WHAT OTHERS SAY

Lena La Nelle Hardcastle has written two helpful books on parliamentary procedure entitled By The Rule, Parliamentary Law Motions Made Easy and Parliamentary Law Rules And Procedures For Conducting Conventions. Each is designed to make clear much of what appears in Robert's Rules Of Order Newly Revised.

By The Rule's great strength is the abundance of examples given. Stating that amending Main motions is a most difficult concept, the author devotes an entire chapter of 121 pages to the subject. An additional 30 pages deal with the amending of bylaws. A helpful section, entitled "Provisos" is added, with advice given on putting amendments into effect.

In Parliamentary Law Rules And Procedures For Conducting Conventions, the materials in Chapter One entitled "An Organized Convention" are detailed and carefully explained. In other chapters excellent examples of convention reports and of convention rules tend to make such important items clear.

This book should be in the hands of every convention-goer, but especially in the possession of officers. The advice given is thorough, accurate, and usable. By following it, conventions could be operated efficiently and expeditiously.

Parliamentary Law Rules And Procedures For Conducting Conventions is a great and needed book.

Nationally acknowledged as a cool, objective, authoritative parliamentarian, Lena Hardcastle has pioneered into territory in which she is a veteran to produce this unique and desperately needed handbook for the guidance of persons who plan, conduct, and attend conventions.

Having served with the author in difficult assignments from coast to coast, I can testify to the fact that this professional volume has been wrought from and tested by experience where Lena Hardcastle has performed as a fair, responsible, and productive umpire.

This is a book for every delegate to pack in convention luggage and keep at fingertip during every session.

What Others Say About

BY THE RULE

“After having just completed reading Mrs. Hardcastle's books on Parliamentary Procedure, I wanted to write and tell you how much I enjoyed them. No one who conducts a meeting should be without them.

I had the pleasure of serving my community as Mayor and as President of the Chamber of Commerce and I am confident I could have done a much better job had I had the benefit of the information in your books. Every public official could profit from reading them.”

—Jim Toler, Former Mayor
President, Chamber of Commerce
Garland, Texas

“I have just completed my second year with a Parliamentary Procedure Competition in our Office Education Association through our High School. Of all the reference materials used, the students voted BY THE RULE as the most helpful guide for learning parliamentary procedure; therefore, I have chosen it as my textbook for my classes. Through the use of BY THE RULE we have placed and won at area, state and national competition.”

—Cloma Britt, Teacher
Vocation Office Education Club
L.D. Bell High School, Hurst, Texas

“Authoritatively useful — concise, lucid, down-to-earth; distilled from the experiences of one of America's foremost registered parliamentarians who exercises her profession carefully — and beyond challenge.”

—Paul Douglass, Attorney And Counselor at Law
West Pawlet, Vermont

“Your edition of BY THE RULE by Lena Hardcastle is one of the most direct and practical books on parliamentary law I have read. It is a valuable aid to anyone in a position of responsibility and leadership, and is much more easily understood than most books on parliamentary law. BY THE RULE is parliamentary law simplified and, yet it provides information ordinarily found only in more complex works.”

—Paul Lyle, Attorney at Law
Plainview, Texas

“The second part of the book on bylaws is well worth the price, of the book. What organization, large or small is there that does not need help when it comes to writing bylaws or amending them.”

—National Story Art Magazine

“I have begun a study of BY THE RULE and let me assure you that Mrs. Hardcastle has done an excellent job. I just hope that this book will reach the hand of each person who is affiliated with any type of an organization. What an easy job it will be to preside at a meeting after reading your book.”

—Mrs. Eloise F. Keefe, Past President
National Audio Visual Ass'n.

“BY THE RULE, for the beginning student of parliamentary procedure, is written in simple words with easy to understand illustrations. As a supplement to Robert's Rules of Order, it is a valuable text book for the student. To write a reference book different from many on the market is an art which Mrs. Hardcastle has accomplished.”

—Mrs. F.R. Fullerton, Registered Parliamentarian
Kansas City, Missouri

“BY THE RULE has filled a need for a work that takes situations and clarifies all details with such facility that obscurities disappear and the clear logic of 'why' for procedures becomes a powerful stimulant for memory. Heartiest congratulations.”

—Col. Fred A. Pillet, San Antonio, Texas

“The parliamentary rules in BY THE RULE are presented in a clear and illustrative manner making it easy for the lay person to understand. It is an invaluable aid for all those involved in organizational activities because it is a well organized book with clear meaning and explanations. The author is exceptionally well qualified, as exemplified in her writing ability, experience, and educational background. The book is highly recommended for those individuals involved in business and organizational activities.”
