Many Activities to Mark Anniversary of Armistice

TO DECORATE MEMORIAL

The program has been practically completed for the activities of the members of the Canadian Legion in which it is hoped they will have the support of everyone in the district. Thanksgiving-Armistice week presents the most outstanding anniversary which the veterans commemorate and marks the anniversary of events which should be kept green in the remembrance of all.

The activities of the week-end will start on Saturday, November 6th, with the sale of the familiar poppies. This will be continued on Monday, the 8th, and is in charge of the girls of the High School literary society, who have undertaken this patriotic work, and can be relied upon to carry it out thoroughly. A window display of the poppies will be made at the Cranbrook Drug & Book Co. store on Thursday of this week.

Sunday Services

On Sunday, November 7th, at 2 p.m. members of the legion will meet to parade to the cemetery for the decoration of the graves of deceased veterans, and the same evening, at 8.30 p.m., following the usual church services, a united armistice-thanksgiving service will be held the same as in previous years. Rev. H. V. McNeill is taking charge of this service and on the platform will be all the local ministers. A special order of service has been prepared in which there are familiar hymns, and parts of the service are to be taken by all the ministers. It is hoped that the public will attend this service in large numbers. An offering is to be taken to assist in meeting the necessary expenses of the occasion. During the regular services at the churches that day, it is planned to place wreaths on the various memorials which the churches have for their own members which will be done by some member of the Legion.

The Big Dance

On Monday, Thanksgiving Day, the veterans are holding their annual armistice dance at the Auditorium, arrangements for which have now been completed, and by which it is assured this event will be one of the biggest of the season and it is hoped the most successful of the many big dances the veterans have yet held. The grand march will be led off at 10 o'clock sharp. Good snappy music has been arranged for, with some novelty numbers and unusual decorations. The refreshments being arranged for will also be unusually good.

On Thursday of next week, November 11th, at 11 o'clock the two minutes' silence to mark the hour of the armistice will be observed, Mayor Roberts publishing in this issue his proclamation to this effect. At this time there will be a short service at the war memorial on Baker Street when a wreath will be placed on the memorial by the Legion, and other organizations, as well as the public in general, are urged to co-operate in these services. The "Last Post" will also be sounded by a bugler.

MORE NAMES BEING SUGGESTED FOR CIVIC OFFICES

Discussions in regard to civic affairs are apparently going on quite briskly in some quarters, and possible names are being canvassed who might be considered as candidates for the vacancies. In addition to the mayor elected every year, the terms of Aldermen MacPherson, Fink and Cameron expire this year, as the three two-year aldermen, and another has to be elected to fill the unexpired term of a year of H. B. Hicks. In addition to the names which have been mentioned previously as possibilities, J. A. Arnold, former alderman, is now being mentioned as another who might be willing to accept nomination again.

On the school board there are three vacancies to fill. F. H. Dezall, the chairman, and Mrs. J. Jackson and W. Henderson are the retiring three. Mr. Dezall has not yet made up his mind fully as to whether he will again be in the running, but it is stated both Mrs. Jackson and Mr. Henderson are willing to stand again. On the Police Commission W. F. Attridge is the one whose two-year term expires.

Returns from England

Mrs. Frank Doodson and little daughter returned on Wednesday of last week from a visit to England, being accompanied back from Montreal by Mr. Doodson, who met them there.

Commence Badminton

The badminton club formed in connection with the Odd Fellows' and Rebekah lodges commenced play on Tuesday evening at the Auditorium, when a good start was made for what promises to be a good season. It is probable that two courts will be arranged in the hall, and play will take place two or three nights a week. F. G. Morris is president of the club, A. E. Leigh vice-president, and Miss Gracie Higgin the secretary-treasurer.

Armistice Day

I would again like to take this opportunity of requesting the citizens to observe the Anniversary of the signing of the Armistice with the usual two minutes' silence at 11 a.m. on November 11th.

There will be a short ceremony at the War Memorial in front of the Government Building immediately following the two minutes' silence and I would like to see a large turnout of the citizens at that ceremony.

Light On Coal Strike

British Labor Leader Speaks Here on Sunday Last

LABOR PARTY'S REMEDY

A public meeting was held at the Auditorium on Sunday afternoon last, when the speaker was Mr. W. T. Newbold, a prominent Labor member of the last British parliament, when he sat for the Motherwell division of Scotland, and at present a Labor candidate in the North Derbyshire division. Mr. Newbold at the time he sat in the British parliament, was ranked as a communist, but since that time, has somewhat modified his views and has entirely left the red organization, being now re-organized as a Labor man with no more pronounced views than other leaders in that party.

Real Story Not Known

The meeting here was held under the auspices of the Cranbrook Labor party, and T. H. Brondson, who acted as chairman, stated that the meeting was called as part of the educative program that the party had endeavored to carry out.

Mr. Newbold was speaking on the present labor crisis in England, and stated that reports which the press had carried of the present situation were not only inadequate but often incorrect. He stated it was not possible yet to give the real history of the recent big general strike in Britain until the present coal miners' stoppage had ceased. This had now been in progress for twenty-six weeks, and he did not expect any cessation of the strike for sometime yet. It was true that one hundred thousand miners had broken away from the strike, but this only represented about 10 per cent of the miners' body. While it would be possible for him to give a very definite insight into the causes of the strike, Labor leaders were pledged not to do so, as it was felt this would affect the position of both sides and also the moderate and extreme Labor leaders.

In general terms he stated the main cause of the present strike was dissatisfaction with conditions arising out of a general stagnation which had affected industry in the British Isles. He instanced the shipyards, where he had never seen such a slackness as now existed. Yards were only working on a small fraction of their capacity.

Uses of Coal Decline

The speaker traced the change in England's industrial condition, and showed how this affected the consumption of coal. From a heavy producer of coal the condition had changed to one of over-production due to a general industrial depression in all lines—and as they knew only one trade there were many miners out of work; 400,000 was his estimate of those who would have to find new employment, out of 1,200,000 mine workers.

He showed also how fuel oil in marine work hydro-electric in foreign countries and the post-war delivery of German shipping tonnage had caused a big slump in the consumption of coal. The unemployment at the present time was over one million.

There had been brief periods of better times, such as, for instance, when the French taking control of the Ruhr district had controlled the output of German coal. A little later there had been a stoppage in the mines of the United States. By 1924 and 1925 conditions were just as bad as ever, and the government at that time had seen fit to fix the minimum wage for the miners and later gave the owners a subsidy to maintain the wage standard.

He claimed the present strike had arisen through the government refusing to renew this subsidy and the mine owners being unable to meet the increased wages and at the same time demanding of the miners a longer workin day, from seven hours to eight hours on the job, and demanding to make separate agreements for the various district instead of a national agreement.

Mr. Newbold asserted that it mattered litt'e so far as the cost went, whether the government paid the money out in subsidies or in relief that would be necessary when wages dropped below a certain level. He condemned the attitude of Premier Baldwin on the strike, asserting that as a large shareholder in one of the coal companies, he had kept this interest foremost. He said that Mr. Baldwin had taken up a biased attitude favoring the coal owner, but Winston Churchill, Chancellor British Exchequer, had seemed more reasonable. The extra one hour which the coal owners wished to add to the working day of the miners, Mr. Newbold claimed, would save twelve million, five hundred thousand pounds in wages, which the coal owners would get.

Urged to Emigrate

Referring to the labor bureaus in operation in Britain, Mr. Newbold stated that the unemployed there were being strongly urged to emigrate to Canada, where they were given to understand there were plenty of jobs on the railways, on the land and in other directions. He hinted very broadly that large Canadian business organizations were interested in this emigration movement, and went so far as to say that the unemployed were given to understand that if they did not consider coming to Canada they would lose the support they were getting from the government. If a wholesale emigration of this kind was put into effect, and twenty-five thousand men came to the west, some would doubtless find their way to Cranbrook and Kimberley, the inference Mr. Newbold left being that this would be to the detriment of labor at present enjoying better conditions here. He stated that the same people who owned the coal mines and railways in Britain, also held interests in the Canadian mines and railways.

Labor's Solution

In asnwer to some questions which were put to him, Mr. Newbold gave some interesting information on the coal mining industry in Britain, and also outlined the solution which the Labor party has to offer. Speaking in regard to the royalty system, whereby the landowners collected a small royalty from the coal output, although this amounted in the aggregate to about seven million pounds, he did not consider this was as serious a burden as the system of private ownership. He outlined half-a-dozen different ways in which the mines in Britain are operated, such as by leasing owners, companies controlled by banks, landowners themselves operating the mines, and other systems, and said that the colossal inefficiency of many of the older mines would have to be remedied. Some mines would even have to be closed entirely. The Labor party stood for taking over the operating of mines, as a government department, with a representative body made up from all departments, and these would involve a general organization of the industry. The Old Country idea, he scathingly stated, was to cut wages and lengthen hours, whereas in this country the system was to work the machinery to death and then scrap it. Firmly fixed ideas as to production methods held in Britain, and the machinery had not been generally brought into use. Naturally the reconstruction of the industry would involve an immense expense, and the Labor party held to the opinion that the State provide this money and not profit should be expected from the industry for at least five years, but as it was undoubtedly the key to all industries, it should be brought up to the highest possible pitch of efficiency.

The chairman closed the meeting with a few remarks, drawing attention to the fact that Mr. Newbold had completely severed his connection with the communist party.

SESSIONS OF RURAL DEANERY HELD LAST WEEK IN CRANBROOK

Rural-Decanal meetings were held in Cranbrook on October 27th, 28th and 29th, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week. The visiting clergy arrived on Wednesday, those present being the Venerable Archdeacon Graham, rector of Nelson; Rev. S. Newby, vicar of Creston; Rev. H. U. Oswald, rector of Fernie; Rev. W. J. Crick, vicar of Kimberley; and the rural dean, Rev. F. V. Harrison.

The vicars of Golden, Michel and Windermere were unable to be present.

The sessions commenced with a celebration of Holy Communion in Christ Church, at 8 a.m., on St. Simon's and St. Jude's Day, the celebrant being the rural dean. All sessions and meals were held at the rectory. There were papers and discussions on hymnology, parochial and church problems; worship and the holy communion; and outline sermons. An important matter of business was the apportionment of the Diocesan Block Assessment to the various parishes of the rural deanery and also the bishopric revenue account.

SPEAKER SETS FORTH PROHIBITIONISTS VIEWS ON BIG QUESTION

Speaking to an audience which filled to capacity the United Church on Sunday evening last, the Rev. R. J. McIntyre, provincial organizer for the prohibition party, gave an exhaustive address on the matter of world-wide prohibition. In introducing his subject, he stated that it was not in any way a popular one. Choosing as a subject for his address, he read from the second chapter of Habakkuk and the 18th verse. He stated that the drink question was an age-long evil, as old as Noah. The speaker quoted from various passages of scripture to indicate the opinion held by men of all times with regard to it. He stated that as far as the prohibition party was concerned, the fight was by no means a local one, the prohibition forces were linked up with nations and countries which encircled the world, instancing such countries as Rumania and other eastern and central European peoples who had adopted or were adopting certain measures of prohibition. Even in Scotland, such a place as Stewarton had a local option. He pointed to the fact that in every place the evils of the liquor business were being recognized, and he urged that the people bestir themselves to oppose the forces which were organized in their own interest for the continuance of the traffic. He claimed that the Church could put it out of business if it would, while their opponents would put the Church out of business if they could. He felt that it was a significant fact that industrial and fraternal organizations all had regulations with regard to the use of alcohol by their employees or members. It was known that liquor had created an appetite for itself, and that it was not a natural one in any way. He felt that from a business standpoint it was the most unfair competition which the business man had. The man who drinks not only is making himself useless in a business way, but depriving himself and family of money that should go into other channels.

An Outlaw Business

He felt that it had passed too long as a clean legitimate business. He [illegible] province were now all bar tenders. He regretted the spectacle of the premier of the province posing as it were with apron on dealing out liquor to the people. It had become our bottle that was being given to the people. The speaker then traced the various systems of legislation which had been adopted in an endeavor to cope with the question, instancing first the high licence then the low, the local option under such provisions as the Scott and Duncan Acts. Then the province took hold of it in 1906. Prohibition won the day, despite the fact that their opponents tried to steal the vote. This resulted in a certain measure of prohibition. This was an improvement on the barroom, although there still existed the home brew and the drug store sales under doctors' prescriptions. The abuse of the doctors' prescription system brought disgrace to an honored profession. There were bootleggers then as there are now. Then the party of moderationists who claimed that with the government control, bootlegging would cease, and crime also lessened. It was also claimed that there would be a restoration of respect for law and order. He claimed that not one of the promises had been fulfilled.

With respect to the position and attitude of the distillers, he quoted Mr. Manson's speech in the House with respect to them. It was plainly to be seen, and admitted by many, that the matter of obtaining liquor under this act was not a difficult one, and bootlegging, instead of decreasing, was on the increase. He quoted figures to show how the consumption of alcohol had increased. He claimed it proved that government control did not control, neither does moderation moderate. The beer licenses were then brought in to save people from drunkenness, it being felt that this would reduce the liquor bill, but this on the contrary had increased it by two million dollars, one hundred million gallons more spirituous liquors being consumed. The beer parlor in his mind was but the school of drunkenness. He claimed that the prohibition party was not fighting any particular brand of liquor, but fighting alcoholism.

The Local Plebiscite

With reference to the local situation, in which it was proposed to put beer parlors in Cranbrook, he considered that this was a step in the wrong direction, as it was a return to the system of private profits with all its evils. He claimed that in the province there were 251 beer parlor licences, 71 liquor stores and 72 clubs. Of these beer parlors, 63 were in Vancouver. Instead of abolishing the bar, it was but a return to it in another form. In the beer parlor one could be comfortably seated to drink instead of standing up.

With regard to the use of alcohol in its various forms, he said that alcohol was not a stimulant but a narcotic. The speaker claimed that the new light which science was shedding on the subject of the drink habit would assist materially in its eventual elimination.

With respect to the situation in the United States, he claimed that the result had been a pentacost as far as the Church was concerned, and that in every way the people were profiting by the change in system, and that there was no chance of them reverting to the former state. He claimed that it was also being recognized by many that the business had to go for the sake of the boys and girls. The outlook, he claimed, was very bright, the people were about to rise in their might and save the country from the evils of this curse. Another aid to the solution of the problem was the education of the boys and girls through science and the light of God shed about.

Mr. McIntyre also spoke at the morning service in the Baptist Church.

Acclamation for Dr. King

No Conservative Opposition to be Offered Minister at By-Election

NOMINATION TUESDAY

When Dr. King, East Kootenay member in the federal house and the newly designated minister of health and soldiers' re-establishment, arrives in the city this week-end, to be present for the nominations Tuesday next, he will find waiting for him an acclamation, the first he has been handed in the twenty-three years he has been in public life in the East Kootenays.

Conservatives in the riding have met, and decided they would not offer any opposition to the return of Dr. King in the by-election set for the 16th, and it is altogether likely, therefore, that he will be elected by acclamation. The only other likelihood would be the entrance of a labor or independent candidate, but with little over a week before polling, it would not be humanly possible for any candidate to enter the election with any chance of success.

During his stay in the district this week-end Dr. King has consented to meet representatives of the Canadian Legion from Fernie, Corbin, Michel, Cranbrook Kimberley and Creston, who will assemble at the Legion headquarters here, and to discuss with them matters particularly affecting the returned men.

YOUNG MAN OF MOYIE FAMILY PASSES AWAY SATURDAY LAST

Came From Prairies Last Winter—Succumbs to Typhoid

Residents of Moyie particularly heard with regret the news of the passing on Saturday last, at the St. Eugene Hospital, of Joseph Roy Braiden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Braiden, of that place. Two or three months ago he had been taken with an attack of appendicitis, for which he had undergone an operation. Only two weeks or so following this he had contracted typhoid fever, from which he finally succumbed, after an illness of five weeks. He was still in his youth, being eighteen years and six months old. He was employed at the Concentrator since coming to Moyie last December with his family, and was well liked among the young people of the town, and quite fond of athletics of all kinds. He leaves besides his sorrowing parents five sisters and two brothers. He was born at Pense, Sask., and the family had previously lived in the prairie province before coming to this district.

The funeral took place on Monday afternoon from the United Church here, Rev. Mr. Fleming, of Moyie, conducting the service. There were many floral tributes in evidence, showing the respect the deceased had gained for himself during his short residence there. The pall bearers were all friends from Moyie, Messrs. W. and B. Desaulniers, W. Montpellier, N. Gosslin, N. and A. Baake. Interment was made in the local cemetery.

NEW MINISTER ASKS LEGION'S CO-OPERATION

From THE LEGIONARY

Assurances of sympathy with the assurances of the Canadian Legion of the B.E.S.L. were given by Hon. Dr. J. H. King, newly appointed Minister of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment and Health, in a recent interview with a representive of the Legionary. Dr. King said he hoped to have the valuable advice and co-operation of the united organization in endeavoring to meet problems of the present and future affecting those groups under the the purview of his department. He expressed particular gratification that practically all the organizations had come together, and the belief that as a consequence the opinions of hte united body undoubtedly would carry more weight when placed before Parliament.

The new minister has plunged into his duties with an evident desire to acquaint himself with all phases of the department's work. The Legionary representative found him busily engaged at his desk on a Saturday afternoon. His first assertion was that he would never be too busy to discuss the work of the department with those who were in a position to give him competent advise.

Open to Suggestions

"You may convey this message to the officers and members of the Canadian Legion. As long as I am Minister of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment any proposals or suggestions that the Legion may desire to make to assist this department in fulfilling its purpose will be gladly received and will be given the most careful and sympathetic consideration."

Dr. King proceeded to outline his conception of the functions of the department.

"The D.S.C.R. and the Board of Pension Commissioners were created to make provision, insofar as it is humanly possible, for those who suffer from the effects of disabilities attributable to or incurred during war service, and for the dependents of those who were killed or die as a result of such service. The co-operation of all Canadians, and particularly of the veterans' organizations, is necessary to attain this objective.

"I have always held that matters relating to pensions, re-establishment, etc., should be kept entirely out of politics. The fulfilment of the national duty towards our war sufferers calls for the earnest consideration of Parliament as a whole. As far as I am concerned, no political considerations will be permitted to interfere with the proper functioning of the department."

Work for the Department

In response to questions as to the future of the D.S.C.R., Dr. King said: "I believe there will be need for this department for a long time to come. With the passage of time the problems of the disabled and dependents, as you realize, have a tendency to become more complicated. You have mentioned the prematurely aged. Already some provision has

The GOLDEN COCOON by RUTH CROSS

SYNOPSIS

Molly Cochran, wife of the Governor, threatened with exposure of an innocent but suspicious-appearing incident in her girlhood life, leaves a note telling her husband she is determined to follow a literary career, and goes from Texas to New York. There she reads an article in a newspaper telling of her drowning when a canoe capsized. In reality she has voluntarily "lost" herself rather than imperil her husband's political career.

CHAPTER XXVII

One vicious hot morning in late August—two Augusts after the war had broken out in Europe—the bureau from which Molly had occasional part-time work called up. Myron Eldredge had a book to be typed. His secretary had quit in a huff. He was a difficult man to work for, and he had the vilest handwriting on earth. Would she care to try it?

Molly would. At that particular juncture she would have undertaken to type a book in ancient Atlantean for Beelzebub, prince of Devils.

Myron Eldredge's apartment was in one of those awe-inspiring new studio places overlooking an ancient square. Twelve stories up, a trim maid opened the door and ushered into the most beautiful room she had ever seen.

The maid returned to say that Mr. Eldredge would see her directly. Did she care to look over the manuscript? She led the way to a smaller room, beautiful, too, after its fashion, but very simply furnished with a typewriter desk, a chair or two, and a chintz-covered day bed.

When Molly saw the manuscript her heart fainted within her. She had not supposed that any handwriting could prove too much for her, but this was a genus all its own. After thirty minutes of the most concentrated effort of which she was capable, she had made out less than a dozen words. She pushed the manuscript from her. In the acuteness of her disappointment tears rushed involuntarily to her eyes—spattered on the mahogany desk.

At that moment, the door opened and Myron Eldredge came in—or rather bolted in. His every movement had the abrupt, jarring energy of a man who keeps his internal motor running all the time at top speed. He paused in the doorway to light a cigarette, and Molly made short shrift with the tears. She had time even for a fleeting observation or two. He was tall, wiry, lean-brown; the lean-brownness emphasized rather startlingly by the light summer things he wore. Stubby, light-brown hair, ironic steel-gray eyes behind huge, tortoise-shell glasses, a face seamed and corded with over-work and over-hurry—she guessed that he was at least ten years younger than he looked.

"Stop that infernal machine a minute, won't you?" he ordered irritably.

He seemed in no hurry now, however. He stood there smoking and looking at Molly with a detached, impersonal sort of interest; sizing her up, no doubt, as a possible interpreter of Sanscrit.

"Pardon me," he said at last, "but you do look too absurdly young—in that straight-up-and-down thing with the white—what do you call 'em—collars and cuffs? Ah, I have it," he breathed a sigh of relief, "you look precisely like a little choir boy in vestment—that picture, you know . . . ." That was what he had been trying to puzzle out.

"Hum-m! I see. . . ." He lighted another cigarette and offered her one, which she refused. "And so you've given me up, too?" he observed presently. "Well, you're the sixteenth in the last day and a half—and this weather, too. I'm just about threadbare." He ran a tentative handkerchief round inside his collar, took off the glasses and mopped his forehead. "Nothing short of blackmail, anyhow, you know, that accursed female leaving me in the hole like this—sabotage. She knows she's the only person on earth who can read my handwriting."

"Perhaps if you could help me a little. . . ." Molly suggested.

He stared. "I? My dear young lady, you don't imagine for a minute that I can read it, do you?" When Molly made no answer, but only went on gazing despairingly at the manuscript, he added with an abrupt, pouncing glance, "They told you I was willing to pay double the usual rates, didn't they? This thing's got to be in the hands of the printers not later than the fifteenth of September. . . ."

"Surely you can help me a little," Molly said again, wearily. "You must know at least what it's about."

He gave her another pouncing glance—humorous and a trifle uncertain. Then he pulled up a chair. For an hour they struggled together over the first chapter.

"If you can make out with it somehow, I'm your debtor for life."

At four o'clock he returned. He propped himself with pillows in a corner of the couch, lighted a cigar—then tossed the pillows across the room with a muttered ejaculation that they were "too damned hot." Soon he was absorbed in comparing Molly's freshly typed sheets with the original.

Thirty minutes later he suddenly left off shuffling papers. "For the love of Heaven, stop that infernal machine a m'nute won't you?" he ordered irritably. "It's getting on my nerves—it and this beastly heat." Then as Molly's flying fingers hung suspended over the keyboard, "Besides, I want to ask you a question or two."

"Well. . . ?" she said, without turning round. She supposed it was something about the manuscript.

He got up, took off the tortoise-shell glasses, and came over to the other side of the desk. He stood so for some minutes looking down at her—still with that detached, impersonal sort of interest. "You take it from me, you can't buck this game—not by yourself. You're not made that way. They'll knock you down and shove you under and trample on you, and nobody'll ever be the wiser. I know you're up against it and up against it hard, or you'd never have tackled that hellish job there. Now you just accept a little fatherly advice. Clear out for Dixie and your own folks—and clear out quick!"

There was a moment's silence, then Molly said, "You're very kind, but I'm afraid I can't clear out."

"You haven't got the money?"

She glanced away from him. "That's not all. . . ."

"You haven't murdered somebody, have you?" His eyes twinkled. Molly hadn't noticed how nice they were when he had the irritation out of them and the ugly big glasses off. "Anyhow, they don't hold that against you long in Texas!"

"How do you know I'm from Texas?"

"Thy tongue betrayeth thee, fair chorister." His mouth twisted humorously over the fresh cigar he was in the act of lighting.

At the outside door downstairs the breathless maid overtook her with an envelope. It contained her pay—double rates, as he had said—for a week in advance.

CHAPTER XXVIII

Two weeks later Eldredge came down to Molly's place one evening to bring the final chapters of the book. It was September then, and one of the sudden shifts of climate made a little fire on the hearth pleasant.

"Nice spot you've made for yourself here," he observed, as he stretched his long lean body in an easy chair before the grate. His eyes registered critical approval—approval and something besides.

"I did it all myself," Molly hastened to explain, "bought the things at auction—then dyed, painted and upholstered."

He nodded. "I know. Some women have the trick—take a dry-goods box and make a home out of it."

"I'm not really so badly off as it looked that day," she went on after a slight hesitation, "not quite. I let two rooms here, which takes care of my rent. Of course, there are tight squeezes, but—I'm afraid the truth is, I prefer to be poor."

"Um-m! So. . . ."

"You see, I like having my mind for myself."

"Hum-m! And what, if I may ask, do you do with your mind?"

She made a longer pause. When she spoke there was a faint tinge of defiance in her voice: "I'm trying to write. I've sold a story or two, but what I want is to do plays. . . ."

Eldredge let out a low, profoundly impressed whistle. "The Lord have mercy upon your soul! No money—nothing—wants to write plays. . . ."

MARYSVILLE NOTES

Another bright and lilting dance was held in the "Old Post Office" on Thursday, the 28th. Mr. James', the well-known good time-keeper, one-man band dispersed the music. There was a real old-fashioned break-down dance, and many of the old tunes were played, and also some of the comparatively new tunes. The "Spanish Valse" was danced with charm and grace. Messrs. Smith and Hill, from the Concentrator, played the violin during the evening. Thanks are due Messrs. Bartholomew, organizer; Hill and Smith for playing; also to Mesdames Robichaud (who kindly sold the gentlemen ribbons for admission), Stuart, Phillips and Bidder; and, of course, we must not forget the ladies and gentlemen also who served the refreshments, etc. The dance broke up in the wee sma' hours, and it is certain that all had a jolly time together. Come again, friends, one and all! Present were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Caire, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Crowe, Mr. and Mrs. McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. Bartholomew, Mr. and Mrs. E. Bidder, Mr. and Mrs. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart, Mr. and Mrs. Al. Phillips, Mrs. Robichaud, Mrs. Tibbetts, Mr. and Mrs. Chenowith, Mr. and Mrs. George Frieake, Mr. and Mrs. John Horman, Mrs. J. Pattinson, Mrs. Blaney, Mr. Bradley and Miss Gregory, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Roberts; also Messrs. Ed. Frieake, Alf. Bidder, George James (musician), Wm. Bidder, Harry Bidder, A. Hill, Evans, Garden, Hogg, Beckswith, Gowanlock, C. McKechnie, Dr. Rowland, Pollock, H. Roberts, Lamarre, Jack Bell, Slye, Holmes, Fred Oliver, B. Deamel, Earl Mellor and friend, E. James, George Turner, Warren Keer, Jimmy Lemmon, Don Lemmon, B. Shannon, George Stuart, Len. Glanville, and the Misses Gregory, Cunliffe, Gundy, Althoff, E. Tibbetts, Lamarre, Shea, Blaney, Herchmer, Holmes. The next dance will be held on Thursday, November 11th. All are welcome!

Mrs. B. Lundin and Alfie visited Mrs. Bartholomew on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Chenowith are visiting with their mother and sisters.

Mr. Don Tibbetts, Stanley and B. Roberts are all out of hospital after their operations for tonsilitis.

We wish Mr. and Mrs. Norman Deamel, who were married at the Anglican Church, Cranbrook, every happiness through life. The newly-weds have taken up residence in Kimberley.

The town boys were around for All-Hallow's eve with a fine display of fireworks. That's the way, boys! Just innocent fun harms no one, and causes no hard feelings.

The senior boys and girls were around for "Holy Eve"—All Hallows. At the Bartholomews a very enjoyable time was spent. "The Prisoner's Song" and "A Letter edged in Black" were sung. Just a cheery crowd of stalwart boys and girls. We missed some of the old faces who have gone away to other places, and into various vocations.

The writer wonders how many people have read "an Encyclical" appearing in the various papers in the country, telling of a feast which is to be held on the last Sunday of October.

Mr. John Horman met with an accident to his foot at the Concentrator on Saturday afternoon, we regret to say.

How to Play BRIDGE

A new series of lessons by Wynne Ferguson
Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

Copyright 1926, by Hoyle, Jr.

ARTICLE No. 1

The writer has often referred to the charm of the unexpected at auction. When you think you have an invincible hand, a bad "break" surprises and disconcerts you and you only make one or two odd. On the other hand, the game has its compensation, for how often does an apparently worthless hand turn out to be a big winner! Very often the one picture card in the hand is just the one to make your partner's hand invincible, and so turn apparent defeat to an unexpected victory. "Never say die" is just as good a motto for auction bridge as for anything else. Here is a good example of the hopeless hand turning out to be a winner. Z dealt and held the following hand:

Hearts — Q, 4, 2
Clubs — 8, 7, 5, 2
Diamonds — 10, 7, 6
Spades — 7, 3, 2

Naturally he passed, and probably with the thought: "Here goes game." His partner, however, had a most remarkable hand:

Hearts — A, J, 9, 8, 7, 5, 3
Clubs — none
Diamonds — none
Spades — A, Q, J, 10, 9, 5

The bid finally reached five hearts, was doubled and Z's partner redoubled. He just made the bid, losing only one spade and one heart trick. Z's one face card, the queen of hearts, saved the day, and Z's hand which looked so hopeless really contained the element of victory. Never despair and never give up a rubber until your opponents actually win it. Until they do, there is always hope and that is what makes auction bridge the greatest of card games.

In preceding articles the writer has often referred to the 4-4-4-1 type of hand and strongly advised an effort to find a suit bid with such a hand, one that best fits in with the partner's hand. Here are two good examples:

Hand No. 1

Hearts — A, Q, 8, 6
Clubs — K, 8, 4, 2
Diamonds — 7, 6, 5, 3
Spades — 8

	Y
	Z

No score, rubber game. Z dealt, bid one no-trump and A passed. What should Y bid? Y should undoubtedly bid two hearts. This type of hand, 4-4-4-1, is seldom suitable for no-trump, so overbid your partner's no-trump with that one of the four card suits which offers the best possibilities. In this case, the heart suit is fairly strong and should be bid.

	Z

Hearts — K, J, 9, 7
Clubs — A, 9, 6, 2
Diamonds — 7
Spades — K, Q, 10, 4

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one spade. A passed and Y bid one no-trump. If B passed, what should Z now bid? Z should bid two hearts. If Y cannot help the spade bid, he should have good help for hearts and a game is very possible. On the other hand, if Z passes and lets Y play the hand at no-trump, his opponents may run off five diamonds and so save game. With this type of hand, 4-4-4-1, try to find the suit bid that best fits the combined hands. If you do, you nearly always score game. Hands with this type of distribution come up very frequently, several times in an evening's play, so if you know how to handle them you will make many a game not otherwise possible.

It's not often that a good fifty-two card problem is presented but here is one just from England and it certainly is a teaser. Try your luck, but if you cannot solve it don't be discouraged, for it will puzzle the great majority of players

Problem No. 1

	Hearts — Q, 5, 4, 3, 2 Clubs — A, K, 8 Diamonds — A, K, 6 Spades — 10, 9
Hearts — A, J, 9, 8, 7 Clubs — Q, 3, 2 Diamonds — 10, 4, 3 Spades — Q, J	Y A B Z	Hearts — K, 10 Clubs — J, 10, 9, 4 Diamonds — Q, J, 9, 8 Spades — 7, 4, 3
	Hearts — 6 Clubs — 7, 6, 5 Diamonds — 7, 5, 2 Spades — A, K, 8, 6, 5, 2

No score, first game. Z dealt and bid one spade. A passed, Y bid one no-trump, B passed and Z bid two spades. All passed and A opened the ace of hearts. He then played the queen of spades. How can Z so play the hand that he can win the balance of the tricks against any defense? Solution in the next article.

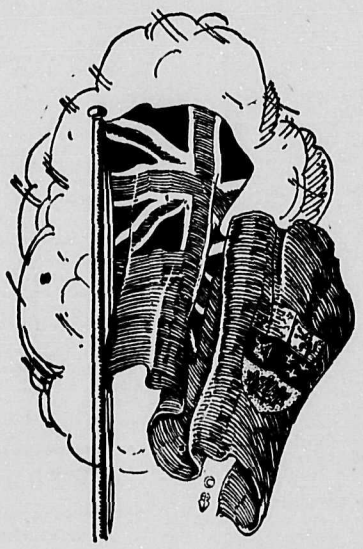
FACES EAST!



WHEN the clock strikes that unforgettable hour of 11 o'clock on the morn of Armistice Day, let not a plow turn an inch of soil . . . nor a wheel of Commerce move . . . nor a single word be spoken. Let Silence lay her golden mantle upon every field and factory . . . every home and office. And from every human heart arise a Silent Prayer of Gratitude to those brave lads who lie under the snowy white crosses of Courcellette . . in Flanders fields . . in our own Cranbrook . . or in peaceful, consecrated ground nearest the homes they gave their all to defend.

EIGHT YEARS have passed since those valiant heroes severed the chains that bound Civilization and threatened its very existence. Happily, since then a greater era has dawned. Out of the roar and smoke and sweat and agony of the great conflict, mankind has reached a better understanding . . . a greater Spirit of Brotherhood that already has borne fruit in greater Peace and Prosperity! May it last for all time!

YET --- let's not forget the price paid for it all. Let's pay reverent homage to those sleeping heroes whose deeds from 1914 to 1918 covered the pages of history with glory . . . whose courage, unselfishness and love of country and flag prompted them to make the Supreme Sacrifice so that we, who remain might continue to breathe the air of Security, Freedom and Happiness! We can never repay them, but we CAN offer them a silent tribute. 'Tis by turning our ---

THE EIGHTH ANNIVERSARY

WHILE it may be true that the passage of time is healing the war wounds of the nations of the world, and as the years go by the danger of another world-enveloping cataclysm becomes more remote, these things do not necessarily mean that in the Canadian calendar there is no permanent place to be found for Armistice Day, nor should it be taken to mean that because the government has seen fit to couple the two together in some way, that one or other of the aniversaries should be lost sight of. The government decided to keep the date of Thanksgiving intact, and add to it the idea of Armistice Day, but there is also a lot to be said for making Armistice Day the holiday and tacking on to it the occasion for Thanksgiving. The time is not yet when we should "forget the war," and it will not be till there are no Michael O'Learys found to be in want, and there are no more veterans find it easiest to "go west" by way of a gun on a park bench. The flaming red of the Flanders' poppy means a lot more than the defeat of one army on the field by another, more even that the untimely death of so many of Canada's sons—it is the symbol of a new world outlook, and should be made to stand as the symbol of justice at home for those whose mental as well as physical wounds cannot be healed by time, and whose difficulties are found to be increasing instead of mitigating as time goes on. A lot of people would like to forget the war, more still would like to be allowed to forget it, but for this present generation the lesson of the red poppy is still sorely needed.

MORE FREE ADVERTISING

ONE of the big department stores at the Coast which recently completed a costly addition to its premises has had special editions of a Vancouver paper sent out describing in detail the excellencies of the work which has been completed, and incidentally never failing to stress the importance of their merchandising service to the shopper of the province. It is without doubt a mercantile achievement in which the Coast, and perhaps the rest of the province, can point to with pride, but looking at the special edition with the cold-blooded, if perhaps not altogether disinterested viewpoint of the weekly newspaperman, the Herald comes to the opinion that it would form some excellent advertising for this mail order house for this paper to enthuse over it. The courtesy of having these things sent to the office is much appreciated but as the watchdog of the local merchants' interests—even if such a service is unappreciated—the request to "please mention" has to be turned down, and the point to the incident again stressed, which is that the out-of-town competitors of the local merchants never lose an opportunity to advertise and reach the rural shopping constituencies.

Hallowe'n passed off quite quietly in the city, not much evidence being seen of any unduely destructive or mischievous humor on the part of the young people of the city. A Ford car was turned over in one of the alleys back of Baker Street, and a few windows were marked up in various ways, but most of the young people contented themselves by going round in various get-ups and collecting their Hallowe'en toll of apples, nuts and candy. For the most part they were well treated, which perhaps accounts for the mild type of their jokes. The police did not receive the flood of calls for assistance on the part of irate citizns, such as would have been the case had the jokes of the evening been carried too far. There were a numbr of parties, dances and social gatherings of various kinds that night, which perhaps helped to keep many occupied who might otherwise have gone out on the rampage.

Due to the non-arrival of a report which we were expecting with regard to the Teachers' Convention in Fernie last week we regret our inability to give an account of it this week. In regard to this convention, we are pleased to say that the Cranbrook delegates are unanimous in their expressions with regard to the wonderful reception accorded the visiting delegates by the Fernie citizens. The papers given were all of great interest, and we hope to have the pleasure of referring to them next week.

Mr. J. M. (Micky) Argue arrived on Sunday last from Nelson, where he has been in business for the last two years. Mr. Argue's prowess as an athlete and a ball player are well known. He will therefore be in this, and other ways, a valuable acquisition to the city. It is hoped that next year through his presence an impetus will be given to ball playing in Cranbrook.

Saturday evening a Hallowe'en party was given in the K.P. Hall by Mrs. F. M. MacPherson in honor of her young sons, Marshall and Allen. From all reports everyone present had a most enjoyable time. The company was composed principally of young people, were royally entertained from the time that they entered the hall and were received by a real honest-to-goodness ghost, until the time the Home, Sweet Home waltz brought the function to an end all too soon. Mr. Ira McNaughton assisted in the entertainment with musical selections for the dancing.

Official notification has been received of the Provincial Convention of the Conservative party at Kamloops next month, and the different points of the riding have been notified to name their delegates. Those points entitled to send a delegate, but who are unable to do so, will have their representation made up from the city in all probability, so that it is expected the full representation of ten will go from the East Kootenay, as well as Dr. Rutledge, the recent federal candidate, and N. A. Wallinger, the provincial member for Cranbrook riding.

The announcement is made that the Kimberley Follies will appear in Cranbrook on Friday, November 19. This news will be of interest to many in Cranbrook who had the pleasure of seeing their talented performance when they appeared at the Parish Hall this spring. Those who were present at that time were of the opinion that it was the best theatrical show which had taken place in the city for a number of years. It is hoped that the date will be kept in mind and good support given to the performance, which assuredly will be of much merit.

A large crowd was in attendance at the Parish Hall on Wednesday of this week, when the Anglican ladies held their annual bazaar. All the booths were busy with the throngs of ladies during the afternoon, and at the time of going to press it was not possible to get an estimate of what the proceeds might amount to. In the evening a card party was held, sixteen or seventeen tables being engaged with bridge and whist. The prize winners were, for the bridge, Miss S. D. White ladies' first; Judge Thompson, gentlemen's first; whist, Mrs. J. Doolan, ladies' first, and Mr. O'Hearn, gentlemen's.

W. J. Newbold, British Labor leader, who spent the week-end in this city and district, spent some time at Kimberley and Moyie, looking over the industrial developments in these places. He saw a great similarity between the scenery here and in the west of Scotland. Mr. Newbold's visit to this part of the country is not under any labor auspices, but is being undertaken to acquaint him with the conditions here. He left on Monday for the Windermere, addressing a meeting that evening in the schoolhouse at Invermere, which was crowded fo rthe occasion. Rev. E. C. Thatcher presided, and Mr. Newbold's forceful address, interspersed with humor, was much appreciated. He went on to Golden, and from thence to the coast.

On Wednesday evening a most enjoyable party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Redding, of the Mission. Their many guests enjoyed a very pleasant evening of dancing, the music for which was supplied by well known local artists.

Tuesday evening a representative of the Herald had the pleasure of listening in on the radio program connected with the visit of Queen Marie of Roumania. The program was broadcasted by the Spokane station, K.H.Q., and also from Seattle, Portland and Walla Walla, being relayed on from Spokane. The reception was particularly good especially from the Portland station. Previous to the short speerh given by Queen Marie herself announcement was made by some party apparently well acquainted with the reception which had been given the Roumanian Queen by the people of Spokane that day. His word picture of the Queen to the listening radio fans was exceptionally fine. This address was followed by special Roumanian musical selections by the orchestra, "Echoes from Roumania" being their first selection. This was followed by a prayer for safe keeping for the Queen, following which the Queen herself addressed her unseen audience, expressing the great pleasure that was hers at the fine reception given her and also the pleasure afforded her by the knowledge that she was speaking to people spread over the vast territory of the Dakotas, Montana, and Idaho, over which she had just passed in reaching Spokane. Her address was short and simple. She concluded with an acknowledgement of the manifestations of the goodwill shown her by all whom she had come in contact.

The concert tea given by the pupils of the high school on Friday afternoon last was a most successful affair and was thoroughly enjoyed by the large number of friends who by their presence helped to net the tidy sum of nearly $30 for the athletic fund to defray expenses of the teams to Nelson. Refreshments wer served by willing assistants, and was accompanied by an equally fine program of vocal and instrumental music, every number being much appreciated. Besides a humorous reading by Miss Smith which was very well received, the following program was rendered: Vocal solo, Miss Jessie Brown; vocal duet Misses Elizabeth Miller and Hazel Campbell; piano duet, Audrey Collier and Jean McPhee; piano solo James Drev; Piano solo, Garnet Patmore. In the evening an enjoyable dance was held when a further sum of $30 was made.

ENQUIRY INTO FIRE HAZARD TO TAKE PLACE AT GOVT. BLDG.

Word has been received at the office of the District Forestry Supervisor as to the meeting to be held in this city under the direction of the department of lands as advertised in this paper, constituting an enquiry particularly into the general fire hazard in this part of the country in the summer months. Arrangements have been made to hold this meeting in the Court room of the Government building on Tuesday, November 16th, at 7.30 p.m. It is hoped that all those who have information on this subject or who have ideas to offer along the lines of the government enquiry, will be on hand to assist as much as possible in furthering the work of controlling and combatting the forest fire menace which is constantly to be found in this district in the summer months.

PROHIBITIONISTS MEET AND ORGANIZE FOR BEER VOTE SOON

In the basement of the Baptist Church on Sunday evening last, following the regular evening services, a meeting was held of those interested in prohibition in order to effect an organization to uphold their cause in the coming plebiscite to be taken before very long on the question of the sale of beer by the glass in this city. The meeting was called primarily to allow Rev. R. J. McIntyre, provincial prohibition organizer, to meet the prohibition workers in a public meeting. Mr. McIntyre was called upon to answer many question relating to the possible procedure of the plebiscite and the organization which might be effected to offset this move on the part of those who favor the freer sale of beer in this city. Officers were elected for the organization as follows:

President ..... F. Constantine
Vice-Pres. ..... Mrs. W. " MacFarlane
Sec. Treas. ..... I. Hanna
Voters' List Commitee
Mrs. W. B. MacFarlane
Publicity Committee
Rev. B. Wallace
Finance Committee ..... G. T. Moir

These committees will be added to from time to time and other committess may also be formed as the occasion requires.

SUCCESSFUL SALE BY LADIES' AID FOR WINDERMERE HOSPITAL

(Special to The Herald)

Invermere, B.C., Nov. 1.—The annual bazaar of the Ladies' Aid to the Windermere District Hospital took place on Saturday last in the David Thompson Memorial Fort. The ladies had gone to a great deal of trouble in decorating the various stalls, and the general effect well repaid them for their efforts. The color scheme this year was in the wisteria shades, and the decorating committee, together with the stall holders, had made several hundreds of lovely wisteria blossoms and leaves, which hung gracefully from the tops and fronts of the stalls and were arranged on the tea tables, where afternoon tea was served. The stall holders were: candy stall, Mrs. Sinclair Taynton and Mrs. Dobbie; plain and fancy needlework stall, Mrs. Coy, Mrs. Tunnacliffe and Mrs. Cleland; home cooking stall, Mrs. Pitts and Mrs. William Taynton. The afternoon tea was in charge of Mrs. Erickson, Mrs. Weir and Mrs. Frater, assisted by Mrs. Fisher, Mrs. Peters and Mrs. R. G. Newton. Towards the close of the afternoon the various raffles were drawn, the following being the winners of the lucky tickets: teacosy, Mrs. Diehl; fruit-cake, Mrs. Tompkins; doll, Captain Houlgrave; handmade box of home-made candy, Mrs. Sandilands; teakettle and stand, Mrs. Chamberlain; rooster, Miss Brookes; plants, Mrs. Munson, Mrs. Tompkins and Mr. Williams.

Donations in cash amounted to $170.50, and the amounts taken in by the other stalls were: candystall, $35.00; home-cooking stall, $50.00; work stall, $180.00; afternoon tea, $26.50; the Girls' Auxiliary made $20.00 with their Orange Tree and the Grab Bag, and gave much enjoyment to the children with the toys that grew as oranges on the tree. The total proceeds amounted to $525.00, which was a gratifying result, repaying the ladies for all their strenuous work, also showing that each year the annual bazaar improves in results.

VALUABLE TALK TO BROTHERHOOD ON LEADING BOYS ARIGHT

Wednesday evening at a well attended meeting of the Cranbrook Brotherhood the members after a very enjoyable dinner had the pleasure of listening to an address by Mr. Fred Scott, which was considered to be one of the most interesting and profitable of any that has yet been their privilege to hear. The fact that no less than three members claimed an opportunity of speaking to the vote of thanks which was tendered offers some indication of the manner in which it was received.

The subject of his address, "Work among boys with a view to improved conditions among them," was one on which Mr. Scott, through his connection with the Boy Scout movement for a large number of years, was well qualified to speak. It is unfortunate that the talk could not have been heard by a larger audience, also that time permits our giving only a brief synopsis of it.

The Home Influence

In referring to the influence of surroundings the circumstances the speaker felt that the boy from the home of moderate means had an advantage over one in possibly better circumstances, instancing a case where seven boys and five girls rose to positions of prominence all being children of parents who had been born in slavery. Stephen Foster, capable of becoming one of the brightest minds of the country turned out to be but a drunken sot through lack of home influence.

With respect to responsibility of fathers and for a gauge with which one's influence might be measured he felt that the following question a pertinent one, "Is there a boy in town who would be a better boy because of me?"

Boys should be early trained to take responsibility and as a means to inculcate thrift he passed on an idea which he had come across of remunerating them for chore work that was done around the house. The boy on his part would be expected to pay for certain of his requirements based on the amount of money he received, which varied according to his age. For instance a boy of six years got ten cents per week but had to buy his own pencils, while a boy of 11 had to provide himself with stockings, gloves, ties, etc., but got 50c per week allowance. Thrift thus brought about good management.

Need a Gymnasium

Backing up, as it were, the address made in the city recently by Principal Buck in which he appealed for a gymnasium, the speaker felt that the gym. would serve as a means of focussing the energies of the boys in the right direction at all times, and we would know what our boys were doing at all times. It was up to us to listen in and to our children or someone else would be listening to them.

Other matters touched up by the speaker were the necessity of the inculcating of the proper spirit of obedience and loyalty in the boy, and teaching him at the proper time those things which are to his best interest socially and morally. Religious training in schoo's under some mutually acceptable system, the proper respect for the other fellow's property, were ably dealt with. He concluded with an interesting sketch of a supposed incident between father and son which we hope to publish at some future date.

Mr. Geo. T. Moir, Rev. Bryce Wallace and Mr. W. H. Wilson all spoke in great praise of the value of the address of the evening.

WEDDINGS

RITCHIE-BURGESS

A quiet wedding took place on Thursday evening of last week at the United Church Parsonage, when Mrs. Lizzie Burgess, of this city, and formerly of Waldo, was united in marriage to Alexander Ritchie, well known rancher of Invermere. The couple were unattended except for the witnesses, who were Mrs. A. Allen and Mr. Jas. Allen.

Mr. and Mrs. Ritchie left by car on Saturday for the Windermere, where Mr. Ritchie has quite extensive ranch interests, and where he is exceedingly well known as one of the old timers of the Columbia-Windermere districts.

SCORGIE—RICHARDSON

On Saturday evening, at the Presbyterian Manse, the wedding took place of Mr. Walter John Scorgie, mining engineer of this city and Kimberley, and Miss Geraldine Lydia Richardson, of this city, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richardson, of Windermere. Only the necessary witnesses were in attendance at the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Scorgie expect to make their home at Marysville.

been made for this group. But it is only a beginning. This is one of the problems which undoubtedly will require considerable attention in the immediate future.

"I anticipate a gradual increase in the pension bill. Pensionable disabilities which have persisted from eight to twelve years are not likely to lessen in extent, but rather to increase."

The new Minister expressed great interest in the creation and growth of the new Canadian Legion of the B.E.S.L. He asked for information as to the structure, methods of finance, and other particulars.

Value of Unity.

"I believe you are moving in the right direction," he declared. "It always was a matter of regret that when the advice of Canadian veterans was sought in the past, the multiplicity of organizations brought a diversity of representations. Sometimes it was difficult to discern what action would come closest to meeting a particular problem. It was often said by members of Parliament: 'If the veterans are not agreed as to requirement, how are we to decide what action should be taken?' I sincerely desire and hope that the efforts towards unity may be completely successful, and I am sure it will be to the mutual benefit of the men and the country."

Asked regarding the separation of Thanksgiving Day from the anniversary of Armistice Day and the commemoration of Armistice Day on its true anniversary, Dr. King said:

"I believe Armistice Day should be kept separate and apart as a day for veterans. I am heartily in sympathy with the desire of the veterans, but of course it is a matter that Parliament as a whole must decide."

Reverting to legislative matters, Dr. King was reminded of the fate of The Legion's legislative program at the last session.

"I will look forward to receiving your proposals this year, but I would ask you to submit them to me as early in the session as possible—by February at the latest. I assure you they will receive my personal consideration, and I will do my best to meet your desires," he declared.

Well Fitted for Post

The career of Dr. King would indicate his fitness to cope with the problems indigenous to the two departments under his direction—D.S.C.R. and Health. He was born in Chipman, N.B., 54 years ago, a son of Hon. G. G. King. Medicine and surgery as a profession attracted him in his youth and, after passing through the elementary and secondary schools, he attended McGill University. In 1895, at the age of 23, he graduated and spent the next three years in practice in his native province.

About this time Dr. King felt the call of the West, which was being rapidly opened up by railroad construction. He arrived in Cranbrook, British Columbia, while construction work in the Crow's Nest Pass was in progress, and commenced a strenuous and useful career there. Surgical work predominated in his practice, with the result that he fortified his skill with postgraduate terms in Rochester, London and Vienna. Subsequently he became one of the original founders and governors of the American College of Surgeons.

Enters Politics

His entry to political life came in 1903, when he was elected to the British Columbia legislature, representing Cranbrook. He retained this seat until 1909. In 1911 Dr. King was the unsuccessful candidate for Kootenay to the House of Commons. He returned to the provincial fiel, and again was elected to the Legislature in 1916, being subsequently re-elected at the provincial elections of 1920 and 1921. He accepted the portfolio of Public Works in the Brewster government in November, 1916, and the same portfolio in the Oliver government in March, 1918, holding it until January, 1922, when he resigned to accept the portfolio of Public Works in the Dominion government. He was elected to his present seat of Kootenay East, following the resignation of the sitting member at that time. He relinquished the portfolio of Public Works upon the resignation of the King government in July last. At the general election of September 14th, he was re-elected in his constituency, and subsequently appointed to the portfolio of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment and Health.

This speaks well for the tolerance and general good feeling in the entire community. Each church is now in a position of knowing accurately where each member lives and where the children attend Sunday School. The survey also indicates those who do not prefer or attend any church.

The United Church of Canada has been holding a series of World Service conventions across Canada. A great deal of interest and enthusiasm has been shown everywhere. The world-wide service of the United Church has been depicted by lectures, maps and literature. A group of keenly interested laymen in the East have been defraying most of the cost of these conventions. The last one will be held in Vancouver on the 9th and 10th of this month. Every minister of this Church can get to this meeting free of cost, while greatly reduced rates are open for lay members of the Church.

About forty young people assembled in the Sunday School room of the United Church on Tuesday evening, when Mrs. Bryce Wallace gave a most interesting paper on the life and works of Pauline Johnson, Indian princess and authoress. At the conclusion a spirited discussion took place on Canadian authors, books and magazines. Almost every member took part in the debate, which proved at times amusing, yet was highly educational. Mr. F. Buck, president, skilfully directed the discussion.

CURLERS ARRANGE DATE FOR BIG BONSPIEL HERE

Wednesday evening the semi-annual meeting of the Curling Club took place in the City Hall when a very good representation of curlers were present. Following the reading of the minutes the matter of the forthcoming curlers' ball was taken up and a special committee consisting of C. J. Little, A. A. Ward, W. F. Cameron, C. Spence and G. Sinclair were appointed to take charge of same.

The next item considered was the matter of dues, which was allowed to stand as at present, $12.00 for old members and $6.00 for new or green curlers. Ladies are to be welcomed, W. F. Cameron being appointed a committee of one to look after the matter of lady membership, which it was understood was more than likely, it being felt that sufficient members to make at least two rinks could be obtained.

The matter of the drawing of the members for the competitions was brought up by Mr. J. Milne, who believed that if fewer rinks entered in the club competitions and more members were on the spare board, there would be a greater assurance of the rinks being filled when schedule games were called. The matter was left to the executive committee.

The opening date of the Crow's Nest bonspiel which is to take place this winter in Cranbrook was set for Monday, January 17th. The matter of the date of the Selkirk bonspiel, while in the hands of the Kimberley club to determine, also came under consideration, it being felt that a hardship has been worked on the Selkirk 'spiel on account of it following the Crow's Nest 'spiel, the weather conditions not proving favorable in the last two years. It was hoped by many present that it could be held sufficiently in advance of the C.N.P. 'spiel to assure it of better weather.

Word was received of the approaching completion of the new covered curling rink at Kimberley, and the official opening is looked forward to.

In connection with the big bonspiel here it was decided to approach the Amateur Athletic Association in order to get the use of the Arena rink if possible for three or four days at that time. The membership roster went the rounds for the first time, and got away to a good start.

NATURE FIXES MILK QUALITY

One of the best known dairying authorities says nature gives milk all its quality, there is no improvement afterwards, and spots favorable to milk in the highest degree are few. Pacific Milk is particularly fortunate. The plants merely preserve its natural richness and flavor.

Red River Expedition

The first overt act of resistance was in October 1869, when Riel, followed by a few half-breeds, warned a surveying party to desist from their work and insisted on their moving their camp out of the district where they were employed. Meetings were then called in the various parishes where the French predominated, at which Riel and others made inflamatory speeches. The people were thoroughly aroused from many different sources.

Mr. William McDougall, nicknamed "Wondering Willie," one of the most eloquent speakers in the House of Commons, had been selected by the Dominion ministry to be Lieutenant-Governor of the newly acquired province. It was a most injudicious appointment, as everyone who knew that gentleman was perfectly aware at the time. He had been for many years back in political life, having been previously known as an able newspaper writer. Indeed, like a large number of men who have held high positions both in Canada and the United States, he may be said to have attained power through his connection with the press. He was celebrated for being essentially cold-blooded, entirely wanting in that cordiality which is an indispensible quality with those who have to lead or even to act with others in the direction of affairs. He had some political supporters, but he never had a friend. There was nothing genial about him, and his manner was said at times to be so unsympathetic that many left his presence accusing him of rudeness.

Leading to Trouble

It need not be attempted to enter upon Canadian politics, in order to trace the progress of events which led up to this strange appointment. Suffice it to say that the ministry which then ruled at Ottawa was a coalition one, the Conservative element being the strongest. The intended Lieutenant-Governor was in it as minister of public works, having been brought over from the Opposition upon certain terms when the coalition was formed. The Tory element being in the ascendancy, and many changes having occurred in the ministry, vacant places in it were filled up by the adherents of that party, thereby destroying the proportion or balance between the several parties which it was alleged by Mr. McDougall's clique had been agreed upon when the ministry was first formed. This gave rise to dissensions, which the far-sighted policy adopted regarding the International Railway afforded many opportunities for widening into such a breach, that it became at last a necessity that Mr. McDougall should cease to be a minister. To have dismissed him would have been fatal, so it was necessary to provide for him. The annexation of Rupert's Land just at that time was most opportune, for sending him there as Lieutenant-Governor was an easy solution of the difficulty. What mattered it whether he was fitted for the post or not, so long as he was far rid of without any scandal? Who cared whether he might or might not be agreeable to the people he was to rule over, and what could it matter whether the wretched half-breed population were pleased or not? Party politics in Canada then, as now, must first be attended to. They were of all-absorbing importance, and the northwest and its new Lieutenant-Governor must settle their affairs between themselves.

Shows Little Tact

Making a comparison between that period and the present, one can scarcely think conditions have improved. The tenacity to hold the grip of party by a member so dishonorably holding a seat in parliament on a technicality, and the man who stuffed the ballot box spending five years in jail is not a condition that patriotic and honorable men can now contemplate with complacency.

No attempt was made to conciliate their newly-acquired subjects. The Governor appointed by the Hudson Bay Company, who was to exercise authority until Mr. McDougall reached Fort Garry, was never even communicated with. One would have thought that common civility if not political tact, would have caused them to have informed him in writing of Mr. McDougall's appointment, and of the date at which he might expect him. His co-operation and assistance in establishing the new order of things might with advantage have been solicited at the same time. No explanations were made as to what was to be the policy of Canada in its dealings with Rupert's Land. In fact the people of that country were so thoroughly ignored, they were easily led to believe that their material interests would be so also, in favor of the emigrants that rumor and the Canadian surveyors said might shortly be expected to arrive at Red River.

A little judicious management at first would have secured an amicable settlement, and have frustrated the party, which was then desirous of fomenting resistance. A clear statement of what they intended doing and a declaration stating that they meant to respect the rights of property; that all those in regular occupation of land should retain it without rent and receive a regular legal title for it; that all religions would be respected, and everyone to worship as he liked—this most certainly would have cut the ground from under the feet of all the political agitators then.

During a crisis such as that which occurred in the settlement in 1869, when rebellion hangs in the balance, every moment is of such importance that, when once the scale has gone down on the side of revolution, days or months afterwards cannot compensate for the loss.

Charles Johnson, alias Bennie, was found guilty by Judge Thompson in the county judge's court at Fernie on Monday on a charge of breaking and entering and stealing, and was sentenced to five years in New Westminster penitentiary. Johnson, otherwise known to the police as Charles Benekariatis, was arrested by Provincial Constable Thomas Smith at Natal, on October 7, on suspicion of having burglarized the Fernie Motor Car Co. and the Fernie Garage, when $850 in cash and nearly $600 in other valuable documents were stolen. When arrested, Johnson had approximately the amount of cash stolen from the garages on his person and in the hotel room he then occupied. Johnson, who claims to be only 21 years of age, has already served four years of his life behind the bars. He is well known to the city police here, and is also said to have confessed to complicity in a robbery at the Nelson branch of the Western Grocers a year or two ago.

WOULDN'T you smile, too, if you had taken out a ten thousand dollar straight life policy contracting to pay premiums every year for the duration of your life, and then to be handed a paid up policy for the ten thousand dollars at the end of the eighteenth year?

That is the happy experience of Mr. Lawrence this year. The generous profits earned by his Mutual policy have caused his straight life policy to be paid up by about eighteen and a half premiums. And from this date on he will draw profits annually.

The Mutual principle of life assurance plus sound, progressive management is responsible for the generous profits earned for the policyholders of the Mutual Life of Canada.

WARDNER NOTES

A delightful Hallowe'en tea and sale of home cooking was held at the home of Mrs. Chas. Hamrin on Thursday afternoon, under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers' Association. The house was very nicely decorated for the occasion with Hallowe'en colors and favors and made a decided flare with the guests, who numbered about forty, who attended during the afternoon, making the affair a decided success, the association realizing about twenty dollars from the venture. Mrs. Hamrin, as social convenor, was assisted by her committee, Mesdames J. E. Scanland, Geo. Sinclair F. Thompson B. Daye and R. Harrison. Mrs. A. J. H. Donahoe, president of the association, had charge of the home cooking table, and under her experienced direction the articles were soon completely sold out, much to the dismay of those coming in later to tea. According to the demand at least double the quantity of home cooking could have easily been disposed of. Mesdames G. W. Donahoe, H. W. Birch, Paul Storey and J. F. Wright poured tea during the afternoon. Since the association at present numbers only twenty-two members, the membership committee have been working hard during the past month soliciting new members, many of whom will attend the next meeting, to be held on Thursday afternoon,, Nov. 11th, at the school. Thursday afternoon's tea was the initial venture of the newly formed association, under the direction of the social convenor and her committee, but it proved to be so enjoyable from the point of view of those in attendance, that it is probable a second affair will be planned shortly.

Mr. Norman Moore, of Lumberton, woods superintendent for the B.C. Spruce Mills there, motored to Wardner on Monday afternoon on business with Mr. Heffer.

Mr. Frank Wilson, of Simmonds' Saws, spent several days of last week in town booking the local trade.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Anderson and sons motored to Fernie on Sunday to spend the day with friends.

While motoring to Cranbrook on Friday evening with a party of frinds who planned to attend the showing of "Men of Steel" at the Star Theatre, John A. Lawson had the misfortune to run into a horse with his car by the Arnold ranch. The animal, coming out of the brush at the side of the road crossed directly in front of the car, before it was seen by any of the occupants, and two of the animal's legs were broken by the impact, while Mr. Lawson's car suffered broken headlights, punctured radiator and smashed fender. Fortunately a few moments following the accident, Dr. Rutledge, veterinary surgeon, of Cranbrook motored to the scene and procuring a gun from Mr. Arnold immediately shot the suffering beast. Since the car, however, could not be shot although damaged, it was necessary for the party to forego the show for that evening and procced homeward as well as could be for repairs. All levity aside, however, the stray horses along the highway are becoming a real nuisance nowadays. Large bands of the animals are at large at various places along the road to Cranbrook and several local people had narrow escapes when the beasts crossed the road in the aforesaid manner, especially these dark nights, when it is difficult to see out of range of the headlights.

Hallowe'en, which appears to have been celebrated for the biggest part of this week was finally finished off in open fashion by the kids on Saturday evening. Dressed all the way from the usual spook to the highway man, parties of all ages and numbers called around the town, soliciting apples, nuts and candy. Practically no damage to property of any kind was done this year while the wood pile also remained intact. However, plenty of harmless fun was indulged in by the kiddies, the householders being in much better humor when no damage was threatened and doing their best to show the youngsters a good time.

Several of the townspeople enjoyed a progressive Hallowe'en party on Wednesday evening last, under the leadrship of Mr. B. O. Iverson. The guests assembled on the highway bridge at eight o'clock, garbed as ghosts armed with chains and flashlights to be greeted by the chief spook before commencing the round of various residences at each of which a stunt, appropriate to Hallowe'en, was prepared. At eleven-thirty the party had completed the round and proceeded to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Storey, where a bounteous supper was served, the various Hallowe'en dainties prepared being decidedly welcome after three hours' hiking from house to house. The program from house to house. The progressive party included visits to the "Cavern of Dreadful Death," "House of the Voice O'er the Wires," "Tomb of King Jack o' Lanterns," "Ghostly Hunter," "Guidepost and the Yard of a Murdered Man." About thirty invitations were issued for the evening.

A meeting was held in the Club Hall on Friday evening last by the Wardner Athletic Association to discuss the possibility of building a skating rink in Wardner. After a general discussion relating to this, it was decided that an open-air rink should be built, work to start at once and the labor to be donated by any one willing to help. Consequently, on Sunday morning a site was chosen next to Lawson's garage for the rink, and a number of the young fellows set to work with plows, etc, to prepare the ground. Since heretofore the river has been the only place on which skating was possible the new rink will probably meet with the sincere approval of parents of children, who at least, if the plans go through, have the knowledge of the kiddies' safety while skating.

Hallowe'en was celebrated largely over the week-end, various of the "very much younger set" staging parties on the occasion. On Friday, little Florence Thompson entertained ten of her little friends at a party during the afternoon, when various stunts and games peculiar to Hallowe'en were played, much to the enjoyment of the guests, who included Misses Ruth and Charline Hamrin, Vivian Thompson, Georgetta, Lauretta and Inez Renick, June Thompson, Roy and Keith Thompson Billy Sinclair and George Thompson. HOCKEY LEAGUE AND INTERMEDIATE GAMES THIS WINTER

Monday evening the annual meeting of the Cranbrook Hockey club was held when a good number of those interested in the game were present and many matters dealt with. The election of officers for the ensuing year took place, resulting as follows:

F. Parks ..... Hon. President
G. P. Simpson ..... President
Harold Bridges ..... Vice-President
F. Hartnell ..... Secretary

The work of last year was reviewed, it being the opinion of those present that the plan adopted last year of encouraging a local league had been a good one and had resulted in firmly establishing the game in Cranbrook and had brought to the front a lot of young players who had given great promise. While deciding to continue the local league it was also decided to try to place in the field what would be known as the Cranbrook Team, which would be entered in a league which it was hoped would be formed comprising teams from Fernie, Kimberley and Cranbrook. It was felt that Cranbrook could maintain a good team provided the boys worked and kept in shape. Mr. Ashton Powers was appointed a manager for the intermediate team.

It was stressed by those present that the main object of the league was to bring along and develop the young players, and if this is continued to be done there is no question but what Cranbrook will soon have a team of which she can be proud in any company.

Mr. Fred Scott, district governor, was endeavoring on Wednesday to arrange for a meeting of representatives from Fernie, Kimberley and Cranbroook Hockey clubs for a meeting here and the meeting appointed to represent them at the coast.

At the Fernie assizes on Tuesday of this week the case of John Lyle, formerly of Kimberley, charged with misappropriation of funds entrusted to him for investment purposes, came up, two counts being heard. The money in point was for the purchase of Howe Sound stock and some Alberta oil shares, which the complainants stated they had never received. The case was heard by Mr. Justice McDonald, and after hearing the crown case, and the evidence of the defendant himself, the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty on the two charges. J. W. Brault, of Kimberley, acted for the crown, and G. J. Spreull defended. Other cases are pending, it is understood, but may be stood over till the spring assizes.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

The Association is holding a Membership Dinner at the "Y" on Tuesday evening, the 9th, at 6.30 o'clock, and every member is cordially invited to be present. Mr. C. L. Brown, general secrtary of the Calgary Y.M.C.A., is to be the principal speaker. A pleasant evening is assured.

All the Boy Scouts of Troop No. 1 are asked to keep in mind the meeting Friday night at 7.30 o'clock.

The Employed Boys had as their guest to dinner Monday night Mr. T. R. Flett, who gave a splendid talk on railroading.

Alan Graham, who is coaching the debating team for the boys, is right on the job, and the high school can be assured that they are not going to have everything their own way when they meet in debate on the 19th inst. The team representing the Crembo Club is composed of Norman Connolly, Murray McFarlane and Fred Fossett, and that of the high school as Murray Garden, Aubrey McKowan and Malcolm Harris.

On Monday no less than five meetings were held in the building by different organizations. This is as it should be. The directors want the Association to be a community centre for all things worth while, and their doors are thrown open to any worthy organization that may wish to hold a meeting.

Owing to unexpected developments, the membership drive has been postponed till next week, when it will be launched in earnest, and it is hoped that every man who is interested in the development of character will take out a membership. Even though a man may not be able to make full use of the privileges offered by the association, he can rest assured that his connection with it is aiding in work for the young men and boys of Cranbrook.

Conference at Helsingfors

Democracy was at work at Helsingfors. This was one of the features of the gathering. In last week's paper a list was given of the outstanding speakers, but these men were listening more than they were talking. The genius of the conference was in the method of arriving at conclusions. The entire conference was divided into fifty groups, with a chairman, interpreter and secretary for each. A variety of races and nations are represented in each group; for example, in the group that Mr. Lou Buckley was connected with, there were representatives from the following countries: 1 Egypt, 1 Esthonia, 4 German, 1 Japan, 3 Sweden, 3 Norway, 1 India, 1 Scotland, 2 England, 1 New Zealand, 3 United States, 2 Czecho Slovakia, 1 Hungary, 1 Canada, 2 Holland, 1 Poland, 1 France, 2 Switzerland. The chairman was from Holland. Every one of the topics—sex, home, vocation, nationality, sports, race—were thoroughly discussed and the group mind arrived at in a democratic way. The combined thinking of all the groups was then gathered up in the expert leaders' meetings, and their conclusions were referred back to the entire conference at the close of the day. The thinking of many was considered better than the thinking of one. Nothing was ever "put over" by brilliant oratory. Confer was the watchword of the conference.

Here, for example, at the close of the first day's discussions were the outstanding conclusions: Twenty-five groups placed sex at the head of the list, as the most important problem facing youth: fourteen groups placed sex second; the home was placed first by seventeen groups. Many felt that these two problems were inseparable.

The reasons for priority of sex were: (1) Motion pictures, sex dramas and modern fashion in dress; (2) effects of materialistic conception of life and Freudian psychology; (3) economic conditions, leading to postponment of marriage; (4) increased prostitution and venereal diseases since the war; (5) inadequate sex education in home, school and church; (6) weakened parental control; (7) modern passion for freedom; (8) intense desire of young people for a larger measure of physical enjoyment; (9) bad housing; (10) modern craze for new dances.

Needless to say, these disclosures were a ringing challenge to the Y.M.C.A., as well as to every other organization working for youth, to combat and replace evil amusements, bad literature and every other destructive force operating to the detriment of youth. It was pointed out that the application of the teachings of Christ, as well as a vigorous educational program, were necessary to gain this end.

The five other topics were discussed with equal frankness.
