DOMINION DESPATCHES

NEWS FROM OTTAWA, MONTREAL AND WINNIPEG.

Hon. Foster Speaks for Five Hours in Delivering Budget Speech— Chinamen Quarantined at Montreal on Their Way to New York — Proposed Geographical and Geological Survey of Hudson Bay— Prohibitionist Deputation Waits on the Premier — Winnipeg Women Will go in for Dress Reform Before the Summer.

OTTAWA, March 28.—The Hon. Geo. E. Foster spoke for five hours to-day in delivering his Budget speech. Sir Richard Cartwright moved the adjournment of the debate without speaking at any length.

There are about 600 changes in the tariff. One of the principal ones to British Columbia is that coke and smelting works machinery, which will be admitted free, if not manufactured in Canada. The reduction in changes of various items meant the loss of revenue to the extent of $1,500,000. Concluding, Mr. Foster said that the total imposts on dutiable goods under the new tariff in Canada was about 28 per cent. as compared with about 30 per cent. under the Wilson Bill as it now stood.

The Geographical Society of Quebec has sent an important communication to the Dominion Government urging that an expedition be sent to Hudson Bay during the coming summer, for the geographical and geological exploration of the Bay and the adjacent territories. It is understood this action is due to representations received from the Royal Geographical Society of Great Britain. The petitioners assert the Hudson Bay fisheries have been practically monopolised by foreigners without let or hindrance for nearly half a century and that American whaling vessels are trading in furs with Indians and Esquimaux without paying duty. The Government is urged to look into the matter at once.

A large deputation of Prohibitionists, representing all the Provinces, waited upon Sir John Thompson and other members of the Government and pressed a resolution asking for a law prohibiting the sale and manufacture and importation of liquor for beverage purposes and protesting against the ratification of the French treaty in its present form. Sir John Thompson, in reply, said the Government would not introduce a Prohibition Act this session, and he would make no pledges for the future. The Government would be guided to some extent by what the Royal Commission on the liquor traffic, which has just completed its labors, reported.

Chinamen in Montreal.

MONTREAL, March 28.—It is denied that the Quebec bishops are preparing a protest on the Northwest school ordinance.

An effort is to be made to secure the release of Donald Morrison, the Megantic outlaw, now serving eighteen years' sentence in St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary. Morrison is in feeble health, and on this account representations are to be made to the Minister of Justice for his release. Morrison has now served about five years of his sentence.

Forty of the Chinamen who arrived in Vancouver on March 14th by the Canadian Pacific steamer Empress of India have arrived here, on their way to New York. In view of the fact that smallpox had broken out among the Chinamen at the bonded warehouse in Vancouver, the strangers, under instructions from Dr. La Berg, medical health officer, have been thoroughly inspected.

G. T. R. Defaulter Sentenced.

TORONTO, March 28.—Bain, the Grand Trunk defaulter, has been sentenced to three years' imprisonment.

Criminal Operator Arrested.

HAMILTON, March 28.—The coroner's inquest into the death of Gertie Price, who died in the city hospital a week ago, has resulted in a verdict that it was caused by a criminal operation performed by Mrs. Wolliung. Mrs. Wolliung has been arrested.

Another Gain for the N. S. Government.

HALIFAX, March 28.—The recount in Colchester county has resulted in Lawrence, Government, being declared elected by a majority of six. The first count gave the Opposition candidate a majority.

From Manitoba's Capital.

WINNIPEG, March 28.—George Bull's grist mill at St. Albert, near Edmonton, was destroyed by fire. The mill contained 5,000 bushels of wheat and a quantity of flour. The loss is $10 000 with no insurance.

Asseletine's jewellery store at Calgary was damaged by fire to the extent of several hundred dollars.

Winnipeg wholesale liquor dealers have withdrawn nearly all their stocks from the bonded warehouse in anticipation of an increase in the duties.

It is feared that a man named Young of Neepawa district, was lost in Friday's storm.

The members of the W.C.T.U. in Winnipeg have taken up the question of dress reform and something practical is promised before the summer sets in.

It is reported that Mr. McFadden, M. P. P. for Emerson, will shortly resign his seat in the local House and that Mr. R. P. Roblin will stand for the constituency in the Conservative interest.

A Shocking Death.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., March 28. — Word comes from Los Angeles, Cal., of an inquest held on the body of Alfred Hodgins, aged 19, a native of this place. He was stealing a ride on the Southern Pacific and fell off a freight train at Vincent station, 40 miles north of Los Angeles. The whole of the lower portion of the man's body was terribly mangled and an arm and leg cut off. He lived about six hours, and before he died pitifully begged that no word be sent to his parents, as they had already mourned him as dead, and news of his death would surely kill his mother He had run away from home. He was well educated.

Flogged for Being a Free Mason.

LONDON, March 28.—The Daily News says that the Bishop of Segovia, upon learning that Dean Gomez was a Free Mason and a Republican, compelled him to abjure his principles and swear repentance on the crucifix. The Bishop flogged the dean's bare shoulders, the priests mean time chanting the "Miserere Mei." Afterward the dean was publicly absolved.

Fire Panic in a School.

CHICAGO, March 28.—Fire in the South Evanston, Ill., public school on Wednesday created a panic among pupils and teachers. Many were injured by jumping from upper stories and four may die. The building, valued at $50,000, was destroyed.

Edison in Trouble.

NEW YORK, March 28. — Thomas A. Edison, who is engaged in a controversy with the directors of the Edison United Phonograph Company, has applied for the appointment of a receiver for the company, alleging insolvency.

Marriage of Captain Rogers.

NEW WESTMINSTER, March 28--[Special]--Capt. James Rogers, the well-known and popular captain of the steamer City of Nanaimo, was married to-day to Miss Calbick in this city, and left for San Francisco. Their many friends, (and who that is acquainted with the genial and careful captain and his lovely bride is not their friend)? wish them all the happiness they anticipate and deserve.

Quarrelsome When Drunk.

PORT TOWNSEND, March 28.—Paddy O'Brien, a longshoreman, who stabbed Tom Murphy, a sport, in the leg while the latter was trying to make peace between O'Brien and another fighter, was bound over in $500 bonds on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. O'Brien is known to every steamboat man on the Sound, and is never quarrelsome except when drunk.

Died Broken Hearted.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 27.—George V. Mulligan, city treasurer of Healdsburg, Sonoma county, died here, it is said, of a broken heart. Last October Mulligan was decoyed from his home at night by two men, who took him to the treasurer's office, made him open the safe, stole $3,500, then led him to a grove, tied him securely to a tree and decamped. Mulligan was found later nearly dead from exposure. He was accused by some of being short in his accounts and having "faked" the story of the outrage. To the shock and humiliation arising from this charge is directly due his death.

Architect Rattenbury Repudiates.

OLYMPIA, March 28.—Architect Rattenbury, of Victoria, has written Auditor Grimes a letter concerning the report said to be current in British Columbia, that the capitol commission had asked Rattenbury what there would be in it for the commissioners if his plan was adopted. He says:

"I wish to repudiate all responsibility for the ridiculous statement referring to the capitol commission. I have not been out of British Columbia since the plans were sent in; have had no communication personally or by letter with the commission, nor have I said that I had."

An Improvident Dear Son.

OAKLAND, Cal., March 28.—The will of Almon Lull, who died at Berkeley, has been filed for probate in the Superior Court. He left an estate valued at $50,000, nearly all of which goes to the widow. In his will the testator says: "Knowing the improvident character of my dear son James Lull, I give and devise to my beloved wife and my friend Dr. E. M. Patterson $7,000 for the benefit and use of my son. This money is to be invested, and he is to be given a monthly allowance for his support. No provision is made for the daughters of the deceased, because the testator says that he knows they will be provided for by their mother. Mrs. Lull and Dr. Patterson are named as executors.

Morphine Fnished Him.

SEATTLE, March 28.—Michael McLaughlin, commonly known as "Mike the Rooster," was found dead on the floor at the side of his bed in a room at the Green Tree lodging house on Washington street yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, death being due to a general collapse of his system from the use of morphine. About a month ago he went to Portland, but returned owing to his health. Since then he has grown weaker daily and could scarcely drag himself about.

Early yesterday morning McLaughlin appeared in Clancy's saloon, at the corner of Washington and South Third streets, and asked for a drink, saying that he needed it badly and had no money. The drink was given him and then he returned to his room. He was better in the forenoon, but it was nothing more than a brief respite before death.

Just after the big fire McLaughlin was well known among the sporting fraternity, being a skillful faro dealer. In 1872 he lived in Eurek, Nev., where his brother, "Johnny the rooster," was a king pin among the sporting men. It is thought that the deceased had relatives living near Truckee, Nev. Deputy Coroner Carroll investigated the case and had the remains removed to Bonney & Stewart's undertaking rooms, McLaughlin's effects consisted of a solitary nickel and a box of pills. No arrangements have been made for the funeral services.

Johannesburg, S. A.

At the age of six years this magic city can boast of municipal buildings, a large hospital, a big gaol, churches, chapels, synagogues, public recreation grounds, spacious pen market squares and a good covered market for fruit and vegetables. It boasts also of a race course and a stock exchange, some half dozen theatres, an excellent club and several good hotels. These are all lighted by electricity, and the largest, the "Grand National," has 100 bedrooms. The shops and stores in the principal streets are rather handsome, with large plate glass windows, and it is no stretch of imagination to say that, under the electric light, one might easily think oneself in Regent street or Westbourne grove. The goods displayed are equal to those in any London shops, and as far as wearing apparel goes, appears to be quite as cheap. The population has already reached the big figure of 40,000, and it strikes one that there are already too many shops even for such a number. Other articles are not so cheap as clothing with the exception of hardware, and it is astonishing what has to be paid for cigars, wines, and spirits. There is about one "bar" or drinking shop to every 50 people, and as rents are enormous, one is tempted to think that very inferior liquor is retailed at very high prices. A reputed quart bottle of Bass costs 4s., a small glass of whiskey 1s., a bottle of Pommery at the hotels, 35s., and Heidsick or Giesler 25s. As regards eatables, the food is generally spoilt by bad cooking, which is a great pity, as the mutton and beef are of excellent quality. One sighs for simplicity and flavor. The poultry is tasteless, and eggs are generally stale; even the tea and coffee have an African twang, and one is rarely tempted to try a second cup. Although the hotels charge a guinea a day for board and lodging, I have never come across a place where one would be more likely to starve in the midst of plenty than in Johannesburg—of course I am speaking of the "globe-trotter."—Ex.

The Highest Authority in America.

Printers Ink, the highest newspaper authority in America, speaks thus of THE DAILY TELEGRAM.

"Did you ever hear of a place called Nanaimo? It is on the Island of Vancouver and 75 miles from Victoria. If you live in what you consider an enterprising city and believe that your local daily paper is first-class, write to the publisher of THE DAILY TELEGRAM, Nanaimo, British Columbia, and ask for a sample copy of his paper, and when you obtain it compare it with your home production. Go down and talk with the publisher about it afterwards, and ask him why it is that he can't print as good a paper, or obtain as good a local patronage, or have his paper as free from dead-head or objectionable advertisements? A useful lesson may be learned from Nanaimo."

COMMON FAULTS IN PUPILS.

Prevalent Habits and Errors That Ought to Be Corrected by Teachers.

The pupil is usually unaware of his own mannerisms, such as swaying his body, beating time with his head and the like. It is the teacher's privilege and duty to correct these and similar curious habits. Venturing in to play a new piece, many pupils strike at the notes with no very definite idea of the clef, signature and time mark, the three foundamentally important things upon which success depends. The mariner starting on a voyage without chart, rudder and compass, three equally important things, would run constant risk of shipwreck. Many a pupil has found himself stranded in a region of flats when he should have been in sharps; has found himself moving in waves of six-eights, when the underlying current should have been in eight-eights. He who is wise makes careful and adequate preparation for his musical voyage before touching a note, says the Etude, authority for the following:

One of the most prevalent and distressing habits is that of striking the hands separately instead of together in double chords and octaves, and the same fault is frequently heard in passages of single notes where two hands should strike simultaneously. The incoming of the right hand a quarter or a half second after the left gives a peculiar effect to the music allowable and necessary in some passages of earnest or tender sentiment, but used unintentionally or with false judgment it is exasperating in the extreme to the sensitive ear. Why the right hand should follow the left in such manner is one of the mysteries, but the habit should be avoided at all cost.

A very natural tendency among pupils is one that is not confined to the lesson hours. There it is expected that more or less of nervousness will be felt by the pupil, who in his excitement will hurry the movement of his work. But even in practice hours anxiety may overthrow his balance and cause, especially in hard passages, the same hindering haste. Too much cannot be said in favor of slow, steady practice—it cures digital stammering and stumbling; it gives opportunity for accurate comprehension of the contents of the page for honest planning; it largely secures command of all one's faculties, so that improvement is sure and continuous.

in crewel, with tiny figures in cross stich, and the seams are feather stitched. The bag is turned over at the top to form a frill, through which draw strings are run. Pompons of crewel finish the bag.

Housekeeping Notes.

Crocheted slippers are just as popular as ever and are made in all shades and colors.

To make lemon drops, take a cupful of sugar, juice of two good lemons and a very little water. Boil until they will harden in water.

Place in a bag of soft flannel, five or six inches square, bits of toilet soap too small for use, and then use it as a cake of soap. With expensive toilet soap this is a bit of economy not to be despised.

Any painter will mix the stains with which you can stain your new floors walnut, mahogany, oak or ash, but it is preferable to buy the prepared stains which come put up in pint, quart, half gallon and gallon cans.

The best way of treating a stove that has not been blacked for some time is to rub it well with a newspaper, adding just a little clean grease of almost any kind. It will soon take a polish after a few treatments of this sort.

Temper at the Breakfast Table.

"Many persons afflicted with a peculiar derangement of the digestive organs are seized with an almost uncontrollable irritability as soon as they sit down to eat, more particularly at the breakfast table," remarked an experienced Arch street physician. "This is caused by a premature secretion of the gastric juice, due to a too vivid anticipation of food. To avoid possible insanity, such persons require careful medical treatment. I once attended a young lady professionally whose rather stern father was so often obliged to send her away from the table for unreasonable bursts of temper that he grew suspicious of her sanity and caused her to be watched. It appeared that as soon as she reached her room she seized a pair of scissors, opened a trunk and, drawing forth a roll of ribbon, proceeded to snip it into small bits. The trunk was nearly full of such snippings, and it was remembered that she was continually purchasing ribbon. I cured her of such manifestations of wrath by treating her for dyspepsia."

Picture Nursery Screen.

A pretty nursery screen is made by covering the panels with any solid background desired—black, dark red, or brown—and pasting pictures cut from nursery tales upon them. One panel can be handsomely decorated with the pictures that made last year's calendar such a thing of beauty, illustrating, as many of them do in such lovely fashion, the procession of the months. The plethora, indeed, in these days of really exquisite specimens of the lithographer's art makes a disposition of them, after they have survived their brief present in current weekly, monthly or annual, a real problem to those who dislike to discard them wholly or keep them forever out of sight.

THE PARNELLITE ESTIMATE OF GLADSTONE.

The opinion expressed by Mr. O'Kelly, M.P., the London correspondent of the Dublin Parnellite organ, the Independent, is not entirely complimentary to the G. O. M. Mr. O'Kelly broadly affirms that the talk about a cataract forming on one of his eyes being the cause of Mr. Gladstone's resignation is all humbug, that he is in excellent health, and can see as well as could be expected of a man of his age. Mr. O'Kelly concludes his diatribe as follows: "He has abandoned power and sneaks away to end his days in dishonored repose. All honorable men know him as the incarnation towards Ireland of perfidious England." Mr. Glodstone on reading this, if his eyesight is good enough to permit him to read, must surely feel inclined to exclaim, like Cæsar of old when Brutus stabbed him, et tu Brute. It is an astonishing example of ingratitude by an Irish correspondent to the man who has labored so hard and done so much for what Irishmen generally, whether right or wrong, regard as the Irish cause. Mr. O'Kelly's words will be very offensive to the British Liberals, and we do not think that they will be regarded with much favor by the majority of Irishmen. Looked at from an Irish Nationalist point of view, they are, to say the least of it, most imprudent. If there is any truth in them, Mr. Gladstone must be a most accomplished hypocrite—a conscienceless scoundrel, in fact.

MORLEY LIKELY TO RESIGN.

The statement made in Mr. Yates' weekly letter to the New York Tribune, that Mr. John Morley, Chief Secretary for Ireland, will probably feel himself compelled shortly to resign, is interesting. Mr. Morley, who has long been accustomed to take the anti-British view of public questions of every sort, and who is in reality a revolutionary doctrinaire of a very pronounced sort, is discontent about several things. He is not content about the British occupation of Egypt, and he is discontent over the eight hour bill also. Mr. Gladstone forced both of these measures on him, and now to cap the climax, Lord Rosebery, according to Mr. Yates, having practically shelved Home Rule, has filled Mr. Morley's cup of affliction to overflowing and left him no resource but to resign. Mr. Morley's Irish friends also, by their unruly behavior, make his position still more difficult. It is to be hoped that he will shortly find in resignation a remedy for all his grievances. It will be a good riddance, if he feels forced to retire from the Cabinet. In a properly constituted Government of Great Britain, Mr. Morley could have no place. He is not simply an unpatriotic statesman, which is notorious; he is a dangerous one also, and ought not to be intrusted with power. He and Mr. Gladstone have together brought political affairs in Great Britain to such a pass, that it is doubtful if Lord Rosebery or any other moderate Liberal can form a stable Government. The proper thing for the British people to do would be to place Lord Salisbury and Conservatives in power for the next decade at all events, till the present political effervescence has had time to simmer down. If they have any regard for the safety of the Empire, they will do so at the first opportunity.

WHAT FREE COAL IN THE STATES WOULD MEAN.

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer and the New York Sun, the former a strong Republican organ and the latter independent Democratic, are alike furiously opposed to the admission of coal duty free to the United States. The Senate Committee has, we believe, placed a duty of 40 cents a ton on imported coal. We do not yet know whether this will be finally sanctioned, but we suppose it will. The Post-Intelligencer, however, still continues to argue on the basis that coal will be admitted free to the States under the Wilson tariff, and that it will give the coal trade of the New England States to Nova Scotia, and that of the Pacific coast to British Columbia. West Virginia coal, it says, costs in Boston today $3.27 a ton; if coal is made duty free, Nova Scotia coal of excellent quality can be laid down in that city for $2 20 a ton, or $1.07 less per ton than the West Virginia coal. It, therefore, concludes that in order to retain the coal trade of New England for American producers, it will be necessary to reduce the wages of American miners 50 cents a ton, and the cost of hauling West Virginia coal to the Atlantic seaboard would have to be reduced by 50 cents more. This, our Seattle contemporary says, can't be done, because miners' wages in West Virginia are already very low, and the cost of hauling coal at present leaves no profit to the railway companies. We suppose the "no profit" in this case means very little profit. Hence, concludes the Intelligencer, "free coal will give the coal market of New England to Nova Scotia, just as free coal will give to British Columbia the coal market of the whole Pacific coast." The new York Sun says that if the Democracy had complied with the Chicago platform, repealing the present duty of 75 cents a ton, and substituting a revenue tariff of 35 per cent. ad valorem, the Nova Scotia producers would be practically on an equality with the American, and would have to pay to the United States treasury about 70 cents a ton on the coal that they send to New England. The Intelligencer seems to think that similar reasoning applies to British Columbia coal sent to American cities on this coast. It will not be the fault of these papers if a handsome duty is not retained by Congress on Canadian coal imported by consumers in the States. Nothing could exceed the unfriendly spirit of both to Canada, and their jealousy of her.

THE BANKS of the Clearing House Association of Philadelphia have presented a petition to President Cleveland, asking him to veto the Silver Seignorage Bill passed by Congress, which the petitioners say will, it allowed, be a great disadvantage to the business interests of the country, will create distrust in its monetary system at home and abroad, and seriously check its return to prosperity.

A LARGE EXODUS is expected from Ireland this spring and early in summer It is expected to begin about the middle of April, and to be directed mostly to the United States. American immigration agents have been hard at work in Ireland for some time, and have succeeded in creating the impression that however unsatisfactory things may be in the United States, they are infinitely better than in Ireland. It is to be feared that the emigrants will suffer much disappointment, and even hardship, before they can procure employment.

THE VICTORIA Colonist of Wednesday informs us that if we make inquiries in the proper quarter we will find that but a very small quuntity of the goods for which duty is paid is consumed outside the Province, that the quantity is so small as to be not worth mentioning, and that on the other hand a good deal of merchandise for which duty is paid at Eastern ports is consumed in British Columbia. If this is so, it makes British Columbia's claim for more liberal appropriations than she has been getting even stronger than we had supposed it to be.

RIOTS have occurred at Altoona, Pa., where American workmen have attacked Italians and other foreigners, who have been working on the extension of the Altoona and Logan Valley Railroad at the low wages of 75 cents a day. Some of the Italians have been driven from their houses and several of them beaten. Three thousand American workmen, it is stated, took part in the fray. The officials of the Logan Valley road have announced that no more work will be done on the extension of their line till all labor troubles are settled, and no further danger of an outbreak is to be feared. The sheriff of Blair county, in which Altoona is situated, says that the reports of the riots have been exaggerated. Some Italians have been assaulted, but none seriously injured. Only one is in the hospital and none have left the city. No houses have been burned.

IT IS REPORTED from Germany that Chancellor Caprivi thinks an European customs union may come with the next century. This it is thought would involve a boycott against the United States. The Freisininge Zeitung regards the boycott as within the possible limits of the Chancellor's views. Other journals say that the Emperor is convinced that the European states will sooner or later be forced to unite against American competition, which threatens to overwhelm industrial enterprises in Europe, as it has already nearly overwhelmed European agriculture. Indeed it is probable that nothing but the American system of protection, which was carried to absurd lengths under the McKinley tariff, has hitherto prevented this result. What will be the result of a milder system of protection under the Wilson tariff, or of American free trade if it should be established later, remains to be seen. The Canadians and British are the only nations in the world who can contend on equal terms with the Americans. All they ask is a fair field and no favor, and the Americans, with all their boasting, are afraid to give them that.

LORD ROSEBERY is said to have had three special ambitions, which he hoped to live to see gratified, first to marry the richest wife in England, second to be one day Premier of Great Britain, third to win the Derby. The first and second have been already gratified. He married a daughter of the Rothschilds, who like all that golden family was of course rich beyond the dreams of avarice. The lady is dead, and he is now said to aspire to the hand of a member of the royal family, the Princess Maud of Wales. He is Premier of Great Britain. It only remains for his third ambition to be gratified, and if late news is true, that his horse Ladas, the favorite for the Derby, is in good health and condition, this ambition too may be gratified next summer. Lord Rosebery is certainly a fortunate man. If his horse wins the Derby we suppose he will have nothing more left to sigh for, unless it be the hand of the Princess Maud, which is doubtless worth all the rest together and more. And Lord Rosebery is proud to be Mr. Gladstone's warming-pan, to keep his chair comfortable for him till he finds it convenient to return! Truly, as somebody has said, it is but one step from the sublime to the ridiculous.

A Well-Known Surveyor Dies.

QUESNELLE, March 27.—[Special]—O. L. Poudrier died here this morning of pneumonia after four day's illness.

[Mr. Poudrier is a native of Quebec and came to this Province about ten years ago. He is a Dominion land surveyor. He worked for some years for the C.P.R. and for Ross & McKenzie at Donald. He has for about three years been working for the Provincial Government and has had the reputation of being a hard and conscientious worker. A well-known surveyor said that Mr. Poudrier had gone through hardships that would have killed ten ordinary men. He went north some two years ago to do some Provincial Government work. He was employed in a new section seeking a pass and the trails he had to go through were such that he was laid up for some time with inflammation of the feet, and limbs. Mr. Poudrier had the respect of all his fellow craftsmen, and his work was always found to be accurate and carefully made out. He was one of those men in fact to whom society of to-day owes much and whose bravery and self-sacrifice are so often allowed to pass unrecognized]

LOCAL NEWS.

Mr. J. C. Brown, the postmaster of New Westminster will again stand for re-election at the next general election.

Major Hickey found a sum of money on the street yesterday. The loser may recover the same by paying for advertisement and applying at the Windsor House.

The city hall officials of Vancouver presented Magistrate Jordan with a handsome tea service and table on the occasion of his marriage. The police force also presented him with a clock.

The Rev. J. M Donaldson of Steveston is charged with stealing chairs from the Opera House there. It is common for parsons to usurp pulpits, but to steal seats is shocking —from an opera house, too!

Quite a number of Wellingtonians came in last night to see "Nanon." The dramatic critic of the defunct Advocate pronounced a brief critique in the word "bully." This was not said in the faint tone which damns.

The New Westminster weather seer, Capt. Peele, reports that there are very low tides and that the snow is leaving the summits of the mountains. Pimbury's thermometers can tell us more than that. Eh, Charley?

Mr. Mark Bate has been appointed distributing collector of provincial voters in Nanaimo city. Unless Mr. Bate is a thoroughbred Hibernian it is difficult to see how he is going to sustain the situation, seeing that the term is entirely antithetical.

The police yesterday visited one of the small islands in the vicinity and recovered some of the property which has lately been stolen in petty burglaries from various houses and stores. It is supposed to have afforded some clue.

A private letter informs us that the Dominion Government is well aware of the gravity of the situation in Hawaiia and that representations will be made to the Imperial Government to see that the restrictions placed on Canadians, by the present so-called Government in Hawaii, will be removed.

The other morning on the train was a pretty miss and a fly young man. Beside the pretty miss there was a vacant seat. The fly young man went up and, indicating with a wave of his hand the empty place, said: "I beg pardon, but is this seat engaged?" The answer he got was short and direct: "No, sir, but I am," and he sought another place to get rested.

PERSONALS.

Prof. H. Stoel returned from the capital yesterday.

Mr. H. M. Van Deura, of San Francisco, is in the city.

Mr. E. H. Law, of Portland, is a guest at the Wilson House.

Mr. F. H. Whyte, of Toronto, is registered at the Windsor.

Mrs. J. J. Sehl was a passenger from Victoria on yesterday's train.

Mr. K. K. Peiser camer over on the ss. City of Nanaimo last evening.

Mr. J. Halton, of the Windsor House, returned from the mainland last night.

"Nanon."

The Carleton Opera Company is certainly the best of its class which includes this Province in its tours. Last night's performance of "Nanon" was an exceptionally high class production either in singing or acting. It was splendidly costumed and perfectly staged. The whole caste was part perfect and the choruses admirable. Miss Marie Bell as Nanon and Miss Alice Vincent as Ninon gave excellent renditions in their solos, while Mr. W. T. Carleton was the bright particular star of the male members of the company.

Dr. McKechnie on Bacteria.

The lecture last evening in S. Alban's Hall by Dr. McKechnie was one of those enjoyable affairs for which S. Alban's is getting quite a reputation. It was not a very taking subject to lecture on, but the Doctor handled it in such a manner as held the audience in rapt attention from beginning to end. While it was impossible, from the very nature of the subject, to avoid technical terms, he explained them as they occurred in such a manner that none could fail to understand their import. He began by explaining how the famous French doctor Pasteur in his first investigations on fermentation discovered microbe organisms and traced to them the decay of organic substances. Dr. Lister, of London, was led by Pasteur to investigate why wounds suppurated, and traced it to the same cause.

The doctor explained that protoplasms was the generic name, although there were several subdivisions of the family, and that all organic matter was composed of and lives by their means. He then illustrated on the blackboard their means of absorbing food and means of multiplying their number, and gave some startling figures about their size and speed of reproduction. He was especially happy in explaining their action in fermentation in its many forms, and showed how yeast acted in the making of bread, the causes why bread and milk soured and how to prevent it. The lecturer must be fond of preserves, for from the manner he handled that part of the subject, he evidently had made it a profound study. To give more than a faint idea of a lecture of such importance, our space will not permit, it had to be heard in the doctors own language in order to be appreciated at its true value. Although the subject bristled with technical terms, the lecturer worded it in such a manner that there was not one in the hall but understood the lecture. To illustrate it in a more practical manner he prepared a microscope slide for exhibition and by scraping his tongue with his knife and transferring what came off to the slide he showed the universal presence of Bacteria.

A hearty vote of thanks was moved by Dr. Sloggett and seconded by Mr. Jamieson, who in short speeches only, voiced the pleasure the audience felt in having listened to such an instructive lecture. It was carried unanimously. By invitation of the lecturer, those that wished might stay after the lecture and see some of the wonders revealed by the microscope of which a number availed themselves.

KITCHIN'S DREAM.

Business being only quiet, I spent the afternoon till dark doing somewhat heavy work in the garden, and having dined, sat me down in the same arm chair I've sat in many times before in my happy home in dear old England, and many a "forty winks" have I had in that same chair. I was very tired and feeling very sleepy, said to my dear wife, "If I fall asleep let me sleep on." And fall asleep I did, and dreamt the following dream:—

I was in the garden, spade in hand, when a fine-looking elderly man, with snow white hair and beard, and ruddy, honest face, that showed unmistakably that he was a man who had weathered it more ways than one, came to the gate and said "I also have been a worker, and seen much of the world and its 'ups and downs.' For forty years I was a miner—come along with me and I will show you something worth the seeing." I laid down my spade and involuntarily followed him. When on Front street he said: "See you those vessels in the bay? That's the commencement of better times, and there are real good times ahead for your good City of Nanaimo. The worst is past, not to return for years, if ever, but that I guess you know yourself. See you that tramway?" I could not, but thought I should.

"I want you to go with me by boat to Vancouver and on to the richest country, or one of them, on God's earth, the Kaslo-Slocan country;" and so we went. Once on board, the old man, putting his strong hand on my shoulder, said: "I guess you also have seen some of the ups and downs of this wicked world." "That's so," I said, "but 'Never Say Die,' is my motto, and I mean to get there yet." "Well said," replied my friend, "then you will not regret this journey." From boat to train, and then we seemed to fly, and landed in a country teeming with untold wealth. Mine after mine he showed me, and seemed to know many of the workers. "This is no talk, no idle fancy," said he, "there it is before your eyes, untold wealth;" and so it was—unmistakably. We then followed, as I remember, the track of the Kaslo-Slocan Railway. "In less than three months from now, my friend," said he, "the rails will be down and trains running into Kaslo; and here we are in Kaslo itself. I must leave you now, make good use of your opportunity, and if you have the pluck you're credited with, (and but for that I should not have sought you out), I say if you have the sense I think you have, put your last dollar into Kaslo, and grow rich." I turned to thank him for his good advice, and saying I would act upon it, stretched out my hand, but his was gone, it was my wife's I grasped.

"You seemed so restless, Tom, I thought I'd wake you, it's time to go to bed" she said. And to bed I went.

This dream is a fact. It may have arisen from the unbounded confidence I have in the future of strained anxiety to her expression, irresistibly touching.

He was a striking figure. His small pink and white face and delicate features told nothing of the insensate excesses in which a fortune had been squandered. Sixty years of life had whitened the hair falling like floss from a bald crown, but he did not cry quarter to Time. Age had come and found him rebellious. He kept his chin up and never confessed that fierce premonitory tremors passed at unlooked for moments over his frame.

His clothes were youthful and unusual. A cream colored coat, worn at the seams, but stainless, fitted tightly, foppishly at the waist and fell in a clerical frock to the knees. A long brown cape was folded across his breast after the manner of a shawl. He belonged to the past quite as much as the house he lived in. As he swayed uncertainly in the doorway he seemed to have stepped from a forgotten canvas to be for a single moment embodied in the lamplight.

"Ah, Tom," and he wagged his head unsteadily. "So you have come over to us? Welcome! A guest beneath my roof is always welcome. Eh, Virginia? Why don't you smile and say yes? If we are poor, my girl, we know what hospitality means. We know that a crust may be divided among friends and taste the sweeter for it. As sure—as sure's my name is Rufus Kent I'd rather—I'd rather, by heaven, sit down with a friend—mind, with a friend, that's the point—to a dinner of herbs than in solitary magnificence before a stalled ox. My sentiments, young man. As Touchstone says, 'A poor thing, but my own.'"

"A guest beneath my roof is always welcome."

Tom took the proffered hand in its faultless glove and gave it a rough grip.

"Your guest?" he was thinking. "You old scamp! You don't know that nearly every penny of your beggarly annuity goes to buy your clothes and whisky, that Virginia does copying and painting when you are asleep, and wears one gown month in and month out that the bills may be paid; that my weekly payment for bed and board will be more than acceptable. You don't know it, and—no matter what Virginia says—I think you wouldn't care a hang if you did. If you had your deserts, you'd have been pitched in the river long ago."

Somehow his own failure made him unusually bitter to Mr. Kent's shortcomings. The world's hard knocks may eventually teach resignation, but who can say that while the bruise is aching the brute within us does not snarl?

As the old man kissed Virginia on the forehead, a pathetic paternity savoring of the theatrical in the caress, he did not dream how intensely Tom longed to call him a few hard names in sound Anglo-Saxon.

He stumbled a little and sank into the most comfortable chair, his murky eyes half closing.

"Tea! Ah, what is more grateful to a tired body than a cup of tea?" This was a staple remark, always delivered with gusto by Mr. Kent after a lengthy communion with mixed drinks. "The fragrance of it! The sorcery of home is exhaled from a cup of tea. But—I hope, my dear, you have something else. A chop or a bit of salad."

Virginia watched him as he looked across the tips of his delicate fingers in fuddled meditation and felt her face burn. Her joyous anticipations of the first night spent together had been deplorably amiss. Tom was discouraged and silent, half angry with her and enraged at the world. Her father had returned after one of his "bad days," when the remembrance of all he had misused and lost stung him to drink and perhaps to find the ghost of his old pleasures in the hazy enchantment offered by strong liquor.

Ah, there was hope for Tom. He would forget this disappointment. He would join the race again. He had still a lance to throw. But poor old dad! Perhaps she did not half guess what thoughts tortured him. She knew his annuity trickled through his fingers now in small personal extravagances just as the thousands had gone when she was a little child, but she could not blame him.

To dress presentably and drop in upon old friends for a chat and a glass of port, sometimes to dine with them in the club where once he had shone with unequaled brilliancy or to pay for an orchestra chair when an old comedy was presented were the surviving joys of his decadence. His friends did not know in what corner of the town he had hidden himself, did not remember he had a daughter. Frequently he forgot that fact himself. And meanwhile Virginia worked and saved, stealing only odd moments for her reading and music, practicing depressing economies that robbed her cheeks of color and sometimes gave to her deep eyes an expression of fear.

But she loved the old man. Her pity for what she termed his misfortunes made her tender to his faults. Not so Tom, who had watched the pitiful little tragedy for two years. This exhausted spendthrift, this cold materialist with a dreamer's eyes, this autocrat with a voice of honey, suave, dainty, well mannered, he disliked as much as his native geniality permitted.

Tom threw himself on a lounge and shading his moody eyes from the lamplight watched Virginia as she went lightly from cupboard to table, noted the streak of wavering pink staining her cheek, the eagerness with which she hurried to anticipate her father's maudlin requests.

"Ah, Virginia, how stoical you are! how steadfast! how tender and passionate!" he thought, a deep, warm pity rushing into his heart.

And he had been impatient with her for telling him an unpalatable truth, had raged at one more defeat and turned from her in bitterness! He had dared to do this! Had he forgotten how often he had seen her smile in the face of despair?

His repentance, like all his moods, was quick and intense, the desire to make amends tormenting, unappeasable. He wanted to tell her what a brute he felt himself. He was conscious of a sudden warm impulse to fold her in his arms and comfort her.

The physical helplessness of woman! What a lovable misfortune it must always seem to a strong man! Every movement of Virginia's young figure, the subdued expression of her proud little mouth, the dauntless pose of her head appealed to him, awaking the instinct of protection until it throbbed an importunate fire in his heart.

"If I could help her!" he thought, with savage longing.

While regarding her more intently than he knew, her eyes, those lovely eyes more green than brown and tonight more golden than green, met his in a questioning, entreating fashion, and the look stirred him strangely. A warm flood poured over his heart. His veins pulsed heavily with an incomprehensible fever never known before, and the pain of it was nervous and sweet.

As he had felt for a brief moment when he stood by her side in the mysterious twilight, so he felt now, only the strangeness, the pain, the delight, were intensified a hundredfold. He drew his breath with a feeling of awe.

After dinner he sat down to read. It was useless. His heartbeats were hot and thick. A medley of indefinite speculations crept between him and the printed page.

He threw himself upon his bed and tried to think what he should do, now that he had forsworn the ministry and the possibility of success as a dramatist had shriveled under that day's blight. But that was useless too. He started to his elbow and looked with excited eyes into the darkness.

He felt he was not alone. It was as if a presence stood at his side, a new truth upon its lips, a gift within its hand.

"Do you not know me?" a voice of crystal sweetness seemed to whisper. "I come to all men sooner or later! Some find me early and some when youth is gone. I come by strange ways. I weave strange spells. The heart that once feels my lava touch is never the same again. There is naught to withstand me. For I am Love."

CHAPTER III.

It was close upon 11 when at length he quitted the house. The mood of the night had changed. A light drizzle filled the air. A red vapor rolled across the sky, broken in places and giving glimpses of deeper murkiness beyond. Fog horns bellowed from the river. Freight trains like dingy serpents crawled past the western boundary of the college campus and went hissing into the fog. He paused irresolute for a moment after the gate clanged behind him, then crossed the street and entered the college grounds.

An unquiet spirit possessed him as he strode along the familiar paths. He was only a trespasser in this place where hitherto he had roamed at will, but whether he was seen or not was of little consequence. He had escaped from his quiet room into the wet, massy darkness to question himself. The vapor that garbed every tree in ghostly robes, the light sweep of the wind passing his ear like a woman's sigh, the peace here and the reminders of life on the river and market places beyond were all old and dear to him. They had helped him before.

It was not of his rejected play he was thinking. Somehow the keenness of the sting left by failure had subsided. In fancy he saw a woman's face—Virginia's face. It seemed to float before him, sometimes the eyes hidden as with a veil, sometimes the sweet, proud mouth.

He was filled with this new feeling that in the twinkling of an eye had rushed over him. Was it love? Love! Oh, the ecstasy ringing in the soft vowels as he murmured them in a tender semitone!

Hitherto he had written of love, had believed that he understood it. But tonight in every fiber he felt the illimitable, untranslatable difference. He had been like a blind man dwelling on the beauty of the light he had never seen—a stay at home describing the marvels of lands never journeyed through. His heart had been sleeping while in his writings he had prated of passion.

But this sweeping forgetfulness of self even in a bitterly critical moment; this reaching out to and flooding immersion in the personality of another; this madness that shook him, trailing its seduc-

OUR SPRING MILLINERY OPENING

IT WAS LARGELY ATTENDED.

We begin this Spring under favorable circumstances, and we are positive, with our experience of the past year, that we can make it to the advantage of every lady in Nanaimo and District to buy her Millinery from us.

Easter came in so early this year that we required to have our opening on the 15th, 16th and 17th of March, and during the Season you will find us headquarters for Hats, Bonnets and Flowers.

Among our Pattern Hats you will find exqusite creations of the highest French Art.

There is a great deal of Lace, Ribbon and Feathers used this Season, besides flowers of every kind and color, among which Roses and Violets predominate.

Skill makes a Stylish Bonnet of a handful of Flowers, Ribbons, Tinsel Braid and Gold Buckles. It transforms a little jetted lace, a jet aigrette, a yard or two of velvet ribbon, into a Gem of the Season.

Come to the store and see us. We were told last year that our prices were somewhat too extravagant. This year we are positive you will find our prices more than reasonable.

Perkins WESTEND AUCTIONEERS.

LADIES ATTENTION!
AUCTION OF DRY GOODS!!

I shall start on Saturday, Feb. 10th, to clear out by Auction the entire stock of Dry Goods, Millinery, Mantles and Men's Furnishings, latelty bought from Mr. A. A Richardson at a ridiculously low price previous to making an entire change in my business. I have secured the services of Mr. Dufour an Auctioneer of over 20 years' experience in England and Canada, to conduct the auction branch of my business.

The Public of Nanaimo know that this stock is composed of really useful and serviceable goods, and this will offer them an opportunity of purchasing at their own prices. I ask one and all to be at the WESTEND on Saturday, Monday and following days, when the whole stock will be offered without reserve. Sale from 2 to 5 each day.

MEN'S ATTENTION! Auction of Stock of Mr James Caldwell.

We have received instructions from Mr. James Caldwell to Auction the whole of his well assorted stock of Men's Furnishings and Hats.

As Mr. Caldwell is going out of this line, and intends in the future to devote his entire attention to the Tailoring branch of his business, the whole of this stock will be offered without reserve.

Sale on Saturday, Monday and following nights from 7 to 10.
