Banquet to Sir Richard

Love-Feast Attended by Both Political Parties

Sir Richard McBride, premier of British Columbia, and the Hon. R.F Green, M.P., were the central figures at a banquet which was given in their honor by the Cranbrook Conservative association, on Saturday night to which nearly 100 sat down.

The banquet was held under the auspices of the local Conservative Association invitations, however, had been extended to a large number of Liberals. Every chair was filled. J. D. McBride occupied the chair and the toast list was long, the speeches excellent, the evening being declared the best of its kind ever held in the Banner City of the Kootenays.

The banquet was a very pleasant affair, extremely friendliness, irrespective of party affiliations, was indicated throughout the speechmaking.

The dining-room was beautifully decorated and the music, supplied by Guerard's Orchestra, excellent.

This social event, while under the auspices of the Conservative association, was a non-political affair, in whichSir Richard McBride, premier of British Columbia; Hon. R. F. Green, M.P. for Kootenay; Thos. D. Caven, M.L.A., for Cranbrook; Dr. J. H. King, ex-M.L.A., for Cranbrook; Senator Hewett Bostock, of Ducks, B.C., and Mayor Bowness of this city were the central figures, besides a score of visitors from Fernie, Kimberley, Marysville, Wycliffe, Moyie, Wattsburg, Fort Steele and Wardner were present.

The table, which in a great square encircled the room, was beautifully decorated with flowers and was well supplied with substantial things which men delight to partake of.

The large doors of the dining room were opened at 10 p.m., and with the orchestra playing lively airs, the large crowd filed in and took their respective seats. J. D. McBride, as chairman, occupied a central position. On his right was Sir Richard, supported by T. D. Caven, and on his left Hon. R. F. Green and Senator Bostock. Among the old-timers were Colonel George Dougherty, a pioneer of 1864, R. L. T. Galbraith, Indian Agent; A. B. Fenwick, A. E. Watts, P. Lund, Wm. Carlin, Harry Drew, George Watson and many others who were here in the early days of the district.

After the substantial viands had been partaken of, the toast list was reached and the oratory of the evening commenced.

THE PROGRAMME

"The King" was drank standing and received hearty cheers.

"Our Guests" was proposed by A. E. Watts, of Wattsburg, who, in a very neat and appropriate speech paid tribute to the Premier, and also complimented our new member, Hon. R. F. Green.

Sir Richard and Mr. Green replied in brief, expressing their gratitude of such evidences of good wishes of their hosts and the citizens of Cranbrook district.

R. L. T. Galbraith, who has been a resident of the Kootenay since 1874 proposed the toast "Our Dominion." He referred to the Dominion as a whole, its relation to the Northern Country, and told of his personal experience in the Kootenays in early days.

Hon. R. F. Green and Senator Bostock responded, both speaking of Imperialism and its relation to Canada, and patriotic devotion to British Columbia and Canada. Mr. Green reminding his hearers of Colonel Baker who represented this district for several sessions in the Provincial assembly, paid a warm tribute to the memory of the Colonel and to his services as a member in the provincial house, also as a pioneer in the development of the Kootenays.

SenatorBostock spoke of Imperial-

The Dry-Farming Congress At Lethbridge

British Columbia and the Kootenays in the Lead—Cranbrook Well Advertised—Ryan Scores with Minerals

Although the Lethbridge Dry Farming Congress was opened on Monday, Tuesday was really the opening day of the great exhibition and congress. A hasty run through the various state and provincial special exhibits gives but a superficial idea of what it really is and what it is going to accomplish by way of education in a subject which is called dry and treat of dryness to British Columbians especially, the congress will mean much.

All the delegates and spectators from B.C. showed their appreciation of the attention shown the provincial exhibits which is housed in a building some distance from the main hall and a little inconvenient of access. Crowds streamed through the hall all day and judging from the expressions of surprise and wonderment it was perhaps the most interesting provincial or state exhibit on the grounds.

The Nelson display of boxed fruit was the largest of the many fruit displays from British Columbia and was awarded the special prize for the best display of boxed fruit. Among the multitude of Apples from everywhere J. Nicholson of Salmon Arm, British Columbia, took the prize for the largest apples in a world wide contest.

On entering the British Columbia building, Creston apples and other fruits are the first to meet the eyes of the multitude; just beyond comes the East Kootenay display with many striking samples, John Levitt, J. Hamilton, the St.Eugene Mission,St. Mary's prairie and P. Lund, all have fine displays of fruit and vegetables which are eye openers to the prairie farmers who are thronging the building. Kaslo comes next with one of her fine displays, and then comes the big Nelson collection of apples, over 100 boxes being most advantageously placed. Across the way from these are the Kelowna, Armstrong and Penticton displays. All told there are more than 600 boxes of fruit which with the vegetables, grains and grasses of the collection, make the largest display to be seen on the grounds.

Cranbrook has played a winning card with her individual building facing the main building in which many individual collections are on display. Joseph Ryan is in charge of a collection of Kootenay ores and is kept constantly busy explaining and describing the processes of mining. H. A. McKowan is in charge of a display of Kootenay woods and the finished product from the forests. In the British Columbia building is to be found a most interesting display of the bee industry and Mr. Robinson is pushing the importance of this industry in connection with the fruit growing branch of industry in the province. From New Westminster and the island come fine displays, that from Nanaimo being a particularly good one.

LETHBRIDGE, Wednesday—Today has proven a red letter day for B.C. exhibitors at the dry farming congress in the awarding of prizes, Cranbrook leading off with third for best Winesap apples to J. Hamilton; D. Matherson of Armstrong also took first for Mann Apples and Alexander D. Graham of Armstrong second for the same variety, J. Evans of Salmon Arm carried away first for King variety and J. D. Nicholson second.

D. Matherson, Armstrong, gets the blue ribbon for Winter Banana and Golden Russets. J. D. Evans got 1st on McMahon White and came in for first again on Gravensteins. J. D. Nicholson got first on Cox-Orange. D. Graham, secured first for Hydes, King Nicholeon came first with Wolf River sample and for crab apples.

In the women's classes Mrs. Norman of Mirror Lake took second for jelly and fruit by farm women in one jelly display. Miss Mildred Swiss of Kaslo took first prize for exhibit of neighborhood.

HANDSOME CUP

For the best state or provincial display of boxed fruits, the trophy is a handsome cup valued at $400, donated by the province of Manitoba. This was won by British Columbia.

The next Dry Farming Congress is to be held in Oklahoma, Regina made a strong bid for it but the invitation will in all pcobability succeed in obtaining the Congress for them in 1914.

In conversation with Mr. T. J. Doris and several others who have visited the Fair we learn that the general opinion is that Cranbrook and East Kootenay Exhibit held its own with any of the rest on the grounds.

OFF TO CHICAGO

In respect to the mineral exhibit sent in from this district, under the charge of Joseph Ryan, the Hon. Price Ellison has asked that this exhibit be packed up after the Fair is over to be shipped to Chicago. Hon. Price Ellison says it is the finest collection of minerals which he has ever seen.

The whole of this district should be indeed grateful to the labor Mr. Ryan has expended in his efforts towards gathering the exhibit together and for the results obtained by his interest in the same. Unmistakeably the quality of the exhibit shown will do more and be more far reaching than can possibly be estimated for the city and district from which it was obtained.—Hurrah for the Kootenays.

Premier R. L. Borden

A British View of Him and the Naval Question

(From the London Morning Post)

Mr. Borden has met a warm welcome on his return to Canada, not only from his own point of view, as our correspondent informed us, from the people of Quebec and Montreal. His welcome, in fact, is in the nature of a national demonstration. His visit to England to consult with the Mother Country on the defence of the Empire has appealed to the Imperialists of Canada.

Canadians are proud of the fact that their Prime Minister should consult with the Imperial Government upon equal terms. They feel that by this course Canada takes her place in the world not as an adjunct of England, but as a helpmeet and ally of England.

Mr. Borden has been called to the councils of the Empire, and with that consultation Canada's status and dignity are assured. And the Dominion is being brought to realize by the irrisistible logic of events as well as by her own growth and the growth of her interests and ambition that it is no longer either seemly or possible to remain a merely colonial State depending on the strong arm of England for protection.

UNEQUAL TO THE TASK

The resources of England are inadequate to the growing task. Canada must help. Otherwise there is no assurance of Canadian freedom or Canadian security. Sir Wilfrid Laurier recently stated that while the interests of England lay in armnaments, the interest of Canada lay in railroads. That is not true. Unless the sea is open and secure, the railroads of Canada lead nowhere. By developing the railway system of the Dominion upon east and west lines, successive Canadian Governments committed the future of their country to the oceans, and therefore the security of the ocean routes is a Canadian question.

If Canada had developed upon north or south lines, if she had been content to become an adjunct of Chicago, then it might have been possible to look further than her railway system. The oversea transport of Canadian products would then have been through American ports and might have been the care of the United States navy, Canada would then have been protected by the Monroe Doctrine. But at what price? At the price of Canadian independence.

THE SOUL OF CANADA

What shall it profit a nation if it gain the whole world and lose its own soul? And what we might call the soul of Canada is the spirit in which Canada was born, a spirit not of Republicanism, but of Monarchy, a spirit of constitutional freedom. The whole history of Canada shows her desire to be independent of the United States, to develope along her own lines, which are not federal nor republican nor secular.

Friendliness with the United States there may be; but dependence upon or federation with the United States never. This is the sentiment not only of the British Canadian but of the FrenchCanadian also, and whenever politicians, out of regard for the material interests of Canada, have attempted to depart from that sentiment they have met disaster.

The failure of the Imperial Government to understand the national sentiment of Canaua led recently to one of the greatest blunders England has ever made in her relations with the Dominion. That the mistake did not end in disaster we have largely to thank Mr. Borden.

MR. BORDEN'S TEACHING

Mr. Borden will be encouraged by the welcome he has received from the Canadian people to proceed upon the path which he conceives to be the path of duty. "Everyone recognizes he said at Ottawa recently, "that we have duties and obligations to meet, and I can say that we will not be appalled by the magnitude of the task

Monk Resigns

Ottawa—Subsequent to the formal acceptance of his resignation as minister of public works, Hon. F. D. Monk left for Montreal this afternoon. Only a few personal friends were at the station to see him off. Mr. Monk stated that he would be back in the capitol in the course of a day or two, and that a little later he would go to Atlantic City for a well earned rest.

The work of administering the multifarious affairs of the department will at once be assumed by Hon. George Perley, minister without port folio from Quebec. He will remain at the post until Mr. Monk's permanent successor is installed. Mr. Perley was acting premier all summer during the absence in England of the Right Hon. R. L. Borden, and he is now called upon to administer what is probably the heaviest department. As minister without portfolio he does not receive any pay for his services.

Ottawa—The name of Louis Coderre, Conservative member for Hochelga, is mentioned in connection with the cabinet vacancy. He is a lawyer of considerable ability and popular with the rank and file of the party. It is believed he would have no difficulty in carry the constituency.

Ottawa—Hon. T. S. Sproule, speaker of the house, arrived today for the purpose of giving instructions to the house of commons staff in regard to the sessional arrangements. Owing to the uncertainty as to whether there would be a November or January session, the usual early start was not made, but from now on everything will be rushed to a conclusion. Owing to the interest growing out of the naval question and the big program of legislation a particularly brilliant opening is anticipated.

Serious Accident

Louis Manning, the seventeen year old son of J. A. Manning, met with a serious accident on Wednesday at Bull River.

Young Manning was employed at the C.P.R. Mill at Bull River as a fireman. On Wednesday morning, it was noticed that steam was getting low, and a man was dispatched to the boiler room to ascertain the cause. He found the boy under the mill unconscious, with his jaw fractured in four places.

No explanation of how the accident occured is known. A special train conveyed the young man to Cranbrook, and he is now at the St. Eugene hospital in a most serious condition. He is still unconscious almost all the time, regaining his senses but for a few seconds, then becoming unconscious again.

His father, J. A. Manning who is superintendent of the mill is at Cranbrook, and the condition of the boy was such on Thursday that his mother was wired for.

There is no possible explanation of the accident and it will only be known when the lad regains consciousness so as to tell the story.

More Improvements

During the past summer the fruit inspection service of the Department of Agriculture evidently extended and completely re-organized by Hon. Martin Burrell. The result has been seen this fall in the most efficient fruit inspection Canada has ever had. At the last Dominion Fruit Growers' conferences great stress was laid on the importance of the proper grading and marketing of the fruit and the need for more extended inspection, especially at points of shipment and of fruit coming in from the United States. As far as possible the ideas of the fruit growers has been followed in the re-organization.

FIVE INSPECTORAL DISTRICTS

The country has been divided into five inspectorial districts as follows Maratime Provinces, Quebec and Eastern Ontario, Western Ontario, Prairie Provinces and British Columbia. In addition to the five chief inspectors fifteen temporary inspectors have been added to the staff.

In the past Canadian export fruit has been closely inspected, with the result that Dominion fruit stands high in the markets of Great Britian and Europe. Despite continual requests for better domestic inspection, Hon. Sydney Fisher neglected to improve the arrangements for inspection of domestic consumption. The local buyer both in east and west has thus been at the mercy of unscrupulous dealers. The change which Mr. Burrell has effected has given the domestic market almost as close inspection as is given in the case of export fruit.

Abandons Trip

Golden, B.C., Oct.21—Important public business necessitated the premier's return to Victoria on Thursday from Revelstoke. He cannot therefore accept the invitation to attend the banquet by the Creston board of trade and has wired that body to this effect.

AT INVERMERE

Wilmer, B.C., Oct.21—Sir Richard McBride, arrived per automobile at Invermere on Sunday evening. He was accompanied by Robert F. Green member for the Dominion house for this constitutency. Today they held a caucus with the members of the Conservative party and left per car this afternoon for Golden. R. F. Green is receiving strong support throughout this part as the proper person for the new portfolio as minister of mines.

Chas. Grasley of Waldo, was laid to rest in the Cranbrook Cemetery on Monday, Rev. W. E. Dunham officiating. Mr. Grasley has been suffering for some time now from the effect of a sun-stroke he had last summer. F. M. MacPherson had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Cranbrook's exhibit at Lethbridge made good. The display of grain, grasses, fruit and vegetables attracted the attention of mining men from all over the country. The lumber industry, under the charge of A. McKowan, also attracted the eyes to East Kootenay.

The railroad commissioners of Canada have decided to make a western trip in November, as soon as the freight rate and telegraph tolls inquiries are over. It will probably be the end of the month before they can get away from Ottawa. They may take evidence in the freight rat cases at western points.

A man named E. Dwyer, a teamster in the employ of the C.P.R. Lumber Co', at Bull Riber, was killed on Tuesday by falling from his wagon which struck into a deep rut in the road, turned over and dumped the entire load on him. His remains wasbrought to Cranbrook, Thursday, in charge of Undertaker MacPherson.

W. B. Bargett received last week pedigree stock from the prairie consisting of Ayrshire cows and one shorthorn bull. Since the time of purchase one of the cows gave birth to a calf which now, only a week old, is worth about $50.00. This addition to his already fine stock will bring Mr. Bargett's dairy farm up to a very high standard.

Mrs. Arch Leitch entertained a number of friends at a party on Wednesday evening in honor of Miss Jessie Leitch, of Vancouvee, who is visiting her relatives in this city. There were a large number of guests present and the evenings program included an informal supper, singing and dancing. The evening was enjoyed by all.

Excavation for the foundation of the new men's clnb to be erected on the opposite corner to the Methodist church commenced this week. The building will be 80 x 30. The "Gym' proper will be 60 x30 and 16 feet in height. The swimming pool will be 20 x 40, eight feet deep at one end and three feet at the other. A young man's club will be formed, which will have charge of the building.

Owing to the retirement of Mrs. Guerard from taking part in the orchestra at the Auditorium, Mr. W. J B. Guerard, manager, has secured the services of Miss Helena Shipman to officiate at the piano. Miss Shipman is a talented player, having come from Boston, Mass., and played in several of the larger cities of the United States. She will be a great favorite with the patrons of the Auditorium.

Inspector Humphries and Sergeant Venice, of the Northwest Mounted Police came in on Thursday's local having in charge a man named Bates who is wanted in Idaho on a charge of "White Slavery." It is said that Bates was arrested in Idaho, charged with being engaged in the White Slave traffic, broke jail and escaped to Alberta, where he was arrested. He was ordered to be deported by the immigration officers and taken to Kingsgate for deportation.

Bates is said to be the owner of a large ranch in Alberta where his wife made her home. Mrs. Bates accompanied the party and will remain with her husband until his trial is concluded.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell Hurt

While descending the stairs at the Albany club, Wednesday, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, former prime minister of Canada, tripped and fell 12 steps to the landing below. He suffered an abrasion of the nose and superficial injuries on the chest. Sir Mackenzie had stopped at Toronto enroute from the west. His accident is not of a serious nature.

I beg every young man today to draw out a sketch of what, by the grace of God, he means to be. Think no excellence so high that you cannot reach it. He who starts out in life with a high ideal of character and with faith in its attainment, will find himself encased from a thousand temptations. God provides for you the field, the armour and the fortifications.—T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D.

Mining Notes

A report was received in Cranbrook this week of a rich strike of ore in the St. Eugene Mine atMoyie. At present 32 men are employed at the mine and the ore now coming from the mine is of high-grade quality.

The "Steam Shovel" outfit, under the management of Jim Macdonald, has a force of men employed in prospecting the immense gravel bar by means of a 'diamond drill'. Satisfactory results have already been obtained, and, early in the coming season, a large force of miners will be employed.

Over five tons of ore specimens from the mines in Cranbrook district are being exhibited at she Lethbridge Dry Farming Congress.

On Wild Horse Creek, a Chinese company is busy cleaning up. Handsome profits are expected to be the result of this season's work.

The mineral output from the mines in the Cranbrook district for the past week are: St. Eugene 63 tons; Sullivan Mine 475 tons; totaling for the year to date 25,280.

The St. Eugene Mine has a force of about 40 men at work engaged in taking out high-grade lead ore.

The Society Girl has a small force at work engaged in driving a tunnel to reach the vein. A small quantity of ore is being shipped.

The Aurora is in a fair way to become a producing mine. Indications point towards the striking of the main lead in a very short distance, and ore is found in small bunches in the face of the tunnel.

Denies Report

During the week a dispatch emanating from Victoria stating that stumping powder would be furnished free by the government to bona fide settlers was given prominence in several newspapers of the province. This statement was featured on the front page of our last issue Wednesday, however, the following was received:

"The statement appearing in "The News-Advertiser of Wednesday last, regarding the supply of stumping powder to settlers in this province, is quite incorrect" stated the Deputy Minister of Agriculture. W. G. Scott, Monday. "Stumping powder is not supplied free to members of Farmer's Institutes, but at a reduced price of five dollars per case at the factory. No circular has been sent out by the Department of Agriculture to that effect."

Jensen-Brewer

A very quite wedding was consumated on Wednesday, when the Rev. W. E. Dunham, at the Methodist parsonage, united in marriage Mr. Oinar Jensen, of Fort Steele, to Mrs Olive Agnes Brewer, of Calgary. A. B. Fenwick was groomsman and Mrs. W. B. Grubb was bridesmaid. The newly wedded couple will reside at Fort Steele.

When Germany Strikes

London—"Germany will make war" was the title of an impressive speech made by Lord Roberts last Tuesday night. He said: "Now, just as in 1866 and in 1870, war will take place the instant the German forces by land and sea are by their superiority at every point as certain of victory as anything in human calculations can be made certain. Germany strikes when Germany's hour has struck that is the time-honored policy of her foreign office. It is her policy at the present time; it is or should be the policy of every nation prepared to play a great part in history. Under that policy Germany has, within the last ten years sprung as at one bound from the weakest naval power to that of the greatest naval power, save one, upon the globe. Today every British warship and British vessel thrills in all her iron nerves to that mighty presence.

"The fact that we have lost command of every sea but one—the North Sea—and our supremacy over that sea is now a matter of doubt. In other words, whereas your forefathers traded as their right on every sea, you now only trade by the sufferance of other powers.

"We may stand still; Germany always advances, and the line along which she is moving is now most manifest. It is toward complete supremacy by land and sea.

"Contrasted with our own apathy or puerile spasmodic efforts, impressive is this magnificent unresting energy. It has the mark of true greatness; it exhorts admiration even from those against whom it is directed. We have a fleet but that fleet is rapidly becoming unequal to the fleets by which we may be opposed and by the inadequacy of our land forces, it is maimed and hampered in its very nature as a fleet."

Exhibit from China

Six thousand miles is a nice distance for any exhibit to travel even to a world's fair. However, it was not considered too far for the new republic of China to send a fine display of the dry-farmed products of that country, and at noon, Tuesday, En Lung Hsieh had it in place, opposite the C.P.R. exhibit.

"This is the first time we have ever exhibited at the Dry-Farming Congress," said the gentleman from China, "but it will not be the last. Our exhibits may not be very good yet, but they will be better. China is awakening to its agricultural possibilities, and such organizations as the Dry-Farming Congress are going to do much for us."

Black Barley is one of the features of the exhibit, which is composed mostly of grains, and different qualities of wool from their flocks.

Visitors who saw the exhibit were greatly interested, and Hon. Mr. Hsieh thinks it will not be many years before the people of America will be attending a Dry-Farming Congress in China.

Banquet at Cranbrook

ism and said that imperial defence was part of his political faith. He said that a good substantial navy would prove of great value to the Empire, especially manned by Canadians. He also spoke of increased representation in the House of Commons, also of the Senate, that he was sure that our present member, Mr. Green, would assist in securing more senators for British Columbia.

When Dr. J. H. King, ex-member for Cranbrook rose to propose the toast, "The City of Cranbrook" there was loud cheering. Dr. King also spoke of Imperialism which had found a strong abiding place in every corner of the Empire. He also spoke of the Kootenay Central railway connections with Cranbrook and Fort Steele so that the central city of the district, Cranbrook, would be in touch with, and establish commercial relations with the larger Kootenay and Columbia Valleys.

Mayor Bowness, in response, said that he was pleased the gathering was non-political, as it increased the spirit of good fellowship. That Cranbrook, without any exception was the best city in the interior of British Columbia. That it had a larger area of choice agricultural land in close proximity to the city, land that was fit for any kind of farming and fruit raising. That Cranbrook was the centre of Agriculture, Lumber, Mining and Commercial progress, that in a few years it would have a population of more than 10,000 people. Thos. Caven, M. P.P., then proposed the toast of the evening, "The Province of British Columbia." Mr. Caven said that the subject was too large a one to do justice to in a single speech. That he was a railroad man and knew more about railways than he did of the topography of the province; but he also knew that it took railways and branch lines, like the Kootenay Central to populate a district, that the K.C.R. should have a connection direct from Fort Steele to Cranbrook. That in his ouinion Cranbrook should have a demonstration farm, that the land was capable of mixed farming and fruit raising. That such a farm would give the most practical ideas to the farmer. He olso endorsed the remarks of Dr. King that, politically, Cranbrookers could and did put up a hard political fight, and that as soon asthe was over, the hatchet was buried, and the citizens shook hands and put shoulder to shoulder and strove for the upbuilding of a greater Cranbrook.

THE PREMIER'S SPEECH

In Sir Richard's response to the toast, "The Province of British Columbia" that going back to the time when the east knew little of the possibilities which lay hidden within the mountains and valleys of this province, he said that it was indeed a great honor to be entrusted with replying to this toast. He traced the unfolding of these resources until now there are none who could dispute the greatness of the potentialities of this province. That on entering the Confederation, the building of the Canadian Pacific was the guarantee of close connections between the far east and west and when this railway had been completed, the stories told by the pathfinders were true in every particular. That the so-called "Sea of Mountains" has been transformed into a vast store house of Mineral, Lumbering, Agricultural and Manufacturing industries. That before the completion of the C.P.R. but one mail was received in a month, and only 12 during a year; at its completion mail was received every day. That British Columbia was to receive her own was guaranteeh by the British North American Act. The coal beds of the province were the most extensive in the world, the timber resources the largest on the American continent, and that the possibilities of agriculture and fruit growing had been demonstrated by exhibits in all parts of the world and have received the highest awards. He spoke briefly of the progress in educational facilities, also of the enlargement of the future. Referring to railroads he said that within the next five years he expected that an expenditure of $150,000,000 would be made which would bring still more of the natural wealth of the province in touch with the outer world. In closing the Premier said "that his references to those things which could not be measured by dollar marks, but that the optimism, the undying faith of the old-time pioneer could be proved by the progress now going on in the province, and that as an asset to the province, the scenery, the grandeur of which could be found in every mountain, valley or stream in each part of the province, was an indication of its greatness. He was not boasting of these things in a spirit of envy or unjust rivalry of other provinces for he glories in them as part of a Dominion of great provinces embraced in the strong arms of a mighty empire of which we formed a part.

Peter Lund, of Wardner, then proposed the toast "The Press." He paid personal tribute to the Premier, speaking of his first meeting with him after he had been called upon to form his first cabinet. Responses were made by F. J. Deane, of the Cranbrook Herald, D. V. Mott, of the Associated Press, and A. B. Grace, of the Prospector.

P. E. Wilson, in a very appropriate speech, proposed "The Ladies" which was responded to by Mr. Leitch.

In response to the toast "Mine Host" Mr. George Hoggarth donated his share to the flood of oratory.

Messrs. R. T. Brymer, Geo. Stevenson and Mr. Lauback sang several songs which were much appreciated.

One toast which was not down on the program was that proposed by Mr. A. B. Macdonald, "The Senate" which was responded to by Senator Bostock, who spoke in favor of the naval policy of the government, and who also paid personal tribute to the Premier and his government since taking office.

The singing of "God Save the King" closed the largest and most social event that has ever taken place in the City of Cranbrook.

Wants Race under American Rules

"If they will only let me race under their own rules, that is all I want," said Sir Thomas Lipton, the English yachtsman, when interviewed on his arrival in Toronto recently. "I do not want to race under the international rules which govern yacht racing in Great Britian and throughout Europe. All I ask is a chance to race under the Universal rules, which govern yacht racing of all kinds in the United States with the single exception of the race for the American cup. Even under these conditions the Americans would have a slight advantage but as holders of the cup, perhaps entitled to that and I certainly do not wish for any modifications. But the American cup rules are another matter altogether. Remember that no yacht club in the United States would permit me to race with a boat such as I would have to build for this special race such penalties would be attached that a race would be out of the question. But what is more to the purpose is that with the growth of freakishness in the type of the yatch designed for the American cup it would be impossible to find a designer in the old country who would build a challenger to sail on its own bottom to New York which they would consider to have a fair chance. Fife won't do it, and Watson before he died, refused to risk it.

"Itis too bad, because I want another try for that cup. Last year I had one of the most successful yachting seasons in my career. I won all kinds of cups, I beat everything they had in Germany and wound up by defeating the Germany emperor easily.

"And I haven't given up hope yet. I have to see the New York Yacht club officials on my return to New York and I think there are signs that something may be done which will make it possible for me to challenge them. There is no truth in the statementthat they have absolutely refused to consider a compromise. They are splendid fellows, every one of them, and if anything can be done I feel sure it will be arranged."

Notes and Comment

The Balkan War or the Red Sox victory depressed the New York stock exchange this week.

There are many conflicting explanations of the high price of coal in Cranbrook. A public enquiry, under the "Combines Act" might unearth the real one.

The Cranbrook District Exhibition building at Lethbridge was completed by Wednesday of this week, and the exhibits were expected to reach that city by Thursday. Everything is ready far the op?ning of the Congress.

After a man has run over in his mind the list of Republican and Democratic candidates he knows, he wonders that either party wins an election.

Generally speaking the world moves but still there are localities in the States where a good ball game attracts more attention than a presedential election.

DIRECTOIRE TYPES PROMISED FOR THE FALL

TRAVELING SUIT FOR THE SEPTEMBER BRIDE.

DIRECTOIRE MODEL IN WHITE CLOTH.

TAFFETA COAT OVER LINGERIE FROCK.

THERE are two styles predicted for fall, a revival of the directoire types and the pannier modes—not, however, the pannier of olden times, but the new pannier of 1912, which is a strange rendering of the original idea. In many instances it looks only like an overskirt that is turned over and fastened down around the hem—an inverted bag, as it has been called.

Women have been so devoted to the long, slim line that, as a rule, they do not welcome with any degree of enthusiasm the idea of being made to look like bolsters with strings around the middle, which undoubtedly is the silhouette presented by the ultra pannier skirt of today.

"Give us long, straight lines for our tailor mades and we'll submit to drapery and hip effects for our less formal costumes," said a woman recently when interviewing her dressmaker about the ordering of "a few fall frocks."

This opinion will be echoed by the majority of women, who look best and are most at ease when gowned in moderately clinging skirts. But in connection with skirts the latest sensational model in tailor mades is the "jupe pantalon," or pantaloon skirt. This recent Parisian caprice has little in common with the erstwhile harem skirt of fame except that the harem had the bottom of the skirt, while the "jupe pantalon" gives us the top of the same garment. This latest development is a skirt with a series of little close gatherings at the waist line, confined by small buckles similar to those used on a man's trousers. At each side of the skirt is a pocket, and to complete the resemblance to masculine attire braces fastened by buttons back and front hold up the skirt.

This costume, needless to say, will be adopted only by girls who go in for extremes in dress. And the wearer of the "jupe pantalon," when sitting around at her club, smoking cigarettes, will look at first sight like a man in shirt sleeves.

With this garment is worn a shirt of white percale, perfectly flat and plain, with long sleeves, wristlets and a high, stiff collar—in fact, a man's shirt in all its unadorned severity.

There is, however, a mannish shirt that is going to figure this fall conspicuously in the wardrobe of every well dressed woman. This shirt is mostly made of white satin and, as I said, is extremely mannish in cut, after the masculine directoire standard. It shows the long shoulder line, long sleeves and a deeply opening Robespierre collar finished with plaited frills. In many cases quantities of buttons are used to outline trimming edges on this new model.

A delightful shirt of this character is built of pale gray satin with scarlet pipings around the cuffs, down the front and about the slanting armholes. Tiny scarlet satin buttons set close together follow the line of pipings. White satin shirts have small crystal buttons, and a fascinating trick played by this new shirt is the opening for three or four buttons below the Robespierre collar, a shirred tucker of flesh colored chiffon being worn in the opening. This gives the waist an unusual appearance until one discovers that the effect is "faked."

To come back to skirts once more, there is every reason to believe that plaits will be introduced in the straight, narrow tailor made models. Some of the plaits appear in a panel arrangement at the side and others as a back finish, but in every instance they are pressed or stitched very flat, and the skirt does not measure more than two and a half yards about the bottom. For dressier costumes the accordion plaited jupe is seen even now on imported frocks and in its new guise is scant and clinging. Then there is the plaited underskirt, almost a ruffle effect at the bottom of a skirt, say about two feet deep, with a pannier or tunic drapery at the top, that is a very favorite style just now and is a particularly good model for silk and thin materials.

One of the newest fashions for late summer and early fall combines three or more materials in a gown and always two or more colors. The lingerie frock seen in the illustration, with its dark taffeta coat, is an example of contrasts in fabrics, while the blue serge illustrated is a study in color effects.

Very simple in line is this coat of green and gold taffeta worn above a frock of cream net. The coat is almost a straight tunic, with Magyar sleeves cut in one with the garment, but the exaggerated collar and cuffs in rich cluny lace lend it much distinction. Rows of tiny green glass buttons are set on the lace as an extra trimming touch. This is a French creation and accompanies a lovely lingerie frock of net and lace. The skirt only appears in the cut.

The colonial colors, navy blue and buff, are represented in the dainty little autumn traveling suit of navy blue serge designed for a September bride. The coat is gracefully cut, and the walking skirt is short enough to reveal buttoned boots of dull calf.

Among the illustrations is to be found a type of the directoire costumes that are promised for fall. As you see, it is the masculine rather than the feminine dress of the directoire period that has inspired autumn fashions. This suit is of white broadcloth, and the directoire coat is worn with a belt of empire green leather. Embroidered white silk gloves meet the slashed sleeves.

CATHERINE TALBOT.

FALL BONNET FOR THE LITTLE MAID

THIS charming fall bonnet for a little girl has just arrived from Paris It is made of blue uncut velvet, and against the blue material are poised

New Touches For the Waist

ONE of the much talked about features of the new waists is the sleeves. The consensus of opinion is all in favor of the long shoulder line which is carried out in various ways. The effect is very much like that of a kimono sleeve cut off just below the round of the arm. This sleeve is an ideal affair to apply to an old fashioned waist, as it is not difficult to get this effect with an old blouse. All you have to do is to cut off the sleeve at this depth and either tuck or pipe the edge, then add the long sleeve, which is slightly full, but the fullness is carefully held in over the forearm by a deep cuff or line of buttons. Cuffs edged with a plaited frill both at the top and over the hands are new and add a modish touch to the waist. The fact that sleeves may be of a contrasting material, such as lace or net, aids in remodeling old ones.

Another easy method of freshening a blouse is by adding a vest or biblike portion of net or chiffon. Some of these are round, while others are pointed. The latter, however, are more becoming to stout figures. These vests are tucked. Sometimes tiny fancy crochet or glass buttons are used. Again they are quite severely plain, softened at the edges with a plaited or ruffled frill. The cuffs, with their plaited frills at the top and over the hands, match the vest.

Another "dress up" addition to a blouse is a fichu of lace or sheer material brought down under the belt front and back and finished off either square or in a V shape. The lace cassocks and jumpers of taffeta or the fancy silks are very effective in making the old blouse take on an air of newness.

Chiffon or net overblouses, although not one of the things one considers *absolutely new, are so delightful for re*juvenating purposes that they should not be forgotten.

Butterfly Effects

THERE is at present a craze for butterfly effects. The design flutters on parasol tops, on smart veilings and is worked in wonderful iridescent effects on the new trimmings.

The winged favorite is used also as shoe buckles, brooches, coiffure ornaments, and beautiful designs are seen in enamels and small diamonds. Black satin and velvet butterfly bows edged with brilliants or colored stones are lovely. The material is slipped into a frame, and thus any color can be added to the diamond's rimmed bow.

SOME "DON'TS WHEN VISITING

THERE are girls who always appear to get more invitations than they can accept and who are asked to the same houses over and over again, while other fair ones, just as charming and delightful to all outward view, never by any chance receive second invitations.

The popular visitor is a tactful individual who has the knack of so merging her individuality in that of the family of which she is a temporary member that she scarcely seems a visitor, yet she never makes the terrible mistake of usurping family privileges.

She is not late for breakfast or any other meal. She does not give orders to servants or in any way attempt to change the household routine.

When she is asked where she would like to go or what she would like to do she answers frankly. There is nothing more irritating than the "Oh, I don't care in the least!" or "Whatever you like" reply The desirable visitor exercises her tact, however, in this as in all other things and takes care not to suggest fatiguing excursions to a hostess less youthfully active than herself or force a host perhaps not too well dowered with this world's goods into needless expense. If you desire to be a pleasing visitor don't be too energetically bent on "helping." If you keep your eyes open it will soon become evident if there are small services you can render any member of the household. But the girl who insists on cooking some particular dish or "doing the flowers"—in both cases requiring half an hour's attendance getting her properties together—is an unmitigated nuisance.

Don't monopolize your host's special chair or use his writing table without his direct suggestion. Don't litter the living rooms with your possessions or leave your own room untidy Don't, just because you are visiting, sit down and expect to be entertained all day long. Arrange to go walking or "write letters" in your bedroom for an hour or two a day.

Remembering these things, you also will be of the visitors whose visits, unlike those of angels, are not few and far between.

Worth Remembering

TO cultivate laughter. A good laugh is better than medicine, as a rule. To always keep your troubles to yourself. Most people are too busy to be bothered with or interested in your sorrows.

If possible, to learn how to tell a good story and in this way amuse and entertain others.

To always try to look on the bright side of life. See the good in people and things and overlook the bad. We can always find something that is good, even if at first everything seems utterly bad.

If you are suffering, to try to hide your aches and pains under a bright and cheerful countenance, and, if possible, a sunny smile and a hearty laugh. It will help you as much as those around you.

That a good humored man or woman is always welcome, but a doleful one is never wanted.

GRACEFUL EFFECT

THE new scarf arrangements are really so elaborate that they become part of the bodice trimming. This idea is carried out on the gown seen in the illustration. The long drapery of black silk netting is studded with gold beads, and the length of tissue is wrapped first about the bodice in zouave fashion and then brought from the back and twisted over the arms, where the long ends hang gracefully. Such a scarf is adapted to a great many different treatments, all as effective as the one pictured.

New Christening Gift

GIFTS for babies are so often silver cups and silver rattles that a nice gift, and at the same time a useful one, is a relief to find. However, it really is to be had in a box which holds six little pairs of baby shoes and two little pairs of silk socks, with one pair of knitted bootees. These are arranged in a box which opens with a drawer. The little shoes are pink, blue and white, and two pairs are shoes, two pairs are soft kid moccasins and two pairs are little slippers, so that the baby is provided for literally at "every step of the way." Three little satin sachets are also in the box, and the entire set may be had for $12.

BE CAREFUL IN PREPARING VEGETABLES

IF vegetables not quite fresh are brought into the kitchen there is no hope of ever restoring them to first class condition. Even good vegetables will not be at their very best if not properly cared for after they have been received.

Most housewives think that washing vegetables with water is the last word in carefulness. So it is if the water is above suspicion, but when water is not considered safe for drinking it should be boiled as well for washing vegetables as it should be for family consumption.

As to the best way of washing vegetables, a few cautions will not come amiss. Some people never eat asparagus at table unless it has been prepared by some one who is careful, as they do not enjoy biting on sand. The cleaning of this vegetable requires conscience as well as time.

The bunch should be placed, heads down, in water for some hours and should be shaken back and forth to dislodge the particles of earth.

Spinach is another vegetable which requires the very best attention in the cleaning line to free it from grit. After the roots have been cut off it should be washed in a number of waters and lifted out of the pan each time in loose handfuls before the water has been drained off

Celery and lettuce and other salad plants, eaten raw, must be washed with especial care. They should be searched with particular care, leaf by leaf, for insects, washed in several waters and then wiped dry with a clean cloth and put in a cold place to become crisp. Otherwise these vegetables are not worth eating.

Sure Cure For Dandruff

POUR over one heaping tablespoonful of sulphur one quart boiling water. Keep in an air tight vessel for twenty-four hours, then drain off the clear portion. Rub into the scalp every night until the dandruff disappears.

While treating the scalp for dandruff it is advisable that one be very careful about the shampoo. The following liquid is excellent for this purpose, leaving the scalp beautifully clean and the hair as fluffy as one could wish: Beat the yolk of one egg into one pint hot rainwater and add one ounce rosemary spirits Beat the mixture well and use it warm, rubbing it well into the scalp and over the hair. Rinse in several waters and sit in the sun until the hair is dry.

A Dainty Collar

TO wear with colored linen dresses a sailor collar of sheerest mull is most effective

It requires a half yard of material. After cutting the collar out finish the edge with an inch wide frill of finely plaited net.

Cuffs to match may be made with rounded or square corners and edged with plaited net.

If a touch of color is desired a row of featherstitching where the net is joined to the collar supplies it.

IN THE CULINARY WORLD

Grapefruit Cocktail.

CUT a chilled grapefruit in halves. With a sharp, thin knife remove the seeds and cut out each section of fruit. Serve the pulp with the juice in dainty glasses. Two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one tablespoonful of sherry may be added to each glass or either or both may be omitted. Another method is to take grapefruit juice or lemon and orange in equal proportions. It is then sweetened to taste, flavored with maraschino and diluted just before serving with charged water and put in tall glasses with some of the grapefruit pulp and a maraschino cherry.

Refreshing Beverages.

Any fresh fruit makes a delicious drink at this time of the year when the juice squeezed from it is strained, sweetened and filled with cold soda or aerated water. Or a sirup can be made to be kept on hand by boiling the juice with sugar. To make the drinks use a few spoonfuls of this sirup and fill the glass with water, plain or carbonated. The most delicious lemonade or limeade can be had at a moment's notice if the juice of the fruit be kept on hand and mixed with sugar to taste. It is simplicity itself to pour water over this, and the drink is ready.

Spiced Red Cabbage.

Shave a medium sized head of red cabbage and soak for half an hour in cold water, then drain as dry as possible. In a saucepan melt one heaping tablespoonful of butter and one tablespoonful of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter teaspoonful of pepper, six whole cloves and one-half cupful of *good vinegar. Add the drained cab*bage, cover and cook slowly, then simmer gently for fully an hour and a half.

Light Corn Bread.

In the evening put in a mixing bowl one pint of fine cornmeal, a scant teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of sugar and a large tablespoonful of shortening, either lard or lard and butter mixed. Pour over just enough boiling water from the kettle to moisten thoroughly and no more. Cover closely and leave for the night. Next morning add two or three well beaten eggs (according to the season), a half cupful of milk, one pint of sifted flour and as much more milk as is necessary to make a thin drop batter. Pour into a well greased shallow pan and bake twenty-five minutes in a hot oven.

Boston Baked Chicken.

A chicken is cut up as for fricassee, and to each pound of the meat allow two tablespoonfuls of flour, one scant half teaspoonful of salt and a dust of pepper. Mix thoroughly and roll each piece of the chicken in the mixture. Pack closely in a large bean pot and cover with boiling water. Bake for three hours and a half. Cover after ten or fifteen minutes, but not before it boils. Serve in the dish in which it is baked.

THE OCEAN TEA PARTY

MISS NICOLL AND HER FRIENDS DRINKING AFTERNOON TEA.

THE very latest at the seashore is the ocean tea party The very original idea of entertaining friends in this unique fashion was conceived by Miss Charlotte Van Courtland Nicoll, a New York society girl, niece of De Lancey Nicoll, the famous lawyer.

Miss Nicoll, who is spending the summer at Long Beach, N. Y., is an accomplished swimmer. Finding that this fascinating sport increased her appetite to such an extent while in the water that she was obliged to satisfy the "inner woman" before returning to the hotel, the idea presented itself of having afternoon tea served in the ocean.

Miss Nicoll outlined her idea to the hotel carpenter, who built a seaworthy craft with a high poop deck to hold the teacups and commodious deck space forward and midships for plates of sandwiches and cakes.

Everything being shipshape, notes were sent to several of Miss Nicoll's friends inviting them to her first ocean tea party. After swimming about for half an hour Miss Nicoll and her friends joined a young matron who was pouring tea behind the ocean going tray.

This party proved such a success that the fair hostess issued invitations for an "ocean tea" every Friday during August at 4 p. m.

The making of such an ocean going craft is quite within the province of the amateur carpenter with a turn for nautical construction.

Canning Suggestions

FRUIT jar rubbers can seldom be relied upon to do duty the second time. After thoroughly washing and drying the rings drop them into melted and partially cooled paraffin until they are heavily coated. When canning use the rings just as you would new ones. The heat of the jar partly melts the paraffin, causing it to flow into any little cracks that need closing As the fruit cools the paraffin hardens, securely sealing the can.

When canning use an old fashioned gravy boat with a handle and a long spout for filling the jars with fruit.

It is quite difficult when canning peaches to halve them neatly so that the edges will not look ragged, but if a circle is cut around the peach before it is pared, then one-half twisted from the other by a quick turn of the hands, the edges will be firm and even after the halves are pared.

No doubt every housewife has at some time or another discovered to her dismay that the jelly with which she has been laboring won't "jell." Let her then add a pinch of powdered alum and the result will be most gratifying.

Unusual Machine Work

HEMSTITCHING can be very neatly done on the machine in this way: Draw the number of threads desired and baste the edge of the hem in the center of the drawn threads. Lengthen the stitch on the machine and stitch on the very edge of the hem. Pull the bastings out and pull the edge of the hem to the bottom of the drawn threads. Hemstitching done in this way can scarcely be distinguished from that done by hand.

The sewing machine can be employed in mending torn lace. Draw the edges of the tear together and baste on a piece of thin paper. Then stitch back and forth as many times as it is necessary and when finished carefully tear off the paper. Lace mended in this way will be much neater and more durable than when darned by hand.

Simple Sachets of Linen

A PRETTY, dainty sachet is made from a triangular shaped piece of linen, edged on both sides by narrow torchon lace. To make, cut a square piece of fine white linen, 8 by 8 inches, and line it with a similar square of wadding, through which is scattered a liberal supply of orris root and one's favorite sachet powder mixed.

Draw on the linen some simple conventional floral spray and work the design in natural color.

Put the squares of linen and scented wadding together and fold into a triangular piece Sew up the seams and gather the lace in a soft ruffle around the two oblique sides.

Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, has under consideration a plan by which the important industry of poultry raising will be strengthened and developed.

There will shortly be published a book of immense value to agriculturists of Canada. It will deal with the forage plants, especially such plants as the clover, etc. This work will be beautifully illustrated and Hon. Martin Burrell has authorized the publication of a very large edition. Copies will be placed in all rural schools in Canada and will be supplied to farmers at the nominal sum of fifty cents.

The Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, a few days ago opened a new grain elevator in Montreal, then inspected government works at Sorel. He followed this up with the selection of a site for a Quebec dry dock and then inaugerated the North Ship Channel in the St. Laurence. It is wonderful how much can really be done for the people when a minister is a live wire.

The Government of Canada has paid out of current revenue a loan of $6,142,000 which matured on October 1st. This is a somewhat rare experience for Canadians and one which appeals to them. Under another regime a growing revenue was regarded as an excuse to indulge in greater expenditure and a further extension of Canadian credit with a view to borrowing. The present government is using growing revenues to pay off debts and reduce the annual interest chargeable on the country. Increased confidence at home and abroad will be the result.

Arrangements are being made between the Dominion Department of Agriculture and the Ontario government whereby greater assistance will be given for encourageing the production and use of high grade seed grain. Co-operation with the Canadian Seed Growers' Association along somewhat new lines will result, it is hoped, in an increased quantity of registered seed grain being available to the farmers. Seed inspection work is being pushed more vigorously than ever before More inspectors have been employed and the various districts have been covered more thoroughly.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is quoted as having told the General Reform Association in Toronto that the people of Canada, in turning his Government out of office, had been influenced by "prejudice, passion, ignorance and self-interest." In the mouth of the Liberal leader the words constituted a general term of abuse, reflecting the bitter personal feeling of a beaten man whose vanity after long years of careful nurture has been deeply wounded. But what about the "self-interest" accusation? Does it mean that the rejection of reciprocity benefited the Canadian people as an economic proposition? Can it mean that the interests of the beaten ministry and the interests of the Canadian people were not identical?

• • • •

Among the numerous errors of judgement which marked the Laurier tour through Ontario, the Peterborough incident shines as a peculiarly bright example. The Liberal leader in his speech at Peterborough attempted to call Lord Milner, of all men, as a witness in behalf of the Laurier navy. The attempt was ill-considered, Lord Milner being then in Canada. It so happens that Lord Milner stands in a group of British Statesmen who are pre-eminent as empire builders, in whose scheme of things the Laurier navy would and could have no place. Yet Sir Wilfrid Laurier boldly proclaimed on the platform at Peterborough that Lord Milner approved of a Canadian navy as the best way by which Canada could help the mother country. Lord Milner was made aware of the use to which his name had been put at Peterborough. His reply was that in his speech in Toronto four years ago—to which, he thought, Sir Wilfrid Laurier had alluded—he had advocated a Canadian navy, "but specially emphasized that it should be for Imperial not merely Canadian purposes." Everybody knows that the Laurier navy had no place in any such purpose as this outlined by Lord Milner. As to what he had since said on landing at Halifax, Lord Milner added, "The British people will welcome anything Canada may decide to do and approve the spirit in which she has taken the matter up. Personally I favor Canada and the other self-governing dominions creating their own navies, though this would be of little use if, when established they did not act as one. Meanwhile, as it will take time to build up a Canadian navy, a direct contribution to the British navy may be desirable, preferably of ships, not money. But any share the dominions take in Imperial defence should involve a share in the control of policy. They are not tributary states but partners in the Empire."

Is Sir Wilfrid Laurier still disposed to quote Lord Milner as his witness?

CRANBROOK HAD SOME NEWS FOR THE DUKE

Enthusiasts Cheered Lustily for New Royal Personage—Duke Much Amused

By Canadian Press.

McLeod, Alta., Oct. 10.—There was an amusing incident early Tuesday afternoon at Cranbrook, where the train carrying the Duke of Connaught and party stopped for half an hour. The school children of the town, together with a number of Boy Scouts and veterans, cheered with great heartiness in response to the calls of a local enthusiast, a Mr. Sainsbury. After lusty cheers for the Duke and Duchess Mr. Sainsbury called for cheers for our new Royal Duke, the Duke of Kent. The Duke laughly remarked that this was news to him.

"Oh, but it's in the paper, sir," protested Mr. Sainsbury.

"Very likely," said his Royal Highness, "but you must not believe everything that you read in the papers."

A thought for Mother

Yes, the summer is past and mother failed to get her vacation. And now comes the fall sewing, the winter garments to be chosen, perhaps made; the housecleaning with all of its attendant horrors, the picking of autumn dainties, which will give zest to many a winter feast, and the general management of the whole domestic machinery, so that no little part will become clogged or its squeaking disturb the harmony of the home. As summer has brought mother no vacation, no change of scenes, what wonder then if her face is pale, her step a little slower, her smile no less sweet but less frequent than of old? Every one is sorry for mother's disappointments, but all take it as a matter of course as she never complains. So the domestic mill goes grinding on until one day there is all confusion in the household; the machinery is all awry, for the hand that guided it has lost its cunning and dropped nerveless by her side. Mother has bourne the burden too long, it becomes too heavy and she is crushed beneath it. Isn't this a true picture we have sketched for you? Isn't mother too often left out? Girls, you know it is so, and the conscious blush rises to your cheeks and you hang your heads and are ashamed of your own selfishness. We write this that you may be more thoughtful of mother. You will never regret any sacrifice you have made to lighten her burdens and bring her life all the sweetness possible.

MOTHER

Many a man has grown eloquent in thought and word as he recalled his mother. The word means something different to every man, but it means much to all men. A man who always speaks well of his mother is generally a man who can be trusted. We note the fact that one of the present candidates for Vice-president of the United States, in making a speech a few years ago, paid a beautiful tribute to his mother. The campaign committee are now using that part of his speech with the assertion that a man who remembered his mother like that ought to be a man who could be trusted in the public service and this is what he said.

"I think back through the years, lean and fat, good and bad, to my earliest recollection. I saw a woman with an eye that flashes swift as an archangel's wing and a mouth that breaks with laughter and hardens at sight of wrong, singing lullabies; a woman who, with hand grasping the unseen hand, walks the brier-bordered paths of life unashamed, unafraid, unharmed. She is clad in garments of beauty to me, and age does not soil them, nor years make them cheap and tawdry. Her tongue is without guile, having never been the messenger of a lie. It is seventeen years since her soul went home to God, and her fingers became to me the fingers of an angel; but I have not forgotten all she said. She told me there was a Santa Claus, and I believed her. But he brings me no longer drums and fifes. But he still brings to me the vision of my mother and the music of that angelic chorus which sang at creation's dawn and at the hour of man's redemption

Smoothe out the wrinkles on your forehead when you go to dinner. This will help your wife to retain her youthful appearance.

Keep the rooms sweet and pure by ventilation. For this reason air and sunshine are free.

Most of us have got to learn that contentment and not worldly wealth brings happiness.

Profanity never did any man the least good. No man is richer, or happier or wiser for it. It commends no one to society; it is disgusting to the refined and abominable to the good.

There will be no shirking on our part We will do our duty to the other parts of the empire.

And while he did not specify the exact nature of his conception of that duty, he made it clear in what direction he conceived it to lie: "It is not inspiring," he said, "to see the nations devoting so much of their resources to agencies of distruction, but so long as present conditions prevail throughout the world, I believe the British race in Great Britian and the Dominions over the sea will be prepared to do their duty and we will do it." The Canadian Government, then, is determined to help in the work of Imperial defence; it is only the amount and nature of the contribution that have yet to be decided.

A DIFFERENT NOTE

Now, in this speech Mr. Borden strikes a note very different from that of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's recent declaration. Sir Wilfrid sneered at British naval policy. He regarded it as provocative, as insane. And as for consdltation, the interests of the two countries being different, there was really no need of common councils, "Do not call us to your councils," or the new creed of Sir Wilfrid Lauriers; "do not call us to your councils, because consultation implies responsibility. Let England proceed in the mad provocative policy of protecting the trade routes. Canada will build railways and reap the bene fit, but Canada will not help."

That is the policy if we may judge from this speech, that Sir Wilfrid Laurier will oppose to Mr. Borden's policy of Imperial duty. It seems to us, and we venture to think it will seem also to Canada, an unworthy policy. For it leaves Canada in the colonial status, neither consulted nor assisting, but dependent upon the mother country for such protection as the mother country can afford. And while it is an unworthy policy, it is also a disastrous policy for it rests upon one or two assumptions,either that defence is unnecessary to Canada, or that England unaided will always be able to maintain that defence.

Both these assumptions are erroneous. Canada has need of defence, because we have seen, she depends upon the ocean highways for the great bulk of her trade, because she has shipping interests and fishing interests of many kinds. And that defence cannot much longer be guaranteed by England alone, in view of the enormous powers now arrayed against her. "Disunited we fall, united we stand," that must be more and more the motto of the British Empire.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, will, then, oppose a policy of mere economy to the policy of safety, of dignity, of duty, which Mr. Borden advocates. From what we have seen of the temper and spirit the patriotism and national pride of the Canadian people, we have no doubt of the result.

THE FOLLY OF 1907

If Sir Wilfrid Laurier's policy has any influence, it will be to prevent the Dominion Government from proceeding as freely and rapidly as it would otherwise do- An opposition using economy as its cry and appealing to the Canadian elector to save money rather than spend it on Imperial defence may force Mr. Borden and his colleagues to go somewhat slower than they would otherwise be inclined to go. But they will not be deflected from their aim, and we are confident that they will have the support of the great mass of the Canadian people.

The pity of it is that we might have had Sir Wilfrid Laurier with us in this imperial policy. If he had been treated with fairness and generosity in 1907, when he passionately told the Imperial Conference that Canada had turned her back on the United States and put all her hope in the British Empire, we should not have had this change of attitude.

But Sir Wilfrid was told that he could not be treated differently from the foreigner, and he turned in despair to the United States. President Taft was found willing to do more for Canada than Mr. Asquith—that is the lamentable history of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's change of attitude. It might have been avoided to the great benefit of the Empire. But we have hopes, nevertheless, that all things work together for good. Sir Wilfrid's change of front awakened Canada, and may help to awaken England. Nor do we believe that his opposition will materially alter the policy of co-operation in Imperial defence upon which the Borden Government is now about to launch.

At the Auditorium Theatre

Miss Verna Felton and The Allen Players

When the announcement was made from the Auditorium last Thursday week of the coming of the Allen Players to Cranbrook for a week's stay, it was received with great applause, thus indicating the support they would receive when the curtain rolled up and the players opened their repertoire with "That Girl from Texas" and the remaining time of their stay in the city.

Mr. Allen, the proprietor, brought with him all his old company with one or two exceptions, and these only made for the strengthening of the company as a whole. Miss Verna Felton remains the leading star.

The Royal Hungarian Quartette, which is under the direction of Joe Schranko, still remains a forceable part of the musical section of the company and holds the people with their excellent rendering of good music.

The Allen Players began their weeks entertainment with "That Girl from Texas" In this Miss Felton took the part of May Percy a girl who was brought up, educated and living the free life of the west, on a ranch in Texas belonging to her Uncle Peter. A girl more at home with the cow-boys and horses than with the gaity which surrounds society. Afterwards she was found to be an heiress to a large estate in Ireland, going there she was unattracted by the life she was supposed to lead, desiring to return to her western home, but owing to the ejection of some of her tenants for non-payment of rent by the unscrupulous secretary in charge, trouble ensued in which she takes a leading part in ministering to the humanity of the downtrodden Irish peasant.

Throughout the whole play Miss Felton proves herself an adept in the art of picturing the life of a free western girl and her adaptability in portraying the spirit of a loyal American citizen; also the humanity with which she protects the poor ignorant Irish peasant. Miss Felton in this play was well supported by the other various members of the company.

Tuesday evening "The Third Degree" was presented to the patrons of the Auditorium by the Allen Playere. In this the methods of the New York police in dealing with criminal cases were exposed. Mr. Arthur Kenock as Captain Clinton represented the police who forced a confession of guilt from an entirely innocent party, this was done by hypnotic influence, portraying a strange, but powerful scene, which took place in the apartments of the murdered man. The wife of the man accused of murder, Mrs. Howard Jefferies, Jr., (Miss Verna Felton), determined to gain his acquittal and prove his innocence by appealing to Judge Brewster, who, though not a criminal lawyer, was one known to be a lawyer who helped the poor and protected the weak, and who was supposed to be the only lawyer in New York not influenced by the police or authorities. Mr. G. D. Zucco, as the Judge, was strong in this character and ably fulfilled the responsibilities attached to his part. Miss Felton as the suppliant showed admirable qualities in her pleading for the innocent, and also the unselfishness of a girl who once received a helping hand and now willing to stand aside for the welfare of the one she loved The rest of the company well supported the leading characters.

"A Contented Woman" was the bill presented on Wednesday night. The play deals with the 'Woman's Suffrage movement and a large audience was in attendance. Miss Felton, as the woman's candidate, was successful in showing the versatility of her acting and was ably supported by G. D. Zucco, as her husband, the opposing candidate. The play abounds in many laugh provoking situations and is extremely pleasing. Mrs. Allen, as "Uncle Jim," the suffragette leader, dressed in a cuttaway coat and trousers provoked much laughter. B. Egan as Todie the hen-pecked husband, who after the election showed that he was boss of the house was especially good.

On Thursday to a full house the Allen Players gave a splendid interpretation of that well known play "Nell Gwynne of Drury Lane." The scenery and costumes used in this play contained some of the best ever seen in Cranbrook. The acting of the players was highly to be commended as each was well conversant with their parts and interpreted the life of the time of King Charles II in a typical manner. The play was one which brought out the merits of the Allen Players as a company better than any other of their repertoire in that every player was so well balanced with the other and supported the leaders in splendid style. Miss Verna Felton again came up to the standard she set for herself in the opening plays of the week.

Canadians Lead in Patriotism

Toronto—The Duke of Connaught spent an hour Monday in Toronto as the guest of the Canadian club at a lucheon given at the King Edward hotel. Referring to his tour of Canada the Duke said he had covered about ten thousand miles and had learned many things.

"I feel glad that no more loyal people than the Canadians exist in the British Empire. Of course Canada is a democratic country, and none the worse for that, but it is in her retaining the principles of the old esthblished monarchy across the seas that one of the greatest problems of modern times are solved. I felt as I travelled through the country that the people I met were imbued with the idea of thefuture prosperity of Canada."

One thing, he said, foremost in its influence on him out of all the tour, it was the importance of education. The bogey of dissension between the East and West was dismissed in one terse sentence by the speaker.

"Ihad heard before I went West that I might hear talk showing a desire for seperation. I never heard any such word in all my trip," he declared. "Whether in provinces of East or West, I discovered no spir it of individuality. I am certain that all those from the Old Country who recently have come to Canada will bear me out that there is a strong feeling of loyalty.

"It is a great thing to see nationalities, one and all being welded into Canadian citizenship. It is a great credit to the authorities that these things are so."

ROYAL PARTY REACHES HOME.

Ottawa—Their Royal Highnesses, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, and the Princess Patricia, arrived in Ottawa, Monday night at 10:30 o'clock, via the special Canadian Pacific Railway train from Toronto, after an epoch making tour of nearly ten thousand miles. They were met by Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden, the premier, a number of his colleagues, the mayor, city council and several thousand citizens, who turned out to give the Royal residents a welcome home. Whistles in various mills throughout the city tolled their shrill welcomes as the royal train steamed into the station.

On the arrival of the Royal party, there was no attempt at speech-mak ing or presentation of addresses, the welcome being of a purely informal character, but none the less sincere. As a fitting conclusion to one of the most auspicious trips made by any such party in Canada, C. W. Eibacher, assistant to the president, who had charge of the train since it left Toronto on August 30, gave a dinner on the train previous to its arrival here.

A Modern Romance

The grounds are well worth seeing. The Italian Garden is quite famous, Clay broke in.

The ladies went to put on their outdoor things. Hiram Horner talked to Clay, but found out quickly that his host was taking but little notice of what he said, for Clay was busy thinking of Vera's strange disturbance at reading the letter. He had thought that the handwriting was familiar, but he could not place it. He felt certain that Vera was troubled, and he wondered if that were the reason why she had refused him. At the bottom of his heart he knew that she loved him, and he was perplexed.

Mr. Horner went on in front with Lady Barton, while Clay followed with Vera and Mrs. de Lisle. They walked in this order for some time till Lady Barton stopped and waited for them. Her face was flushed, and she appeared to be rather excited.

At last Clay succeeded in getting Vera alone, and he did not waste any time by beating about the bush.

I want you to remember that I am your friend, even if I am to be nothing else he said earnestly. If at any time you are in need of advice you will come to me?

Why do you ask me? she said, and there was a tremor in her voice.

There is something that is troubling you, he said keenly.

She shook her head, and quickly hastened her pace.

Don't run away from me. I know every expression of your face, and it pains me to see the unhappiness that has lately been there. Will you confide in me I may be able to help.

There is nothing.

You cannot deceive me, but I won't press you now. Always remember that you can command me in any way you like.

You are very kind.

To add to her nervousness their walk was taking them very close to Sunnicote, and it would be fatal were they to encounter Hilda, for she would be almost compelled to present her to her friends. In the distance she could see the cottage nestling among the trees, and they were going towards it.

I feel dreadfully tired, shall we turn back? Vera said wearily.

Would you like a rest, I see there is a cottage just ahead. Probably they would allow us to sit down for a while.

I would rather return, she exclaimed hastily.

She fancied that she could see Hilda standing in the doorway, and she almost dragged Clay round.

Would you mind walking quickly? Please take my arm, he said, and he looked at her curiously, for her face was pale, and he almost imagined that her eyes wore a hunted look.

She pulled herself together with an effort and suddenly began to talk to him at a furious rate. This only increased his curiosity, for he could see that her eyes were flashing with suppressed excitement, and that her speech was unnatural. They at last reached the house, and the remainder of their party was out of sight.

Vera took off her things, and then went to the library, where she sat down and began to write a letter to Crawley Brann. She started with no formal headline, and had hardly written the first line when Clay entered. For a moment Vera was frightened when she saw his look of grim determination.

Hilda, he said, and his voice was tense with passion.

She rose unsteadily and faced him. He seized her almost roughly by the arm.

You cannot deceive me, you love me as I love you, he said fiercely.

She swayed slightly, and he caught her in his arms and kissed her eyes, her cheeks and her lips, while she lay back unresistingly.

David, she cried imploringly.

My love my sweet, how I have longed for this time. Kiss me, dear one.

She could resist no longer, and she gave way to the love that was tearing at her heart.

Tell me that you love me, he said hoarsely.

I love you, David, she whispered softly.

In that moment of perfect happiness there was no room in her mind for thought of the crime which lay between them. Her pulse throbbed with the mad joy conjured up by the caresses of the man she loved, and her whole being sang with very gladness.

They were silent, and as the moments passed Vera began to realise what she had done. This last act of hers seemed to be a greater sin than the supplanting of her friend, and she knew not what to do.

David, I can't do it, she cried helplessly.

What do you mean? he asked in consternation.

I cannot marry you, she said dully.

But your lips have told me that you love me.

They had no right to do so, she cried fiercely.

Your eyes would have betrayed you dearest. Don't let us have any more nonsense. You and I are going to be very happy, he said, with quiet confidence.

I cannot marry you, she repeated, and her voice was firm.

He began to see that he would yet have to fight to win this woman, and this realisation nerved him to further efforts.

You must give me some reason, he said, and she shuddered at the sternness of his voice.

I can give you none.

I insist It is my right.

She looked hopelessly at him, and for a while she was silent, but at last she spoke, and her face was alight with a great resolve.

I ask a great favor of you, David. Will you forget what you have said to me this morning and what I have done.

Just for a fortnight let us remain as we were—the best of friends.

And then? he demanded eagerly.

If then you care to ask again, the question that you have asked me this morning, I will—

Yes?

I will answer you frankly.

I do not understand you. Why should we wait?

Because I ask you, she cried eagerly. Perhaps it is a woman's whim. Won't you trust me, David?

She flushed as she asked him, for she remembered how little reason this man had to trust her, if he but knew the truth.

You will give me an answer in a fortnight?

I will marry you, if you still care to ask me, she answered, and a flush came to her face, as she saw that her statement astonished him greatly.

There can be no doubt about it then.

We shall see, Vera said simply, but his face told of his perplexity.

CHAPTER XIV

After lunch Vera sat herself in the hall, a prey to her miserable thoughts. How greatly she longed to have had the pluck to tell the truth to David and to have thrown herself on his mercy. Now, she did not know what to do. Only one thing was certain, and that was that she must terminate this agonising suspense.

Hiram Horner was talking to Lady Barton, and a footman came in and brought him some telegrams. In a few minutes he crossed over to Vera and took a seat beside her.

I have executed your commission, and campacs have risen two points. Some of the others are also on the rise, he said with a smile.

What does that mean?

Only that you have made a few thousand dollars. You came to me at a very opportune moment. Such a chance doesn't come twice in a lifetime.

You think I shall make a good deal of money?

I am sure of it.

And quickly?

Yes. I'm busy talking to Lady Barton. She's a most interesting woman. Will you excuse me?

Under the circumstances, I will, she said lightly. Especially as I am just going out, she said dryly.

She did not go through the hall, but escaped through a side door, and then hastened in the direction of Sunnicote. She thought of Crawley Brann waiting for her, and a bitter smile twitched at the corners of her mouth.

She rapped at the quaint brass knocker, which she had bought for Hilda, and without waiting for an answer entered the cottage. Hilda rose to her feet with a glad cry, and and threw her arms about her friend's neck.

How glad I am to see you, but you look very ill, she said affectionately, and she began to remove Vera's hat and coat.

You are the picture of health, Vera remarked pleasantly, and what a lot of work you have.

Yes, I am more than making enough to live on. I shan't require your money any longer, she cried gleefully.

A shadow crossed Vera's face.

Surely it has not been very distasteful, she said sadly.

It was to Vaughan. He didn't like it. You will have some tea and you will tell me about your grand friends.

Vera was quiet, as she listened to her friend's chatter. Her only comforting thought was that Hilda was radiantly happy.

The mellow gong of the grandfather's clock sounded the hour—four o'clock, and there was a sharp rap at the door. Hilda hastened to answer it, and Crawley Brann entered quickly.

So you are here, he said to Vera with a venomous look.

Do you wish to see me? Vera asked quickly.

The Workaday Trio

If your nose is close to the grindstone rough,
And you hold it down there long enough,
In time time you will say there is no such thing
As brooks that babble or birds that sing;
These three will all your world compose—
Just you and the stone and your poor old nose!

Yet buds do blossom and lanes are green,
And woods do lure with an ardor keen
And leaves are rustling and skies are there,
No matter whether you see or care;
And how can they come, do you suppose,
To you and the stone and your poor old nose.

If to go and seek them you still refuse
It doesn't hurt them—it's you that lose,
For the zephyrs whisper and lovers sigh,
Whatever you doubt, disclaim, deny!
And the world's a rhyme, while you're but prose—
Yes, you and the stone and your poor old nose.

Girl Cured of Disfiguring Pimples

By Cuticura Ointment. Broke Out on Face when Twelve or Thirteen. Were Most Embarrassing. Had Tried Everything.

A Nova Scotia girl, Miss Mabel Morash, of Dover West, writes: "When I was about twelve or thirteen years of age, my face broke out with pimples, and I tried everything to get rid of them, but failed. The pimples were the worst on my forehead and chin. They came out in groups and developed later into sores. Being on my face they caused great disfigurement, and were most embarrassing.

"After trying so many remedies without success, I saw the Cuticura Ointment advertised, and I sent for a box. I then applied it to the pimples, and in a week I saw a great change in my face. I kept using it, and in a few months it rendered a complete cure. Now you cannot tell I ever had pimples, thanks to the Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) Miss Mabel Morash, Mar. 31, 1911.

Baby's Face Like Raw Beef

"My baby boy had a large pimple come on his forehead. It burst and spread all over his face which soon looked like a piece of raw beef, all smothered with bad pimples. It was awful to look at. The poor little thing used to scratch it and cry terribly. I took him to a doctor but he only got worse until I was quite frightened that he would always be disfigured. Then I got two tins of Cuticura Ointment, together with Cuticura Soap, and in two months had quite cured him. Now of course I use Cuticura Soap for all my children (Signed) Mrs. E. Perry, 99, Waterloo Rd., Aldershot, England, May 21, 1910.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, but to those who have suffered much, lost hope and are without faith in any treatment, a liberal sample of each with a 32-p. booklet on the skin and scalp will be mailed free, on application. REVEL IN CAVE WONDERS

Caves Figured Prominently In History of Ancients—Prehistoric Men Used them as Dwellings

Caves undoubtedly were of greater importance to prehistoric mankind than at present, for there is sufficient reason to believe that the first human beings made them their dwelling places.

Looking for an abode several thousand years ago must have been almost as trying as it is now, and no doubt once a creditable cave had been discovered, the family remained there as long as possible, until others stronger than they coveted their place of residence and obtained possession by the simple method of slaying the males and adding the more comely of the females to their family circle.

To dislodge a cave bear from its lastness must have been a tremendous test of skill and courage, taking into consideration the weapons of defence and defence wielded by primitive man.

In the first place to penetrate into a dark cavern, never before visited by man, was a test of moral courage of no mean order, for probably it was believed to be inhabited by the most evil spirits any or all of which might wreak vengeance on the daring intruder.

Having subdued his dread of demons and slain the predatory owner of the cave, prehistoric man set about installing his family. Perhaps, thinking discretion the better part of valor, he first sent his wife into the cavern and, all having gone well, no doubt the next procedure was to arrange rude couches on which to sleep. Then it must have been necessary to barricade the opening, after which, no doubt, nothing more was done to increase the material comforts, though possibly the owner sometimes amused himself by cutting rude pictures in the stone.

Much later on, caves were often used as refuges for fugitives, and many of the early Christians must have used them both as hiding places in times of danger and as churches wherein to carry out the simple ritual which marked the beginning of the Christian era.

To the geologist, caves are a source of the greatest interest, for many of the most important discoveries of fossil remains have been found in them, while reaching far into the crust of the earth, as is often the case, they reveal to the trained eye of the mineralogist secrets that might otherwise never have been discovered.

Some caves are of wonderful beauty. Nothing is more interesting than a cave of stalacites and stalagmites, the two sometimes joined together thus forming stalacite columns on which the play of light is wonderful in the extreme.

Moreover, considering the ages it has taken to form these conical deposits of carbonate and lime, one can readily believe that caves are, as they have been described the oldest treasure houses on earth.

In different parts of the world are caverns which reveal such beauties that they are almost unearthly in their splendor. Great galleries lead to huge cathedral-like chambers, rising many feet to the roof, their crystal walls sending forth scintillations of light caused by the feeble rays of a single candle, which are beyond description.

These mighty caves formed by great air bubbles when the earth was in the throes of volcanic upheavals, are the most solitary places in the world. They have never since their creation been illumined by a ray of sunshine. Wind and rain have not had their way with them, and they are, as they have been for many thousand years and will no doubt remain until the end.

Baked Potato

The most easily digested potato in the world is one that is perfectly baked. And nothing is much more attractive than a clean skinned, perfectly baked potato. It is good for children, and it is good for grown ups who like it so served with just salt and milk or sweet new cream. When more fat is needed we must use butter, the best butter.

Some people handle their baked potatoes as they would handle eggs, taking them one by one from an oven, with the door but slightly open, pinch them to let out the hot steam, etc. One who was particular about her baked potato once contributed the following recipe:

Baked potato—There are baked potatoes and baked potatoes. Of course the quality of the potato is most important, for in no other way of preparing potatoes does the quality count for so much. First scrub with a small brush, kept for the purpose, until perfectly clean. Blemishes may then be lightly scraped away and removed, but if the blemish be such as to require cutting, put aside the potato for use in other ways. Neither too large a potato nor too small a one should be used. Large ones dry out too much in the baking. When the potatoes are ready put them into a hot oven and keep it so until they are fully baked, which should be in about three quarters of an hour. Be as particular about your oven for baking potatoes as you would be if you were baking cake. Just as you remove the potatoes from the oven strike them, causing them to pop open. Put in a bit of butter and send to the table immediately.

Finest baked potatoes.—There is perhaps no doubt but that the finest baked potato in the world is baked in hot ashes right next to a bed of live coals.

Baked Flake Potatoes.—Scrub and bake large size mealy potatoes. Remove the end of each, scoop out the inside, mash, add butter until as light as snowflakes. Season with salt, pepper, and butter and return to the potato skins, kept hot in the oven.

Did Not Know the Species

A well-known professor of geology in an eastern college was spending part of his vacation in one of the mountain countries of West Virginia. After wandering around for some little time in search of specimens the professor came to a mountaineer's cabin in an out-of-the-way place. Seeing a woman standing in the door, he approached, bowed politely, and inquired:

Are there any geologists in this part of the country?

Dunno, replied the woman. Jim killed some kind of a varmint yesterday and its pelt is hangin' at the back of the shack. You kin look for yourself.

THE RIGHTS OF PRODUCTION

Interesting Suggestions Made at Paris International Art Congress

The International Art Congress recently held in Paris passed many resolutions which it is hoped the delegates of the governments represented may take up and indorse by legislation.

The most important of these dealt with the claims of the state and public authorities to deal with the reproduction of any works of art they may acquire.

It was unanimously resolved that, as regards a living artist, the right should remain with him, and any authority to copy must be signed by him; but that the directors of picture galleries may authorize single copies for the purpose of study, on condition that such copy is in no way a reproduction in size of the original, that it shall have clearly signed upon it it is after the author, and that it bears the stamp of the gallery with these words: Copy, Rights of reproduction reserved.

An Eye for Business

The late John R. Arbuckle, the coffee merchant, who left an estate of 100 million dollars, often said that a part of his success was due to his knowledge of human nature.

In selling coffee, Mr. Arbuckle once said to a New York coffee broker, you should exercise the same keen discretion which the druggist showed.

A woman, you know, a woman well on in years, entered a druggist's and said:

Have you any creams for restoring the complexion?

Restoring, miss? You mean preserving, said the druggist heartily.

And he then sold the woman $17 worth of complexion creams.

How She Voted

At a luncheon in New York Dr. Lyman Abbott, sipping a glass of ice cold milk, told a woman suffrage story.

I had heard a lot, he said, about the wonderful success of woman suffrage in Australia; so, meeting an Australian woman one day, I asked:

How did you vote, madam, at the last election?

The Australian woman answered with a simper:

In my mauve pannier gown, sir, with a large mauve hat trimmed with mauve ospreys.

A Poser for Nursie

Nursie!

Little Freddie's voice broke the twilight stillness of the nursery for the twentieth time, and nursie began to get angry.

Well, what do you want now? she snapped.

I only wanted to ask you—

I'll answer no more questions this night, said nursie firmly, as she went on folding up her charge's clothes. Don't you know that curiosity killed a cat, Freddie?

The small boy lay in silence stunned by the wonder of this statement. Then he burst out again:

Nursie, what did that cat want to know?

Detected

Captain, you told me this boat would reach the dock by 9 o'clock.

Did I, madam? Well, I must have lied to you. We'll be there in about twenty minutes.

But the land isn't in sight yet!

So I see. Madam, you have caught me in another lie.

What Could He Do?

Spare me a penny, sir, please?

The clergyman stopped and looked round. He gave a start of surprise. Instead of an old or middle-aged waster, he saw a youth of nineteen confronting him.

My lad, he exclaimed, I'm ashamed of you! A strong, healthy chap like you ought to be at work instead of begging. How came you to do it?

Well, sir, replied the youth, it's like this: Twelve months ago I was ill, and the doctor forbade me to do any work until he told me. Just after that he died. So what can I do?

The clergyman is still puzzling over the problem.

No man can serve two masters, said the priest to one of his parishioners.

I know that, yer Riverence. Me brother tried it, and now he's doing time for bigamy.

Mistress—Well, I'm sorry you want to leave me, Mary. But what's your reason?

(Mary keeps silent).

Mistress—Something private?

Mary (suddenly)—No, mum; please mum, he's a corporal.

Algy—Anything unusual happen while I was out, James?

Valet—Yes, sir, none of your creditors called.

Little Joe—Mamma, I was awfully afraid when you shut me in the dark closet.

Mamma—Why, Joe, what were you afraid of?

Little Joe—I was afraid I couldn't find the cake.

The Mere Man

The jokesmiths have long harped on the comparative insignificance of the June bridegroom. Truth, however, to use a sporting phrase, puts it all over fiction at times.

Recently the Toronto Daily Star published an elaborate description of a wedding in that city, giving full particulars about the bride, the bridesmaids, the officiating minister, the organist who played the wedding march, the ushers, the dresses, and all the rest of it—but never a mention was made of the bridegroom.

The account of the wedding passed through the hands of the society editor without notice, but when one of the reporters found it in print, the poor woman had to endure a lot of kidding.

The surprising discovery was afterwards made that the notice had been written by the father of the poor groom.

To Have and to Hold

Once upon a time he had been an officer in a crack regiment, but he had fallen on evil days, and in the end was compelled by force of circumstances to resign his commission and to enlist in another regiment as a humble private.

He found it impossible, however, totally to forget his position, and on one occasion, being requested by a sergeant to hold his horse—a duty that did not really devolve upon him—he remarked:

Er—you forget—er—sergeant, that once I held his Majesty's commission.

The sergeant looked at him, not without respect by any means, and then remarked:

Well, youngster, I'm sorry, but you will now have to hold one of his Majesty's horses!

Seizing the Opportunity

Whilst out for a walk with her little niece, auntie had the misfortune to rip the lace on her skirt as she crossed a stile.

Ethel was quite willing and eager the lace now, so would you mind stooping down and carefully tearing off the piece that is hanging loose?

Ethel was quite willinig and eager to please, and duly commenced her task. For several minutes there was a sound of tearing, really much more tearing than was necessary to remove a small length of broken lace.

Haven't you finished yet? asked auntie eventually.

Yes, replied the little girl, rising wearily. I was taking it all off. I wanted enough for my dolly's skirt while I was about it, and the little bit you tore wasn't enough.

Darling Came

The summer day was nearly over, and the last of the crowd had gone. The pier and sands were deserted save for a young lady and man on the latter, and a small group on the former. Along the road parallel with the promenade came a red-faced man, corpulent withal.

He gave a hasty look over the sands and then bellowed:

Darling!

The folk on the pier gave a short laugh, while the lady looked up from her book, but budged not an inch.

Darling! roared the man in an even louder voice. But there was no movement on the sands. The pier people could scarcely contain themselves for amusement.

The stout man lost all patience, and picking up a stone threw it, to the accompaniment of protest from the pierites, in the direction of the lady. The stone struck the man, who looked round to see what was the matter.

Tom Darling, yelled the man, for the last time, are you coming?

Darling got to his feet, and the jokers on the pier then melted away to think of other things.

Why the Long Silence

The 10-year old daughter of a well-known actress, who lives in Harlem, went to stay all night with another little girl a block away. The visitor left home at 5 p.m. and was to return at noon next day. It was her first night away from home. The next morning, about 9 o'clock, she called her mother on the telephone.

Are you all right, mamma? she asked.

Yes, dear, replied the mother.

Sure you're not sick?

Yes, dear.

Well, why haven't you written me then? asked the child.

INVITING SICKNESS

People Whose Blood Supply is Scanty are in Danger of a Breakdown

Thin or impure blood is an invitation to sickness. The blood is at work day and night to maintain the health and any lack of strength or purity in the blood is a weakness in the defence against disease. Anaemia is the doctor's name for lack of blood. Its surest symptom is pallor. Anaemia does not confine itself to age or sex, though it is particularly common to young girls between the ages of 14 and 17, when nature makes peculiar demand upon the blood supply. The same lack of blood, however, prevents full recovery after la grippe, fevers, malaria, and operations, and is present in old age, and in persons who have been under unusual mental or physical strain. In all cases of bloodlessness Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best medicine known to medical science. They actually make new pure blood, which brings with it a healthy appetite and new strength and vitality. Mrs. George Roy, Clair, Sask., says: "I have tested the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills time and again when a poor condition of the blood might have led to more serious trouble. I am a woman of forty and as occasion required I have used the Pills off and on since girlhood. I have proved their value in the ailments that afflict my sex, and I have never known them to fail. I also gave them to my son for nerve trouble which we thought would result in St. Vitus dance, but the use of the Pills prevented this and made him well and strong. I do not know any better investment than to keep half a dozen boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the house, as they will save more expensive doctor's bills."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. Brockville, Ont.

More About The Loading Platform

The present generation of Western farmers will never know the difficulties and vexations experienced by their predecessors in the earlier years when no one could get a carload of grain shipped in bulk except by loading it through an elevator. The system forced the majority of farmers to sell their grain to the elevator owners at arbitrary prices, and oft times to submit to heavy dockage and other annoyances, causing continual dissatisfaction. Now however the distribution of cars as fixed by the Grain Act, and the use of the loading platform, provide facilities which enable the farmer to secure satisfactory treatment in the disposal of his grain, and the highest market prices at time of sale. Every farmer therefore, should more and more endeavor to use the loading platform in shipping his grain to the terminal elevators. It is the safeguard of the farmers' freedom in disposing of his grain to the best advantage for himself. If farmers refrain from using the loading platform freely, it might result in its being done away with, because railway companies and elevator owners are strongly opposed to it. It is easy to understand why elevator people desire the loading platform abolished. The railway people on their part say it delays the loading of cars and helps to cause car shortage. This we know to be nonsense, because frequently after cars are loaded whether with grain, coal lumber or other merchandise, they are sidetracked for days and even weeks instead of being promptly moved forward to destination. It is engine shortage and shortage of competent train men that mostly causes grain blockades on railways and not lack of cars. Let every farmer therefore, do all he can to use the loading platform and become an independent shipper. In subsequent advertisements we will state in detail the savings and other advantages of direct loading into cars compared with loading through elevators.

We handle the farmers grain strictly on commission, make liberal advances on car bills of lading, supervise the grading at time cars are inspected, secure the highest prices at time of sale and make prompt returns when sold. Write us for shipping instructions and market information.

The Meanest

A well-to-do Chicago real estate owner went into a hardware store in that city and asked the proprietor for a pound of nails. The small package was made up and the price, a nickel, handed to the merchant, when the customer asked if the purchase could be sent to his house, which was in a distant part of the city. The merchant assented, and calling an errand boy, handed him the parcel, with the nickel he had just received for it, and said:—

Here, Johnny, take the car and take this parcel out to Mr. Blank's house.

What! said the customer, are you going to give the boy the nickel to take the parcel out?

Why, certainly, said the merchant. I wouldn't think of asking him to walk so far.

Well, said the meanest man in Chicago, if you would just as soon give me the five cents I will take it out myself.

Talent Has Need of Stepping Stones

Dorothy kept at her piano practice under her mother's keen eye, for three months before she revolted. Then her interest began to flag, until finally she refused to practice any more until she had a ring. She was accordingly fitted out with a ruby ring, and went on with her lessons for another three months. Then rebellion broke out once more.

Mother, she announced flatly, I shall not practice any more unless Miss C. gives me a piece where I can cross my hands.

Why, what do you want with such a piece as that? asked her exasperated mother.

To show off my ruby, explained Dorothy.

He Needed It

Chollie—I'm doing my best to get ahead, you know.

Dollie—Well, everybody knows you need one.

He—(nervously)— Er—er—Margaret—er—er there's something has been trembling on my lips for the last two months.

She—Yes, so I see. Why don't you shave it off?

The other night we heard a father speak thusly: William, your mother tells me that you must have a dose of castor oil before retiring to-night. It is your bedtime now. Take your medicine and go to bed at once.

But papa, I don't want to take no castor-oil.

You must take it. And immediately.

Aw, papa, I dowanter.

William, if you don't take that medicine I'll put you right to bed this minute, without giving you a drop of it.

William was so scared that he took it. That's the way to enforce discipline.

Up Against It

Mrs. Jonings—It's raining, John, and Mrs. Smithkins wants to go home. I have no umbrella to lend her except my new $10 one. Can't I let her have yours?

Jonings—I should say not! Why the only umbrella I've got has her husband's name on the handle.

Faithful to His Trust

The following historical incident is related by Arabian authors as the highest example of faithfulness to a trust:

Al-Samau'al was the emir of a tribe in southern Arabia. A friend of his, before setting out on a journey, left with him some very fine mailed armour. This friend was killed in a battle and the King of Syria demanded the armour. Al-Samau'al refused to give them up except to the rightful heir, and the king laid siege to him in one of his fortresses. One day his son fell into the hands of the enemy, and the king threatened to kill him if the arms were not given up. Again he refused, and from the turrets of the castle he saw his son put to death The siege was raised soon after and the arms were delivered to the heirs of his friends.

Gentle Reader, now what will you have?

Anything in the old store is yours next week for the asking (and a moderate consideration). Please come in and ask. You know the way. All roads lead to PARKS', footpaths, bridle-paths, auto roads and coming trolley lines will bring you to the same old place.

It's the place where the folks come when they're building a house and want something better than common HARDWARE, something different and more economical.

It's the Housekeeper's Depot for Good KITCHENERY, for the Best CUTLERY, for table and kitchen; for the latest thing in RANGES, and where she can get all those little helps to good cooking which makes life more enjoyable.

It's most everybody's place to buy something or other, which means it's a GOOD PLACE. And so with many thanks to all the old friends we invite you to call. You'll find "value received" at the end of every trip.

A WESTERN FAVORITE

The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal have announced their programme for 1913, and subscribers are to receive greater value than ever before, and this is saying a whole lot. In this western country such a paper is a great blessing. It interests everybody. The hints and information it gives are worth hundreds of dollars a year. New settlers cannot afford to be without such a paper, no other fills the bill for the West like the Family Herald and Weekly Star. In addition to the paper for a whole year, each subscriber receives a most beautiful picture entitled "Mother's Treasures." It is 23 by 29 inches, all ready for framing. The picture alone would sell at a two dollar bill in any art store in the big cities. Any home not now getting The Family Herald and Weekly Star should give it a trial for 1913 They will never regret it.
