Big Arms and Ammunition Concern Builds Branch Factory in Canada

Canadian endorsement of quality in loaded shot shells has brought the Remington Arms Union Metallic Cartridge Company across the border with the first ammunition factory to be built in this country by United States manufacturers to supply this market. This big arms and ammunition concern, now nearing its one hundredth year of business activity, has its principal factories at Bridgeport, Conn., U.S.A., where ammunition is made, and at Ilion, N.Y., U.S.A., the home of modern arms making. Up to this year the steadily increasing Remington business in Canada has been handled from the home factories, but of late our dealers and sportsmen have made the demand so strong that early in 1913 the company's Executive Board decided to build a branch factory on this side of the line. Windsor, Ontario, offered advantages as a central distributing point and as a skilled labor market and early in 1913 a factory site consisting of over one hundred acres was purchased there.

The problem then was to rush the plant to early completion and install an equipment capable of producing ammunition of the same high quality demanded in the strict 'home factory' inspection. The order was given to spare no expense in providing for the expeditious filling of the unusually heavy orders of the year. A large force of workmen was recruited and five months from the day the first ground was broken Windsor boasted a strictly modern ammunition factory equipped with the latest improved machinery, a ballistic range and chronograph for testing penetration, velocity, pattern, etc., together with powder magazines and storage warehouses. Builders who watched the seemingly magical creation of the splendid plant in all its completeness claim that a remarkable record was made in the erection and installation work.

Two railroads have built switches to the factory door and there is a direct connection with the lake routes so that every facility is afforded for prompt shipments. Deliveries of the famous Arrow, Nitro Club and New Club speed shells are already being made from the new factory.

The Dog and the Lobster

A Scotsman was strolling through the market-place in Glasgow one day and close at his heels followed his faithful collie. Attracted by a fine display of shell and other fish, the Scot stopped to admire, perhaps to purchase. The dog stood by, gently wagging its tail, while its master engaged the fishmonger in conversation.

Unfortunately for the dog, its tail dropped for a moment over a big basketful of fine, live lobsters. Instantly one of the largest lobsters snapped its claws on the tail and the surprised collie dashed off through the market yelping its pain, while the lobster hung on grimly, though dashed violently from side to side.

The fishmonger for a moment was speechless with indignation, then, turning to his prospective customer, he bawled:

Hoots, mon, returned the other complacently, whustle to yer lobster!

Advice to Farmers

Present prospects indicate a fair crop of grain throughout the three western provinces, but do not point to any larger yield than last year. This, combined with the big shortage in the spring wheat crop of the United States, and also that of France and other European countries, and the present high price of corn, all points toward a high level of prices, and we cannot see any reason why prices should be hammered down to the low level of last year. We claim the right value of 1 Northern should not be less than 95c; 2 C. W. oats, 40c; 1 N.W.C. Flaxseed, $1.50, and 3 C. W. Barley, 50c; basis in store Fort William or Port Arthur, but of course, if farmers rush their grain on the market early with instructions to sell for what it will bring, prices are bound to be forced lower. Any farmer who is in a position to hold his grain at home should do so, and those who are obliged to sell to get cash should ship and sell only enough to carry them over. If the selling of all our grain could be spread evenly over the whole season, prices could easily average from 10c to 15c per bushel higher, which would mean an enormous extra amount of cash brought into Western Canada. Last year the larger bulk of our grain was sold at ridiculously low prices—selling down as low as 73½c for 1 Northern; 102½c for 1 N.W.C. Flaxseed; 30c for 2 C.W. Oats, and 44c for 3 C.W. Barley. Since spring opened we have sold 1 Northern at 100c; 1 N.W.C. Flaxseed 130c; 2 C.W. Oats at 38c, and 3 C. W. Barley at 51c, basis in store Fort William or Port Arthur. This easily shows the huge loss to farmers through marketing their grain in enormous quantities right at the beginning of the season. There is far more reason this year for prices of our wheat ranging above the dollar mark than last year. Once prices are forced down it is hard to get them to advance again until stocks in sight are greatly reduced; therefore, be careful not to rush your grain forward too fast. Every carlot held back helps just that much to hold prices up and put them higher.

We would advise farmers that whenever possible load your grain direct from the waggon into the car, and when you send your shipping bill to a commission agent, figure out the situation well before selling. To send instructions to sell for whatever it will bring, serves to break prices down more quickly than any other way we know of. Instruct your commission agent that you want your grain sold at a certain price and then hold for that price. If you do have to pay two or three cents per bushel storage what of it, because you will eventually get the price you want, and besides you are helping to hold prices up.

The distribution of cars should also be watched closely. Farmers should get together and arrange to have a representative keep careful watch on the railway order book and see that each man is allotted cars according to the Grain Act. That is what the Grain Act is for and if you do not use it, the fault lies with yourselves.

We are grain commission merchants and give our undivided attention to this business. Our experience extends around 28 years, and farmers consigning grain for us to handle receive the benefit of this experience in the advice and information we give them. We have no agents in the country, simply because our 1c per bushel commission charges does not give us profit enough to permit of engaging agents at country points, and at the same time show even a small profit on the season's business.

Write us for our shipping instructions and grain market advice. Even if you do not ship grain for us to handle, write anyway. The information may help you to secure better net returns, and it may lead to bringing us some of your business the following season. We can handle your grain right for you and we know it, and we want you to know it also. That will mean more business for us, which is exactly what we are working for.

Facts and Figures

Because a farmer keeps a herd of dairy cows it does not necessarily follow that each one in the herd is especially adapted for dairying. The type and general appearance may be good, the temperament and disposition may promise fair results, but the real value of each one is to be measured actually and practically by just her individual yield not the average of the herd as a whole, at the end of a full season's work.

Over and over again when dairy farmers have checked up the production separately of each cow there have been found wonderful surprises and serious disappointments. Those good lookers have turned out to be poor producers; the despised cow of insignificant appearance has often proved a splendid moneymaker when her moderate cost of feed has been deducted from the large total yield of milk and fat. Some cow testing figures recorded by the dairy division at Ottawa, show great contrasts. For instance, two cows yielding the same weight of milk may differ in profit by $25.00. The aged cow may do far better than the five-year-old. Two mature cows in the same herd have been known to differ in production by eight thousand pounds of milk. One herd of twelve cows last year gave thirty-six tons of milk more than another herd of twelve. How are these vital points to be definitely ascertained by the practical dairyman? Such facts are brought to light when figures are used. It is just as simple as A. B.C. Keep records of individual production; it takes scarcely ten minutes per cow per month, and abundantly pays every dairyman.

Nero's Golden House

Dr. Fritz Weege, a young German archaeologist, drew attention to the enormous palace that was once erected by Nero in Rome. The Italian government, in consequence, instituted the very interesting excavations that are now being made in what is called 'The Golden House.' This immense palace covered an acre of ground and was about three times the size of the present Vatican. The Golden House, which extended from the Palatine far up the Esquiline, was erected after the burning of Rome in 64. The building was afterwards converted by Nero's successors into other edifices. The excavations are revealing much that is of extraordinary interest.

AN INFERNAL MACHINE

It Excited a Commotion, but Did Not Go Off

By GROVER J. GRIFFIN

"Captain," said the third officer of the ocean liner Tartaric, saluting his chief, "the baggagemaster reports a box in the hold in which there is some mechanical contrivance that ticks."

"Well, what of it?"

"There was talk of anarchists blowing up the ship before we left. I should suppose that in view of such talk it might be well to examine the box with a view to discovering if it contains an infernal machine."

"Where is the box now?"

"In the hold."

"Get it up into the baggage room, and I'll have a look at it."

Later Captain Chambliss inspected the box. It was rectangular in shape, about two feet long by eighteen inches broad and deep. On the cover was the name Ethan B. Jenkins.

"Who's Mr. Jenkins?" asked the captain.

Nobody knew.

"Send for the purser."

The purser came, and the captain asked him if there was a passenger aboard of the name of Jenkins. The purser said there was and dispatched a steward to look for him and send him to the baggage room. Mr. Jenkins was a dapper little man, who looked no more like an anarchist than a Hottentot.

"What's in the box?" asked the captain.

"Articles picked up abroad intended as presents for my friends."

"Is there a clock in it?"

"Not that I am aware of."

"Listen."

All were silent, and the ticking was distinctly heard by all. A great change came over the face of Mr. Jenkins. He looked terror stricken. He seemed to be thinking hard for a few moments; then, thrusting his hand into his breast coat pocket, he drew out an envelope and, taking out a letter, read it hastily and handed it to the captain. It was as follows:

"GOODBY, MY FRIENDS," HE SAID.

Mr. Jenkins, I am employed in the packing room of the house of De Four Freres. I am a member of an anarchist circle and have been ordered to pack an infernal machine in a box to be shipped to America. Yesterday I placed one among articles bought by you of this house. The mechanism is set to explode the bomb in four days. The thought of causing the destruction of hundreds of persons has palled on me. I am horrified at what I have done and write this letter that you may avoid the consequences of my act. Do not attempt to open the box. If you are at sea throw it overboard. I leave De Four Freres at once and cannot be found.

There was no signature to the letter nor anything by which the anarchist could be identified, for it had been written and addressed by a typewriter.

"Why did you not take action to get rid of the thing at once?" inquired the captain sternly.

"I thought it was a hoax. My nephew, Charlie Burns, is always playing practical jokes on me, and I had no doubt that this was one of them."

"Heave the thing overboard at once!" cried the captain.

"Not on your life!" interposed the owner. "There are things in that box which I would not take thousands of dollars for. What need for hurry? The letter says the machine is set to fire the bomb in four days. This is only the third day."

"I don't care if it's only the first," snapped the captain. "I'm not going to endanger the ship and those aboard by carrying an infernal machine. Take it out and heave it overboard, I say."

"I protest in presence of the persons present that if you do I'll hold the company for damages. There is no necessity to send such valuable property to the bottom. In the first place, as you already know, the machine is set to go off in four days from the date it was packed. It was packed the day we sailed; therefore it will not explode till we are near the American coast. I'm not sure it will explode at all. It may be that it's a joke prepetrated by that fellow Burns after all. If so he wouldn't hesitate to put a clock in the box to make it worse. I wish I had him here now to punch his head. This isn't the first time he's caused me trouble by his pranks."

"What do you propose?" asked the captain. "If you think the matter a hoax you'd better open the box and find out whether it is or not."

"And blow up your ship as well as myself if it's a real infernal machine?"

The captain evidently had not thought of that. He looked confused.

The captain looked relieved. He told the purser to take down a list of the articles in the box from the owner, with their values, so that in case the box were lost the amount of claim would be limited. But he did not want to have this done before getting rid of the box. He directed one of the crew to carry it to the upper deck, where the lifeboats were swung on the davits, and put it in one of the lockers intended for provisions, wedging it so that it would not slide about with the motion of the waves. This was done. The boat was lowered, a cable attached to her bow, and she was suffered to drift a hundred yards astern.

While this was being done the captain gave orders that what was in the boat, or rather what was supposed to be in the boat, be confined to those who were in the baggage room when the matter was discussed. He did not consider that a bomb a hundred yards away from the ship could endanger her.

The Tartaric sighted Fire island on the fourth day out. She was twelve knots east of Montauk point just before daylight on the morning of the fifth day. A man stood on the after deck of the ship, where the cable that towed the lifeboat was attached. He tied loosely to the rope a pair of oars, which drifted back to the lifeboat. Then he fixed to the rope a clutch with handles like those of a pair of tinner's shears. Grasping the handles, he swung himself off the stern and let himself down slowly till he reached the water. The pressure against him exerted by the headway of the ship was so great that he would not have been able to maintain his hold had it not been for this clutch. By its use he let himself be slowly forced backward till he reached the lifeboat and pulled himself up by the cable on to its bow.

Once in the boat he cast an eye to the westward, where shone a light, which he recognized as one on Montauk point. Taking from the bow the oars he had sent before him, he put them in the boat. Then he cast off and was left astern. As the dark body of the Tartaric grew darker in the distance he smiled and raised his hat to her.

"Goodby, my friends," he said. "I think I can now get on without your valuable assistance."

Taking the box from the locker in which it had been placed, he ripped it open with a screwdriver he drew from his pocket, took out a clock, which he threw overboard, and a small package, which he concealed in a pocket of his flannel shirt. Then, beginning to shiver with the cold, he took up the oars and pulled for the light on Montauk point.

By this time a streak of gray light appeared in the east end, in due time the sun came up, but the man in the boat did not need its warmth to dry his clothes, for the heat of his body, kept up by the exercise of rowing, had already done that. He was making slow progress, for one man pulling on so large a boat could not move it rapidly. However, by 9 o'clock in the morning he was but half a dozen miles from the Long Island coast, and, a motorboat passing him, he made a bargain with the man running her to take him ashore.

Once on terra firma, leaving his boat hauled up on a beach, he started inland till he came to a town, where he hired a horse and buggy to carry him to the northern coast of the island. There he chartered a motorboat to take him across the sound to Saybrook, where he boarded a Long Island eastbound train for Boston. Arriving there in the afternoon, he purchased clothing and, dropping into a diamond dealer's, took from his pocket the package he had taken from the box supposed to contain the infernal machine, unrolled it and displayed a dozen enormous diamonds. Before leaving the shop he sold a number of them to the dealer and early the next morning parted with the rest of his stock, realizing a handsome profit between what the stones had originally cost him at the diamond mines and what he received for them. He had reached the end of a series of brilliant impostures to defraud the customs.

On the morning of the day the Tartaric arrived in port an officer announced to the captain that the lifeboat astern was missing. The captain, surprised, asked if the owner of the box had been notified, and, on being told that he had not, a steward was sent to find him. Later the messenger returned to say that Mr. Jenkins was missing. The captain looked astonished; then a light broke in upon his brain.

"A smuggling dodge!" he exclaimed. 'Keep it from the inspectors."

Before the Tartaric sailed again her captain had been notified that a lifeboat with his ship's name on the bow was lying on a beach on the eastern end of Long Island. He gave orders to have it shipped by water to New York, but asked no questions as to how it came there.

His Explanation.

A milkman in a country town not far from New York was brought before the local court to answer a charge of adulteration of milk.

"You are charged," said the judge, "with a most serious offense, of selling adulterated milk. Have you anything to say in answer to the charge?"

"Well, your worship," answered the milkman, "the night before it was raining very hard, and the only cause I can give is the cow must have got wet through."—Harper's Weekly.

At a Pink Tea.

"What a perfectly lovely little town is this! I'm visiting Mrs. Wilkins, you know. I don't believe I had been here a day or more before everybody tried to outdo the other in making me feel at home. Wasn't that your experience when you first arrived?"

"Well, I'm afraid I can't"—

"Oh, I beg your pardon. I'm so sorry. For the moment I forgot. You're the new minister's wife, aren't you?"—St. Louis Republic.

Not the Same.

They were strolling through the woodland.

"Yes," the youthful professor was saying, "it is a very simple matter to tell the various kinds of trees by the bark."

She gazed at him soulfully.

"How wonderful!" she exclaimed. "And can you—er—tell the various kinds of dogs that way?"—Brooklyn Eagle.

Breaking His Promise.

"All the same, you promised mother that you'd never let a cloud come between us."—Pele Mele.

Lucky Survivor.

Dora—That charming Miss Peach seems to have quite a number of eligible young men in her train.

Dick—Yes. And one of these days there's going to be a smashup to that train, with only one survivor.—Exchange.

Gymnastic Stunt.

Barbour—You seem warm. Have you been exercising?

Waterman—Yes, indeed. I went to the mutes' dance and swung dumb belles around all evening.—Michigan Gargoyle.

A Wireless Club.

The first "wireless" club in Britain has been established at Sale, near Manchester, and meetings are held every night. Members while in meeting tap the world's news and receive all sorts of items from land and sea. There are seventeen members, and each is the licensed owner of a wireless installation. "In respect of all messages picked up by wireless we are pledged to secrecy," said a member. "We are also not allowed to use the commercial wave. We send out a shorter length."

Was Beam In Bishop's Eye.

There have been many quiet chuckles during the last few days at the expense of Dr. Ingram, Bishop of London. He strongly objects to long-winded bishops, and told the students at Queen's College, a few days ago, that he always tried to deliver one instead of two addresses at confirmation services. "I think," he said, "we are all much too long-winded." And then he spoke for forty minutes

PAINTING THE LOCK GATES.

One of the most important of the questions that presented themselves in the construction of the Panama canal was that of a suitable means of preserving from corrosion the structural steel of the lock gates, valves, etc. These will be exposed to the action either of salt water or of fresh water highly charged with decaying vegetable matter, at comparatively high temperatures and often swiftly running.

They will be accessible for inspection and repair only at long intervals. The lock gates, which represent over 60,000 tons of structural steel, have exterior surfaces of over 1,000,000 square feet, will have portions of their structures continually immersed, other portions will be alternately immersed and exposed to the air, and still others will be exposed to the air continually.

The interior surfaces of the lock gate structures will be subject to moisture of condensation and leakage and will be at high temperatures. These interior surfaces, which have a total superficial area, including stiffeners, etc., of over 3,000,000 square feet, will be accessible with difficulty, and repainting will be effected only at great expense and inconvenience.

It is doubtful if, in the present state of knowledge of the art, it will be possible to prevent wasting away by corrosion of this steel, except at the expense of comparatively frequent repainting.

It should be said, however, that the class of protective paint adopted by the engineers for the interiors of the lock gates is unquestionably the most efficient for the purpose that the present knowledge of the art affords, although this same material probably would not give satisfaction if used on surfaces exposed even intermittently to sunlight and open air.—Henry Williams in Engineering Magazine.

THE NEWEST ART SCHEME.

Change the Light and You Change the Picture or Design.

A graduate of the Moscow School For Painting, Sculpture and Architecture has invented a unique artistic device, which may be used with much effect on the stage and perhaps can be utilized for the home. This invention renders it possible to paint several different scenes on one canvas. When the light on the stage is changed the decorations also change.

A panel was exhibited at the Moscow Artistic theater which represented a scene with beautiful autumn tints in the red light of a sunset. The light was then changed and the scenery changed at the same time, and a nymph was discovered in front of a tree, bathed in moonlight.

The invention is based on the physical law concerning the complementary colors of the spectrum. It is claimed that wall paper printed by this method is one color in daytime, different during twilight and changes again by moon or lamplight. The changes can be brought about by switching electric lights.—From a Consular Report.

Honoring a Poet.

A bronze bust of Madison Cawein, the Kentucky poet, was recently unveiled in the public library of his native city, Louisville. Speaking of Mr. Cawein and his work, William Dean Howells, our dean of American letters, says, "He has the gift, in a measure surpassed by no poet, of touching some smallest or commonest thing in nature and making it live from the manifold associations in which we have our being and glow thereafter with an inextinguishable beauty."

Roller Skating In Vienna.

No roller skating in the streets of Vienna. The edict, according to a letter from that city, will be rigidly enforced. The police authorities in answer to a plea from the children stated that "the objection of one householder in a street is sufficient to banish skaters from that thoroughfare, and as there is undoubtedly one person in every street who would exercise the prerogative skating must remain a ring amusement."—New York Tribune.

A Neglected Monument.

Overgrown with small palms and other tropical vegetation is the monument to Magellan, on the island of Mata, in the Philippines, where he was killed in 1521 by the hostile natives. The monument was erected many years ago on the spot where he was slain, but the island is not much visited, and the monument, especially in the years since American occupation of the islands, has become much in need of repair.

Times Have Changed

"Do you remember when the people demanded specie payment?"

"Yes. In those days people said they wanted hard money. Now everybody wants easy money."—Washington Star.

Ideas must work through the brains and the arms of good and brave men or they are no better than dreams.—

FACING TORTURES.

WILLING TO DIE FOR ANOTHER.

Story of a Dramatic Episode In Which the Iowa and Musquakie Tribes Figured—Heroism That Won the Admiration of the Enemy.

A striking story of the courage and self sacrifice of which the American Indian at his best is capable is given by O. H. Mills in the Des Moines Register and Leader. It was told to the white men by the famous Sac chief, Black Hawk, who himself saw the incident.

It all began with an unfortunate quarrel between an Iowa and a Musquakie, in which the latter killed the former and then in a moment of frenzy scalped his victim. The two tribes were at peace, and this act, allowable only in time of war, was, in Indian eyes, an intolerable breach of good faith.

The Musquakies offered all sorts of reparation, but the Iowas would accept nothing but the person of the offender, to be tortured and put to death in propitiation of the outraged spirit of the dead man. To this the Musquakies agreed on condition that the culprit be given a month to fortify himself for his terrible ordeal. But just as the month was about to expire he fell ill with a raging fever. In that condition he could not be carried across the prairie, but a failure to produce him at the appointed place would arouse the suspicions and perhaps the hostility of the Iowas.

A council was called to debate the matter, before which appeared Cono, a brother of the sick man. "There are no squaw men in our family," he declared. "I will go in his place."

The others tried to dissuade him and described to him the tortures he would have to undergo, but he insisted upon making the sacrifice. Accordingly an escort was selected to accompany him, at the head of which Black Hawk, then a young but widely respected chief, was placed.

"I never saw a more pathetic scene," said Black Hawk, "than the parting of Cono and his father and mother and other relatives. The whole tribe was overwhelmed with gloom."

In the middle of the afternoon the party arrived at the Iowas' village. Cono had asked that his identity should not be disclosed, but one of the Iowas who was present at the time the young Indian was slain saw that the guilty party was not being delivered, and Black Hawk told the whole story. The Iowas accepted it as true and, after a brief council, consented to the arrangement. The death circle was staked out and patrolled with armed guards, and Cono was placed in its center, while his escort was entertained in the tepee of the chief. It was a chill November day, and the sun was just sinking behind the cliffs of the Des Moines river when the escort left the camp.

They paused on a hill about a half mile distant from the camp. They could see that the fires had been lighted round the death circle, and in the hush of the evening came the plaintive sound of Cono chanting his death song.

Having traveled some two hours, they halted and made camp. About midnight they heard the clatter of horses' feet, and in a moment more a single horseman rode up. It was Cono! This was his remarkable story:

The fires of the death circle were burning brightly, and the squaws with their burning sticks were preparing to make the first attempt to extort a cry of pain and agony, when an old man, the father of the dead Indian, raised his voice:

"Stop!" he said. "Let me speak. I am the one that has suffered. My son was killed and scalped by a Musquakie. I was hungry for revenge, and were the one that killed and scalped him here I would shout with joy at his torture. But this young man is brave. Never have I seen such bravery before. He is too good a man to torture and kill. Release him and let him return to his own people."

Although the entire village a few hours before had been eager for revenge, there was a murmur of approval as the old man gathered his blanket about him and took his seat. Without any one's making a single objection, Cono was removed from the circle and given food and drink. A few hours later he was led from the camp, allowed to mount his own pony and depart in peace.

The Oldest Almanac.

The oldest almanac in existence is probably the "Almanach National de la France," which first appeared in 1686 and has been issued fairly regularly ever since. It began with a modest forty-eight pages, but the current issue boasts over 1,600. Next in point of age ranks the "Almanach de Gotha," with a record of 150 years' continuous publication.

The Literary and Debating Society's meeting on Monday evening was a very interesting one. The subject for discussion was whether or no it was in British Columbia's best interests to allow Orientals to lease or purchase lands. The subject was ably handled by a number of the members.

The Gamboa dyke in the Panama canal was blown up on Friday afternoon by President Wilson pressing a button in the White House, in Washington. The electric flash travelled over 4000 miles over land and under water and ignited the immense charges of dynamite under the dyke, which virtually cleared the canal.

The Volturno, of the Uranium line, with immigrants for Canada from Rotterdam, cought fire in mid-Atlantic, and 136 persons were lost. Ten liners were at hand but were unable to render assistance for hours, owing to the mountainous seas. When at last the storm moderated 521 souls were saved out of 657 that were aboard. The vessel was abondoned. Nearly all the passengers were for Canada.

Excitement Over Oil Discovery in Alberta

Calgary, Oct. 13.---Twenty-four hours of feverish excitement over the oil situation is intensified by the admission of A. W. Dingman, manager of the Calgary Petroleum Products Company, that the strike was of much more consequence than was first given out and that oil exists in commercial quantities. The oil is a very high quality, running as high as 75 per cent, gasoline.

More than one hundred men are waiting to file claims to-day. It is possible that only one or two claims will be open to entry. A stiff trade is being driven in options on leaseholders and hundreds of deals have been made.

The quality of the oil was, demonstrated when an automobile tank was filled at the well and the machine driven to the city, a distance of thirty miles, on the power furnished by the raw product.

There are three kinds of people inthe world---the wise the unwise and dollar wise. The dollar wise have learned the advantage of reading fhe advertisements which appear in each week in The Review.

The kaiser's favorite dish is said to be carp boiled in beer. In Ontario we have German carp, and nobody considers them fit to eat, Perhaps if cooked in beer or coal oil or something they might be all right.—Toronto Star.

COURTENAY - - B. C.

A News item has been going the rounds of the press declaring that Kaiser William has invested quite extensively in real estate in British Columbia, and it is intimated that this investment has been accompanied by similar investments on the part of other Germans who have money to invest. It is claimed that these purchases are the result of the observations of Count von Alvensleben who has become convinced that Canada offers magnificent possibilities for profitable real estate speculation. Whether the facts are as stated we have no means of discovering, but if they are they but call attention to an evil from which Canada has suffered much in the past, and which is still possible under our laws, but over which we certainly have small reason to congratulate oruselves. The speculative purchase and holding of real estate in Canada, particularly by non-residents has been a deadweight upon the progress in many sections, and it is this, which more than anything else, probably, has been instrumental the demand for the single tax. The Saskatchewan Government has passed a bill which comes into effect in 1914, imposing a considerable surtax upon uncultivated land or land held by speculators. We think such a mesaure especially if the tax be sufficiently high, would prove beneficial in every province. It is not the cultivated, but the uncultivated and idle land which should bear the heaviest burden.

CUMBERLAND

Born—At Cumberland on Thursday October 2, to the wife of Mr. Edward Anderson, a daughter.

Mrs. J. W, Little, who has been visiting her parents, Mr and Mrs. James Abrams for several weeks, returned on Saturday last, to her home near Victoria.

Penrith Avenue can boast of having three preachers, one lawyer, two aldermen, one ex-alderman, one ex-mayor, one ex-policeman, one postmaster, four churches and the largest hall in Cumberland. But Derwent Avenue can eclipse that, having two editors residing on it.

On last Wednesday evening Miss Ada May McLellan, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McLellan of this city, was united in marriage to Mr. John Weber (late of Ohio, U. S.A.) by the Rev. Thos. Menzies at the manse, Sandwick. Miss Masie Gray acted as bridesmaid, while Mr, Wm. McLellan, brother of the bride, did the duties of best man. The bride was becomingly attired in a pretty wedding gown, After the wedding ceremony a reception was held at the home of the brides parents, at which a large number of friends were present.

A most enjoyable evening was spent, dancing being indulged in till a late hour. Lunch was served at midnight. Mr. and Mrs. McLellan proving themselves an excellent "host" and "hostess," in catering to the wants of the "inner man".

The bride was the recipient of many handsome and useful wedding gifts. The happy couple will make their home in the district,

The Cumberland News says: "Courtenay has it all over us in the matter of hotels. The Riverside might well be named The Empress of the North, and the Courtenay hotel will be a very attractive hostlery when the addition and other improvements are complete."

UNION BAY

Mrs. Sarah Tyson, wife of Mr, John Tyson of Bevan, (No. 7.) was found drowned in the stream that supplies the coal washer at Union Bay, on Tuesday forenoon. It is supposed that she threw herself into the stream the night before, while in a demented condition. She was seen on the railway track between the Y and Union Bay on Monday afternoon. When found, she was divested of nearly all of her clothing which was found on the bank. The deceased was 37 years of age An inquest was held, and a verdict of suicide while insane was rendered.

MURRAY MURGATROYD JOURNALIST

By Morice Gerard

(Copyright)

Muller, seeing there was no alternative, produced the key from a secret pocket deftly concealed beneath the braid of his coat. Reluctantly he opened the dispatch-box. As he did so, Murgatroyd noticed that he was holding his left hand in a suspicious manner. There was the point of a small and a very sharp stiletto sticking out from it, which had doubtless lain in his pocket with the key. The journalist had no intention of feeling the point of that death-dealing little instrument. He sharply struck with his fist on the back of Muller's left hand. The stiletto dropped. Murgatroyd put his foot on it. Muller turned and glared at him, as if about to renew the personal conflict. Murgatroyd was quite composed.

I will keep that for my own, he said. It will be an appropriate reminder of you.

Muller muttered a German oath between his teeth. Then he opened the dispatch box more rapidly. His last bolt had been shot—unsuccessfully. The box was full of papers; at the bottom of which were the Transalpian documents. Muller handed them over without a word. Murgatroyd looked them through and saw they were correct. A feeling of intense satisfaction took the place of the anxiety and suspense of the past few weeks. Muller read it and cursed again—more loudly. It recalled Murgatroyd to the rest of the transaction not yet completed.

The other papers must be burnt.

Not all of them? Some of them are private to myself.

How can I tell whether you are burning all or not? Either I must look them all through and choose or you must burn the lot.

Muller hesitated for a minute or two. Then he threw all the contents of the dispatch box into the fire, stirring them with a poker while they blazed. Murgatroyd watching them, came to the conclusion that they were almost all the papers Jordan had described. When only a few ashes remained, Murgatroyd said—

Now write the address you wish these papers to be sent to, indicating the ones he held in his hand.

Muller wrote down the address of a club at Dresden.

Put: To wait till called for.

Doesn't mean to go? was Murgatroyd's sotto voice comment. We will see about that. He made no comment, however, beyond saying—

I want a guarantee in writing that you will leave England before twenty-four hours have passed, and not return before ten years have passed.

Is not my word enough?

No.

Muller sat down, wrote the prescribed words, and signed the paper.

Murgatroyd took up his hat, stick and gloves, and put the documents, except the last mentioned, into his breast-pocket, then nodding to Muller, he left the room. At the end of the passage he found Inspector Murphy pacing up and down.

I am glad you have come, the latter said. My time is up. Hope you have succeeded?

Yes, I have got all I wanted—thanks to you, Inspector.

Yes, I believe I had a little to do with it, I doubt whether I was right in letting that rascal slip through my fingers.

Murgatroyd doubted it to, but did not say so. Instead he handed the paper Muller had signed to Murphy.

You will see to that?

All right, I will jog his memory if I find it failing.

CHAPTER XIII

Thompson-Halliday

A dinner party consisting of men only is not generally a very lively affair, for as a rule it means an object in view, although of course there are brilliant exceptions. Parliamentary dinners before the meeting of the Houses are not exceptions to the rule. Uniformity, not diversity is the bond which brings and keeps the company together, whether to attack or to defend. Mr. Thompson-Halliday, not being as yet of Cabinet or ex-Cabinet rank, or a prominent official, was receiving his friends in Eaton Gardens. Covers had been laid for twenty, and it was not until cigars and coffee had circulated that tongues began to wag freely, and the restraints of a function recognized in England as of solemn moment began to wear off.

Mr. Thompson-Halliday was a short, stout man, well on the shady side of forty, to whom sudden opulence had given a snobbish air of self-satisfaction, which he would have lacked under more trying conditions. Good living had also begun to twinkle out of his small, quick, glancing eyes, and to indicate itself in his face generally. All his guests were brother members of the Commons' House of Parliament, in sympathy generally with his views, although not all sitting on the same side of the House. A Government generally has to face beside the legitimate Opposition, whose main duty is to oppose, the candid criticism, and often the barely-concealed hostility of sections of its own supporters, whose fads have been neglected, or whose private ambitions have been thwarted. Mr. Thompson-Halliday had a certain skill in amalgamating apparently discordant elements, and using the result to serve his own ends. He gave excellent dinners in London; he kept open house in the country, and his great wealth permitted a somewhat lavish expenditure in assisting members in contesting constituencies, who would have gone under but for his opportune help. Pocket boroughs disappeared with the Reform Bill, but the machinery for influencing votes and opinions in the House of Commons is in full working order still. Mr. Thompson-Halliday had carried the art of influence to a high pitch of excellence. He knew to a nicety where the shoe pinched, and hastened to relieve it; many members owed their seats to his timely assistance. He gave them absolute freedom, but with the understanding that when he required their assistance it should be forthcoming. These were not the men he had been dining. They were his equals in money and position—in the latter at any rate—but for all that were not insensible to the argument of first-rate cookery, and a cellar of wine inherited by their host, and selected with consummate skill..

Well, Halliday, what is to be the outcome of this Transalpian affair? Are you to lead the van of opposition? It will take all the tact you have got to make your side appear patriotic.

The speaker was Mr. Henry Mason, a thin man who sat on the Government side, but frequently voted with the Opposition.

Your side! Our side, you mean Mason, put in Halliday quickly. I know you agree with me that the Government has put its foot in it this time.

In fact it hasn't a leg to stand on, to complete the metaphor, suggested Morriarty, an Irishman who sat for an English constituency.

Quite so. Firing won't do this time; we must have something more drastic.

All the same, the country will look at the whole affair suspiciously. The average Briton thinks his country always and inevitably in the right.

Especially when a few slices of land are in dispute.

I have a very strong case, remarked Thompson-Halladay with assurance, and the Government a very weak one. I am not afraid of the country. Land-grabbing more often than not means burnt fingers, and to my thinking the nation is sick of these trumpery disputes. I know my constituents are at the back of me in the matter. This Transalpian claim is sheer injustice. If they could prove we ever had an acre of land within the sphere in dispute, it would be different; but they can't, simply because we never had space to bury a full-grown infant.

What makes you so sure of that, Halliday? The speaker had not joined in the conversation before. Hanley is not the man I should have thought to put his foot down unless he knew the ground on which he stood.

Hanley! You all talk Hanley! I tell you it's all manner with him, that confounded air of superior knowledge and concentrated wisdom. He is cautious enough, I grant you, but not farseeing; and caution which is a cheap sort of political wisdom, fails where large issues are at stake. Besides, this matter wanted a retained lawyer, and every one knows Hanley is not that, anyway.

Halliday talks as if he were Lord Chancellor, laughed Morriarty. Who coached you in your law?

A better man than coached Hanley, anyway.

What do you propose? inquired Mason.

These are the terms of the Amendment, and Halliday handed a paper across the table. The Opposition leaders have approved the wording and the party will support it to a man. We are sure of some support—unless Hanley makes out a better case than I credit him with—a good deal of support on the Government side.

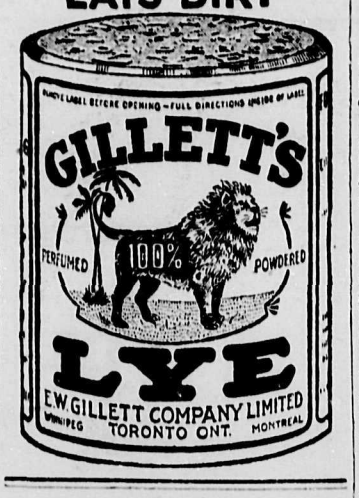
GILLETT'S LYE EATS DIRT



Minard's Liniment Cures Garget in Cows

The lady litigant had paid out good money to clerks and bailiffs till she was nervous about it.

Who is that? she whispered to her lawyer as a new functionary put in an appearance.

That? that's the crier, the lawyer replied.

Goodness! Can't I do my own crying and save her?

The cheapness of Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator puts it within reach of all, and it can be got at any druggist's.

The mayor of a French town had, in accordance with the regulations, to make out a passport for a rich and highly respectable lady of his acquaintance, who, in spite of a slight disfigurement, was very vain in her personal appearance. His native politeness prompted him to gloss over the defect, and after a moment's reflection he wrote among the items of personal description: Eyes dark, beautiful, tender, expressive, but one of them missing.

AN OLD NURSE

Persuaded Doctor to Drink Postum

An old faithful nurse and an experienced doctor, are a pretty strong combination in favor of Postum, instead of tea and coffee.

The doctor said:

"I began to drink Postum five years ago on the advice of an old nurse.

"During an unusually busy winter, between tea, coffee and overwork, I became a victim of insomnia. In a month after beginning Postum, in place of tea and coffee, I could eat anything and sleep as soundly as a baby.

"In three months I had gained twenty pounds in weight. I now use Postum altogether instead of tea and coffee; even at bedtime with a soda cracker or some other tasty biscuit.

"Having a little tendency to Diabetes, I used a small quantity of saccharine instead of sugar, to sweeten with. I may add that today tea or coffee are never present in our house and very many patients, on my advice, have adopted Postum as their regular beverage.

"In conclusion I can assure anyone that, as a refreshing, nourishing and nerve-strengthening beverage, there is nothing equal to Postum."

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular (must be boiled).

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in an ordinary cup of hot water, which makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a large heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

MORE WOMEN THAN MEN

They Throw Off Disease More Easily, That's the Reason

The fact that in almost all civilized countries women outnumber men has been ascribed to the higher birth rate of girl babies; yet statistics show that 105 boys are born to every 100 girls. According to figures compiled by a European statistician the girl has a better chance than the boy of attaining maturity.

He finds that from the third to the fifteenth year the mortality for both sexes is the same; from the fifteenth to the nineteenth year the critical age for girls the girl's chances are slightly better than the boy's; from the thirtieth year to the thirty-fifth the mortality among women is smaller than among men, and it continues smaller until the seventieth year, for a decade and a half, the sexes once more have the same chance of survival, but above 85 years of age woman again stands a much better chance than man.

To account for this difference the statistician points out that woman has greater resilience in shaking off diseases than man. It is true that the physical strength of man is greater than woman's but a woman's power of endurance is more robust.

One reason for this is that woman possesses a finer perception of her power of endurance than a man, and when her perception warns her of fatigue she stops. A man does not stop until his power is exhausted. His nervous system is not as finely organized as a Woman's, and as Mosso, the Italian physiologist, has pointed out, men and women are entirely dependent upon their nerves for caution not to over-exert. While it is true that women more easily contract many diseases, particularly nervous and mental diseases, than men, they overcome them with greater ease.

Royal Punishment

The constraints and formalities which surround royalty are particularly trying to youth, and while the Queen of Holland could never refer to her childhood as being a very dull one, as Queen Victoria in mature years described her own at Kensington Palace, yet when her Dutch Majesty was a little girl she greatly preferred playing with her dolls to attending to the official duties that had already begun for her. If you don't behave, I'll make you a queen! she is said to have admonished an erring doll.

Again, one day she was overheard telling one of the dolls, who evidently refused to take a necessary nap:—

If you don't go to sleep, you shall go out tomorrow in a carriage, and all the time you shall bow right and left to people who keep pulling off their hats! So hurry up and off to sleep!

Coal Loading by Vacuum Pipes

The vacuum-cleaner principle is having new applications every day; but one of the strongest is for the unloading of coal cars. A big Austrian power plant is being equipped to handle all its coal by vacuum pipes. Coal that is graded according to Austrian standards as dust coal and nut coal is delivered in carload lots to the plant and a great pipe is dropped into the car. The coal is sucked up through this pipe and carried to the storage piles two hundred yards away. Coal for the boiler fires is carried from the storage pile by other vacuum pipes direct to the fire and there fed in by mechanical stokers.

The Smallest Dynamo

A lilliputian electric dynamo, perfect in every detail, but weighing only a quarter of an ounce, was shown at work before the Paris Academy of Science. Its constructor is a French mechanician named Trevet. This dynamo is three-fifths of an inch long, half an inch wide, and three-fifths of an inch high. The coil is a quarter of an inch in diameter, and is wired with five and a half feet of silk insulated copper wire one-five hundredth of an inch in thickness. A tension is indicated of 3.5 volts by a current of 0.2 ampere, but as to its power there is no instrument sensitive enough to record it. While at work the toy machine made a sound like the humming of a bee.

No man or woman should hobble painfully about because of corns when so certain a relief is at hand as Holloway's Corn Cure.

Writing for Posterity

A prominent French critic, the story runs, once said to George Bernard Shaw:

You are putting on a new comedy Monday night. Let me attend one of the dress rehearsals, won't you?

Impossible, said Mr. Shaw. My dress rehearsals are always private. I have to refuse even the most distinguished critics access to them.

But, said the other, I want to write a critical criticism. If I have to write and telegraph it in a few minutes on Monday night it will be very hurriedly done, and I fear it will give a wrong impression of your comedy to Paris the next day.

Have no anxiety on that score, Mr. Shaw replied. My comedies are not written for the next day.

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

Winnipeg, Canada. — "Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth. The doctors said it was a tumor and could not be removed as it would cause instant death. They found that my organs were affected, and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in.

"After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper, and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. Kings as Ornaments

When European democracy continues its process of relegating to the position of spectacular ornaments its crowned heads, interest in the personalities of these picturesque individuals continues to be one of the features of the social order today, particularly on the continent.

The modern monarch has come, more and more, to stand merely as the symbol of the continuity of national life, the emblem of the people's distinctive nationality and sovereignty. Even if, in a few scattered instances, he pretends to regard himself as ruler by divine right, his people no longer look upon him as such.

Even the great Hohenzollern, William II, has recently publicly insisted that his sole object as monarch has been, and will continue to be, not the glorification of his dynasty, but the welfare of the German people.

As each passes off the human stage, his successor, born and reared in a more democratic atmosphere than himself, becomes more than ever the representation of his people. The rising generation of young royalties, if a republic in form does not prevent their actually reigning, will sit in the chairs of constitutional power democratic at heart.—American Review of Reviews.

Extreme Old Age Records

The recent death of a Chinaman in New York at the age, as he claimed, of 149 years, raises the question whether the records of extreme old age are authentic. The cases in which men or women have reached the century mark are so numerous that there seems no reason for skepticism concerning them; but the records of Thomas Cam, aged 207; William Edwards, 168, and Henry Jenkins, 169, are open to the doubt that falls on all mediaeval statistics. The tables of life insurance companies within the next century will probably furnish reliable data for future investigators.

Emily—Isn't it funny how timid Eileen is?

Maude—Dear, yes; she doesn't want to go faster than eighty-five miles an hour when she rides on the back of Charlie's motorcycle.

Art and Long Hair

The hard contemporary fact is that the gloriously named authors are becoming sadly rare, even rarer than long haired actors.

The long haired musican is still with us, though one of the most eminent masters of the pianoforte has yielded something to the modern spirit by submitting briefly to the sheers.

Individual age has here a potent influence—age, or the getting through with thing. What a wonderful picturesque person Dickens was at 25! And how matter-of-fact at 40! Browning suffered a similarly sobering and averaging effect.

The same thing it is true of many other figures in that period, and it is not easy to guess whether the changing fashion set in during their middle years, or whether advancing age would have effected the same change in any case.

On the day of his wedding a man imagined that his wife drew a prize; but as a matter of fact he is seldom anything more than a consolation prize.

Waiter, bring me an infinitesimal portion of cheese.

Ain't got any of that kind in the house, sir.

May Sail to Other Planets

Its existence on earth has not yet been determined, but the leading scientists, including Sir William Ramsay are confident they can find or produce it. Its presence in the sun was definitely established by a discovery made during the last eclipse.

The Daily Citizen quotes an anonymous scientist who describes the gas as being named coronium. If it can be produced on this earth it may revolutionize the science of aerostatics. When the earth becomes too cold for human habitation the people could move in airships to any planet that might strike their fancy. This would be unnecessary for a million years or more.

Knicker—How do you like the kitchenette apartment?

Bocker—I think it has a roomette for improvement.

A prominent physician in an Arkansas town has an extensive practice among the laboring classes, where economy is the best policy. One day the little daughter of one of the men became very sick and the doctor was hurriedly called. He arrived and administered a soothing treatment to the patient who was soon sleeping soundly and upon leaving, prescribed some medicine which was to be obtained at the drug store. The next day the visit had to be repeated, and some more medicine bought. This was kept up until the little girl was entirely well, when the father went to see the doctor to settle his bill.

As his purse was rather slim, he approached the doctor with many misgivings.

Here is your bill, sir, began the doctor, handing him the paper. This for the drugs from the store and this for my visits.

The poor man looked and was horrified at the amount requested, realizing that he could not pay it all. Then after thinking a moment he took out his purse and laid some pieces of change in the physician's hand saying: Here's the money for the drugs, doctor, and—we will return your calls.

What He's Waiting For

Why don't you ask her to marry you? You've been calling on her for two years now.

I know, but I am waiting.

You've heard her sing hundreds of times, and you like her voice.

That's true.

You've heard her play the piano. You know she's an accomplished musician.

You've eaten meals she has cooked. You have seen her handiwork about the house. She'd make a splendid housewife.

I know all that, but—

She's a delightful hostess. You've seen her when she was entertaining friends.

I admit that.

Then why wait any longer?

I'm waiting to see her in a quarrel with her mother. I want to see how she acts when she loses her temper.

This is to certify that I have used MINARD'S Liniment in my family for years, and consider it the best liniment on the market. I have found it excellent for horse flesh.

"Woodlands," Middleton, N.S.

There is a young man in New York who is undoubtedly still wondering whether he has an unusually large foot or whether a certain German lad of generous dimensions from Jersey is troubled with near-sightedness.

The woman in question boarded a New York bound ferry boat with a big heavy valise. Apparently very much fatigued from her efforts, she threw herself into a seat, landing her bulky grip squarely upon the toes of a young man next to her. He responded with a look of suppressed rage and pain, and then shoved the valise aside, unnoticed by the woman.

A few minutes later, when the ferry reached its slip, the young man was suddenly amazed to behold the stout lady fumbling about with her hand on his foot. Thoroughly aroused at this liberty, he was about to demand an explanation, when the woman, with a look of great embarrassment, exclaimed: Ach! Excoose me, it looke chust like mine bag.

Work of the Dominion Department of Agriculture

The report of the Minister of Agriculture for the year ending March 31, 1913 has been printed. It contains in concise and readable form a review of the work carried on by the Department of Agriculture through its several branches and divisions during the year. It concludes also the Orders in Council that were passed affecting agriculture.

The report is presented under five general heads as follows: 1, General remarks; 2, Arts and Agriculture; 3, Patents of Invention; 4, Copyrights, Trade Marks, Industrial Designs and Timber Marks; 5, Public Health. There is also included an appendix having reference to Public Health, Exhibition and the Seventh International Congress held at Rome against Tuberculosis.

Referring to the trade in dairy products it is pointed out that for the first time in sixty years no butter was exported to the United Kingdom, but on the other hand more than six and one-half million pounds were imported into Canada during the year.

In the Seed Branch among other work almost nineteen thousand samples of farm seeds were tested for farmers and seed merchants.

The Live Stock Commissioner by means of public sales distributed upwards of 1,300 breeding sheep, about one-third of which were pure-bred rams. In the record of performance about one thousand cows have been entered for test. These represent stock of about 150 farms.

Through the Experimental Farms system which includes the Central Farm and fifteen branch farms and stations an enormous amount of work has been done. The report not only gives one a general knowledge of its extent but brings to light many accomplishments for agriculture. In Saskatchewan, it is pointed out that the spring wheat 'Marquis' yielded at the rate of 31 bushels per acre. The still newer Prelude wheat which ripens much earlier than other good sorts was sent out for test during the year. A much larger quantity is promised for distribution during the coming winter. Many other useful points are recorded in the minister's report, copies of which are available to those who apply for it to the Publication Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

It is usually safe to say that when a child is pale, sickly, peevish and restless, the cause is worms. These parasites range the stomach and intestines causing serious disorders of the digestion and preventing the infant from deriving sustenance from food. Miller's Worm Powders, by destroying the worms, corrects these faults of the digestion and serves to restore the organs to healthy action.

A young woman from the east was conversing with a Kentuckian about tobacco and tobacco raising.

She was very pretty and a good conversationalist and the young man from Kentucky was vastly interested in her until she gave him a sudden shock by announcing:

I should love to see a tobacco field, especially when it is just plugging out.

Magistrate—You broke a mantelpiece ornament on your wife's head. What have you got to say for yourself?

Prisoner—It was a pure accident.

Magistrate—An accident? What? Didn't you intend to hit your wife?

A New York Suburban Scene

She was running across lots to catch the 1.25 train for New York. It was precisely 1.24 1-2 and the train already was panting into the station. At her heels was a youngster making as good time as she could, and was crying. By the time she reached the station steps she was a good one hundred yards ahead of the little boy, but he kept at it, crying louder and louder. The conductor was holding the train for her.

Madam, said the conductor, as she climbed up the car steps, who is that little boy?

My youngest, she said perfectly breathless.

I didn't have time to kiss him good by.

The conductor stood with his hand on the signal cord while the operation was performed, and then the train went off, leaving the youngster happy and smiling.

CURED DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS

And Is Depended On to Right Stomach and Liver Disorders

Once Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are introduced into the family and their efficiency becomes known they are usually found too valuable to do without. For everyday ills arising from liver and bowel disorders they bring relief pomptly, and when complicated diseases of the kidneys and liver develop they often prove a successful cure after doctors have failed. As an illustration, you may read the following, which was received a few days ago:

Mrs. John Wright, 53 McGee street, Toronto, Ont., states: "We have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for ten years, and would not be without them. My husband suffered from kidney trouble, and after taking treatment from several doctors without receiving any benefit, tried Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which worked a complete cure. Since that time we have used them for all stomach and liver disorders."

Among the bewildered, and in some cases indignant, spectators gathered at the recent Futurist exhibition of painting and sculpture in Chicago was a young man from Springfield, in charge of a cousin who is 'strong for' the new movement in art.

The youth remained silent during the view and the subsequent explanations of the new idea given him by his cousin.

Well, said the latter finally, you don't seem particularly enthusiastic about them. What do you think?

Think! growled the youth from Springfield. Why, I have got two aunts at home that can knit better pictures than those.

A Viennese composer has written an operetta intended for use in the films only. The characters in it will not be heard. They will be seen, while an orchestra plays the music to illustrate their story.

Household Hints

Have the walls of your house a pleasant, restful tone, and you can do without pictures.

In storing fruits and vegetables for winter, only sound and mature specimens should be used.

Take an hour off and spend it with an oil can in your hand, touching up the stiff castors, hinges, etc.

To keep a door mat in position, hook it down, the hooks being on the floor and the brass rings on the mat.

Tart salads, deviled eggs, sardines and chopped raw cabbage all help to make pickles unnecessary in a child's diet.

To keep the carpet sweeper pulleys from slipping after they have worn smooth, wrap them with adhesive tape.

To protect small articles spread to bleach on the grass, cover them with cheesecloth, fastened down with wooden pegs.

A good thin broth may be made of the water in which cabbage is boiled, if milk, butter and thickening are added to it.

Grey green is a good color for a nursery wall. If there is a frieze, it should be the height of a child's eye from the filoor.

For dining room embroideries, rich colors used on grey linen, or shades of blue on white, will be found exceedingly satisfactory.

The best appetizer is a clear, hot soup, consomme or meat broth. Alternatives are clam broth or grape fruit.

Cut white potatoes into small squares, and stick one on the end of each stem, if you want cut flowers or ferns to last a long time. Of course, this is supposing that the decorations must last a long while.
