carol Gran in mock anger when Mayor Elford Nundal this week suggested that evening council meeting be terminated automatically at 11 o'clock.

Much to Ald. Len Fowler's chagrin, Gran and fellow councilor Ald. Muriel Arnason pushed through a policy change Monday night that will see all public council meetings being held in the evening starting December 8 this year.

Arnason, who brought the motion before council, suggested that "democracy can only survive by massive (public) participation" and that this would come about as a result of a total switchover to evening sessions. She has often argued that working people cannot attend daytime meetings nor entertain the idea of seeking public office themselves. Gran, surprisingly, agreed. Other councilors, who like Ald. Patrick Boyle, thought that "the present system is efficient" were swayed by the two alderwomen's arguments. Fowler was not. Evening meetings would cost more, he claimed.

"Almost all other councils have evening meetings," pointed out Arnason.

"They are doing it all across Canada," said Gran. "It is not that we will be reinventing the wheel."

The argument that politicians think more clearly in the morning did not wash either with Gran.

"We will be more efficent," she said. "In the daytime we often seem to have an hour and a half or more to waste. In the evening we will want to get home."

But Nundal and Ald. Aubrey

Body identified

LANGLEY - RCMP have identified a man whose body was found floating in the 27500-block of the Fraser River, July 9, about 9 a.m.

Dead is Frederick Labentsoff, 59 of Burnaby. Police believe he was dead for several weeks and they say foul play is not suspected.

VanderZalm up front

By KURT LANGMANN

LANGLEY - Willie and Lillie left a good impression on the large crowd at a public garden party in north-west Langley, Sunday afternoon.

Bill VanderZalm exuded charm and wit, while wife Lillian provided the grace and beauty as the pair pressed the flesh and ignited a warm glow of camaraderie among the hundred or more in the backyard of the Stan and Marjorie Cox residence.

The VanderZalms, of course, are hard on the campaign trail for the provincial Socred leadership and are amazingly upbeat, showing no sign of wear and tear from the incessant travelling to constituency meetings. A number of Langley delegates to the upcoming Socred convention were on hand to hear the man who is considered a frontrunner in the race, along with Grace McCarthy and Bud Smith.

Supportive MLAs Jack Davis, Bill Reid and Rita Johnson were also there, as was Hope delegate Mike Pelletier, son of Socred co-founder Ray Pelletier. In an introductory speech, Pelletier brought greetings from his infirm father, as well as their endorsement of VanderZalm.

In a well-thought-out-speech -- frequently broken by loud applause -- VanderZalm said the major concern of B.C.'s Socreds was to choose a leader who can "go up against the NDP in the next general election."

He claimed he had the support of 651 of the 1300 delegates, because people are "seeking change" as "the old ways haven't worked. They're not so concerned about labels. They're much more interested in good, stable, positive government which is truthful and forthright in its dealings with the public."

It was for this reason VanderZalm promised his audience to deliver middle-ground voters -- even NDP voters -- the Socred fold.

He said his 15 years in politics, including appointment to "three tough ministries during tough times" had been a learning experience, but the "past three years as a private businessman have been the greatest time for picking up what people want."

The public is "alienated" by an "adversarial government."

"They're telling me that they felt the government wasn't 'my friend'. Instead of acting as the voice of the majority, government bureaucrats are bowing to minority pressure groups," said VanderZalm.

He said the "phenomenal" hundred-fold growth of the civil service was created unprecedented inflation, unemployment and taxes over the past 25 years.

"We mustn't go after the strong. We must allow the strong, small, young entrepreneur the

Investments in Expo paying off for pavilions

VANCOUVER - The seven Canadian provinces and two territories at Expo say their multi-million dollar investments are paying off. But visitor turnout has been disappointing for one province that decided to run a booth off-site.

Barry Mitchell, of the industry branch of the Manitoba department of industry, trade and technology, says the province's trade booth at the World Business Showcase at the Pan Pacific Hotel has attracted fewer than 150 people a day since Expo started.

"It's not numbers so much that we're worried about. We were hoping people would show up with their business hats on. That hasn't happened," Mitchell said.

The World Business Showcase was set up to enable provincial governments, companies and associations to promote business with the international business community. There are 36 participants.

Jim Stewart, with the trade branch of the Manitoba department of industry, trade and technology, said it was a "cabinet decision" not to have a pavilion at Expo, because it was too expensive.

Instead, the province set up a 37-square-metre booth, costing between $200,000 and $500,000, which showcases the wares and expertise of large and small manufacturers in Manitoba.

Mitchell said several Manitobans have visited the booth -- with varying reactions.

"I'm not at liberty to comment on whether we should have had a pavilion at Expo. So we ask the visitors to take their opinions to their elected representatives," he said.

Cape Breton Island also opted for a booth at the business showcase. Joan Matheson, manager of Enterprise Cape Breton, the federal development agency operating the booth, said it was the best way to solicit secondary business investment for the island.

Matheson said the location of the 4.5-by-nine-metre booth, behind some other displays, has resulted in little traffic -- about 40 people a day and slightly more on weekends.

She said the agency has received at least "24 legitimate inquiries" since Expo started, with queries on the textile industry, communications manufacturing, wood products and the export business.

"We have no regrets about not being at Expo. If we have one major business locating in Cape Breton as a result of this showcase, it would more than pay for it," she said.

Paul Theriault, with the New Brunswick deparment of tourism and recreation heritage, said the province "would have liked to be at Expo" but a lack of funds led provincial officials to veto the move.

Harold Barrett, Newfoundland's minister of tourism, could not be reached for comment.

Meanwhile, officials with provincial and territorial pavilions at Expo -- which cost between $4 million and $30 million to build and operate -- are reporting higher than projected attendance, long-term business benefits in industry and tourism and increased awareness of their areas.

Roland McCaffrey, assistant deputy-commissioner at the Yukon territory pavilion, said "results at Expo have been phenomenal."

"We anticipated doing 750,000 people over the course of the fair, but we've already done 500,000. We're eight weeks ahead of schedule."

He said the pavilion -- which cost $4.4 million -- is designed to promote tourism for the Yukon.

Boomerang came back

VANCOUVER - The Expo lost and found department has collected some interesting items since the exposition's opening. Notables include a beer barrel, a boomerang, undergarments, rain paraphernalia, and some 2,000 other odds and ends.

Want a pinisi?

VANCOUVER - Have you ever dreamed of being the proud owner of a Pinisi? This traditional, multi-purpose Indonesian sailing vessel -- currently under construction by Indonesian artisans in the Marine Plaza at Expo -- will be launched in late July, when she will join other ships of the world in the international harbor for the duration of the fair. And, after the exposition, she's for sale.

Business out to kill post office?

OTTAWA - The business community wants to kill the post office and feast on the corpse, says the Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

"There are many elements of the corporate sector who wish to see the post office fail to achieve its mandate to improve services and improve labor-management relations," the 23,000-member union's national executive board said last week.

"They would be only too happy to enter into a deregulated postal system in which lucrative profits will be made by delivering in the high-traffic areas while rural delivery is left to a shrunken public postal service."

The report, written by CUPW president Jean-Claude Parrot and other union leaders, was presented to about 400 delegates at a national union convention, CUPW's first in three years.

Arguing that the federal Tory government is "heavily biased in favor of private enterprise", the report says postal workers and users must join to save Canada Post.

The $3-billion Crown agency has been given two years by the government to wipe out its $243-million annual deficit.

The deadline, imposed in February, came on the heels of a private-sector review urging that profitable postal services be turned over to private businessmen by 1990 unless the debt-ridden agency can balance its books in the interim.

What will happen to Canada Post if it fails to meet the government's even tougher 1988-89 deadline has not been made clear.

The private-sector review group, chaired by Toronto businessman Alan Marchment, said the post office should be reduced to a courier of last resort, performing only money-losing subsidized services such as rural delivery, if it fails to wipe out its debts.

CUPW argued Monday the post office should be allowed to compete more openly with private business and encouraged to increase rather than decrease postal service to the public.

"We know there is immense public support for improvements and expansion of postal services," the union report said. "In this area, the interests of the public and of postal workers are totally complimentary.

"The task before us is to mobilize the public will in support of specific measures which will be of mutual benefit."

The union said the attitude of the government toward the post office is evident in many other areas of public policy.

"This same government, which generously provides hundreds of millions of dollars to wealthy uninsured (bank) depositors, spares no effort to attack the pensions of the elderly, family allowances and public services provided to workers," it argued.

"All of these attacks are made in the name of becoming more internationally competitive, as if there is no alternative means of developing our own economy.

"It is clear that CUPW must place greater emphasis on the need to mobilize politically to elect pro-worker governments. Deregulation, privatization, incomes policies, all of these political issues have a direct effect on CUPW members.

"Our allies are not to be found in the corporate boardrooms. Our allies are to be found throughout the ranks of working people, be they poor, elderly, organized or unorganized, employed or unemployed."

FLYING HIGH — Mindy Cohn is a part-time UCLA student and a full-time actress. She plays Natalie Green on "The Facts of Life," and her first feature film, "The Boy Who Could Fly," opens Aug. 5. "The Facts of Life" airs Saturdays on NBC.

Cohn has good reasons for loving school

By Lynn Hoogenboom

Mindy Cohn doesn't exactly come from a classic show-biz background.

"My mom is a lawyer, and my dad is vice president of a paint company," she says. "The only thing remotely in the entertainment business is that my step-grandfather wrote "Baby Face" for my grandmother. I don't know. My family's real normal.

"Well, not normal," she amends. "But we're definitely typical."

Cohn, who plays the wise-cracking Natalie on "The Facts of Life," which airs Saturdays on NBC, was discovered in that most mundane of all places — school.

Well, not just any school. It was, in Cohn's words, "a very uppity all-girls private school." Back in 1979, Charlotte Rae was doing some background research for a new series on which she was going to play a housemother at an exclusive girl's school. She visited the school that Cohn attended and apparently saw something.

"I don't know what happened," says Cohn. "To this day, I've asked her and she says," Cohn's voice rises in a mimic, " 'I don't know.'

"She just said, 'I'm going to write a part for you in my show.' The next day, I got a call, and the week after that we were filming the first episode."

So Cohn, now 20, owes it all to school, which may be one reason that she claims a certain fondness for the place. "I'm one of those weird people who just loves school," she says. She's presently a part-time student at UCLA. "The way I'm going now, I'm not going to graduate until I'm about 30," she admits, "but it doesn't matter because at least I'm doing something."

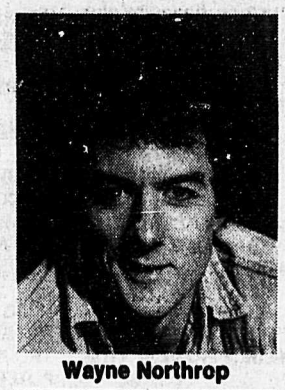
Distracting her from her studies are "Facts of Life," which is gearing up for its eighth season this week, and Cohn's first movie, "The Boy Who Could Fly," which opens on Aug. 5. "I'm sort of the comic relief," she says.

Meanwhile, she is majoring in communications and minoring in business at UCLA — just in case. "I'm really interested in making this a long career," she says. "But you have to be so careful. I mean it's rough. I know so many talented people out there who haven't gotten anywhere. And then I know some really untalented people who are major stars. I want something to fall back on."

Wayne Northrop conquers daytime, returns to 'Dynasty'

By Constance Pace

Wayne Northrop has always been unorthodox. For three years he was daytime television's most popular male star, as Roman Brady on "Days of Our Lives." No stereotypical soap pretty boy, he attracted a magnitude of fanatical female fans on the strength of quick wit, warmth and overall charm. But Northrop walked away from his incredibly successful role and refused to be lured back, no matter how hard NBC tried.



Wayne Northrop

"I'm an actor," he shrugs, "and that's what I want to do. To me acting is creating and developing in different roles — trying different things and different challenges. I'm not the kind of actor who gets squared away in one type of thing and will do it the rest of my life."

Well, that's half true. On Sept. 24, Northrop will be returning to "Dynasty" as Michael Cullen, the libidinous chauffeur he played on that show during its first season. After his "Dynasty" stint ended, he joined "Days of Our Lives" and became a daytime phenomenon. And he's probably the first daytime star to harness his popularity and use it to a nighttime casting advantage. "I'm sure that had something to do with my return," he says. "The fans are the bottom line in this business, which is a game of numbers."

Northrop says that Michael will return "under different circumstances," but he claims to know little else about what his character will be doing and with whom. "I don't think he's a chauffeur anymore," he laughs.

"Dynasty," of course, has a very different cast from when Michael was last in Denver. "Of course, there's John (Forsythe) and Linda (Evans), both of whom I really like," says Northrop. "But I'll really miss Pea Soup." Pea Soup? "Pamela Sue Martin. She was really fun to work with."

Northrop grew up in the small town of Sumner, Wash., and did nighttime guest stints before his first stint on "Dynasty." That was followed by his role in "Days of Our Lives," which was followed in turn by starring roles in the TV movies "You, the Jury" and "The Bill Johnson Story." Northrop is married to actress Lynn Herring, who's fast becoming a daytime phenomenon herself, as psychopathic librarian Lucy Coe on "General Hospital."

MARQUEE - FILM REVIEW

By J.T. YURKO

Labyrinth sorely lacks decent plot

Starring David Bowie, Jennifer Connelly, Toby Froud. ★ ★

Producer George Lucas and director Jim Henson would seem to be a natural combination, but their first joint effort, "Labyrinth," falls far short of expectations. It is boring and repetitive and contains little other than a nonsensical parade of Henson characters and not-so-special Lucas effects. Fantasy-adventure movies such as "Dragonslayer" or "The Legend" have not fared well at the box office, and "Labyrinth" isn't likely to turn the tide.

"Labyrinth" is not so much a maze as it is an amazing compendium of Henson's talent at making stuffed animals come alive. Sarah, a girl on the edge of womanhood, wishes the goblins would come and take away her crying little brother. Along come the goblins, little Toby is whisked off, and a repentant Sarah sets off in their wake. To save her brother, Sarah must cross the labyrinth around the castle of the Goblin king, played by David Bowie.

During her ghoulish odyssey, she meets Henson's creations. They are too numerous to mention individually, and they come and go with such blinding speed that they eventually blur together. A few, such as "Hoggle," a cowardly gnome with a heart of gold, "Didymus," a doglike creature who thinks he's Lancelot, and "Ludo," an oversized, dimwitted version of Animal from "Sesame Street," see her to her final destination.

David Bowie makes an impotent wicked wizard of the West. He breaks into song once or twice, something no other character does in the film. But not only are these half-hearted attempts out of place, they are inadvertently funny.

The moral of this fable has something to do with fantasy versus reality and the responsibilities of being an adult, but kids of all ages will have a lot of trouble finding it beneath all the fuzzy rags.

To be fair, Henson's artistry is magnificent, and the film is a technical marvel. If only Henson could have conjured up a script! Then "Labyrinth" might have been more art than artifice.

ALBUM REVIEW

Off-beat dance pop and bruising honky tonk

By KURT LANGMANN

Colourbox
(4AD-Polygram Records)

Although Colourbox features the varied talents of vocalist Lorita Grahame, it is primarily the creation of musicians and songwriters Steve and Martyn Young.

Style-wise it is a studio pop production but the Youngs don't hammer you over the head with one groove -- they throw loops and curves. Percolating funk of Inside Informer gives way to an oldie, You Keep Me Hanging On which sounds like the Supremes. Arena is a stand-out cut, and has deservedly gained the trio radio airplay.

Guitars, Cadillacs, etc., etc.
Dwight Yoakam
(Reprise-WEA Records)

Young Yoakam has it made, with his good looks, great songs, a honky-tonking voice and attitude, and one hot backing band. You can't call him an original; he's to country what George Thorogood is to the blues, a great entertainer but a traditionalist, or revivalist. But while Yoakam is derivative of, say Johnny Horton or Merle Haggard, he still can write some decent songs.

The cover songs, Honky Tonk Man and Heartaches By The Number are well-suited to his voice, which often threatens to break into a yodel, and gives the listener a reference point to assess the fellow by. Ring Of Fire was not a good choice, though.

The other seven tunes are all original and there's not a duff among them. They range from the bruising honky tonk of the title song to the bluegrass-tinged gospel of Bury Me and Miner's Prayer.

Bury Me is a duet with Lone Justice's Maria McKee. There's plenty of fine fiddling, pedal steel, acoustic and electric guitar playing on this record, too.

Roberto plays your kind of song

With his six octave voice and songs of Roger Whittaker, Elton John, Carpenters, Beatles, Trini Lopez and Kenny Rogers, he will either serenade you at your table, or he will get you to sing along, clap and generally feel good. His name is Roberto, and the place you will hear him is at Mariachis in Langley.

Roberto, a seasoned performer, has played in Birch Bay for a solid year and a half and previous to that, eight years of playing the circuit in Calgary, in lounges, bars, restaurants as well as private parties and hospitals. He was also a big success on the cruise ships along the Pacific coast.

Roberto Federico Sheward was born in Patzcuaro in Mexico in 1955. He has travelled back and forth between Mexico and Canada from a young age. He has kept up his Spanish and has a variety of Spanish and Mexican songs on his repertoire. He also plays several instruments including drums, trumpet, guitar and keyboards.

He will be entertaining you for your dining pleasure at Mariachis, on Industrial Ave., in Langley every Thursday, Friday and Saturday night, from 7 to 11 p.m. For reservations call 530-3031 or just come in, but plan to spend a few hours there for Roberto will totally capture you and carry you off for a memorable evening.

On Monday, the new Miss Universe will be unveiled

By Denise Gorga

If cable mogul Ted Turner hasn't fueled international ardor over the Goodwill Games (ending Sunday, July 20 on TBS and independent stations), perhaps 80-plus pairs of gams on CBS will do the trick.

Christie Fichtner

The 35th "Miss Universe Pageant" airs Monday, July 21 from Panama City, with pageant staple Bob Barker (in his 18th year of helping those lasses "Come on down" the walkway) and Mary Frann (Bob's wife on "Newhart") debuting as hostess. Proving that pulchritude is not restricted to the free world, representatives include Eastern bloc contestants from Poland and Yugoslavia. But competitors will still be judged in those three classic categories: evening gown, swimsuit and the ever-enlightening personal interview.

Remember: You're rooting for Miss USA, Christie Fichtner, our fair-haired Texas gal.

If you're not into gawking at long-legged beauties, ABC's Sunday, July 20 bill views extremities with a different twist: dismemberment. "Jaws," the film that left viewers afraid to step into the bathtub during the summer of 1975, returns. The super shark flexes his fins on prime time and shares a bit of the limelight with Roy Scheider as the police chief, Robert Shaw as the shark hunter and Richard Dreyfuss as an existential ichthyologist.

Deighton is poet of spy tale

By BRENDA ROSS

Foremost in his field, Len Deighton has been described as "the poet of the spy story." In this trilogy, Berlin Game, Mexican Set, and London Match, Deighton has spy Bernard Sampson encompass the world in pursuit of his quarry. Also specializing in the field of fiction espionage are Ken Follet, Frederick Forsyth and Clive Cussler. There is a bookmark listing other authors writing spy stories available at the library. If a particular book is not available at Aldergrove we can request it from another branch.

On July 18 at 2 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. there will be a film feature in the Aldergrove Centre mall sponsored by the Fraser Valley regional library. The name of the movie is "Escape to Witch Mountain" and is recommended for school-aged children. No registration required.

In connection the Passport to Reading club, the library is having a mystery book contest. There are two categories, kindergarten to grade 3, and grades 4 to 7. Children will match clues to book titles at their reading level and the first correct entries drawn on August 6 will receive a paperback copy of one of the books. Entry forms are available at the library. For further information call 856-6415.

Nancy Frangione hopes to play Cecile to the fullest

Nancy Frangione

Anyone who's been a longtime fan of "Another World" is familiar with actress Nancy Frangione, who plays villainess Cecile De Poulignac.

When Frangione left the show a year and a half ago (she took a hiatus from her acting career), all the show's fans were dismayed. Since the beginning of June, those disappointed fans have been cheered by the resurrection of Cecile (who's now the queen of Tanquir), and the return of Frangione.

"I needed to relax," says Frangione when she is asked why she took a break from "Another World." "I needed to take stock of my life. I had lost track of where I was going, and the time off helped me to recommit myself to acting."

Since nothing is ever understated with Cecile, it seemed only natural that she would re-enter the story line by kidnapping her former lover, Cass Winthrop (portrayed by Stephen Schnetzer). Cecile shanghaied Cass and took him to her private island where she had some very specific plans for him.

"Cecile has returned for one reason," says Frangione. "She wants to have a child, and she's made sure that Cass will be the father of that child. Cecile needs an heir for political reasons."

Frangione shares a longtime friendship with Schnetzer and their co-star, Anna Stuart (Donna Love).

"Part of the reason I came back to 'Another World' was to be able to work with Stephen and Anna again," says Frangione. "They're both good friends of mine."

Why does Frangione like her "Another World" character so much?

"She's gutsy," says Frangione. "Name it, and she does it. She's also afraid, but I think she conquers her fears. She's not just a survivor, she's a tiger, and a tiger's much more interesting to play. I care about Cecile. I want to play her to the fullest. I've brought some of myself to her, too, in her wit and in her humor."

When Frangione isn't working on "Another World," she likes to spend time with her actor-husband, Chris Rich (formerly Sandy Cory), whom she met when she portrayed his on-screen wife.

"We spend a lot of time together, and we like it," says Frangione. "We actually have to work at spending time with other people."

Comedy at Flying Club

VANCOUVER - Advance tickets for "The Best of Second City" and the Vancouver Theatresports League's "Leave it to Weasel", are now on sale.

The shows take place on the Expo site in The Flying Club, a 260-seat restaurant-cabaret at the Pacific Station complex, and the ticket price includes a full-course dinner as well as the performance.

"The Best of Second City" (also known as "One Million Cheers B.C.") features the comic talents of members of Toronto's Second City and three local performers who auditioned and won the chance to perform with the renowned irreverant satirical troupe. The Second City performs Sundays at 5 p.m., Tuesday through Thursday at 6 p.m., and Fridays and Saturdays at 6 p.m. and 10:15 p.m.

The Vancouver Theatresports League, whose special brand of theatrical lunacy has kept Vancouver audiences in stitches for several years, is presenting a 1950's satire called "Leave it to Weasel". It runs every Monday at 6 p.m.

Tickets are avilable in advance from all VTC-CBO outlets (604) 280-4444; and will also be available at The Flying Club Box Office (604) 668-2300. Advance tickets holders will have access to the Expo site 90 minutes prior to the dinner show starting time. Cost for "The Best of Second City" dinner and show is $32.75; "Leave it to Weasel" dinner and show is $22.95.

"The Best of Second City" and "Leave it to Weasel" will run for the duration of Expo 86.

LANGLEY - Bill VanderZalm huddles with reporters and cameramen at a Sunday garden party. He asked for a shovel first, but Bill VanderZalm settled on a knife as he cut up NDP leader Bob Skelly's riding first in a cake designed in the shape of the province.

opportunity to really make it happen. We'll see prosperity like never before, if we reward people for doing things right, not penalize them.

"The candidates all are good people in the running," continued VanderZalm, "but the first ballot is very important. We not only have to win over the old guard, but also the NDP."

He also made a veiled attack against Bud Smith when he said "We must have a truly provincial party. Some forces are trying to make us an extension of a federal party and we must fight it."

He concluded with a call for free trade with the U.S.A. "Without it, we'll have a massive problem on our hands ... an economy similar to a South American country.

"We mustn't let the soft wood exports be traded off as well. We all know that if the shakes and shingles were made in Kenora, Ontario this would never have happened."

In a brief interview, before he was zipped off to another Valley gathering, he said, "Gracie (McCarthy) and I have an understanding. We'll be working together at the convention, and depending on how the first ballot turns out, she'll move her people over to me or I'll move mine over to her."

Not everyone present was a supporter as the party included a number of "tourists" like township aldermen Muriel Arnason and Carol Gran, among others.

One skeptic, who asked not to be identified, predicted that VanderZalm's campaign would stall after a good first ballot result. "He doesn't have any growth potential among delegates."

Another suggested that it was all or nothing for VanderZalm. "He won't settle for a cabinet post. He's already been there and it was a frustrating experience for him -- and he never really accomplished anything as a minister. If he can't be on top -- the premier -- he'd rather go back to his business."

Mostly Valley

VANCOUVER - An even total of 1300 Socreds will choose B.C.'s next premier. Social Credit officials say that's how many delegates have been selected at meetings in the 50 provincial constituencies. They'll head to Whistler later this month to pick a successor to Premier Bennett. Forty-one of the 50 constituency associations have been alloted the minimum 25 voting delegates. Central Fraser Valley will have the most delegates. Forty people will represent that riding at the leadership convention.

Full time job

Searle warned that there is more to being a local politician than simply attending a public meeting once a week.

"It is a full time job," said Searle, a former Langley city mayor.

"There is more to being on council than attending one meeting a week," said Nundal. "But that is (not) what they (the public) are told."

Nundal did not say who would be proffering this advice to potential aldermanic candidates.

In the end, Arnason-Gran won. Fowler lost.

"How long have you waited for that, Ald. Arnason?" questioned Gran.

"A long, long time," sighed Arnason.

Teddy guns

MORGAN HILL, Calif. - Teddy bears may be added to police cars here to help soften hardened criminals and calm frightened children, officials say.

"I don't particularly care for guns," said Mayor Lorraine Barke, who proposed the idea to city council. "The teddy bear is a positive piece of equipment."

The council has tentatively approved a measure that would put a teddy bear in every patrol car and unmarked vehicle in Morgan Hill, located about 95 kilometres south of San Francisco.

Admiral appointed head of development office

VICTORIA - Retired rear-admiral Gordon Edwards has been appointed executive director in the office of industrial development in Ottawa. Office will provide support to British Columbia industries in their efforts to increase participation in Ottawa-based federal government procurement.

Edwards has spent over 37 years in the Canadian navy retiring early in 1985. He began his career as a naval aviator, subsequently commanding three ships and two squadrons. From 1982-84 Edwards commanded the Maritime Forces Pacific in Esquimalt, where he managed a command budget of over $200-million. His final position in the service was a secondment to external affairs as coordinator of the defence evaluation group. Leaving the service he formed his own consulting firm in Ottawa.

Buckle up!

LANGLEY - Beginning this Monday, RCMP traffic patrols warn they will mount a week-long seatbelt enforcement campaign.

Special emphasis will be placed on child seating restraint systems, ensuring they are installed and utilized in the proper manner.

"It has been proven beyond any shadow of a doubt that the proper use of seat belts saves lives and reduces injuries," said Sgt. Andy Prendergast.

Why do students drop out?

TORONTO - If a person goes to a party and is not greeted at the door or talked to, chances are they'll leave.

For the same kind of reason, Canada's university students have for years become discouraged and left school before graduating, says University of Guelph counsellor Andre Auger.

"If we make kids line up for hours to register, hand them forms to fill in, don't introduce them to their roommate, don't explain the library computer and their prof greets them with a list of course requirements, why should we be surprised if they feel like leaving?"

Studies indicate universities in the United States lose about 50 percent of their students before graduation.

"Canadian research shows it's probably the same here," says Guelph sociology professor Sid Gilbert.

Half the first-year casualties don't last six weeks while 80 percent of dropouts have the marks to keep going, says Gilbert, who has been awarded a $27,000 federal grant to study the problem.

Guelph and York universities are both studying why students drop out.

Toronto's York has discovered it loses "an alarming number of its best students, and most particularly, its A students," says a preliminary study.

Of those who leave, it is not known whether it's because university was too tough, too scary or too expensive. In any case, says Gilbert, "it's time we find out."

Guelph vice-president Howard Clark says attitudes are changing: "In the past year, a number of universities have become more concerned with what we can do to improve the environment for the student, how we can best enhance the climate for learning."

Since Canada's university-age population will decline until the end of the century as the baby boom levels off, universities want to keep their students.

"A new idea is kicking up dust on campuses everywhere -- that maybe the onus is not just on the student to cut it, but also on the university to deliberately help the student do well and enjoy learning," he says.

David Lee Roth is the same as ever — but more so

By Barton Weiss

"Diamond" David Lee Roth is back. Boy, is he back!

His latest video, "Yankee Girl," is definitive Dave, and it contains nearly every element found in his conceptual clips in the oh-so-long intro. That includes the wide-angle-lens shots, the fat people, the bimbos in bathing suits, and the usual cast of misfits. After Roth enters dressed as a Zulu, the clip moves into the definitive Dave-TV mode.

The opening of the faked live section is a copy of the famous leaping shots in Van Halen's "Panama." Indeed, this whole clip seems to affirm that Dave doesn't need Van Halen to excel on stage and can do it himself.

He even out does his live act. The sexual innuendoes and fanny shots go well beyond anything that's been seen before.

Morrison sells out Expo

Van Morrison's appearance this Monday at Expo Theatre has long been sold out, but fans without tickets can take solace in his forthcoming album, "No Guru, No Method, No Teacher," and the first single "Ivory Tower." Also among the tracks is an intriguing title, "Here Comes The Knight" - an obvious reference to his big hit with Them in the '60s, "Here Comes The Night." It'll be interesting to hear what he has to say in that tune.

Some of the noteable musicians appearing on the disc are the Dream Academy's Kate St. John on oboe and cor anglais, Chris Michie on guitar, Jeff Labes on piano-synths and David Hayes on bass.

Morrison, whom Bob Seger recently referred to as "the master himself" is currently on a limited 15-city tour.

Remember Liberty

As American celebrates the 100th anniversary of the Statue of Liberty, the USA Network is celebrating America with a new feature called "USA Minutes." Begun last month, "USA Minutes" will feature 50 famous Americans speaking about what America means to them — in a one-minute format between programs.

The scheduled speakers include Gregory Peck, Mickey Mantle, Sen. Ted Kennedy, Dr. Benjamin Spock, Pat Boone, Lionel Hampton, Burt Bacharack, Jesse Jackson, Billy Graham, Gloria Steinem, Daniel P. Moynihan and Malcolm Forbes.

It's early to rise as Andrew and Sarah tie the knot

By Amanda Bruce

Did you thrill to every detail of Lady Di's wedding to Prince Charles five years ago? Did you ooh and ahh over the new princess's wedding dress, sigh over the pomp and circumstance, and dream about the life of the happily-ever-afters?

Sarah and Andrew

Well it's time to do it again.

On July 23, Prince Andrew and Sarah Ferguson will be married, and it's royal wedding time all over again. It will be a near repeat from the last royal wedding: the procession from Buckingham Palace through the streets of London, the ceremony at Westminster Abbey, the crowds, the romance — even the time!

That's right. It's another early morning send-off on this side of the Atlantic.

ASK ANNABELLE

Dear Annabelle,

Here is a problem. Can you help? I want to get married in the registry office but my parents want a church wedding with a reception and all the trimmings. They can't afford it and neither can we. I told my mother I would write you a letter and she said she would go along with what you advised. You have to be fair because she is reading this. I hope you can help.

Signed: Dorothy M.

Dear Dorothy,

The choice is yours and your future husband's. I'm sure your parents will understand that whatever you decide to do, it is your big day. Go for the registry office and then have a reception on your golden anniversary. That way you really will have something to celebrate. Good luck for your future.

Dear Annabelle,

Well I see by the clock on the wall that summer is here again and our little kiddies are out of school. You know how I can tell? Maybe it's because I am 74 years old and have suddenly got the smarts or maybe it's because I have to dance around all those bicycles that are strewn helter skelter in the front of the bank and the mall doorways. I can jig around so well now I should get myself a job as a dancer in Chorus Line. If the stores can't put in bicycle racks then they should ban bicycles on the sidewalks and fine the little beggars if they keep doing it. Say something about this and you will be doing all us old-timers a favor.

Signed: Hank.

Dear Hank,

Thanks for your letter. As an almost old-timer myself I have noticed the bicycles littering the sidewalks. So a reminder to parents to tell their children of the danger to people entering a store over the wheels of carelessly parked bikes. Store owners should also police their store fronts and doorways.

If anyone sees a child leaving a bike where it interferes with pedestrians I think a word to the child might work. Most children take kindly to a reminder. If you still have problems let me know, maybe we could form an Astaire-Rogers dance team and tour the Fraser Valley.

Hot off my last letter from a close relative in England:

Where did Napoleon keep his armies?

Up his sleevies.

And now we can tell that 17 years of education has finally paid off.

The dangers of marijuana use

By BILL McCONNACHIE

Marijuana, also known as "pot", "grass", or "weed", is the greenish-brown dried leaves, small stems and flowering tops of the plant Cannabis sativa. Hashish and hash oil are processed, more powerful forms of marijuana.

Marijuana is usually smoked in cigarettes called "joints", in pipes or in water pipes called "bongs". The effects of the drug differ for different people, often depending on the mood they are in or their expectations of the effects.

Almost immediately after smoking the drug, most people experience a euphoric feeling, similar to being mildly drunk. Some of the more noticeable physical effects include a reddening of the eyes, a more rapid heart beat and often an increase in appetite.

Noticeable mental effects include an altered sense of time and difficulty in concentrating. Short term memory is affected. A person on marijuana may forget what happened a few minutes or even seconds after it happened. Psychomotor function is affected, delaying reaction time.

In the early 1970s, very little research was available on the biological effects of marijuana. Today there is growing scientific evidence that marijuana use may cause lower levels of male and female hormones, and a temporary loss of fertility for both men and women. Marijuana smoke can be much more harmful to the lungs than tobacco smoke. A marijuana user will inhale more deeply and hold the smoke longer in the lungs. Increased irritation and damage result.

The psychological effects of regular marijuana use are just as serious a concern as the biological effects. Studies show that regular marijuana users often experience apathy, lack of motivation and impaired judgement. The chronic user, however, is usually unaware of any change of personality.

Known as a worker

By MUN HOPE

Centred in the magnificent natural surroundings of the lower mainland, the spirit of Expo 86 continues to spill over into every community in this province.

Meanwhile, local residents paused for another celebration last Thursday afternoon in downtown Langley.

It was the 46th birthday of Robert Wenman, parliamentary secretary to the federal minister of national defence.

He was born on June 19, 1940 in Saskatchewan - the son of a mechanic.

"Wenman is known in Ottawa as a hard worker and having a capacity to think," said Ottawa columnist Jamie Lamb.

"Wenman has been a teacher," Lamb continued. "He understands the issue because he's been on both sides of it."

He is the provincial MP responsible for educating the B.C. business community in the art of doing business with the federal government, and he opened government's doors so that B.C. businesses have been received with something other than the traditional frosty shoulder, Lamb noted.

Western Report of May 19, 1986 edition, devoted an entire page to Wenman's successful efforts to get a fair share of federal procurement for the west generally and for British Columbia particularly.

Thus 35 senior representatives from 15 federal departments came to the Harrison Hot Springs resort to get acquainted, in an attempt to remedy the situation.

It was Jim Hume of the Victoria Times-Colonist, who noted that Wenman was a member of the legislative assembly from 1966 to 1972.

"When he sat in the provincial house, he was its youngest member - and earned quick recognition as a potential leader," said Hume.

He was only 25 years old at the time.

An aggressive backbencher, he introduced legislation to protect agricultural land near urban areas while respecting the rights of farmers to the full market value of their land.

He fought to protect wildlife habitat. He pressed vigorously for proper film classification.

He introduced legislation to reduce the provincial age of majority from 21 to 19.

Observers cannot help but notice hundreds of young people surrounding him in his activities and various local projects.

"He is not only experienced and intelligent, but he really cares," they said enthusiastically.

Wenman has travelled widely on behalf of world relief and development agencies. He is one of Canada's most accomplished organizers. In 1972, he became an alderman in Surrey.

From 1974 until now, he represented this constituency in the House of Commons. In the last election on September 4, 1984, he was returned to Parliament by a majority of 16,000 votes; and was appointed parliamentary secretary to the minister of national defence in November, 1984.

He attended four universities, including the University of Saskatchewan, Florida State University, Redlands in California and Western Washington State.

He began teaching high school at age 19 after completing teachers' college in Saskatoon.

This year, he also celebrated his first 20 years of service in three levels of government.

Bob Wenman has a high purpose in life. He is not interested in gossip. He is so busy working for the common good, that he has no time to listen to anything that may be detrimental to another person's character.

He absolutely refuses name-calling; and objects to any attempt to run down someone else.

He has much work to do, for the betterment of society. In this respect, he has won a moral victory.

His wife, Donna, agrees wholeheartedly with him; and works with him as a team.

They want to show what this great province with its vast resources, can accomplish, with everybody working together and building together as one great team.

Mennonites return from South America

WINNIPEG - Several thousand Mennonites who left Canada almost 70 years ago to seek cultural and religious freedom in South and Central America are now returning, says the director of the Mennonite Studies Centre at the University of Winnipeg.

"They came to the conclusion that there was no way they could preserve their identity in Central American countries and so the reverse movement started," George Epp said in a recent interview.

Epp said an estimated 6,000 to 8,000 Mennonites have returned to Canada and of those, between 500 and 1,000 have come back to Manitoba. Those who had settled in Paraguay have resettled in the southwestern Manitoba communities of Winkler and Altona and those who were living in Mexico have returned to Aylmer, Ont.

Epp said Mennonites originally came to Canada and Manitoba in the 1920s with the understanding that they would have freedom of religion and the right to run their own school system in German.

However, conservative Mennonites soon felt pressured by the federal and provincial government's desire for a centralized school system.

"Obviously a Canadian school system also meant English," said Epp.

"One segment of the Mennonite community felt it could not live with this; it interpreted it as infringing on its rights."

Those people left and headed to Paraguay, where about 14,000 Mennonites still live, and to Bolivia, which has an estimated Mennonite population of 8,000 to 10,000.

Although Mexico quickly agreed not to interfere in schools and granted Mennonites exemption from military service, the Mexican government thought they could quickly be assimilated.

"(But) only five years after they had arrived in Mexico, the Mexican government changed its mind and began to talk about assimilation and military service, just making hints that eventually it would come," Epp said.

Those who once fled Manitoba began to spread out from Mexico looking for more freedom.

However, Epp said the story began to repeat itself "again and again because you cannot run away from society, not in the 20th century."

The first trickle back to Manitoba came in the 1940s. Some Mennonites had held on to their Canadian citizenship and their children, although born outside Canada, were also recognized as Canadian citizens.

Isbrand Hiebert of the Mennonite Central Committee said he has seen a new wave of former Manitoba Mennonites returning to the province.

"One problem that these people really have is when they came back, their children almost overnight adopted Canadian standards, Canadian way of life and language," said Hiebert, who helps newcomers relocate.

In an attempt to bridge some of the cultural gap, community member Abe Warkentin began a special newspaper in 1977. Die Mennonitische Post, a twice-monthly publication with a circulation of 6,000 in both Canada and South America, is filled with news of Mennonites in both parts of the world.

Recently, some of Manitoba's 70,000 Mennonites -- one of the largest concentrations of Mennonites in the world -- have started to celebrate the South American culture brought back to the province.

Last year, a Paraguay festival held on Canada Day drew 6,500 people.

The property survey

(NC) — More and more people are asking — why do I need one? — and when should I have it done?

Property surveys are usually done for the benefit of the buyer. The original survey is carried out with the construction of the house. But over time, improvements are made to the property — fences, pools, garden sheds and so on. Additions to the house can take place. As well, certain easements — that is the right to access the property for telephone, hydro, etc. may be added. The end result is that the property itself can be altered in such a way that it may not conform to new zoning requirements, or certain structures may encroach on neighbouring properties.

Remember, a property survey is not a title search carried out by your lawyer. The title search only provides proof that the vendor or seller owns the property and is in a legal position to sell it. The property survey is a description of the physical make-up of the property that is being transferred or sold.

Gaming rules tightened but few seem happy

VANCOUVER - The rules of legal gambling are being tightened in British Columbia, but few people seem happy about it.

In recent years, casino games and bingo parlors have gone big-time, with money wagered in slick, well-organized operations with professional equipment and plush surroundings, mostly hotels.

The beneficiaries were charities -- a term the government admits isn't clearly defined -- along with gambling promoters, suppliers and the betting public.

But there was a dilemma. While British Columbia welcomed fees for gambling licences issued, it took increasing criticism for a laissez-faire attitude that resulted in the gambling business expanding unchecked.

The ambiguous position is changing. Last week, new rules to govern the gambling took effect in the province.

Inscriptions date 2600 years

JERUSALEM - The discovery of a treasure trove including the oldest biblical inscriptions ever found has shed new light on life in Jerusalem during the first Jewish kingdom, 2,600 years ago.

The inscriptions were scratched onto two silver charms found in a burial cave among a wealth of jewelry and pottery, said Michal Dayagi-Mendels, a curator at the Israel museum, where the treasure has gone on display.

The trove of about 1,000 items was the largest collection found in Jerusalem since archeologists began probing the city's ancient past 120 years ago. It was hidden from looters and grave robbers by a cave-in, said Dayagi-Mendels.

Nine caves were hewn into a hillside across the Hinnom valley from the walls of Jerusalem's Old City, about 800 metres from where the biblical temple stood. Most of the burial chambers had been stripped completely, and a few contained shards that looters left as valueless, said Gabriel Barkay, the Tel Aviv archeologist who led the excavation.

The charms, thin pieces of pure silver rolled up like scrolls and worn around the neck, were found in 1979 but the inscriptions were deciphered only this year, Barkay said.

Parts of the text were missing, but enough was found to identify it as the blessing of the high priests from the Book of Numbers, Barkay said during a preview of the exhibition.

The full text reads: "The Lord bless you and keep you. The Lord make his face shine upon you and be gracious unto you. The Lord lift up his countenance upon you and grant you peace."

The inscriptions date back to the 7th century BC, predating by 400 years the Dead Sea Scrolls which had been the earliest known biblical texts, Barkay said.

He said the inscription, scratched into the silver in an ancient Hebrew script that has not been used for about 2,500 years, supported the notion that the prayer was one of the earliest parts of the Bible.

PRIZE BOOKS NOW OUT

Fall Fair time is here soon

By FLORA GREENOUGH

The Aldergrove Agricultural Association and the Aldergrove Star take pride in presenting the all new 1986 Fall Fair book. Now is the time to look through your copy and get your entries ready for the annual fair. The competition is stiff, but very stimulating. Last year we had over 1,600 entries and this year we have added many new categories. Our fair book is the first new change that the public will see for this year, but not the last. Starting this week and continuing to opening day, I will be introducing the various attractions at the fair.

This past week has been one of great excitement for the members; as not only did I get word that the fair book was ready for the press; but the long awaited all new, all Canadian Cook Book arrived. Both these books have proved worth waiting for. The cook book has something that really will be great for all who enter their cooking skills. What the judges look for in all sections of baking, canning, plus helpful hints throughout the book. At this time may I thank all the business people who have helped make our fair book what it is; without you the book would not have the Aldergrove flavor of 1986.

Our commercial spaces this year are full and here are the first of the many who will be in attenance.

Lund's Lites - Have candles galore in every color and shape imaginable. Any and all accessories for candles and table settings are available. If you have a favorite picture, you can have it mounted on a beautifully decorated candle for a special gift.

Valley Travel - One of our local businesses will be there to answer any questions you might have about your next trip. You might even wish to make arrangements while you visit the fair.

Royal Canadian Legion - Will be there, with information concerning what the modern Legion does in our community and does for our vets. It will give the general public a chance to meet some of the members, and obtain answers to any questions pertaining to joining this organization.

Hydro-Culture - The art of growing plants without earth; this fascinating way of growing plants is clean, odorless and new. There will be demonstrations and booklets and again answers to any and all questions pertaining to this new way of growing.

Next week, I'll cover some crafts and more interesting people you'll meet at the fair. Until then; the window in the mall has been changed, and due to a few comments on the doll house, the roof has been left off so you can now look into it.

Enriching experience

By DENNIS RANKIN

OTTER - The Painstoppers will appear at the PNE during 4-H week in late August. Following last Thursday's regional competition, second place finishers Bryan and Michael Thorne will represent the Fraser Valley along with Chilliwack Holstein's John Dick and Doug Goertzen.

Ten teams - two from each of the five districts in the region - staged an evening of 4-H demonstrations at the Evergreen hall in Chilliwack. The team from Otter Lamb gave relief for those pains in the back and their exercises earned second place behind the highly topical overview of cardio-pulmonary resuscitation given by the Chilliwack pair.

The panel of judges - Bryan Cruikshank, Eileen Jacob and Audrey Martin - awarded honorable mention to the Newton 4-H team of Chris Cox and Janice Evans. They had demonstrated the art of cutting and gluing paper to create a 3-D picture. Steve Martin and Andrew Terpstra from Surrey Beef gave a whole new outlook to decorating the Christmas tree. In a similar vein, Denise Allen and Glynis Heather of the Otter Horse club weathered a number of calamities and created some delightful snowmen that won't melt.

Two teams from the Maple Ridge Beef club crossed the river to represent the north shore. Lesley Mason and Sheila Sebastian showed how quickly a fur coat for a cabbage patch doll could be put together. Donna and Laura Wynnyk tempted even the calorie counters in the audience with their cheesecake creation. Erika and Karen Schulz, on the other hand, demonstrated terrariums for those without green thumbs or time to care for the conventional garden. This Abbotsford Beef club team was joined by a team from Sumas Holstein, as D.R. Vaandrager and Bill VanderKooi showed the protective gear worn by today's hockey players by 'Getting dressed for a hockey game.'

Although only two teams could be selected to proceed in competitions, it may be said that all those 4-H'ers were winners and demonstrated that there is much to be earned from 4-H experience. The program that evening may have been a conclusion to this facet of the 4-H year in the Fraser Valley. In fact, it was but a part of an ongoing enrichment for our youth.

WITH CLEARBROOK DAYS

Agrifair coming

MATSQUI - Agrifair '86 comes to the area July 17-20 with a huge schedule of family-oriented events at CFV Exhibition Park, Centennial Park and downtown Clearbrook.

Thursday and Friday events include 4-H achievement and judging of entries in horticulture, domestic science, arts and crafts. Animals, from draft horses and dairy cows to goats and "cutest animals" will also be shown.

These events and entertainers will be carried over to Saturday with other events to coincide throughout the community. Sunday's entertainment at Centennial Park will wrap up with fireworks at 10 p.m.

Admissions range from $2 to $5 at Exhibition Park. The park is on MacLure Road, near Trethewey Street.

EACH OFFICE INDEPENDENTLY OWNED AND OPERATED

LANGLEY - A lunch-time rally in front of Langley Memorial Hospital, Monday heard B.C. Nurses Union negotiator Pat Fraser lament the lack of a contract and nursing staff shortages in the province.

Fraser said shortages are due to a low rate of pay which is "driving people away from the profession. Surgery is cancelled, beds are closed and good hospital care is left to wither." She said nurses are forced to work consecutive shifts and through their breaks to make up for the shortage.

She said job action has been put on hold pending a meeting with industrial inquiry commissioner, Vince Ready, who was appointed by the Labor Ministry, Friday, to bring in a non-binding settlement between nurses and the Health Labor Relations Ass'n.

LMH nurse shop steward Kay Davidson said she represented 160 full-time nurses and another 82 part-timers, working three shifts, seven days a week. - Staff photo

GRITS WATCH

Pick the premier pool

ALDERGROVE - The local Liberal riding association has decided to use the Socred leadership contest as a fundraiser for their party.

Dave Allison is in charge of the 'Pick the Premier' pool. He says it is a modest fundraiser but also good fun. The contest allows participants to put down a couple of dollars and not only pick the winner but on which ballot they will win.

Bill VanderZalm at present seems to be the leading guess on the fourth or fifth ballot, says Allison, adding that although Grace McCarthy will probably top the first ballot she will not likely win. Allison feels the final ballot will be between Bud Smith and VanderZalm, and that Brian Smith could surprise everyone and replace the Kamloops lawyer on the final ballot. John Reynolds will do better than many expected, Allison says. Langley's Bob Wenman is the big disappointment in this race, he says.

As for Liberal fortunes in the next provincial election, Allison is not optimistic at this time. The Bennett resignation has given hope to middle of the road voters that the Social Credit party is going to change direction and those are the voters that may have considered a Liberal option, Allison says.

Tourists on the move through Aldergrove border

VICTORIA - People arrive by land, by sea, and by air. But they do come to British Columbia during this year of Expo.

At the four lower mainland border crossings, Aldergrove, Huntingdon, Douglas and Pacific highway, the volume of travellers is up. During May, 1,012,847 came as passengers in private cars, 36.3 percent up from last year. Two thousand eight hundred and nineteen buses brought a total of 415,955 passengers, up 214.3 percent from the year before.

At Vancouver international airport, a total of 136,655 overseas passengers arrived during May, and the same time the airlines brought in 299,000 domestic arrivals at the Vancouver and Victoria airports.

One hundred and fifteen thousand came by car via the Rogers Pass. The Tsawwassen ferry terminal saw 605,152 passengers and 4,811 buses arrive. At Horseshoe Bay, the figures were 329,792 passengers and 1,075 buses.

Seventeen cruiseships brought 25,443 passengers to Vancouver during the month and 243 pleasure vessels arrived bringing more visitors.

Welder sparks fire

LANGLEY - A fire caused several thousand dollars damage, July 9 at the Overwaitea Foods construction site, 19890 - 92A Avenue.

RCMP say that a spark from welders' equipment accidentally ignited styrofoam at about 4:30 p.m. Several fire zones responded to the call and extinguished the fire. There were no injuries.

Driver charged

LANGLEY - Walter Cole of Aldergrove was treated in Langley Memorial Hospital, July 8 for minor lacerations after being hit by a motorist in downtown Langley. RCMP have charged the unidentified motorist with driving without due care and attention.

The driver lost control in the junction of Fraser Highway and 206 Street while attempting a north-bound turn, at 10:09 a.m., and struck Cole, a pedestrian.

Councilors talk halls

MURRAYVILLE - A motion by Ald. Muriel Arnason that Expo heritage funds be used to build a meeting hall for young people in Langley died on the order paper Monday night as the proposal failed to attract a seconder.

Arnason had suggested that a hall should be built in Brookswood to get youths "off the street." Recently, residents of the southwest Langley community have complained about young people "hanging out" during late hours outside a 24-hour convenience store in the residential neighborhood.

During the meeting, councilors voted to receive a recommendation concerning the feasibility study for a third ice arena in the municipality. Arnason voted contrary because, she said, "a more in-depth study is needed."

And Ald. John Rennie reminded his colleagues that a new cultural centre for Langley should be given first priority. Earlier, Audrey Wright of the Langley Arts Council had approached councilors with a request for grants money totalling $10,187.50 to help pay for the feasibility study for such a centre. Wright said the city council in Langley already had pledged their support.

The grant request Wright placed before the township councilors would pay half the cost of the study.

Wright also pointed out that if the study should prove favorable, the arts community would be back with further requests for funding.

How to beat Expo-itis

VANCOUVER - There are some old problems with a new name in Vancouver this summer - Expo-itis.

Up to ten hours of walking, standing in lineups, carrying children and craning necks can take their toll on anybody.

"That kind of exertion aggravates otherwise stable areas," says Dr. Blake Alderson, of the BC Chiropractic Association.

"The joints, and specifically the spine can be adversely affected when put through conditions they are not used to."

So B.C. chiropractors have issued some tips for serious Expo-goers.

o Wear proper shoes. High heels are definitely out. Walking shoes or quality running shoes with arch support are recommended. Bring a change of socks too; sweaty feet can lead to painful blisters.

o Don't carry heavy shoulder-bags. If you are taking your lunch and toys for the kids, use a day pack with padded shoulder straps.

o Take a stroller for infants. There's no better way to tote a tot, especially in lineups.

o When standing in line, don't "lock" your knee or hip joints, or keep your back unnaturally straight. Stay relaxed, move about, stretch, and do occasional knee bends or stand up on your toes.

If you get the chance, rest one foot higher than the other, on a step or ledge.

o And if you are staying over with friends, opt for a foamie on the floor instead of sleeping on the chesterfield. The worst thing for your back after a long day at Expo is having to sleep on a sagging couch.

Back pain afflicts up to 80 percent of Canadians some time in their lives, and hits 30 percent of the population at any given time.

It's a living

MONTREAL - Normand Tremblay, who at one time collected more than $6,000 a month in welfare payments under 20 aliases, pleaded guilty recently to 568 charges of fraud and using false documents.

Linda Despots, a legal aid lawyer representing Tremblay, said her client drew up false birth certificates and identification papers to obtain the payments.

When he was arrested last April 18, Tremblay, 43, was receiving 13 welfare cheques a month at various addresses in the Montreal area.

Tremblay also faces more than 190 further fraud charges for $200,000 worth of goods bought on credit under false names at hardware stores in 1980 and 1981.

In a 20-minute hearing in suburban Longueuil sessions court, Tremblay waived a reading of the charges. A judge is to decide on the disposition of his belongings, which were seized by police.

Despots said many of Tremblay's assets will go to reimburse the public purse.

Beef clubbers stage rally

By SHERRI JENSEN

ALDERGROVE - The Otter 4-H Beef Club held their annual rally day July 6. It was held at Mr. and Mrs. Creasy's farm. It started at 9 o'clock as the animals were weighed till 10. Then there was a preparation time given for the show. A very special thank-you goes to Mr. Bob Rathwell for being our judge and Mr. Reno Degianni for being our ringman. The senior showmanship class was first with Heather Follett, and Lauren Henderson topping the class. Junior showmanship followed with Kevin Fowler and Lynn Ingeberg at the top. An hour and a half was given for lunch followed by the light weight steer class with Sherri Jensen first and Lynn Ingeberg following with a close second. In the heavy weight class Kevin Fowler was first and also won champion steer and Brad Creasy second with reserve champion steer. The animals were taken home and fed and the members and guests came back at 5:30 for a barbeque and swimming with a bonfire later at night. The rally day was planned by Brad Creasy and yours truly.

Final moto

By RON FARMER

MISSION - On Sunday, July 20 it's the final motocross event of the season at Mission raceway.

The big question about this race is what the weather will do, as it has rained at every motocross race at the track this season. Depending on the weather the track conditions can change considerably when it is wet or dry, as it has sections of hard packed clay, sandy clay and loose sand sections.

Event will include all CMA classes, juniors, seniors, experts, old timers and schoolboys.

Racing gets under way at 10 a.m. and the finals go at 1 p.m., rain or shine.

Bylaw in legal bind

MURRAYVILLE - Langley township's biennial elections bylaw is in limbo.

Ald. Muriel Arnason raised a legal question Monday night and municipal administrator Jim Godfrey confirmed that it was a problem.

Mayor Elford Nundal brought the bylaw back after councilors had scrapped it a few weeks ago. Second time around, aldermen had changed their minds, and the bylaw received first three readings, vetoed only by Arnason.

When it came up for final approval this week, Arnason said the Municipal Act did not give the mayor the right to recall, and questioned by Nundal, Godfrey said Arnason could be right.

Bylaw was tabled pending a legal opinion.

If approved, the local ordinance would do away with annual elections, opting instead for municipal ballotting every second year.

Councilors hard on the trail

MURRAYVILLE - After councilors here had listened to five women delegates Monday night they agreed to set up a new committee to study what can be done to improve an 11-mile horse trail linking the Campbell Valley and Aldergrove Lake regional parks in the southern part of the municipality.

The trail follows Zero and 8th avenues from 216 to 272 streets, but has been closed down because of disrepair. Local politicians say this was caused by abuse by the horseback riders themselves.

Equestrians living in south Langley want the trail reopened. They also would like to see new trails opened.

Councilors heard that the district "has a very large horse population" and that with a bit of assistance from the authorities "Langley could become the Kentucky of the North."

Without committing themselves, the local politicians promised "to look into the matter."

Rezoning opposed

MURRAYVILLE - Opposition to the rezoning of property on the north side of Old Yale Crescent in Aldergrove was voiced by three delegates to a township public hearing here Monday night.

Eze Rent-it Centre, which is being relocated from the present location by a highway expansion, had applied for a rezoning of property at Old Yale and 268 Street. Owners of nearby rowhouses objected.

Saga of the driving dog

LOUISVILLE, Ky. - A man arrested for investigation of drunken driving told officers the car was weaving because he was legally blind and his dog was helping him drive, officials said.

Lawyer David Kaplan said William David Bowen testified his dog was in the passenger seat and barked to tell him the colors of each traffic light he approached. When reminded that dogs are color blind, Bowen said Bud had been trained to distinguish changing lights.

"What he told me was that he had taught the dog to tell green from red," Kaplan said. "He would bark twice for green and once for red and the dog would help him. He's not totally blind but has peripheral vision and can make out a form on either end of his eyes."

Kaplan said Bowen could barely make out a car in front of him, "but with the dog helping him, he did get pretty far."

Using street lights as a guide and keeping pace with the speeds of cars next to him, Bowen said he and Bud motored along pretty well. But since he couldn't see the white lines dividing the highway, and Bud had no training in that area, he couldn't keep from weaving.

The 34-year-old Louisville man was arrested April 26 when Jefferson County officers spotted his car weaving in the road. They didn't believe that he was blind and charged him with driving under the influence of alcohol, reckless driving and having a suspended operator's licence.

"When he was down taking a breathalyzer test, he refused it and said, 'The only reason I'm refusing is because I wasn't driving. He was,' and he pointed to his dog, an Alaskan Malamute named Sir Anheuser Busch II, which he called Bud," Kaplan said.

Police said Bowen had gone about 800 metres after leaving a tavern where he had an argument with his girlfriend, who left leaving behind Bowen, the dog and her car.

"When the place closed, I had to get the car home somehow," Bowen told the court.

Jefferson district court records show Bowen pleaded guilty to charges of driving under the influence of alcohol and having a suspended operators licence. The reckless driving charge was dismissed.

Bowen was credited with the 30 days he spent in jail while he was waiting for his trial, releasing him to be reunited with Bud, who had spent the time in the animal shelter.

District Court Judge James Nicholson said the pair did a pretty good job, all things considered.

"The dog was doing his job. Mr. Bowen just couldn't keep it in the lanes."

Reinventing language

The stock market has "plateau'd," the talking head assured his viewers.

"Plateau'd?" The retired school principal winced. Had the market "valleyed" earlier, he wondered. Perhaps it was about to "mountain."

Later, musing on this use of nouns as verbs, the retired teacher, Murray Ryan of Victoria, parodied the style with a 300-word account of a car trip he and his wife had enjoyed. Here is a sample, heavily compressed.

"My wife and I finished knifing, forking and spooning our breakfast. We overcoated, doored and sidewalked to the car.

"While I drivewayed to the street, my wife mirrored and lipsticked. Highwaying along towards Sidney, we billboarded and scenerieed. I had to horn a couple of times because people carelessly pedestrianed across the road."

At a cafe "another young person waitered us, teaing me and coffeeing my wife. She menued us and then, when we had decisioned, doughnutted us. After we had pitchered our beverages with cream, we lipped them.

"While highwaying back home, I cassetted the tape deck and it speakered and musiced, while the two of us eared as we homed."

Then, back at home, "we deadbolted, bathroomed, bedroomed and bedded."

Aside from being funny, that little holiday piece demonstrates two things: the vigor of verbs, even made-up ones, and the versatility of our marvellous langauge which, in the words of the poet Edward Thomas, is "as light as dreams, as tough as oak."

Some of the toughness comes from active verbs. They are the muscles and sinews of the sentence, moving it along and often managing to suggest by their sound or imagery what they mean: trundle, strum, glisten, thrust, wobble, screech, shatter, cuddle, dimple, squirm, drip, slither.

As for versatility, the same word can be pressed into use in half a dozen ways. "Up," for example, can be used as a preposition. "Gail crawled up the roof"; an adverb, "Going up!"; an adjective, "the up elevator"; a noun, "Laurier had his ups and downs"; and a verb, "Jim upped the ante."

So nouns do in fact become verbs, with the result that pheasants "rocket" into the air, louts "elbow" past you, forgers "doctor" papers, sports teams and regiments are "fielded" and government white papers are "tabled."

As the preposition "up" has shown, this kind of word-making isn't restricted to nouns. Other words can wear a variety of hats. Verbs, for example, can become nouns: a sit-in, a has-been.

Who coins words?

Anyone can. English is nothing if not democratic.

If you invent a word, it will be judged on its merits not by an academy but by your fellow citizens.

The odds are it will be cold-shouldered aside and left to languish on the verbal garbage heap, high as the Tower of Babel, along with other losers: caffard, cantle, denixonize, drovy, gruf, lallify, ostrobogolus, slopkettle, tilly-vally, tintiddling, woxy and yowf.

With luck, however, your brainchild will be embraced as a welcome addition and given a place of honor alongside baby boomer, blurb, highrise, palimony, sexist, talking head, whodunit, wind surf and yuppie.

Who knows? Perhaps the talking head's plateau'd is already being glad-handed.

If so, can Murray Ryan's coffeed, musiced and bedroomed be far behind?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Candidate should resign

Editor, The Star, Sir,

Bob Wenman has made a decision to return to provincial politics and as part of that decision has seized the moment and is running for the top job of premier.

At this point in the campaign it would appear surviving the first ballot may be difficult for Wenman. However, in politics anything can happen and when the balloting begins there may be changes. I know many people in Langley who support Wenman and believe in what he is doing. There is something, however, I would like to draw to his attention. Wenman was elected to represent this riding in Ottawa and you simply can't play both ends of the street. Wenman would have to resign as a member of parliament if he is truly committed to the people in this riding. Some say he is a political opportunist and his most important priority is his own career. The decision to hang on to your MP's salary and percs as long as possible certainly lends weight to that point of view. The voters in the Fraser Valley riding deserve a chance to elect a new member of parliament. In a telephone poll carried out last week we found 60 percent of those asked felt Wenman should resign. This poll was carried out in Langley, not in Surrey, but it's likely Surrey voters would feel the same way.

The honor of being elected to represent the people in this community as member of parliament should be respected and not used. Wenman has stated that he is finished with federal politics and is returning to provincial politics regardless of the outcome at Whistler, therefore the maintenance of the seat in the House of Commons is selfish and it would be the proper thing for Wenman to resign.

Disturbing

Editor, The Star, Sir,

I am extremely disturbed by the amount of people who believe that by getting rid of our nuclear weapons we will somehow be moving a step closer to world peace.

Do these people not realize that if the free countries get rid of their nuclear weapons, there will be nothing to stop the Soviets from using their vast arsenal? Do these people not realize that for a country such as the U.S. to even show signs of weakness invites war from those who think they can win? History has shown us that the Japanese attacked the U.S. when they thought the U.S. was in a position of weakness after helping fight the Nazi Germans in World War II.

People who say we should get rid of the tools of war should first think about what would have happened if the Allies didn't have enough weapons in WWII to defeat the Nazi Germans. For starters, every Jew on this planet would have been executed. Obviously to "love our enemies", would not have been the Christian thing to do. We had to fight.

Let's quit criticizing the U.S. protection that we enjoy and instead do our part to help ensure that freedom, liberty, and religion remain ours to enjoy for all time.

Justice exists

Editor, The Star, Sir,

Merv Lavigne has won an historic victory in the Supreme Court of Ontario for the individual freedom of millions of Canadian workers. Justice John White has ruled that "the use of compulsory dues for purposes other than collective bargaining ... cannot be justified in a free and democratic society."

His victory is proof that the little guy can still get justice in Canada, even when opposed by the might of big unionism. Although he was not alone - his court challenge was backed by thousands of supporters of the National Citizens' Coalition - it was an uphill battle all the way.

The scope of the victory is huge. More than three million Canadian workers are forced to pay more than $1.3 billion in dues each year to unions. John Fryer, president of the National Union of Provincial Government Employees, estimates that 15 to 20 percent of dues are used to support political parties and causes. If he's right, that could mean a union elite is funnelling about $200-million into political action each year.

We feel strongly that Canadians should not be compelled to support political views with which they disagree. We agree with John Milton:

"Give me the liberty to know, to utter, and to argue according to conscience, above all liberties."

To Merv Lavigne and all those Canadians from sea to sea who supported him, we can only say: "thank you for standing up for freedom."

Metric needed

Editor, The Star, Sir,

Metrication is not only inevitable, it is desirable as Canada seeks to broaden its trade opportunities in the international marketplace. However, at the moment it appears we are slipping backwards as there is a lack of federal direction on the conversion program.

Change doesn't always come easy, but change we must. Whether it's in the food store or in the building supply dealer, we've got to think metric.

VanderZalm promises to control tongue

RICHMOND - If elected leader of the Social Credit party, Bill Vander Zalm promises to control his tongue and avoid shooting from the lip.

"I expect I will be curbing my comments considerably," the controversial Dutch immigrant said during an interview in his modest campaign office.

Vander Zalm, 52, has been on a three-year sabbatical from provincial politics to attend to his nursery business and build the $10-million Fantasy Gardens family entertainment complex. Now competing with 11 others for the Socred leadership, he says the position "carries with it the requirement that I take it easier."

He made headlines after referring to former Quebec premier Rene Levesque as "a frog" and declaring he was fed up reading French on cereal boxes.

"Maybe the diplomacy wasn't applied as well as it might have been."

The list of controversies is a long one for Vander Zalm, who held the municipal affairs, education and human resources portfolios in the Socred cabinet from 1975 to 1983.

He said at one time that Quebec independence would save British Columbia money by cutting down the number of transients who travel here seeking welfare. He also suggested that able-bodied welfare recipients be given shovels and that Indians return to reserves from cities and get off welfare.

Vander Zalm took a run at the Vancouver mayoralty in 1984. Soundly beaten by incumbent Mike Harcourt, he expressed more disappointment that voters chose a "Godless Communist" over a Christian businessman for the final aldermanic seat.

"Did I say that?" Vander Zalm asked during the interview. "Sometimes you regret things."

He also lost some support within cabinet prior to his resignation by accusing government colleagues of being "gutless" for letting his proposed land use act die on the order paper.

But it's perhaps this outspoken nature that endears Vander Zalm to the public.

With few exceptions, he has received the loudest cheers during party functions, topping even outgoing Premier Bill Bennett.

"I guess it's recognized generally that my platform or my basic philosophy is most in keeping with the majority of the people," said Vander Zalm, pointing to his popularity as the reason for a 90-minute delay in arriving for the interview.

"They see me as someone who is a doer ... who is not afraid of innovation or change."

The party recognizes that the name of the game will be re-election, he said, and delegates at the Whistler convention July 28-30 will turn to his grassroots style and away from machine politics.

Students assisted

VICTORIA - More than 19,000 students will receive financial assistance for their visits to Expo 86. A provincial government initiative, using $450,000 in lottery revenues, will bring children from all corners of B.C. to Vancouver and Expo.

The fiftieth wedding anniversary of Min and John Hepting was celebrated Sunday, July 6 with about 120 of their friends and relatives from the lower mainland, Saskatchewan, Alberta and New York, seven of whom were at the wedding in 1936 including their bridesmaid and best man Mr. and Mrs. Jessie.

John immigrated to Canada in 1913 with his family and moved to Saskatchewan, where he met Min and they were married in 1936. John was employed by Liquid Air in Vancouver for 27 years before his retirement and Min at B.C. Hydro. They moved to the Aldergrove area in 1971. They are members of the Emmanuel Lutheran Church on 272 Street. They had three sons, one in Vancouver, one in Aldergrove and one who passed away in 1981. They had seven grandchildren with one who passed away in 1974, and one great grandson.

Bergs win Elk-athon

VICTORIA - Carl and Margaret Berg of Aldergrove were among six winners in the June 2 Elk-a-thon draw for a four-day trip for two to Las Vegas.

A Keremeos man, John Degenhardt won the grand prize of a 14-day trip for two to Hawaii.

Funds totalling more than $55,000 were raised for the B.C. Elks auditory rehabilitation centre in Surrey.

LANGLEY - The annual ride-a-thon for handicapped riders enjoyed a large turnout and beautiful weather at Campbell Valley equestrian centre, Sunday.

The event, hosted by Valley Therapeutic Equestrian Centre volunteers allows young and old people to enjoy a sport not normally associated with physical disfunction. Clowns, entertainers, hot air balloons, face painters and much more helped round out the day-long schedule.

The VTEA, along with Guildford Lions will host a country music extravaganza, Aug. 15-17 at their centre, 6918 - 232 St. For information on this family fund-raising event, call 574-0889.

'Young Dempsey' stars in bout

SURREY - Young Dempsey, 21-year-old heavyweight golden boy of Canadian boxing, headlines a five-bout, all-star pro fight card at the North Surrey rec centre next Friday night, July 25. The 8 p.m. show marks both the return of professional boxing and of Surrey native Young Dempsey, who was an amateur champion under the name of Tommy Williamson. He meets Portland, Oregon, banger Cliff Melbourne in the 10-round feature. The two have similar records. Dempsey is fourteen and one (14-1-0) in two-and-a-half years as a pro heavyweight, earning the number one challenger's berth to Canadian champ Willie De Wit. Melbourne is fourteen-four and one (14-4-1). Tickets are now on sale at all Vancouver ticket centre-box office locations, including all Woodward's and Eaton stores.

Promoter Al Principe has paired cruiserweights Randy Johnson of Vancouver with George Beltrane of Queensboro in a four-round supporting bout to the main event. Others due to appear include Surrey cruiserweight Fireman Cody Redord, Surrey middleweight Al Harper and Abbotsford middleweight Farmer Vern Classen.

Ringside seats are $15; general admission tickets $10.

History lives again

CALGARY - While Vancouver is celebrating its centennial this year, there is a place in the Fraser Valley where visitors can experience life in a community that was founded more than half a century before Vancouver.

Established by the Hudson's Bay Company, in 1827, Fort Langley remained active as a fur trade post and as a transhipment and provisioning depot for more than 40 years. Now as a national historic park, Fort Langley lives again. Visitors to the fort go back in time with the help of park staff dressed in period costumes participating in typical 19th century activities such as coopering (barrel making), blacksmithing and sawing planks by hand at a saw pit.

In July and August, there will be daily demonstrations of period cooking over open fires. Just outside the park, demonstrations of log squaring with traditional broad axes will be held along with the construction of a boat of the type used to transport fur trade goods on the Fraser River when Fort Langley was a major depot for the fur brigades of the Hudson's Bay Company. The log squaring and boat building projects are sponsored by the Fort Langley National Historic Park Co-operating Association.

The park is open daily from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. until September. Admission is $2 for adults, $1 for children (5-16 years) and $6 for families. Canadian senior citizens and children under five are admitted free.

Red tide closure

Harvesting of bivalve shellfish has been closed on most of the B.C. coast due to the growing presence of deadly red tide. The ban took effect, Thursday, and applies to clams, oysters and mussels.

Mountain bikes popular

You thought buying a new bicycle would be easy, but the beguiling variety of styles and options brings back memories of the time you bought your last car.

To narrow the field somewhat, make a decision on how and where your bike will be used -- whether in the city, on dirt trails or on gravel roads. This will enable you to select a suitable bicycle at a price that isn't necessarily in the range of a car.

"Bikes range from $99.95 in department stores to a top end for racing bikes at about $6,000," says Paul Jurbala, executive director of the Ontario Cycling Association. You're advised to stay away from either extreme."

Jurbala says a good bike that will last for years can be purchased for between $200 and $250. "The main thing affecting the price is weight -- the lighter the material a bike is constructed of, the more it costs."

The newest trend in cycling is the mountain bike which, Jurbala says, differs from the traditional sport bike in that it has wider wheels, fatter tires and a heavy-duty frame.

"If you're out riding in country with steep hills, dirt and gravel, then a mountain bike is what you need," he says.

The original mountain bikes were extremely expensive, but with their current popularity they are now being mass-marketed, Jurbala says. "Right now, the least expensive mountain bike probably isn't any sturdier than any other kind of bike."

Other decisions to be made include how many speeds you want, what style of seat is most comfortable and whether you prefer dropped or straight handlebars.

Most of these choices are a matter of preference, but if you're using a bike primarily to ride to the supermarket you won't need anything particularly elaborate, Jurbala says.

The same maxim holds true for the myriad of cycling accessories available, including cycling shoes and shorts. Helmets, though, are a different story.

"Helmets are something I can't emphasize enough," Jurbala says. "Even in the most minor fall you can bang your head and cause an injury."

He says helmets are becoming increasingly popular with cyclists and likens the trend to the acceptance of the hockey helmet, which was spurned by hockey players until they realized it could prevent serious injury.

Cycling shorts and shoes are intended primarily for confirmed enthusiasts and competitors.

Resembling the common running shoe, cycling shoes have a stiffer sole that provides a smooth transfer of power from legs to pedals. The grooved sole helps maintain a sure grip on the pedals.

The shorts, which Jurbala says really to make a difference on long trips, are light and tight-fitting so as not to flap in the breeze and bunch up uncomfortably. They're also lined with a soft material that prevents abrasion.

Whatever equipment you buy, you don't need to spend a lot of money to enjoy the physical benefits of cycling.

"Cycling is very gentle," says Bob Duck of Participaction, the federal fitness agency. "It's not hard on ankles, knees and hips and it utilizes all the muscles that jogging does, except possibly for the upper body muscles."

Steady, endurance-oriented activities like cycling are also recommended by Duck for people who want to lose weight. "Long, slow activity is the best thing you can do to burn fat."

To achieve a significant increase in fitness, Duck recommends exercising at least three times a week. "How long you exercise varies according to your goals," but a half-hour is best and 15 minutes adequate.

Aldergrove's Mun Hope [right] received the Pacific Northwest good citizen award recently from Sharon McMahon and Spokane postal administrator W. McMahon at a surprise dinner in Matsqui attended by about eighty guests from Everett, Spokane, Williams Lake and Alberta.

On behalf of the international delegation, Virgil Gunning of the Eastern Washington rod and gun club expressed appreciation for Hope's faithful service as chairman of the international family conference for 25 successive years.

Hope was B.C. representative at the International Relations [Dale Carnegie] Conferences held at universities in Washington and Idaho.

He was Canadian representative at the World Conference held in Amsterdam; director of the Lower Island Drama Festival for two years, in connection with the department of education; and winner of the Captain Elmore oratorical trophy presented by the Daily Times.

He was recognized by Grace McCarthy for organizing the Year of the Child contest, won by a local student.

He has organized conferences and rallies throughout the United States and Canada; and was commended by the Mid-West Educational and Television Board for his work amongst students in public schools, colleges and universities.

He helped to organize the Memorial Day rally of 65,000 people in the Illinois Soldier Field, as leader of one of four teams.

His international activities took him into Mexico, Peru, Ecuador and Bolivia in the south; and all parts of British Columbia as far as the Peace River and the Alaska Highway.

Hope is chaplain of the week at the local hospital; and chaplain at Expo 86.

Women choose sterilization

By LORRAINE BROWN

A major survey of Canadian women has shown that sterilization is now the most widespread method of contraception in Canada, and that women in Canada use sterilization more than women in any other western country. The survey, conducted nation-wide by telephone, reached 5,315 women between the ages of 18 and 49.

The increase in the number of women using sterilization as a contraceptive method is mainly due to the current demographic make-up of Canadian society, the researchers say. A large proportion of the population consists of 'baby boomers' who are now reaching their mid-30s and early 40s. Many have already had a family, and are choosing sterilization as a safe, easy and permanent method of contraception.

Sterilization is also gaining in popularity as these women approach their mid-30s when the pill, the other major form of contraception in Canada, becomes a health risk. The vast majority of women under 30 still use the pill.

"Among users of contraception there are three groups: women who have never married, of whom 71 percent are on the pill; women who are currently married, of whom 42 percent are sterilized; and women who were previously married (including widowed, divorced, and separated women), of whom 60 percent are sterilized," says Dr. Evelyne Lapierre-Adamcyk, a University of Montreal demographer and co-author of the study.

Lapierre-Adamcyk suggests two reasons, based on an earlier study done in Quebec, why so many women opt for sterilization when vasectomy, the sterilization operation for men, is so much faster and simpler. First, men are afraid that vasectomies will cause a loss in virility; and second, women see contraception as their role. "The current trend toward sterilization among women is just a continuation of their responsibility for contraception in the past," she says.

Besides looking at contraceptive techniques, the researchers wanted to examine how the family is evolving in Canada. Their questionnaire was based on one used in a world-wide fertility study conducted during the 1970s.

However, in order to gain a glimpse into Canadians' attitudes about family and marriage, the researchers also asked a wide variety of additional questions concerning fertility history, the women's future aspirations for their children, work history and economic well-being of the family, home ownership, life insurance, cultural characteristics, and attitudes about marriage, cohabitation, and sharing of household duties between spouses. The telephone questionnaire took from 36 to 50 minutes to complete.

Valley rattled by tremors

VICTORIA - Parts of southwestern British Columbia were rattled by a minor earth tremor twice last week.

The latest tremor on Thursday, measured 3.3 on the Richter scale and was centred at Pitt Lake. It was felt through a wide area of southwest B.C., but no damage or injuries were reported.

A quake Monday night hit 3.5 on the Richter scale and was centred at Whidby Island in Washington state. It was felt on southern Vancouver Island and parts of the mainland.

An official at the Pacific Geosciences Centre in Victoria said the two tremors were not related and did not signal a build-up to a larger quake.

Computer has work to do

TORONTO - With a 100-percent average in Grade 13, Alyssa Wolpin shouldn't have trouble getting admitted to university. But that's not what happened to the graduate of Forest Hill Collegiate Institute in Toronto.

The University of Western Ontario in London rejected the 17-year-old whiz, and even suggested she go to summer school to raise her marks. Amused that her perfect average was good enough for Harvard near Boston -- where she'll be attending -- but not good enough for Western, Alyssa called London to find out.

An embarrased Western official says the admissions computer wasn't programmed to process a high school average higher than 99.9 percent. So instead, the computer figured her average to be 0.0 and decided she had a lot of work to do. A Western official says the university has a high standard, but admits an error did occur.

Bar closure may return

VICTORIA - Permanent Sunday openings of bars and nightclubs will have to be considered by the legislature at the end of Expo, says Elwood Veitch, Minister of consumer and corporate affairs. The current order in council will no longer be in effect when Expo closes its gates, and these establishments will have to return to Sunday closure otherwise.

Gerber graduates

SAN FRANCISCO - Randy Gerber of Aldergrove has graduated from the California College of Podiatric Medicine.

Randy is married with two children and the son of Willy and Ruth Gerber.

He will be doing his residency in Canada.

But where is British Columbia?

By ERNEST CLUETT

ALDERGROVE - Visitors at the pensioners dance held Wednesday included Joe Warren, a visitor from Redcar, North Yorkshire, England. Also Elmer and Gladys Henry and Mel and Leona Henry, all of Ontario.

After having dug the garden from underneath a two month's growth of weeds, I cannot help but wonder if nature hasn't got her priorities mixed up. Why can't vegetables grow with the speed of weeds? And visa-versa, why can't weeds grow at the rate of carrots and onions? Life sure would be a lot simpler. Also, this is the third year in a row that apples and pears will be in short supply in Aldergrove due to the wet, cold weather in blossom time. We should be due for a change pretty soon.

I regret to report the unfortunate accident to Gladys Kaufhold. Gladys and Ben were long time patrons of our dances and were at one time members of branch 71. Gladys in the early hours of a Saturday morning fell down her basement steps. The steps have a right angle turn half way down and she landed in a heap in the angle of the stair well. It took all the skill of the medics to extract her from her position as she was unable to help herself. However, she is now home with a broken shoulder and a mass of bruises. We all wish her a speedy recovery.

Come to think of it, while abroad we never once did come upon a British house with a basement. There must be some, as I remember as a kid we lived in one. All we visited, whether relatives or bed and breakfasts, had a ground floor and the bedrooms were upstairs along with the bathroom necessitating some strenuous exercise when nature called.

The charges for bed and breakfast outside of London ran from eight to 10 pounds or $16 to $20 per night per person, and all we stayed in were very good value for the money. True, there were no showers and the toilets were shared, but what do you expect for $20? There was a washbasin in all rooms. The breakfasts were always superb. Where does England get its wonderful lean bacon from, when all we can get is some concoction from our packing plants labelled bacon, but not resembling or tasting like the real product.

In Ireland the Eire flag was always flown with its American counterpart alongside and dozens of examples were on hand during our seven days in the country, but only twice, both in Galway, did we come upon two Canadian flags and one was on a hotel proudly being flown upside down. Once when I was asked where I came from, I answered British Columbia. The gal walked away and then returned. "I know," she said, "I shouldn't ask, but where is British Columbia?"

The Saturday dance had as visitors George and Anne Rueb, Louise Ross, Lee Bernard, Frances Popoff and Clare and Jene Walchut and Aldergrove residents Franceska Szalay, Walter Uprairetz and Ana Degans. Door prizes went to Ann Degans and Rita Armstrong. Spot prizes were awarded to Charley Millward and Evelyn Johnson.

Doris says her doctor told her jogging would add years to her life. He was right, after one day's jogging she is sure she has aged ten years.

ALDERGROVE - Traffic along Fraser Highway just east of the town has only been suffering minor inconvenience as contractors work on major improvements to the roadway up to 240 Street. Work on the first section up to 264 Street will provide widening to boulevard standards for the busy provincial highway.

Addition approved

VICTORIA - The provincial government has approved minor capital funding of $16,000 for Fraser Valley College in Abbotsford.

The money will be used for an addition to serve the metal fabrication program at the Abbotsford campus.

Langley firm granted loan

VICTORIA - A Langley company, Fireflex Manufacturing, has received a $10,000 loan from the federal-provincial small business incentives program.

Money will be spent to expand the company's line to include cold air inflatables. Ten new jobs are expected to be created.

Five companies charged

MAPLE RIDGE - The B.C. environment ministry has laid charges against five companies between Maple Ridge and Mission in a crackdown against polluting wood waste burners.

Charged under the Waste Management Act are Waldum Forest Products, Fraser Cedar Products, Inland Shake and Shingle, Meeker Cedar Products and S&W Shake and Shingle.

Two of them have pleaded guilty but say that potential fines of up to $50,000 per charge could be ruinous to businesses hard-hit by the U.S. tariffs on shakes and shingles.
