The Sea-Kings' Home

OVER 1,500 years ago the Vikings, the Sea Kings of legend and story, set sail from their Northern homes to explore the unknown lands to the south of them, and found Britain.

To-day thousands of Britons are discovering the land which bred these fair-haired, blue-eyed Scandinavian chiefs, learning what manner of country they came from, seeing for themselves those famous Fjords of the North, the beauty and inspiring grandeur of which is known the world over.

No more ideal conditions could be imagined under which to see these marvels of Nature or to feel the glamour of the ancient Sea Kings' home, than on board the great white Empress of Australia.

To sail a fairy-like inland sea on a floating palace, to go ashore and picnic in some grassy glade nestling at the foot of a mighty mountain, to climb some glacier side or to explore quaint villages tucked away inland, to visit the magnificent City of Copenhagen and other Northern Capitals—these are but a few of the attractions of a fortnight's holiday, which is change, rest, entertainment, education and health-building all rolled into one.

On board your temporary home a host of willing hands look after your comfort and amusement—carnivals and fancy dress balls; deck games and concerts; cinema and gymnasium; swimming in the warmed water of a marvellously-built Pompeiian pool, and a wonderful variety of food to tempt the appetite whetted by the sea and mountain air.

All these await you abroad the majestic Empress of Australia 22,000 tons (oil-burner) of steadiness and comfort, as she glides along the calm and peaceful inland seas of Norway, bathed in sunshine and surrounded by the romance and glamour of the ancient Sea Kings of the North.
