Coal Harbor Extension.

The following official correspondence relating to the railway extension from Port Moody to Coal Harbor was laid before the provincial legislature on Monday. It is of sufficient interest to justify its publication in extenso:

Letter From Smithe to Van Horne.

DEAR SIR.—You are aware that the Dominion government relinquish all claim to that portion of the railway reserve in this province lying to the west of Port Moody; and you will doubtless recollect that when I saw you in Montreal, you exacted a promise from me that the provincial government would refrain from dealing with these lands until your arrival here, which was to have been within a month from that date. As more than a month has elapsed, and I am led to understand the time of your coming is still uncertain, I now write for the purpose of impressing upon your mind the great inconvenience of keeping these lands longer locked up. I have now, therefore, to request that you will hasten your visit or hold me released from my promise to await your coming. I beg you will, on receipt of this, wire me what you purpose doing in the matter. Yours faithfully, WM. SMITHE.

Victoria, 23rd May, 1884.

Telegram from Van Horne to Smithe.

Been waiting return of president. Expect start end of next week. Will not lose minute time. Very important province as well as company matter be open till my arrival. W. C. VAN HORNE.

Montreal, June 4th.

Telegram from Van Horne to Smithe.

My trip unavoidably postponed. Have written fully covering proposition regarding Pacific terminus. VAN HORNE.

Montreal, June 14th.

Letter from Van Horne to Smithe.

DEAR SIR.—I am again unexpectedly prevented from starting for British Columbia; and as the date of my leaving is uncertain, I write to say that this company will undertake to make its Pacific terminus on Coal Harbor and English Bay, if the reserved lands referred to in your letter of May 23rd as having been relinquished by the Dominion government may be secured to this company, and if we are able to make reasonable arrangements with private holders of lands in that vicinity. From communications already received, I have no doubt that the necessary arrangements may be made with the private holders, and if your reply as to the reserved lands is favorable we will commence negotiations with them at once. I shall be glad if you will wire me with regard to these reserved lands as soon as possible. Yours truly, W. C. VAN HORNE.

Montreal, June 14th.

Telegram from Smithe to Van Horne.

Your letter received. Proposition too vague and sweeping. Define land required from government. Your presence here essential to successful negotiations. WM. SMITHE.

Victoria, June 25th.

After a number of unimportant telegrams relating to the time of Van Horne's visit, comes the following letter from Van Horne to Smithe:

SIR.—The directors of this company have had under careful consideration the question of the location of the Pacific terminus of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and they have authorized me to communicate to you their views, as follows: Inasmuch as a comprehensive plan for a terminus, providing reasonably tor the future as well as for the present, will involve a large immediate outlay of money, and as the present available resources of the company are required for the completion of their undertaking with the government, they do not see their way clear to the extension of their line of railway beyond Port Moody, and the provision of the necessary docks and other facilities at a new point, unless they can acquire sufficient property so situated as to be made immediately saleable for a sufficient amount to recoup the outlay mentioned. They feel that as the lands west of Port Moody, recently relinquished by the Dominion government, were originally intended and set apart to aid in the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway to English Bay, and as the lands would have been so applied had the Dominion government fixed upon English Bay instead of Port Moody as the western terminus, all of these lands should in fairness be granted to the company in the event of their taking up the work where the Dominion government has left it and continuing the line to English Bay. But our directors wish to meet your government in a liberal spirit, and to ask for no more than they believe to be necessay to cover their outlay within the near future in making their terminus all that it should be in the interest of the country. Owing to the great depth of water along the shores of Burrard Inlet, and the impracticability of the use of timber in permanent piers and docks, the docks must necessarily be made along shore, and a water frontage of very considerable extent will be required. The greater part of the available water frontage is in the hands of private parties, and it is doubted if any material amount can be obtained at anything like a reasonable price. On the enclosed plan you will find indicated in green tint so much of the lands belonging to your government as our directors deem necessary for their purposes. It may be said that these lands so indicated are the most immediately available; but it should be remembered that it is the company alone that has to meet an immediate outlay. The directors, while believing that in the event of an extension of their line the terminal city will be built on the land fronting on English Bay, attach great importance to the "Granville" tract, where must be located their first docks, their shops, terminal yards, etc.; and, while desiring in every way to meet the views of your government, they are unable to see how they can carry out anything like an adequate plan without the whole of this particular tract—in fact they deem it essential. I may say, for your information, that the shops and yards of the company in Winnipeg occupy about 240 acres, and more ground at that point has already become necessary. In consideration of the lands, as indicated on the plan enclosed herewith, the company proposes to extend the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway to Coal Harbor and English Bay by the time the through line is ready for operation, and to establish the terminus of the railway in the immediate vicinity of Coal Harbor and English Bay, and commence the construction of the necessary workshops and other works in time to provide the necessary facilities for the opening of traffic on the through line, that is to say by the early summer of 1886. The company further proposes to construct a branch, from some convenient point on the main line, to the town of New Westminster during the year 1886, on the condition that the town of New Westminster shall contribute seventy-five thousand dollars in cash in aid thereof, and furnish the necessary right of way and depot grounds. It will be necessary that the lands be grandted to trustees, to be appointed by the company, in order that they may be free from any lien attaching to the Canadian Pacific Railway. I have, &c., W. C. VAN HORNE.

Montreal, Sept. 9th.

Letter from Van Horne to Smithe.

DEAR SIR.—I am told that a strong pressure is being brought to bear to secure the extension of the timber limits on the government property in the vicinity of Coal Harbor and English Bay for a long term of years, and I am also led to believe that it is the object of the parties in securing such an extension to acquire rights that will have to be bought out; and I trust that this may be guarded against. In view of the probable rapid growth of the town when finally located and put upon the market, and the certainty that manufacturing concerns of more or less importance will spring up all about it, and of the importance of being able to secure the location of such concerns where they will contribute best to the growth of the town, although they may not be directly upon the townsite, it is very important that as much as possible of the property be immediatly available for sale or lease. Believe me, etc., W. C. VAN HORNE.

Montreal, Sept. 23rd.

Telegram from Smithe to Van Horne,

Proposition received. Government adhere to terms arranged with you, and cannot exceed them. Particulars by mail. WM. SMITHE.

Victoria, Sept 25th.

Telegram from Van Horne to Smithe.

You misunderstood me if you supposed I had assented to your last proposition at Victoria. I stated at time that I feared Granville reservation would be fatal, but promised make proposition coming as near possible meeting your view. W. C. VAN HORNE.

Montreal, Sept 26th.

Telegram from Smithe to Van Horne.

Government cannot increase area of grant, but are willing concede portion at Granville provided you relinquish your share in Hastings. Delay embarrassing. Immediate conclusion essential. WM. SMITHE.

Victoria, Sept. 29th.

Telegram from Van Horne to Smithe.

Will recommend your proposed modification to board directors, and have no doubt they will assent, but cannot give their definite answer until meeting next Tuesday. W. C. VAN HORNE.

Montreal, Oct. 1st.

Telegram from Smithe to Van Horne.

With that part of your proposition which relates to New Westminster we have nothing to do, but would strongly recommend you to immediately open negotiations with mayor and council of that city. WM. SMITHE.

Victoria, Oct. 6th.

Letter from Smithe to Van Horne.

SIR.—Referring to your letter, dated 9th and posted on the 16th ultimo, in which you ask for a tract of land on Coal Harbor and English Bay, embracing an aggregate of about 11,000 acres, and including the whole of Granville townsite and the north half of Hastings, in consideration of which you say the company "proposes to extend the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway to Coal Harbor and English Bay by the time the through line is ready for operation, and to establish the terminus of the railway in the immediate vicinity of Coal Harbor and English Bay, and commence the construction of the necessary workshops and other works in time to provide the necessary facilities for the opening of traffic on the through line by the early summer of 1886," I have the honor to inform you that the government fully appreciate the advantage of having the main line of railway extended to Coal Harbor and English Bay, and are disposed to render the company such aid as a fair consideration of the interests of the province will justify, in order to make the Canada Pacific Railway, upon which so much of the future welfare of the country depends, a complete success. They do not, however, consider that they can grant so large an area of land for terminal purposes as you desire, nor do they feel that they can add to the area verbally discussed at the time of your visit to Victoria. With a view, however, to facilitate an immediate arrangement, the government would be willing to give the land indicated in red tint on the enclosed plan, less a sufficient area for government offices, schools, etc., to be selected to the extent of say, five acres, half in Granville and half on the south side of False Creek, within half a mile of the shore. The small Indian reserve on False Creek, which you include in your plan, is held in trust by the Dominion government, to whom you must apply if you desire to obtain it. The government reserve on the point of the peninsula, near the entrance to the harbor, is also in the hands of the Dominion government. You will observe that the land now proposed to be given to your company includes all the government land at Granville, except, as I have already said, a small area for offices, etc. On the other hand, the whole of Hastings, a portion of which it was proposed to grant to your company, is retained. Although the area at Hastings now retained exceeds that proposed to be given in exchange at Granville, the value of the two parcels may be taken as very nearly equal. In order that the vexed question of the Pacific terminus may be finally settled and public confidence established, I have to request that immediate steps may be taken for making the decision of the company authoritatively known, and that the boundaries of the land hereby granted be properly defined upon the ground. With this in view, the survey of the line should be undertaken at once and a definite time appointed for the commencement of construction and of necessary terminal buildings. The grant of land will of course be conditional upon the terms of the agreement being carried out, and time will be considered as of the essence of the contract. It was explained to you when you were here that the government had agreed to extend the lease of the Hastings Sawmill Company for a period of five years, on condition of their giving up immediately a strip along the shore line of False Creek and English Bay, *extending back a mile and em*bracing an area of some 4,000 acres. The government have since agreed to grant a

The British Columbian.

Saturday Morning, Jan. 17, 1885.

The Final Act.

It must occur to every person acquainted with the facts that the declaration of the supreme court of Canada in the Canada Temperance Act is in keeping with the whole history of that most unfortunate act. From beginning to end it has been a delusion and a snare. It had its origin in party spite, and has ended in party embarrassment. Not only has it accomplished no good purpose whatever, but it has done a positive injury to the country. The Canada Temperance Act is possessed of many merits as an act, and for this reason we regret that it did not become law. We are afraid it may be a long time before so good a temperance act may be looked for from our own legislature. The rights of our province must be guarded, however. If these rights were surrendered in respect to the license laws, they might be surrendered in respect to all laws, and this province would come to be governed in all respects by the federal acts The temperance sentiment of British Columbia is undoubtedly growing, and we earnestly hope the legislature will at least keep up with the demands of public opinion. The laws of British Columbia are thirty years behind those of any other province of the Dominion as far as they relate to the regulation of the liquor traffic. This ought not to be, and we should be glad to see a bill somewhat similar to the Canada Temperance Act adopted at the present session of the legislature.

Coal Harbor Extension.

We publish to-day the full text (omitting a few unimportant telegrams) of the official correspondence relating to the C. P. R. extension from Port Moody to Coal Harbor. From this correspondence it will be seen that an agreement has been entered into and signed by which the railway syndicate pledges itself to extend the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway to Coal Harbor and English Bay by the time the through road is ready for traffic. The syndicate also binds itself to establish the terminus in the immediate vicinity of English Bay and Coal Harbor, and to have the necessary terminal works constructed early in 1886. It is stated by Mr. Van Horne that arrangements have been made with the Dominion government to have the engine-house and other terminal buildings erected at Coal Harbor instead of Port Moody, as was at first contemplated. This official correspondence sets at rest absolutely all doubts which might have lingered in any minds respecting the ultimate terminus of the C. P. R. It will have the effect of confirming public confidence and stimulating enterprise. We see every prospect of a very rapid development about Coal Harbor and English Bay during the present season, and the money expended in railway works and private schemes is certain to be large. The correspondence also shows how unfounded were the insinuations and charges made by certain persons and their organ in this city respecting the proposed branch line. The agreement is not contingent upon the adoption of any particular route, and does not affect the branch road to this city, and the insinuations of Senator McInnes at the railway meeting, and the open charges of the Guardian, are shown to be equally groundless. It will be seen also that the proposal to extend the railway came from the syndicate and not from the government. The syndicate evidently expected to receive the whole of the public lands contained in the railway belt, but out of over 20,000 acres the government yielded only about 6,000. The course pursued by the provincial government in this matter seems to us to have been clearly in the interest of the province—securing the greatest good to the greatest number.

The Speech.

It cannot be said that there is nothing in the speech with which his honor opened the legislature on Monday. It has a great deal in it, and contains as many words, perhaps, as any speech from the throne ever delivered in Canada. It would not be true to say, even, that this speech contains nothing but words. It contains many things of very great interest to the country. In the first place the house is congratulated upon the prosperity of the country, and upon the hopeful prospect which presents itself. In certain sections of the province there have been dull times experienced, especially during the latter part of the season; but this province has suffered less from business depression and enjoyed a more solid prosperity than any other province in the Dominion. The completion of the C. P. R., which is noticed in the speech, is an event very near at hand, and one which cannot be viewed with indifference. For years we have been waiting with most eager expectation for the completion of this road, and there seems to be every reason for believing that it will be an accomplished fact before the close of 1885. As a result of the settlement bill work on the island railway is also being carried on with vigor. The first section has been for some time under contract, and tenders for another 20 miles are now asked for. The island railway scheme is the only part of the settlement bill against which any objection can be taken. In some respects it is unfortunate that so large an area of lands supposed to be valuable in coal should come under the control of one firm. On the other hand, it appeared quite evident that nothing less than this railway would satisfy the people of Victoria, and the bargain made for its construction by the present government is confessedly a great deal better for the province than that proposed by the leaders of the present opposition. The reference made in the speech to the dry dock is most satisfactory. A contract for its completion has been let by the federal government, and work is already proceeding. Attention is called to the inadequacy of the dock to accommodate large vessels, and the government has suggested that the specifications should be altered so as to make it large enough for any ship. The suggestion is important, and in the interest of the country, but we doubt very much if it will be adopted. After touching upon the eastern boundary and Indian affairs, the speech comes to the never-sufficiently-to-be-deplored condition of the Chinese question. It is hinted that the restriction acts passed last session and disallowed at Ottawa may be re-enacted. We hope they will, and that our representatives in the federal parliament will unite clamorously for the restriction of this great, crushing evil. A large paragraph of the speech is devoted to the Coal Harbor extension, and the negotiations which took place between the government and syndicate respecting that matter. On the first page we publish the official correspondence between Hon. Mr. Smithe and Mr. Van Horne, from which our readers will learn the full history of this transaction. Application has been made for an adjustment of the boundary between British Columbia and Alaska. It is claimed that a valuable strip of land, embracing millions of acres, and now claimed by the United States, belongs by right to this province. As there are some rich mineral lands in that region, it may come to be of great value to British Columbia. The speech makes reference also to the development of the mineral lands in the Kootenay district, the exploration of Queen Charlotte Islands, the increased production of coal and lumber, and contains the most gratifying announcement that the revenue for the past year has been in excess of the estimates, and shows a very healthy increase. For some years the financial affairs of this province have presented anything but a hopeful aspect, and it is certainly matter for congratulation that there has been a change for the better. This change is undoubtedly due in the first place to the general prosperity and development which has been experienced during the past three years. The resources of the country have been made revenue producing, and the population has been materially increased. It is due partly also to the policy of the government in relieving the country of unnecessary burdens such as the dry-dock and readjusting the assessment. While cordially approving the government's general policy as one which looks to the prosperity and growth of the province, we do not pretend for a moment that the circumstances under which the present government has held office have not been most favorable for financial success. To these circumstances belongs mainly the credit of the gratifying balance sheet indicated by the speech, but the government is likewise entitled to credit for its management of the provincial finances. There are very few measures of importance foreshadowed in the speech. It is unfortunately the custom now-a-days in Canada for a government not to show its hand in the speech from the throne. In similar documents emanating from the federal government it is usual to omit all notice of some of the most important measures, and to mention a number of measures which are never laid before the house. The custom seems to us objectionable, and we are sorry it should be followed by the government of British Columbia. There is a good deal of work before the house for this session, and it is to be hoped party and personal issues may not be allowed to interfere with measures looking to the general welfare of the country.

Having been afflicted all my life with Scrofula, my system seemed saturated with it. It came out in Blotches, Ulcers, and Mattery Sores, all over my body." Matters in the provincial legislature seem to be going on most smoothly. Mr. Galbraith is pro tem. leader of the opposition. The address in reply to the governor's speech was passed with very little discussion, and only one negative vote.

The Guardian is quite mistaken when it asserts that THE COLUMBIAN received an advance copy of the lieutenant-governor's speech on Sunday. The speech was wholly telegraphed to this journal and paid for at regular press rates, as may be easily ascertained on application at the telegraph office.

On Thursday we received a letter from Maple Ridge touching the approaching municipal election in that municipality. The letter was evidently written before nomination day, and as it could not be made public until after election, our correspondent will understand why it has not been published.

Recent researches show that electioneering was carried on in ancient Pompeii very much as at the present day. Inscriptions have been found informing the public that "a vote for Lentulus is a vote for honest government," and asking all patriotic citizens to vote for "Balbus, the True Friend of the People."

VICTORIA COUNCIL.—After a vigorous contest the people of Victoria have succeeded in electing a city council composed principally of substantial citizens, as follows: Mayor, R. P. Rithet; councillors, Yates-st Ward, Thos. Earle, Jno. Braden, John Grant; Johnston-st. Ward, W. A. Robertson, Jno. Teague, Orlando Warner; James Bay Ward, Robt. Ward, W. D. McKillican, A. J. Smith.

RICHMOND COUNCIL.—The reeve and council for the North Arm were elected by acclamation, Mr. Thos. Kidd having generously withdrawn his nomination papers for reeve in favor of Mr. Boyd. VICK'S GUIDE.—Vick's Floral Guide for 1885 is a superb pamphlet of 120 pages, printed on tinted paper and beautifully illustrated. We need not say that it contains a price-list of seeds, roots and bulbs embracing almost every flower and vegetable known to agriculturists, horticulturists and floriculturists on this continent. Vick's establishment, situated at Rochester, N.Y., is one of the largest in the world, and his seeds have a most excellent reputation.

CHORAL UNION.—The concert given by the Choral Union last Wednesday night was one of the best and most successful ever given by that society. The "Sleeping Beauty" was rendered very effectively, and in the second part, which consisted of miscellaneous vocal and instrumental selections, there were several numbers of more than ordinary merit. There was a good audience which evinced its satisfaction by repeated encores and hearty applause. It will be seen by advertisement that the next concert is to be given on the 28th inst., and we believe the programme will not be less attractive than that of last Wednesday.

IMMIGRATION PROSPECTS.—In conversation with Mr. J. H. McTavish, Canadian Pacific Land Commissioner, recently, a question was asked in reference to the prospects for immigration next year. Mr. McTavish stated that from all he could learn, and judging by the inquiries about the country, and his general correspondence with the people interested, there was little doubt that a large immigration to this country next year would take place. The effect of the excellent advertising the country had got was beginning to show itself by inquiries about lands, etc. He referred to a letter from Mr. Begg, the company's emigration agent in London, in which it stated that great good was being done, and had been done, by the members of the British Association, who visited Canada as well as the northwest last fall. No less than six of them had turned free lecturers on the country. A very large number of articles particularly favorable to the northwest had been published, and there was little doubt that thousands would be induced to emigrate from this country as a result.—Winnipeg Sun.

A BAD LOT!—The Home Guardian, a paper published at Olympia in the interest of the Good Templars of Washington Territory and British Columbia, delivers itself of the following remarkable declaration: "No better evidence of the success of Bro. Bateman's tour of lectures through British Columbia could be desired than the marked hostility shown him and his work by the several papers of New Westminster, all of which are in the employ, and doing the dirty work of, the whiskey men of our neighboring province. The malicious utterings of these drinking hirelings is more in keeping with the custom of savages than of cultivated men. Let them rage." In another part of the paper we find the resolutions passed respecting Rev. Mr. Bateman's work by the Good Templars of this city (which lately appeared in THE COLUMBIAN), introduced by this paragraph: "How different in tone and sentiment are the utterances of honest temperance workers from the ravings of the whiskey-paid papers published in that pleasant little city!" We would advise the Home Guardian to inform itself better respecting its facts before again venturing upon a criticism of matters beyond the region of its knowledge. The attitude of THE COLUMBIAN towards Rev. Mr. Bateman or the temperance cause certainly needs no defence before the people of British Columbia.

PRESENTATION.—The people of New Westminster are warm friends of Capt. Cyrus Orr, master of the steamer Idaho. The Canadian company operating between Victoria and Fraser river show ill-feeling towards New Westminster. They have exhibited this for a month past by assuming that the river was frozen so as to prevent its navigation, and have made no effort to establish the truth or falsity of their assumption. On the contrary they have deliberately run their boats past the river into Burrard Inlet and up to Port Moody, putting the New Westminster people to needless expense and annoyance. The people have protested, the papers have denounced, but all to no purpose. The Idaho runs to New Westminster from the Sound. She makes weekly trips, and has so far made every one of them without fail. She has found ice in the river, but not enough to seriously impede navigation. The contrast between her regular coming, with small inducement at that, and the neglect of the mail steamers of the Canadian company, was startling, and not at all complimentary to the latter. The people felt that something should be said and done about it to express their feelings. Accordingly they went to work to give Capt. Orr a tangible expression of their appreciation. A handsome silver water pitcher and silver tray were bought, the legend following being engraved upon the pitcher: * * * This was formally presented by the Mayor in the presence of the council and a large number of citizens. An address of the most complimentary character accompanied the articles, to which a modest, proper reply was made by Capt. Orr. The boat and its captain were heartily cheered as they left the city.—Seattle Post. The above item is correct except in one or two particulars. We do not think the C. P. N. Co. has any ill-feeling towards this city. It was more convenient for its steamers to go to Burrard Inlet than to this city while the river was closed at Port Hammond, and that, we believe, was the only reason why the steamer did not come here. The Idaho has not made a trip every week. She missed two trips, when the river was really closed to steamers of her class on account of ice.

Considerable preparations had been made for the holding of the Xmas tree on Christmas eve under the auspices of the Sabbath School, but, owing to the state of the river, it was found impossible to carry out the programme as originally intended. The funds collected for the purpose of purchasing presents for the teachers, supplying refreshments, &c., were ample. Many thanks are due particularly to the bachelors for their liberality, and to several of them for their untiring exertions, assisting the committee in gathering funds, procuring the tree, and otherwise lending an assisting hand. On Christmas eve, not knowing when the entertainment would be held, the young ladies spared no pains in waiting upon as many of the children as possible and gave them the presents provided. It might be here stated that the intention was that the affair should be for all who chose to take part in it, and that parents would have the opportunity of supplying their children with gifts for the occasion; but on account of the uncertainty of the entertainment being held many of these were distributed and consequently never reached the tree. The entertainment, however, took place on New Year's eve. The crossing was good, and a goodly number were in attendance. The programme consisted of music by the choir, well rendered; readings by Miss Harding, W. Vermilyea and O. D. Sweet, recitations by Miss McTaggart and J. B. Elliott, and a song each by Mr. W. G. McMyn and Mr. J. B. Elliott, both of which were loudly applauded. The presents were all that could be desired. The selections were well made. All passed off very pleasantly. Santa Claus was unavoidably absent. The bachelors were supplied with cushions, work aprons, &c. They will no doubt enjoy their single blessedness as best they can until such time as "fortune favors the brave."

After refreshments, Miss Harding read the following address:

DEAR TEACHERS.—We do not wish to allow this joyous occasion to pass without availing ourselves of this opportunity of presenting you with some slight token of our appreciation of your services in advancing the interests of the Sabbath school in this place during the past year. To Mr. Sweet, our faithful and efficient superintendent, we present this writing desk and pen, as an expression of our gratitude for your untiring and disinterested efforts for the success of the Sunday school, your helpful and practical explanations of the lessons, and your unselfish and faithful services as leader of the prayer meeting, and pray that you may be spared to use them through many happy New Years of useful life. To Mr. Vermilyea, as teacher of the Bible class, and faithful and earnest expounder of the word of God from Sabbath to Sabbath, we beg to present this staff, expressing our most earnest desire, and feeling confident that, through that grace which has so long sustained you, you will be enabled by and by to say with the Psalmist, "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me, Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me." To Mrs. Vermilyea, who has so kindly come forward and taken the place of him who has gone to his reward in the heavenly land, the members of her class take pleasure in presenting this Bible, hoping she may long be spared to enjoy in this life the fulfillment of the precious promises therein contained and finally reap the reward of the faithful. To Miss McDowell, who has so materially added to the interest of the school in presiding at the organ, we present this album; and to Miss McTaggart, to whose untiring exertions are largely due the organization of the school and the purchase of the organ and library, we present this writing desk and work box.

CLINTON, Jan. 4.—The Clinton library association's annual ball came off on the 31st Dec. and Jan. 1st, at the court house. Although the weather had been unusually severe, marring the prospects of a large gathering, there was a very good attendance of the beauty and chivalry of the interior. There were some present who travelled many miles. The popularity of the Clinton ball is an established fact. The managing committee spared no pains to make the affair a success. The music was this year particularly excellent. Mrs. Bell on the organ, Messrs. J. Foster and W. W. Brown on the violins, and Mr. Brown of Cariboo on the cornet, furnished an orchestra which gave great satisfaction to the votaries of Terpsichore. All enjoyed themselves exceedingly well. The weather has been intensely cold during the last three weeks of December, the thermometer at times being as low as 39° below zero. There were only four inches of snow. At New Years the weather moderated, and now we have a prospect of good sleighing. A social and literary entertainment will be held on the 22nd for the purpose of raising funds to pay the debt on the parsonage.

To St. Paul by Two Routes.

As far as time and distance are concerned it will be about the same thing to the people of Seattle to go to St. Paul by the Canadian Pacific road as to go by the Northern Pacific, and possibly will be a little to their advantage. The distances by the two routes are as follows:

NORTHERN PACIFIC.

	MILES.
Seattle to Portland	170
Portland to St. Paul	1912
Total	2082

CANADIAN PACIFIC.

	MILES.
Seattle to Victoria	75
Victoria to Port Moody	90
Port Moody to Wininpeg	1468
Winnepeg to Emerson	66
Emerson to St. Paul	359
Total	2058

By the Canadian Pacific route the distance necessary to travel is twenty-four miles less than by the Northern Pacific. This distance can be increased twenty miles in favor of the Canadian Pacific by taking boats direct to Port Moody or Port Hammond, on Fraser river, which will probably be done within a twelvemonth, making the Canadian Pacific forty-four miles the shorter of the two. These distances will be further shortened by the building of the Cascade Division of the Northern Pacific, and by a line from the Canadian Pacific to Seattle—one of the certainties of the next five years. It will then be, by either route, about 1,080 miles between St. Paul and Seattle.—Seattle Post.

Coal Harbor Extension.

further extension on condition, among others, that, in addition to giving up a mile belt at once, the company shall give up a thousand acres more annually. This arrangement is considered to be in the interest of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, as well as in that of the province. Without the extension, upon the conditions named, the mill company, under their lease, which has over two years to run, would be in a position to refuse to allow any sales to be made of lands on False Creek and English Bay. Sales of course could be made of lands there, subject to the lease, but the company for two years could refuse possession, and few sales could be made if possession could not be had. It may reasonably be expected that during the two years considerable development will take place, and to have valuable property locked up in the immediate vicinity of the terminus could not but be productive of injury in retarding the building up of a terminal town. The right acquired under the arrangement to deal at once with all the land which will really be required in the near future is therefore thought to be an important advantage to the company, and the extension of the limits to be opened to sale every year will be all the interests of parties concerned will demand. Major Rogers will be able to locate the line within two weeks after he reaches the ground, which, I trust, will not be many days after you receive this letter. I have arranged with the Department of Railways to discontinue their proposed work on an engine-house and other terminal buildings at Port Moody, in view of our intention to erect them in the vicinity of Coal Harbor and English Bay. There is nothing now to prevent active operations in that direction, and we will take all necessary steps without delay. I am glad to be able to inform you that the progress of our work justifies me in saying that our line will be connected through some time during the month of August next. I am, &c.,

Letter from Drinkwater to Smithe.

SIR.—I am instructed by the board of directors to transmit to you an extract, under the seal of the company, from the minutes of a meeting of the board held this day, relating to the extension of the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway to Coal Harbor and English Bay, and the establishment there of the Pacific terminus of the railway. I beg respectfully to request that you will have prepared and forwarded to me a draft of such formal agreement as you may consider necessary to meet the case. I have, etc.,

C. DRINKWATER, Sec.

[ENCLOSURE.]

Extract from the minutes of the regular weekly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, held at the office of the Company in Montreal, on Tuesday, the 25th day of November, 1884, at the hour of 12 o'clock, noon.

Present in person:—Mr. R. B. Angus, Mr. W. C. Van Horne, Hon. Donald A. Smith, Mr. John Turnbull. And by proxy:—Mr. George Stephen, Mr. P. du P. Grenfell, Mr. C. D. Rose, Mr. H. S. Northcote, Baron J. de Reinach.

Mr. C. Drinkwater, Secretary of the company, also attended.

Mr. Van Horne stated that, in pursuance of the minute of the board dated 16th September last, he had proposed to the government of British Columbia that, in consideration of the conveyance to the company of a tract of land on Coal Harbor and English Bay, aggregating about 11,000 acres, and including the Granville townsite and the north half of the tract known as the Hastings Reserve, the company proposed to extend the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway to Coal Harbor and English Bay, by the time the through line is ready for operation, and to establish the terminus of the railway in the immediate vicinity of Coal Harbor and English Bay, and commence the construction of the necessary workshops and other works in time to provide the necessary facilities for the opening of traffic on the through line by the early summer of 1886.

That by letter dated October 6th, 1884, the Hon Wm. Smithe, the Commissioner of Crown Lands of British Columbia, had replied as follows:

Referring to your letter dated 9th, and posted on the 16th ult., in which you ask for a tract of land on Coal Harbor and English Bay, embracing an aggregate of about 11,000 acres, and incuding the whole of Granville townsite and north half of Hastings, in consideration of which you say the company proposes to extend the Canadian Pacific Railway to Coal Harbor and English Bay by the time the through line is ready for occupation, and to establish the terminus in the immediate vicinity of Coal Harbor and English Bay, and commence the construction of the necessary workshops and other works in time to provide the necessary facilities for the opening of traffic on the through line by the early summer of 1886.

I have the honor to inform you that the government fully appreciate the advantage of having the main line of railway extended to Coal Harbor and English Bay, and are disposed to render to the company such aid as a fair consideration of the interests of the province will justify, in order to make the Canadian Pacific Railway, upon which so much of the future welfare of the country depends, a complete success. They do not, however, consider that they can grant so large an area of land for terminal purposes as you desire, nor do they feel that they can add to the area verbally discussed at the time of your visit to Victoria.

With a view, however, to facilitate an immediate arrangement, the government would be willing to give the land indicated in red tint on the enclosed plan, less a sufficient area for government offices, schools, etc., to the extent of, say, five acres, half in Granville and half on the south side of False Creek, within half a mile of the shore.

The small Indian reserve on False creek, which you include in your plan, is held in trust by the Dominion Government, to whom you must apply if you desire to obtain it. The government reserve on the point of the peninsula, near the entrance to the harbor, is also in the hands of the Dominion Government.

You will observe that the land now proposed to be given to your company includes all the government land at Granville, except, as I have already said, a small area for offices, etc. On the other hand, the whole of Hastings, a portion of which it was proposed to grant to your company, is retained. Although the area at Hastings now retained exceeds that proposed to be given in exchange at Granville, the value of the two parcels may be taken as very nearly equal.

In order that the vexed question of the Pacific terminus may be finally settled, and public confidence established, I have to request that immediate steps may be taken for making the decision of the company authoritatively known, and that the boundaries of the land hereby granted be properly defined upon the ground.

With this in view, the survey of the line should be undertaken at once, and a definite time appointed for the commencement of construction and of necessary terminal buildings.

The grant of land will of course be conditional upon the terms of agreement being carried out, and time will be considered as of the essence of the contract.

It was explained to you when you were here that the government had agreed to extend the lease of the Hastings Saw Mill Company for a period of five years, on condition of their giving up immediately a strip along the shore line of False Creek and English Bay, extending back a mile and embracing an area of some 4,000 acres. The government have since agreed to grant a further extension on condition, among others, that, in addition to giving up a mile belt at once, the company shall give up a thousand acres more annually.

This arrangement is considered to be in the interests of the Canadian Pacific Company as well as in that of the province. Without the extension, upon the conditions named, the mill company under their lease, which has over two years to run, would be in a position to refuse to allow any sales to be made of lands on False Creek and English Bay.

Sales of course could be made of lands there, subject to the lease, but the company for two years could refuse possession, and few sales would be made if possession could not be had. It may reasonably be expected that, during the two years, considerable development will take place, and, to have valuable property locked up in the immediate vicinity of the terminus, could not but be productive of injury in retarding the building up of a terminal town.

The right acquired under the arrangement to deal at once with all the land which will really be required in the near future is therefore thought to be an important advantage to the company, and the extension of the limits to be opened to sale every year will be all the interests of parties concerned will demand.

The plan accompanying the letter of the Hon. Commissioner of Crown Lands, and which is made a part of this minute, represents only about 6,000 acres of land to be granted to the company; but, although this amount is deemed much less than the company should receive, the directors desire to meet the Government of British Columbia in the most liberal spirit, and it is, therefore,

Resolved, That the proposition contained in the proposition of the Hon. Commissioner of Crown Lands, dated the 6th of October, 1884, be, and the same is hereby accepted and agreed to.

That, in consideration thereof, the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway be extended to Coal Harbor and English Bay by the time the through line is ready for operation.

That the terminus of the railway be established in the immediate vicinity of Coal Harbor and English Bay, and that the construction of the necessary workshops and other works be commenced in time to provide the necessary facilities for the opening of traffic on the through line by the early summer of 1886.

That a survey of the proposed extension, and of the land at Coal Harbor and English Bay proposed to be granted to the company be at once made, and that an agreemment embodying the terms of the grant, as contained in the said letter of the Hon. Commissioner of Crown Lands, be entered into and executed by the proper officers of the company.

That the Hon. Donald A. Smith and Mr. Richard B. Angus be, and they are hereby, appointed trustees to receive and hold the lands above referred to, in trust for, and on behalf of, the company.

Certified a true extract.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12—The senate spent three hours to-day in secret discussion of the Nicaraguan canal treaty. Senator Miller of California made a long and formal speech in its support, giving the history of the negotiation from the beginning, and Senator Sherman made an equally formal speech in opposition, basing his argument chiefly on the belief that the Clayton-Bulwer treaty was still in force. At the conclusion of the debate a motion was made to have the two speeches printed for the use of the senate in executive session, but was withdrawn upon the suggestion of danger that the copies might reach the press and the public.

MANKATO, Minn., Jan. 13.—Ex-Vice-President Schuyler Colfax dropped dead at 10:35 this morning at the Omaha depot. He arrived on the Milwaukee road from the east at 10 o'clock and walked to the Omaha depot, a distance of three-fourths of a mile, with the thermometer at thirty degrees below zero. After arriving at the depot he lived only about five minutes. It is supposed that the extreme cold, subsequent heat and over-exertion caused a stoppage of the flow of blood to the heart. The remains were taken in charge by the Odd Fellows, and now lie at Dr. Harrington's residence. Every attention is being paid the remains. Word has been sent to the family of deceased and the president has been notified, and orders are now awaited.

There was a severe storm last night and it is feared she has been lost. The Dublin agent of the line telegraphs that the Admiral Morrison had but a few passengers.

High Class Organs.

From the Toronto Globe.

Perhaps the most artistic building on the exhibition ground is the pavilion of the Dominion Organ and Piano Company of Bowmanville. It is moreover one of the most interesting to lovers of good music as being the location of a magnificent collection of instruments. The erection of this building, which cost about $1,000, became necessary to meet the requirements of the company, which had been cramped for room in the Main Building, where it is impossible to judge the merits of high-class instruments. The enterprise displayed by the Company in providing suitable quarters on the grounds for their business has been rewarded. The large number of visitors who call, inspect, and purchase proves beyond question that the public approve the provision made for their convenience and comfort. Here a crowd may be seen listening to test performances on first-class instruments made by leading city and country musicians.

Right well do the Company deserve the success which they have achieved. The present prosperous concern had, like all great institutions, its day of small things. It had its origin in Bowmanville about fifteen years ago, the stock being at that time largely held by parties unacquainted with the business. About ten years go John Wesley, the present secretary and treasurer; George Piggott, the manager of the manufacturing department; and W. S. Russell, superintendent of the tuning department, bought out the shareholders and assumed control. Since that date the business has been booming. A further stimulus was given to the concern by the admission of a Detroit millionaire as a partner. Pianomaking was added to the organ-manufacturing, and the establishment was increased, until it now occupies a leading position among Canadian undertakings. It turns out about 200 organs and 50 pianos per month. These are produced by 250 hands, who receive in wages about $15,000 per month. The whole civilized world is the firm's market, and they have branches in London and Manchester, England; Hamburg, Germany; Adelaide and Sydney, Australia; Auckland, New Zealand; and St. Petersburg, Russia.

The instruments on exhibition in the *pavilion are fair examples of the Com*pany's workmanship. An upright piano of burr walnut is a splendid instrument. Of square pianos there are two kinds, a square and a square grand. The former is intended for standing against the side wall of a room, and is convenient for comparatively small apartments. The square grand is finished on all sides, presents a handsome appearance, and is suited for occupying a prominent position in drawing or music room. These two instruments are of rosewood, with a superfine polish, secured by hand rubbing with oil for hours. The touch is quick and easy, the tone brilliant and powerful. In musical quality and appearance they are equal to the best American pianos.

The organs made by the Company are known almost everywhere. They are manufactured in all styles, and at all prices, ranging from $50 to $1,000. Many sample organs are shown in the pavilion. The largest organ which the Company will exhibit, a double-bank pedal, is at present at the Dominion Exhibition, Montreal, but is expected here at the end of the week. It is arranged to be blown by Turk's water motor, which has been placed in position to await the arrival of the big instrument. The organs run through all grades, from the thousand dollar instrument down to the parlor favorite. The cases show wonderful variety. Many of these are of rare beauty and skilful workmanship. The case which secured for the Company a prize at the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia is still much admired, and is largely manufactured. Cases for parlor organs are chaste in design and artistic in execution. The musicians who tested the organs affirmed that for sweetness of tone and elasticity of touch they are model instruments; while visitors can themselves judge as to the beauty and style of the cases.

[T. R. Pearson & Co., New Westminster, are sole agents for these fine Organs in British Columbia. Persons proposing to purchase should not fail to communicate with them. Sample organs on view. Prices quite as low as those of Ontario. Address, T. R. Pearson & Co., New Westminster, B. C.] *no26tc

Our Story.

A REMARKABLE STORY.

"I thought you have been talking about Edward," Catherine said.

"Oh dear, no. It was whether three dances together wasn't perhaps a little—for I always feel the responsibility of belonging to the family, Cousin Catherine, and I wouldn't for the world do anything— it is quite different with gentlemen. Mr. Edward was just carrying on as usual."

"But, Emma, you must tell me what you mean by 'carrying on.'"

"Oh, I don't mean any harm," Emma would say. "I wonder what young Mr. Merridew—if he is well off, and all that? Hester has cousins all round to tell her what's best, and of course she does not need to be on her p's and q's, like me."

Catherine had to follow a mazy, vague and wondering clew thus, through acres of indifferent matter, and to piece together broken scraps of information which were never intended to affect her at all. But they did affect her sometimes so powerfully that she had her hand sometimes on the bell, not only that evening, but on several other occasions, to intimate that she should want the carriage at ten o'clock—a proceeding which would have convulsed the household at home, and carried consternation to the recipients of the unlooked for honor. But, on further consideration, Catherine always succeeded in subduing herself, often sadly enough saying to herself that it would be time enough when he told her—why should she go out to meet trouble? Her heart so took her strength from her, and changed her natural temperament, that Catherine restrained herself, with a shrinking which no one who knew her would have believed in, from any contact with irresistible fact, and decided that rather than find out the vanity of her confidence it was better to be deceived.

Thus the house on the hill, which flaunted forth every Thursday evening the great lamps of its lighted windows and the lines of Chinese lanterns in the conservatory became the centre, for the moment, of a great deal of life and many anxious thoughts. It turned Ellen's head with pride and delight when she received indications of this, which, indeed, came to her on all sides. When a shade of alarm crossed Algernon's face at the amount of the bills, she took a lofty position which no man pretending to any spirit could have gone against. "Goodness, Algy, how can you look so glum about a pound or two, when you see we are doing a great work?" Ellen said. "Well, if it is not more important than mothers' meetings, I don't know what words mean; and Mr. Ransom says the mothers' meetings are a great work." Algernon laughed, but he, too, felt a thrill of pride. To have made the house, which, though it was Ellen's, was a Merridew house, and his own, into a centre for the great Vernon family, was, if not a great work, at least a great local success, such as old Merridew's son could never have hoped to attain to. And, indeed, Algernon's remonstrances regarding the bills were of the feeblest description. He was too much devoted to his wife to have interfered with her, even had not the balance of moral force been on her side. And he was proud of the extravagance and the commotion, and the way in which the elders shook their heads. It is pleasant to make a sensation, and Algernon was comforted by the knowledge that he had already made a little money in his stockbroking transactions, and also hoped to make a great deal more.

The young men had carried on their transactions with considerable vigor, though with little risk so far as Algernon and Harry were concerned. But Edward's was a different case. The venture upon which he had pondered with so much anxiety had turned out favorably, and he had gone on without telling his secrets to any one, with a general amount of success which had made the operation of risking other people's money seem quite natural to him—a process without any practical consequences at all, except the accumulation of a good deal of money under his own name, which is one of the happiest of sensations. To his temperament, indeed, it is by no means certain that the vicissitudes of the career in which he had embarked, the tragic suspense in which he was occasionally held, and the transport of deliverance that followed, were not in themselves the highest pleasures of which he was capable. And even so early in his career as this, an answer would come. He had self-command not to betray himself when these moments arrived, and though there were eyes keen enough to see that something had produced a change in him, they were as has been seen in Catherine's case deceived as to the cause of his perturbation. Hester did not have so many opportunities of studying him, and she had no clew to the business complications in which he was involved, but she had many thoughts in her own mind as to the cause of the commotion, which she saw, vaguely, without understanding it. Some of the members of the general society, strangers, who sometimes perceive a departure from habit which does not strike the most intimate, had said of Edward, on more than one occasion, that he must be in love. Was he in love? Hester had felt that a look was directed to herself when this was said, and that a suppressed laugh had run around the little group. She was herself agitated by tumults which she could not understand, commotions in which Edward was certainly involved, and his name thus mentioned brought the blood to her cheek. Was he in love? She did not want to turn the question upon herself to bring the matter to any conclusion, one way or another. He was very pale that evening, yet would flush, as she herself did, growing red in a moment and then pale again; and there was a watchful air about him, as of a man who expected to hear something or see some one whom nobody else looked for. A man who was in love did not behave so—he was absorbed in the being whom he loved. He is not absorbed in me, the girl said to herself, involuntarily, then blushed, as if her thought had been found out. Edward came up to her at this moment, which made her confusion the greater.

"Why do you change color so? What is the matter?" he said to her.

"It is you who are changing color," said Hester, not knowing how else to defend herself.

Instead of contradicting her, or of throwing off the accusation, he suddenly took her hand, and drew it through his arm.

"It is true," he said; "I have something on my mind. You were going to dance this waltz with me. Come into the hall; it is cool there, and let us talk instead."

Every inch of available space in the house was given up to the accommodation of the guests, and the hall was filled, like the conservatory, with plants, among which little groups of two could find corners. Edward established Hester in one of these, and placed a chair for himself, so as to cut her off from everybody.

"You are the only one that can understand," he said. "I can speak to you. Don't mind me if I look like a fool. I am too anxious to talk."

"What is it?" she said, with a tremor of sympathetic anxiety.

"It is only business, he said, "but it is business so unexpected that even beside you I am obliged to think of it. Can a man say more than that?" he asked, with something in his eyes which Hester had never seen there so distinctly before, and which silenced her. One great emotion clears the way for another. Edward, in the commotion of his being, was almost ready to rush into words that, being said, would have turned his life upside down and shattered all his present foundations. He was saved by an incident which was of the most ordinary, commonplace kind. There came a violent ring at the door, which was within half a dozen steps of the spot where they sat. Half a dozen heads immediately protruded from the little banks of foliage to see what this odd interruption could mean, for all the guests had arrived, and it was not late enough for any one to go away. Hester saw that all the color ebbed immediately out of Edward's face. He did not even attempt to say a word to her, but sat perfectly still, slightly turned towards the door, but not looking out, awaiting whatever might come. It seemed to Hester that never in her life had she so understood the power of Fate, the moment when Nature and Life seemed to stand still before some event. A moment after, the footman came up, and handed a telegram to Edward. He tore it open, with trembling hands. The next moment he jumped up from his seat with a suppressed cry of triumph. "Hurrah!" he said, and then, with a laugh which was very unsteady, he held out the dispatch to her. All that it contained were the words "All right." But somehow it was not to these words that Hester's eyes confined themselves. "From Ashton, London," she said, without knowing that she did so, before he thrust the pink paper into his pocket. "Come along," he said, "the waltz is not half over; we shall be in time yet." And for the rest of the evening Edward was in wild spirits, dancing every dance. He even asked the girls to take him with them in their fly as far as the Grange, in his reckless exhilaration, and as he got out, in the darkness, Hester felt a kiss upon her hand. This startled her still more than the telegram. "Till to-morrow," he said, as they rumbled away.

"What does he mean by 'till to-morrow'? He must be coming to make you an offer—that is how they do. It often happens after a dance—when it is going to happen," Emma said, in the darkness, with a little sigh.

* * * * * *

Was he in love? That this was a question very interesting to Hester there can be no reason to conceal. She did not even conceal it from herself, nor did she trifle with herself by pretending to suppose that if he were in love it could be with any one else. There was no one else who had ever appeared to attract him. To nobody had he so much as given his passing attention. When he had neglected her at the Grange it had been truly, as he said, for no higher reason than that he might hand down the old ladies to supper or to tea. No young one had ever been suggested as having any attraction for him. Hester did her best to enter calmly into this question. It is one which it is really sometimes very difficult for a young woman to decide upon. What is conspicuous and apparent to others will often remain to her a question full of doubt and uncertainty; and it is to be feared that when this is the case it is all the more likely that her own sentiments will be capable of very little question. This, however, was not exactly the case with Hester. Her mind was very much interested, and, indeed, excited. She wanted to know what Edward meant. From the first morning when he had met her, a child, wandering on the common, his manner had been different to her from the manner of other people, or from his own manner to others. His eyes had lingered upon her with pleasure even when his look had been stealthy. Even when it had been but a glance in passing they had said things to her which no other eyes ever said. His interest in her had never failed. It had not leaped, like Harry's, after a good deal of indifference, into a sudden outburst. The very charm and attraction of it had lain in the restraint, which Hester had often considered to be dishonest, and against which she had chafed. She had known all through, even in those evenings when he had neglected her, that he was always conscious what she was doing, and knew, without looking, when any one went to talk to her, when she left the room and when she came back. This had kept her own interest in him unvarying! But Hester was not any more sure of her own sentiments than of his. She remembered with some shame that Roland Ashton's presence had made a great difference in her mind as regarded Edward. She had felt but little curiosity about him when that stranger was at the Vernonry. All the foreground of her mind had been so pleasantly occupied by that new figure, which was in itself much more attractive than Edward, that he had slid almost completely out of her thoughts. And this fact, which was only quite apparent to her after Roland was gone, had greatly discomfited Hester, and given her a very small opinion of herself. Was it possible that any new object that might appear would have anything like the same effect upon her? The effect had passed away, and Edward had come slowly back to his original position as the person in Redborough who interested her most. But the incident had been of a very disturbing character, and had altogether confused her ideas. Therefore the question was one of a very special interest. To know exactly how he regarded her would much help her in deciding the other question, not less important, which was, how she regarded him? Everything thus depended, Hester felt, on Edward's sentiments. If it should turn out that he loved her—strange thought, which made her heart beat!—it could not be but that, in great and tender gratitude for such a gift, she should love him. She did not feel offended at his efforts to disguise his feelings, or even to get the better of them—never, at least, when she was cool and in command of her judgment; but there could be no doubt that she was very curious and anxious to know them.
