Walkem as an Anecdotist— He Illustrates How He is "To Let" and "Unfurnished"— Foster Gets Back at the Doctor—Foster Goes Keith on Beaven One Better and Compares Himself to Christ on the Mount— Kitchen Under Cross Fire Makes a Poor Showing.

Mr. Ralph Smith, continuing, said: The third bill brought in was perfectly useless and not worth as much to workingmen and miners, as perfect organization, which the miners could bring about themselves. An organization of their own could do far more to bring about a settlement of a strike or other difficulty than the conciliation bill brought in by the Government. Workingmen should therefore see that it is to their interest to band themselves together against the present Government whose chief object is to crush the workingmen and give everything to the capitalist. He hoped the workingmen would sweep down the present Government and give to us representatives who would recognize the wants of the workingmen.

The chairman then said that as the meeting was open to both sides, he would like to have someone come to the defence of the Government.

Dr. Walkem's name being called, that gentleman mounted the rostrum amidst great applause. He said it was rather premature for supporters of the Government to be called upon to defend the Government at such an early stage of the meeting. The Government had not as yet been very severely attacked and therefore there was nothing to defend. He would like a little later on to have an opportunity to say something in defence of the Government if a defence were necessary. He was much pleased with the mode of diction and style of delivery of Mr. Ralph Smith, but he did not think that anyone had gained much information from that gentleman's address. So far as the E. & N. Ry. grant was concerned, Mr. Smith, had he been a resident of this country several years ago, would have known that it was the workingmen themselves who gave the grant away, by electing Mr. Dunsmuir when this very question was fresh before the country. If workingmen then had taken such a keen interest as they pretend to do now, they could have defeated Mr. Dunsmuir instead of electing him twice on these very issues. The electors knew then that they were placing Mr. Dunsmuir in a position where, if he wanted to do so, he could use his position to secure his own ends and if they believed the E. & N. grant was wrong, they could have prevented him from doing so. At the time this grant was given away the road was bound to be built and it was satisfactory to know that there was a local man to handle it, who had the best right to receive encouragement. The road was demanded from the Government by the workingmen themselves. He understood that Mr. Kitchen was present to deal especially with the Slocan road; it was part of that gentleman's political stock in trade. But in anticipation of condemnatory remarks of other opposition speakers, he could assure the meeting that if Mr. Kitchen, or his friends, believed there had been anything wrong about the transaction, they would have moved for a committee of inquiry in the House, and would then have had an opportunity, if the matter were as they would no doubt represent it to-night, to blacken the character of the Government beyond redemption. Even if a majority of the House should whitewash them over, the evidence and information brought out in such an investigation, if the transaction had been dishonestly carried out on the part of the Government, would mean the defeat of the latter in every district in the Province. The fact that these gentlemen had not pursued this course was the best reply to any charges they might make. The doctor then said that in the last contest he stood as an Independent, and it was his intention, had he been elected, to support all good measures of the man who could secure a following strong enough to form a government with some stability about it. Not so with the so-called Independents who were elected. They reminded him of the story of Sheridan's son who had made up his mind to go into politics. The young man informed his father one day of his determination, saying that he was coming out as an Independent, and, if elected, would go the House with a label on his head "To Let." To this the father replied: "Yes, my son; and add underneath 'Unfurnished.'" (Cheers.) This was the best illustration he could give of the position of the Independents after the last election. (Cheers.)

Mr. Foster was next asked to come forward. He began by saying he had been objected to on the ground of not being a resident of the district, but, for the benefit of those who were not possessed of all the facts, he would recall the circumstances which led to his election four years ago. The people here did not know who to get. Walkem wanted the nomination, but they would not have him. He would refer to the doctor's case later on. Since his election he had not cast a vote in the Legislature that was not in the interest of the men who elected him. He admitted that it was a big disadvantage to a district to have a non-resident representative, but it was a far greater disadvantage to the representative, because he was not on the ground to refute the many slanderous reports circulated against him. It was difficult for him to travel about much, because he was a poor man, and members were not paid enough to enable them to devote time to going about. He had to make his sessional indemnity pay his expenses while attending the House, and it was barely sufficient for this purpose. He was elected an Independent simply because there was no organized Opposition at the time of the last election. He was not sent to support the Government, but to endorse good measures no matter from whom they emanated. Had the Opposition been properly organized all the Independents would have gone Opposition. Not so with Dr. Walkem, however, had he been elected, because, according to his own statement to-night, he would have gone to Victoria with a label on the top of his head "To Let." (Laughter.) He had not before given the doctor credit for wanting to go to Victoria with a sign of this kind held out to the strongest party in the House, but had given him credit for some brains. However, according to the doctor's own statement, he would have added the additional information to the label, viz: "Unfurnished." (Laughter and applause), He was elected on a platform having anti-Chinese planks and opposed to giving away public lands. Since the last election there had been nothing done in the way of legislation on either of these two great questions, except to pass a few useless resolutions requesting the Dominion Government to raise the tax on Chinese coming into the country, and he believed that if these resolutions were forwarded to the Dominion Government, they were accompanied by instructions to the ministers at Ottawa to pay no attention to them.

Referring to the Canada Western land grant he said it was not as bad as the terms conveying the grant to the E. & N. road. Up to the present there had been nothing done by the promoters of this scheme, except to get an extension of two years time during which period 14,000,000 acres of land would be tied up. It had been contended that the working men endorsed the E. & N. grant by electing the late Mr. Dunsmuir. If they did not oppose Mr. Dunsmuir they were not to blame. They were influenced to support the Government in order to get appropriations. This Government had done nothing for the working men except to introduce a bill giving compensation for injuries in certain cases. He then referred to the Crofters' scheme, going over the old story so often told by Mr. Foster and his friends, and with which the readers of THE TELEGRAM are already familiar. The Government buildings came in for the condemnation of Mr. Foster, who said that the cost had already reached $800,000 and would not fall short of a million by the time they were completed. The Nakusp road he would leave to Mr. Kitchen to deal with, but would say here as he had said in committee of the House on the previous night: "If the members of the Government were not interested in the transaction, their friends were." In short, he condemned every feature of the arrangement entered by the Government for the construction of the road.

A voice—Tell us how we are to get these roads built—how you would go about it?

Foster—I believe the Government should deal with the lands themselves and build, equip and own the road, not pay a company for doing it.

Continuing the speaker said that when Mr. Davie was in Nanaimo some time ago, he promised to do many things for this district; as a matter of fact he made similar promises everywhere he went. The Province could not get enough money to do one half the things Mr. Davie promised to do. In a final appeal to the workingmen, he said the poverty and hardships of workingmen were not due to natural causes but to bad legislation. Workingmen had the power to do it and they should take in hand the matter of legislation themselves and not put it the hands of those who would rob them. The land ought to be treated in such a way that the people could get onto it without paying too much. If the representatives whom they had sent to the Legislature had not been able to accomplish much, they had opened the way to greater things in the future; and the people who elected them before should do their part again in perfecting the work that they had begun. The C.P.R. Co. had their men in the House ready to do whatever was required of them when the occasion arose; the Family Compact, as the Dunsmuir's were called, had their representatives in the House. These comprised: Mr. Hunter, Mr. Pooley and Mr. Croft, all of whom were working in the interest of the E. & N. road, and now they want you to send down Mr. Bryden. Are you going to do it?

The whole audience in one voice—Yes!

A Northfield man No; we will send Foster!

Foster—No; you will not get the chance.

A voice—You know better than try it, Foster.

Another voice—Mr. Foster, what value do you place on the E. & N. railway lands?

Foster—Some of it is worth $1 an acre and some is worth $25.

Same questioner—Did Mr. Hunter not offer you all the company's lands at 50 cents an acre?

Foster—I will just explain that little incident to you. Mr. Hunter jokingly offered me the company's lands at 50 cents an acre in the smoking room of the House one day. But it was like the devil when he took Christ up upon an exceeding high mountain and showing Him the country about, said: All these lands will I give Thee if Thou wilt fall down and worship me.

A voice—You compare yourself to Christ, then? You have an awful gall, Foster.

Apparently ashamed of himself, Mr. Foster went on to state that a business proposition, signed by the president, had never been presented to him, offering the lands at this price.

Another citizen then called Mr. Foster to task for his action on the bill providing for certain exemptions in the case of wages of workingmen being garnisheed.

Another voice—You went down to Victoria as an Independent. Why did you change without first consulting your constituents before doing so?

Foster—We were compelled to oppose the Government.

Mr. Badcock—Mr. Foster says he has been honest. I say he has not. I would like to ask Mr. Foster if he has been honest.

Foster—I will leave that question with the electors to decide.

Badcock—Foster and company were elected as Independents, but as soon as they went to Victoria they formed themselves into a third party, to follow one man, regardless of their pledges and in opposition to the Government. A meeting was held in Victoria when this plan of procedure was agreed upon, when it was also decided that the Independents and Opposition were to work together against the Government under separate names.

Foster in explanation admitted the charge, but said he was not a party to the arrangement, and did not know of the meeting referred to.

At this point a great deal of interruption occurred and Mr. Foster sat down. When the turmoil ceased, another gentleman from the audience said, "Mr. Foster, previous to the last election you said to me that if the strike held out until after the election you could be elected. What principle actuated you then?

Foster—I may have made such a remark to you, but if I did so, I have forgotten it.

A voice—Do you deny having anything to do with the strike?

Foster—I do.

Another voice—You don't remember lots of things, Foster, but we do.

At this juncture, Foster glad to get out of the position he found himself placed in, sat down and the irrepressible Thomas Kitchen came to the rescue. He had a great many documents with him, but did not state whether they were purloined or not. Finding one or two he thought he might need, he opened fire. A light weight, in every sense of the term, at all times, Kitchen appeared to greater disadvantage on this occasion than he has, perhaps, ever done since he entered politics. He tried to explain away his failure by saying he had expected the Premier would have been present which would have given him greater zest in his work. He began his speech by saying he was not going to enter into a tirade against the Government, and immediately proceeded to do so. As predicted by Dr. Walkem, he began with the Nakusp and Slocan road. He denied the doctor's statement that this subject was his stock-in-trade. Up till within three days of the nomination four years ago, he had no intention of becoming a candidate and when he did make up his mind to do so, being a poor man, he had to borrow $200 in order to put up his deposit. He was always opposed to the Government, although elected as an Independent. Notwithstanding this he went to Victoria prepared to support all good measures introduced but intimated that up to date not a single act had emanated from the Government benches which he could support. In the next contest he would go before his constituents as an out-and-out Oppositionist. In his opinion the policy of the Davie Government was: "Give us a railway and we will give you all you want." Referring to the Shuswap and Okanagan road, he said the Province was now paying interest on $25,000 a mile. The Government, he claimed, could find the money, build railroads and lease them to the same advantage that a company could. In the case of the Nakusp road, the Government had entered into an agreement that no business man would think of making.

He then trotted out a bundle of sessional papers and took up almost the entire balance of his time in reading from them. Finally, by way of a change, he said: "Dan McGillivray, the contractor, told him a few days ago there was not a single new rail being put into the Nakusp & Slocan road." He said that he had taken out bills of quantities for the whole of the construction work on this road, and he could say with authority that $17,500 was an excessive price for the work. After reading another half hour from sessional papers in reference to the Nakusp road, Mr. Thomas Keith, evidently thinking he was not going to get a show, asked Kitchen to cut it short. Mr. Kitchen took the hint, and said he would drop this subject and deal with the general policy of the Government. First, he said, the financial policy had been a system of living on borrowed money. For years past the Province has been running behind about $200 000 a year for ordinary expenses of the country. The revenue for 1893 was $269,000, and the salaries for civil government alone amounted to more than the total taxes of the Province. We were now making up the difference between the actual taxes collected and the expenditure by the Dominion subsidy and from sources of revenue that were not permanent. If every member elected went in for securing appropriations for his district, without showing the necessity for them, the country would go bankrupt. He did not go to Victoria to grab for his constituents, but to get their just dues. The Government borrowed $1,000 000 in 1887, and another $1,000,000 in 1891. Where had it been spent? The amount used for public works was a mere nothing. Farmers were crying out for roads all over the country. In many places they could not get to market with their produce for want of roads. There were places in his constituency where farmers could not get out with an ox-team. Mr. Kitchen then went over the old and stale matter of the Parliament buildings, condemning everything in connection with them in the most sweeping manner. Proceeding again, he said the moment anything came up in the House touching the rights of strong corporations, the majority were at once bonded together against himself and his friends. So long as men were sent to support these big companies, the poor man would get poorer and the rich, richer. There were men in the Legislature who were all right in their homes and in business, but in the House they had absolutely no independence of their own. It wrung his very life out to see these men coming out of the lobbies of the House to vote on a question in which some capitalist was interested, and who had just had them by the button-hole, to see their hands go in favor of a monopolist bill as soon as the vote was called. Looking hard at the newspaper men present, the redoubtable Thomas said the press of the Province was practically controlled by the Government, and therefore the country could not get a fair sample of what occurs in the house from press reports. The newspapers endeavored to make all the points they could in favor of the Government, but when a point was made by the Opposition they leave it out. In the approaching election there would be no room for Independents. Sides must be taken for and against the Government. The Redistribution Bill was not as fair a measure as it ought to be, but half a loaf was better than none. We would have to accept it in the meantime and try and get a better one. He had voted against it because he believed the Government had devised some fair measure of representation and stuck to it. He remembered Mr. Hunter's offer for the sale of the E. & N. railway lands, but did not consider it a business proposition. He said a short time ago the Government pretended to be anxious to push to a decision the mineral case of the E. & N. road, but were now delaying it.

Mr. Kitchen was about to sit down, when Mr. Bryden asked:

"Is the Nakusp and Slocan road completed?

Kitchen—No.

Bryden—Does the contract say these second-hand rails you have said so much about, shall be used?

Kitchen—No; it says they may be used.

Bryden—How much of the road is now constructed?

Kitchen—About twenty miles.

Bryden—What is the character of the country?

Kitchen—It is a sort of canyon.

Bryden—What is the character of the cutting?

Kitchen—It is rotten rock.

Bryden—You say you have taken out quantities?

Kitchen—Yes.

Bryden—What have you allowed per yard for cutting and roadbed?

Kitchen—$1.50 per yard.

Bryden—And this road is built along a precipitous rock mountain?

Kitchen—Contractors tell me it is the cheapest kind of work.

Bryden—Why then have to make the many curves and grades you referred to in the contract and on which grounds you condemned the rails being used.

Kitchen—To avoid cutting off points.

Bryden—Then you say that this is easy construction work? (Laughter.) Is the work under Government supervision?

Kitchen—It is under the supervision of a C. P. R. engineer.

Bryden—Is there not a Government engineer there as well?

Mr. Kitchen rather confused at this unexpected phase of affairs, admitted there was, but practically tried to show that the Government had given him instructions to neglect the interest of the Province.

Mr. Bryden—Well, from what you have told us Mr. Kitchen, we must come to the conclusion that the road is a most difficult and expensive one to construct, otherwise these curves would not be necessary. I have no desire to take the part of either the Government or Opposition, but I know that no company could build such a road except under great difficulties and at great expense. Do you consider $17,500 per mile an excessive price for the work?

Kitchen—Yes, from the information I have I do.

Bryden—Who gave you that information?

Kitchen—I will not give the names. If I were to mention the name of an engineer in the employ of the C. P. R. or Government, they would lose their position.

Bryden—You cannot then expect us to accept the statements of an irresponsible man. (Cheers and Laughter.) Mr. Kitchen, I heard you say on the train to-day that you would not give a cent for the lands along the E. & N. road; that it would take a fortune to clear them.

Kitchen—Yes, I said if that was a fair sample I would not take the land as a gift and attempt to clear it up.

Bryden—That was a very fair sample of the best of the company's lands where we were at the time. It was not much of a give away then on the part of the Government!

Kitchen—No, it was not. (Laughter and applause.) If the land is no good let the company give it back to the Government.

Bryden—The company would be only too glad to do so if it could get what the land cost back. Mr. Bryden then said he wished to correct a statement made by Mr. Foster which was that the Opposition were not permitted to introduce a measure which in any way affected the revenue of the Province. Mr. Foster should have also stated that no private member could do so.

Glad to recede back to the chair, Mr. Kitchen left the fray to brother McKenzie, heartily wishing no doubt, that he had remained in Victoria to assist brother "Winchester" Brown.

Mr. McKenzie will be heard from in our next issue.

TUESDAY, APRIL 10, 1894.

CIVIC SENATE.

The City Fathers View the Approach to Gordon's Wharf.

The regular meeting of the City Council took place last evening.

Present, Mayor Quennell, Ald. Wilks, Pleace, Nightingale, Dobeson, Churchill, Cocking and Morrison.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted.

Communications

Were read from S. D. Pope inclosing cheque for Government grant to schools for $1,401.40.

From Stanley Craig, secretary of St. Andrew's Church, asking that Fitzwilliam and Robson streets be graded full width opposite the church. This letter was received and request granted.

From J. H. Davidson saying he had asked for grade opposite his property and had not got it, that if request is not granted in two weeks he would take legal proceedings to obtain it.

From the Nanaimo Lacrosse Club asking permission to use the lower portion of the Fire Hall station, Deverill square as a dressing room and for stores. Granted.

Accounts.

Were received from: Water Works Co., $300; R. Dunlap, $20; R. Aikenhead, $22.50; Free Press, $4; Gas Company, $17.75; A. Haslam, $69.10; Wm. Langton, $3.45.

On motion these accounts were referred to the Finance Committee.

Ald. Nightingale said that a week ago last Saturday Mr. Aikenhead's team only worked six hours, and this should be considered by the Finance Committee.

Ald. Cocking said this occurred before the new order was passed.

Ald. Nightingale said a teamster should not be so dishonest as to ask for what he was not entitled to.

Ald. Wilks said teamsters had always been paid full time for Saturday before and should be up to last Monday night.

The account was allowed to stand.

Ald. Nightingale, under the head of reports from committees, said that the Street Committee had interviewed Mr. Johnston in reference to the Front street grade opposite the approach to the wharf, and that the owners of the wharf were willing to raise the approch two feet. He would like the matter settled by the Council.

Moved and carried that the matter come up for discussion in its regular order

The road foreman's report was read and on motion received and filed.

Ald. Pleace said he had been asked by a number of friends to bring up the matter of the dog tax and said there was a strong feeling for a change. People who owned good dogs did not object to the tax. In many cases those willing to pay the dog tax had their dogs stolen and put in pound by boys, while worthless curs were allowed to run at large. The tax collected last year was $132, which at the rate of $2 apiece amounted to 66 dogs. There were certainly more than that number in the city.

The clerk said that last week twenty dogs were captured, eleven redeemed, one sold for 25 cents, and the balance destroyed.

Ald. Nightingale said that the system of gathering them in every few days would soon set the matter right.

Ald. Pleace said he would like to know what was done in regard to the street at the approach to Coulson's wharf. His worship said it would come up later.

Tenders.

Tenders were opened for the sidewalk opposite the Salvation Army barracks as follows: Peter McLean, walk and stringers laid down complete, 70 cents per foot; railing, 30 cents per foot. Colville & Miller, walk and stringers 60 cents per foot; railing, 6 cents per foot. Geo. H. Frost, sidewalk, 43 cents per foot. Geo. A. Thompson, sidewalk, 68 cents per foot; railing, 5 cents per foot. A. Almstead, sidewalk, 60 cents per foot.

On motion the tender of Geo. H. Frost, being the lowest, was accepted.

Tenders for the bell tower were received as follows: Geo. A. Thompson, $235; F. H. Strain, $300, Geo. H. Frost, $183; J. A. Bittancourt, $230.

Moved by Ald. Nightingale, seconded by Ald. Wilkes, that the tender be awarded to Geo. H. Frost. Carried.

Ald. Cocking said the fire company would like to have a place provided in the town for drying hose. Other cities had a provision of this kind, and the same should be made here. He moved that the contractor be instructed to build a rack in the top of the tower for this purpose.

Ald. Pleace said tower hanging had been condemned by firemen everywhere, and is detrimental to the hose. The proper way was to erect racks along the wall inside.

Ald. Dobeson agreed with Ald. Pleace.

Ald. Pleace said the firemen should look after the matter themselves.

Ald. Wilks said the firemen were now compelled to take the hose out on the street.

Ald. Dobeson moved, seconded by Ald. Morrison, that the matter of taking care of fire hose be left in the hands of the fire wardens.

Notices of Motion.

Ald. Dobeson gave notice that at the next regular meeting of the Council he would move to have $500 set apart for gravelling Commercial and Front streets, the work to be done during the month of September.

Ald. Pleace seconded the motion.

Ald. Dobeson said he would like to see these streets properly graded and some larger gravel used.

Ald. Wilks said other streets were being provided for and we should fix those already in hand first.

Ald. Nightingale supported Ald. Wilks' idea.

Ald. Cocking said he would favor the motion if it included Victoria Crescent and up to the Fire Hall.

Ald. Dobeson said it was his intention to include the principle business streets as far as the Fire Hall. Motion carried.

Ald. Nightingale filed a power of attorney from Arthur Wilson empowering him to move in his behalf that a four plank sidewalk be laid down from the rock to Albert street.

Ald. Nightingale moved to set apart $1,500 for the improvement of Wallace street and $1,000 for the improvement of Prideau street.

Ald. Cocking said that this made $3,000 of an appropriation for three streets in the Middle Ward. What was to become of the rest of the streets. There was only $7,000 to be spent altogether, which would leave very little for the rest of the town. These items should be held over till later on. He was in favor of fixing up all the streets but would like to see Commercial street put in good shape first.

Ald. Nightingale said he was surprised at Ald. Cocking, as that gentleman told him a few days ago he would like to see Wallace street fixed up. If Wallace street was put in proper shape it would save Commercial street a great deal. Motion carried.

Ald. Nightingale also moved that a sidewalk six feet wide be laid on Front street from Bastion street to the approach to the wharf. Carried.

In reference to the approach to Gordon's wharf Ald Morrison asked if a fixed grade had been given.

Ald. Nightingale said yes, and that it would bring the grade of the approach to the wharf about three feet higher than the hand rail along the present approach. The owners of the wharf thought two feet higher than at present would answer the purpose. He thought the Council should hold a special meeting and go over the matter carefully and then reach a decision. This was a matter that would have to stand for years to come.

Ald. Pleace asked if a grade fixed by the Council was binding.

The Mayor thought it was. The Council should not put any unnecessary obstacles in the way of the wharf company, but should look after the safety of the city.

Ald. Dobeson said he would not say to make them come up to the grade fixed by the Engineer but the line should be raised sufficient to make the junction of the approach to the wharf and the street safe. He would say four feet would answer the purpose. He thought that the Council might go over and look into the matter now.

Ald. Pleace moved that an adjournment be made for half an hour to enable the Council to view the grades in question so that an intelligent decision might be arrived at.

Upon reassembling, Ald. Morrison moved that the Engineer's grade be adhered to.

Ald. Nightingale thought the Council should not be too hard on the owners of the wharf. He thought the Council should try and meet the owners of the wharf.

Ald. Morrison said he meant to have it an open question. Fill it up in the meantime to meet the necessity of the case and there if at a future time the council wanted to raise it they could do so.

Ald. Dobeson said it was not a question of the wharf people coming up to the grade but the city fixing the street line permanently and raising the grade so where it ought to be. If this case is allowed to go it would establish a precedent which might work to the city's disadvantage at some future time.

Ald. Cocking said that some time ago he told Mr. Johnston twenty inches would not be enough but thought two feet might be sufficient. Two feet higher would be an easier grade than the present but six feet would be impracticable. A mistake had been made by the owners of the wharf in building the wharf so low. However he would favor making the grade four feet higher than at present which would not be too much.

Ald. Pleace was of the same view. Four feet added to the present road way would answer the purpose.

Ald. Wilks would also favor four feet.

Ald. Cocking said before making a motion he would like to see the interests of the city secured. He would like to know whether we could make the change legally or not. He would like to have legal advice before taking final action and moved to this effect.

Ald. Nightingale said he did not think anything could be gained by taking advice. The grade had already been given to Mr. Green. He was still of the opinion that if the company raised the grade to the top of the hand rail, say three feet, it would be sufficient.

Ald. Morrison said he thought the Council should point out the grade and let the company do the best they could. If the top of the rail were given the Council would change the engineer's grade which was not desirable.

Ald. Cocking said the company would not go ahead without the city fixing the grade. He thought four feet would meet the case.

Ald. Dobeson moved, seconded by Ald. Cocking, that one foot be taken off the fixed grade.

Ald. Nightingale moved in amendment that the top of the hand rail be fixed as the grade for the company.

Ald. Cocking opposed Ald. Nightingale's motion. He would like to see it made as easy as possible for the company but before changing this grade he would like to know the position the city would be placed in legally.

Ald. Pleace thought it would be well to hold it over for a week, and in the meantime to get the engineer to make a report, giving the height of the wharf above low water mark, the height of the crown of the street above the wharf, and the height of the approach from the wharf to the street, so as to enable the Council to tell the exact incline.

Ald. Dobeson seconded Ald. Pleace's motion and withdrew his own.

In reference to Mr. Davidson's letter, Ald. Dobeson moved that the matter be referred to the Street Committee with power to employ the city engineer to fix the grade as asked for.

Ald. Wilks seconded the motion, which was carried.

Ald. Cocking moved that the Street By-Law be confirmed. Carried.

The Council then adjourned.

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. X. Jones was buried yesterday in the Wellington cemetery. The funeral procession left the house about 4:30. Quite a number of people followed the hearse. The following were the pall bearers: Masters Johnny Ashcroft, James Work, James McNeil, Leatherbarrow, McMillan, Gillespie. The Rev. Cooper officiated and Robert Kilpatrick had charge of the funeral.

Mr. Mose Hamburger and his charming bride arrived here on the noon express yesterday after an extended tour throughout both the Northern and Southern States. At Chicago they had the pleasure of seeing what was left of the World's Fair and got quite a view although the fair was through. They took in New York, Philadelphia, Montreal and several of the other leading cities. They have just returned from the Midwinter Fair and will make their home here in the future. At present they will be the guests of Mrs. Kennedy at the Wellington Hotel, until their residence on Victoria avenue is completed. The bride is well known here, and is without exception a charming lady. A great many, during the early part of the evening, called upon the couple to extend to them their hearty congratulations for the future.

Associated with him on his present tour are Annie Louise Tanner-Musin, the phenomenal soprano of America, who has been not unwisely christened "the American Nightingale;" Miss Bessie Bonsall, a contralto whose career will be watched with interest, the great cities having prophesied that she will bring the musical world to her feet; Edouard Scharp, the famous solo pianist, now in his fifth season with Musin; and Frederick W. Elliott, who is announced as America's greatest tenor. With such support M. Musin will present a concert programme than which nothing better could be desired by any one. Musin's own fame as a violin virtuoso now belongs to the whole world. He has attained that enviable position where the word master, in its superlative sense, crowns him with the laurel of genius.

but never so thoroughly confounded before. He stood leaning upon the table and watched Tom out of the room. There was a craven malignity in every line of his sneering face. A longing almost irresistible gripped him to knock Tom down and kick him until the hot, brutal desire for retaliation had been glutted.

"Stumped, by God!" he muttered.

CHAPTER XIII.

The next fortnight saw an important change in Tom's life. He left the University building and took a cheaper suite of rooms on Irving place, one of the bivouacs of Bohemia. Delatole and he had parted in a silence that was sultry.

His plunges in Wall street kept him well supplied with money for the time being, and of the future he thought but little.

The secret had changed its aspect. He no longer cared to face it. It was now a monstrous fear maddening him with whispers of a hundred possibilities, prodding him, sending out false alarms and slowly chilling his assurance into an ever present premonition. Since the day Felix Dawson left him with the declaration, "Oh, yes, I'll have it back," he had not seen nor heard of him. This absolute withdrawal was more significant than threats. Suppose he had incontestable proof, after all? What if he lied when he said he had no copy? What if he could produce witnesses to prove he had written the play? Would this man some day appear again, relentless in his quiet way, and hurl the bombshell that would bring his false life in ruins about his ears?

His rupture with Delatole—that, too, made him uneasy. Oh, it was a load from his heart to have told him the truth, to have seen the sullen surprise deepen into a stolid hatred in his horrid eyes. It was a relief, a balm, but it brought a danger in its wake. Suppose they met, these two who for different reasons would rejoice in his overthrow. Then indeed might he shudder. Delatole would follow the scent insatiably. He would come like a vulture to pick his bones. Even if proof were not possible he would so damn him with suspicion, so besmear him with the trail of his innuendoes, so riddle him with the darts of his acrid humor, his prestige would be lost forever. Delatole had the power, the opportunity and the unswerving patience to write an enemy down and out of existence.

These dangers lay in wait for him at some turning in the darkness beyond his vision. But there was something more terrible—a voice that spoke to him as no living voice could. Mystic and personal, it came from his soul. Conscience, like the giant of fairy lore, sometimes awakens refreshed and hungry from a seven years' sleep. In this interval of inaction it was impossible for Tom to look back on the short life he had so quickly and completely degraded and feel no pang.

The heartburning, the anxiety, left their haggard marks upon his face. He grew thin, he became morose and melancholy. His world lost sight of him, but hidden in some corner of the crowded theater, driven there by a restless fascination, by the same resistless impulse which forces the murderer to feast his shrinking eyes upon his victim, he nightly watched the play that told him in every line he was a thief.

His nights were sleepless and filled with fears—intolerable links between

Would she see him? He hardly knew whether he most longed for or dreaded her glance. How would she look if she knew the truth about the play she watched so earnestly? What would her eyes say then?

A coldness began to steal over him, a desire to shriek. His head was whirling. Was he going mad? This dull, inarticulate grief preying upon his heart—oh, if he could sigh it away!

Saw Virginia in a lower box.

And all the while in the rosy gloom thrown upward by the footlights Virginia's face shone like a star. And all the while the old passion grew with the seconds, no longer single and pure, the ideal love of a man's youth, but a reckless, dominant craving for her, the fruit of past experience and present despair.

He remembered nothing more until he stood before her, their hands locked.

Oh, that moment!

He was dimly conscious of a strange man with Virginia and of an introduction to him, but he seemed an interminable distance away through a maddening red blur. The crowd, the music, too, had receded, and Virginia's upraised eyes, her warm, confiding palm, were the only realities.

What he said to her he never knew—something muttered, incoherent—words seemed of such little value then beside the longing to crush her to his sore heart.

Then for a moment he looked away, his eyes drawn upward as by a spell.

A cry wavered from his paling lips; he reeled backward and flung her hand from him. Above, among the sea of faces, was Felix Dawson's, the light from his eyes shooting through Tom's guilty heart like a vein of electricity. To his blinded, maddened senses the face seemed distorted by a terrible menace. His doom was written there.

In a moment he was fleeing from it, pushing through the waiting crowds in the aisles as a man breasts a sea.

CHAPTER XIV.

Virginia, at the door of the box, stood facing the crowd where Tom had disappeared. A shudder shook her from head to foot. She still seemed looking into a pair of tormented blue eyes alight with a shifting flame; the choked, broken accents of a familiar voice were in her ears.

And yet—oh, could it be?—was it really Tom who had stood there? That gaunt figure and sickly face, the dissolute eyes and coarsened mouth were like a travesty on the memory cherished so tenderly. The pity of it!

Her raised arm drooped against the curtain in the shadow, and she laid her face upon it, closing her eyes and letting the slow, heavy tears fall as they would.

A love born of long association is not an easy thing to kill. Virginia's died hard in that piteous moment, but it died surely. She scarcely knew it herself, so keen, so deep was the rush of compassion, almost maternal in its intensity, that took its place.

But gradually as the tears fell and the throes of the awakening continued she saw the truth. The passion that had held her to the past was like a wornout coil whose strands in the weak places she had persistently kept mended until Tom's own hand had cut it tonight, leaving in her grasp only a handful of worn-out shreds. The old feeling was like something done with and put away forever. Weak and morbid natures cling to a sentiment when the ideal that projected it is lost. A proud and virile heart leaps exultant, free.

But there was none of the triumph of freedom tempering the first acuteness of Virginia's awakening. She was thinking of Tom as she had first seen him years ago. He had stood on the steps of the chapel that April morning when the square was a glory of white clouds and young, rustling leaves. The stiff student cap threw a pointed shadow across his glowing eyes. His gown was pushed roughly back, one hand deep in his pocket as he laughed aloud and snapped his fingers at a little terrier rolling on the grass, mad in the caress of the sunlight.

The then and now! Ages had rolled between that moment and this one. Was there nothing to be done—no price she could pay, no sacrifice she could make—to give him back that innocence and know him again as he was that day?

"Virginia!"

There was a new significance in Richard Monklow's touch upon her arm, light as it was. She felt it in her blood. There was a sudden shyness in her glance. She drew back, a new recognition startling her, and looked intently at the bronzed face under the shorn white hair. How composed it was, how earnest and gentle!

"You know who that was," she said; "you've heard father revile him often enough." She paused, and again a biting mist swam across her sight. "Poor Tom! His bitterest enemy might pity him now."

"Perhaps you would like to follow him. Would you? If he loves alone, has no one to help him?"

"What do you mean?" And the turning hand was on his arm.

"He seemed to me on the verge of a collapse. I saw a sailor once whose face

Molecular Life in Diamonds.

If you think your polished diamond is a mere aggregation of inanimate crystals you are away wrong. If you imagine that its components are devoid of orderly, coherent motion, you are equally mistaken. It has come to pass that we are given to understand that diamonds are masses of active molecules. Inasmuch as every compact body is composed of multitudes of exceedingly small yet not indistinguishable molecules, it might be concluded that in a solid, at least, these particles would be clustered together in an indivisible mass. This theory as applied to diamonds is incorrect, and has been completely overthrown by the researches and experimentations of Sir Robert Ball, of Liverpool. The facts set forth by Mr. Ball with reference to the structure of the diamond are fascinating. He asserts that were the sensibility of our eyes increased so as to make them a few million times more powerful it would be seen that the diamond atoms, which form the perfect gem when aggregated in sufficient myriads, are each in a condition of rapid movement of the most complex description.

Each molecule would be seen swinging to and fro with the utmost violence among the neighboring molecules and quivering from the shocks it receives from encounters with other molecules, which occur millions of times in each second. The hardness and impenetrability so characteristic would at first sight seem to refute the supposition that it is no more than a cluster of rapidly moving particles; but the well known impenetrability of the germ arises from the fact that, when attempt is made to press a steel point into a stone, it fails, because the rapidly moving molecules of the stone batter the metal with such extraordinary vehemence that they refuse to allow it to penetrate or even to mark the crystalised surface.

When glass is cut with a diamond the edge which seems so hard is really composed of rapidly moving atoms. The glass which is cut is also merely a mass of moving molecules, and what seems to happen is that as the diamond is pressed forward its several particles, by their superior vigor drive the little particles of glass out of the way.

"Fashion," the Greater Evil.

After the regular business of the weekly meeting of the Y.P.S.C.E. had been completed last night at the Presbyterian church there followed a debate on, "Resolved that devotion to fashion is a worse evil than the tobacco habit." Three members of the society, viz.: Messrs. Geo. Hay, J. R. Wray and J. Galloway, argued that "fashion," using the word in its widest meaning and including many "habits," was the worse evil.

Three members of the Y.M.C.A. debating club, viz., Messrs. Allison, Anderson and Freure argued that the tobacco habit was the lesser evil, inferring that the meaning of the word "fashion" meant devotion to dress and over-dressing.

A jury consisting of Messrs. Teague, Powers, Hamilton, Dewer and the chairman, Mr. H. Aitken decided in favor of the pros. Naturally, in view of the wide issues taken on the implication of the word, they could award no other decision. The audience also, had previously given its vote that way. Before becoming a habit, the use of tobacco is distinctly a fashion.
