The following amendments to the soldiers' insurance act will be of interest to ex-service men:

OTTAWA.—The bill to amend the Returned Soldiers' Insurance Act was passed in the house recently, being given a third reading. The amendment adds a schedule containing regulations to guide the minister of finance in the exercise of his discretionary power to refuse insurance. There was attached to the clause inserted in the subject a proviso that provided that applicants with or without pensionable disability, who are so seriously ill that they have no expectancy of life, and who are entitled to become beneficiaries under the contract as provided by the act, shall be insurable under the Returned Soldiers' Insurance Act up to and including the first day of January, 1923.

The schedule contains a carefully classified list of the cases in which insurance is to be refused or accepted, as the case may be. In the first class, those not seriously ill, the application is to be accepted in all cases.

In the second class, those seriously ill, the application is to be accepted if the applicant has dependants and is suffering from a pensionable disability, otherwise it is to be refused.

In the third class, those with no reasonable expectancy of life, the application is to be accepted if the applicant has dependants and is suffering from a pensionable disability, provided that death does not occur before the application is approved. In the fourth class it is provided that the application is to be refused where the applicant, with or without dependants, has had his health impaired as a result of immoral conduct prior to enlistment, during service or after discharge.

LOCAL INTERMEDIATES LOSE CHALLENGE GAME

In a challenge game played Wednesday last, the local intermediates suffered a severe drubbing from the senior footballers, the game ending 14-2 in favor of Manager Bono's crew.

A feature of the game was the pitching of Appleby for the pig-skin chasers, when he created a record for this district by striking out 17 men and only allowing eight hits. He was accorded splendid support in the field and by "Zeek" in the coacher's box.

The winners have now issued a challenge to the firemen, last week's victors over the intermediates, to a game to be played Wednesday evening at six o'clock, and baseball magnates should be on hand early as several of these players are certain to be in demand.

"Fighting Mad" At The Ilo-Ilo

Laughs are mingled with thrills in the Wallace Desmond production, "Fighting Mad," distributed by Metro, which has been taken from an original story by H. H. Van Loan about four cowboys who, emulating Dumas' three musketeers, grip hands and swear "One for all and all for one." Starting out like a comedy of a virile Westerner whose failing for fights amuses his acquaintances, the picture suddenly swerves into melodrama of the most virulent sort—Mexicans, fair maidens and a rescue by the border police—but it is all so entertaining that it pleases immensely.

Desmond is that could be desired in the character of the breezy cowboy who gains three staunch friends by handing them artistic beatings, falls in love with a girl unimpressed by his prowess and then, with the aid of his "musketeers," rescues her from kidnappers. Jack Richardson, William J. Dyer, and especially Bert Lindley, are amusing as his "buddies," while the other artists are capable. Some of the sub-titles are gems. Despite its strong melodramatic ending, the picture really scores a hit on the strength of its good comedy.

The Story

Bud McGraw never misses an opportunity for a fight. He feels that by joining the border police down South he will find a life worth while. He wins a place on the force by "licking" three of its members, who promptly become his best friends. Bud then discovers that not all people look on his prowess with respect. Peggy Hughes, visiting in the town, asks him to stop fighting. Shortly afterwards, when she is kidnapped by Mexican whiskey smugglers, Bud calls on his three comrades and after a thrilling battle, effects the escape of the girl and wins her love.

The "Hurricane Hutch" serial and comedy reels will be screened with "Fighting Mad."

ANGLICAN CHURCH PICNIC

Owing to a misunderstanding, we published the Anglican Church picnic to take place last Wednesday. We have now been officially informed that the picnic will take place on Wednesday, July 5, to Royston. Those who intend going to Royston for the picnic on that day are asked to meet at the church hall at 1.30 p.m.

JULY ROD AND GUN

"Men of the Hudson's Bay Company," is the title of a new continued feature which starts in the July issue of Rod and Gun in Canada. It is by N. M. W. J. McKenzie, a man who spent many years in the service of the company, and who, by reason of his long term of service, is able to present a narrative of absorbing interest, full of reminiscences of the days and the events of the North of bygone days. It will be continued in future issues of the magazine, and it is certain to prove an intensely popular feature. There is a fish story entitled "Shooting Fish," which is told in humorous vein by that well known writer, Maximilian Foster. H. Mortimer Batten, whose work has become very popular with Rod and Gun readers, is at his best in "Firepoint," a thrilling tale. Then there are other features and articles which are well up to the standard. The departments are of generous size and high quality, and altogether the July number is one of the best ever published.

Rod and Gun in Canada is published monthly at Woodstock, Ontario, by W. J. Taylor, Limited.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be dispensed in St. George's Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning, July at 11 o'clock.

Cumberland Lose To Nanaimo

Cumberland took the short end of a 7-5 game against Nanaimo here on Sunday last, after a hectic exhibition of the popular pastime. The play was marred by consistent loose fielding and poor throwing on the part of the home club, but before the close Cumberland battled against a five run lead and finished the last frame two runs behind their opponents.

Kaye, on the mound for Nanaimo, was hit safely eight times but pitched wonderful ball and had fair support. Daly got off to a bad start and although he held the visitors to five safe bingles, sixteen errors behind him allowed seven counters to cross the log. A fast infield assist by Plump behind first and a pretty throw to the third sack by Lomansky were leading features of the game, while Finch, Lomansky and Piper were the big sticklers with extra base blows.

Both teams were held scoreless in the first inning, but in the first half of the second frame Nanaimo scored three runs on a single and four errors. The visitors scored two in the third, and Cumberland packed one across, when King hit through second and scored on Lomansky's sacrifice. Cumberland earned another in the fourth when Marocchi, Finch and Buchanan hit safely. In the sixth, Nanaimo added two more.

With a four run lead it looked as if the game was all over, but the local boys came back strong in the seventh, Buchanan scoring on Lomansky's three bagger to deep centre. Again in the eighth, Marocchi singled and when Charlie Finch cracked it over the left field fence the game looked a lot better. In the last stanza Boyd tried hard to duplicate Finch's feat, but the ball struck the top of the boards and bounced back into the lot. Boyd died on second.

Proceedings Of The City Council

The council held their regular session on Monday evening with a full board present, Aldermen Bannerman, Thomson, Beveridge, Maxwell, Pickard and Parnham with his worship Mayor MacDonald in the chair.

The minutes of the General and special meetings were adopted as read. Capt. J. C. Brown and A. J. Fouracre being present addressed the council on the five dollar revenue tax that had been collected from returned soldiers, who were incapacitated, and made application on behalf of some 12 or 15 men for a refund of same and said such men were exempted. He read the following letter in support of his contention.

G.W.V.A. of Canada,
Office of B.C. Command,
Vancouver, B.C.

June 8, 1922.

A. J. Fouracre, Esq.,

Secretary, G.W.V.A. Cumberland, B.C.

Dear Sir and Brother—In reply to your favor of June 6 re poll tax. We are in receipt of a communication from the attorney-general, wherein it is stated in part 'that the poll tax act does not apply to any person, who has since the fourth day of August, 1914, served overseas in either His Majesty's naval or military forces or in any corps attached there and raised for service in the last war, and which person has since the date of such service returned to this province certified medically unfit or temporarily invalided, whether still subject to naval or military discipline, or discharged from any such forces.

Trusting this information is satisfactory, yours faithfully,

WALTER DRINNAN,

Prov. Sec.-Treas. G.W.V.A.

Capt. Brown further stated that returned men had paid it under protest and could produce medical papers that they were exempt from such a tax. Ald. Beveridge said that according to the act these men were exempt. A. J. Fouracre, secretary for the G.W.V.A., made application for a refund of the real property tax paid by that institution, citing the various needy cases that the association had assisted. They had given one family $75, another $20 and $15 and so on, and claimed exemption on the grounds of helping the poor and those who were not able to take care of themselves. The delegation left with the promise that the council would investigate their requirements.

The next was a communication from Comox of June 26 and addressed to the city council as follows:

"On behalf of the Roman Catholic Episcopal Corporation, in which is vested all our church property in Cumberland, I, the undersigned, hereby make application for a refund in part at least of the taxes on the church site collected from us during the past few years, as it has been shown that such taxes, protested from the beginning, are illegal as the law now stands.

"Although we could claim all the taxes illegally levied with interest, still as a mark of good will and without prejudice to our rights, we are willing to accept sixty dollars, roughly one-half of the amount legally due us in full settlement of our claims.

"In the above claim is not included the taxes on the house at the rear of the church, nor the part of the lot under it. Our claim for refund is for taxes illegally levied on the church site only, yours very sincerely,

REV. RONALD BEATON

The communication was discussed, assessment rolls for the years gone by were brought out showing how the four different churches were taxed from 1911, parsonage and land taxed only, church exempt, the council decided to receive file and acknowledge the receipt of the communication.

Department of Public Works,
Classification of Highways,
Cumberland.

Sir—I beg to remind you that we have not yet received formal agreement in connection with the above matter. Kindly advise us as to your council's wishes regarding same, as we are anxious to complete the necessary formalities as to classifications.

P. PHILIP,

Public Works Engineer.

Upon the reading of this communication the city clerk produced the copy of a letter sent to Capt. Richardson, the road superintendent, last August, defining Fourth Street and Dunsuir Avenue as a highway through the City of Cumberland.

The city clerk will now notify the public works engineer of the council.

The dinner had worn to its end. Not a single jarring note had spoiled the harmony of that interesting evening. Uncle Horace had been jovial—and not too reminiscent. When however, he happened to touch upon bygone subjects in which the supposed Maisie had been closely interested, Pargiter had rushed into the fray and diverted the attack.

Everything was perfect. Most admirable of all was the excellent old gentleman's announcement that this evening's entertainment would form his sole visit.

"I have a lot of people to see and only a week to do it in," he said chirpily. "So you two young folk will have to content yourselves with a single peep at me."

"Quite enough, too! Pargiter felt inclined to remark, but fortunately he kept the comment to himself, and said something polite and suitable.

After dinner there was music. Old Mr. Pargiter informed Pansy that her voice had improved considerably. He was pleased, also, to observe that she was able to reach a top "C"—a feat she had not achieved in the old days.

"But, of course, you were only seventeen then," he said. "Bless me, how time flies!"

Suddenly he found, that he, like time, must be flying, too. Rising with grunts and groans, he allowed himself to be helped into his overcoat, and then turned towards the girl.

"I suppose I'm to have an uncle's privilege," he said with an old-fashioned chuckle.

With a bright laugh, the girl raised her lips. He gave her a resounding smack. She smiled, showing remarkable pretty teeth.

"Hallo!" said the gentleman, as he regarded the dazzling dental array. "I see you've had that eye-tooth replaced. And a very fine job your dentist has made of it, too!"

"Why, whatever do you mean?" cried Pansy. She was taken off her guard. A woman's vanity is a very discomposing sort of agent. "I haven't a false tooth in my head. The idea!"

For one moment Uncle Horace seemed nonplussed. Then, with the impudence of the aged to whom many privileges are accorded, he actually thrust his long, clumsy forefinger into her small mouth and gave the left eye-tooth a tremendous twist.

"Naughty little girl, telling fibs!" he was about to say. Then the words stuck in his throat. All the genial light went out of his eyes. His face hardened.

In one instant Pargiter realised what had happened. Good heavens! he was in the fire! Why on earth hadn't he made inquiries about Maisie's teeth, and then warned Pansy? But who—who could have foreseen this amazing development?

All the same, he rushed to the rescue.

"That's all right, uncle," he cried quickly. "She's fooling you, of course. That tooth is artificial. But it was fixed by a smart Yankee dentist who managed to rivet it—or something."

"Liar!" said Uncle Horace. There was a finality about the word. It seemed to preclude all further argument. Pansy, utterly upset, flung herself on the sofa where the pleasantly attractive "rehearsals" had been conducted.

"I see it all now," said the old gentleman. "You have fooled me very cleverly, you two. And I might have gone back to South Africa actually believing you were married to Maisie Harding. Good thing for me that I remembered taking her to the dentist and the job he had to get that tooth out . . . yes. That tooth has enlightened me. What's more, it has not completely done for you, my boy. You may rely on your own resources in future—or go to the devil. It's pretty much the same thing, I expect."

Perceiving that it would be futile to deny the facts any further, poor Pargiter owned up.

"I'm sorry," he said, "but it was all your own fault. You seemed so keen on my being tied up to that girl that I didn't care to disappoint you. Can't see why you should bother so much about my matrimonial affairs—"

"Can't you?" shouted the old gentleman. "Then I'll tell you. For your own good, I wanted to see you married to a good, pure woman. There aren't many about in these days. Maisie would have been a perfect wife. She would have kept you straight. But that is neither here or there now. I've done with you. I might have overlooked your not being married, but this wretched farce has disgusted me. Give me my coat, quick!"

Without a word, the wretched Pargiter limply fetched the coat and also his uncle's hat. The latter snatched them rudely, and then ignoring the girl on the sofa, darted from the flat. The outside door banged ominously.

"There goes ten thousand pounds," said Pargiter half to himself. "You would wear pink!"

The girl rose and came to him. She flung her soft arms round his neck.

"Dear! I'm so sorry," she murmured. "It was all my fault!"

"That's all right, kiddie!" He couldn't help kissing her—she was so sweet—so sympathetic. "Of course you couldn't have known that the old idiot was going to start his dentist tricks. You played your part all right. It wasn't your fault if you got eat on the post."

"Well, what's to be done now?" she asked helplessly.

"Don't know! Let's have a drink, anyway, and then sit down and think over matters."

Five minutes later, whilst they were sitting on the sofa trying to console each other, there came a tremendous ringing at the bell.

"Upon my word, I believe it's the old boy back again!" muttered Pargiter. "What on earth can he want now?"

He darted to the door. Yes. There was Uncle Horace. An extraordinary change had transfigured his red face. All the fierceness had gone out of it. He looked limp—sorry—miserable. In his hand he held an evening newspaper.

"Take me in and give me a long drink, my boy," he said brokenly. "Heaven knows I want it."

The soda fizzed in the glass. The old gentleman swallowed the contents of the tumbler, and then looked solemnly at the young man and the girl.

"I've had the shock of my life," he said hoarsely. "Strange that I should come across the news just after that little outburst of mine."

They stared at him in amazement. For a moment, Pargiter wondered whether the South African sun had something to do with it. Had the excellent gentleman suddenly gone clean out of his mind?

"Read that paper!" cried Uncle Horace. "Read it and you'll know why I have changed my mind about that woman. Pure and good woman, indeed! Ha! ha!"

He laughed viciously.

Pargiter snatched the newspaper. Pansy looked over his shoulder. Then illumination came. For the journal recorded that in the Divorce Court that afternoon, Mr. Justice Worridge had granted a decree nisi to a Mr. William Partington owing to the misdemeanours of his wife, whose original name had been "Maisie Harding." There was also a very lifelike sketch of the lady, which proved beyond all question that she was the Maisie of Uncle Horace's worship.

"Three co-respondents!" groaned the old man. "And there was very nearly a fourth."

"Nothing like doing things thoroughly," Pargiter might have said at another time, but just then he was too much overcome with amazement to say anything except three Saxon words: "Well, I'm damned!"

"You had a very wonderful escape," said the old gentleman, mopping his forehead and helping himself to more whiskey. "Thank goodness you weren't influenced by me after all! And now, my boy, I'm off. It's past my usual bedtime, and if I don't get a good night's rest, I shall look pale in the morning."

In order to avert this terrible contingency, Pargiter placed no obstacle in the way of his uncle's departure. Before, however, the latter went he offered a most humble apology to the girl, and wrung his nephew's hand cordially.

"Better remain single, perhaps," he said, as they went into the little hall. "It's safer, after all. And, of course, I take back all I said about future arrangements. Good-night, my dear boy. I'll see you again before I leave town."

With this very satisfactory attitude, Uncle Horace departed from the flat which had witnessed this midsummer night's adventure.

hopeless expression of amazement.

"But—but, my dear sweet pet, what on earth then were you doing that morning in Bedford Street?"

"Oh, the agency, you mean. Just paying a visit to old Bevis for the sake of old times. I often do that. Like to pop in and see the girls. Well, Bevis happened to notice my likeness to that photograph on his desk, and then he made the proposal. I jibbed at first, but the money was tempting, for we are none too oozy, and I thought it might be fun. Don't get much fun at home, you know."

She sighed. "My hubby spends most of his time at that silly old Carnation Club."

The Carnation Club! That was Pargiter's club likewise. In an instant his thoughts flew to Vinnicombe. Vinnicombe, the originator of the scheme.

"I know quite a lot of fellows there," he said suddenly. "Wonder if I've met your husband?"

"Probably. He always get to know people somehow. His name's Vinnicombe!"

For quite a long time after Pansy had gone home, Pargiter sat and thought about things. His eyes lingered on the sofa, where he and the girl had spent some interesting and rather hectic times. He laughed softly—reminiscently.

"Poor old Vinnicombe!" he murmured. Then he laughed again quite happily.

MONKEY BUSINESS

An auto tourist was travelling through the great Northwest, when he met with a slight accident to his machine. In some way he had mislaid his monkey-wrench so he stopped at a nearby farmhouse, where the following conversation took place between him and the Swede farmer:

"Have you a monkey-wrench here?" "Naw, my brother he got cattle ranch over there; my cousin he got a sheep ranch further down this road, but too cold her for monkey wrench."

Baseball

Who said the Cumberland intermediates cannot play baseball? That the locals are adept at the game was demonstrated last Saturday when they defeated Union Bay for the second time in the intermediate league. Cumberland taxed Dangerfield for 23 base hits and 12 runs, and the Bay managed to garner but 9 hits and as many runs off Hunden. As was the case in the Japanese-Union Bay series in the league, both teams played big league ball at Union Bay, but when the teams clashed on the Recreation Grounds it proved to be the heaviest hitting team that grabbed the honors for the day.

Hunden crashed out a home run, Farmer and Somerville secured three base hits and Richards smacked out a double for Cumberland. Richards had tough luck in the third inning, when he poled one over the left field fence with the bases full, only to have the wind drag it into foul area. Hunden secured 10 strikeouts in the game.

If arrangements are completed as expected, Cumberland will play the Japanese on Friday night in the next league game. There will no doubt be a large crowd of Japanese on hand to give the local Nipponese a hand and every fan should make it a point to see that he gets there to boost the local proteges.

The standing of the clubs in the Comox district intermediate league as given out by the secretary is as follows:

	W.	L.	P.
Cumberland	4	0	1,000
Japanese	2	1	.666
*Bevan	1	3	.250
*Union Bay	0	3	.000

* Union Bay and Bevan played a game at Union Bay, which has been protested and no decision has yet been arrived at.

Here Next Week

Rex Ingram's $1,000,000 production of the "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," made for Metro is announced by the Illo-Ilo theatre for Tuesday and Wednesday, July 4 and 5. This will be the first showing here of the screen version of Vicente Ibanez's novel that has been acclaimed in New York, Chicago, Boston, Pittsburgh, Detroit and Los Angeles as marking a new epoch in the development of motion pictures. At its New York opening people paid $10 a seat. Critics said the picture had definitely established the screen not only as capable of rivaling the stage at its best, but of surpassing it in its grip upon the emotions.

Readers of the novel will recall that the story opens on the Argentine ranch of old Madariaga, whose territories are as extensive as those of the great independent barons of feudal times. And Madariaga rules with feudal power. A rioting, roystering despot, he is filled with Castilian pride of family and yearns for a male child to carry on his tradition. His two daughters have married ranch employees—one French and the other German. Madariaga's Latin antipathy to the German son-in-law brings with a dislike of his half-German grandchildren, but when a son is born to the Frenchman, Desnoyers, the old man finds his dream realized. The boy, Julio, is selected as heir to the huge estate and is brought up as a spoiled prince of the realm. As a young man Julio becomes the companion of Madariaga's debauched adventures in Buenos Ayres tango resorts. But Madariaga dies suddenly without making a will and the German branch of the family finds itself sharing the estate equally with the Desnoyers. With this sudden wealth, the two families leave the Argentine for Europe.

The Desnoyers settle in Paris, and Julio, an expert tango dancer, becomes the sensation of the fashionable dance places. He meets a fascinating little society woman, Marguerite Laurier, and the two of them are swept into a reckless love affair that take no count of Marguerite's elderly husband. Their butterfly mentalities do not even render at first to the sudden shock of war that breaks about them. It is 1914 and the Germans are advancing toward Paris. Marguerite is first awakened to the realization of tremendous events. She joins the French nursing force and sacrifices her love for Julio in order to be the constant companion of her husband, who is blinded in battle. Julio, left without the stimulation of frivolous attractions, hears the call of duty and enlists in the French army, where he meets death at the hands of his German cousin when the two face each other in a trench raid. Through it all are galloping the four horsemen, spoken of by St. John in the Book of the Apocalypse—the grim figures of Conquest, War, Famine and Death.

TIMES DO CHANGE

Things do change and the world does move. Those who are worried about jazz music, short skirts, rolled stockings and bobbed hair might stop a minute to ask what has become of the fads and follies of twenty years ago. What has become of "the biggest beer in town" and the fly-specked free lunch? Where are the red and white barred stockings all the little girls used to wear making their legs look like sticks of peppermint candy? What has become of the bustles, spit curls, frizzes and bangs?

While we are on this subject, we might go back to the old-fashioned parlor which used to be where the living room now is, and look for the what-not with its collection of sea shells and coral. Then there were the plush picture frames, the worsted mats for the lamp, those strange glass canes and little bead baskets. Where are the big glass marbles with the little silver lamb inside? Also the stuffed doves under the round glass case and the everlasting wax and paper flowers?

What has become of the old-fashioned comforter that we wound around our necks, the knitted wristlets and the red mittens we wore with strings attached? Where are the long-handled table knives, the fly brushes made of peacock feathers and the wire coverings for the butter and jelly dishes?

And those wonders of our childhood, the sword-swallower, the fire-eater, the human fly that walked on the ceiling, the patent medicine fakir and his male quartette, travelling in a chariot drawn by four white horses? Where is the fellow who pulled teeth on the village streets, the Seven Sutherland Sisters and the wooden ship in the bottle that no self-respecting bar could be without?

What has become of the Indian Medicine Show, the roller skating rink, the six-day bicycle race and the colored camp meeting?

Yes, times do change.

Six Days of Fun For Everyone

What is a potlatch anyway? It is an Indian custom, centuries old, involving a ceremonial distribution of gifts. It was the occasion of great pomp, feasting and enjoyment. Frequently, it expressed the rivalry of the big men of the tribe; but, on the other occasions, the Potlatch was celebrated to benefit another. Indeed, many ethnological students held that the Potlatch was entirely idealistic in spirit having the welfare of the less fortunate in mind. Such was the Potlatch prior to the creeping in of less desirable interests.

The Vancouver Tyeo Potlatch is a modernized version on a magnificent scale—but true to the idealistic conception of the early Potlatch. It is sponsored by the Gyro Club of Vancouver, B.C., and its object is the presentation to the city of three equipped and supervised playgrounds for the children; the celebration of Dominion Day, our national holiday, in the good old fashioned way, when gigantic parades were the order; and by a week of carnival, the bringing back to use of that optimism which was the characteristic of the Great West in the care-free days before the war.

The principal episode of the Potlatch will be the crowning and the parades of the princess of the Potlatch along Tillicum Trail, which for the occasion will be the causeway at the Georgia Street entrance to Stanley Park—probably the most natural park in Canada. Leading organizations, representing almost every interest in Vancouver, New Westminster and Nanaimo have appointed candidates for the royal honor, the princess to be selected from the aspiring royalties by popular vote. The voting is being done by coupons each of which cost 25c. One of these coupons will bear a lucky number, and the fortunate voter holding it will be the recipient of a $3,000 five-passenger car.

The Tyeo Potlatch will last six days, from June 30th to July 5th inclusive, thus covering the American "Fourth" in recognition of which there will be American Day, ending with a great American Ball and a striking display of fireworks on a scale never before seen in Vancouver.

There will be Indian Day, when there are expected to be present over 3,000 Indians. The Indian lacrosse championship will be staged; there will be races in war canoes.

The Poor French Journalist and the Rich French Banker---Not a Fable

Once upon a time—a couple of days ago—a French journalist shy of coin of the realm and a French banker, who has succeeded in cornering most all the coin in said realm, came face to face on the "lot" of the Pickford-Fairbanks Studios. The famous Douglas Fairbanks was responsible for the meeting, because immediately after being introduced to the young Croesus from abroad, the star called the journalist, Robert Florey, his director of foreign publicity.

"Here's a fellow Frenchman, Florey. No doubt you two would enjoy a chat in your native tongue," was all Doug said in introducing the pair. Promptly Florey took the initiative in propounding questions by way of becoming acquainted.

"What part of France are you from?" he asked.

"Paris," was the laconic reply.

"Have you come to Hollywood to get into pictures?" came next.

"Not if I can find anything else to do."

"What do you do for a living?" was the third exemplification of the journalistic curiosity.

"Just sort of keep track of things," and the guest smiled broadly.

"What's your name?" and the pen-wielder was becoming annoyed.

"Baron de Rothschild."

Thereupon M. Florey all but swooned and Douglas Fairbanks heartily enjoyed the laugh he was waiting for.

"Ah, and to think I was talking to the richest man in the world and didn't know it," Florey exclaimed after he had regained his normalcy in breathing power.

In every centre of population in the lower part of the province is a telephone exchange and an organization of skilled workers to facilitate commerce. Every circuit must be tested; every inch of wire watched and kept in repair; every switchboard operated day and night. Not only that, but there is always new construction to meet the increasing needs of the telephone-using public. Crews of linemen and cablemen, and installers of every kind of telephone equipment carry on this work as the province progresses.

PEACE RIVER FARMING

Any information concerning our northern regions is of value and, therefore, the results obtained in the growing of crops at the Dominion Experimental Farm sub-station at Port Vermilion, Alberta, in the Peace River district will prove interesting to many. The pamphlet referred to gives in some detail the story of experiments covering thirteen years, which are still proceeding.

The settlement of Port Vermilion lies on the banks of the Peace river, 350 miles north of Edmonton and 950 feet above sea level. The history is the usual one of such settlements,—first the fur trapper and trader, then the Mission, and next the settler. In 1908, the first Director of the Dominion Experimental Farms, Dr. William Saunders, came to an agreement with Mr. Robert Jones, a pioneer settler to conduct experiments in the cultivation of grains, fruits and vegetables. This sub-station now covers twenty-five acres. Mr. Jones is still in charge as superintendent, from his annual reports the information for the bulletin has been gathered.

It is apparent that the district is well adapted for mixed farming, having large areas of well grassed country, which afford ample feeding grounds and winter feed for stock. Building logs, fencing material, firewood, and the purest water are easily accessible in practically any location. In summer, the day, from sunrise to sunset, is eighteen hours long and the night itself is only a twilight. These long days of summer permit the remarkable growth of vegetation and its ripening in a short season.

Travellers in the region are surprised to find vegetables growing luxuriantly and as far advanced according to the season as they would be in Eastern Canada. Another thing that astonishes visitors is the beauty of the flowers, hardy varieties flourishing amazingly, with brilliant coloring.

Strawberries, currants and raspberries flourish, but gooseberries, plums and apples have not so far thrived as well as desired. Experiments with fodder crops have proved successful, particularly with swede turnips and mangels. Sunflowers have given promising results, but corn in the usual season does not reach the proper stage to make first-class ensilage, although in some years surprisingly large crops of green fodder are recorded.

The varieties of grain hitherto tested have yielded excellently. The bulletin may be had on application to the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

AMERICA'S SUMMER PLAYGROUND

On that sultry Sunday, June 11, when New York City was struck by the terrible storm which caused the loss of so many lives of people who were seeking recreation in the amusement parks, there appeared in the rotogravure section of the New York Tribune a double page spread showing, in marvelous artistry, the most alluring scenes of Washington, Oregon and British Columbia with an invitation from the Pacific Northwest Tourist Association to spend their vacation in this perfect summer climate.

Illustrated with fourteen different views carefully selected to show the variety of attractions offered by "America's Summer Playground"—mountains, rivers, bathing beaches, golf, motoring fishing—inland and coast scenes, all were brought out strikingly and the lure of the pictures emphasized by a brief description of this "land of enchantment, business opportunity, family happiness and contentment—the most glorious of the glorious West."

As a piece of striking publicity it is probably the most impressive advertisement of the Pacific Northwest ever produced while its timeliness, appearing just at the very hour when the East was being ravaged by storms and oppressed by heat made it particularly effective. This is one of the ways in which the Pacific Northwest Tourist Association is making known the beauties of this region and enticing people to visit it for their vacations.

Other dominant advertising has been appearing this spring in fifty newspapers in important cities of the United States.

In addition to the double page advertisement, the same section of the New York Tribune also carried nearly a quarter of a page of illustrations of Pacific Northwest scenes as a news feature.

Standing, sitting and walking correctly are the first essentials to good health and that elusive charm we call style

ALL women wish to be well; but all women do not appreciate the vital importance of correct corsetry as an essential to good health. The well-known medical authority, Alice S. Cutler, M.D., warns us: "As a physician who knows that if it were not for ill-fitting and the wrong kind of corsets we would have very few female invalids, I am naturally determined to do everything in my power to educate women in the proper fitting of corsets. Most learned physicians now recognize the modern corset as a hygienically healthful garment and one that is often the best means of providing corrective support for many bodily ailments."

GOSSARD CORSETS

have attained their unquestioned superiority by assisting nature to perfect expression.

Every Gossard is hygienically correct. Properly fitted to the figure for which it was designed it will give scientific support to abdominal and back muscles, with no chance of undue pressure at the waistline; the organs of nutrition will be free from pressure; the erect posture which is induced will encourage deep breathing and the diaphragmatic muscles become strong with use. A woman so corseted will have the undeniable beauty of health and that grace of body, standing, sitting, or walking, which is best expressed in the one word, style.

We unreservedly recommend Gossard Corsets as the complete expression of modern corsetry. Our highly specialized corset service is maintained with a full appreciation of the exacting needs of the modern, active woman.

Connaught Cup

Nanaimo and I.L.A. soccer teams meet in the final round of the Connaught Cup elimination series on Saturday on the ground of the former. These clubs won the right to enter the final as a result of their respective victories over South Wellington and Ladysmith last Saturday.

A battle royal is anticipated as the winners of this game will represent B.C. in the Dominion play-offs, and both teams are confident of securing the honor.

The Vancouver eleven defeated

Ladysmith in the replayed semi-final by the score of 1-0, after a hard fought game. Roberts, half-back of the Longshoremen, scored the only goal from a well placed corner kick.

In the other semi-final tie, Nanaimo emerged victors over South Wellington by the lone goal, which was registered by Stobbs early in the game. The game was well contested throughout.

cl's wishes. Accounts were passed for payment water works, fourteen hydrants at $10 a piece, total $140; street labor, $279.15; city clerk poll tax commission $92.25; revenue tax refund, $435, and several other minor accounts making a total of over a thousand dollars.

The council on motion and at the request of board of school trustees, decided to advance the salary of the principal of the Cumberland public school, $500 per annum, making a total of $2,500.

The board of works were instructed to call for tenders for the building of a eight-foot cement sidewalk in front of the city buildings. It was pointed out that the electric light company would build a cement sidewalk in front of their new offices that is erected on the edge and just outside the city limits to connect with the city sidewalk. It was said that the Canadian Collieries would lay a cement sidewalk in front of the Cumberland L. and A. Association on the same side of the highway.

The council decided to invite road superintendent and engineer to visit Cumberland and ask the provincial government to connect with cement pavement, contemplated making it complete from the city limits to the Canadian Collieries main office and railroad station.

Observations Of A Federal Member

June 15th. Fisheries Act amended. Forbids parties, who have been refused a fishing licence, such as orientals, leaving our shores to fish outside the three mile limit. Changes licences on dry salteries of salmon or herring, so that people operating on a small scale do not have to pay a large fixed fee.

Opium and Narcotic Act penalties made heavier and flogging added in discretion of the magistrate, in cases of those supplying the drug to children. In case of aliens, also to be deported.

June 16th. Long debate on Civil Service Commission. Charges made that the personal patronage of the commission, is worse than the political patronage of the members of old. Many complaints. No one defended the commission, but several members expressed a desire not to go back to the old political system.

June 17th. Finance Minister Fielding in budget, lowering duty on gasoline from 2 1-2 cents a gallon to one cent a gallon, announced that he would change this to include distillate, also for the benefit of the Pacific coast fishermen, it having been urged upon him by the member for Comox-Alberni that distillate was largely used by the fishermen of that coast. The change was agreed to.

Wheat board act passed. Urgently demanded by all prairie members as a compulsory measure. Finally passed as a half and half measure that will be of no use to any one and possibly a disadvantage to those who asked for it. Not extended to flour or feed as in last wheat board control. Long debate on report of committee, which has for months been inquiring questions of soldiers' pensions, re-establishment and land board. Not a perfect report, but showed evidence of a strong desire on part of all members to give a fair and just deal to returned men.
