LONDON LETTER

BRITISH SAYINGS, DOINGS AND GENERAL AFFAIRS.

Gladstone Better — Corbett Quite at Home—Rudyard, the Kipling Speaks. Canadian Copyright—Vagrants Will Get Votes—Harcourt's Bill for Irish Tenants—Good Things Ahead in the Year 2,000—Bill to Disestablish the Church in Wales—Important Labor Commission Report.

LONDON, April 28.—The number of emigrants from England to Canada during the month of March was 2,363, making a total of 3,399 for the first quarter of the year.

Gladstone Almost Recovered.

Mrs. Gladstone writes to a friend of the ex-Premier, who had inquired concerning Mr. Gladstone's health, that he has recently suffered from a slight chill, but is now almost entirely recovered from its effects.

Corbett at Home From Home.

In an interview, Corbett is quoted as saying "the British public are darned kind in London. Just like home." Corbett says he intends abandoning the ring if he defeats Jackson, and will adopt the stage.

The Czarewich Not Inclined to Marry.

A despatch from St. Petersburg to the Chronicle states that the Czarewich is said to be disinclined to marry. It is added that he wants to renounce the succession to the throne in favor of his youngest brother, the Grand Duke Michael.

Will Dismiss Soldiers for the Harvest.

The Government is expected to dismiss 200,000 soldiers from the ranks during the coming summer with a view to facilitating the gathering of the harvest. The Government is also expected to make reduction in the military budget.

"King" Kipling on America.

The St. James Gazette publishes an interview with Rudyard Kipling, who is now in London. Mr. Kipling is quoted as saying: There is a dyspepsia epidemic in America. They don't understand our comfort. Everything is too temporary for that. They are in a railway waiting room stage of civilization, and it is hardly worth while for anyone to settle down and be solidly comfortable. America feels like one vast camp.

International Copyright in Canada.

In the House of Commons Mr. Chas. B. Stuart-Wooley, Conservative, asked the Government whether the Dominion of Canada had notified the Colonial Office of the cessation of the royalty of 12½ per cent. on reprints of British copyrights.

Mr. Mundella, president of the Board of Trade, said the Government had not as yet received such notice. The Government was aware that Canada was not satisfied with the international copyright and wished to be released from the operation thereof. The Government and the Dominion of Canada were still in communication on the subject.

Giving the Vote to Vagrants.

Lord Salisbury said the Government, if it believed that the action of the House of Lords in rejecting the Home Rule bill was against the wishes of the people, should at once dissolve and appeal to the country. He did not wish to be understood as saying that the Government ought to dissolve every time a difference arose between the two Houses, but upon a difference affecting the relations between two parts of the Kingdom which had subsisted for seven centuries it was manifestly their duty to appeal to the electors. Lord Salisbury then referred to the Government's Registration bill, which he said would disfranchise thousands of the best people and extend the right to vote to many who were practically vagrants.

Harcourt's Evicted Tenants Bill.

The Evicted Tenants Bill, introduced in the House of Commons by Sir William Harcourt, provides that where a tenant's holding in Ireland has been terminated since May, 1879, the former tenant may, within a year after the beginning of the present act, petition the board of arbitration for reinstatement. The board may make a conditional order of reinstatement, and unless the landlords within the prescribed time show cause against the order, the board of arbitration may make the order absolute. If the landlords show cause why the board of arbitration should hear the parties, after considering whether the conduct of either landlord or tenant is unreasonable or whether the one had unreasonably refused any proposal made by the other, the board may dismiss the petition or make the order absolute and order the sheriff to put the petitioner in possession. The rent of the holding is to be subject to a fair rent being fixed in pursuance of the land law of 1881, and the holders shall have the same right as other holders of present tenancies to have a rent fixed. The bill goes into effect in the November after its passage. It provides for the establishment of a board of three arbitrators, who hold office for two years. The landlords and tenants are to apply to this board in order to have their cases examined and decided upon.

The Reign of Chemistry A. D. 2,000.

M. Berthelot, the French savant, has caused a sensation by discussing the future triumphs of chemistry under the title of The World in the Year 2000 He declared that chemistry will furnish deliverance from the social evils of the present day. This will be accomplished in part by utilizing the heat of the sun and the central heat of the earth. The latter will be obtained by shafts two miles deep. The modern engineers are equal to the task. Chemical transformation will be easy with such a source of heat at command. When energy can be cheaply obtained, food can be made from carbon taken from carbonic acid, hydrogen taken from water, and nitrogen taken from air. The work vegetables have so far done, science will soon be able to do better, with far greater profusion, and independently of the seasons or microbes or insects. There will then be no passion to own land, beasts need not be bred for slaughter, man will be milder and more moral. The reign of chemistry will beautify the planet, and there will be no need to disfigure it with the works of the agriculturist or with the grime of factories and chimneys. It will recover its verdure, and the flora of the earth will be a vast pleasure garden, and the human race will live in peace and plenty.

Church Disestablishment in Wales.

Rt. Hon. Herbert H. Asquith, Home Secretary, in the House of Commons introduced the bill for the disestablishment of the Church in Wales. For more than a century, he said, the vast majority of Welshmen had regarded the Church of England in Wales as an aggressive and sectarian power. To them it had been a symbol of national discord. The bill with which the government proposed to correct this objectional state of affairs would cover with its provisions Monmouthshire as well as Wales proper, for the people of Monmouthshire were Welsh in their habits and sentiments. Twelve parishes in English dioceses would be thus disendowed and disestablished. On the other hand, fourteen parishes in the diocese of S. Asaph would be transferred to some English bishopric The treatment of a number of boundary parishes involved delicate questions and would be considered therefore by special commissioners. If the bill should be passed in the present year it would become effective January 1, 1895, when all public and private rights in patronage would become extinct. No Welsh bishops would sit in the House of Lords. Ecclesiastical law in Wales would cease, and the courts would be deprived of their power. The existing doctrines and ordinances would continue, although without the force of law. The power to hold synods would be preserved and the church would be empowered to appoint a body to hold property in its behalf. Touching upon the subject of disendowment, Mr. Asquith quoted many figures. The gross income of the church in Wales, he said, was £279,000. This sum, under the act, would be applied to national and public purposes, such as providing for hospitals, nurses, parish halls, libraries and laborers' dwellings. It would be applied locally and parochially, and no central fund would be created. The Government proposed to appoint three permanent commissioners to carry out the provisions of the bill.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, president of the board of trade in the last Salisbury cabinet, denounced the Government's proposals as akin to the legalization of sacrilege and plunder.

Sir Richard Webster, attorney-general under Lord Salisbury, spoke with equal vigor against the bill.

Excerpts From Labor Commission Report

The Times this morning gives a full abstract of the recommendations compiled by the Duke of Devonshire as the basis of the report of the labor commission which is certain to be adopted by the House of Commons.

The recommendations conclude with the statement that it would be unwise to institute any general system of industrial tribunals, but that there might be some advantage in empowering town and county councils to establish them tentatively without directly appointing the members. Any court of this kind duly authorized would have statutory powers similar to county courts. These tribunals would only deal with disputes arising out of existing agreements or trade customs. With regard to the more serious disputes affecting large bodies of men, the commissioners think that it would do more harm than good to establish wards with legal powers. The commission cannot recommend the direct establishment of boards of conciliation and arbitration by the State, but think that a central depot having means to procure and circulate information may do much by advice and assistance to promote their more rapid and universal establishment.

The report next deals with the appointment of official arbitrators. The commissioners think that the difficulty often experienced in finding a suitable arbitrator might be got over by giving a public department power to appoint an arbitrator to act alone or in conjunction with others. If the same persons were frequently appointed they would become arbitration experts fairly free from suspicion of bias. Their expenses should be paid by the treasury. If the system succeeded it might eventually be given a permanent basis, with perhaps, power to summon witnesses and examine them on oath. The commissioners consider that it would be no advantage to institute a special labor department, but they advocate a Government inquiry, with a view to remedying the existing confusion in the administration of the various acts dealing with sanctions, the hours of labor for women, etc.

The second part of the report deals with the question of hours and wages at great length and detail. The commissioners express themselves against state interference, except in the cases of women and children and unhealthy occupations. They are decidedly of the opinion that no special legislation is necessary for minors, who they say, appear to be able to take care of themselves in such matiers.

With reference to non-unionist labor the commissioners think it impossible to legislatively remove the causes of those serious conflicts that have occurred in recent years in the less skilled and organized trades. They hold that non-unionist workmen should be protected as far as possible by the public authorities, and that individual liberty for the masters to employ and the men to serve whom they please should be maintained.

The report mentions the absence of a clear legal definition of intimidation and picketing.

It urges that strong measures be taken for the improvement of gradual extinction of the lower class of sweating factories, which the commissioners say, demoralize working people and the community and compete unfairly with the larger properly conducted factories.

Such a reform might cause temporary distress and might even drive some minor industries out of the country, but the country would well spare them since they would not longer tempt the immigration of a class of persons who are unable to get employment in well conducted establishments.

British Protection of the Samoan Islands.

The movement looking to a British protectorate over the Samoan islands is no longer disguised. To all appearances a secret understanding exists between Great Britain and Germany, which includes also the United States. A person in high authority here was questioned by a reporter for the Associated Press regarding the attitude of England and Germany on the attempt being made by New Zealand to assume the administration of the Samoan islands, and stated that a protectorate movement upon the part of Great Britain was progressing with the sanction of the United States government, which is represented as caring nothing who manages Samoa, as long as the rights of the United States under the Berlin treaty are continued. Color is given to this assertion by United States Ambassador Thomas F. Bayard, who in an interview to-day said of Sir John Thurston, governor of the Fiji islands and British Commissioner for the Western Pacific: "The presence and counsels of a man of such ability would in my opinion offer a happy solution to the present difficulties.

Mr. Bayard added at the same time that he had received no information on the subject from his government, either in regard to any present negotiations between the United States, Great Britain and Germany, or in reference to an impending conference of the three powers interested in the Samoan islands.

Up to April 19 there had been no further outbreak of the natives on the Samoan islands, but they still refuse to give up their arms.

Quarreled and Shot Each Other Dead.

MEXICO CITY, April 28.—Jack Redding and David Harper, wealthy and prominent mining men of the Don Cabezas camp, Sonora, Mexico, quarreled and shot each other dead.

ALESUND, Norway, April 24 —The American North polar expedition under command of Walter Wellman, started to-day for the island of Spitzbergen on the steamer Ragnvold Jarl, which has been chartered for the expedition. Experts here pronounce the steamer the best iceboat in Norway. The aluminum boats the expedition carry were greatly admired here for their beauty, strength and lightness. Prior to their departure, a large number of cable dispatches, expressing well wishes for the success of the expedition, were received from the United States.

What is Anarchy?

In reply to a request, asking for a definition of anarchy the Seattle Post-Intelligencer has the following: "Anarchy: (1) Absence or insufficiency of government; a state of society in which there is no capable supreme power, and in which the several functions of the state are performed badly or not all; social and political confusion. (2) A social theory which regards the union of order with the absence of all direct government of man by man as the political ideal; absolute individual liberty. The most noted expounder of this theory was Pierre Joseph Proudhon, who said 'the true form of state is anarchy,' meaning not positive disorder, but the absence of any supreme ruler, whether king or convention. (3) Confusion in general."

The participants had an enjoyable afternoon and look forward to others at a near date. Those who tied second and third in the pigeon shooting divided the stakes.

That North Gabriola Meeting.

Who would not take the statement of an honest Gabriola farmer in preference to that of the Deformed association? One honest tiller of the soil, who was met yesterday in the street, stated most positively that there were only five residents of the island present at the North Gabriola Opposition meeting on the evening of the 15th April. These only attended from curiosity and to put in time; the rest stayed away feeling, and justly so, that when they require advice from people like Bryce, Young and McInnes they will send for them. "We" said the indignant farmer "never asked these people over; they thrust themselves on us, notwithstanding the trespass notices which have been published from time to time in the papers." Continuing, he said, "take each one of these people and enquire as to whether they have any advice to throw away in the management of affairs which concern us. I think not!" and with a contemptuous snap of his fingers he finished with; "I wouldn't give a snap of my fingers for a whole kettle of such orators!"

VANCOUVER'S PATIENT MAN.

The Vancouver News-Advertiser in its issue of Thursday again returns to the subject, which just now seems to be a favorite one with it, of Hon. Mr. Davie's alleged part in the forced retirement of Mr. J. C. Brown from politics. Mr. Cotton says that he is "amused at the efforts being made by both speakers and newspapers to clear the Government, and especially the Premier, from the charge of being concerned in the retirement of Mr. Brown." But it is to be noted that Mr. Cotton has not a word to say in reply to its neighbor, the World, which has not hesitated to speak of him as "an abandoned wretch, who, reeking in dishonesty himself, magines that everybody else is similarly polluted." It would be interesting to know if Mr. Cotton is amused with language of this sort, applied to himself, and with being further characterized as a man who "is alleged to have robbed his partner, and whose reputation as a railway promoter is, to say the least, hazy." If Mr. Cotton is amused at being branded in this style in his own town, where he is known to everybody, then all we can say is that he has a very peculiar taste, in some respects closely resembling that of a certain Provincial actor in England, who, having had the impudence to call uninvited on a noble lord in the locality where he was playing, was kicked downstairs for his pains. On being afterwards asked if he was acquainted with his lordship, he replied: "Yes, I had the honor on one occasion of being kicked downstairs by him." Mr. Cotton has had the honor of being kicked by the World all over Vancouver, but he has not had the grace even to thank it. Mr. Cotton, we believe, expects to be a candidate for Vancouver, along with Mr. McGowan and his dear friend, Mr. Greer, in the Opposition interest at the forthcoming general election for the Province. What a pretty figure he will cut on the hustings, with the World's unanswered indictment flaunting before his face, and how proud his former supporters will be to vote for him under the circumstances! The actor's pride at being so far noticed by a noble lord as to be kicked down stairs by him, will be nothing to Mr. Cotton's just pride and dignified demeanor on the occasion. Mr. Cotton is much concerned at the feeling of disgust which he says will arise among the electorate at large at the party which is reduced to the necessity of such tricks as those which he alleges the Premier has practised against Mr. Brown, in order to get rid of him. But the public will want some better evidence than Mr. Cotton's word of the alleged tricks, and it will also be apt to ask from that gentleman an explanation of the extraordinary patience he is showing in maintaining silence under the damaging attacks of the World. Even Job, who for three thousand years has been a model of patience to mankind, is outdone by Mr. Cotton in this particular line. Job wished that his enemy would write a book, and then he would answer him. But the World has written a remarkably plain book for Mr. Cotton, and published it too, and still the editor of the News-Advertiser is silent as an oyster. Can it be that Mr. Cotton is afraid to say a word, lest proof be offered of what his town contemporary has so broadly affirmed. It almost looks that way. If this is true explanation of Mr. Cotton's superhuman patience, we think that it would be only decent for him to imitate his friend, Mr. Brown, and withdraw at once from public life. "Stand not in the order of your going" is a Shakespearian motto that would, under such circumstances, suit the case, lest Mr. Cotton in his farewell address to the electors of Vancouver after the election should have occasion to imitate Kemble's complaint, and say with him:

"Perhaps it was right to dissemble your love,
But why did you kick me down stairs."

H. S. & F. G. A. Meeting.

The quarterly meeting of the Directors of the Horticultural Society and Fruit Growers' Association of British Columbia will be held at Mission City, on Tuesday, May 1st, 1894, at 2 o'clock, p.m. Members and others interested are invited to attend or send questions for discussion. Mr. Hutcherson reads a paper on Prunes, and Mr. Palmer one on Pests.

PROVINCE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

NOTICE.

Lease of Timber, Limits, Takush Harbor, Smith's Sound.

SEALED TENDERS will be received by the Honorable the Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works up to 4 o'clock on Monday, 21st May next, from any person, persons, or corporation duly authorized in that behalf, for permission to lease the undermentioned lands for the purpose of cutting spars, timber or lumber, subject to the "Land Act" and amendments thereto, viz:—

Lots 30, 31, 32, 33, 50, 51 and 52, Range 2, Coast District, containing in the aggregate 13,892 acres.

The competitor offering the highest cash bonus will, subject to the fulfillment of the provisions of the "Land Act" and amendments, as aforesaid, be entitled to a lease of the premises for a term of twenty-one years.

Each tender must be accompanied by a certified bank cheque to cover the cost of survey, $1,642 70, the first year's rental, $1,389.20, and the amount of the bonus tendered; and if the person tendering is not the owner of a properly equipped saw mill in some part of the Province appurtenant to the limits tendered for, he must enclose another certified cheque for $1,389.20, as a guarantee for the erection of a suitable mill within two years. The cheques will be at once returned to unsuccessful competitors.

A crowded house greeted the presentation of the cantata "David the Shepherd Boy" in the Institute Hall last evening. It was a performance which did great credit to the local musical talent. Mr. Alexander Sharp asked the audience not to show its approval by the usual mode of applause as the music was of a sacred character. Although deprived of demonstrating their appreciation, there is little doubt that the hearers and spectators thoroughly enjoyed the entertainment.

Mrs. Morgan Harris, as "Abigail, Queen of Carmel," rendered her part in an excellent manner both vocally and dramatically.

As "David, the Shepherd Boy," Mr. J. J. Thomas performed the leading role most admirably.

Mr. T. Noel represented "Saul, King of Israel."

The other dramatis personæ included:

Michal, Saul's daughter—Miss L. Matthews.

Samuel, the Prophet—Mr. Jeff Jenkins.

Jesse, the Ephrathite—Mr. T. R. Barber.

Attendants, shepherds, etc, were represented by other members of the well-trained choir, making an ensemble of exceptionally high character.

A Postal Curiosity.

Postal authorities were surprised the other day to discover in the mail matter a slightly soiled linen collar. At first it seemed that some absent-minded person had mistaken a letter-box for a soiled-clothes basket. But an address on one side of the linen, with a canceled postage stamp, and a letter written on the other, proved that the letter had been put to use as the conveyer of intelligence. So the collar was back-stamped and the missive delivered.

Change in Method.

There is scarcely a single subject taught nowadays in the same way that it was taught thirty years ago, and that even law, the most conservative of studies, is now treated in an entirely different method from that which prevailed in former years.

Peach stones find ready sale to be used in manufacturing perfumes, flavoring extracts and prussic acid.

Gas Fattened Fish.

When the water was withdrawn from the lake near Geyser spring, in Saratoga, an immense quantity of trout and pickerel was captured, many of them being of great size. It is thought that the mineral water, impregnated with gas, was the cause of the uncommon abundance and fatness of the fish; that the stimulus of the mineral constituents and gas sharpens the appetite, invigorates the nerves of the stomach and promotes the digestion of the fish.—Chicago Herald.

Note Without Seal or Number.

Harry I. Brett, paying teller of the Shoe and Leather National bank of this city, has a $1 note which bears neither seal nor number, while in other respects it is perfect. The finding of the note created considerable interest among banking men, and there is considerable speculation as to how the note passed through the departments and out of the treasury without the omission being discovered.—Boston Transcript.

OUT OF THE JAWS OF DEATH.

By Frank Barrett.

him the crane fitted in the doorway, the windlass inside and the chain hooked against the wall, telling him how I had seen great bales raised from below by this apparatus.

"If you can hold onto the chain, I'll lower you down," said I. "You can put you feet on them hook things."

"But how will you get out?" he asked.

"By the hole in the cellar. It ain't too narrer for me."

He agreed to this, saying he would wait for me below, and then, as noiselessly as we could, we pushed out the crane, got the chain down and made arrangements for the descent, his eyes becoming used to the darkness, which at first was impenetrable to them. I could see still more clearly, being used to the place and its darkness, and his silhouette stood out distinctly against the gray sky as I held tight on to the winch. I could see him quite plainly when he said, "Now, little friend," and swung himself out from the loft door on the chain.

I was more careful than if my own life had depended on the descent, and I turned the handle steadily and yet as quickly as I dared. I felt at ease until his head and shoulders disappeared, but then a horrible dread that he might slip from the chain possessed me as I thought of him swinging out of sight a hundred feet and more above the stone quay below, and fervent gratitude filled my heart when there ceased to be any pressure on the handle and a low whistle from below reached my ears.

And now, not waiting to wind up the chain or even to close the loft door, I sped down to the cellar that I might rejoin him.

At the foot of the cellar steps my foot struck against something, which, by the sound it made, I knew to be the box I had thrown down the shaft before we went up to the loft.

CHAPTER V.

A BITTER REVENGE.

At the sound I instinctively crouched down as one does in expectation of a blow, and stretching out my hand I felt the rough splintered edge of the box. The significance of its being there was plain enough—the escape of Taras had been discovered, the men had followed us through the run and upheaving the box and stone had come up into the wharf cellar. Nor was I left for a moment in doubt, for as I dropped on my knees Putty cried out:

"Look out, mate! We've got him. The beggar's just tumbled over that bloomin box."

Then the guttural voice of Drigo from the farther end replied in broken English:

"Knife him! Dead or alive, I'll give a hundred pounds for him."

I strained my eyes in vain to penetrate the darkness. I could see nothing. Not a ray of light entered the cellar by the hole under the stairs. To cross the cellar and escape by the casement was out of the question. I dare not attempt it. I could not clamber into the opening without some noise which would betray my whereabouts to the villains, and before I could squeeze through the knife would be driven into me. I was not in in a condition to reason that I might escape death by declaring at once that I was not Taras. I expected to be murdered for helping him to escape.

I dared not move, for I could not tell whether my enemies were before or behind me—to the left or to the right, but I held myself in readiness to spring away at the first touch, at a breath, which might warn me of their approach.

Those moments of silence as the men waited for some fresh sounds to guide them were terrible. Could that foreigner see in the dark better than I? Was he stealthily drawing upon me to wreak his vengeance? Anything was possible to a foreigner, I fancied at that time. Not the death that followed, but the actual horror of having a knife thrust into my body froze my blood.

Suddenly a flickering, luminous streak appeared in the black distance as Putty tried to strike a match. It was wet. He tried another, producing another blue streak.

"We must get a light somehow or we shall get a-stickin one another," he muttered. "Ain't you got 'ere a dry match, mate? Mine's all wet."

To my increasing terror, Drigo made no reply, supporting my belief that he saw me and was preparing to cut me down. But after a few moments of terrible suspense another streak appeared in the darkness at some distance from the others. Drigo had found a match and was trying it. He was more successful. A green spark fell, and the sulphur began to bubble up into violent flame. It already threw a livid light on his hideous face and a gleam on the knife in his hand. In another moment I should be seen.

How could I escape? The casement was beyond them.

The steps were behind me, but I dared not turn my back on that knife. The box in front of me suggested a better means, and as Drigo raised the burning match, making the way clear, I shot across the intervening space and dropped down the shaft into the run. The light was so dim and my movement so rapid that I was not recognized by the men. They saw only a figure dash past and drop down the hole, and under the impression that it was Taras, as I knew by their cries, they gave chase in an instant, one—Drigo, I believe—dropping down before I had passed through the second tub, but I was out of arm's reach and made good use of my start.

The water had risen considerably. It was up to my throat in one part. My sodden petticoat clung to my legs and weighed me down as I rose to my feet. Nevertheless I scrambled up into the cellar of the Joy while the men below were groping for the foot irons, swearing furiously. A lamp stood on the ground where they had left it beside the flagstone which Taras had thrust aside

IN STEP WITH THE SEASON

Our place is now full of all the dainty goods peculiar to this season. We have everything new that has been produced for the Spring and Summer Trade of 1894 We don't want to tire you with prices on one or two insignificent articles—but assure you that this Spring everything in our stock has been marked as low as it's possible to buy the same quality of goods elsewhere.

As every lady of experience in buying Dry Goods knows—there are certain brands and makes of goods which are called "seconds" by the manufacturers, and can of course be bought at lower prices than "firsts"—these are often pushed, in some cities, as first-class goods, and in some cases deceive even a practiced eye.

We never as yet had to resort to this kind of business, and will always try to maintain our reputation for keeping only the very best goods.

Yale Notes.

The satisfactory result of the 36 hour clean up by the American company operating below here of some 17 ounces of gold, serves to prove Dr. Dawson's assertions, that the richest deposits of gold would likely be found in this vicinity owing to the widening of the river after passing through the canons above. That Yale will again become an active mining town, there now remains no doubt, and both American and local capitalists have secured every foot of available mining ground, both in hydraulic and deep workings. Much interest is being taken in the developments of the Prince Albert Flat Hydraulic Co., situated a few miles below Yale. This enterprising company, although not one year old, are decidedly in the lead, their object being to hydraulic out the old river bed, which appears to have changed its course at that point. They are at present engaged in running an open cut some 60 feet in depth and 400 feet long to run off their tailings, and will in a very short time be into their pay ground. This company enjoys all the natural advantages for hydraulicing, having abundance of water and comparatively light ground. It is expected that with the addition of another Monitor, which they purpose putting in this summer, they will be able to make a showing that will open the eyes of the mining world, and again make Yale the busy mining town of '68 and '70.

Y. M. C. A. Last Night.

There was a fair average attendance at the Y.M.C.A hall last night, when the following programme was rendered:

Part I—Piano solo, Mrs. Kitchin; reading, Mr. VanKleeck; solo, Mr. Bate; recitation, Mr. Tanner; clarionet solo, Mr. J. R. Wray; reading, Capt. Dempster.

Part II—Piano solo, Mrs. Kitchin; reading, Mr. A. Anderson; solo, Miss M. Hague; reading, Capt. Dempster; clubs, Mrs. H. Stewart.

The piano playing of Mrs. Kitchin was admirable and greatly appreciated, as also was the reading by Captain Dempster from Jerome K. Jerome's "Three Men in a Boat." Mr. W. Hunter occupied the chair and discharged the duties with his usual grace.

G. P. Kleiser, the elocutionist, and Canada's star entertainer, who appears next Saturday will be accompanied by R. Eurick, a celebrated pianist laureate of the Paris and Madrid conservatoires.

LADIES ATTENTION!
AUCTION OF DRY GOODS!!

I shall start on Saturday, Feb. 10th, to clear out by Auction the entire stock of Dry Goods, Millinery, Mantles and Men's Furnishings, latelty bought from Mr. A. A Richardson at a ridiculously low price previous to making an entire change in my business. I have secured the services of Mr. Dufour an Auctioneer of over 20 years' experience in England and Canada, to conduct the auction branch of my business.

The Public of Nanaimo know that this stock is composed of really useful and serviceable goods, and this will offer them an oppo. tunity of purchasing at their own prices. I ask one and all to be at the WESTEND on Saturday, Monday and following days, wher the whole stock will be offered without reserve. Sale from 2 to 5 each day.

MEN'S ATTENTION! Auction of Stock of Mr. James Caldwell.

We have received instructions from Mr. James Caldwell to Auction the whole of his well assorted stock of Men's Furnishings and Hats.

As Mr. Caldwell is going out of this line, and intends in the future to devote his entire attention to the Tailoring branch of his business, the whole of this stock will be offered without reserve.

Sale on Saturday, Monday and following nights from 7 to 10.
