Last year about this time we offered to rent a Sew E Z Sewing machine motor to anyone for a very small sum per day.
To every dollar paid in rent for the motor we gave one chance in a drawing which was to be held as soon as we had received the price of the motor in rents. There are still a few chances left. and we would strongly advise anyone who has any sewing to do to give this proposal a thought.
The motor does all the labor of sewing. leaving nothing for you to do but guide the material, and does all this at a cost of about half a cent an hour for current.

THE CONGESTION FROM A BAD COLD LOOSENED UP IN ONE HOUR

If Rubbed on at Night You re Well Next Morning

Nerviline Never Fails

When that cold comes, how is it to be cured? This method is simplicity itself. Rub the chest and throat vigorously with "Nerviline." Rub it in good and deep. Lots of rubbing can't do any harm. Then put some Nerviline in the water and use it as a gargle; this will ease the cough, cut out the phlegm, assist in breaking up the cold quickly.

There is no telling how quickly Nerviline breaks up a hard racking cough, eases a tight chest, relieves a pleuritic pain. Why, there isn't another liniment with half the power, the penetrative qualities, the honest merit that has made Nerviline the most popular American household liniment.

A large 50c bottle of Nerviline cures ills of the whole family, and makes doctor's bill small. Get it today. The large size is more economical than the 25c trial size. Sold by dealers everywhere, or direct from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

The Study of Russian

German as a language will not be popular in Canada after the war. Neither for the matter of that will it be popular anywhere else in the British Empire. Which is not to be wondered at. No doubt a certain number of people, attracted by German literature and anxious to study at first hand the amazing phenomena of the Hun mind as disclosed during the last two years, will learn German in future. But most people will leave it severely alone. What will take its place? Unquestionably French will be studied more than ever. But there is one language besides French which Canadian students would do well to acquire. That is Russian. After the war Canada's trade with Russia should grow rapidly. The channels through which it will flow are now being made by the shipment of war supplies. In the future these channels will be deepened. And the need for a closer understanding between Canada and Russia will then be imperative.—Vancouver World.

Germans Invited to Eat Bones

German science has exercised its ingenuity in every direction in the search for substitutes for fat. Among the most valuable results are those connected with the food value of bones. It has been discovered that reboiled and dried bones yield, to begin with, 10 per cent. of fat of excellent quality and very useful for domestic cookery. Besides this, capital gravy is thus produced. After this the bones can be dried and boiled again and ground to powder. This contains 24.41 per cent. of protein and 13.11 per cent. of fat. Experiments made by the Foodstuff Department of the East Prussian Chamber of Agriculture show that pigs, poultry and horses thrive on this diet.

Think Twice Before Selling

Fable of the Man Who Did Not Want to Sell His Farm

A farmer who had decided to sell his property listed it with a real estate dealer who wrote a very good description of the place. When the agent read it over to the farmer for his approval, the old man said, "Read that again." After the second reading the farmer sat for several moments in a thoughtful mood, finally said, "I don't believe I want to sell. I've been looking for just such a place all my life and it never occurred to me that I had it until you described it to me. No, I don't want to sell out."

This story contains a lesson for farmers whether the story is only fiction or an actual occurrence. Many do not appreciate their own farms until someone points out the desirable features. Again, real estate men have a way of describing farm or other property, bringing out the merits and passing over the undesirable features in a way to give the reader a very exaggerated idea of the farm, while every statement about it may be strictly accurate.

Spent Countless Nights Unable to Rest or Sleep

Was Run Down and in Terribly Nervous Condition---By Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Gained Regularly

In this letter is told once more the story which comes from many thousands of women. It is the story of exhausted nerves, of a run-down system and of all the accompanying misery of sleeplessness, headaches and loss of energy and vigor.

But there is a silver lining to this cloud. There is the light of new hope and courage which comes with the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This letter is so representative of the kind we are daily receiving that you can judge from it what you might expect from this treatment under similar circumstances.

Mrs. Conrad Schmidt, R. R. No. 1, Milverton, Ont., writes: "Two years ago last spring I was run down, had nervous prostration, and was in a terribly nervous condition. I could not sleep or eat. Could scarcely count the nights that I passed without sleep, and if I did eat, had sick headaches and vomiting spells. My limbs would swell so badly that it hurt me to walk. I would jump up in bed, awakened by bad dreams; in fact, I was so bad I thought I could not live, and started to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food without much hope.

"It was not long before I began to improve under this treatment, and I can truthfully say it has done me a world of good. It took some time to get the nervous system restored, but I kept right on using the Nerve Food regularly, and gradually gained in health and strength. I have a fine baby boy now. He weighed 12 lbs. at birth, and though my friends were anxious after the condition I was in, I got over that fine, and now weigh 120 lbs. Before using the Nerve Food I was a mere skeleton."

You are not asked to expect miracles from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. But if you are willing to feed back your exhausted nerves to health and strength you can depend absolutely on this great food cure to produce the desired results. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

The Market Report

Supplied by Randall, Gee & Mitchell, Limited, Winnipeg

A very positive feature of the world's wheat situation under the conditions now existing is that the markets are more sensitive to bullish than to bearish news. The underlying condition is bullish, and while this will not prevent wide price fluctuations, the chances are more favorable to the maintenance of a high level than to any permanent decline.

So far as present indications are a criterion, the beginning of the third year in the European struggle finds the wheat position the strongest it has been since that eventful August of 1914. In two out of three seasons of the war the harvests have been disappointing. In 1914 it might well be said that the breadstuffs needs of the world were almost wholly dependent on this continent, and while 1915 was a most favorable year in the surplus producing countries, the present season is one of disappointment.

The wheat market since the first of last July has been a most remarkable one. There have been great bull periods before, but it is very doubtful if these great price movements have been based on such substantial grounds. The trade has never seen heretofore a market which recorded so great an advance ostensibly on sheer speculation, and when that speculation went "stale" failed to turn sharply in the other direction and record a decline almost equal to the advance, if indeed it did not show a loss greater than the upturn.

It is the firm undertone of the market at the higher level that is most impressive. It is confirmatory of the strong commercial position of wheat independent of speculation. Few will dispute that previous to last week there was a decided shift in speculative sentiment to the short side of the market when prices had shown such marked hesitency to go higher. Based on the history of previous bull markets, this growing bearishness had excellent precedence, but these abnormal times and the market proved to be stronger than the speculative element realize.

Overcrowding the Roads

As the number of motor cars multiplies, the more evident it is that constant care by motorists is required. The highways are not being widened proportionately. There is a continually greater demand upon the available road space. Suppose a million or a million and a half new cars come on the market next season. Many of these will be operated by inexperienced drivers. There will be many accidents, of course. One great trouble is that even an experienced and careful driver is not safe, because an irresponsible person may at any moment run into him.—Editorial in Providence Journal.

PLANS FOR PLACING IMMIGRANTS ON THE LAND AFTER THE WAR

BETTER MANAGEMENT OF IMMIGRATION PROBLEM

Lord Shaughnessy Says That There Must Be a Selection of the Desired Classes and a Refusal to Accept Any and Every Settler Who Might Offer to Come to Canada

Lord Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, after returning from a prolonged tour of inspection of the company's system in the West, gave a most cheering report on conditions in the four Western Provinces.

Being asked about immigration after the war, His Lordship made several important statements. In the first place, he said that even if there was a movement toward Canada immediately after the war, it could not be handled, since it would take considerable time to get the troops back, and there would be a great deal of preliminary adjustment in Europe. In the second place, he said that after the war there ought to be a much more thorough administration of the immigration problem.

He said that in addition to dealing in a better way with the immigrant after he reached Canada, there should be perfect supervision at the point of origin. There must be a selection of the desired classes, and refusal to accept any and every settler who might offer to come to Canada.

In the third place, His Lordship said that after the war every means would be used to present the advantages of Canada to the intending settlers and to all desirable colonists who might wish to make new homes in new countries.

The Canadian Pacific would continue to make every effort to aid these settlers after they reached the Dominion. He expected that the policy of the ready-made farm would be continued, but he thought that instead of building houses, immigrants might be furnished with materials for buildings at the lowest possible prices and be allowed to construct their own buildings, thus reducing the cost and affording the newcomers employment for the first months of their residence in the Dominion.

"We have no manner of doubt with reference to the future of Canada after the war," said His Lordship. "In the course of a few years there will be a satisfactory immigration from Europe, and the development of the country will continue and go forward as rapidly as is desirable. Canada has fully demonstrated its productive capacity, and in the course of a few years, if we do our duty, it will be the equal of any country in the world. With reference to the Western Provinces, I would say that I have never wavered in my faith in them."

Clothing Prices to Ascend Now

Shortage of 200,000,000 pounds of wool confronts the clothiers of America, and unless sheep raisers in that continent get busy at once, winters are going to be colder for millions of persons who cannot meet higher prices, dealers declared in New York. The increasing difficulty of getting wool from abroad, and the amazing shortage of the product in this country is expected to cause a rise in the prices of woolen goods which will be unparalleled.

War and Women's Work

New Place of Women Brought About by War Conditions

The new place of women in the world is considered in an interesting article in the London Times. The dominant idea is that women have become the comrades of men. That implies equality—not uniformity. There is danger of the loss of certain little graceful courtesies—such as the raising of the hat or the man opening the door for the woman. If we keep steadily in view the idea of equality and justice we may be confident that what is good will survive, and what is superfluous will disappear.

After all, there was a good deal of humbug and hypocrisy in the old system. The man's hat was raised punctiliously, but somewhere some drunken husband was beating his wife, some loafer was living on his wife's hard work and savings. The woman was so sanctified that she must be protected from the arduous and dangerous labor of making a cross on a ballot; but she could scrub a floor. In this delicate feminine task of floor-washing she went down on her knees, thereby offering a curious resemblance to the old-fashioned gallant lover proposing marriage. It may have happened that the lover went down on his knees before marriage and the wife afterwards.

The occasion of the Times' articles, of course, is the part taken by women in the present war. Women have been seen running omnibuses, and working in munition factories. Truly an amazing spectacle, calculated to win men over to woman's suffrage! The danger, and the toil, and the drudgery and the anxiety connected with bringing up a family counted for nothing. But during the war it has been discovered that women are capable of doing hard work. So possibly they may win the suffrage. The woman omnibus conductor has done in a few months what the poor toiler at the needle and the washtub could not do in centuries.—Toronto Star.

Kitchener's Sound Vision

Kitchener had to make one of the hardest choices in history. . . . Nine soldiers in ten would have played for momentary results. They would have hurled into France every fully trained man. They would have packed off half-trained territorials after a month's hardening in camp. They would have left the future to take care of itself. Lord Kitchener, in rejecting the lure of prompt victory, showed the sounder estimate of the enemy's resources and capacity. His decision, a simple, intuitive, was the hardest and most momentous act of will which any general in Europe has taken since the Kaiser declared war. There was bigness and vision in that man, and the world must move against its wish to the slow rhythm of his thought. — The New Republic.

Life of Great Guns

The Life of Modern Artillery Pieces Is Comparatively Short

The life of a gun depends upon the progress of erosion, which sooner or later is certain to impair the accuracy of fire, according to Iron Age. Erosion is caused by the action of the explosive gases at high temperature and pressure. The hot gases cause a thin film of steel to absorb heat. The film expands and becomes set. Upon the release of the pressure it contracts, which causes minute cracks that grow larger with every discharge. As they increase in size they form passageways for more hot gas, and that tends to enlarge them still further. The inner surface thus becomes roughened and the bore begins to corrode. Finally, the bore becomes so enlarged that it allows the gases to escape. The shell does not then acquire its proper rotation, and its flight becomes erratic.

All guns except small ones are now constructed with linings in the tube, which, when the bore is worn out, are removed and replaced by new ones. The cost of relining a gun is approximately thirty per cent. of the cost of the gun. There appears to be no limit to the number of times that a gun can be relined. The small arms used in the United States are considered to be worn out after 5,000 to 7,500 rounds have been fired. Small naval guns can be fired about 1,000 times before they are regarded as worn out. Large twelve-inch and fourteen-inch naval guns are considered to have a life, on one lining, of from 150 to 200 rounds. Low velocity guns, such as howitzers and mortars, have correspondingly longer lives than high velocity guns of the same calibre, because the pressure they develop, and hence the temperatures, are lower.

Africa a Virgin Land

Development of North African Empire Expected After the War

When the war in Europe shall have ended, the first great question which peace will bring is that of a food supply for the nations pauperized by battles. There will be an immediate necessity for virgin lands from which huge crops may be taken at small cost, and with it will come the need for new sources of wealth of every sort, says the "World Outlook."

There can be no doubt but that Europe knows where they are to be found. Unquestionably one of the causes of the present war was the need for richer fields for development. France and England, particularly France, had found them. France had looked across the Mediterranean and had found at the very doorway of Europe the making of a great North African Empire. England had looked and found Egypt. Italy had looked and regained Tripoli for the Roman state.

Peace eventually would have resulted in the development of North Africa, but this war will equal a century of peace in that respect. Bandaged Europe, turning its empty pockets inside out, will cross the Mediterranean and the North African empire will cease to be a dream and will become a reality.

The Voting Age

In Many European Countries the Voter Has More Restrictions Than Here

Anywhere in North America one must have lived 21 years before he can vote. Not so in many other countries.

The Hun votes at 20, but the Austrian in the other half of the empire must be 24. Prussians cannot vote until they are 25 years old, and that is the minimum age limit in a number of German states.

Twenty-five is also the age in Holland, Belgium and Japan. Denmark is a believer in the wisdom that comes with age, hence no one there under 30 can vote. English-speaking races vote at 21.

In many countries soldiers are disfranchised, and under the Portuguese law no domestic servant or government employe had a ballot.

Sam Salter never lived in Belgium, and yet that country has a peculiar system of multiple voting. College graduates, for example, have three votes, and so do many others who fulfill property requirements.

About 300,000 Belgians have each three votes and more than that number have two votes. Failure to vote in Belgium is punishable as a misdemeanor.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Anxious to Settle in Canada

Lance-Sergt. Colin Alexander, of the Royal Highlanders, an interned prisoner of war at the Chateau Doex, Switzerland, has written to London saying how anxiously he and other disabled Canadians there are awaiting news of what Canada means to do to help them to re-estabiish themselves in Canada after the war. Alexander, whose thigh was fractured, but who is able to do light work, has ambitions which many others in Switzerland share, to settle down as a poultry farmer on a little Canadian place of his own.

Lawyer: Don't worry. I'll see that you get justice.

Client: I ain't hiring you for justice; I'm hiring you to win the suit.

OUR OBLIGATION TO OUR ALLIES AND THE SACRIFICES OF WAR

VIEW OF WHAT THE ALLIES HAVE GIVEN AND DONE

No Chapter in the History of National Friendships Has Held Greater Stories Than That Which Records the Reckless Sacrifices of Our Allies During the Early Period of the War

"I think that we shall never be the same people again," said Mr. Hughes, answering the first note of his welcome home. Australians may think with him, and hope with him, that we shall not. We laughed in the sun and followed our prosperous paths with cheerful and childlike arrogance. The first of our men ran bravely, even gayly, to the great game of war, hearing the trumpets and not the groans, seeing the waving banners and not the stricken fields. The knowledge and the pain of long endurance, sorrow and suffering have come to us since then. Surely no man in this country, aloof from war yet redly streaked by war's long fingers, can look back over two years without a sudden flood of almost ashamed gratitude for what other countries have done for it. When the news of war broke upon us two years ago, there were few indeed who looked forward to this time as only the glimmering dawn of the day of release. Britain was to be the avenger. Her might, though long unused, would spring at once to fullest life and crush the despoilers of Belgium and the ravishers of France. Those first black weeks left us gasping and sweating as from a nightmare. Confidence seemed on point of giving way to terrible foreboding. Then the fulfilment of Joffre's bravely patient plans brought a flush of hope, and after that we settled down to his grim nibblings.

In the long and undeciding months which followed we comprehended more and more distinctly how we were dependent upon strength outside our own. No chapter in the history of national friendships has held greater stories than that which records the reckless sacrifices of Russia for her allies' sake. She thrust an army lancelike into Prussia—it was too slenderly supported to be called a wedge—with the one purpose of lessening the terrible hammering on our weak lines in the west. The costly retreat of that army, involving the withdrawal of a line stretching north and south half across Europe never shook for a moment Russia's sacrifical loyalty. Belgium and Serbia have been destroyed, France has been bled fearfully, great wounds have been torn in the vast territory of Russia and Italy has flung millions in men and money into the whirlpool of war. Each of these nations has been drawn by necessity or policy into the struggle. While that fact is plain enough, we will not attempt meanly to disguise from ourselves the circumstance that their warring has achieved our preservation. Not Britain, nor any of the great nations now linked with her, could have withstood singly the fell preparations of the Germans.

Now, in our own countries, a great measure of strength and order has been wrought out of military nothingness. Though Kitchener has gone, his work remains. We believe that we see victory ahead of us, but we see, too, the pitiful price that has yet to be paid. Slowly we have dragged ourselves, through many little discords, to unity. It is our turn and our chance to repay our great and gallant friends. To this end Britain herself has given all. Her dominions have given much. To say that Austlaia could yet give more is not to decry the nobleness and unselfishness of hundreds of thousands of brave men. Individual sacrifices have been innumerable and wonderful. Britain, in calling upon every fit man to serve his turn, has made, as a nation, the supreme sacrifice, and paid her honest debt to the men who first stood to arms. And we—alas, we are laggards!—Sydney Sun.

"I am going to see your father about you," said a teacher to a boy who had exhausted her patience.

"If you do you'll never come back."

"Why?" demanded the teacher.

"'Cause pa's dead."

A Woman's Problem

How to Feel Well During Middle Life Told by Three Women Who Learned from Experience.

The Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease and pain. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs. Read these letters:—

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I started the Change of Life five years ago. I always had a headache and backache with bearing down pains and I would have heat flashes very bad at times with dizzy spells and nervous feelings. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new person and am in better health and no more troubled with the aches and pains I had before I took your wonderful remedy. I recommend it to my friends for I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. MARGARET GRASSMAN, 759 N. Ringgold St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Beverly, Mass.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for nervousness and dyspepsia, when I was going through the Change of Life. I found it very helpful and I have always spoken of it to other women who suffer as I did and have had them try it and they also have received good results from it."—Mrs. GEORGE A. DUNBAR, 17 Roundy St., Beverly, Mass.

Erie, Pa.—"I was in poor health when the Change of Life started with me and I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, or I think I should not have got over it as easy as I did. Even now if I do not feel good I take the Compound and it restores me in a short time. I will praise your remedies to every woman for it may help them as it has me."—Mrs. E. KISSLING, 931 East 24th St., Erie, Pa.

No other medicine has been so successful in relieving woman's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Women may receive free and helpful advice by writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Such letters are received and answered by women only and held in strict confidence.

"Opportunities in British Columbia," a publication issued by the firm of Heatons, Toronto, contains a reference to Courtenay and the Valley, together with four pages of illustrations Copies are to be had of the Dept, of Agriculture, Victoria, B. C.

The city of Vancouver spends daily the sum of $5,000 for butter, according to a recent authority, that is, $1.825,000 annually. The bulk of this money goes to the prairie provinces, in spite of the many dairying areas in this province. This is a fact that should make some of our farmers think hard, for many of the local farms are not being farmed at all, they are merely being "scratched," that is, when they are not let to a Jap. Yet there is good money in butter, or else how is it that the prairie provinces can sell their dairy products in this province, and in this very district at a profit, when climatically they are at a disadvantage compared with B, C. Perhaps some local farmer will enlighten our readers.

We print elsewhere, concerning improving trade prospects, what some of our readers may have read already in the daily press, but which will help to restore the confidence in the minds of those, and they are many, who have come to believe that British Columbia is "down and out" Far from it. The busy mills, the building of ships in both wood nd steel, the ready markets for our fruit and vegetables—All these factors spell prosperity that will affect directly or indirectly, everybody in this province. But the battle is for the strong and willing, those men who refuse to wait on the chance of business coming to them, but who will see that it does come, and who when that business is secured will be out after more. The chances awaiting enterprise were never more plentiful than they are today, and the Comox Valley has as many chances and opportunities for men of enterprise as any district in B. C. Those chances however must be taken up in time, for they quickly pass.

A most enjoyable dance was held in the Agricultural hall on Thursday evening.

HEADQUARTERS

In response to the appeal made by the Lord Mayor of London and the Duke of Norfolk representing the national committee for relief in Belgium, through his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, wherein it was suggested that the school children of the many schools throughout Canada should hold a "Childrens Day" on behalf of the children remaining in that part of Belgium occupied by the German armies. the pupils of the Headquarters school on the evening of the 13th of November at a social and dance.

As an incentive to the sale of tickets. the principal of the school, Miss M. Horbury had worked and presented a beautiful hand painted cushion to be drawn for by those taking tickets so that every ticket carried with it a chance to win it.

There were in all 119 tickets sold realizing the nice little sum of $59.50.

The numbers corresponding with the tickets sold having been placed in a box. Catherine McNaughton was asked to draw one, which she very pleasantly did, and was surprised to find the lucky number. 134, belonged to her mother. Good luck to Catherine.

During the evening Master Hallie Dixon was enthusiastic in the sale of chances to win a big box of candy by inviting guests to pay 10 cents and guess the number of beans contained in a bottle exhibited for any contestants gaze.

Mr. Sutliffe, our genial tousorial artist residing in that part of Head quarters known as Courtenay, was the lucky winner. Bill's modesty would not allow him to take the candy for himself, and afraid lest by donating it to any particular lady others might be angry with him, asked that it be put up for auction. This was done and after some spirited bidding was knocked down to Mr, Hartman of Headquarters. for the sum of $4. which also went to swell the proceeds of the evening's entertainment.

While the number of pupils attending this school is about 12 and each was most enthusiastic in his or her endeavor to make the evening a financial success. and by the sale of Belgian colors. candies, etc. brought the receipts up to the sum of $76 86.

Dancing was indulged in till about one o'clock by the camp time when a pleasant evening, made the moreso by the knowledge that the gathering was brought about in the hope of contributing somewhat materially to the happiness of children suffering pitifully as the result of the mad ambition of a crazy monarch was brought to a termination.

Much praise is due to Miss Horbury Miss Margaret MacNaughton Mrs. Dixon, and others whose efforts to make the evening a bright one in the memory of the children a success,

Many thanks are due to Messrs. Gallant and McInnes' whose spirited music was, as it always is, highly appreciated by those who dance the light fantastic.

Mr. Clarence McCormick ably acquitted himself as master of the dances so that not a single hitch marred the proceedings,

During the evening Mr. Miller entertained with many selections from the masters on his Victrola.

While it was suggested that the 15th of November "King Albert's Fete Day" would be an appropriate date on which to hold this entertainment, fearing it might clash with other appointments of those desiring to be present, the thirteenth was selected instead. Nevertheless, All Hail King Albert, may his children subjects soon have brighter days, is the loving wish of the school children of Headquarters. B. C,

Industrial Conditions in B. C.

The following notes are taken "Industrial Progress" for November, and are of a reassuring nature to those who have faith in the province, and who hope for a trade revival,

No material change has occurred in the lumber trade since last month although there has been some falling off in the demand from the prairies, attributed to a reduction of building operations on account of the harvesting. Nevertheless, the mills have still good orders on hand and there is little chance of stock accumulating. The present position of mills in operstion, is to catch up with the orders in hand, and a fair winter season is looked forward to.

The shingle manufacturers are still experiencing difficulty in securing a steady supply of shingle bolts, due to the shortage of labor.

In spite of the much greater log cut this year, there is no evidence of an undue surplus of logs for this season of the year, the mills having continued to take large quantities and cutting steadily.

In the mountain district, the labor shortage in the camps has caused the shut down of several large mills six weeks earlier than usual.

The Canadian products Ltd, plant at New Westminster started operations this month, handling 125 tons of potatoes daily, having large orders on hand for European governments.

Export shipment of apples from B. C. will exceed the 1915 season and prices are higher. The peach crop is somewhat light, but prices are satisfactory. In general the fruit industry in the interior is prosperous. New Zealand, Australia and South Africa have been large buyers of B. C. apples this year Heavy shipments have also been sent to England, Eastern states and the demand from the prairies has been satisfactory.

Terminal city Iron Works, Vancouver, who have completed their shell contracts, are busy with marine work in connection with the lumber vessels being built at North Vancouver, and have work on hand for nine months ahead. There is a surprising amount of work being given out by Wallace's Shipyard Ltd. in connection with the fittings of the vessels under construction and projected.

The car building plant of the C. N. R. at Port Mann will be in operation within a month or so and is designed to turn out five cars per day. It will be operated to capacity from the start, Representing a Norwegion syndicate. Mr. Otto Dahl, of Philadelphia, has ceen arranging to close ship building contracts amounting to about $5,000,000 and entailing the employment of from 1500 to 2000 men. The ships are to be built by the Wallace Shipbuilding Compapy, and by Messrs Coughlan & Company at their proposed yards on False Creek. Six ships are to be built at the Wallace Shipyards, each being of a register of 8800 tons. They will be steel steamers. The negotiations with the other firm are not sufficiently far advanced yet to permit of an announcement.

Over 70 men are now employed at the Ocean Falls plant of the Pacific Mills Ltd,. and the company has applied to the employment bureau, Vancouver, for an additional 200 men at $3 and $3.50 per day,

Married—On Wednesday, Nov. 15., at Vancouver, Mr. Robt. Filberg, the popular grading contractor of the Comox Logging and Railway Co, to Miss Florence McCormack, daughter of J. McCormack, President of the Canadian Western Lumber Co. Ltd., and its subsidery companies. The happy couple will make their future home at Headquarters,

CHAPTER XIX.

The manner in which Paul Payne received this announcement concerning the detective who was hanging about the grounds of Oare Court struck a blow to Lord Eastling.

Although he knew a good deal, and suspected much more, about the lawless doings of his brother-in-law in the past, the young man had hoped against hope that Paul was now, as he would have put it, "running straight," and that he was showing at least so much respect to the noble woman he had married as to keep away from questionable dealings now that he was connected by marriage with an honorable family.

Lord Eastling, favorably impressed from the outset by the manners and good temper of Paul Payne, had always been generous in his views of him, and had wished, as much for the man's sake as for Lady Ursula's, that he would live down his past bad record and prove himself at least apparently worthy of the family into which he had married, as an offset against his repudiation by the family into which he was born.

But the events of the past few days had shattered that hope, and Paul's sudden change of color on hearing about the detective in the grounds had made it impossible to doubt that he was still acting in concert with thieves.

Of course, Paul recovered his self-possession immediately, and affected to be much amused by the solemn warning thus given.

"That's awfully interesting by Jove!" said he as he opened the door. "Pasts always are exciting to hear about, aren't they, when they belong to other people?"

With these words he left his brother-in-law, and let himself into the room where Brady Gane was waiting.

Brady, who was fidgeting about impatiently, fingering everything in the room, apparently with the object of discovering something which it would be worth while to carry off, dropped the volume bound in red morocco, which he had been turning over, and drew himself up. "Well, where's the stuff?" asked he quickly.

Paul shook his head. It was plain from his looks that he had received a shock, and the other stared at him apprehensively.

"Nothing gone wrong, eh?" said he in a hoarse whisper. "If it has, Syd, it begins to look as if you'd lost your nerve, or something. I'm sick and tired of the way you've kept us hanging round. Come, out with it. What's amiss?"

Paul made an effort to recover his usual calm manner, which impressed his nervous and fidgety confederates so much. But the knowledge that danger had come so very close unnerved him, and his eyes wandered uneasily towards the window as he spoke.

"There's a Yard man in the grounds, on the lookout," said he. "You've been followed, Gane. You must get away as fast as you can, and be sure you don't go straight back to Evans. When you do see him, warn him to be careful."

But before he had come to the end of this speech the expression of the other man had altered somewhat. From interested he had become incredulous and impatient.

"Oh, yes, I dare say!" said he in a mocking tone. "We've had that game played on us already. Won't work the second time, my lord. Not 'alf!"

"What do you mean?" asked Paul, who, however, knew very well.

"Oh, what I mean, your lordship, is as you told me that when I come to see you at the hotel. You said as how there was a fellow on the lookout, and as you couldn't give me the stuff because he was ready for to pounce out on me. You said as I should find his hand on my shoulder before I'd got out of the house, and as he'd call a copper, and give me in charge. 'You mustn't be found with the stuff on you,' says you. And I, like the silly kid I was, let myself be kidded, and went away without the stuff. Lord, how you must have laughed."

Paul, seeing that he had a hard task before him in persuading Gane to go away quietly without the stones, sat down in an armchair, crossed his legs and took out a cigar.

Brady's eyes grew round with indignation.

"Look here," said he, "I'll stand no nonsense. Go and fetch the stuff, and share out. No more larks!"

"I'm not in the humor for larks, I assure you. Neither am I in the humor to be arrested on a charge of being concerned in stealing valuable jewellery. And as that is what would inevitably happen if you were to go out of the house with ten thousand pounds' worth of stones on you, I'm obliged to deny your request, unreasonable as it no doubt seems to you."

Gane moved impatiently.

"Stow that bunkum!" growled he. "I wasn't arrested at the hotel when I was fool enough to listen to you, and to let myself be gulled into going away without the pearls you promised us. Well, I was had once, but I'm not having none this time."

Paul shook his head.

"I can't help that. I see the point of your remarks, but the fact that you escaped search once does not induce me to think you would escape a second time. Anyhow, I can't afford to run risks."

"Why not? I can."

Paul laughed not in a conciliatory tone.

"It's not quite the same thing. What are your risks compared to mine?"

"Oh, come now——"

Paul drew himself up and spoke with more emphasis.

"I repeat: what are your risks? What is a term of imprisonment to you? You've done one or two already, and you're as well off in gaol as you are out of it; better. With me it's different. Even you will admit that, I suppose."

"Even me! I like your cheek, Syd."

"Of course you do. It's my cheek, as you call it, that has enabled me to help you in ways that I'm sorry for and ashamed of."

Gane stuck out his chin.

"Oh, so that's it, is it? You're coming the virtuous dodge over us, eh, to get out of giving back our share? What are you going to do with them, eh? Give 'em back again, perhaps? Like what they say you did with the pearls? Is that the new game? Chuckle-headed sort of sport, I call it, and what's more, I don't believe as you mean to do it. So there now."

Paul shook his head.

"If I were ever so virtuous I couldn't give back the things now, because they don't exist any longer. I've taken the stones out and thrown away the settings——"

"Yes! pretty well that, for a man as is turned so good!"

Paul nodded.

"As you say, it's pretty well for a man turned good. But I'm not good. Don't be afraid. I'm only frightened."

"Frightened!"

The confession was so unexpected that Gane stared.

But Paul nodded again gravely and slowly.

Yes, it's funk, pure funk, blue funk, that makes me anxious that neither you, nor I, nor Evans should be caught now. A little while ago I think I could have carried it off without so much as minding the penalty. But I couldn't now; I own it." His face grew very grave, and he looked out at the trees and the lawn and the misty landscape beyond, instead of at Gane, as he went on: "I want to turn over a new leaf."

Gane laughed hoarsely, incredulous still.

"Well, turn away as fast as ever you like. We shan't stop you," he cried mockingly. "Only, before you turn, just you hand us over what belongs to us."

"All right. But not now. Listen, Gane, I want to know whether you and Evans will consent to some sort of a new arrangement. You wouldn't get much on the stones, under the circumstances, would you?"

But Gane's face had flushed, and his eyes were protruding.

"No, you don't," cried he with excitement, as he clenched his fist and ground his teeth, and came nearer to Paul in a threatening attitude. "You don't play that game on us. We're not a-going for to take a few sovereigns and leave you to go off with the swag that we've been waiting for our share of this many weeks. We're——"

Paul rose from his chair, and his face assumed that hard look which Gane was more accustomed to in him than to the more amiable expression which he had worn so far that morning.

"All right," he said quietly. "Bluster away. But I'm not going to give you the stones to carry away today, as I know you wouldn't get away without being followed, and if you were followed you would be caught, and if you were caught you'd involve me. I don't pretend to be acting unselfishly."

"I should think not!" jeered Gane at a white heat.

"I'm not a saint."

"Not quite."

"I'm rather the other thing."

"Just about."

"But I can't afford to be found out."

"And suppose I was to go right up to this 'tec—if I could find him," jeered Gane, "and to tell him as there was a fine gentleman in this house with a good haul of jewels as wasn't his own to be accounted for, what then?"

"Then you would probably get locked up as a person suffering from delusions," observed Paul imperturbably.

THE PEACE RIVER COUNTRY

This Fertile Area of Canada's Hinterland Described in a New Booklet

The demand for accurate and reliable information with regard to the Peace River country is widespread, and is rapidly becoming more insistent. Any effort, therefore, that may be made to provide this information through official sources is both timely and valuable.

A booklet entitled "The Peace River Country" just issued by the Department of the Interior dealing with this matter deserves to be brought prominently to public attention.

Hitherto those who wished to obtain information with reference to this new land have been dependent on reports of a more or less fragmentary nature, gathered from any source that happened to be available. In compiling authentic information from reliable sources and publishing it in the form of a handy and attractive booklet of fifty pages, the Department has provided a much needed source of information for all who are or who may become interested in the Peace River country.

While a few pioneer settlers have from time to time penetrated this portion of Northern Canada, it has only been within the past few years that it has been possible to regard the great Peace River valley as within the reach of the homeseeker. The almost insurmountable difficulty in taking in supplies and machinery and the corresponding task of marketing the crop rendered this fertile area of Canada's hinterland a veritable "terra incognita."

Although but few have explored this district, many will be surprised to learn that so long ago as 1876 grain from the Peace River captured the trophy in competition with the world at the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia.

The booklet deals with all the subjects which naturally suggest themselves to the average inquirer. Under the headings of Agriculture, Timber, Minerals, Game and Transportation the pamphlet gives a mass of information. Climate and rainfall are also dealt with. Numerous extracts are given from the reports of well-known explorers and scientists who have visited the country, dating from the beginning of last century down to the present day. There is a consensus of opinion among these authorities as to the adaptability of the country to the growth of all grains and root crops. The great amount of sunshine which obtains in these northern latitudes renders vegetation both rapid and luxuriant.

In the Peace River district the seasons change very quickly, so that as soon as the snow passes the ground is ready for seeding. The soil in some places consists of a rich black loam. In others it varies from a blue clay with a top soil of sandy loam—from two to six inches—to a sandy loam much desired by wheat growers.

Vegetables attain a large size. During a large part of the winter season cattle and horses may remain outdoors.

It is a country adapted both to mixed farming and ranching.

A copy of the booklet may be obtained by addressing the Railway Lands Branch, Department of the Interior, Ottawa.

Bulletin on Farm Accounts

Valuable Information Contained in a New Bulletin by Prof. G. G. White

"Farm Cost Accounting," is the title of a new bulletin by Prof. G. G. White, of Manitoba Agricultural College. In writing this bulletin, Prof. White treats the question of farm accounts from rather a new angle. He holds that the type of bookkeeping required on a farm differs entirely from ordinary bookkeeping. "The primary object of farm cost accounting," says Prof. White, "is to determine what the farm business as a whole is making or losing each year, what each department is making or losing, and to give such information regarding each as will enable the owner to manage his farm more intelligently by knowing what it is costing him to produce."

After dealing in detail with the whole problem of farm cost accounts, Prof. White includes a number of tables and instructions, such as how to estimate the number of bushels of grain in a bin, amount of hay in a stack, quantity of silage in a silo, data regarding average life of implements, and similar information of general farm interest. A copy of the bulletin may be had free from the Manitoba Department of Agriculture or Manitoba Agricultural College, Winnipeg.

New Competitors in Bacon

The number of competitors in the world's bacon market is increasing and quality will be more than ever the price of pre-eminence when the war is over.

And this reputation they have maintained for years and will continue to maintain, for these pills must always stand at the head of the list of standard preparations.

A British Julius Caesar

Julius Caesar had a prominent namesake in Sir Julius Caesar, Master of the Rolls during the reign of James I., who married a niece of Bacon, and perhaps knew the key to the notorious "cypher." About him Lord Clarendon tells an amusing story. The unpopular Earl of Portland sat up all night in a barricaded house with his friends and retainers armed to the teeth, because he had found in his pocket a slip of paper on which was written "Remember Caesar." Next day he found that this referred, not to the assassination of the Roman statesman, but to some preferment promised to a son of Sir Julius Caesar. The tomb of Sir Julius Caesar, with a quaint epitaph in legal phraseology, is among the many curious monuments of St. Helen's, Bishopsgate.

Little Johnny, who had been studying history but a short time, thought he would give his grandfather a try-out on the subject, and asked:

"Say Gramp, what great war broke out in 1850?"

The old gentleman laid down his paper and looked thoughtfully at the boy for a moment, and then a sudden light dawned upon him.

"Why," he said, "that was the year I married your grandmother."—Harper's Magazine.

Winter Feeding of Cattle

Low Grade Grain That Can Be Used to Advantage in Feeding

At the present time there are daily passing through the Winnipeg stock yards scores of carloads of stocker and feeder cattle which are on their way from the farms of Manitoba and Saskatchewan to the farms of the Central and Central Western States. During the month of August, 4,895 head of cattle of all classes crossed the line from the Winnipeg yards, and this was before the stocker and feeder movement had got under full steam. At the same time, there is in many parts of our own country a good deal of feed that will never be used, some of it grain that is scarcely worth threshing, but that could be used to feed a large number of animals.

This combination of circumstances makes especially timely a new circular on Winter Feeding of Cattle by the Animal Husbandry Department of Manitoba Agricultural College. This circular contains data as to actual results in previous Manitoba feeding experiments, and offers suggestions to those who are open to consider this line of enterprise. A free copy may be had by writing the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Winnipeg, or Manitoba Agricultural College.

New Banking Device

Multiple Cheque Is Great Saver of Depositor's Time

The multiple check is the latest banking device to save depositors trouble. It has been brought out by a Boston trust company, and its chief use is to make it possible for a depositor to pay all his monthly bills by drawing one cheque on or about the first of the month.

The new cheque is precisely like the old style cheque, except that its size is much increased to give room at the bottom for writing a list of firms, with the sum set opposite each one which the drawer desires to pay. These are added up, and the cheque for the total, payable to the bank, is duly filled out and signed.

That ends the bother of the depositor, for the bank does the rest. It deposits the sums named to the credit of such payees as happen to be depositors and remits to the others.

The payer may make entry of the firms and amounts paid on the stub of the cheque, or he may enter only the total, saving his statements of account for record.

The plan means more work for the bank and less for the depositor. But the bank gets its reward, no doubt, in the satisfaction of the patron and the consequent attraction of other patrons.

The bank cheque is a wonderful instrument of business. We have become so accustomed to it that we sometimes fail to appreciate its daily miracle. The invention of the multiple cheque shows that the uses to which cheques may be put have by no means been exhausted.

MOTHER LOVE AIDS SON IN TRENCHES

It Brings Relief to Boy Standing His Watch Deep In Mud.

Once upon a time, only a few months after this terrible world war had begun, Private Bailey, a soldier in the ranks, had stood for days in the trenches "somewhere in France." The cold rains soaked him to the skin; the mud was deep. He had had no rest. Weary and aching with rheumatic pains, he recalled the faith his mother had in Sloan's Liniment. He asked for it in his next letter home. A large bottle was immediately sent him and a few applications killed the pain, once more he was able to stand the severe exposure. He shared this wonderful muscle-soother with his comrades, and they all agreed it was the greatest "reinforcement" that had ever come to their rescue. At your druggist, 25c, 50c and $1.00 a bottle.

Britain's Amazing Inventions

The British are manufacturing new war inventions "which would turn the Krupps green with envy," according to Dr. Benjamin Rand, of Harvard University, who returned to New York recently from a visit to England.

Accorded privileges of inspection by the British Foreign Office, Dr. Rand said he visited munition and ordnance factories and saw "some astounding inventions," but that he was pledged not to disclose their nature.

He found among every class, he said, an intense determination to do all possible to win the war. In one factory he saw 7,000 women at work, uniformed in khaki.

New factories were being built, he said, and existing ones constantly extended.

Cannon and the Clouds

Improbable That Cannonading Has an Appreciable Effect on Rainfall

By a remarkable coincidence the latter half of the year of 1914, and the whole of 1915 and 1916, so far as it has gone, have shown an excessive rainfall in many parts of America and Europe, a state of affairs that has given rise to many surmises concerning the relations between the discharge of great quantities of ammunition at the front in Europe and the heavy fall of moisture. In an address delivered recently before the British Rainfall Association a member of that body pointed out that the processes of nature are so vast that it is highly improbable that even the great gunfire of recent months has had any effect on precipitation. To illustrate this statement it was shown that in one month the excess of rainfall over an area of 58,000 square miles, which includes England and Wales, was 3 1-2 inches. The speaker showed that this large excess represents over thirty billion tons of water and that the minimum quantity of air which must have been carried over England and Wales to transport that water in the form of vapor must have been at least 100 times that amount in weight. Such staggering figures are regarded as evidence that the amount of force required to move masses of this magnitude is far beyond that which can be exerted even by modern nations at war.
