AMONG the MINES

A Banner Year for Silver-Lead Mining St Eugene Ships.

It seems quite natural that the placer fields of Southeast Kootenay should again revive the spirits of enterprising miners and capitalists.

Nineteen hundred and four has certainly been a banner year for silver-lead mining, as well as the coal and coke industry of Southeast Kootenay. The big hydraulic companies operating on Wild Horse creek are in active operation and large quantities of gravel is being moved.

There is an ever increasing demand for more smelter capacity in Southeast Kootenay, and this demand will continue, for the reason that thousands of men are engaged in mining and developing what is destined to be one of the greatest ore producing sections of British Columbia.

It is safe to say that two of the greatest silver lead mines of the world are tributary to the town of Cranbrook.

In Southeast Kootenay coal mining has greatly increased and now has reached a place that should make the Crow's Nest collieries a million ton shipper this year.
