THE GREAT WALL

The Great Wall was built about two centuries before the Christian era, by the Emperor, known as Ch'in Shih Huang Ti, with the intention to protect the eternal peace of the empire from the frequent invasions of the Tartars.

In length, it is almost equal to one-twelfth of the circumference of the Earth, extending from the sea at Shanhaikwan in the east to Chia Yu Kwan in the west. It is about thirty feet high, fifteen feet wide on top and double that at bottom, with watch towers placed at irregular intervals some of which are only a few hundred yards apart, and are so built that bonfire thereon can be seen in Peiping (Peking) at night.

On the top of the Great Wall, one can extend one's eye-sight over the great plain of Peiping on the south and that of Mongolia on the north. When observing the Wall extending over the mountains, one wonders how the massive stones, the bricks, mortar and other materials were transported to the heights and how food was provided for the workmen. It has been in existence for more than two thousand years and still remains in excellent condition, exhibiting to the World the extraordinary constructive power of ancient China.
