Electors, Consider Your Verdict!

The contention of the local organ that outside of the present cabinet there is not to be found in the country a man fit to be a minister, is a wanton libel upon the people. There is not a constituency in the province, excepting, perhaps, Kootenay, which could not furnish three better men than the present ministers. It is by deeds, not words, we would have these men judged. Submit them to the crucial test of their own acts, and they must stand utterly condemned at the bar of public opinion. Look at the sheaves of bad laws they have passed. Look at their fearful catalogue of blunders and deceptions in dock-building, causing a charge of at least half a million upon the revenues of the province for what was not, and ought not, to have cost it "a single dollar." Look at their outrageous and unconstitutional attempts to swindle the struggling settlers by adding 24 per cent. to what they owed on their homesteads, and then extorting 18 per cent interest on the whole! Look at their refusal to provide common schools for important settlements, while at the same time they have employed large sums of the public revenue in giving the wealthiest and least tax-paying community in the country a free high school education! Look at their persistent refusal, upon the plea of want of money, to provide roads or repair bridges by which settlers would be spared great inconvenience, loss and, in some instances, actual danger to life and property, while at the same time they have been squandering many thousands of the people's money in maintaining at Ottawa, with an occasional trip over to London, a "tadpole" who is only keeping alive a stupid quarrel with a Government friendly to the Province. Look at these and many other acts which speak louder than words, and say what you think of the audacious insolence of claiming for these men a monopoly of the statesmanship and patriotism of the country. On Monday last there occurred one of those instances constantly transpiring, illustrative of the necessity for an efficient ferry across the Fraser River at this place. Mr. Norris, a farmer on the prairie six miles back of Langley, having sold a horse to Mr. Rousseau of this city, rode the animal down the trunk road to Brownville, expecting to have it ferried over and delivered to the purchaser. But after searching for half the day for some means of ferrying the animal over, he went back and took it home again, intending to have it shipped from Langley on the first steamer. Now, we may possibly be told that we are making too much ado about a settler having lost a day and travelled some thirty miles in a fruitless attempt to deliver a horse in this market; but what we have merely mentioned this instance as an illustration of what is happening every day, through the neglect of the Government to take the necessary steps for the establishment of an efficient steam ferry, or an efficient ferry of any kind, at this point. But it is not alone those who make unsuccessful or expensive and unsatisfactory attempts to reach the market with their produce. Look at the influence of such a condition of things. Think of the hundreds of instances in which, owing the difficulties of reaching the market, the settlers do not make an attempt at all. That man must indeed be obtuse who cannot see that the isolation of this market, owing solely to the absence of facile means of communication with the surrounding settlements, will inevitably result in ruining its trade. We are aware that a recital of the privations and losses of the settlers on the Mainland will awaken little concern at James Bay. But it is fitting that, on this the eve of a general election, such matters should be fully and fairly discussed, in order that there may be an intelligent and vigorous application of the great constitutional remedy—in order that the electors may, by marks upon their ballot papers, truly indicate their opinion of these men, who, while exhibiting such stolid disregard of the best interests of the most important class—the farmers—have, by incompetency and chicanery, brought the country into a sorry plight. It is no snap verdict that is asked of the country. It is no party vote the electors are asked to cast. What we ask and implore them to do is closely and impartially to scrutinize the acts of the men now in power; and if they condemn them, then let them so exercise their franchise as to place men in the new House who will put the affairs of the Province upon a sound basis, and aid and encourage all classes of the people to unite in a "long pull and a strong pull" so as to enable the country to take full advantage of the tide of prosperity which ought to flow from railway development.

Fish Culture and Canning.

The San Francisco Bulletin says:—

Owing to a disagreement, three years ago, between the fishermen and canneries, no fish were caught for four weeks previous to the end of the fishing time which extended the close season that much longer. The result of such extension was apparent in 1881 by the greatly increased run of the salmon. In 1880 over ten million pounds of fish were caught, and in 1881 the catch was estimated to be over fifteen million pounds, an increase of 50 per cent. This year it is supposed there will be a larger increase. This is confirmatory of the wisdom evinced in the enactment of statutes guarding the fish during the close season. The Fish Commissioners have for ten years obtained statistics from the canneries of the quantities of fish caught. On the strength of this information the Fish Commissioners have been able to conduct their operations intelligently. The supply of fish has been so largely increased by these intelligent efforts that new canneries have been able to start, and the older institutions have been able to increase their capacity and product. It is just as necessary to the welfare of the canneries as it is for the guidance of the Fish Commissioner that all the information in the possession of canneries and fishermen concerning the catch and movements of the salmon in Sacramento river and its tributaries should be freely communicated to the Commissioners. The very existence of the canneries depends upon a proper and sytematic continuance of the supply, which experience has proven must be artificially maintained.

To which King, Morse & Co. replied:—

EDITOR BULLETIN,—Interested parties are at present engaged in an attempt to "bear" the canned salmon market. We notice by an editorial in your columns on Saturday evening an item that will probably assist this movement, which we take it, is not your aim or intention. We believe in the fish canneries, and consider their undertakings laudable, and know that their efforts have met with a fair meed of success, but the statement in your leader is, to say the least, premature, as there is at present but a slight run of fish in the Sacramento, and not one of the canneries is running on more than quarter time. Experienced fishermen predict a small run for the entire season, and at this writing we are inclined to agree with them. At all events, a 50 per cent. increase over last year's run, or even a run that will begin to equal it, is at this late date almost beyond probability, although our interests (having recently invested a large sum of money on the theory of the fish canneries, that a large run would certainly be insured this season), would prompt us to hope as long as there was anything to hang a hope on. The frequency of the main points in your article in the public prints, leads us to believe that it is not official from the canneries. Yours truly,

KING, MORSE & Co.

The Labor Question Again.

Elsewhere we publish an article from the Colonist in which it is pointed out that the remarks made in the House of Commons by Sir John Macdonald clearly prove that the Walkem Government have been recreant to their duty and false to their professions and promises—that they had never so much as let the Dominion Premier know that British Columbia had the slightest objection to Chinese labor being imported for railway work. We supposed everybody knew that the pretended opposition of Ministers to Chinese immigration was mere affectation; but we confess we expected them to carry the sham to the extent of sending some remonstrance, however wheyey, to Ottawa. Up to the present time we were disposed to hold the Federal Government responsible to a great extent for allowing the province to drift into this pestilential yellow tide; but it would now appear that we, to some extent at least, wronged the Government. It is perfectly true that at least one of the representatives from British Columbia had, in his peculiar way, a good deal to say in the House of Commons against Chinese immigration; but, as a set off to that, it should be remembered that another member from this province, in the Upper House, had expressed very different views, claiming for the Chinese that they were in a measure a necessity here, and that they were really more moral and well-behaved than the Caucasian races. Sir John Macdonald can hardly be blamed if, hearing these conflicting statements, and receiving no expression or remonstrance from the Provincial Government, he remained under the impression that Columbia had no grievance of the kind. It could hardly be expected that he would go a-fishing for a grievance for a province which had shown no backwardness in making known its wants. Under these circumstances, and viewing the matter in the light of Sir John's remarks the other day, one cannot longer hesitate to admit that the Local Government must be held responsible for the present extremely unsatisfactory state of affairs in this regard, and it is all the more aggravating when it is seen how apparently ready the Government at Ottawa would have been to step forward and apply a remedy, did occasion arise. It would appear from the Premier's recent utterances that he would have been only too happy to have acted in the matter had there been any complaint. But while rendering the past more aggravating, this phase gives hope for the future, inasmuch as it constructively conveys the assurance that the Dominion Government will be quick to hear and to act, when made properly aware of our grievance. We desire now to direct attention for a moment to the ruinous folly of permitting the present state of things to continue. It is reckoned that considerably more than thirty millions will be expended on railway work in the Mainland part of this province during the next four or five years. Possibly three or four millions more may be added for Island railway work. Only a little over two millions has yet been spent. This statement may aid the reader in approximately grasping the enormity of the labor question involved. Just think what the consequences must be if matters are allowed to drift on in the future as in the past—no organized effort made to introduce Caucasian labor, and the ever swelling tide of what is really slave labor still rolling in from Asia. Is the reader aware of this fact? Every Mongolian worker imported for the railway contractor costs in the first instance $100. In other words, the sum of $100 apiece is advanced to the company dealing in this Mongolian stock, less than one half of which covers expenses, the balance representing the manstealer's preliminary profits. The railway contractor, of course, is supposed to deduct this advance bonus from the wages of his bondman. Now what we desire to point out is this: Under a broad and well digested scheme, a similar advance would suffice to bring a first-rate class of Englishmen and Irishmen and Scotchmen from the Old Country; and who will say that one of these would not represent more real value to the country than two, aye, than half-a-dozen, of those? And think, O think, of the tens of thousands in the Old Country to whom such a translation would be the highest earthly blessing. If these figures be correct, it seems little less than a crime to allow the destructive yellow tide to continue to flow in and the impoverishing stream of gold to flow out, when all these millions might be retained and devoted towards creating large and prosperous communities of our own race and religion, through whose instrumentality the vast resources of this country would be developed for the country's good. This is a large question, which should not be left to the railway contractor or to the Dominion Government or to the Provincial Government; but, all three being directly and deeply interested in it, all three should take hold of it concurrently and work out an efficient scheme. As a matter of course, it is for the Provincial Government to take the initiative, and it will be well for this question to be freely discussed at the approaching election, in order that the new government may not be left in doubt as to the mind and will of the constituencies. For our own part, we believe this to be one of the most important subjects demanding attention at the present time.

Editorial Notes.

Those who rushed over to Alberni a short time ago for the purpose of securing land at an imaginary railway terminus are naturally very indignant because of the subsequent action of Indian Commissioners Powell and O'Reilly in reserving the land for Indian purposes. While we have not very much sympathy with the "grabbers," we cannot see quite clearly how the Dominion authorities can step in and reserve or in any manner deal with these lands. Certainly they cannot do so without the concurrence of the Provincial Government, unless, indeed, by the disallowance of the Act of last session, repealing the Act of 1875 which conveyed these lands to the Dominion. It is stated that those who located lands at Alberni are going to contest their claims, and consequent developments will therefore be looked for with some interest.

There can be no question that the steam service between Victoria and the Mainland is anything but satisfactory, and it is not surprising that movements are on foot looking to a remedy that will probably take the breath away from five-and-a-half-miles-an-hour steamboat men. Such a service as the people have been compelled to submit to for some time past would not be tolerated for a moment in any other part of the civilized world and cannot possibly be endured much longer here. It affords us very great satisfaction, therefore, to learn that there is a scheme on foot which will completely revolutionize our relations with the outside world. We are not at liberty at the present time to indicate the nature of the scheme; but this much we may be permitted to say, that if it should not prove altogether satisfactory to our friends beyond the gulf, they will only have themselves to blame. The Mainland has submitted long enough to the 5½ mile an hour business and to the serious delays and expense consequent upon her commerce and travel and mails passing through a circuitous and unnatural channel.

The prospect of a brisk demand at fair prices for Fraser river salmon is good. As was shown in a previous article a great deal of the Columbia river pack is likely to find a new market in the Eastern States, thus leaving the Old Country markets clear for our own. Add to this the fact that there is a growing demand for canned salmon in the Old Country as well as in the Eastern Provinces and that the yield of Sacramento river promises to be only about one-half of what it was last year, while that of Columbia river is scarcely better, and the reasons for more than ordinary preparations going on for the Fraser river fish harvest are explained. Last year there were eight canning establishments in operation. This year there will be twelve, if not thirteen. The great desideratum now is a good, prolonged run of fish. Everything depends upon that. Of course, there is the labor difficulty to be overcome; but should there be plenty of fish, labor will be got somehow, although it may be dear. The employment of so many of the Lower Fraser Indians on the railway works at $2 a day is sure to exert a more or less injurious influence upon the fishing industry. This labor question is a most serious one, affecting every industry in the country, and the sooner a satisfactory solution can be found the better.

MORE POWER.—Amongst the freight brought up by the steamship Victoria on her last trip was a new engine and machinery for the pile-driving operations at Port Moody. The mammoth scow was brought round yesterday and the machinery loaded on to it and taken to the scene of active operations.

TRUE FOR YOU.—The Standard having circulated a rumor to the effect that the Post was connected with the Colonist, the evening paper gives an emphatic denial, but at the same time takes occasion to remark that such a connection would be no discredit. That is more than it could truthfully say of the Standard.

THE SKUZZY.—In the early part of the week Capt. Insley returned from up-river, all idea of taking the Skuzzy through Hell Gate, for the present at least, having been abandoned There is some talk about building another boat above Hell Gate and transferring the machinery of the Skuzzy to it; but whether or not that will be attempted is doubtful.

THEATRE ROYAL.—As will appear from our advertising columns, Mr. Kennedy, supported by a talented company, will perform at Theatre Royal on Tuesday evening. Mr. Kennedy and his company bring an excellent reputation, and from what we learn of their performances at Victoria, that reputation has been well and honestly earned.

QUICK DESPATCH.—As we mentioned on Wednesday, Rev. Mr. Horlock and Mrs. Horlock arrived by the steamship Victoria on Tuesday. Mr. Horlock proceeded on to Yale on Wednesday and would reach his new parish in twenty-six days from the time of leaving England. This is, indeed, quick work. We are pleased to be able to state that Mrs. Horlock's health, which was not of the best before starting, has been improved much by the journey.

THE EVENING POST.—The third number of this new Victoria evening paper has reached this office. Not having seen former numbers, we are scarcely in a position to form an opinion, but presume the paper will be like our own, independent in politics. A supporter of the party now in power it could hardly be. Typographically, the Post presents a very creditable appearance, and its columns exhibit a fair number of advertisements from leading firms. Victoria should long since have had a good live evening paper, instead of a sickly second morning one; and, knowing something about the Messrs. McDowell Bros. (the elder of whom first learned the art of printing in the COLUMBIAN office), we feel every confidence that the Post will "fill the bill." It has the best wishes of the COLUMBIAN, and we have much pleasure in placing it on our exchange list.

"THE DAISY."—This is the appropriate name of a perfectly lovely lawn-cutter to which our attention was called at Trapp Bros.' emporium. It is on a new principle, light and graceful, so that a lady or a little girl can run it, and does its work splendidly. And it is cheap withal—only $20, being $2 less than what is asked for an inferior article beyond the gulf.

COLUMBIA RIVER SALMON.—The San Francisco News Letter of the 16th inst. says: Thus far in the season the run of fish in the Columbia river, as also in the Sacramento, has been very light, 50 per cent. less than last year, though within a day or two past the run in the latter has increased liberally. There is considerable speculation going on as to the ultimate result of the season's pack, some placing it at one-half of last year—say 500,000 cases. The price, in consequence of a light pack, has been advanced to $1.40.

DEATH has just taken from our midst a most estimable young man, David E. Armstrong, youngest son of Mr. David Armstrong, of this city. He died of consumption, and bore his long illness with exemplary Christian resignation. To him death was undoubtedly gain. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the community. During the past two days the flags in the city drooped at half-mast in token of respect, and last evening the remains were followed to their last resting place by a large cortege.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.—The general election for the local legislature was held on the 8th inst. and the result is claimed as a great Liberal victory. In the late House the Conservatives had 24 out of the 30 members. It is claimed by some authorities that in the new House the Liberals will have a majority of 2, and by others that the conservatives will have a majority of 2. There seems every reason for believing that, in the new House, parties will be very evenly divided, but we incline to think that the majority small though it be, will be on the Conservative side.

ANOTHER PATRIOT PROVIDED FOR.—"Leaf by leaf the roses fall," and one by one the patriots receive their reward. The latest patriot who has been provided for by the government is Mr. Charles Gallagher, M. P. P., for Kootenay, who has been appointed school-tax collector, and has gone to the mainland to discharge the duties of his new position. Verily, "Charley" was entitled to something for the patriotic manner in which he voted with the government; and he has got $100 per month, with nothing to do but walk up and down the line and make the boys pay $3 per head for the blessed privilege of living in this fine country. Charley has got a soft thing, indeed. "Next!"—Colonist.

THE BARCLAY SOUND LAND.—Acting under orders from Ottawa, Indian commissioners Powell and O'Reilly have secured the government steamer Sir James Douglas, and will proceed on Thursday to take possession of the land lately preempted by private individuals under the recent local act, in the name of the dominion, and for the benefit of the Indian tribes. This action will raise the question of the right of the province to dispose of unreserved public lands outside the railway belt, and may give rise to a long and bitter controversy, as the parties whose applications are recorded are indisposed to surrender without a contest, and the local government is bound, in defence of itsown privileges, to contest the Dominion claim.—Colonist.

The Excursion to Nanaimo.

The steamer Princess Louise sailed at 7 o'clock on Wednesday morning, her decks and saloons crowded with excursionists, and the Band playing lively airs from the quarter deck. The day was magnificent, and the run over all that could be desired, the good steamer arriving at Nanaimo at 11.30. Upon landing the excursionists were met by Mayor Bate and a large deputation of citizens, accompanied by the united Nanaimo and Wellington Bands, playing a welcome. After acknowledging strains from our Band, the party were conducted to the celebration grounds, where they mingled with the gay throng. The programme of games and sports occupied the whole day, and in the evening dancing was commenced and kept up till midnight. After leave-taking, the New Westminster party went on board and sailed for home about 2.30. As they were leaving, the steamship Victoria, in port at the time, saluted them with three blasts of her whistle and a shot from her gun, a compliment which was duly acknowledged by hearty cheers for Capt. Plummer. The party arrived here at 8 o'clock on Thursday morning, and, before debarking, gave three cheers for Capt. Lewis and his officers for kind attentions, which were fittingly acknowledged by Capt. Lewis. From those who went, we hear but one opinion, and that of unqualified satisfaction. There was no liquor sold on board. There were no hitches or unpleasantnesses. All went off smoothly and well. The amount received for tickets was $328.75, and, after paying all expenses, there remained a surplus of $10, which the Committee very properly added to the amount paid to the Band.

The Twenty-Fourth at South Arm.

The day dawned gloriously, and the people, old and young, male and female, poured in from the widespreading settlement, together with a goodly sprinkling from the Royal City.

The sports opened with

HORSE RACES.

There were five entries, and away they dashed, Robinson's grey coming in first. The second prize was won by Wm. Arthur's horse.

Next came the

FOOT RACES.

The first was a splendid match between Frank Kirkland and Chas. Thinkbonner, (distance, 200 yds) the former winning. Then came foot races for boys and girls, &c., &c. In the

ATHLETIC GAMES

Ed. Kirkland covered 33 feet by a hop, skip and jump, winning the first prize. Games and sports followed ad libitum. In the evening there were fireworks and a in Mr. Joseph Burr's splendid new house, with music, singing, &c., &c., at Mr. Wm. H. Burr's, where all-comers were hospitably entertained.

One notable feature of the occasion was the absence of intoxicants, so that there were, of course, no sore heads next day, although perhaps the same could not truthfully be said of certain young hearts.

A Conscientious Mongolian.

A Mongolian youth applied to a member of the Committee for a ticket to go on the Queen's Birthday excursion to Nanaimo.

Committeeman.—Are you over eighteen?

Mongolian.—Yes. Me eighteen one-halp.

Com.—Then you will have to pay full price. Only those under eighteen can go at half price.

Mon.—That would be too muchee. Me no payee two dolla.

Com.—Cannot you say you are only seventeen? You do not look more than that.

Mon.—No, me no lie for one dolla.

Com.—Well, I am sorry, but I would not be justified in giving you a half-price ticket if you are eighteen.

Mon.—(reflectingly) In Chinese countree babee one year old when born. So me only sebenteen one halp in Melikan man country. Guess me takee one dolla ticket—sabee?

Com.—Yes, Johnny, me sabee. Here is your ticket.

The young Mongolian paid his dollar and took his ticket, going on his way rejoicing that he had found a way out of the difficulty without compromising his conscience.

No Complaint.

In reply to a question on the 12th May, Sir John Macdonald said that "no complaint with respect to the influx of Chinese to British Columbia had reached Ottawa;" meaning that the government of the province had not drawn the attention of the Ottawa government to the fact that Mongols are pouring into the province at a rate that will soon make them the dominant race. This government went into office with the anti-Chinese cry; it passed a Chinese tax bill so stringent in its character as to be unconstitutional, and it frequently professed, in response to resolutions of the local House, to have drawn the attention of the Dominion government to the unfortunate fact that the labor of the country is rapidly passing from white to yellow hands. But now comes Sir John Macdonald, who asserts that the Dominion government have heard no complaint from the local government on the subject. Had this government performed its duty, instead of these 9,000 Chinese laborers in the province at this period, there would have been as many white men, with wives and families, settled upon the public lands of the province and building up homes with the money paid them by the contractors. The question is a large and serious one; but this government have never shown that they understand or appreciate it either from a political or social standpoint. The railway money that reaches Chinese hands is lost to the province forever.—Colonist.

Reciprocity with Hawaiia.

In the House of Commons, on the 1st inst., Mr. Bunster, in a very good speech, moved for a Committee to prepare an Address to the Queen, praying for commercial reciprocity with the Hawaiian Islands. In the course of some remarks recognizing the desirableness of the object and promising that, if the resolution were withdrawn, the matter would have the serious attention of the Government during recess, Sir John Macdonald said:—"I may say to my hon. friend that last summer I had the honor of being presented to His Majesty (the King of Hawaiia) when I was in England, and he entered with me into a very long and interesting conversation as to the productions of his Kingdom, and spoke very strongly about his desire to open negotiations with British America on the Pacific, and made serious enquiries as to what our probable products would be; and I, as representing one of the constituencies there, was able to give him the most full and explicit information with respect to all the productions of British Columbia. So that the initiative has been taken in this way for the establishment of commercial relations between the Islands and Canada."

Mr. Homer, speaking of the importance of establishing commercial relations between the two countries, said; —"Before the existence of this treaty between the United States and the Hawaiian Islands, there was a comparatively large and growing trade between that country and British Columbia; but since this treaty has come into operation, that trade has dwindled down to almost nothing. If reciprocity can be established between the Dominion of Canada and the Hawaiian Islands, we might not only recover that trade, but increase it very materially. British Columbia can supply them with fish, lumber, coal and other products; and you, in the present state of your manufactures in the Eastern Provinces, will be able to supply them with all the machinery and all the descriptions of manufactures they may require. In return, you will be able to take their sugar, fruit and other products for which there is now a large and growing market in British Columbia, and which will be increased by the opening up of the North-West when the railway is finished. Taking this view of the matter, it is very desirable that some action should be taken for the purpose of establishing reciprocity between the Dominion and the Hawaiian Islands, more particularly as the present treaty between the United States and those Islands is likely to come to a sudden end, if we are to judge of the feeling between them and the United States. Should that treaty cease and a reciprocity treaty be established between the Dominion and those Islands, I believe the result would be highly beneficial to both contracting parties. I hope that during the recess the Dominion Government will devote a portion of its time to the consideration of this matter, and that it will be able to report a good result at the next meeting of this Parliament."

Our Story.

KITH AND KIN.

"No, I shall not oppose that," replied Judith. And so impressed was he by her manner, and by every word she said, that he felt as if the cause were gained whose side she took.

"Thank you very much for that promise,' he answered. "It will make it much easier for me. You will of course be the best judge as to when it is fitting to speak to Mrs. Conisbrough of the matter."

"It must not be now, nor for some days to come," replied Judith, rising. "I will wish you good night, Mr. Aglionby, and go to my mother, who I am sure must want me."

"Must you go? Then good night." He rose too. "Miss Conisbrough, are you my enemy?"

"No."

"Then will you prove it, and acknowledge our cousinship by shaking hands with me?"

Judith looked at the hand he held out—at him—at the hand again; put her own into it, and repeated, "Good night."

"I hope you will rest well," he replied, holding open the door as she passed out.

"I have shaken hands with him—what will Delphine say?" was Judith's reflection as she went up stairs. She found her mother asleep. She let Mrs. Aveson go, and seated herself beside the bed, folded her hands together, and thought.

"No, he does not know," she reflected. "I should be paralyzed by the possession of that money—of any of it. But it shows a generous mind to wish to give us some of it, after what mamma said this morning. He has had his troubles, too—any one can see that. I daresay he could tell a tale of how he has been neglected, and disappointed. His eyes are good—they are not afraid to meet yours. When they are not mocking you they are pleasant. Oh, I hope mamma will come to terms with him! A long strife would be so fearful—and then if he did get angry with her, he could crush her to atoms."

When Judith had gone, Bernard felt he had a duty to fulfill. His conversation with Miss Conisbrough had brought it again to his mind. It was the duty of writing to Lizzie Vane, to acquaint her with his new fortunes—and hers, for of course she was to be the partaker for the future of all his joys and sorrow. He distinctly felt it to be a duty: was it not also a pleasure? As that thought occurred to him, he started up, muttering, "By Jove! of course it is!" And he seized pen and paper, and scrawled off these lines, in the fullness of his heart:

"My Dearest Lizzie,—You will see from the date of this that I am in the house of my fathers. You will wonder, too, what I am doing here, after all I said to you about my determination never to enter it. What I have to tell you, my darling, is a very serious matter for both of us. You remember my telling you last Monday about my accidental meeting with Mr. Aglionby of Scar Foot, my grandfather. On Wednesday last he died. They telegraphed for me to attend the funeral. He was buried this morning, and on his will being read, it turns out that he has left the whole of his property to me. I was astonished, I own, and in a measure gratified; one naturally is gratified at finding oneself suddenly rich when one had least reason to expect to be anything of the kind.

"But there are shades to the picture and drawbacks to the advantages, and you, my dear Lizzie, with your tender heart, will easily understand when I explain that my joy is not unmixed. It seems that the Mrs. Conisbrough whom I told you about, and who lives with her daughters at Yoresett, the market town, had always been given to understand that she would inherit the property.

"My grandfather's will was made only the night before he died, in a fit of pique, for some reason which no one seems able to understand. They are entirely ignored—not even mentioned in it. Mrs. Conisbrough and her eldest daughter were present at the reading of the will. The poor lady has taken it very much to heart; her means are exceedingly small, and she thinks the will a most unjust one. (So do I, for that matter—an outrageously unjust will.) And she threatens to dispute it. She will have no chance, of course, but I feel my hands in a measure tied until I know the worst she can do, and until some compromise is come to for her benefit. Meantime, she is ill up stairs in this very house! her agitation having brought on an attack of the heart. She is attended by her daughter, for whom I feel very sorry. I feel sorry for them all. They are gentlewomen, and evidently have had a hard struggle all their lives. There is such a sad, patient, yet dignified expression upon Miss Conisbrough's face. She cannot but command respect and admiration. I wish you knew her. One dreams fast sometimes, and since this morning I have been dreaming of you settled here, and myself, having effected a compromise with Mrs. Conisbrough, and proved to her that I am not the rapacious upstart she takes me for—and of you and the Misses Conisbrough getting on very well together, and being great friends. I think this is not so foolish as most dreams. I see no reason why it should not come true. Miss Conisbrough is as far as possible from being forbidding, though she looks so grave, and I am sure your winning ways would soon make her love you. This is a most beautiful old place—very different from the din and dust of the town. To-morrow I must try to make a little sketch of the lake and the house, and send you them. As soon as I can snatch the time I shall run over to Irkford and see you, and discuss future plans. I can hardly realize that our wedding, which we thought must wait for so many years, need not now be long deferred—no longer than a certain willful young woman chooses to put it off. Remember me to your mother; and Heaven bless you, my own darling, is the wish of your faithful sweetheart, "Bernard Aglionby."

His heart warmed as he wrote the words, and thought of his beautiful Lizzie, and cherished his little plan of making her and the Misses Conisbrough into great friends. Poor Bernard! He wrote out of the fullness of his heart, not out of his knowledge of either men or women.

He had chosen to remain at Scar Foot rather than accept Mr. Whaley's invitation that he would return with him to Yoresett and be his guest. Mr. Whaley may easily be pardoned for not having surmised for a moment, what Aglionby's demeanor certainly did not suggest, the unspoken impulse which urged him to remain—the longing which lay deep at his heart, to become better acquainted, in silence and undisturbed, with this old place where his fathers had lived, and where now he was to live after them; to imbibe, as it were, some ideas of the life, of the home, that was to be his. Unspoken though it was, the sentiment, the desire, was there. Deep down in his rough heart, and crusted over with the bitterness which with him came too readily to the surface, there were wells of something very like romance and sentiment. Since this morning a thousand schemes had come crowding into his mind, a thousand not wholly selfish plans and purposes, which now he could carry out to his heart's content. All his poetic instincts had been cramped, if not warped, by the life he had led, but under his unpromising exterior there they were—they did exist; and it was they and they alone which had prompted him to refuse Mr. Whaley's invitation.

His sleep, on that first night that he rested under this roof, was sweet and undisturbed. When Sunday morning dawned, and he awoke, he at first could not imagine where he was, so profound was the silence, except for the chirping birds and the smothered rush of the brook at the back of the house. Gradually his senses returned to him. He remembered it all, sprang out of bed, went to the window, and lifted the blind.

The air of the October morning was sharp; the sun was brilliant, the atmosphere clear; the view before him struck with a strange thrill upon him—a thrill half pleasure, half pain. The clear moors just opposite; the dimmer forms of the great fells behind them; the glittering silver surface of the little lake; the garden just under his eyes, filled with homely flowers, and with the green field beyond, sloping down to the water's edge—it was, indeed, very fair for any one who had eyes to see! But to him it was more—it was a revelation; there was the peculiar stillness of a country Sunday morning over it all; it was the end of the world. Most of us are acquainted with one sensation—that of arriving at some seaside place—of sleeping soundly all night; of awakening the next morning, and on looking out, finding oneself confronted by the open sea. That is a sensation which never grows old or stale. Something of the thrill and joy which attends its first time of being experienced, hangs also about each recurrence of it. It was with just such a sensation that Bernard Aglionby's eyes rested now on the prospect before him. Vague, unconscious contrasts were formed in his mind—this place and that—Scar Foot on a Sunday morning, and 13 Crane Street on a Sunday morning! He opened the window, and inhaled the pure, frosty, fragrant air—Arcadian air. It was very early, he found, not yet six o'clock; but going to bed again was a thing not to be thought of; and he dressed, went down stairs, and out of doors, and walked to the lakeside with the feeling that he was in a dream. It was as wonderful to him, and certainly quite as agreeable, as her first ball to a girl of seventeen who has been brought up in strict seclusion. He wondered at the intensity of his own enjoyment, and its naivete.

"It is hereditary, I suppose," he thought, "and I can't help it. It's the stock I come of. When a man's forefathers have lived and moved and had their being for hundreds of years in a spot like this, and have appreciated it, a love of such things must be implanted in that man's nature at his birth. So it is with me, I suppose. I fear Lizzie won't delight in it as I do."

Bernard spent almost the whole of that day out of doors, literally "exploring" with the avidity and interest of a schoolboy who has found a promising place for birds'-nests. He walked completely round the lake, and thus, from under the village of Busk at the opposite side, he got a fine view of Scar Foot, and gazed at it till he could gaze no longer.

He met a farmer's boy, and asked him the name of some of the great gray fells in the distance, and the boy told him, and added that there must have been rain in Lancashire, for "look at t' Stake," which, as Bernard saw, was flecked with irregular white lines. "All the becks is oot," added the boy, and Aglionby smiled. At Irkford—for miles around Irkford—the "becks" were black as ink, and foul as only the streams of a town can be with all manner of pollution.

He went in again, to his dinner, in the middle of the day, and sent a message to Mrs. Aveson to enquire after "those ladies." The answer brought by the housekeeper was, "Miss Conisbrough's compliments, and she was quite well; but Mrs. Conisbrough was rather poorly this morning." On her own account, Mrs. Aveson added that Mrs. Conisbrough was terribly weak, and had to lie on her back as still as a mouse, or palpitations would come on again. Dr. Lowther had called, and said that complete rest was still necessary. Miss Conisbrough had been reading the Morning Service to her mamma, and she was going to have her dinner with her up stairs. With this he had to be satisfied.

"Where have you been for a week back?" enquired a man of his neighbor. "I have not a weak back," retorted he. "You misunderstand me," remarked his friend; "but if you ever get a weak back try Burdock Blood Bitters." It cures all debility arising from disordered Kidneys, Liver or Blood, and is the best purifying Tonic in the world. All medicine dealers supply Sample Bottles at 10 cents. Regular Size $1.00
