The word "bitter" comes from "gin and bitter" and does not mean the opposite of "sweet".

The people in the Netherlands serve these, when drinking their "Dutch gin", before dinner, called "Borrel". But always serve "jenever" (Dutch gin) iced!.Not "with ice"!!

This could be Blitzen's favourite recipe too....

Blintzi, Pyrahi.

Blintzi No. 1 — Boil 1 pt. milk and set to cool. Into a large bowl put 2 heaping t. sugar and 1 t. salt. Add 1/3 of the cooled milk and 1 1/4 c. flour. Mix well. Then add 1/3 of the rest of the milk at a time and about 1/4 c. flour. Beat with rotary beater after each addition. Beat 3 eggs slightly and stir into the batter. Dissolve 1/2 t. soda in 1 tb. milk and add to batter. Add 1 heaping t. baking powder, and mix well.

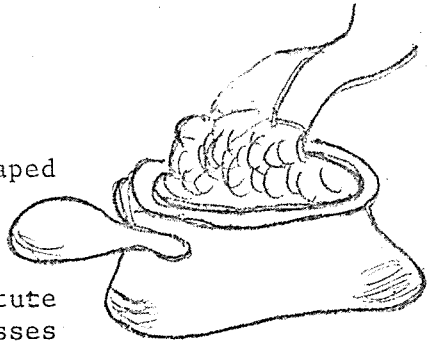

Have a heavy iron skillet hot. Rub with paper napkin dipped into butter or crisco to grease slightly. Use same before frying each Blintzi. Do not add more grease to napkin. Use 1/2 c. batter to each Blintzi. Fry until bubbles appear over top. Turn for a few seconds. Remove from skillet, brush with melted butter. Fold onto warm plate and keep in warm oven until all are ready to serve. Serve with melted butter, sour cream, jam, honey or syrup.

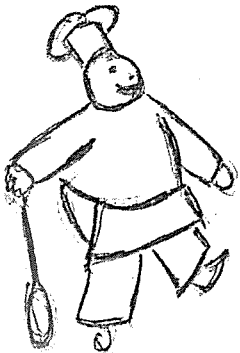

12 GAJAR HALWA
 (Sweet Carrot dessert)

To serve 6 to 8

- 6 medium-sized carrots (about 1 lb.) scraped and coarsely grated.
 1 quart milk
 1 cup light cream
 1 cup jaggery (raw cane sugar) or substitute dark-brown sugar combined with dark molasses
 1/2 cup sugar
 1 1/2 cups whole blanched almonds (about 8 oz.) pulverized in a blender or with a nut grinder
 1/4 cup ghee (butter oil)
 The seeds of 10 cardamom pods or 1/2 tsp. cardamom seeds, wrapped in a kitchen towel and crushed with a rolling pin
 1/4 cup unsalted pistachios, toasted
 1/4 cup unsalted, slivered blanched almonds, toasted

In a deep heavy 5 to 6 quart saucepan, combine the carrots, milk and cream. Stirring constantly, bring to a boil over high heat. Reduce the heat to moderate and, stirring occasionally, cook for 1 hour, or until the mixture has reduced to about half its original volume and is thick enough to coat a spoon heavily. Stir in the jaggery (or brown sugar and molasses) and the sugar, and continue cooking for 10 minutes. Reduce the heat to the lowest possible point, add the pulverized almonds and the ghee, and stir for 10 min. more, or until the halva mixture is thick enough to draw away from the sides and bottom of the pan in a solid mass. Remove the pan from the heat and stir in the cardamom.

With a metal spatula, spread the halva on a large heatproof platter, mound it slightly in the center, and decorate the top with pistachios and slivered almonds. Serve warm or a room temp. In India, gajar halva is also sometimes decorated with a special edible silver leaf.
