The British Columbian.

Wednesday Morning, Oct. 15, 1884.

Current Events and Opinions.

Allowing ample margin for Mr. Van Horne's youthful enthusiasm, two important points appear to be proved: First, the land east of and adjacent to the Rocky Mountains will produce wheat and other grain, vegetables, etc., and of course beef, mutton and poultry can be produced there at low cost. Secondly, the timber of British Columbia, along with the coal, the iron and the fish, will furnish the material for profitable trade between the two sides of the Rocky Mountains. The splendid bituminous coal of Nanaimo is only a few miles distant by deep water from the iron ore of Texada. Iron, coal, wood! What is to hinder British Columbia from producing the lumber and nails for the houses and barns of the prairie settlers? All the farm implements, the woollen clothing and the fish required by the prairie farmers near the Mountains could be supplied by the British Columbians in exchange for wheat, beef, mutton and wool. The distance by rail between the two points of production is less than 700 miles. The solution of the difficulty of sending prairie products to the east is to send them to the west. Vancouver Island should yet rival Great Britain in the extent and variety of her manufactures.—Hamilton Times.

The principal argument in favor of the Scott Act or prohibitory liquor selling legislation is that its operation tends to decrease crime, and as this tendency has always been denied by the opponents of such legislation any information or data bearing upon the disputed point will be valuable. The Berlin W. C. T. U. recently enquired why in Halton county there were 245 arrests in 1880; 131 in 1881; 147 in 1882 and only 97 in 1883? To this Mr. W. Van Allan the county gaoler says:—

"In my opinion the main reason of the decrease of arrests in this county is on account of the suppression of the liquor traffic. There has been very little crime in the county during the two last years. The number of arrests during the present year up to date are 138, but nearly all of these are what are called tramps, who have been in jail over night, the same as are put in the lock-up in other towns where there is one, there being none in this town. There have been no criminal arrests belonging to the county this year, and we have had an empty gaol for five weeks excepting a woman in insanity. But we are now expecting three hotelkeepers for violation of the Scott Act; they are sentenced to two months each, and warrants out for their arrest."

Our readers can draw their own conclusions from this statement.—Ottawa Free Press.

A remarkable incident in connection with the franchise struggle in Great Britain is furnished in the strong contrast between the reception which Mr. Gladstone has met with in Scotland, and that Sir Stafford Northcote has received. In Mr. Gladstone's case the enthusiasm was everywhere spontaneous. There was no attempt to work a boom. The people were determined to see and hear the Premier, and accordingly his progress through the country has been one long triumph. Sir Stafford Northcote's tour, on the contrary, although liberally advertised and boomed by active local committees, has evoked positively no general enthusiasm. Extensive arrangements were made for his visit to Edinburgh, but the affair was only an ordinary metropolitan demonstration. At other points the same absence of enthusiasm was noticeable. Crowds will not gather to hear him, the people will not demonstrate over him. Instead of being waylaid with addresses and congratulations at every corner like Mr. Gladstone, the programme of the managers of the tour has been adhered to in every particular and nowhere has he received anything in the shape of a spontaneous popular reception. The people of Scotland are overwhelmingly with Mr. Gladstone in his great efforts to enlarge the liberties of the people.—Toronto Globe.

Speaking of the Irish agitation the Week says: Conciliation so far has failed. The Lord Lieutenant, a man endowed personally with every quality which can command popularity as well as respect, is received wherever he goes with scowls of hatred. The language of the agitators is more venomous than ever; and Mr. Gladstone, instead of being spared as a benefactor, is singled out as a special mark of their abuse. Their gratitude for all that he has done, endured and risked on their behalf was shown by voting against him on a motion of censure, and they now announce their intention of wrecking his Franchise Bill unless he will dismiss two of his colleagues for an offence which has no existence except in imaginations steeped in slander. If he can persuade himself, as he apparently does, that he has solved the Irish problem, this only proves that it is as difficult for unwelcome truth to find access to uncrowned as to crowned kings. Of the responsibility the largest measure rests, not upon the Government, but upon the selfishness and profligacy of the factions, both Tory and Radical, in the House of Commons. But the upshot is that by no conceivable course of action could the question have been brought into a much more dangerous state than that in which we see it at present. There is a general uprising of the Celtic and Roman Catholic country, in a spirit of the most rancorous enmity against British civilization. Philanthropy may dream and rhetoric may plausibly demonstrate that this uprising will be quelled, and that harmony and security will be restored by the concession of political power to ignorant and half civilized people who avow beforehand, and with unquestionable sincerity, that they intend to use their votes for the destruction of the Common wealth. Every mail brings proof that harmony and security are not likely to be restored till the Irish shall have satisfied themselves by some decisive test that irresistible force is on the side of the Union.

Coast Surveys.

For some time past the question of a thorough survey of the route to Alaska has been agitated. Active measures have at last been taken, and in all probability work will be commenced shortly. The American government has built and equipped a steamer for the purpose of making the survey, and she is now on her way to the Pacific coast. The Oregonian advocates a co-operative survey of the line, so that the route might be thoroughly known. It says: "Now comes the time for a concurrence of action between England and America, with the design of fostering interests of importance to both nations—interests which are yet in their infancy, but likely to develop into the greatest importance. Not only are there mines of unquestioned richness and boundless forests of the most valuable timber, but the fisheries are increasing in value every day; and each nation has an interest in the security of navigation. The British authorities should at once begin a survey of the coast lying between Semiahmoo and the mouth of the Skeena, which is the southern boundary of Alaska; and some way should be devised to have the maps and charts of both Alaska and British Columbia completed simultaneously. Of course, if there were no co operation between the two vessels, there would still be the English official map and the American official chart when the survey was completed. But the better way would be, if both surveys were in progress at once, to place an American officer on board the British vessel, and vice versa, to transcribe the hydrographic work as far as performed. It would lead to a great many excellent results, to the best of our belief. The British charts have always been regarded by mariners as more thorough than our own; though why that should be we cannot readily understand, as the American surveys have never been hurried or restricted in their action for want of time. And, perhaps, by an interchange of action in the manner proposed, we shall be enabled to gain equally accurate information for mariners, and in a more expeditious manner than has heretofore characterized the operations of the American coast survey."

An Amiable Terrier.

A few days since a hen belonging to Mrs. Elck stole off under the barn, and later was found sitting on four unbroken eggs, while the piping of ten newly-fledged chicks came from beneath her wings. In order that she might bring out the remaining eggs the ten chickens were taken away from her and placed in a box nicely filled with straw in Mrs. Elck's kitchen. The plaintive cries of the chickens attracted the attention of Beauty, a pet black-and-tan dog, who after soberly inspecting the box and looking in the situation, stepped carefully into the straw and settled down among the chickens. The cries of the feathered youngsters ceased immediately, and they took to their unnatural but attentive mother at once. For several days the dog assumed watchful care over her charges, carefully tucking them down about her with her nose, and becoming visibly anxious whenever one of the more active of the birds hopped over the edge of the box upon the floor, barking loudly until some one came and replaced the venturesome chick. When the chickens were finally taken from her and placed with the mother hen, Beauty seemed completely lost.—Chicago Journal.

THE HARVEST OF THE SEA.—The "harvest of the sea," so far as it is gathered in Scottish waters, has just been made the subject of an official valuation by the officers of the fishery board, by whom it is estimated as amounting in money to a total sum of £4,286,242. The larger portion, a little short of £3,000,000, is derived from the herring fishery, which has for a long period been the most important fishing industry of the country. The haddock is taken in vast quantities by the Scotch fishing boats; 543,568 hundredweight were caught during the last twelve months, the estimated value of the catch being £240,593. The Scottish oyster-beds, like those in other localities, have largely fallen off in productiveness, only 3,650 hundreds of oysters (of 120 each) having been gathered from the once productive "scalps" of Scotland. The total value of the shell fish taken is set down as amounting to £82,945.

The British Columbian.

Wednesday Morning, Oct. 15, 1884.

Some Victorians conceived that the government lots in that city belonged to the municipality and not to the government at all. They applied to the courts, therefore, for an injunction to prevent the government sale. The attorney-general showed very clearly that the application had no ground either in law or equity, and the application for an injunction was dismissed. But the government can scarcely be charged with want of generosity in this matter. Twenty-one lots were handed over to the city corporation as part of a proposed park, and 18 others were reserved for public purposes. The Victorians ought to have been satisfied with this surely.

It is not possible to ascertain with any exactness the strength of the independent Republic party in the United States. It is estimated, however, that there will be 45,000 votes controlled by that party in the state of New York alone. These votes will nearly all be cast for Cleveland, and will probably enable the Democrats to carry that state by a sweeping majority. If the statements made by Cleveland's friends are to be accepted, there seems every reason to fear that he is guilty of the immoral charge which has been brought against him by his opponents. On the other hand it is urged that this sin was committed many years ago, when Cleveland was young and foolish, and that a subsequent life of uprightness should be accepted as sufficient proof of reformation. The contention is not without reason. There can be no doubt whatever that Cleveland's public record is far more acceptable than that of Blaine. There seems to be strong evidence against the Republican candidate, such as a nation having respect for itself cannot consistently ignore.

Telephone War.

Is A. Graham Bell the original telephone inventor or is he not? This is a question which it seems the United States courts are just now investigating. Bell obtained patents for his telephone upon the ground that he was the first inventor, but the credit which has attached to him for this ingenious and useful appliance is now disputed. It is claimed that Daniel Drawbaugh, an obscure genius of Pennsylvania, constructed the first telephone, and that the principle was known to him long before it occurred to Bell. The People's Telephone Co. has for years been making and renting telephones upon the pretext that it had a right to do so on Drawbaugh's invention. The Bell Co. object to this, and has commenced action for an infringement of its patent. This case enlists a large amount of public interest for two reasons—because it affects an instrument so familiar to the public, and because it is likely to be one of the most remarkable cases ever known before the courts. The Bell Telephone Co. has already spent four years in preparing its case, and the two parties have over 500 witnesses. The examination of Dawbaugh occupied about 3 weeks, and his cross examination took 5. The court is packed with lawyers, many of whom are high up in the profession. It is likely the case will be one of the longest and most keenly contested ever heard of.

The Leaven Working.

Some time ago, we published an extract from the Toronto Globe commenting upon the Chinese question in view of the demonstration which was shortly to be made at Hamilton, Ontario. In these comments the Globe discussed the question very fairly, and maintained that the time had arrived when some action should be taken by the Dominion government to remove or mitigate the evils of Chinese immigration. This was very encouraging to the people of British Columbia, for the Globe is undoubtedly one of the most powerful and influential organs in Canada. The Hamilton demonstration has taken place, and here is one of resolutions which found unanimous approval and passed without a dissenting voice:

Whereas the system of importing pauper and Chinese labor to this country by the several departments of the Dominion of Canada does not in any way protect the industries of our country or increase the wealth of the producers, but the importation of pauper and coolie labor, in an already glutted market, brings and increases poverty and its attending evils. The enforcement of labor contracts made in foreign countries, detrimental to the interests of wage-earners of Canada, will result in a degrading competition that will break the noble spirit of labor and render our slavery unbearable. We denounce the actions of the government as criminal in protecting the manufacturer and strangling competition by the many unfair advantages derived from such protection, while the producers are taxed in order, to cheapen the cost of production; therefore be it resolved that the workingmen of Hamilton condemn the policy of the government in allowing the importation to our shores of pauper immigrants, and call upon them to take measures to return such foreign paupers as are now in our land, and to legislate against the arrival of others; that we demand the recall of the immigration agents and lecturers employed by the government, and the application of the money appropriated for their remuneration to some public work upon which some unemployed Canadians can earn their bread; that we especially protest against the introduction of Chinese labor in any part of the Dominion, and call upon the government to send back all the Chinese now in Canada, or enforce such a poll tax as will drive them hence; that we demand the repeal of all laws that do not bear equally upon capital and labor, and the substitution therefor of such laws as will protect the laborers' rights from the encroachments of selfish capitalists; that the workingmen of Hamilton refrain from giving support to either of the political parties in the future till such time as they secure by legislation not promises, but their rights.

It is quite evident that the agitation against unrestricted Chinese immigration is extending eastward. Our sister provinces have become aware that it is not British Columbia alone that will suffer from the invasion. Like the Colorado beetle these people will, if left alone, find their way to every province in the Dominion, carrying with them their nasty ways and undermining the legitimate workingmen of the country. When the nation once becomes aroused, depend upon it the Chinese "must go!"

Hard to Please.

For some time the opposition newspapers in this province have been howling because, they asserted, the government was giving away all the public lands. The Kootenay bill, the island railway agreement, the Peace River surrender, the Eagle Pass contract, and numerous minor matters were put forward as examples of the "give-away policy" now prevailing. This kind of cry might have some merit in it if it could be defended upon any principles of public policy, or if the assertions so recklessly made had been founded upon fact. It is not possible for us yet to estimate with any precision the effects of the Kootenay bill. It has thus far resulted in attracting a good deal of attention to a portion of the province which is supposed to be very wealthy, but which was almost absolutely unknown. The company which has undertaken to open up and develop this region in consideration of the privileges granted may make a fortune or lose one. They must take the risks, and in any case the country gains a substantial benefit. The results of the settlement bill are more apparent. The railway lands in this district have been nearly all taken up, the dry dock has been taken over by the federal government, and the construction of the island railway is in actual progress. All these things seriously affect the province, and affect it for good. Both the mainland and the island feel the stimulating influence of expanding industry and increasing business. Beyond the editor of the Standard and his representative in this city we doubt if there could be found in this province a man who would be rash enough to assert that it would be an advantage if the province went back to the condition it occupied in the beginning of 1883! Since that time the country has made more solid progress than it made during the preceding ten years. It would be absurd to claim all this progress as due to the government policy, but there is very little doubt but that policy had a great deal to do with it. But the organs are just now engaged in a very different kind of cry. They are denouncing the government with characteristic venom because it would not give away the minerals in the railway belt, and because it would not give away its city lots in New Westminster and Victoria. The Dominion government claims that the conveyance of land carries with it the minerals, while the province maintains that it does not—and these very organs express the greatest anxiety to see the Dominion government win! This is patriotic, surely; and it is consistent, too, because these organs would not be consistent with their record unless they were chargeable with inconsistency!

The str. Princess Louise arrived from Victoria at 2:30 on Monday afternoon. If she would do this every time, or even make this port at 3, there would be no grumbling here; but when it comes to 4:30 and 5 there is a grievance.

Since transfer arrangements have been perfected on the Columbia, the through freight now comes over the Northern Railway from the east to Tacoma, without breaking bulk. This is both a saving of time and a great convenience.

Thirty-five government lots were sold in Victoria last week for something over $16,000. The highest price obtained was $715. The prices obtained at the government sale in this city were considerably better. The sale, however, is pronounced a success.

Captain Pittendrigh informs us that another shipment of 800,000 salmon eggs was successfully placed in the hatchery last Saturday. These eggs came from Harrison river, and were transferred by Mr. Mowat. There are now about 2,000,000 eggs in the hatchery.

There is something about a Canadian expedition that the enemy cannot stand. When the Canadian expedition went to Red River, in 1870, Mr. Riel's provisional government took to its heels, without firing a shot, and the expedition was a picnic. We are a great nation.—Hamilton Spectator.

Mr. Anderson, late superintendent of fisheries, held that salmon, after spawning, never returned alive to salt water. Captain Pittendrigh is of a different opinion. He has had a number of salmon branded and tagged this summer, and is confident that some of them will turn up in the nets next season.

London is becoming alarmed at its own phenomenal growth. Even now, though the pace has been a little checked, the metropolis adds a new Brighton to itself every year, building from twenty-five to thirty thousand houses. In a short period a fourth of England will be concentrated in a district a few miles square.

We sincerely hope the rumor respecting the sandheads lighthouse keeper, published elsewhere, may yet prove to be without foundation. Up to a late hour last night we endeavored through the telegraph to ascertain the facts, but could learn nothing definite. Captain Revely was at Nanaimo last night, but the operator could not find him.

A peculiar virtue in Ayer's Sarsaparilla is that while it cleanses and purges the blood from all corruptions and impurities, and thereby roots out disease, it builds up and invigorates the whole system, and makes one young again.

A NEW STORE.—Our enterprising young townsman, Mr. Newton A. White, has fully opened his new store on Columbia street, and makes his business announcement in another column. Mr. White has been a resident of this province a great many years, and for some time has held a responsible position in the mercantile establishment of Messrs. James Cunningham & Co. He begins business now for himself, and starts with the advantage of being both well known and well liked. We hope this latest venture in the city will meet with complete success.

DENTISTRY.—Dr. E. M. Cheadle wishes to inform the public that he will leave New Westminster for Nanaimo on or about the 15th inst., to attend his regular professional engagement there. Those in need of professional services should govern themselves accordingly.[td

ANTHRACITE COAL.—A field of anthracite coal has recently been found near Cascade Mountain, on the Canadian Pacific Railway, 900 miles west of Winnepeg. It has been traced in a direct line, on its outcrops, for several miles, and, at intervals, pits or shafts have been dug to prove the regularity and persistence of this anthracite stratum. About 300 tons have been mined and shipped to the east, and from this amount sufficient tests have been made to prove, not only its great value, but also its identity as a true anthracite coal.—Mining Review.

WHAT IS THE MATTER?—Last evening the tug Pilot, with Captain Revely on board, started for the Sand Heads lighthouse, Fraser river. His sudden departure for that place is explained as follows: On Tuesday last, when the steamer Princess Louise left New Westminster for this port, she took on board a man whose name we are unable to learn at present for the lighthouse above mentioned, and on arriving at it the keeper, with his assistant, took the man off in an open boat. Since that date the light has not been seen by vessels passing that way, nor by parties who were accustomed to see it from the shore. As a heavy sea was running and a strong wind blowing when the boat left the steamer, it is supposed she was swamped in the breakers on the Sand Heads and that the men were drowned. This belief is strengthened by the fact that the blocks and tackle for hoisting the boat out of reach of the waves have been dangling loosely in the wind ever since. —Standard of Monday. The man who went down on the Louise was Mr. Fraser, brother of the lighthouse keeper.

Many forget that the hair and scalp need cleansing as well as the hands and feet. Extensive use of Ayer's Hair Vigor has proven that it is the best cleansing agent for the hair—that it prevents as well as removes dandruff, cools and soothes the scalp, and stimulates the hair to renewed growth and beauty.

MOUNT LEHMAN, October 11.—The Mount Lehman school is completed and has been accepted by the Superintendent of Education. The building was erected by Mr. J. K. Nelson, of Langley, and the work has been done in a most satisfactory manner. Miss Ella Coughlan, late teacher in the Langley school, has been engaged as teacher, and the school is expected to be opened on Monday, the 20th inst.

From Maple Ridge.

(Correspondence of the Columbian.)

MAPLE RIDGE, Oct. 13.—Land slips are the order of the day. The railway along the river is submitted to a severe test. Such a continuous down pour of rain has not occurred before in the memory of the oldest inhabitant. The "glorious" climate is spoken of in ironic terms by many of the new arrivals. Some are speculating on the contrast in the weather of B. C. according to Professor Proctor's estimate fifteen million years hence. The contract for building the road across Pitt meadows is awarded to Mr. George Swan for $35 a chain. The difficulty of exit for the settlers of that locality is at last solved. The rival claims of Stephens and Wilson were settled last week by arbitration. Both claimed to have a prior right to a government lot in township 12. The decision was given in favor of Wilson. Those who enjoy the "light fantastic" are looking forward to a jolly time next Wednesday evening in the Westcott House where a free ball and supper will be given by the enterprising proprietors. The literary society will discuss again on Saturday evening the merits and demerits of the execution of Charles I.

Dominion and Province.

Within the past few days an action in the Supreme Court has been commenced against the Chief Commissioner at the suit of the Attorney General of Canada, the object of which is to prevent the provincial government issuing crown grants of those lands within the railway belt which, previous to the Settlement Act, had been preempted or purchased by individuals. The scope of the action is wide enough to embrace other questions, as, for example, the right to the precious metals and the sovereignty of the lands within the railway belt. The writ asks for a declaration that Her Majesty is entitled to these lands, i. e., Her Majesty as represented by the Dominion, and further seeks an injunction against the Chief Commissioner, which we take to mean an effort on the part of the Dominion to establish a sovereignty over these lands as distinguished from a mere ownership of them in the character of trustees for railroad purposes. We unwillingly refrain from discussing the merits of this case, because, though the matter is now launched before the court, it is a subject, not of the ordinary ownership of the land, of which there can be no little dispute; it is of far deeper interest; it involves the right of sovereignty, of escheat, of precious metals, of right of way and of water, and a host of cognate subjects. The case is replete with considerations, vitally affecting provincial rights, and while abstaining from the discussion of them we desire to inform our readers of the litigation in which the Dominion has embarked. Incidentally another question arises, the power of the supreme court to interfere, by injunction, with the functions of the executive. It is not to be wondered that the Hon. Mr. Drake, who has been retained by the Dominion government, feels himself compelled to retire from the cabinet. It could not be otherwise. We shall endeavor to furnish the public from time to time with a faithful and impartial report of the proceedings before the court, being assured such proceedings will be of the greatest interest.—Colonist.

Police Court.

Before W. Norman Bole, Esq., P. M., and W. D. Ferris, Esq., J. P.

On Monday, Donnley, charged with vagrancy, was called. Chief Constable Wiggins testified that prisoner had been playing the "idle dodge" for some time past. He was well dressed and had no visible means of living. He considered him to be a bad character. Police Magistrate Bole said these well-dressed loafers were as a general thing the worst kind of vagrants and were deserving of good sound penalties; so that, in the light of the evidence before him, he imposed a fine of $25 and imprisonment for three calendar months.

Charley Smith was brought before the court, charged with vagrancy, to which charge he pleaded guilty. He was given one month's imprisonment.

The next case called was J. S. Clute vs. George Williams, charged with maliciously and intentionally breaking windows in the residence of Mr. Clute, in the latter part of July last. The Court advised Mr. Williams to compromise the matter with Mr. Clute, stating that boys' testimony was generally unreliable and contradictory, and in the event the case went against him, the penalty might demand a committal of the defendant to jail, which would be very humiliating to say the least. Mr. Williams said that from what he knew of the affair he had good reason to believe his son innocent of the charge, and believing this, he did not intend to throw money away in compromising a case which he thought unfounded; he would let the law take its course.

J. S. Clute testified that the house was unoccupied, and the damage done to the property by Gordon Williams and his playmates was estimated by Mr. Scoullar, glazier at the Royal City Planing Mills, at $39.33.

Harry Wert testified that he, in company with Gordon and George Williams and Harry Parsons, in the latter part of July, went up to Mr. Clute's house and broke some of the window glass, after which they ran away.

George Williams was sworn and testified that he was at school on the day that the deed was committed. He saw the windows were broken on Saturday, and he attended school every week-day; said he first saw the broken window glass on Saturday when going after water.

The Court said the boy's testimony was very unreliable and conflicting; Mr. Ferris said Mr. Williams must have been misled by the boy's statement to him; the evidence in the case was very strong.

Robert Parsons was sworn and testified that he in company with George and Gordon Williams and Harry Wert did in the latter part of July last break the glass in the windows of Mr. J. S. Clute's house.

Mr. Ferris informed Mr. Williams that at this late stage of the case the Court would give him an opportunity to compromise. Mr. Bole said it was a wretched thing to bring children into court. Their testimony was so unreliable that they made a farce of a case.

Mr. Williams said that he thought with the witnesses he could produce he could fully substantiate the boy's innocence; but since the evidence was against him he thought he had better accept the compromise.

The Court then imposed a fine of $5; costs of court, $9.50; and $8, damages on Mr. Clute's property; total, $22.50; and in default of payment one month's imprisonment.

J. S. Clute vs. Gordon Williams, charged with maliciously breaking window glass in Mr. Clute's residence in the latter part of July last, to which charge Mr. Williams plead guilty for his son. The Court then imposed a fine of 50 cents and damages on the property of Mr. Clute of $8; total, $8.50; or in default of payment, 14 days' imprisonment.

Ontario Bribery Commission.

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—The Bribery Commission met this afternoon. Hon. Mr. Mowat was examined at length by Mr. McMaster. He said his information as to bribery was obtained in a general way from his colleagues. He left the conduct of matters entirely to them, and, though he was prepared to accept a share of the responsibility, he could give very little information. No other witnesses were examined.

TORONTO, Oct. 3.—Hon. Mr. Hardy was examined before the Bribery Commission this morning. He emphatically denies that he or any member of the government had deputed McKim or Balfour to endeavor to entrap Bunting. The government had placed Bunting on a plane with other offenders, and were anxious to punish all. He told nothing that has not already been made public.

TORONTO, Oct. 4.—At to-day's session of the Bribery Commission E. J. Vicars, a strong Conservative, swore that a few nights previous to the exposure of the plot in the house, Messrs. Fraser and Hardy passed him on the street and he heard Hardy remark: "If our little scheme with Balfour works we will fix them." Hardy and Fraser entered the box and gave the statement an unqualified denial. The latter said it was a lie from whole cloth and promised to look up Vicar's antecedents. The commission adjourned until Monday, when Messrs. Bunting and Meek will call witnesses in their own defense.

CURE FOR DEAFNESS.—As numerous testimonials will show, there is no more reliable cure for deafness than Hagyard's Yellow Oil. It is also the best remedy for ear ache, sore throat, croup, rheumatism, and for pains and lameness generally. Used externally and internally.

City Council.

Council met on Monday night, His Worship the Mayor in the chair; present, Councilmen Elliott, Johnston, Hendry, Curtis, Cunningham and Henderson.

Communication from Chief Engineer Fire Department received, in reference to reception of steam fire engine and recommeneing that the present quarters be enlarged enough to accommodate both engines, and not thinking it advisable to form a new company as enough men could be detailed from the present company to equip both engines.

The Chief Engineer of the department reported 58 active members on the roll.

Councilman Curtis said he thought the Chief Engineer's report in regard to the number of active members was a farce and was over-estimated. To his certain knowledge several of those whose names were read by the clerk were not and never had been active members. He thought it proper to exempt only those who turned out and earned by active service the title of "active member."

Coun. Johnston said those who paid the annual fee of $3 were enrolled as active members, whether or not they rendered services to the company.

Moved by Coun. Johnston, seconded by Coun. Curtis, that the report of the Chief Engineer be accepted. Carried.

Coun. Curtis thought it was a mistake of the council to receive tenders for the sale of the city lots in a lump sum. He said that where the city allowed a certain percentage of the proceeds of the sale to the auctioneer it stimulated him to get all he could for the property, because the city's gain would be his gain; and even though the seller made more on percentage, the advanced price he would bring in the sale of the city property in this way would compensate the city tenfold for the extra amount paid the auctioneer.

Moved by Coun. Cunningham, seconded by Coun. Johnston, that the previous motion be rescinded, and that tenders be called for on a percentage; tenders to be handed in at the next regular meeting of the council. Carried.

The following accounts were presented: COLUMBIAN, $40.98; R. C. Planing Mills, $36; D. L. Smith, $107.50; Woods & Turner, $97.50; Dominion Saw Mill, $122; T. R. Pearson & Co., 50 cents; Jas. Cunningham, $8.39; Wm. Rae, $9.

The finance committee presented a report of receipts and expenditures for September, showing a balance of $477 in the treasury.

Mr. Corbould instructed the city to sue W. J. Armstrong at once, to recover the arrears found to be due on the lease of water frontage. The city solicitor advised the council to pursue this course at once and save further controversies.

Moved by Coun. Henderson, seconded by Coun. Johnston, that the clerk inform Archie Burns that the water frontage property which he applied for a lease of is not on lease. Carried.

On motion, it was resolved to call for tenders for printing 600 forms of agreement and 300 forms of conveyance.

It was resolved to change place of sale of city property from the council chamber to the court house.

On motion, it was resolved to move all Indians from city streets and squares.

Coun. Hendry stated that the present ferry system was giving very poor accommodation in relation to the handling of freight. They would not receive freight from their wharves on either side of the river or unload it from the boat. Shippers in order to insure the delivery of goods were obliged to accompany them, and pay fare both ways. He thought something ought to be done to improve this very inadequate means of transportation.

His worship stated that he heartily coincided with Coun. Hendry in regard to the wretched system of ferry transportation. This having to load and unload your freight on either shore of the river, and pay your way besides, was ridiculous in the extreme. Some arrangements should be made with the owner of the ferry to form a schedule of freight rates which would justify them in handling freight. Council adjourned.

FRAUDULENT TRANSACTIONS.—There are many frauds perpetrated in medicine, and many advertised remedies worse than useless. Not so with Hagyard's Yellow Oil. It remains as ever the best internal and external medicine for all pain, soreness and injuries with which human flesh is afflicted.

Chilliwhack Exhibition.

EDITOR COLUMBIAN.—I believe I am expressing the sentiment of this community when I say that we are very much obliged to the people of New Westminster for the interest they took in visiting our agricultural exhibition, and to Trapp Bros. who chartered the str. Adelaide to bring visitors from below. We are likewise under great obligations to the New Westminster band for the charming music it furnished on that occasion. It is hoped this may not be the last time they will have an opportunity to contribute so largely to the success of our exhibition.—Yours, &c.,

S. CAWLEY, Sec.

Chilliwhack, Oct. 9:1884.

Road Work.

EDITOR COLUMBIAN.—I see that $500 has been appropriated by the government for the Johnston road, and it is being spent on men hired by the day to work on the road at $2.50 per day and board. Mr. Johnston and his two sons, with two other men, are doing the work, and Mr. Johnston has charge of the job. Now, does not everybody know that good men can be got at this time of the year for just about one half of that pay? I think the work should be stopped and the rest of the money spent by letting a contract, so that every one would have a chance to bid on it. It is shameful how gover ment money is being thrown away in this municipality by employing men to do road work by the day. I hear that the money appropriated for the Semiahmoo road from Mud Bay to Semiahmoo Bay is to be spent in the same way. This is a shame, and I hope the citizens of Surrey will hold a meeting and protest against such a waste of their appropriations.—Yours, &c.,

SURREYITE.

Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam is a remedy that is always reliable for all throat, bronchial and lung troubles, and never does harm to any one.

Maple Ridge Council.

Council met on the 8th inst.; all the members present. A communication from Turner, Beeton & Co. was read, asking permission to build a wharf and shed on municipal property at Port Hammond. The clerk was requested to answer the same. Angus Morrison was allowed to work one day on road as desired by him. It was resolved that the C. P. R. Engineer be informed of the obstructions on road in front of Mr. Hinch's property. The sum of $15 was granted to open a ditch east of Mr. Cook's farm, township 12. The council unanimously endorsed the prayer of a numerously signed petition asking the provincial government for a grant to extend the town line northward and the Kanaka creek road eastward. The following bills were ordered paid: C. P. N. Co., $3 (freight); Joseph Stephens, $5 (balance of salary as municipal collector); John McKenney, $10 (services as returning officer); John McIver, $3 (work on road). Council adjourned.

THE SECRET OUT.—The secret of beauty has been at last revealed. Without good health, pure blood and a fair clear skin none can possess good looks. What is more repulsive than pimples, blotches and a sallow or pasty complexion? Burdock Blood Bitters reveal the fact that all can gain pure blood and freedom from the repulsive diseases of the skin that result from impurities.

The Chinese troops then fled in the direction of Das Guan, pursued by the French. The Kep garrison defended their position bravely, compelling the French to surround the redoubt and carry it at the point of the bayonet. In the Chinese village alone 600 were killed. The French fought with spirit and decision. They captured all the enemy's war material, mules and horses. A French captain and 20 men were killed and 20 officers and 50 men wounded. Gen. There is some hope that the lives of these three men have been spared.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The prospects of a compromise on the franchise bill being reached between the Conservatives and Liberals is improving. It is allowed that the government's scheme for the redistribution of parliamentary seats to correct the disparity which now exists between representation and population in counties and burroughs has smoothed the way for a settlement. QUEBEC, Oct. 11.—About one o'clock this afternoon an explosion occurred at the new parliament buildings, destroying a considerable portion of the masonry and windows. It is a new building, which was just being roofed in. The explosion was at first supposed to be the boiler of the engine used for hoisting material, but this proved not to be the case; neither can it be attributed to gas. The general impression appears to be that the explosion was caused by dynamite, but none of this ingredient was used on the works. The mystery is as to how it came there. An investigation is now being held. The workmen being all away at dinner, and he escaped with a slight cut from a piece of stone. The shock was very severe all over the city, the windows of houses in the vicinity of the explosion being badly shattered.

IMPORTANT CHANGES.—There are two periods in the life of every female when the system undergoes great changes. First, the change from childhood to womanhood; next, that of womanhood to old age. These are the critical changes of life, and the system should be nourished and regulated by that matchless tonic, Burdock Blood Bitters. It is invaluable in all diseases peculiar to females.

YESTERDAY'S DESPATCHES

The police are vigorously at work in regard to the clue obtained, and arrests may be looked for before long. All the offices in the departmental building are open to-day, and employees are at their desks. SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 13.—The Oceanic to-day brings Hongkong dates to Sept. 12th and Yokohama to the 27th. Associated press Yokohama advices say that Charles De Groate, Belgium minister to Sapan, died suddenly of heart disease on Sept. 16th. The French Catholic mission refused to bury him because he was a Mason. On the 15th Sept. Yokohama and Tokio were visited by a terrible typhoon. In the latter city 3000 houses were totally or partially destroyed, and 20 people killed. The loss of life at sea is appalling; no estimate could be made of the number. The typhoon was followed by another of great force on the 17th, but of brief duration. It is believed the Franco-Chinese war will not interfere with the revision of Japanese treaties. The conference will be opened as soon as foreign ministers have received their instructions. It is believed the basis of revision will be adopted as already agreed on; only minor details remain to be discussed. Hongkong advices say it is rumored the Chinese government had concluded a loan of two million taels with a German banking firm, and half a million had been paid into the custom treasury on account.

BERLIN, Oct. 13.—The North German Gazette says the idea of a Congo congress in Berlin is warmly approved by the governments of France, Belgium, Spain, Holland, Austria and Russia. The Gazette states that Germany recently took steps in London to obtain security for German commercial interests in Africa in the event of British annexation of what is now unoccupied territory. A friendly exchange of views thus far resulted in a decision that Great Britain shall only place the southern coast of New Guinea and adjacent islands under British protection, and that entente cordiale may be hoped in regard to any rival interest of England and Germany elsewhere.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The Conservative demonstration announced for Birmingham to-day, involving a meeting in Aston grounds, town hall and in the skating rinks, was prevented by an organized force of their opponents. The Liberals in great numbers forced an entrance to the town hall by battering in the doors with heavy planks, and overwhelmed the Conservatives.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—A correspondent of the Times telegraphs that the news of the defeat of Admiral Lespes and the French fleet at Tam Sui is confirmed. The Chinese, by hiding in brushwood, suffered some six hundred of the French force to land and come within easy range of their guns before they appeared. The Chinese general Tso then led an attack upon the rear. The French troops became panic-stricken. The Chinese killed 70 men and captured one gun. They also beheaded 22 French corpses, but desisted from that horrible work upon protest from the British consul. The Chinese loss is two hundred killed and wounded. Fighting lasted 5 hours, at the end of which time the French retired to their ships.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 13.—The great political trial just finished as conducted privately. All officers of the army implicated are sentenced to death; six other persons are sentenced to Siberia.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 13.—The Turkish mail caravan from Bagdad was attacked by brigands near Ismid yesterday. Three of the escorts were killed and $3,000,000 in government bullion stolen. The Sultan sent troops in pursuit.

CAIRO, Oct. 13.—The Mudir of Dongola has ordered the mounted irregulars to prepare to march to the front on Thursday. The infantry will protect the city in the event of El Mahdi's forces attacking. The troops are reluctant to advance, fearing they will have to encounter serious fighting. They also appear disaffected upon the circulation of reports that the Sultan desires their services to oppose the English.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?—Scrofula is so called from the Latin scrofa, a pig, from the supposition that the disease came from eating swine's flesh. It is often inherited from parents, and leads to abscesses, ulcerous sores, debility, king's evil and consumption. The case of the Rev. Wm. Stout, of Wiarton, who suffered 23 years from scrofulous abscesses, is one of the most remarkable on record, Burdock Blood Bitters cured him after the best medical skill had failed.

The Chinese a Subject Race.

The Chinese are a composite nation. The Chinese proper form the basis of population in the eighteen provinces. The Tartars are the ruling race. They have held the imperial *power for something over two hun*dred years. Tartar garrisons are distributed throughout the empire to keep the great cities in order and also dominate the provincial armies, which are chiefly composed of Chinese. Besides these leading elements, there are the Mohammedans, who are found principally in the southern and western provinces. They are descendants of the first Arab invaders, who found their way to China about the tenth century. They have not preserved the faith of Mohammed in a high degree of perfection, and in externals of dress and manners they resemble the Chinese about them. The Mohammedans are always oppressed and usually discontented. The Chinese, although they have so long obeyed a Tartar emperor, are dissatisfied, and, as shown by their recent revolts, would willingly transfer their allegiance to rulers of their own, or even of another race, if they could do so with safety.—*S. Our Story.

A REMARKABLE STORY.

It was no more than Harry's second or third visit when she pointed him out to her mistress walking past in his summer-morning suit, which the long evenings permitted a young man to retain while daylight lasted and he could be about. Harry was very carefully got up; he wore light clothes, and ties of the most interesting description. He had always the stick which was in fashion, the hat of the moment: and a very pleasant sight he was, striding along in the summer evening, going where love carried him, with honest intentions and a simple heart. He was not perhaps capable of a very refined or poetical sentiment. He had at that time no doubt whatever that Hester would accept him gratefully, not so much for himself (in which point he had an instinctive humility), but for the good things he could give her. The glamour and the thousand little enchantments of love were not in him, but he was honest and true, as Hester had said. He meant this poor girl, whom most people, in Catherine's drawing-room and elsewhere, passed by without notice, though some thought her pretty—he meant her, as his wife, to be a happy and much-honored woman. And what was more, he meant to be good to his mother-in-law. He might have been a romantic paladin, or a man of genius and not have been so excellent, so worthy of all admiration as that. It never occurred to Harry to go another way, to conceal what he was about from prying eyes. He was not ashamed of what he was about. All the world might watch his steps so far as he cared, and it must have required a distinct effort on the part of any honest heart not to like the sight of him as he went a-wooing and wish him a happy ending. Perhaps it would be too much to say that Catherine made that effort, but she was not favorable to Harry as to his cousin who was under her own roof.

It is scarcely possible for any eyes but those of a parent (and even the eyes of a parent are not always impartial) to look upon two young candidates for favor with exactly the same sentiments. If it is too much to say that one will be loved and the other hated, at least the balance will be unequal. Edward had found means from the beginning to please his patroness and relative. He had been—is not this the grand reason?—so good: he had been ready at her service when she wanted him, he had stayed at home, he had been son and daughter to the lonely woman. All that she knew of him was excellent, and she had no reason to imagine there was anything to know which was not equally good.

Catherine was one of the people who say that they do not look for gratitude. If Edward had not appreciated the kindness which picked him up as it were from the roadside, she would but have laughed, she would not have shown either surprise or pain, but the fact that he did feel her kindness, and devote himself to her, touched her deeply. She was as well off as if he had been her son—far better off than many mothers with sons. But Harry was very different. For a long time she had made up her mind that Harry was her great failure. He and his sister had never attempted to attach themselves to Catherine. They had considered their elevation to the White House and the honors of the bank as owing to their own merits, and had set up a sort of heir-apparent establishment always in opposition. With the natural instinct of a woman she had concluded it all to be Ellen's fault; but Harry had not the good sense to separate himself from his sister, or even to imply that he did not support her in her proceeding; far from that, he stood by her with the utmost loyalty. Though he never was anything but deferential and respectful in his dull way to his benefactress, he never would allow it to be supposed that he did not approve of his sister and back her up. If Catherine saw the merit of this faithfulness it was in a grudging way; and, as a matter of fact, she did not like Harry. There was nothing in reality to find fault with him. He was very steady at his business, notwithstanding the rival claims of cricket in summer and foot-ball in winter. And when he was asked to dinner at the Grange, he was as punctual as clock-work, with an expanse of shirt-front that would have been a credit to any man. But he did not please Catherine. He had given her a reproof which stung, on that occasion when he "took down" Mrs. John, without waiting to know what person of importance should have gone before. Nothing that could have been said would have stung Catherine so much as that good-natured act, and it was all the more hard upon her that in her heart (always a good and generous one) she approved Harry. It was a reproach to her, and still more, it was a reproach to Edward, who had never taken the slightest notice of Mrs. John's presence, but left her among the neglected ones. Catherine had been doubly angry with Harry ever since that evening. She would not allow even that he was a handsome fellow.

"He is big enough," she would say, resenting the fact that he was a head taller than Edward, and twice as strong. "He is a fine animal, if you like, but I don't see how a man with white eyelashes can be considered handsome."

Edward did not oppose his aunt in this any more than in other things. "I allow," he would say, "that he is not clever." But he shook his head, as one who would deprecate a too true accusation when Miss Vernon held Harry up to ridicule. "No, he is not clever; he will never set the Thames on fire," Edward said.

Miss Vernon saw Harry pass the third time he went to the Vernonry, and afterward she looked for him regularly. "Who was it for?" she asked, with an ardent feminine appreciation of the only motive which could induce a man to hurry over his dinner and get to the Vernonry in time for the humble community's tea. This was a question not very hard to answer, seeing that the next moment she added to herself, "Who else could it be?" It could not be Matilda, or Martha, who were neither young nor fair. It was very unlikely to be Mrs. Reginald, though she was young enough, and not without beauty. "But Harry is not the man to burden himself with a lot of children," said Catherine, with an unnecessary scoff at the poor fellow who was not her favorite. Thus there was only one person whom it could be. It gave her a sort of pang of amusement when she concluded upon this—Hester! that proud, troublesome creature—she who would never give in, who put on the airs of a princess in the Grange drawing-room and declined to go to supper—she with the spirit of a revolutionary and the temper of a—demon—(no, no, this was perhaps too bad—the temper of a—Vernon, Catherine said to herself with a laugh)—she to fall to the lot of Harry! This was so strangely funny, so paradoxical, so out of character, that it amused Catherine altogether beyond description, yet gave her a strange blow. What a ridiculous combination! If the world had been ransacked for two who ought not to come together, these two would be that pair. What would they do with each other? how could they ever pull together—the one all eagerness and vigor, the other stolid and heavy?

Catherine was almost tempted to be sorry for the girl, but the next moment she laughed again. Oh, it was easy to understand; Mrs. John must have managed it all. She would see in it a way of recovering all her lost glories, of getting back her footing in that ridiculous White House, which had been adapted to her silly taste from the beginning. Oh no doubt it was her doing! She would talk the girl over; she would persuade her into it, "with a host of petty maxims preaching down a daughter's heart." And it was with a gleam of vindictive amusement that Catherine assured herself that Mrs. John would find herself mistaken. After she had made the marriage she would be left in the lurch. Harry was not a man to put up with a mother-in-law. Thus Catherine Vernon, though she was a clever woman, misconceived and misunderstood them all.

But yet it did give her a natural pang. That girl, who compelled her attention somehow, though she had no favor for her—who inspired her with a certain respect, notwithstanding the consistent opposition to herself which Hester had always shown—to think of that ambitious creature, all fire and life being quenched in the dullness of Harry, put out in the heavy tranquillity of his athletic existence—to score at cricket matches and spend long, wearisome days out in the sun, watching for the runs he got? But then she would be well off, would have the White House and all sort of good things. Oh, no occasion to be sorry for her. She would get her compensation. And then Catherine thought, with a jealous displeasure which she felt angry with herself for entertaining, of the arrangements which Harry's marriage would make necessary. Up to this time he had more or less held his position at her pleasure, but she had no reason, she was aware, to refuse to satisfy all her engagements and make him actually independent, as he had been virtually for a long time back. She would not have the slightest excuse for doing it. Everything had gone on perfectly well. There were no complaints of him at the bank. The business flourished and made progress. But the thought that Hester would be thus immediately placed on a sort of equality with herself, and Mrs. John reinstated, vexed her. It was a mean sentiment, but she could not help it. It vexed her in spite of herself.

The news had been, it is scarcely necessary to say, communicated to Edward at a very early stage. Miss Vernon had called him to her, after dinner, as soon as he came up-stairs to the drawing-room, to the window from which the road was visible winding along the side of the Common to the Vernonry.

"Do you see that?" she said, pointing his cousin out.

What? He saw the Common lying in all its sweetness, its roughness and undulations standing out in the level sunset rays, every bush casting a shadow. He was young, and he had at least a scientific love of nature, and longed to be out poking into those beds of herbage, feeling the fresh air on his face; and it was with a secret grudge in his heart that he realized the difference between the light, strong figure moving along buoyant with life and liberty, and he himself in his evening clothes in his aunt's drawing-room, seeing it all from within four walls.

"What!" he said, thinking that he would rather not see the fair out door evening world since he could have no share in it. "Why—is it Harry?" and when he felt that he hated the fellow who was his own master.

"He is going a-wooing," Miss Vernon said.

She was sitting in her favorite place which commanded this prospect, the Common, the Vernonry, the tall pines, and the red bars of the sunset behind. The sunset was her favorite entertainment, and in summer she always sat here. Edward stood behind, looking over her head. She did not see the grimace with which he heard these words. And he did not reply for some time. It gave him a shock more sharp even than that which Catherine herself had felt at first, though to be sure there was no reason why.

"Ah!" he said, indifferently, "who can he find to woo around here?" But he knew very well in his heart what the answer would be.

"Only one person so far as I can make out. It must be that girl of Mrs. John's. I suppose she is what you call pretty, though she has never been a favorite of mine.

"But you can't confine prettiness to your favorites, Aunt Catherine," said Edward, with a sharp smile which he had sometimes.

"No, that's true. I deserved that you should hit that blot. She is pretty, I know. Poor Harry, he will have his hands full, what with the mild mother and the wild daughter. I wonder at the girl, though. She is an ambitious, energetic thing, and poor, dear Harry will never set the Thames on fire, as you say."

"Did I say it? No, I don't think he will; but he has solid qualities."

"Very solid—the White House and his share in the bank. Oh, there will be an equivalent! And to think that little schemer, that soft little woman that looks as if she could not harm a fly, should have managed to secure herself in this cunning way and get her daughter back to the point she started from! Who would have thought it? There is nothing so astute as simplicity."

Edward made no reply; and this was a thing Miss Vernon did not like. She required a response. Silence felt like disapproval, and as there was a strong, silent protest in her heart against everything that was mean or petty in what she said, she was apt to resent this want of acquiescence all the more. She looked back at him when he did not expect it, and was startled to see a look she had never seen before—a look that astonished her—on his face. It was something like a snarl of contempt and despite, but it disappeared in a moment, and she could not believe her eyes.
