Mackenzie River Basin Again.

OTTAWA, Apr. 26.—The evidence of Prof. Macoun, given at the session of the Mackenzie districts committee to-day, was perhaps the most remarkable that has been contributed to the investigation into the resources of that region. There can be no doubt that even the members of the committee have been very sceptical of the possibility of pushing into that district, or that of the Peace River, any of the outposts of civilized man; but when they heard a gentleman of Mr. Macoun's attainments, of his knowledge of the Northwest, and scientific accuracy of statement, declare there was every reason to believe that cereals as good as any grown in the world could be grown in the Peace River district, they opened their eyes. But he had a still greater surprise for them when he said that ten days ago, when the country round Ottawa was still sealed with winter's frosts, the banks of the Peace River were probably gay with wood anemones and other early wild flowers. He went further, and attempted to account for these surprising facts. In regard to the growth of wheat, for instance, he shows there is scientific warrant for believing that the warmth of the sun by day the length of the day and the cool, though brief hours of darkness during the summer, are all favorable to a rapid and successful ripening of the berry. Furthermore, there was no doubt that the earliness of the spring was due to the warm winds which blew from the south-west the year round. He had long ago abandoned the idea that these winds came across the mountains from the Pacific ocean directly west. He believed they had their origin in the moisture absorbed in the Gulf of Mexico and the Gulf of California. These were super-heated in the warm regions in the south and attracted inland by the great American desert and sent in warm currents to the north, and he believed there was good evidence to show that their influence was felt as far north as the Arctic ocean. He gave an interesting account of the fauna and flora of the district, also its vegetation, dwelling particularly upon its grasses and vetches, which, he said, extended from the southern limit of the Mackenzie Basin to Liard River, near Fort Simpson, and probably beyond that point, as no examination had yet been made of the region, which promised to be very valuable, between the Mackenzie River and the Rocky mountains. He gave very interesting accounts of the climatic peculiarities of the district and the causes which made vegetation and the appearance of spring flowers so early at Fort Simpson, far down the Mackenzie, which was, in fact, as early as at St. Paul, Minnesota, and there would always be in the valley of the Mackenzie heat enough to ripen, in its southern part, all varieties of grain during the three growing months. Far down the Mackenzie more hardy varieties of grain would ripen. He stated that while there was not at present a sign around Ottawa of spring flowers in fields and woods that the banks of the Peace River were at this moment covered with them. He also gave interesting information regarding the fish of the region, more especially of those known as inconnu. This fish has red flesh when it leaves the sea to go up the river to spawn, and the flesh becomes white and flabby the farther up the river it goes. It exists in immense numbers at the mouth of the Mackenzie, and might become an article of commerce. He stated that all the rivers flowing into the Arctic sea, except the Mackenzie, contained salmon in very large numbers, and accounted for their absence from the Mackenzie by the fact of its being a muddy stream, which passed for two thousand miles through an alluvial country, but stated it contained other fish of very great value commercially. He gave the northern limit of wood buffalo to be on the Liard River, and gave interesting information regarding the moose, reindeer and regarding the geese, ducks and other birds of the region. He believed from all he had heard and read that a properly constructed sea craft could reach the mouth of the Mackenzie by the way of Behring Straits and Sea.

The bacillus of cancer is hard to find, and Dr. Senger reports to the Berlin Clinical Society that he has been unable to verify observations claimed to have revealed the organism. Cancer appears to be peculiar to man, as it has never been inoculated in the lower animals.

LAST NIGHT'S DESPATCHES.

TAXING THE CHINESE.

MELBOURNE, May 3.—The legislative council of Victoria has ordered that all vessels bringing Chinese immigrants to the colony will be quartined during the pleasure of the authorities. The steamer Afghan with 26 Chinamen aboard, the landing of whom the authorities here refused to permit, has sailed for Sydney where another attempt will be made to land them. It is probable, however, that the attempt will not be successful. At a meeting held in the town hall here to-day, over which the mayor presided, it was unanimously resolved to demand that the government impose a poll tax of £100 sterling on each Chinese immigrant with an annual residence tax of £20 sterling.

DUELS GALORE.

LONDON, May 3.—An epidemic of duels seems to be prevailing in Paris at present. Since Dupuys was killed last Monday by Habert his fellow art critic, 8 other gentlemen whose honor felt need of vindication by a personal encounter, have met under the code to adjust their various grievances by more or less disastrous conflicts. Seven more "affaires d'honneur" are on the tapis, most of which will likely come off on Sunday next, the favorite duelling day in France. M. Bartode, the radical deputy, has again brought forward the decoration affair by introducing in the chamber of deputies a bill for the abolition of civil decorations of the legion of honor. The bill has, however, no chance of passing, as there are few in favor of such a measure, despite all the talk begotten by the late scandal.

THE GREAT MACKENZIE RIVER.

OTTAWA, May 4.—The senate has adopted the report of the commission appointed to gather information regarding the great Mackenzie river basin, situated east and northeast of Alaska. The commissioners say there is a possible area of 656,000 square miles fitted for the growth of potatoes, 407,000 square miles suitable for barley and 316,000 square miles suitable for wheat. There is a pastoral area of 860,000 square miles, 26,000 miles of which is open prairie with occasional groves, the remainder being more or less wooded. 274,000 square miles, including the prairie, may be considered as arable land.

PASSENGER LIST.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 4.—Passengers per str. Mexico to Victoria: A. C. Davis, wife and two children, Mrs. Humphreys, S. Maletel and son, Rev. J. Mountain and wife, Rev. Chas. Ludner, Leong Sam, M. Gray, G. N. Tookis, C. M. Smith, Mary T. Ryan, Mrs. C. J. Wharry, A. Gibson, H. Dowsell, Mrs. M. Daggett, Mrs. P. Crossman, W. Frank.

THIS AFTERNOON'S DESPATCHES.

THE SHARON CASE.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 4.—Judge Sullivan to-day rendered a decision allowing Mrs. Terry $5,500 alimony as the divorced wife of ex-Senator Sharon. Mrs. Terry had asked for $19,000.

THE GRAIN MARKET.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 4.—There was more confidence displayed at this morning's session. Wheat and barley options recovered somewhat from yesterday's relapse. Wheat closed at 157¼, an advance of 4¼. Barley closed at 103¾, which is five cents better than yesterday's closing.

SPANISH PILGRIMS.

ROME, May 4.—The pope yesterday received a party of Spanish pilgrims. The pope in his address to the pilgrims highly praised the queen regent, and exhorted all political parties in Spain not to disturb the general concord existing in their country.

ANOTHER RAILWAY DEAL.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 4.—It is reported to-day that the negotiations between the Canadian Pacific and "Soo" system, comprising the Sault Ste. Marie, Minneapolis & Pacific & Aberdeen, Bismarck & Northwestern, which have been going on for some time, has been completed and that the Canadian Pacific has secured a controlling interest. The preferred stock of the roads in the hands of the Canadian Pacific is replaced by an equal amount of common stock. It is intended to make a through line from the Pacific to the Atlantic via Minneapolis. There are two methods of connecting the system with the Pacific coast. The first would be by constructing a line to the Northwest, from Bismarck, to connect with the Northern Pacific. The other would be to build an entire new line through a new country. The general officers of the company remain in Minneapolis, and no change in the officers of the road will be made for some time at least.

FIGHTING AND SHOOTING.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., May 4.—John H. Atkins, ex-chief of police, was fatally shot in Bryant's saloon last night. Atkins and Jos. Sample, a liveryman, had engaged in two fist fights during the afternoon in the same saloon, and after the last fight Atkins armed himself and returned to the saloon. On entering the shooting began and three shots were fired in quick succession. Atkins was found lying on the floor with a bullet through his body. Bryant and Sample are under arrest.

OPPOSING RAILWAYS.

PARIS, May 4.—The French and Spanish military authorities are strongly opposing negotiations between France and Spain for two new railways across the Pyrenees.

TO EXEMPT CHEAP WINES.

LONDON, May 4.—In the house of commons last night Goschen, chancellor of the exchequer, promised that the government would introduce a bill, if possible, exempting cheap wines from the bottled wine duty.

From Ottawa.

OTTAWA, May 3.—The government will not make the annual grant of $10,000 to the Dominion exhibition this year. British Columbia litigants in future will be able to appeal direct to the supreme court in all cases exceeding $250. The report of the Schultz committee on the resources of the great Mackenzie basin has been adopted by the senate. The committee sums up the result of the investigation by referring to the vast extent of inland navigation, namely 1,390 miles up the Mackenzie river, navigable for light draught ocean steamers, 1,390 or more, also navigable for stern-wheel river steamers, and nearly 400 miles of lake coasts. Altogether there is a total of 6,500 miles of continuous lake, coast and river navigation, broken only in two places. With suitable steam crafts on Athabasca river, and the lake navigation, the report says, may be connected with Victoria and Vancouver, by way of the mouth of the Mackenzie river, the Arctic Ocean, and Behring straits and sea, and it is now connected on the south by 90 miles of wagon road between Athabasca Landing and Edmonton with the navigable water in the Saskatchewan river.—Judge Henry, of the supreme court, died to-night, aged 72, from the effect of a paralytic stroke. For 30 years he was a prominent figure in Nova Scotian politics, having been one of the fathers of confederation. The remains will be shipped to Halifax for interment.

Daily British Columbian

Friday Evening, May 4, 1888.

There is still a considerable movement from the east to California, but thousands of those who were attracted by highly colored pictures of that sunny clime are leaving by every train for other regions. As there is no rose without a thorn, so there is no attractive country without disadvantages. California has been boomed exceedingly, at great cost of energy and money, and for the last year it has witnessed one of the most remarkable rushes of immigrants on record. But the thing has been greatly overdone, and now the reaction is being felt. It is stated that trains leaving Southern California are so crowded that one has to engage a berth in the sleepers many days in advance. In the boom town of Los Angeles there are thousands of men without work and without prospect of employment. Hundreds of these people are leaving every day, many of them coming north to Oregon and Washington Territory, and some to British Columbia. The question that now meets the people of this coast is not how to get immigration, but how to keep it.

In referring to the foolish criticism of the Vancouver News yesterday we mentioned the question of feeding onions to children. Some weeks ago an item bearing on this subject appeared in The Columbian, the opinion being expressed that these succulent vegetables would be found most conducive to health and a robust physical development. This item seems to have fallen extensively into the hands of the people of Victoria. At a meeting of school trustees a few days ago a letter was received from one of the female teachers complaining that all the children in her division were in the habit of eating onions, and the united breath of this little community was so pungent and disagreeable that the teacher found great difficulty in maintaining the dignity of her position. This is a very singular incident, and we do not wonder at the embarrassment it created in the board. If onions are really as wholesome as wise men have pronounced them, it would scarcely be proper to pass an order forbidding their use by children. Such an order would very likely move our sage friend of the Herald to write a labored article on the wickedness of dictating what people are to eat and drink. The simplest way out of the difficulty would be for the teacher to follow the practice of her pupils, and take to the onion. The disagreeableness of the situation would then disappear, and the physical benefits might manifest themselves to such an extent as to make onions a necessary part of the curriculum of all public schools throughout the province.

Not long ago a lady resident of Surrey enquired through The Columbian if there was in this city such an organization as a society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, and mentioned that cases had occurred which called for the interference of such a society. There is a very stringent law on the subject which will be found in the revised statutes of Canada, chap. 172. We notice that there is now a bill before the house of commons proposing to amend this act, in which some new features appear. The bill explains the word animal to mean almost any living creature, naturally tame or having been reclaimed from a wild condition, and it provides a penalty not exceeding $50 for any person who is convicted of any of the following offences: (1) Wantonly, cruelly or unnecessarily beating, binding, illtreating, abusing, overdriving, or torturing any cattle, poultry, dog, domestic animal, or bird; (2) neglecting proper precautions against accident to cattle or other animals while being driven; (3) encouraging, aiding or assisting at the fighting of any animal, including dogs or cocks. This is a provision which, we are afraid, many people entirely overlook. It is a common thing to see men and boys encouraging dog fighting, but such persons make themselves liable to a fine of $50 or three months' imprisonment. (4) Failing to provide proper food, shelter and protection for animals of which one has charge. This is another clause which is very much violated, and there are not a few of our own citizens who have been guilty. (5) Carrying any animal in a vehicle in such a way as to make it suffer unnecessary pain; (6) keeping or using any live animal or bird for the purpose of being used as a target, to be shot at either for amusement or as a test of marksmanship, or for any like purpose; shooting at such bird or animal; or being present at any such shooting as a party, umpire or judge. This is an entirely new provision aimed at pigeon shooting matches. It is claimed that these matches necessarily involve cruelty, and many persons have expressed the opinion that they ought to be abolished. It is also provided that any person may interfere to prevent an act of cruelty done in his presence, and any person hindering such interference makes him liable to a fine of $50, or imprisonment for three months, or both fine and imprisonment. These provisions ought to be strict enough to satisfy all reasonable demands.

Kingston, Apr. 28.—Master Workman Powderly has informed Knights of Labor that the Canadian campaigning will be in future carried on by native talent. Montreal, Apr. 30.—The Post, organ of the Irish Catholics, has a bitter article against the pope's interference in purely temporal politics and against the people struggling for liberty, anent the promulgation of the decree against the national cause in Ireland.

TELEGRAM.
Ottawa, 27th March, 1888.

To Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia,
Victoria.

Your Government should issue public notice cautioning persons going on Sealing expeditions to refrain from assertion of their rights by force, and from taking on board arms and ammunition in excess of their usual requirements. The whole matter is engaging the attention of Her Majesty's Government and forms the subject of diplomatic negotiations now in progress. Any intemperate action in the meanwhile would be most detrimental to British Columbian interests and might lead to serious complications and be followed by grave consequences to those concerned.

FOR THE DAUGHTER'S SAKE.

"You own that you love me, and yet you say you can never be my wife. Tell me what you mean, Ida?"

The speaker was Robert Waldron, a fine looking youth of twenty; the person he addressed a girl of seventeen.

She was a fragile fairy-like young creature, with starry brown eyes, chestnut-colored hair, and a slender yet well-rounded figure.

On the white sand of one of the far-away Navigator Islands in the Pacific Ocean, near a group of tall cocoanut-trees, stood the twain, holding each other's hands, while the light of the rising moon lay like a broad silvery pathway athwart the wilderness of waters.

Waldron was a passenger, with his father, aboard the American ship Tempest, bound to the Sandwich Islands.

A month previously the vessel had been so badly damaged in a storm that the captain was obliged to anchor off the Navigator Islands for repairs.

Robert, wandering about one of the isles, came upon a small frame house in a clearing in the thicket. As he had lost his way, he knocked at the door.

A melancholy-looking elderly man answered the summons, gave him the information he required, and invited him in.

There Robert first saw Ida Gray, the old man's daughter.

It is needless to add that he came many times after that.

He learned that the island had been Ida's dwelling-place for six years, and that her mother had died before she came to it.

What her parent's motive was in seeking this lonely abiding-place, far away in the Pacific Ocean, she could never guess. Once she had questioned him, but it had seemed to trouble him so much that she resolved not to do so again.

"Tell me what you mean, Ida?" Robert repeated, as her eyes filled with tears.

"Because I can never desert papa," she sobbed.

"You need not desert him," cried Robert. "He can go with us."

"No; he will not leave the island."

"Then I will stay here," said the young man. "I will build a house here, and we will settle on the island! I could be contented anywhere with you."

Ida brightened up at this.

"Go and talk with papa about it," she said.

Robert kissed her, and then went to her father.

The latter, who had shown singular emotion on seeing the youth, seemed still more agitated when Robert asked him for his daughter.

"No!" he cried almost harshly. "You, of all others, can never have my child—at least not while I live. It may be selfish in me, but—but I could not bear it—you of all others. If I were dead you might take her and welcome."

Robert joined Ida and told her the result of his application to her father.

Ida saw her parent not long after.

"Do you love that man?" he asked.

"Yes, papa!" she sobbed.

"And you really want him?"

"He wants me!" was the womanly reply.

"He may have you," Mr. Gray said in a hollow voice.

"Good papa! Kind papa!"

And she threw herself on his breast.

When she was gone to bed, and was asleep, he stole out of the house.

Swift was the current among the rocks off a certain part of the island. Mr. Gray knew that he who plunged deep in that place might never come up again.

The under-current would probably carry the diver into some subterranean water-cavern, whence he could never extricate himself.

"Ah," he muttered, "better death to me at once than life-long misery to my child. He can never have her while I live. I could not bear to look upon his face, as I would often be obliged to do if I were her husband; for they would visit me, even though I never visited them."

Long he gazed at the swift water.

"Be it so," he said at last in a solemn voice.

There was a splash as he plunged into the fatal current.

At the same moment a strong young voice was heard.

Robert Waldron, who had been as yet unable to tear himself away from the vicinity of the dwelling of his beloved, had seen Mr. Gray go out upon the point, near which he was seated in the shadow of a rock.

Now, as he made the plunge, the youth, who had been a few yards off, dived after him.

Ere Mr. Gray had gone deep enough to be drawn into an under-water cavern, Waldron clutched him, and strove to reach the surface with his burden.

They rose together, and as they were carried further from land Mr. Gray endeavored to release himself from Robert's grasp.

The struggle was of short duration, for it is hard for one man to hold to and keep up in the water another who is determined to drown himself.

Mr. Gray had forced himself from the grasp of Waldron, when the latter saw the unmistakable fin of a shark cutting the moon-lighted waters as it approached.

"A shark! Here it comes!" cried the youth, as he again clutched Mr. Gray. "Ay, and there are more. I will not leave you here. If you will not swim with me to that rock ahead of us, here I will remain, and we will both perish."

"No, no! You must not die!" cried Mr. Gray. "It would kill my child. I will go to the rock with you."

Thither they swam, reaching the rock in time to escape the sharks.

"Why did you save me?" cried the old captain bitterly. "Had I died, you would have been able to have my daughter. I told you you could make her your wife when I was dead."

"And for that reason do you suppose I would stand by and see you perish, and not do my best to save you?" cried Robert, shocked.

"There have been such cases," said the captain gloomily.

"Ay," answered Robert. "My own father once was left to perish that way."

"Your father?" cried Mr. Gray, starting.

"Yes. Years ago he was a seafaring man—first officer aboard the Sunlight, a merchant vessel. The captain and he both loved one of the passengers, a young lady who was going to the Indies with her mother. During a gale one night my father fell overboard. He clutched a rope, and the captain, by merely stretching forth his hand, might have saved him. But he only stood and looked at him, until a sea washed my father from his hold."

"Your father! Was he your father?" cried Mr. Gray wildly. "And your name Waldron? I knew he was a widower, and had a little son, but his name was then Livingston."

Robert drew back in surprise.

A new light seemed to break upon his mind.

"I am he who stood by and saw Livingston go down," continued Gray. "Yes, I am that wretch; and your resemblance to that drowned man has often startled and pained me. That was why I would not have you wed my daughter while I lived, as I would have then been doomed to see your face at times—your face so like that of the man I allowed to perish, simply because I was jealous of him, and fancied that Adele, the fair passenger we loved, favored him. But what means it? As I repeat, his name was Livingston. He must, then, have sailed under a different name from his own."

"No," said Robert. "His full name was Henry Livingston Waldron. It pleased him for a long time to drop the 'Waldron' and go by his second name."

"Well, then," continued Mr. Gray, "you behold before you the wretch who allowed your father to perish. Afterwards I learned from the young lady passenger whom I married that she had never fancied your father—had preferred me.

"That terrible neglect of mine to help your imperilled parent has haunted me ever since and made me miserable. After my wife's death I shunned society, and came to this lonely island, a broken-hearted man. Often do I seem to see the face of my lost shipmate in my dreams, and——"

"Be happy again, sir," interrupted Robert. "He still lives."

"Lives!" almost screamed the old captain. "Prove that, and I will bless you for ever!"

"I should have done so before now had I dreamed that you were the Captain Gray of whom my father spoke when he told me his story. But I did not even know you had been a sailor. On the contrary, as you have a military look, I supposed you had been an army captain."

As the two were now in sight of the anchored vessel, Robert hailed it, and a boat was sent to them.

rocks, the poor mother nursing and fondling her little one, the boy and girl watching her contentment with great pleasure, for Judy had been their constant playmate and companion ever since Marion's second year.

"Wouldn't it have been just dreadful if she had lost her little doggie!" said Marion. "I do believe she would have stayed by it till she herself was drowned. You see the tide was never so high—O, Carl, Carl, we are lost!"

It seemed true at first, for, while the children and dog had lingered on the rocks, the treacherous waves had crept round them till water surrounded them on every side, and the heavy surf threatened to roll even over their feet.

Carl started up and seizing his sister's hand, said, "Not a moment, Marion; you must not mind the surf—even if it knocks you down—it is our only chance. Judy will save you at any rate, and I can swim."

"But Judy has her puppy," said Marion, with white lips, for she was always a coward in the surf. Carl seized the puppy, and Judy, seeming to understand, kept near Marion. After all, there was not so much danger, though Marion fell twice and was dragged back by a receding wave.

In fifteen minutes the children stood, panting and wet, but safe and beyond any possible tide.

"Carl, what did you think of as we ran?" asked Marion, in an awed voice.

"Oh, of you and the puppy and—well, I did think how mother'd feel;" this last was added in a shamefaced way.

"I could only say over and over, 'When thou passest through the billows I will be with thee.' I know He was, Carl."

Carl looked at the pale lips of his only sister, and with a heart full of real gratitude that she was spared, said quietly, "Yes, I know He was—always know that when she's near," he added in his heart, for Carl thought this one sister almost an angel, and never teased and bullied her as some boys do their sisters.

"O little puppy, I wonder what your life has been saved for?" said Marion, taking the little dog for a moment, but quickly putting it down for she felt faint and weak.

Ten years went by. Marion, a woman of twenty-two, seemed older than Carl, a young man of twenty-four, for she had been married for two years, and, as she wrote to her brother, "was bringing him the dearest little nephew—just another Carl."

She had lived in India with her husband, but was to spend a few years in her old Scottish seaside home, and now the vessel in which she was to come was hourly expected.

How Carl watched the winds and tides! A storm came up, and the ship must be on the coast! The young man and his father were on the rocks before dawn, and in the darkness they heard the guns of a ship in distress. They knew that in all probability it was the Albatross, and their darling with the little one they had never seen, was to drown perhaps, almost in their sight.

Suddenly a sheet of flame lit up the sky. The ship was on fire, and men and women could be seen throwing themselves into the sea.

Boats are launched, and Carl started the first one. It was a great risk, but no one cared for danger; all knew "Miss Marion" was in the ship.

Nearer and nearer came the boat; now sunk in the trough of the sea, they could see nothing, still again high on some wave they saw, still far ahead, men.

They were taken aboard, where Captain Gray was soon grasping the hand of his former shipmate.

"Can you forgive me?" said Gray.

"Freely," answered Mr. Waldron. "We were both very jealous of each other, and I can guess how you felt, although I would not have served you so. I had a tough time of it, fighting the seas in the dark, as the ship left me, but fortunately I was finally carried to a rock in the sea, off the Ascension Islands. The natives at length saw me, took me ashore, and treated me well until I was picked up by a home-bound vessel.

"A few years later I married and went to Florida to take possession of an estate there left me. Finally I resolved to take a trip with my son to the Sandwich Islands, and was on my way there, when the captain was obliged to come here for repairs."

"Thank God that you were saved! Although you forgive me, I can never forgive myself."

Three months later Ida and Robert were married at the Sandwich Islands, whither they had all gone.

Ida was overjoyed that the cloud which had so long shadowed her father's spirit was at last lifted.

But often even now, while sitting at his daughter's happy hearthstone, does the old captain marvel how he could ever have refused to help his shipmate on that dark stormy night; and thus thinking, he sometimes turns to Ida's little children, and says:

"Be careful—very careful to control every evil impulse you may feel, and crush it as you would the head of a poison serpent."

Patient (to family physician)—In your absence, doctor, I was compelled to call in young Dr. Sawbones. He said that the clinical symptoms indicated chronic interstitial inflammation. What's that in plain English?

Family physician—In plain English it means that Sawbones didn't know what was the matter with you.—New York Sun.

"It Saved My Life"

Is a common expression, often heard from those who have realized, by personal use, the curative powers of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. "I cannot say enough in praise of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, believing as I do that, but for its use, I should long since have died from lung troubles.—E. Bragdon, Palestine, Tex.

About six months ago I had a severe Hemorrhage of the Lungs, brought on by a distressing Cough, which deprived me of sleep and rest. I had used various cough balsams and expectorants, without obtaining relief. A friend advised me to try

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

I did so, and am happy to say that it helped me at once. By continued use this medicine cured my cough, and, I am satisfied, saved my life.—Mrs. E. Coburn, 18 Second st., Lowell, Mass.

I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for over a year, and sincerely believe I should have been in my grave, had it not been for this medicine. It has cured me of a dangerous affection of the lungs, for which I had almost despaired of ever finding a remedy.—D. A. McMullen, Windsor, Province of Ontario.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life. Two years ago I took a very severe Cold which settled on my lungs. I consulted physicians, and took the remedies they prescribed, but failed to obtain relief until I began using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Two bottles of this medicine completely restored my health.—Lizzie M. Allen, West Lancaster, Ohio.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

From Cause Unknown.

The postmortem examination on the body of Donald McGregor was concluded last night. The physicians who made the examination could find no trace of poison in the body, and were unable to arrive at any decided opinion as to the cause of death. After taking the doctor's evidence the jury brought in a verdict that the deceased came to his death from cause unknown.

Coal Deposits.

Mr. Tyrrell, in his geological report, says: In figuring out the amount of coal in the 25-foot seam west of Edmonton, the conclusion is reached that an area of two miles by three contains 150,000,000 tons. On the Red Deer at a point over 100 miles distant, the same seam is again exposed with a thickness of ten feet, containing 12,500,000 tons to the square mile. At Knee Hill creek, 80 miles further south, it is again exposed and contains 5,000,000 tons to the square mile.

From Victoria.

The medical council has elected the following officers for the current year: Dr. Davie, president; Dr. McGuigan, vice-president; Dr. Milne, registrar and secretary; Dr. Hannington, treasurer. The sealing vessels Mary Ellen and Triumph were to leave this morning for Behring's Sea. Arrangements for the soulling race between Ball and Paine are being completed. The race is to take place at Shawnigan Lake on the 19th inst., 3 miles with a turn, for $250 a side. It is expected the event will attract a great crowd of spectators.

Struck by a Falling Tree.

Yesterday afternoon while Mr. Wm. Kirkland, of Ladners, was proceeding along a trail, off Scott's road, he was struck by the branch of a falling tree which broke his collar bone and inflicted severe bruises about the head and face. The woodchoppers, to whose camp Mr. Kirkland was proceeding when the accident occurred, carried him to the road, where his carriage and a friend were waiting. He was brought to Westminster for medical assistance, and is now progressing as favorably as could be expected.

District Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Westminster district of the Methodist church was held at Maple Ridge on the 2nd and 3rd inst. Rev. E. Robson presided, and Rev. C. M. Tate was elected secretary. Reports from the various circuits and missions showed a very gratifying increase in membership, and indicated that the past year has been one of great prosperity in the work of the church throughout the district. The following laymen were elected delegates to the ensuing annual conference: D. Gillanders, Chilliwhack; R. H. Holding, Langley; Robt. Blake, Maple Ridge; O. D. Sweet, Richmond; David, from Chilliwhack Indian Mission; Wm. Hogg, Vancouver; D. Robson, Westminster. Rev. R. B. Hemlaw was elected to the stationing committee, and Rev. J. H. White to the Sunday school committee. It was the opinion of the meeting that the rapid increase of population in the district, and especially in the city of Vancouver, makes the appointing of additional men a necessity, and the formation of four new missions was strongly recommended to the conference. On Wednesday evening an enthusiastic temperance meeting was held in the Maple Ridge school house, under the auspices of the I. O. G. T. Addresses were delivered by Revs. T. W. Hall, J. H. White, E. Robson, and Capt. John, a Chilliwhack Indian (Rev. Mr. Tate acting as interpreter). The choir, assisted by Mr. A. W. Sullivan, of Vancouver, rendered a number of musical selections.

The cheapest medicine in use is Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, because so very little of it is required to effect a cure. For croup, diphtheria, and diseases of the lungs and throat, whether used for bathing the chest or throat, for taking internally or inhaling, it is a matchless compound.

Personal.

W. D. Ferris went over to Vancouver this morning.

J. E. Insley, manager of the Leland house, Vancouver, was in the city to-day.

T. S. Higginson, crown timber agent, left for Kamloops this afternoon.

C. G. Johnson, the jolliest chap in Vancouver, paid the city a flying visit last night.

John Boultbee, barrister, of Vancouver, was in the city last night on legal business.

W. H. Ellis, of the Colonist, Victoria, was in the city to-day and left for Vancouver this evening.

Mrs. G. J. Robson left by the train this afternoon with her two children for Kamloops, where she goes to stay a month with her sister.

It is stated that Hon. A. E. B. Davie's health is much improved, and that he will return to Victoria about the middle of the month. This will be gratifying news to his many friends in the province.

Mr. G. W. Macnilly, Pavilion Mountain, B. C., writes: "Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is the best medicine I ever used for Rheumatism. Nearly every winter I am laid up with Rheumatism, and have tried nearly every kind of medicine without getting any benefit, until I used Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. It has worked wonders for me, and I want another supply for my friends, &c."

Spring Assizes.

(Yesterday's Proceedings).

The application for adjournment in the case of Edwin Storey, charged with obtaining money under false pretences, being refused the trial was proceeded with.

Mr. Atkinson appeared for the defence.

John M. Stewart, chief of police, Vancouver, sworn, said: I was present when Storey was arraigned before the magistrates in Vancouver; I was in charge of the prosecution; Mr. John Boultbee was present when the charge was read over and I think he appeared for the defence; Mr. Boultbee was sitting close to the accused and said Storey was guilty but not with felonious intent; the affair was a lark and restitution would be made. The checque produced is the one passed by the accused; Officer Abrey arrested Storey on the information of Ada Taylor; I knew Storey by sight for three months; Ada Taylor has disappeared and I was unable to find any track of her.

To Mr. Atkinson—I knew nothing of Storey until he was arrested.

L. J. Springer, sworn, said: I examined the books of the bank of British North America and found no account credited to Edwin Storey; I can't swear the cheque produced was over presented at the bank; I made a thorough examination of the books this morning.

Rosa Fleming, sworn, said: I live in Vancouver; I know the accused, I saw him at the house where I live; he asked me if I could cash a cheque for $50; he did not say whose cheque it was; he did not show me the cheque; I gave no evidence at Vancouver because I was not asked; I know Ada Taylor; I saw her last more than a week ago; the accused was as drunk as any man could be; I don't think the man knew what he was saying.

This closed the case. His lordship, in charging the jury, said the evidence was not sufficiently strong against the accused for a conviction, and that a verdict of "not guilty" should be returned.

Without leaving the box, the jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

The court then adjourned.

TO-DAY'S PROCEEDINGS

His lordship took the bench at 1:15 o'clock and rendered judgment in the following cases:

Henry Boltly, convicted of larceny, sentenced to one year in gaol with hard labor.

Ah Chin, convicted of larceny, sentenced to 18 months in gaol with hard labor.

Patrick O'Brien, found guilty of stealing money, six months in gaol with hard labor.

Yen Koe, for larceny, one year in gaol with hard labor.

Ah Shin, for larceny, 18 months in gaol with hard labor.

Mr. Bole—In the case of Yen Kee, my lord, I would ask that you allow his queue to remain; the man is old and is not likely to be able to grow another. It will be a great hardship if the tail is cut off.

His lordship—I really cannot interfere with prison rules and can do nothing in the matter. You, Mr. Bole, can do more than I can by your influence in the house. Perhaps if you spoke to Mr. Moresby he might agree to your request.

Mr. Moresby—There are certain prison rules and I cannot make fish of one man and flesh of another.

His lordship—Nor I either.

The court was then adjourned sine die.

Late Despatches.

THE DISS DE BARS ON TRIAL.

NEW YORK, April 30.—Gen. and Madame Diss De Bar were witnesses in their own behalf to-day in the conspiracy case against them. Gen. Diss De Bar admitted that he had never been married to Madame and that he had a wedded wife and family of adult progeny in Philadelphia, but he declared that he had discharged all his obligations to them and considered himself the madame's husband before God. He first heard of her in 1859 when the old picture dealer in Lowenherts (with whose taking off the madame's name has been associated) told him the daughter of Lola Montez was in this country. He afterwards made her acquaintance, and she had lived in his family till his wife became jealous. He had lived with madame since 1879. He was at one time a member of the legislature of West Virginia and held other offices of importance. Witness denied that he painted any of the spook pictures. Madame Diss De Bar when spoken to declared herself to be daughter of Lola Montez and late King Ludwig of Bavaria. She was sent to this country when a child, and when six years of age was put by Mad Lowenherts in the care of the Solomon family, who abused her and tried to kill her. Witness declared herself in various parts of the country and in numerous convents and said that her spirit power first came to her when she was in a convent in Chicago. Her spirit pictures were, she declared, genuine and what she represented them to be—the work of spirit hands. She did ask Mr. Marsh for a cent and was very much astonished when he gave her his house. The justice held her and her husband in $5,000 bail each for grand jury, and discharged the Lawrences.

REVIVED WAR RUMORS.

BERLIN, May 1.—The Berlin Post, referring to a statement that the czar has replaced Gen. Bogdanovitch in his former position in the Russian service, recalls the general's endeavor to arrange a Franco-Russian alliance, and says it thinks his reinstatement indicates a renewal of the ascendancy of Count Tolstoi, whose influence last year tended towards an immediate rupture with Germany.

ARNIVAL OF PRINCE FERDINAND.

BUCHAREST, May 1.—Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria has arrived at Plevona. In an address made at a banquet given in his honor he said: Popular affection and loyalty strengthen me to defend the interest and lives of the people and secure national triumph. My task is a difficult one, and I hope that the Bulgarian patriots will support me. Shamhauloff, minister of the interior, who accompanies the prince, said the people and army supported the government and upheld the banner of independence while the country was without a Prince, after Prince Alexander, who had not the courage to remain, had departed. Prince Ferdinand, who represents the glory and independence of the country, was the only man who responded to the country's appeal.

Mr. T. C.
