King Descends

London, July 10.—Yesterday for the first time in history a British monarch descended into a coal pit. It was the Elsecar mine that was favored, almost within a stone's throw of the pit where so many lives had just been lost, and the King went down in the full knowledge of the Cadeby disaster. His majesty descended the shaft in a cagel with him being the Archbishop of York, Lord Fitzwilliam Lord Charles Beresford and a man in charge of the cage. The man duly asked the King if he had any matches or smoking materials and when his majesty admitted the possession of a few cigars and asked whether he might take these the man said: "Yes I think you may, but the archbishop had to stand and deliver, and so had the other smokers of the party. In 55 seconds they found themselves 300 yards below the surface and after the visit to the subterranean stables the King who carried an electric safety lamp, went through the workings for half a mile having frequently to stop because of the lowness of the ceiling. An abnormal place where two men were at work was shown to him.

"Let me have one of your picks," he said, and the royal miner succeeded in getting down a quantity of softer coal, but the harder proved too much for his unskilled hands. Some of the coal he won he kept as a memento.

Redistribution

Ottawa, July 11.—From present plans the government will introduce and put through at the next session of parliament the redistribution bill based upon the new census. The figures have been finally collaborated. It is probable that the bill, after being presented, will be referred to a special committee of the house, which will delimit the different constituencies and determine the units of representation in rural as distinguished from urban divisions. When the last redistribution bill was before the house not a great deal of opposition was encountered outside of the committee, where there was considerable compromise. This time it may be different as the East will lose 10 or 12 seats to the West and there is a striking similarity in the population of constituencies in the list of those liable to lose representation. To say which will remain and which will be wiped out will be a somewhat delicate task for the committee and the house. That the bill will be passed next session, however, is beyond doubt as, in view of important matters of policy to be determined, the government might possibly consider appeal to the country advisable before the parliamentary term is fully expired.

Minister Sees Cranbrook

Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals in the Dominion cabinet passed through Cranbrook early Tuesday morning enroute West over the C. P. R. system.

The special train arrived in Cranbrook at about 7-30 a. m., and only stopped long enough to change engines. This was his first time in Kootenay, and he was much pleased with his trip through the Crow's Nest Pass.

Mr. Cochrane was accompanied by his son.

The Prospctor's gigantic circulation campaign while yet in ite infancy, has created much interest and enthusiasm. In many respects it can be compared to a political campaign. Many contestants have a host of friends who have taken up their cause and are doing good work for the r leader. Others are making good use of the telephone, calling up their friends if they are unable to see them personally, while others find the mail a good means through which to reach them.

A good policy to be adopted by the contestants is to spend the rest of the period securing all the subscriptions which extra effort will give them. Contestants who expect a better schedule at any other time during the contest w ll be disappointed. Sub scriptions will be worth more during the first period than at any other time during the campaign. The Prospector guarantees that the schedule will not be altered at any time.

And while we have not room to reproduce the whole of the contest vote schedules which show the exact deterioration of voting value of subscriptions all through the contest, yet the extract we print will convey the right idea—which is simpfy this: THE WORK YOU DO NOW IS THE MOST VALUABLE WORK

There is a reason for this arrangement. Don't run away with the adea that this is just the result of a mental disturbance on the part of the Contest Manager. There is a reason and a good reason. The arrangement is simply to protect the candidates wo are taking the contest seriously as it deserves to be taken.

We are not giving this two thousand dollars just for the fun of it. We are doing it in order that the Prospector will be introduced to as many new friends as possible. Circulation is what we want. The lifeblood of journalism is "Circulation" Once you are introduced to The Prospector, the friendship follows, of course. The Candidates who are going to help us make the most of the contest are the valuable introductions that is, those who come in early and who will fight it out to a finish in steadily organized and businesslike fashion.

And these are the candidates who are going to get the best prizes.

It is in order to protect these candidates that the vote schedule is so arranged, that the early votes count the most.

It is in order to provide against the possibility of a few monied adventurers becoming interested in this thing in its later stages and stealing a last minute victory from those who have given their time and energy to the work from its inception, that the decreasing vote schedule has been adopted.

The schedule is a guarantee that the most CONSCIENTIOUS WORKER receives the HIGHEST REWARD

We are anxious to see as many candidates as possible entered before next Wednesday, both for their benefit and the success of the contest.

For this reason we again urge upon you the necessity for IMMEDIATE ACTION.

The countersign is HUSTLE, HUSTLE SOME MORE. KEEP ON HUSTLING.

And for to-day we will add a P.S. to the countersign. HUSTLE NOW.

Winnipeg Gives Rousing Welcome To Governor-General

Winnipeg, July 9.—Greeted by an outburst of enthusiasm unprecedented in the h story of Winnipeg, their royal highnesses the Duke of Connaught and Princess Patricia arrived here to night. The streets blazed with lights and 50,000 people crowded the thoroughfares along which the royal party passed, an imposing procession of soldiers, fraternal societies, veterans and boy scouts being one of the features.

The special Canadian Pacific train bearing the duke and princess and party arrived at 8:30 p. m. The royal visitors were driven to the City Hall where Mayor Waugh extended a civic welcome. In replying the duke expressed regret that the duchess had been unable to share in the wonderful reception.

"It is difficult for me," he said, "to recognize the Winnipeg which I knew 22 years ago in the Winnipeg of today for your history has moved very rapidly in that time. There have been periods of stagnation and discouragement which drove some of the less determined out of the field, but those who were not discouraged reaped a rich reward to which your city today is the living w tness. I thank you once more for your welcome and in conclusion desire to express my hope and belief that you are now on a wave of prosperity which nothing in the world can stop'

After the civic welcome the duke and princess were driven to the residence of Hon. Robert Rogers where they will reside during their stay in the city. Tomorrow afternoon his royal highness will open the Canadian Industrial Exposition, one of the features of which will be a nightly pageant depicting the growth of Winnipeg for the last century it being 100 years since the arrival of the first Lord Selkirk colonists.

Vandals at Vancouver

Vancouver, July 9.—Vandals last night twisted off the brackets and drinking cups of the drinking fountain flanking the handsome memorial to King Edward which stands in this city.

Average price received for eggs, 36½ per dozen. Pen temperature, highest 92 degrees; lowest 42 degrees; average mean temperature 66.01 degrees. Rain fell on tea days, eight full days, and bright sunshine on 21 days. A terrific hailstorm ocurred on May 21st, and a very heavy thunderstorm took place on June 19th and 20th.

The past month has been the hottest one during the whole contest; on the 17th June the glass reaching 92 degrees in the shade. The effect of this high temperature was noticed on the 19th and 20th. Practically one-third of the pens stopped laying, thus showing that heat waves will effect the egg-production adversely. This condition also happened earlier on in the competition. Blasting was carried on as usual.

The pens deserving mention this month for creditable performance are Pen 19 (103 eggs); 2 (101); 18 (98); 20 (93); 1 (92); 15 (83); 14 (81); 10 80 producing broodes during the month:

Following pens in Light Weights Pens 1, 8 and 23, (2 birds each), 7, 10, 17, 19, 20 and 22, (1 bird each).

The average weight of dozen eggs produced by pens in Class one, show that whilst some pens have increased others have decreased. The pens producing the heaviest eggs at present are 5 and 14 (26 ozs to dozen), 17 (25¾), 9 and 21 (25½ ozs each), 18, 88, 75, 5 (11¾ ozs), 31 5, (13½), 13 (22 oz). At the period cal weighing of a crate of 12 doz. eggs, the scales turned at 18 lbs, averaging exactly 2 oz. egg.

Feather-eating is still causing trouble, although it is worthy of remark to notice that it does not appear to affect the egg-production of some of the pens addicted to this habit.

In class two, Pen 38 and 33 have parted company, the Wyandottes are forging ahead by a few eggs.

The star performers during the month have been Pens 38 (92 eggs), 26 (86 eggs), 33 and 35 (84 eggs each

The hot weather had its effect on the heavy-weights.

As usually occurs with eggs of the general purpose breeds, as the season advances, they have gradually lost their brownish color, and the eggs are now mostly of a light tint. This seems to be one of the traits of the Rhode Island Reds.

J. R. TERRY,
Secretary.

British Parliamentarians

London, July 9.—The Canadian ministersl all of whom, except Mr. Borden, are remaining at Spithead, were greatly impressed today by the naval maneuvers, particularly by the remarkable displays of the submarines and the aeroplane performances These latter included the dropping of bombs, flights from battleships and searching for submarines, all of which were executed without the slightest hitch.

The ministers travelled to Southampton in a special train with the members of the houses of lords and commons and were carried on the Armadale Castle to Spithead where they were besieged by Brit sh parliamentarians seeking introductions and bestowing hearty hand-shakes. Hon. C. J. Doherty proved of particular interest to John Redmond and his followers, by whom he was greeted. At the luncheon Mr. Borden sat with Sir George Reid. Sir Henniker Heaton, while Hon. THE SUPPLANTER

A Modern Romance

By WILMOT KAYE

He rose to greet her, and his face was expressive of his pleasure.

"I have asked my cousin to meet you. Let me introduce you to Mrs. de Lisle," he said as he took her hand.

Vera turned quickly, faced the tall woman who advanced languidly to meet her, and was immediately struck with her beauty. Their eyes met, and they each took that instinctive dislike to one another, which comes so suddenly and for which there is no accounting.

"Mr. Clay has told me all about you" Mrs. de Lisle said politely. "It reads quite like a romance—and you are the fairy god-father, David," she added to Clay.

Vera judged that she could not be more than twenty-six or seven, and she hated her for the almost caressing way in which she spoke to David She did not try to analyze the feeling and she did her utmost to make a pleasant reply.

"He has been very good to me," she said simply.

"How many times must I tell you that it is not a question of goodness but of right," he said half angrily, but Mrs. de Lisle only smiled her amusement at his heat.

"I thought my cousin might be able to help you, Miss Grant. She seems to know everyone in London, and I have asked her to take you under her wing."

"I don't think I shall go much into society," Vera said, "but I am very much indebted to you for your kind offer, Mrs. de Lisle."

"The pleasure will be mine. To chaperone such a beautiful girl as yourself is not an opportunity to be missed. I prophecy that you will be all the rage, and perhaps a little of the reflected glory will reach me. But I'm dreadfully hungry, David can't we have lunch?"

"Wohld you care to go into the restaurant, or shall we lunch here?" he asked.

"I am sure that Miss Grant would like an opportunity of showing that pretty new gown. And what a pretty watch, and a duck of a bracelet."

"I have been shopping," Vera said quietly. "I suppose I have been extravagant."

"Your purse will stand it. And may I say the dress is very becoming." David broke in; and Helen de Lisle frowned as she saw his glance of admiration.

But a week ago, Helen de Lisle had been congratulating herself that she would soon have the delight of accepting the proposal of marriage that she was convinced David Clay was about to make to her. In the days of his prosperity she had been engaged to him, but when the crash came she had declared that it was impossible that she could marry a poor man. At first he had suffered, for he had loved her sincerely, but when he had got on the steamer en route for Nigeria he had received a letter from her announcing that she was about to marry.

When he returned to England he had quite got over his love, and he met her, a fascinating widow, for Mr de Lisle had promptly and convenient ly died. His pulse did not beat one whit the more quickly.

They went down to the restaurant and David Clay felt a glow of pleasure when he saw the looks of admiration that were thrown at his two companions. He looked around him, and saw that there was none present that could compare with their beauty. He found that the brunt of the conversation fell upon him, for both his guests were silent. Vera was feasting her eyes on the lovely toilette that surrounded her, and she gloated over the fact that all this luxury could now be hers.

"Where shall you live in town?" Mrs. de Lisle asked of Vera.

"I haven't made any plans yet."

"Everything must be very strange to you. David tells me that you were very, very poor. How horrible that must be."

"It is not pleasant," Vera said dryly, and David frowned at his cousin.

"All that is over now. But surely you will settle in London," he said to Vera.

"I am not sure," Vera replied evasively, for she was determined that she would not become intimate with this relative of David's and she certainly would not allow her to be her chaperone.

"Perhaps you will stay with me a few days, while you look round," Mrs. de Lisle suggested.

"I am going back to the country."

"Not to-night, surely!"

"Yes, I have a friend there, who is not well. I don't care to leave her alone."

"You will come later on?" Mrs. de Lisle suggested, but she quickly saw that she was being rebuffed.

Vera left soon after lunch, having promised David that she would let him know next time she came to town. Helen de Lisle followed her cousin upstairs, for she was determined to speak to him. She seemed to feel that she was losing her hold, and she meant to make a great effort to win him.

"What do you think of her?" Clay asked eagerly.

"She is exceedingly pretty, and her manners are good. Yes, she is quite presentable, David.'

"I am glad you like her."

"I did not quite say that," she said gently." "One cannot command one's likes and dislikes, unfortunately."

"You dislike her?" he asked in surprise.

"Neither do I say that; but Miss Grant is a woman that will require knowing, and I do not make up my mind easily."

"I don't agree with you. I think she is frankness itself—and—"

"And everything that is charming," she broke in with a harsh laugh.

"Yes, I think she is charming.'

"Be careful, David. Don't lose your heart to this girl, of whom you know nothing."

He gazed at her in amazement, and a deep flush slowly came to his cheeks. But he did not speak for he was slowly realising the state of his feelings. He knew that Vera attracted him strangely, and that no longed to be with her; but events had taken place so rapidly that he had not stopped to analyse the situation. And now he realised, for good or ill, there was only one woman in the world for him. His love for Helen de Lisle seemed but an echo of the past, and he now knew that he had never really loved her, for he had felt none of the fierce heart throbbings that the presence of Vera brought to him.

Helen watched him anxiously, vainly trying to read the thoughts that were passing through his mind. A dull foreboding of evil possessed her, and she waited anxiously for him to speak.

"It is the desire of my life to marry Hilda Grant," he said at last. "Will you help me, Helen?"

"I do not see that I can do anything,' she answered with restraint.

"Do you think she cares for me?"

"How can I say? You are rich—"

"And so is she."

"Thanks to your charity," she said vindictively.

He was about to speak angrily, but she rose and held out her hand.

"Good-bye, David. Don't let us quarrel," she said sadly, for she felt that she had lost all chance of gaining his love.

The doctor said I had a tumor and the only remedy was the surgeon's knife. My mother bought me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am a well and healthy woman. For months I suffered from inflammation, and your Sanative Wash relieved me. I am glad to tell anyone what your medicines have done for me. You can use my testimonial in any way you wish, and I will be glad to answer letters."—Mrs. CHRISTINA REED, 105 Mound St., Peoria, Ill.

The Horse and Its Cost

Carefully conducted investigations by the agricultural department of the University of Minnesota, as well as those conducted by the office of farm management of the United States Department of Agriculture, show that under ordinary conditions on American farms work horses are utilized only about three and a half hours a day on the average. Horse power is thus utilized to less than half its capacity. Per unit of work done this power costs more than twice what it should cost. The full utilization of the power actually available would thus reduce materially the cost of producing crops. The cost of keeping a work horse is on the average about $125 a year. The average utilization of the horse is about 1250 hours a year, at an hourly cost of 10 cents per hour. If we double the number of hours' work the horse does—and this can be done without injury to the animal—we reduce the hourly cost to five cents.—W. J. Spillman, agriculturist in charge of farm management and plant industry, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C.

Returned Thoughts.

"Do thoughts that come to you in the long ago ever return?" asked the originator of silly questions.

"Not unless I inclose stamps," answered the literary party.

Human Nature.

"That fellow Spinks has excellent judgment."

"What makes you think so?"

"Why—er—he's always asking my opinion about things."

A Family Circle.

Willie—Paw, what is a family circle?

Paw—A wedding ring, my son.

Not Sure

A little boy who was very much puzzled over the theory of evolution questioned his mother thus:

Mamma, am I descended from a monkey?

I don't know, the mother replied. I never knew any of your father's people.—The Gateway.

Gentleman of the jury, you must carefully consider all arguments set forth by counsel and give them full weight. Then three jurors fainted. They were coal dealers.

Dignitary—You will now be bishop of a rural see. Your place is out in the country where you can keep a few animals.

New Bishop—That's fine. I shall be able to keep a sheep and have fresh kidneys for breakfast every morning.

Where Ignorance is Bliss

We are afraid that the Southern editor, who says a poet, like a child, is better seen than heard never saw a real poet—Cleveland Dealer.

Hubby (who has just received the bill)—You look awfully jolly in that dress, Nelly, but it cost a frightful lot of money.

Wifie—Yes, dear, I know it did, but I don't care about money when it's a question of pleasing you.—Illustrated Bits.

That young fellow seems to have made himself solid at your house.

Yes, I judge he has. Ma is looking up his family while pa is investigating his commercial rating.

Would Look Queer.

A couple of years ago, when Gus A. Forbes was paying a visit to his people in Calgary, Alta., he played a short season at the request of his friend, Ernest Willis, then manager of the Lyric Theatre, with the Empress Stock Company, of Vancouver, who were filling a summer engagement at that house.

Among other plays produced was The Charity Ball. One matinee, just before ringing up, it was discovered that the lady who played the Mother was not at the theatre, and Gus went to Billy Bernard, the director of the company, to ask him what he was going to do.

"I don't know," said Billy. "Oh, we'll get Mrs. —— to go and read the part. What are you laughing at?" "Nothing," said Gus, "only won't it look rather funny to have some one reading the part of a blind woman?"

Toronto's Roosters.

The proposal to prohibit the keeping of poultry in Toronto, especially roosters, except a majority of a man's neighbors consent, is evoking quite a storm of opposition. It looks as if the advocates of the freedom of the rooster would win out. They are strong on the liberty of the subject in Toronto, and some of the civic representatives think you are coming pretty close upon the time-honored sacredness of the home if you attempt to prevent a man keeping a rooster if he desires. The crowing of a rooster is not perhaps any more of a nuisance than the thumping of a piano by one learning to play, or the unearthly sounds made by some who practice on band instruments, except that it may come at a more unseemly hour.—Stratford Beacon.

An Aylmer Cat's Bright Idea.

A cat has developed a liking for frogs. Daily Miss Pussy can be seen laying in wait for a Canadian Bandsman. She must have had French ancestors, or possibly a real Parisian transplanted, to have a fondness for frogs' legs. She don't seem to be particular whether they are front or hind legs—they all go the same route.—East Elgin Reformer.

Prevention of Clover Weeds

In some parts of Germany and Austria, the clover weeds, particularly clover dodder, are being energetically controlled. The seed-breeding associations, or seed control stations, now "approve" of the clover seed, after a commission, at the request of the owner, has inspected the field before it is mown. If the dodder or other weeds are not present the seed is approved, enabling the grower to secure higher prices; if the field is damaged by patches of dodder approval is refused, and the seed has to be thoroughly cleaned and sold under a cheaper grade mark.

A Mistake in the Order

Smith the other day went fishing and caught nothing, so on the way back home he telephoned to his provision dealer to send a dozen bass round to his house, says the New York Times.

Well, what luck?

Why, splendid luck, of course, he replied. Didn't the boy bring that dozen bass I gave him?

Well, yes, I suppose he did, she said. There they are.

And she showed poor Smith a dozen bottles of Bass' ale.

Dells, after a rain, begged to go outside to play.

You may go, said her mother, if you will stay on the walk and not make mud pies.

It was not long before Della was leaning suspiciously far over the walk.

I thought you promised not to make mud pies, mother called.

I'm not mamma, replied Della, I'm making doughnuts.

Used according to directions, Dr J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial will afford relief in the most acute form of summer complaint. Whenever the attack manifests itself no time should be lost in seeking the aid of the Cordial. It will act immediately on the stomach and intestines and allay the irritation and pain. A trial of it will convince anyone of the truth of these assertions.

Where Figures Fail

Suppose coal is $6 a ton and you gave your dealer $36, how many tons would he send you?

Three.

Oh, that's wrong.

I know it's wrong, but that's what he done.—Life.

Cut out your appetite, surpriseily ejaculated his sire. What are you talking about?

Not my appetite; my ap—appendix. The doctors would have an awful time finding it, I guess. I don't know where it is myself.—Judge.

Nannie Looked at the Cup.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — Who Chipped Poor Nannie's New Teacup

It was an early bedtime, and Jack and Evelyn said they thought on that account daddy ought to tell them a longer story.

He smiled, for well he knew that by the time his usual story was over white lids would be drooping over heavy eyes and tired heads would be gently nodding. So he began:

"Nannie was a very careful little girl, and when her grandma gave her six little cups and saucers she was very pleased. Nannie asked in her six dearest friends, and they had an afternoon tea party.

"When they went home they thanked Nannie for the pleasant afternoon they had enjoyed and tripped down the street looking very happy.

"Then Nannie carefully carried the dishes out to the kitchen, where mother allowed her to have a pan of nice soapy water, and into this she put the cups and saucers one by one and washed and dried them.

"And when Nannie came to the cup used by Kitty Flynn, there, right out of the rim of the cup, a tiny chip was missing.

"Nannie held it up and looked at it hard. A broken cup—what a shame! She had told the little girls to be very, very careful because the cups with their pretty pink flowers had been a gift from dear grandma.

"Nannie sat down and cried. Never again would she speak to Kitty. It was bad enough to break the cup, but to go home without saying anything about it seemed the height of meanness.

"'Never mind, dear,' said mother. 'Perhaps we can get another cup just like it.'

"'But it won't be just the same,' sobbed Nannie. 'Grandma told me to take good care of them, and what will she say when she sees them broken so soon? It was mean of Kitty not to tell.'

"'Yes; if Kitty knew she broke it it would have been more polite of her to say so and tell you that she was sorry.'

"Nannie wept and would not be comforted.

"'If we must tell grandma suppose we have it over since it worries you so much. I'll just call her up on the telephone and tell her.'

"So mother called up grandma's number and told her about the accident to the cups and how very sorry Nannie was.

"'The dear child!' grandma replied. 'You know I forgot to tell her one of the cups was chipped when I got it. For that reason the storekeeper sold it to me a good deal cheaper. It was such a pretty set I thought Nannie would not mind, for unless you have very sharp eyes indeed it cannot be noticed.'

"'There,' exclaimed Nannie, 'I'm so glad Kitty didn't break the cup. I'm sorry I blamed her.'"

Lord and Him

"You must try to be like God, sonnie," said the kindly minister to the worried-looking child who entertained him in the parlor while his mother, upstairs, was preparing for company.

"I guess I must be," the boy answered wrinkling his brows, "for God and me gets blamed for about everything that happens in this house. It it's a big thing they say the Lord did it, and if any little thing goes wrong it's sure to be me."

And where, my fellow citizens, appealed the political speaker, can we find an instrument so fit, so delicate, so adjustable and at the same time as unassuming and popular that it will unlock every department of State for the benefit of the people?

Caroline has requested that as a special birthday favor, she be allowed to have coffee for breakfast. Her mother, not at all pleased with the idea, was diluting it generously.

ANOTHER MARVELLOUS CURE BY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Ludger Cote's Backache had developed into Bright's Disease, and Pains and aches were his portion—Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him.

St. Yvon, Gaspe Co., Que. (Special)—Once more a wonderful cure has sent the name of the old Canadian Kidney Remedy ringing through the Province of Quebec. Mr. Ludger Cote, a well known resident of this place, is the man cured and the story of his cure in his own words is as follows:

"For four years I suffered from Backache, stiffness of the joints and finally Bright's Disease. I could not bend my right leg on account of the pain in my hip and knee. I had terrible pains in the region of the bladder. My eyes were swollen. I was always tired and nervous and took no pleasure in life.

"Finally, I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and the effect was marvellous. Six boxes cured me completely."

Backache, neglected, develops into Bright's Disease. The one sure way to escape its tortures is to cure the Backache when it first starts with Dodd's Kidney Pills.

In some districts of the interior of China it is said that one-third of the population has died of starvation in the dreadful famine consequent on the destruction of crops by floods. All the aid thus far rendered has availed to save only a fraction of the numbers of human lives in peril. The people of Canada should not rest content till their consciences assure them that they have done their whole duty in the matter. Distance and difference of race should not quiet the call of humanity.—Hamilton Spectator.

WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets she would not be without them. They are the only medicine for little ones guaranteed by a Government analyst to be free from those opiates and other harmful drugs found in so-called "soothing" mixtures. Concerning them, Mrs. J. C. Wood, Underwood, Ont., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the last four years and would not be without them, as I have found them beneficial every time I have given them to my little ones." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Moon a Desolate World

The desolation of the world is a proverbial expression, yet how few persons realize how bleak and cold the moon really is. There is no air on the moon. If birds lived there they might sing ever so sweetly but their songs would never be heard; if there were lovely flowers on the moon they would give no scent, because of the absence of air. Sir Robert Ball has said of it:

"It seems probable that a building on the moon would remain for century after century just as it was left by the builders. There need be no glass in the windows, for there is no wind and no rain to keep out. There need not be fireplaces in the rooms, for fuel cannot burn without air. Dwellers in a lunar city would find that no dust could rise, no odors be perceived, no sounds be heard.

Wonderful Headgear

A well-known Paris painter gave a lecture a few days ago on the manner in which women covered their heads with all kinds of fantastic ornaments in the evening. He said that it was a pity when hair had so much expression in wave and color to conceal so much beauty beneath so-called fashionable accessories.

All the time this gentleman was expressing his views on this subject the audience was much amused at the presence of a beautiful actress famous for her exaggerated head-dress.

On this occasion she wore a cap of gold and white brocade with a huge mass of white aigrettes extending around the front from ear to ear. From the centre of her forehead stood a black aigrette almost two feet high held by an enormous cabochon in cut jet. Whether this lady will henceforth follow the conferencier's suggestion remains to be seen. But it is said that we shall soon be wearing a rose and little else in the hair.—From the Gentlewoman.

Australia's Big Trees

None too soon, a popular movement has been set on foot in Australia to preserve the gigantic stringy-barks, various species of Eucalyptus of that country, which far exceed in height the famous "big trees" of California, and are the tallest trees in the world. These trees sometimes attain heights ranging from 400 to 500 feet. Their timber is exceedingly valuable, and for this reason they have been ruthlessly destroyed by lumbermen while no proper steps have been taken to provide for their reproduction.

When Jamie sat down for any length of time his mother always trembled. It usually meant some question best defined as a "poser."

And on this occasion he hadn't moved for ten minutes. Then it came:

Mother, do angels sleep?

Yes, dear, I suppose so.

Do they lie down, mother? How can they with those 'ong wings?

I'm sure I don't know, Jamie. I've never thought about it.

Silence again and she hoped he had forgotten, but Jamie was thinking deeply. I've got it, mother, he cried. I'll bet they roost.

Speaking of the popularity of vulgar songs, one of which is said to have brought the composer $300,000, "America" says: Filling the song's stanzas with slang, with vulgarity, cynicism, mawkishness and downright nonsense apparently will assist rather than prevent its having a good vogue, for the public to which appeal is made is not at all fastidious. Even men and women of refinement and breeding, it is much to be regretted, catch the infection and begin to hum songs that illiterate poetasters have written and music hall performers and negro minstrels have made popular.

How The Body Kills Germs.

Germs that get into the body are killed in two ways—by the white corpuscles of the blood, and by a germ-killing substance that is in the blood. Just what this substance is, we do not know. The blood of a healthy person always has some germ-killing substance in it to ward off the attack of disease. The fountain head of life is the stomach. A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished, and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished. To put the body in healthy condition, to feed the system on rich, red blood and throw out the poisons from the body, nothing in the past forty years has excelled Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a pure glyceric extract (without alcohol), of bloodroot, golden seal and Oregon grape root, stone root, mandrake and queen's root with black cherrybark.

J. H. MARTIN, Esq.

"My husband was a sufferer from stomach trouble and impure blood," writes MRS. JAMES H. MARTIN, of Frankfort, Ky. "He had a sore on his face that would form a scab which would dry and drop off in about a month, then another would immediately form. It continued this way for a long time. He tried every remedy that any one would suggest but found no relief. He then tried Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which completely cured him. He has stayed cured now for two years, and I recommend this valuable medicine for impurities of the blood."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules.

A "Too-Late" Stamp

The only "too-late stamp ever issued appeared in Victoria in 1885. It bears the head of Queen Victoria, as do most of the stamps of the colony. The body of the stamp is in deep lilac crossed by two bands of green. The upper band bears the words, "Too late," while the lower has the value or fee "Sixpence." The "Too Late" stamp represented a tax or fee in addition to regular postage upon such letters as were received too late for the regular mail. In all large maritime cities much mail is sent out on outgoing vessels. In early stamp periods a fast sailing packet, or, in fact, any sailing vessel, was often charged with the carrying of the mails. The heavy regular mail to go by vessels or steamer on any specified day was sorted and dispatched in wagons from the post office some hours before the scheduled time of sailing. A light supplementary mail was afterwards sent by special messenger. The mail consisted of such letters as arrived after the regular mail had closed, but were of sufficient importance to warrant the sender in the payment of a "too late" fee, which in Victoria was fixed at sixpence. This supplementary mail was kept open until within a short time of the sailing hour, the time depending upon the distance between the post office and the dock of the vessel.

Probably got off.

Apropos of certain unfounded charges of drunkenness among the naval cadets at Annapolis, Admiral Dewey at a dinner in Washington told a story about a young sailor.

"The sailor, after a long voyage," he said, "went ashore in the tropics, and it being a hot day, he drank, in certain tropical bars, too much beer.

"As the sailor lurched under his heavy load along a palm-bordered avenue, his captain hailed him indignantly.

"Look here," the captain said, "suppose you were my commander, and you met me in such a condition as you're in now, what would you do to me?"

"Well, sir," said the sailor, "I wouldn't condescend to take no notice of you at all, sir."

Once More

The miner dropped his pick and stared with bulging eyes at the yellow mass which a stroke of the implement had just laid bare. For a minute he was struck speechless. Then, like one gone made he gave forth a mighty shout.

His mate came running from the mouth of the tunnel.

"What is it?" he cried breathlessly.

"Gold!" yelled the other. "Pure gold!" Tons of it."

"Is that all?" exclaimed his partner disgustedly. "From the hullaballoo ye were makin' one would think ye had dug into a firkin' o' butter!"—Judge.

"You must always be nice to your little playmates.'"

Heredity

"I don't know," replied Sadie, "unless I take after you and he takes after papa."—Chicago News.

WHAT TO DO RIGHT NOW

Practical Suggestions by W. J. Glass, Macleod, Alberta

(Written especially for the International Dry-Farming Congress Bulletin, "Dry-Farming.")

In answer to your inquiry as to what to do on the farm right now, I will say now is the time to get busy and work, get our seed into the soil (especially wheat), so that it will be matured before the frost.

We should have done our letter writing and studying during the winter months. Nevertheless, I will give a few hints as to how I work my land to prepare a seed bed and preserve the moisture, and also my opinions as regards the best periods to sow different cereals.

We all know that practically no fall plowing was done last year, therefore our land has either to be plowed this spring, or just disced and drilled. On account of such a short time and so much work to be done, and plowing taking longer than discing, the question arises: "Is it necessary to plow or will discing do?"

Plow Every Year

I am a firm believer in plowing every year, except on new land which has only had one crop taken from it and is not well rotted. Land in this condition and clear (free from weeds) could be disced a couple of times and seeded with fairly good results, although, as a rule, one does not get as large a yield.

Immediately after plowing use the packer, the same day if possible; the sooner after plowing the better. This is to keep the land from drying out. If you haven't a packer, use a float, if you haven't a float, use a disc. A float is a simple affair made by bolting four, five or six 2 x 10x14 or 16 planks together, letting the second lap the first, and so on until you get the required size.

Of course, if you find your float is not heavy enough, you can weight it down with stones—Oh! I forgot, not many farmers have stones on their land; well, old iron or anything with weight will do.

Methods of Cultivation

Now, as to the cultivation needed after packing or floating before drilling, all depends on condition of the soil. If very lumpy, disc, if not, the harrow will do. It should be cultivated until no lumps remain bigger than a hen's egg.

I would not in any case advise using any implements after seeding that leaves the surface of the ground smooth, as this aids evaporation, and also leaves the land powdery on top, and the wind is likely to blow the soil.

As to the time of seeding, I believe from April 1st until the end of the first week in May it is safe to sow wheat. After that date I would sow oats or barley until the end of May. Land that I had not seeded by that time, I would summer fallow. I prefer to sow my oats and barley the last week in April or the first week of May and be through seeding by May 15th.

Summer Fallowing

Just a word about summer fallow. Do not leave your summer fallow too late, but plow in June. By leaving the weeds grow they take plant food and moisture from the soil.

Be sure and treat your grain for smut. I treat with formali at the rate of one pound to 35 gallons of water. I have never had any smut, but I treat as a preventive. If your grain is smutty, make your solution stronger.

The system I follow is to pour 4 or 5 bushels of grain in a wagon box, sprinkle with ordinary garden sprinkler the solution over the grain and stir until kernels are all moist, then shovel to the front end of the wagon box; then another lot, and so on. Cover up with a canvas for a couple of hours, and then spread out to dry. Haul the wagon out to the field and fill the drill from the wagon.

As I said at the beginning, this is a busy time, so goodbye.

HISTORIC TOWN VANISHING

First Capital Being Pulled Down by Mississippi

Within a few months more the last traces of old "Kaskasia," first capital of the State of Illinois and one of the first settlements of the white man in the Mississippi valley, will have disappeared. The yellow Mississippi is steadily pulling down the remaining land that was once a part of the town site. All that now remains is an old building that was once used as a "smokehouse" by some of the citizens. Houses, powder magazines, stockades and fortifications have all slid into the river.

Kaskasia is still on the maps of Illinois, but the original town is at the bottom of the river. The best efforts failed to check the river's steady advances. A few years ago the Kaskasia river, usually known as the Okaw river, began to cut into its western bank a mile or so above the point where it flows into the Mississippi. At high water the flood from the big river began leaping across the narrow neck of land that divided the two currents. Finally the big river cut entirely across the spit of sand and rock that had separated the two and old Kaskasia became an island.

One hundred and fifty years ago the site where the smokehouse still lingers was the seat of the largest city west of the Allegheny mountains. In a few months more the last of the old town will have slipped into the river and the island that was cut off from the mainland will itself disappear.

WAITING FOR OWNERS.

Bank Balances That Go A-Begging Amount to Large Sums.

Twenty millions of unclaimed money in the coffers of British banks—derelict gold which nobody owns, and which the banks are naturally pleased to take care of! Gold more than sufficient to pave every square foot of Cheapside with sovereigns.

The sum total may be exaggerated. But make a liberal deduction, and you still have many millions to which no rightful owners make a claim. There is no bank in the whole length of Great Britain (or elsewhere) which has not its lists of these bank balances that may be said to go a-begging. Some are for trivial sums, scarcely worth the trouble of pocketing; some are for amounts running into thousands.

Some years ago, when Mr. Goschen's Conversion Scheme was in the air, it was found that the Bank of England alone had nearly 11,000 of these dormant accounts. Forty of them had over £10,000 apiece to their credit; one balance was written in six figures —£181,598. The total at the bottom of the long list was £7,849,775. This amount was very largely made up of unclaimed dividends on Government stock.

Scottish banks have, it is said, £9,000,000 of this overlooked gold—English banks at least double this sum. How does it come there? And what becomes of it?

It seems inconceivable that so much money, for all of which there must have been owners at some time or other, should be thus lost to sight. A score or more of simple causes account for the seeming impossibility. A man may, for private or business reasons, have accounts with more banks than one. He dies; his executors know nothing of any but his usual bank; the balances at the others remain unclaimed.

He may die abroad, or disappear, leaving no clue to his banking affairs; he may even forget that such and such an account is not closed. In these and many similar ways—mostly the result of carelessness—money is left in the hands of bankers to swell the dormant funds.

For seven years the bankers keep the accounts open, prepared to pay over the balance to any who can prove a title to it. This term expired, they regard the forgotten gold as their own. A million sterling of such ownerless money went to build London's splendid Law Courts. The City, it is said, has more than one magnificent bank building reared from the same handy material. The Bank of England, one learns, provides pension for clerks' widows out of such a fund.

But, whatever become of it, these millions of "mystery gold" are always growing, fed by man's carelessness or forgetfulness, their secrets bidden away in thousands of musty bank ledgers.

Talked Just Like a Man.

Miss Florence Marryat, the novelist, daughter of Captain Marryat, had some mannerisms of her own. The following anecdote was told by William Downey: "'Here is a letter from Florence Marryat,' said Mr. Tinsley, the publisher, to me one morning, 'She wants me to buy a new three volume novel from her. If I'm out of the way when she calls you can talk to her.'

"I asked how I was to recognize her. 'You'll recognize her easy enough,' said Mr. Tinsley. 'She is a tall, striking looking woman, and she'll talk to you just like a man.' A few days later a tall lady called. I fancied she might be Miss Marryat. She looked around the office, and then, addressing me, she said, 'Is Bill in?'

"To this I replied that Mr. Tinsley was not in. Could I do anything for her? 'I must see Bill himself,' she said. 'Tell the old bounder I called.' 'You're Miss Marryat?' I ventured. 'Yes. But stop! How the dickens do you know I'm Miss Marryat? I never saw you before.'"

Punch for Six Thousand.

A correspondent of the West India Committee Circular gives a recipe for punch in which the ingredients are four hogsheads of brandy, eight of water, 25,000 lemons, 20 gallons of lime juice, 1,300 pounds of fine sugar, 5 pounds of grated nutmegs, 300 toasted biscuits and a pipe of dry mountain Malaga. Mix the whole in a fountain. The resultant punch is sufficient for 6,000 men. Those who have not forgotten the logical method of proportion will, it may be observed en passant, be enabled easily from the data given to arrive at the quantities to brew punch for a party of half a dozen.

A Turkey With a Record.

An old English country woman, who was famous for breeding fine turkeys, sold one to a neighbor named Wells. The bird proved particularly tough, and, as Wells had paid a rather stiff price for it, he went to the vendor in a state of indignation. "Wh- do you mean by imposing such a turkey on me—one of your oldest neighbors?" he enquired. "Why, was there anything wrong about it?" "Wrong, madam! It wasn't fit to eat!" "Well, it ought to have been, for it won the first prize at the country poultry show for eleven years in succession!" said the dame.

The Biggest Crane.

The largest crane in the world has been erected at Govan, on the Clyde, for the Fairfield shipyards. On slow gear it will raise 200 tons at a distance of 75 feet from the mast, and on quick gear it will carry a load of 100 tons at 133 feet extension. The foundations of the crane consist of four large tubes, 15 feet through at the base, filled with concrete and sunk 74 feet below the surface.

Guillemots' Eggs.

Among British birds the cuckoo lays the smallest egg in proportion to its size and the guillemot the largest egg. Though the latter bird is only about the size of the raven, its eggs are nearly 3½ inches in length.

Shakespeare and Denver

..A man named Taber, who had acquired considerably more of worldly goods than erudition, decided to build an opera house in Denver. He spared no expense in fitting it out with costly marbles and luxurious furnishings. And as a last word in decorations the architects decided to run a frieze around the proscenium embellished with the names of famous lights of literature and drama. Milton, Garrick, Edwin Booth and Ibsen were all there, and in the very centre was the name of William Shakespeare.

"Taber came into the opera house one day for a final inspection, and spotted the frieze."

"What's the name doing up there?" asked Taber?

"What name?" the architect asked.

"William Shakespeare," said Taber. "What did William Shakespeare ever do for Denver? Take his name down and put Taber in its place."—Washington Post.

Knew Him by His Order

An English actor was a member of a company snowbound in the Sierras, while en route from California to the East. Before their train was dug out by the snow plough they had been reduced to eating the coarse fare of the railroad laborers and got little enough even of that. So that they all had a magnificent hunger on when the train reached a small station at which there was a restaurant, and the Englishman was the first to find a seat at a table. "Bring me in a hurry" he said to the landlord a burly Western man, "a porterhouse steak, some deviled kidneys, a brace of chops, plenty of vegetables and two bottles of Bass' bitter beer." The landlord stuck his head out of the dining-room door and yelled to somebody in the rear apartment:—"Say, Bill, tell the band to play 'Rule Britannia,' the Prince of Wales has come."

"Can I dance with you?"

She was rattled, but she answered with a smile:

DON'T think that concrete can be used only for building bridges, silos, walls and walks; because if you do, you will probably overlook all the places where you can use it now.

T. L. Irving, of North Georgetown, Quebec, used concrete for 81 different purposes on his farm in 1911.

There are probably at least a dozen profitable uses for concrete on your farm at the present moment.

Perhaps you haven't thought of Concrete, except for a new barn, or a silo, or some other big improvement for which you aren't quite ready yet. That's why you should read

"What The Farmer Can Do With Concrete"

It will open your eyes to the hundreds of uses that other farmers have found for this material. In plain language, and with the aid of many photographs, it explains just what these uses are, and how they can be applied to your farm.

Concrete can not only be used for all the purposes to which wood has been applied, but also many others for which wood would never be suitable.

It is not only a building material; it's a "handy" material, something that you'll grow to depend upon more and more, as you learn its possibilities.

So write for this book. You'll find it isn't a catalogue, nor an argument for you to buy our cement. Every one of its 160 pages is devoted to telling you what farmers have done and can do with concrete.

WOMEN TAKE NOTICE!

A man cannot understand the torture and suffering many women endure uncomplainingly. If the majority of men suffered as much pain and endured with patience the weakening sicknesses that most women do, they would ask for immediate sympathy and look for a quick cure.

Many women have been saved from a life of misery and suffering by turning to the right remedy—Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—a remedy which is safe to take because containing no narcotics, alcohol or injurious ingredients. It is an alterative extract of roots, made with pure glycerin, and first given to the public by that famous specialist in the diseases of women—Dr. R. V. Curious Sex Differences

A woman walking on a city footway will generally choose the inside. She does so partly in order to look at the shop windows but chiefly on account of the slope of the pavement, which is less on the inside.

In trams and omnibuses women mostly sit near the door. At the far end, you will, as a rule, see a majority of men. When men read while travelling they nearly always read newspapers, but in the hands of the reading girl you will, with rare exceptions, see a book.

When a woman is crossing a street with much traffic she runs, in nine cases out of ten, and the older she is the more is she inclined to run. But the man walks very deliberately. A woman holds a closed umbrella by the middle and usually clasps it to her body. No one ever saw a man carrying it in this way.

A woman usually raises a cup or a glass or a fork to her lips correctly—that is with her elbow close to her body. Most men stick their elbows out, against all rules of etiquette. In lighting a match a woman mostly rubs it in a direction away from her; a man towards his body.

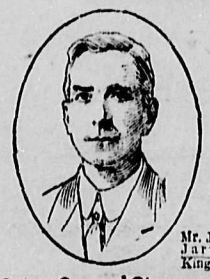
Cured of Shingles and Eczema



Mr. J. H. Jarvis, Kingston

By Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Chest Raw, Bleeding and Itchy.

"I just want to say a good word for Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In November, 1909, I had what the doctors call shingles and eczema. My chest was raw and bleeding and itchy. I was that way all winter. It was not so bad in the summer. In September it got worse. I had the best doctors treating me, but did me no good, and I was all run down in health. In November, 1910, it got worse again. I sent to you for a sample cake of Cuticura Soap. You sent it to me and I got a box of Cuticura Ointment. I have used two boxes and on the third one it has cured me of shingles and eczema. I am delighted with them and do feel pleased to think I have something I have confidence in. Should anyone be suffering as I did, I hope that they will do as I did, and I am sure of the results. I am recommending them from experience." (Signed) J. H. Jarvis, 7 Ann St., Kingston, Ont., May 30, 1911.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE SAMPLE MARKET

Grain Fixing and Grain Mixing

Dear Mr. Editor,

Will you permit an ordinary homesteader to pass an opinion on a very plausible, and at the same time a very great injury that threatens the grain trade of the West? I refer to the establishment of a sample market.

The grain sharks are making a determined effort to get legal authority to open such markets in Winnipeg and Fort William. The scheme is to take a certain quantity of grain from every carload and place it on view in the grain exchange, and as soon as the car is sold, the car from which the sample is taken is sent to its destination by the railway company. Meanwhile the cars are delayed in transit twenty-four hours, and cars not arriving at Winnipeg before eleven o'clock on Saturday mornings are held until eleven o'clock on the following Monday morning. This means that the loss of time in transit caused by the sample market, reduces the carrying capacity of the railway companies nearly two days in every week. This, on the three main lines of railway to Lake Superior, equals a reduction of about 2,500 out of a total of 15,000 available for the transportation of grain during the whole of the busy season.

Now, sir, I look on this as a very serious matter. The great cry, almost menacing in its intensity, from the Rocky Mountains to the Lake of the Woods, has been and will be, "Give us cars! more cars!! more cars!!!" And every newspaper in Western Canada re-echoes the cry, "More cars!!!" And this too in the face of the fact that next fall will witness an increase of millions of bushels of grain to be transported to eastern markets. It is nothing short of criminal folly in the face of these facts to place such an obstacle as a sample market in the way to prevent rapid and efficient transportation to Fort William and Port Arthur.

It is seldom, indeed that I can commend the railway companies, but I cannot shut my eyes to the fact that they are all straining every nerve to prepare for the fall rush. They are laying double tracks as quickly as possible. They are improving their terminals. They are largely increasing their elevator storage capacity. They are buying hundreds of locomotives and thousands of cars. And shall we stand supinely by and see the grain sharks block the march of progress. No! A thousand times no. Rather let us help ourselves to get our grain quickly to the lake front by seeing that no obstacles are needlessly allowed to interfere with the transportation companies. The farmers are perfectly right in asking for more cars, and the railway companies must do their utmost to comply with the demand, but is it not a queer way to get them when we allow the available supply to be cut down to the tune of 2,500 at one lick.

There is another aspect of this barefaced attempt to impose a sample market on us farmers. Ever since the mixing of wheat in the elevators was forbidden by law, desperate attempts have been made by the grain sharks, backed by the big interests, the financiers and very likely by the railway companies, to get at the wheat and play their old game of mixing grades, and robbing us farmers. Once allow a sample market and they can mix wheat to their heart's content. Nothing is easier for them. They buy a number of cars of maybe rejected wheat by sample, then buy a car or two of the higher grade, send the whole to an elevator, dump the good and bad into the same bin, mix the whole thoroughly and steal a higher grade and sell at a price that nets a substantial profit. Thus the mixing is as thoroughly done as it would be if there were no law to prevent it.

The men who are actively seeking to get the sample market established are the same gang who formed the Winnipeg grain combine, which controlled the entire wheat market of Western Canada. They are the men who named the price to be paid for wheat at every shipping point until the farmers got the Grain Act amended so as to compel the railways to accept wheat loaded in cars at loading platforms and the distribution of empty cars to elevators and farmers on equal terms. Ever since, this gram combine has been extremely persistent in their efforts to regain as much as they possibly could of their former control of the grain trade. Their latest is the sample market swindle. I cannot believe that they will succeed. But "Eternal vigilance is the price of freedom," from our subjection to the exactions of this unprincipled gang of plutocrats.

I fail to see how we can gain from the opening of a sample market, but, as I have proved, we can lose much. We now have honest inspectors and honest grades. Our markets are free and open, and are beyond the manipulation of greedy men, who seek only to enrich themselves at the cost of the farmers. Let us keep them so.

Yours truly,

33-8-22, Sask. C.H.B.

FEAT OF AN INDIAN HERO

Swam the Icy Columbia With Child on His Back

To swim the Columbia River at Umatilla, where it is half a mile in width, is a test of human strength even under the most favorable conditions, but to accomplish the feat burdened with the weight of a child, and in the dead of winter, with a swollen river made more formidable by the presence of hundreds of jagged ice floes, is an achievement almost unbelieveable.

Yet this was just what was done about eight years ago by a Columbia River Indian who had almost reached the age of fifty. He is still living today on the Umatilla reservation to testify to his performance, though no man ever heard him boast of it.

The Indian's name is Sees-Yuse, and he is now the head man of the scattered Columbias. It was in the early years of the new century that he attempted to make the passage of the Columbia in a frail canoe, accompanied by a boy of 9 years. When in mid-stream his little craft was struck with such force by an ice cake that it was overturned. Sees-Yuse seized his boy companion and, placing him on his back, breasted the stream and commenced his battle to gain the shore.

If men who witnessed the feat are to be believed, no white man could have accomplished what this old Indian did. Foot by foot he made his way toward the southern bank, and though swept down stream by the swift current, his progress was steady.

Several times he was struck by an ice floe, and the jagged end of one cut a deep wound in his neck. Finally after what seemed an almost interminable time, he reached the shore with his burden, his strength spent by his heroic efforts and loss of blood, and almost frozen by the chill water. Before the flow from his wound could be checked he had almost bled to death.

Not long after the incident Sees-Yuse was awarded some heirship lands on the Umatilla reservation and since that time has lived among the Umatillas, Cayuses and Walla Wallas, but through the death of the chieftain of his own tribe he has come to be regarded by his people as their head man.

The old Indian, whose facial characteristics are so different from those of the prairie Indians, is a frequent visitor in Pendleton, Ore., and almost regularly once a week calls upon his friend, Major Lee Moorhouse, not, however, so much for the purpose of talking with the Major as to gaze at a full-length painting of himself which adorns the walls of the Moorhouse office. The painting was made from a photograph of Sees-Yuse, taken by the Major, and the aged redman often sits by the hour, childlike, admiring the likeness on the wall.—Oregon Journal.

MEDICAL VALUE OF SPICES

Not a Food, but Essential Elements in the Diet

The spices are a very interesting group of substances; they are the foundation of a considerable industry, they have their medical uses and finally are of special importance in dietetics.

Their value resides in their richness in aromatic substances and essential oils; strictly speaking, they are not foods, but often enough they are essential elements in the diet. Spices have been the subject of classic research, as, for example, in the clever and important investigation which Pawlow undertook as to the psychic influences of food and as to the value of zest in nutrition.

Spices were shown to arouse appetite and to promote the secretion of the gastric juice, and the role they play thereafter in dietetics is a very important one. The medicinal action of some of them is further of value. Allspice, for example, is used as an aromatic, and has been successfully administered for flatulency or for overcoming griping due to purgatives, and occasionally it is reported that the oil gives relief in rheumatism and neuralgia.

The medical uses of cinnamon are well known. Cardamoms are used in the form of a tincture as aromatic and stomachic, and they are also employed as a flavoring agent in curry powder, cakes and liquers. The applications of capsicum and the peppers generally are well known. Cloves are aromatic, carminative and dyspepsia gastric irritation and in cases of vomiting in pregnancy.

Oil of cloves is also a popular remedy for toothache. It has also its uses in microscopy as a preservative and for clearing sections. The uses of nutmeg are wide, vanilla has an enormous application as a flavoring agent, while turmeric enjoys a similar patronage on account of its bright yellow color and pleasant musky flavor.—The Lancet.

The Japanese navy at present comprises sixty-two vessels, with a total displacement of 450,566 tons. In addition eleven ships are in course of construction or contracted for, including the Kawachi and the Settsu, each of 20,8000 tons, which are nearing completion. A third super-Dreadnought of 30,000 tons will be built by 1915. Other projected naval cruisers of 27,500 tons, three third class cruisers of 4,950 tons, a 700-ton gunboat, two 1,2000 ton destroyers and one submarine.

Argentina's most notable natural phenomenon, the famous "Piedra Movediza" or oscillating rock, near Tandil, has fallen down. The huge rock lay upon another rock near the edge of a cliff. It swung to and fro on being touched by the hand, but the fiercest hurricane had been unable to dislodge it. The cause of its collapse after so many hundreds of years is a mystery.

Pills of Attested Value.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of careful study of the properties of certain roots and herbs, and the action of such as sedatives and laxatives on the digestive apparatus. The success the compounders have met with attests the value of their work. These pills have been recognized for many years as the best cleansers of the system that can be got. Their excellence was recognized from the first and they grow more popular daily.

Little Jim in climbing off the woodshed, a place he was forbidden to go, tore his clothes.

TWO YEARS SUFFERING

Brought on by a Severe Strain—How a Cure Was Found

Mr. Joseph Stephens, Rosemount, Ont., is one of the great host who continually sound the praises of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and he has much reason to do so as they brought him from suffering to health, after he had spent much money and two years of time experimenting with other treatments. Mr. Stephens tells his experience as follows: "In the month of January, 1908, while working in a logging camp at Creston, B.C., I got my back badly injured. I suffered a great deal of pain and was almost helpless. I tried plasters, thinking they would help me, but they were of no use. I took several medicines, equally without benefit. Then I was advised to try electrical treatment and did so for a time, but without getting any permanent relief, and I began to look as though I was going to be permanently crippled. Then I was advised to undergo treatment with a specialist at Spokane, Wash. After examining me he said I was in a very bad shape and that the trouble was likely to result in Bright's disease. However, he told me that he felt sure he could cure me. At a heavy expense I was under his treatment for three months, but did not get the least benefit. I was almost in despair; work was plentiful and wages good, but I could not work, as I was quite unable to bend. I was in this condition for about two years, when my brother, who was with me all the time, came across one of Dr. Williams' pamphlets and read of the great work Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were doing. He urged me to try them, but I thought it would be useless to spend more money after all the other treatment had failed. He insisted, however, and got a dozen boxes of the Pills and I began to take them. Before I had used a half dozen boxes I felt relief, and I continued taking the Pills until every vestige of the pain was gone, and I could raise my hands above my head and then bend until I could touch my toes with my fingers, something I had not been able to do for over two years. My cure was a great surprise to my comrades, and you may be sure I told them what had brought it about. I am now as well and strong as any man in the country and I owe it all to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Sold by all dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DOGS HUNT SMUGGLERS

Animals Employed by Customs Authorities in Austria

Dogs are now being employed by the Austrian Customs authorities to hunt down smugglers. They are a cross between a greyhound and a wolf and are trained to detect persons endeavoring to cross the frontier with contraband by attacking the dogs employed by the latter.

The smugglers' dogs have shown themselves of great use in carrying pockets of contraband and eluding the revenue officers at the outposts. Now they are being hunted and killed by the Customs' dogs, which afterward lead Customs officials to the trail.

The smugglers trained their dogs by a course of whipping on one side of the frontier, and feeding on the other. Then the dog, usually a comparatively small animal was fitted with the skin of a larger dog, usually a poodle, and the space between filled with saccharin, tobacco or other contraband.

Doing One's Best

A man really never knows when he has reached his best. Given a resolute will and fixity of purpose, the good of today can be made better tomorrow in ninety-nine cases out of one hundred. In the matters that really count progress and improvement are possible right up to the very gates of death—after that we fancy they will be still more possible. All that is necessary to make our own best a little better is the steady, upward striving. And it is a terrible crippling delusion that makes us think at any time that we have reached the highest and best that is possible for us. Nothing will send us down in standard of achievement and purposing quicker than to even secretly cherish that conviction. Our best way and only way ought to be ever ahead of us.—Christian Guardian.

The Troublesome Garden Tools

With the coming of Spring it is said those who own motor cars operate them with considerably less speed not, however, always because of the county ordinances or out of consideration for their fellow citizen's safety.

On one occasion two motorists were crawling up a highway where lately a friend (then riding with one of them) knew they had formerly gone at top speed. The friend asked why the car was run so slowly.

"Why," explained the driver of the car, with perfect naivete, "everybody's carrying garden tools now, and you can't run over a man without risking a puncture."

The Duncans had corned beef and cabbage for dinner, and while the blessing was being asked, Mrs. Duncan observed that the head of her daughter Clara was not inclined.

Don't you know, Clara, she said, that your head should always be bowed when you are taking part in the blessing?

But mamma, the child protested, I wasn't taking part in the blessing. I don't like corned beef and cabbage.

Happy Married Life

I married a suffragette, said Mr. Cholmondely Rippingate of Hyde Park, and for five years have found unspeakable happiness.

Yes, said Rippingate, Mrs. Rippingate has been in jail four years and three months altogether.—Harper's Weekly.

His Fatal Kindness

The difficulties of supplanting nature is shown in a Fulton, Mo., dispatch to a Rochester paper. The communication declares that when Roy Chamberlain's pet dog lost one of his legs, the chances seemed to be against Shep staying this side of the dog heaven, but Roy built a wooden leg and attached it to the stump of Shep's limb.

Shep each night went to his master and permitted his artificial leg to be removed, and in the morning it was strapped on again. Shep was really a much improved watchdog because he did not run around nights.

The wooden leg, however, was the cause of Shep's death. In a fit of absent-mindedness he went after a particularly ambitious flea that had chosen his head as a delving ground and fractured his skull as he attempted to kill the insect with his wooden leg.

Roy painted the leg white and used it as a marker for Shep's grave.

Viewed With Suspicion

Before he was well known Wendell Phillips, the abolitionist, went to Charlestown and put up at a hotel. He had breakfast served in his room and was waited upon by a slave. Mr. Phillips seized the opportunity to present to the negro in a pathetic way that he regarded hi mas a man and brother. The negro, however, seemed more anxious about his breakfast than he was about his position in the social scale. Phillips became discouraged and told him to go away, saying that he could not bear to be waited on by a slave.

"You must 'scuse me, massa," said the negro, "I'se 'bliged to stay here, 'cause I'm 'sponsible for the silverware."—Indianapolis News.

A While for a Time

A Cleveland school teacher writes that she asked her class what was the difference between the expressions "a while" and "a time." Nobody seemed to have any idea on the subject. Finally the light of intelligence was seen to shine in the eyes of one little boy, and the teacher called upon him to save the intellectual honor of the class.

"I know, teacher!" he cried eagerly "When papa says he's going out for a while, mamma says she knows he's going out for a time!"

For a number of years a bitter feud existed between the Browns and Perkinsees, next door neighbors. The trouble had originated through the depredations of Brown's cat, and had grown so fixed an affair that neither party ever dreamed of "making up." One day, however, Brown sent by his servant a peace-making note for Mr. Perkins, which read:

"Mr. Brown sends his compliments to Mr. Perkins and begs to say his old cat died this morning."

Mr. Perkins' written reply was bitter:—

"Mr. Perkins is sorry to hear of Mr. Brown's trouble, but he had not heard that Mrs. Brown was ill."

We are in receipt of a small booklet "Realty and Building Record" published in Winnipeg, in which there appears an advertisement belonging to F. L. Harris, in it he evidently wishes to impress the readers with the importance and value of the land he has for sale by comparing it to the Districts of Cranbrook and the Okanagan. He says:

"Ideal climatic conditions, no "rainy seasons as on the coast, "no dry seasons or irrigation "needed as in the Okanagan and "Cranbrook districts. I spent "years in finding this ideal spot; "I live there myself. I call my "own fruit ranch—"The Honey-"moon Place. etc., etc." If this Mr. Harris, real estate agent he calls himself, would only get a move on and leave his "Honeymaon Palace" and learn for himself at first hand authentic knowledge respecting the districts he infers so much against (which it is impossible for him to substantiate by any practical knowledge of the same) it would teach him that those same districts—Cranbrook especially—has in its district some of the finest fruit and agricultural land to be found in British Columbia Mr. Harris is also using the McMahon letter for his own ends again, but the best way to treat this is to say nothing about it, and put the use of it down to the ignorance of the man of the conditions governing the same. Mr. Harris is certainly ignorant of the Cranbrook district and it would perhaps educate him considerably if he could take a look around here for himself.

A wonderful advertisement appeared recently in a real estate journal published in Winnipeg in which the allurements of a certain district of British Columbia appear so fascinating that it is a marval we don't have such a rush to our Province as to make it impossible to find room for the incoming settlers. More wonderful still, this small locality is the "only one" where these conditions exist and according to the advertiser, it is only through his marvelous knowledge and rrsearch that the discovery has been made; of course, this is not to be wondered at when we find that he is also the author of an "entirely new" method of growing fruit which will revolutionize the industry, and the precautions taken in selecting the quality of prospective settlers by requiring reliable reference, etc. In this advertisement, he mentions the fact that in the Cranbrook district we are troubled with drought, and that rrigation is required—well! we don't want the class of settlers that would be likely to be attracted by such statements; what we want are common sense men who will come and see what we have, b?cause it is a recognised fact that all our crops are grown in "watertight compartments" "on icebergs composed of rock and gravel"—(The office boy has just poked his nose in at the door and says the editor has smelled sulphur and that he thinks I had better quit.

Nearly every one must have read George Barr McCutcheon's fascinating novel "Beverly of Graustark" as the sale of the book has exceeded half a million copies, and the publishers estimate that fully twenty-five people read every cloth bound book is probably very nearly correct. Undoubtedly all who have read the story have formed a mental picture of Beverly Calhoun, the American girl who visits Graustark and succeeds upsetting the traditions and formalities surrounding a European Court of Royalty, consequently when A. G. Delamater who produced "Beverly" as a play looked about for an actress to interpret the part, it was no easy matter to procure one who would not only look like the "Beverly" of Mr. McCutcheon's story and Harr son Fisher's famous portrait of her, but who would also be sufficiently experienced and versatile to play this extremely difficult role. However, it i sthe concensus of opinion among the dramatic critics that they hape found the ideal "Beverly" in Dorothy Howard who is at present playing the part. Miss Howard is young, beautiful and extremely talented. Her recent engagements have been as leading lady with William Farnum in "Cameo Kirby" and with the original New York production of "The Aviator." At the Auditorium Monday July 15.

Elko Notes

Mr. J. O. E. Nelson, freight agent for the Northern Pacific railway at Boseman, Montana, was in the valley the past week; and while here made extensive research into the fruit and dairying possibilities. Mr. Nelson was decidedly impressed, declaring that Tobacco Valley's unexcelled climate, soil and mineral resources will compel a wave of immigration in the very near future.

A distinguished party of Canadian capitalists were inspecting Tobacco valley orchards and orchard tracts on both sides of the international boundary this week, and expressed their surprise at the showing along horticultural lines that is being made Those in the company were Mr. and Mrs. Francis Downe, of Flagstone, B. C., John and Ole Dahl, of Claresholm Alberta, and T. C. Milnes, secretary of the Namaka Farm Co., Ltd., Hamaka, Alberta, Mr. Milnes, in company with others, own 11,000 acres of fine grain land at Namaka with 7,000 acres in cultivation, one of the largest bodies of land in the province.

Messrs. Dahl are also largely interested in the Claresholm country.

Mr. Downe is prominently identified with the East Kootenay valley land and lumbering interests, with large holdings in both lines at Flagstone.

The orchards lying just south of the Roosville bench lands were especial objects of their scrutiny—trees loaded branch-full with apples, pears, plums and prunes—prophetic of the boundlessly immense possibilities in store for the tide of immigration that is very soon to set in. And they noted also that nowhere in the whole Tobacco valley country are the fruit-growing advantages so great as these same bench lands, freer from frost, and richer in the essential soil elements than any other locality in the whole Canadian northwest.

The result of this awakening of Canadian capital to the immense resources of the Roosville country means much for Tobacco valley and is an exponent and a reliable forerunner of a big development just in its inception.

GOVERNMENT WINS

The Scott government was returned Thursday, carrying Saskatchewan by a large majority. The defeat of the Opposition was decisive. In four cities the opposition held their own fairly well, splitting even by holding Moose Jawl Prince Albert, the Liberals holding Regina and Saskatchewan cities. In the country, however, the Liberals showed remarkable strength, the farmers apparently regarding the question of wider markets which was such a prominent feature in the campaign, as of paramount importance as throughout the campaign the opposition levelled little or no criticism at the record and the policies of the government.

The latest reports, give the Liberals 27, and the Opposition 13 sents.

SALVIA—The Pride of Paris Hair Dressing and Tonic—at once goes to the roots of the hair and turns harsh characterless hair into beautiful wavy hair, full of character and life—hair that changes the whole appearance.

SALVIA destroys the dandruff and will positively make the hair grow.

Salvia is not a sticky sulphur preparation, but a pleasant non-sticky and daintily perfumed. Ladies of taste and refinement would not think of using any other. All actresses in every country now use SALVIA continually.

We claim and absolutely guarantee that SALVIA will create a new growth of hair. If your hair is getting thin, commence using SALVIA at once. It will soon stop your hair from falling out and make the hair grow.

SALVIA is compounded by expert chemists, who have made the hair and its diseases a life-long study.

If your druggist dos'nt happen to have SALVIA in stock, insist on his getting it for you; don't allow him to sell you "something just as good," because there isn't anything "just as good" as SALVIA. All wholesale druggists in Canada sell SALVIA; and your druggist, if he is up to date, keeps it. Refuse substitutes.

A large generous bottle sells for 50 cents.

HORSES NEED CAREFUL HANDLING

To most horse owners it is a matter of costly experience that an apparently slight wrench or sprain or cut is much more serious in a horse than in a human being. A man goes ahead and works it off, but the horse is liable to be "put out of commission" for weeks or months.

When this has happened in a busy season, the horse owner is thereafter keenly interested in getting quick action at the first sign of accident or disease. In fact many successful horsemen make a practice of looking each animal over carefully every morning to see that it is all right. If it is not, they get busy at once.

A great help then is a little book called "A Treatise on the Horse and His Disease," published by Dr. B. J. Kendall Co., Enosburg Falls, Vermont. While it emphasizes the necessity of sending promptly for the Veterinary in serious cases, this little book tells clearly and briefly just what to do for such ailments as Spavin, Splints, Ringbone, Wire Cuts, Lameness and Sprains, that can be effectively cured by home treatment when one knows what to do and has the proper remedies handy.

This book can be obtained free from any druggist who sells Kendall's Spavin Cure, the thirty-year old standby, or direct from Dr. B. J. Kendall Co., by simply writing them at Enosburg Falls, V.T., U.S.A.

Shall we go to Europe on our honeymoon, dear? She—I want to go awfully. But it seems such a waste of time to miss seeing all those wonderful things.—Life.

Pen Pictures

It is probable that no institution in the Dominion of Canada comes in touch with so large a number of persons who have made improvident investments as does the Annuities Branch of the Post Office Department. It is understood that hardly a day passes that several communications are not received in which the writers bewail the loss of money invested in some scheme that promised phenomenal dividends or returns. One of the saddest of these cases is that of a lady who about three years ago enquired as to the cost of an Annuity of $600. The information was promptly given to her, but the opportunity to purchase was not embraced. She believed she could invest her money to better advantage, and that by the time she attained her 55th birthday she would not only have enough to pay for the Annuity outright, but a little fortune besides. This week another letter has been received from the same lady, who by the way, is now over fifty years of age, which furnishes the sequel to the story. She says: "I have spent my savings on worthless stocks, believing, firmly believing, that I would soon be rich. I would not listen to advice, convinced that I knew best. I wonder at my foolishness now, to waste my all in schemes I knew nothing about. For some time I had a large salary and gave to certain companies every month. Now that they have turned out worthless, I see how crazy and wrong I was. I am sorry, if ever anyone was sorry, for what I have done, but nothing will bring back what I have wasted." Her case is a pathetic one, and her experience has been costly, but it is the common experience of many who have tried Get-Rich-Quick schemes.

In the same month of the same year (1902) another lady enquired as to the cost of a Government Annuity. She, too, had saved a nice little sum for the 'Rainy Day" as the result of her own labors. She began payments with a view to purchasing the same amount of Annuity to begin at the same age (55). In the course of time she became afflicted with a malady, which, though not fatal, incapacitated her from earning a livelihood. Under the terms of the Act she was entitled to have her contract converted into an Immediate Annuity contract. She had this done, and is now receiving, and will receive as long as she lives, an annuity of over $2... It is doubtful if there is a more satisfied woman in all Canada.

The Annuities System does not promise to give something for nothing, and no benefits can be received which are not paid for; but it does promise to give a return, and with the security of the Government of Canada behind it, greater than can be obtained from the investment of the same amounts in any other manner. "World's Work" says; "It is the Savings Bank, the Insurance Company, and the Government Bond rolled into one in a shape adapted to the smallest of depositors." Your Postmaster will furnish you literature descriptive of this marvellous system of investment, or you may obtain the information desired by writing to the Superintendent of Annuities, Ottawa, to whom your letter will go free of postage.

Herodotus Sustained

The inexperienced candidate had had a bad time. He had been severely heckled and his temper was at breaking point.

"Gentlemen, he said presently, in exasperation, "Herodotus telis us—"

"Which side is he on?" came a voice from the crowd.

But the candidate was determined to have his say.

"Herodotus tells us," he went on firmly, "of a whole army that was put to flight by the braying of a single ass."

Then the crowd applauded, and the young man thought at least he had scored. But his triumph was short lived, for again came a voice from the crowd this time in a resigned tone.

"Young man," it said quietly, "go ahead; this army has been tested."—Los Angeles Herald.

Brain of Its Own

An inexperienced colored girl had just been installed as housemaid. Having eyed a patient bottle with much curiosity for some time, she asked her mistress: "And what sort o' thing is dat, ma'am?"

"That," replied madam, "is a bottle that will keep things either hot or cold."

"Land sakes, honey!" exclaimed the astonished darky, "how is it gwine to know whether you want it to keep things hot or cold?"—Ladies' Home Journal.

A commercial traveller, at a railway station in one of our southern towns, included in his order for breakfast two boiled eggs. The old darky who served him brought him three.

Uncle, said the travelling man, why in the world did you bring me three boiled eggs? I only ordered two.

Yes, sir, said the old darkey, bowing and smiling, I know you did order two, sir, but I brought three because I just naturally felt dat one of dem might fail you, sir.—Harper's Weekly.

Not a Boss

You shouldn't call me a boss, said Mr. Wardheci.

But you are a leader and an autocrat.

Maybe. But a boss is a man who makes people work. My specialty is showing anybody I take an interest in how to live easy.—Washington Star.

I understand your husband is a candidate for office, said a suffragette out west to her sister in the cause. Are you going to support him? Oh, I suppose so, answered the sister, somewhat wearily. I've been supporting him for the past ten years.—Chicago Record Herald.

Landlady—Well, sir, at seven o'clock you hadn't come home.—Fliegende Blatter.

The milk dealer, fined for selling a watered article, exclaimed indignantly: "Why, if I didn't water it, half my customers wouldn't get any!

Suicide, says a statistician, is less prevalent among the Jewish than any other race. It seems hard for some people to voluntarily relinquish anything.

Rich people have troubles which the poorer class can never enjoy.

Women of Persia

During the last five years, the women of Persia have become almost at a bound the most progressive, not to say radical, in the world. The fact makes one gape with astonishment, and upsets the previous notions of centuries.

*Without the powerful moral in*fluence of the Persian women—those so-called chattels of the oriental lords of creation—the short-lived, but marvelously conducted revolutionary movement in Persia which has recently been smothered by Russia and England would have paled early into a mere disorganized protest. It was they, from their cloistered lives, who, with the patriotic support of the Ishmus priests, fomented the national movement of the forms of government and for the inculcation of western political, commercial and ethical codes.

How to Become a Neurasthemic

Eat no breakfast. Indulge in but one meal daily; at any rate, not more than two. Eat no meat. Eat fresh cereals, vegetables, nuts and fruit. Masticate every morsel 268 times—267 times won't do. Take a cold bath every morning.

Be massaged daily. Read the health magazines daily. Read all the books on how to gain self-control and on psychotherapy. Concentrate the mind upon the digestion and upon all articles of diet. Upon every possible occasion discuss your imaginary troubles with your friends and coerce your wife into catering to every dietetic whim that you can formulate. Buy a lot of apparatus for indoor exercise and roll a cannon ball around over a selected portion of one's anatomy.

DIFFERENT NOW

Since the Slugger, Coffee, Was Abandoned

Coffee probably causes more biliousness and so-called malaria than any one other thing—even bad climate. (Tea is just as harmful as coffee because it contains caffeine the drug in coffee).

A Ft. Worth man says:

"I have always been of a bilious temperament, subject to malaria and up to one year ago a perfect slave to coffee. At times I would be covered with boils and full of malarial poison, was very nervous and had swimming in the head.

"I don't know how it happened, but I finally became convinced that my sickness was due to the use of coffee, and a little less than a year ago I stopped coffee and began drinking Postum.

"From that time I have not had a boil, not had malaria at all, have gained 15 pounds good solid weight and know beyond all doubt this is due to the use of Postum in place of coffee as I have taken no medicine at all.

"Postum has certainly made healthy, red blood for me in place of the blood that coffee drinking impoverished and made unhealthy." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

Postum makes red blood.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

A small Norwegian lad presented himself before a school teacher, who first asked him his name.

Pete Peterson, he replied.

And how old are you? continued asked next.

I do not know how old I bane, replied the lad.

Well, when were you born? continued the teacher.

I am not born at all, I got stepmutter.—Metropolitan.

There is often a marked difference between a good business man and a "good" business man.—Puck.

Selfish

He—They say pearls are a disease of the oyster.

She—Incurable, I hope.—Fliegende Blatter.

You were brave to catch the burglar, but how did you come to injure him so badly?

I was sitting up late waiting for my husband to come home.

Nothing Doing

Tramp to passer by)—Beg pardon, mister.

Passer by—Granted! But there's no use begging anything else.

COUGHS AND COLDS

Are Dreaded by Mothers Who Fear for the Safety of Their Children

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE

What a weight of responsibility rests on the mother of the family during the winter season!

In every cough and cold she recognizes the voice of Croup, Bronchitis, Consumption or other deadly throat and lung complications.

Few people, even among those who are convenient to doctors, can afford the luxury of a physician for every cough or cold, even though they realize the seriousness of neglecting such ailments.

For all such, Dr. Chase has provided a prompt means of cure known as Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

One reason why mothers prize this treatment above all others is because of its suitability for children. It is sweet and pleasant to the taste, and children like to take it. By its soothing, healing action it is wonderfully prompt in curing Croup, Bronchitis and Whooping Cough, and can be used by children with perfect safety so long as directions are followed.

Thousands of families in Canada keep Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house at all times for use in cases of emergency. This is the only way to be sure of protecting the bronchial tubes and lungs against coughs and colds. 25c. a bottle, family size 60c. at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

My doctor says I ought to ride a horse, said the indolent man. "What for? I don't know. Maybe he's tired of treating me for dyspepsia and wants a broken collar bone for a change.—Washington Star.

RAISING FLAX FOR ITS FIBRE

Modern Inventions Promise to Make Southern Alberta a Bonanza Flax Growing Section

The Canadian Board of Control of the International Dry-Farming Congress in its Diversified Farming campaign announces that the growing of flax for its fibre should be taken up in Southern Alberta, and points out that it can be made a veritable bonanza with the establishment of linen *mills, which must come in this sec*tion because of the requirements of the home markets.

There being abundant water power in the province for mechanical motor exigencies, sufficient coal for a cheap engine fuel, and suitable water for wetting in the conversion of flax fibre into fabrications of linen, there is everything required as a natural raw material right at hand. Thus, right here in Alberta, all kinds of linen goods can be produced to sell within a fraction if not at just as low a price as cotton goods—a great boon to all farmers.

The growing of flax for seed has been very successful, and many of the progressive dry-farmers of Lethbridge and vicinity have this season begun the putting in of a large crop. It is not too late yet, for flax can be sown up to the 15th of June, although the earlier the safer.

For many centuries 16 weeks have been consumed in getting flax ready for spinning, and a further four or five weeks have been necessary in which to bleach the linen product for the market. By a new process raw flax can now be converted into perfectly bleached linen fibre ready for spinning in one day. Sound straw will yield 17 per cent of spinning fibre, realizing $500 per ton on the market. By harvesting at the proper time good fibre can be produced, and a fair crop of seed can be obtained at the same time—the mechanical operation of removing the seed without, as hitherto, injuring the fibre for linen production being practiced in the United States.

The new process for converting flax straw into linen within the short space of one day, has passed beyond the experimental stage, and capital invested in this direction would be a far better method, because of the certainty of returns, than in gold or other mines where milling requires millions and then the outcome from a financial standpoint is always, or nearly so, an indefinite quantity, and the duration of the lode a mighty uncertainty.

Flax is a hardy plant to grow; with an abundance of water it is a certain wealth producer; and the various uses to which the straw and seed can be put place it beyond the stage of the uncertain.

What Crop Rotation Will Do

It is interesting to note that the land which produced Seager Wheeler's $1000 bushel prize wheat at Rosthern, Sask., last year was carefully cultivated and the yearly manner of cropping the land was as follows:

First year—Breaking.
Second year—Oats, a heavy crop.
Third year—Potatoes, peas, turnips.
Fourth year—Canadian Thorpe 2-rowed barley, yield 75 bushels an acre.
Fifth year—Summer fallow.
Sixth year—Wheat.
Seventh year—Wheat.
Eighth year—Oats, heavy crop.
Ninth year—Summer fallow.
Tenth year—Preston wheat, 50 bushels an acre.
Eleventh year—Potatoes.
Twelfth year—Wheat, 40 bushels an acre; also seed plot of Preston. Seed plots and potatoes.
Thirteenth year—Summer fallow.
Fourteenth year—Marquis wheat, awarded $1000 prize at New York Land Show.—From Dry-Farming, Lethbridge, Alberta.

A Bad Lot

A forlorn looking man was brought before a magistrate for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. When asked what he had to say for himself, he gazed pensively at the judge, smoothed down a remnant of gray hair and said: "Your honor, man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn. I'm not so debased as Swift as profligate as Byron, as dissipated as Poe or as debauched as—"

"That will do," thundered the magistrate. Thirty days. And, officer, take a list of those names and run 'em in. They're as bad a lot as he is."—Savannah News.

Bald Head Partings

Before a man begins to get bald he parts his hair on the side way down just above his ear, but as the hair starts to come out then he begins to part it in the middle and later when about all of it is gone on the top he again goes back to parting it down low to one side and lets the short hairs over the ears grow long and brushes them over his bald spot. NERVES AT HIGH TENSION

Necessary in This Age of Keen Competition and Great Accomplishment

When the Body Fails to Support the Brain Seek the Help of

DR. CHASES' NERVE FOOD

Nervous people are the salt of the earth. The great men and great women are usually those of nervous temperament.

But it takes an enormous quantity great brain of a highly tensioned nervous system.

Digestion fails because nerve force is lacking to control the flow of digestive fluids. A little extra excitement is followed by the agony of a sleepless night. You are easily irritated and lose patience, you lack the reserve force which is necessary for success and to ward off disease.

Unfortunately nervous diseases do not right themselves and since your digestive system fails to supply sufficient nourishment you must seek external assistance such as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This great food cure is not a narcotic to deaden the nerves. It is not a stimulant to whip up the nerves to renewed effort.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food feeds the feeble wasted nerves back to health and vigor. It floods the nervous system with new rich blood, the only substance from which nerve force can be made. Fifty cents a box, 6 for $2.50 at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Appendicitis Causes

The question has again been raised in medical journals as to whether the increase in the frequency of appendicitis in recent years may not be due to minute particles of iron. The old millstones that ground so slowly and ground small enough in the old days have passed away, and it is suspected that these particles of iron come from the rollers now used in grinding wheat. Some medical authorities suggest that these particles find their way into the appendix where they form the nucleus of a concretion Cases are cited where bullets and shot have been met with, having come as a kind of a surgical dessert to the eating of game; also bunches of bristles from a too vigorous use of the toothbrush.

OIL IS KING OIL IS MONEY

The oil business when properly managed, is the most profitable also the safest business in the world. The returns from it are much larger and quicker than those afforded by any other line of business.

The farmer produces from one to two crops per year, and his profits are at the mercy of the seasons Producing oil wells give ONE crop each and EVERY DAY, and few are the catastrophies that can harm a producing oil property or impair its value.

The merchant and manufacturer must continually rush his sales in order to prevent ruinous depreciation in the value of his goods, on account of seasons and fashion. Not so with oil stored safe in the ground, it can wait the passing of a panic. TIME tends always to increase its value as the demand for oil and oil products is constantly growing.

The best that can be hoped for from most lines of business is a profit of from three to ten per cent. per year, while the oil producing business EARNS and PAYS this or a greater per cent.

ABOUT PAPER MONEY

Machine That Grinds Paper Dry and Then Stores it in Bags

As the greatest difficulty which most people meet with in regard to bank notes is that of being able to keep them, it will probably come as a surprise to many to learn there are yet others for whom the difficulty entailed in destroying such paper are well illustrated in a very interesting article upon paper destruction by the German Imperial printers.

The methods previously available were three—burning, boiling and pulping. In the first process it has been found that even where a special furnace has been used it has not infrequently happened that while the outer parts of packets were destroyed some of the contents were not even singed. In the case of stamps or gummed paper the matter was still worse, for the packets baked together into solid blocks, the interiors of which were quite intact.

In the second process the paper for destruction is placed in iron boilers, lye is added and the contents then subjected to the prolonged action of steam. As a destructive process for small quantities this is quite effectual, as is that of pulping, a process in which the paper is cut up by revolving knives in water.

In both these cases there is, however, another difficulty—that of disposing of the product. It cannot easily be sold, it will not pay to transport and on hand the sodden, stodgy, mass quickly goes bad.

The German Imperial printers therefore decided to try a new way—grinding it up dry. To this end they installed a forty horse-power mill, which, by a process of curling, crushing and tearing reduces the paper to an almost powderlike form, in which it passes through a sieve into a collecting chamber beneath the mill ready for packing.

This, however, was accompanied by a very objectionable feature, especially when dealing with gummed paper in the grinding. Such a dust was created that though the workmen engaged, wore protectors, it yet persistently filled and blocked their eyes and nostrils.

As the work of packing was on this account not only unhealthy, unwillingly performed and also uneconomical efforts were made to find some mechanical means of doing it. Difficulty after difficulty arose.

Among such may be mentioned that a spiral feeder having been devised it was found that the paper would form into balls solid as blocks of wood, which defied the efforts to move them by the twenty horse-power motor.

The Imperial printers, therefore are now to be congratulated upon possessing a machine perfect in its kind. It takes the paper, grinds it up to any size desired and bags it.

Finally, though the paper in this form fetches but little on account of its consequent shortness of fibre, the mill is yet not only paying off the initial outlay, but it is also saving some $260 a year in workmen's wages.

LAST OF POWDER TRAIN HEROES

Crew That Took Ammunition to Union Forces at Antietam

With the death of Jeremiah C. Donovan, marble and granite cutter, the list of those who helped save the North from invasion in 1862 by taking a powder train through to Antietam, has lost its name.

Gen. McClellan was fighting desperately against Lee's combined forces on the field of Antietam when he discovered that powder was scarce, so that he could not use his heavy artillery against the Confederate forces. McClellan telegraphed to Washington that he must have powder at once. A trainload of explosives was hastened to Bridgeport, Pa., and the Cumberland Valley Railroad was requested to carry it over its line to Antietam. Volunteers were sought to run the engine.

"I'll take it to Antietam or to hell!" said Joe Miller, engineer, as he stepped to the throttle.

With the tracks clear for a stretch of seventy-eight miles between the Susquehanna and the Potomac Joe Miller and his crew made record time, with only two stops. When the train reached Chambersburg the axle boxes were ablaze, and Jeremiah Donovan, then 17 years old, climbed aboard and volunteered his services. He vainly tried to keep the axle boxes cool during the spurt to Hagerstown, eight miles from Antietam. It resembled a train of fire and smoke as it pulled into the Maryland city.

The powder saved the day for McClellan, and placed the crew of the powder train on the unrecorded roll of the heroes of Antietam. Donovan was the only survivor. He was a native of Chambersburg, and came to Carlisle thirty seven years ago and established a marble yard there.—Philadelphia North American.

How it Struck Him

On one occasion when he was called upon to respond to a toast at a banquet a local professor compared the evening with the dull and drab nights he was forced to spend poring over his books. "It makes me think of the little son of a friend of mine," said the professor. "One Summer he was taken to the circus for the first time by his doting father. When he returned, round-eyed and all but apoplectic with delight, his mother asked him how he liked the circus. 'Mother,' said my friend's little boy, 'if you once go to the circus with me, you'll never want to fool away time on church work again."

Conditions in Japan

That the old customs of Japan are passing away and the empire is rapidly becoming civilized, and, more slowly, Christianized, is not borne out by the fact, for the dark side of Japan is turned aside by those who visit there. A writer in the Missionary Intelligences of Cincinnati, long a resident in Fukushima says: "Idolatry still prevails. The tenacity with which they cling to the family gods in some homes supposed to be Christian shows that idolatrous customs have a strong hold on them. Here in Japan the divorce rate is three times as high as in America, and then not all the separations are counted. The people are woefully addicted to the use of liquor and tobacco. All the cars are smokers. When we ride in the train we are stifled by the tobacco smoke. A lot of women smoke as well as the men. There is much drunkenness. Japan also heads the list of nations in regard to the number of suicides."

Western Independence

When you hear that the west is growing independent or the east you can set it down as a fact," said the drummer who had come in from beyond the Mississippi.

"What's the yarn," was asked by the hotel clerk.

"Oh, not a long one. Just shows you that a Western man doesn't have to lean on the crowd for his bread and butter. In a Nebraska town I asked the innkeeper the way to a barber shop. He not only had one in the place, but he shaved me himself. Then I told him I thought of having some card photos taken. He took me up under the roof and worked the camera in first-class shape.

"Sure I wanted a license, and as Mayor, he issued it. I wanted a horse and buggy, and as a livery stable man he hired them to me. I had an old tooth, and as a dentist he yanked it out."

"But he stopped there?"

"Almost. He filled a pulpit Sunday, did some blacksmithing Monday, began painting the schoolhouse Tuesday, and when I left Wednesday he was holding court as justice of the peace. When you want to find independence, go west, young man."—St Louis Times.

Old Use and Worn

Gen. Marion Maus has a keen and delicate taste in literature, and at a recent dinner at Vancouver Barracks discussing a popular novel of little worth, Gen. Maus said:—

"The pathos of the book is really bathos. It reminds me of a private's widow. The good woman was about to sell her husband's furniture, her rugs, plated ware, and what not. As she was going over these articles her *eyes filled with tears, a host of mem*ories rose to her mind, and laying aside a half-dozen knives, she said:—

"Oh, dear! I can't let these go! They've been in poor George's mouth too often!"

In the current issue of American Medicine" the editor-doctor discusses at length the Titanic disaster, touching on "the psychology of courage," and related subjects and ending with this appeal to medical men: "The medical profession is striving with all its strength and knowledge to save and prolong life. Does it not behove us while we are driving back the hordes of disease to devote more thought and time to pointing out and urging greater efficiency in preventing needless accidents? In other words, what is the good of saving countless lives from disease if they are only going to be sacrificed to the Moloch of carelessness and industrial negligence? In all sincerity, we believe medical men should give this matter more thought and devote more attention to arousing humanity from its indifference or ignorance of physical danger."

To commemorate the restoration of the Campanile in Venice the municipality ordered a medal to be made from designs submitted by artists of the younger set. The jury found the works of Andrea Lippi, of Florence, and Giuseppe Micell, of Palmero, of equal merit and the model as struck is the work of both artists. The obverse—Micell's—has the date 1912, and shows the restored column, over which trumpeting cherubs fly. The reverse side shows the date 1902, a suggestion of St. Mark's place and the ruins of the structure.

FORESTS AND WATER

Benefits of Manitoba Forest Reserves To Surrounding Country

The water supply of a district is always considerably influenced by the forests at or near the head-waters of its streams.. This is one of the reasons why large districts have been set aside by the Government of the Dominion of Canada and many other governments, to be kept permanently as forests.

The soil within the forest, largely composed as it is of decaying and decayed leaves, twigs, and other vegetable matter, acts much like a sponge in soaking up the moisture that falls. On the other hand, the absence of high winds within the forest does much to prevent or lessen evaporation.

The Riding Mountain and Turtle mountain, forest reserves in Manitoba are good examples of this fact. In the Riding Mountain reserve are the head-waters of the Minnedosa (Little Saskatchewan or Rapid) river, one of the important tributaries of the Assiniboine from which, by the way, the town of Minnedosa is now deriving power. On the other side of the reserve issue many rivers, among and Oche rivers and Edwards creek. The last named is a source of water-supply for the town of Dauphin.

In the Turtle Mountain forest reserve are to be found the sources of the Pembina and Whitemud rivers, as well as of many smaller streams, some of which lose themselves in the prairie.

Cutting away the forest from the head-waters of the streams would mean that in spring the melted snows would rush down these water-courses in a torrent and be wasted, not to speak of doing considerable damage in its course, while in summer the stream beds would be almost dried up.

Thus not only would the streams be deprived of any possible value in producing power, but their value to the soils of the farming districts in keeping up a steady supply of moisture would be much lessened, if not altogether destroyed.

Regarded as one of the most potent compounds ever introduced with which to combat all summer complaints and inflammation of the bowels, , Dr. D. J. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial has won for itself a reputation that no other cordial for the purpose can aspire to. For young or old suffering from these complaints it is the best medicine that can be procured.

The railway lines of the Grand Trunk Pacific in western Canada are being increased about 10 miels in length each day at the present time and, with the arrival in less than a week of two more pioneers, this rate of progress will be doubled which means that, with the pioneers working steadily night and day, the company will build 120 miles of track in a week. Telegraph lines are being kept well up with the construction.

"She took Reggie's engagement ring back to the jeweler's to be valued. Oh, poor Maudie!"

"Well, that's nothing!" sneered the other. "I always do that."

"Yes, but the jeweler refused to give it back to her. He said Reggie hadn't paid for it."

Strategy Does the Trick

"A man at the door has one of those fly-by-night schemes."

"Don't listen to him."

"But this seems all right."

"What is it?"

"It's a preparation to put on a convenient place in the house which makes it attractive to flies. They gather there to sleep, and then every night you sneak up on them and swat them."—Detroit Free Press

MANLESS EDEN

Froissy, Near Paris is Suffragette's Paradise

Not fifty miles from Paris is a small town called Froissy, which is literally run by women. This is not because the women are women with views but simply because the town is a town with needs, and there are no men there to fill the needs. Froissy is in the heart of an agricultural province, and all the on-coming young farmers have migrated to more promising lands. Only the old men remain, and what with the plough and the reaper they are kept too busy to give any attention to municipal affairs, much less hold offices. So they have turned over the reins of village government, chariot, steeds and all to the women. The mayor is a woman and the superintendent of the railway station is a woman; the mail-carrier is a woman and so is the village barber. The switchman is a switchwoman, and the postmaster is a postmistress. The telegraph messenger boy is named Mme Leseboro. When a proclamation from the mayor is to be heralded abroad the drummer-boy of Froissy who is a drummer-girl, sallies forth and sounds a rat-tat on her kettle-drum. This city official is a sturdy octogenarian Mme. Druhon-Marchardin, who has held her post through wind and rain for years. The official letter-carrier too, has been in office for ten years. Her name is Mme. Doubour.

Froissy is only five miles from Montreuil, in the Department of the Somme, and almost half-way between Amiens to the north and Paris to the south. It is said to be the one civilized community in which municipal affairs have been delegated entirely to women.

Full of Experience

Here is a story that the movement for good bridges has revived. A man applied for a job in a nursery. "Do you know anything about grafting?" he was asked. "Well, I'll admit that I know something about it," said he. "I was county commissioner the year we let so many contracts for bridges." Kansas City Journal.

Cursory

A huntsman called on Hodge to settle for damage done by a run to hounds, and found only Mrs. Hodge at home.

"Has your husband," he enquired, "made an examination yet?"

"That he have, sir," replied Mrs. Hodge with a curtesy.

"Rather a cursory examination, I suspect?"

"Oh, dreadful, sir! Such langwidge I never heard—never!" And the good woman held up her hands at the bare recollection.

Little Mary was in the habit of posting her mother's letters in the pillar box. One day a friend called and asked the child's mother what Mary was going to be when she grew up.

"Oh," said the mother, "I shall [illegible] and get her into the Post Office."

"Oh, mums," cried the horrified child, "I should never be able to get in there!"

Longest Span Bridge

It is claimed for the new double-deck bridge which is now nearly completed across the Missouri river at Kansas City that it is the longest span riveted bridge as yet constructed, the length of the main span being 425 feet. The striking novelty of the structure is the fact that the lower platform can be raised against the floor by means of power-operated cables, drums and concrete counterweights. The vertical travel of the platform is 46 feet, and it is raised and lowered by two 250 horse-power motors.

Philosophy by Post

There was once a man who had a great scheme of philosphy to propound. He became so engrossed in his idea that he allowed his hair to flourish unrestrained, wore out-of-date clothing and generally went around in a slipshod manner.

"Humph!" said those who heard this. "He is only posing. He doesn't mean what he says."

So he had his hair cut and acquired clothing of the latest style and pattern. Having remodelled himself thus, once more he started forth to spread his new doctrine.

"Humph!" said the same people, "He is only bluffing. He doesn't know what he is talking about."

THE ACUTE PAIN FROM NEURALGIA

Permanently Cured Through the Use of Dr. William's Pink Pills

Neuralgia is not a disease—it is only a symptom, but a very painful one It is the surest sign that your blood is weak, watery and impure, and that your nerves are literally starving. Bad blood is the one cause—good, rich blood the only cure. There you have the real reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure neuralgia. They are the only medicine that contains in correct proportions the elements needed to make rich, red blood. This new blood reaches the root of the trouble, soothes the jangled nerves, drives away the nagging, stabbing, pain and braces up your health in other ways. Among the sufferers from neuralgia, cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, is Mrs. Chas. Brown, Durham, Ont., who says. "For months I suffered intensely from neuralgia. The pain in my head and face at times was so great as to be almost unbearable. I tried two doctors, and many remedies, without finding a cure, as there seemed to be no let-up to the pain. Finally I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I began their use. Soon I found the pains becoming less and after taking the pills for some weeks the trouble entirely disappeared and has not since bothered me."

If you are suffering from any blood or nerve trouble begin to cure yourself to-day with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"Good gracious, Beaseley, how did you get so banged up?" "Why, I saw two men fighting and stepped between them.' "And they pummelled you like that?" "Well, I guess they meant to give me what's coming to the middle man."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A certain gentleman who had acquired riches rather quickly, purchased an estate on the banks of the river Clyde which adjoins those of Lord Blantyre and Sir Charles Bine-Renshaw. Strolling through his place one day, he chanced to go too far and was accosted by a burly Scottish gamekeeper, who in language more forcible than polite, ordered him off the grounds. Remonstrance only produced more "langwidge" from the burly one.

"Sir," said the pompous one, "do you know who I am? I am the Faulds of Ardgeriff!"

"I don't care if you are the Falls o. Niagara," said the gamekeeper, "ye're gaun oot o this."—London Opinion.

There is a shrewd old farmer in Chenango county, New York, whose fame for driving a close horse trade rivals that of David Harum.

Golden Anniversary

Edmonton, Alta., July 10.—Seven hundred braves of the Cree and Beaver tribes from various parts of the north country, headed by Chief Keenosew and Chief Mustus, garbed in their gaudiest costumery and accompanied by squaws and pappooses, assisted the clergy of the diocese of Athabasca and the people of the town and visitors from all over Canada and the United States in celebrating the golden anniversary of the priesthood of Bishop Emile Grouard, the oldest active Catholic missionary in the Dominion, at Grouard Alberta, north of here.

The Indians attended the reception, where addresses were delivered by Samuel Cunningham, who was a member of the territorial legislature, Bishop Joussard, co-adjutor of the diocese, and Miss Kate McDermott, daughter of Mayor McDermott, and they also participated in the high mass, which was celebrated by Bishop Grouard. Rev. Father Orcalan, of Rome, preached the sermon. The services were followed by a public banquet, at which addresses were given in English, French and Cree. A parade in which a squadron of the Royal Noerthwest Mounted Police took part, was the feature of the afternoon, and in the evening there was a presentation of a drama, entitled "Life of Bishop Grouard in the North," written by sisters of the church.

The Indians, who were encamped along the northern shore of Lesser Slave Lake, passed the rest of the week in sports, including horse and pony races, cowboy, running, jumping and dancing contests and tugs of war. The dances recalled the days when the red men held full sway over the vast northland. At the close of the festivities the braves and their squaws returned to the habitats in the woods, many of them travelling by the most primitive means of transportation.

Bishop Grouard is a native of Britanny, born in 1840 in the town of Setche. He left France for America in 1860 and completed his theological studies in a seminary at Quebec, where he was ordained a priest on June 29th, 1862. Shortly afterward he was sent to the northern missions in the wilds of the Athabasca country. Though encountering many hard ships he worked with Protestant and Catholic alike and did more than any living man to civilizing the native Indians. He befriended the pioneers and trappers and packers in the early days, and in return they have honored him in the scene of his fruitful labors.

WOMEN'S WAYS AND WHIMSIES

How to Become Thin

THERE are some women who try to persuade themselves that they would rather be stout than thin; but, as a matter of fact, there are mighty few women who, deep down in their hearts, do not consider too much flesh a beauty extinguisher.

Do you think the air would be full of reduction cures if merely health and comfort were at stake? A woman will cheerfully pant like a porpoise when she carries too many pounds upstairs, will run the risk of fatty degeneration of the heart and kindred ills of over obesity, but tell her she is losing her looks and her figure and she gets in a panic at once and talks cures and systems of reducing all day.

Some one has said of "embonpoint," that middle aged monster for the attack of which there is no balm in Gilead, "If that is just 'embonpoint,' alias moderate plumpness, what must 'fat' be?" Nothing short of a raging demon to the woman who finds too much flesh the bane of her existence.

If women would cut out laziness and too much eating they would get down to the root of the disease, instead of having to resort to all sorts of ridiculous cures.

The woman who exercises hard and gets into a violent perspiration by vigorous walking, housework or athletic games, walking up and down stairs a dozen times a day, will rarely have to read up on obesity cures.

Usually the woman inclined to flesh is self indulgent. She much prefers a street car to her feet, groans even at making her own bed, never runs an errand she can get out of and plays bridge to an accompaniment of sweets all the bright days when she should be exercising in the open air.

The fat woman who doesn't like her food is so rare as to be a negligible quantity. Just so surely as a thing is fleshmaking does she dote on it. She will eat candy by the pound, nibble cake whenever she gets a chance and never by any possibility turn down soups, salads or desserts. This at least when the flesh is at the controllable stage. Later she usually has to deny herself to keep herself alive

Porch Pillows

WIDE wale pique resembling corduroy is a popular material for the making of hammock, porch and sun room pillows. It requires no decoration except a wide self border with wales running vertically and stitched on with a cotton of contrasting color. Burlap, too, is an effective and durable fabric for the manufacture of pillow tops that will lead an outdoor life during the summer. Probably the prettiest of these tops are in brown shades worked in designs carried out in tones of burnt orange, outlined with black and with blades of grass and willows in green and blue green.

Cotton reps in tan shades are wonderfully good looking when treated with a central design outlined in harmonizing colors. The background is solidly stitched. This leaves the de*sign in a spaciously outlined relief.*

Whipcord in tan, brown, dark green and red shades makes hard wearing pillow tops. When used in the motorcar they should be piped with pigskin or morocco and laced together all around the edges over a morocco tongue.

Marking Note Paper

ONE of the smartest fashions in monogram paper is the oblong cartouche with three small black letters or old English ones in the center.

Another somewhat smart effect has the initial of the surname crossed at top and bottom with the other two initials in smaller letters.

For use in a country home it is common to mark the name of the house and address in the upper right hand corner and higher up in the opposite corner have the telephone number, also the telegraph and express addresses if these are different from the postoffice address.

Two Excellent Ideas

THE best way of whitening kitchen tables is to scour them with wood ashes and soap. Floors can be also most effectively scrubbed with cold water, soap and wood ashes.

A cork soaked in oil makes a good substitute for a glass stopper.

Moths From Furs

To keep moths out of furs place a piece of common rock brimstone, just as it is, in your chest or wardrobe, and the moth will never come near any furs or woolen goods.

SEASONABLE COSTUMES FOR THE SUMMER GIRL OF 1912

BATHING SUIT WITH DIVIDED SKIRT. COSTUME FOR TENNIS GIRL. MANNISH GARB FOR MOUNTAIN CLIMBING. MOTOR COAT TRIMMED WITH SUEDE.

THE girl who goes in for sports this summer is going to have mighty good looking clothes made for her different activities. Practical these new styles undoubtedly are, but to the conservative mind they may carry with them a hint of daring that will not be appreciated. But if one studies the costumes from a sportsman's viewpoint the seeming lack of femininity in them is overruled.

For instance, the girl who climbs mountains must wear mannish garb. Petticoats are out of place in real mountain climbing, and the woman brave enough to make steep ascents is usually brave enough to don suitable garments.

The corduroy mountain suit seen in one of the illustrations has a divided skirt which separates and buttons around each leg when the actual ascent is begun. The short, trimly fitting skirt, heavy gloves and crush hat that shades the eyes are all appropriate for mountain climbing.

The latest bathing suit, too, is rather extreme in cut, sharing honors in its divided skirt with the divided riding habit, but in the case of most bathing suits the bloomer effect is more to the fore.

The bathing suit pictured is one of the very newest of this year's modes and, as you see, is in bloomer style. The effect is graceful and modest because of the broad panels which fall at back and front, covering the division of the skirt almost completely. This bathing suit de luxe, as it were, is built of white bathing satin, a material of firm texture, said to be waterproof and very durable. It is being used for the most luxurious and expensive of suits for the ocean dip. On this particular white satin suit there is a trimming of navy blue satin. The cap, for some unknown sartorial reason, is of blue taffeta with an inconspicuous adorn*ment of pompadour ribbon in tones of* blue and cerise. The mingling of colors is one of the smart combinations of the spring season in both the millinery and dressmaking worlds. In the former realm this combination is probably among the best.

What the tennis enthusiast wears is mostly a matter of individual preference; but, no matter from which material the skirt of the costume is evolved, in length it must be short enough *to escape the ground even when rub*ber soled, heelless shoes are worn. In the making of a tennis skirt the very important point of heels or no heels is often overlooked. When trying on the skirt *everyday boots are seldom ex*changed for the heelless tennis shoes; consequently the skirt that is the proper length when one has on the high heel boots touches the ground when worn above tennis footwear.

The tennis costume shown in the cut is a smart affair with a skirt of white flannel and a loose Norfolk blouse of white linen belted at the waist line with black patent leather. The most practical fabric for the tennis skirt is cotton ratine if one cares to buy so expensive a material, but there are a number of cheaper materials, such as the new cotton corduroys, piques and crashes—to say nothing of the old standby, butcher's linen—that are very good.

A story of outing clothes would be hardly complete without a word or two concerning the stunning new motor coats which are modishly trimmed with suede this season.

The long motor coat of gray and white worsted is a happy example of the vogue for suede trimmings. Revers, cuffs and collar are of gray suede, and on the cuffs and collar appear pipings of white suede. Black and white buttons of large size add further contrast, and a white hat, gray veil and white buttoned boots complete a very chic motor costume.

CATHERINE TALBOT.

Uncle Sam's Recipe For Boiling Ham

HERE is Uncle Sam's recipe for boil*ing a ham. The following* instructions were sent out by the United States department of agriculture:

Wash the ham thoroughly, then soak in cold water several hours, the time varying with the size of the ham. This soaking is to dissolve out the excess of salt. The ham is then put in a boiler full of boiling water. The temperature should then be lowered slightly and the boiler just kept simmering. Keep the water just barely boiling for four and a half hours for an eighteen pound ham—that is, a quarter of an hour for each pound of ham. If the hams are larger or smaller, vary the time to suit the weight. As the water boils out add fresh boiling water and always keep the boiler full. For very large hams it is advisable to cook in two waters.

Why should the ham be put in boiling water? Portions of the lean meat, the albumin and some of the juices and flavors are soluble in warm water, while boiling water coagulates the albumin just as it does the white of an egg. So if you put in cold water and heat to the boiling point some albu*min and much of the delicate flavors so* sought after in hams would be dissolved out of the water as it warmed up to the boiling point, but if put into the boiling water the albumin is coagulated at once on the surface and all the juices and the flavors are sealed in and kept there until eaten.

While cooking the ham is kept at the boiling point of water, which is sufficient heat to cook it thoroughly without separating the fibers or boiling it to pieces, as a rapid or hard boiling would do.

Nosegay Neckwear

THE floral bow is one of the latest novelties in neckwear. It consists of a small satin or velvet nosegay, with streamers of long, soft green stems, finished off at the end with tiny buds. Bunches of green velvet foliage are sometimes used as substitutes for the ribbon bow, which has not been altogether discarded.

*As regards the actual collar, an inter*esting revival is the colored detachable neckband which was so popular two or three years ago, but the present fashion requires a fringe of the same colored silk sewed to the lower edge of the collar.

These neckbands sometimes fasten in front with a pair of fancy links instead of being invisibly closed at the side or at the back. It is some time now since frilling has been used, but it is being re-enforced as the tiniest possible lace edging to these neckbands.

Probably some time will elapse before it assumes—if it ever does—the extravagant proportions which are still remembered, but as it is now being used it is certainly becoming, as most complexions are improved if something white is worn at the neck.

Summer Bedsteads

THE sleeping apartment during the summer should be made to appear dainty and cool.

This is an easy matter, and little expense is attached to it. After all the draperies used during the winter are stored away and the unnecessary arti*cles of furniture dispensed with, clothe* your room in its summer garb.

Purchase plain, barred or figured dimity, any color your taste may dictate. From this fashion a cover for your bed, bureau, dressing table and the window draperies.

Measure the length of the bed and allow three or four widths of material, according to the size of the bed. This may be finished by a ruffled flounce, a plaiting or a deep hem. Fourteen inches from the hem or bordering the ruffle stitch bands of figured dimity.

Cut these bands from a wide striped design, which may be had in great variety.

These spreads are easily laundered and may be kept fresh and clean through the hot, dusty summer.

Cloth From Seaweed

CLOTH made from seaweed is the very latest thing. The seaweed used is found on the southern coast of South Australia. It grows on a limestone bottom, but the action of the tide through many centuries has sifted over it masses of shells and sand until the plant, forcing its way upward, lies on a deposit of its own fiber, intermixed with sand and shells, and varying in thickness from four to twenty-four *feet. This fiber has been used for bed*ding and upholstering purposes, for rope, mats, linoleum, army blankets and paper.

Mixed with wool it weaves into an excellent cloth. The present difficulty is the expense of raising the fiber, ninety-nine tons of sand, shells and debris coming up with every ton of pure fiber.

Seasonable Salads

Asparagus and Watercress Salad.

ASPARAGUS and watercress make a delicious salad. Wash the cress and break it into bits, rejecting the coarser leaves. When ready to serve mix it with salad oil, vinegar, salt and pepper. Heap it in the center of a dish and surround it with iced green and white asparagus tips.

Endive Salad.

This is the way they serve endive salad in France: Wash, trim and tear apart a nice head of endive. Drain dry and heap in a salad bowl that has been rubbed with a bruised clove of garlic. Rub the garlic on a broad crust in the middle of the salad for a little while, then pour over the endive a dressing made of two tablespoonfuls of oil to one of vinegar—tarragon if you have it on hand—salt, pepper to taste, half a teaspoonful of celery seed and a *teaspoonful of anchovy paste or mush*room ketchup. Toss well together and serve before the green leaves wilt.

Brussels Sprout Salad.

Put a pint of brussels sprouts in a cheesecloth and boil tender. While still warm sprinkle a little oil, vinegar, salt and pepper over them. When ready to serve arrange in pyramid shape on a bed of lettuce and sprinkle over them chopped onion, chopped olives, walnut meats or pecans and capers, about a teaspoonful of each, all chopped fine and mixed with two tablespoonfuls of lemon or grape juice. Let the mixture stand in a cold place for a little while, then serve just as it is or with mayonnaise.

Bermuda Salad.

Free six tender sweet green peppers of seed and tough division walls and stem ends. Chop them fine and mix with one very large Spanish onion. Make a dressing with a gill of olive oil, half a teaspoonful of mustard, some of the juice drained from the onion, salt, pepper and the juice of a small lemon. Add to the dressing a piece of preserved ginger chopped fine. Arrange cups of crisp, tender lettuce leaves. Put a spoonful of the pepper and onion in each and pour over it a little of the dressing. Serve remainder of the dressing in a separate dish or bowl.

Old raincoats which have worn beyond the use for which they were designed make good clothesline base.

NECK FRILLS RULE THE DAY

THE fluffy plaited frill around the neck is wonderfully good looking, but not always becoming. It takes a woman with sloping shoulders to look well in one of these frills. The frill pictured has three tiers of fluted organdie, each tier edged with picot trimming.

THREE TIERED RUFFLE OF ORGANDIE.

Agaric Stitching

WHAT is agaric stitching? The question is often asked and seldom *answered because it is somewhat diffi*cult to give an accurate description in words. This style of stitching is much used just now on some of the best tailor gowns. Imagine the ordinary lock stitch of a sewing machine, but broken at each stitch and worked with a thick cotton or fine wool. This stitching is done in rows of three or five, close together, so as to form stripes on a colored background, or carried out in any design in white or colors. Wool ratines, or sponge cloths, as they are sometimes called, are seen with a fancy border made of this stitching in coarse white cotton or thread. Black and navy coating suits have been seen finished with rows of agaric in the same color. It makes an excessively smart and yet neat way of trimming a plain tailor made.

Selecting a Hat

IN the opinion of the milliner there are five golden rules to be observed when choosing a hat.

First appearances are the safest. Be judged by the first rapid impression which the looking glass affords.

Study the color of the eye before any other consideration.

Be certain that the headpiece fits. As every head is individual in shape, to fit a bandeau suitably means a great deal from the point of view of comfort and becomingness.

See yourself in a full length mirror before making a decision. A hat often looks well in its relation to head and shoulders where it fails ignominiously as the crowning piece of the whole figure.

Have the hair well dressed before *embarking on a hat choosing expedi*tion.

Cleaning Day Hints

TO clean straw matting use a cloth wet in clean salty water, washing until clean, but wetting no more than necessary, then wiping dry at once. Do only a small space at one time, drying as it is washed, until the whole has been gone over.

For cleaning furniture a mixture of three parts linseed oil and one of turpentine, well shaken, is recommended. *Use only a very little at one time, rub*bing well and polishing with a dry cloth until all the oil is rubbed into the wood or removed. Use a woolen rag. This is said not only to hide all scratches and disfigured parts, but restores the wood to its natural color and gives it a fine luster.

Baby's Finger Nails

IF you want your baby to have pretty finger nails when it is grown up, don't cut them at all until after the first anniversary of its birth. You may, however, manicure them daily by delicately pushing back the cuticle with a soft cloth dampened with sweet oil, but never clip about the base of the nail, as this makes the cuticle tough and thick of texture. Never neglect to rub a little cold cream on the baby's nails the last thing at night, for that will keep them so flexible that no matter how long they may grow before the end of the first twelvemonth they will not break off unevenly.

AFTER BITTER MEDICINE.

A thing worth knowing when one has to take bitter medicine is this: A small pinch of salt will remove all taste of bitterness from the mouth.

A SAFE PLAYGROUND FOR THE BABY

THE NEW PLAY BOX.

FOR the wee baby who is just able to walk about nothing is nicer than one of the new play boxes that are luxuriously lined with shirred silk over cot*ton batting. The play box has no bottom and moves readily on casters, and* the sides are too high for the small occupant to climb or fall over. When not in use the playground may be folded up.

HARLEQUIN PARASOLS ARE THE FAD

WHITE PARASOL WITH BLACK DOTS.

WHITE taffeta parasols have appliqued dots of black velvet. The more im*mense the dots the smarter the parasol.* This typical harlequin parasol has both tulle and dots of black velvet on a white background, and the sunshade handle of ebony is trimmed with a black and white cordelliere loop.
