THE BRITISH COLUMBIAN.

VOLUME 26. NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1884. NUMBER 46

The British Columbian.

Wednesday Morning, Dec. 10, 1884.

Current Events and Opinions.

No one will deny that of late years our trade has not been expanding with such remarkable rapidity as it formerly did; and it is equally true that there has been a great curtailment of manufacturing profits. Still, the volume of our business has not ceased to grow, and although producers have had to content themselves with a smaller return upon their capital, distributors have been carrying on a profitable trade, and consumers have benefitted greatly from the low prices of commodities. The consequence is that we have passed through the present period of comparative depression with probably less suffering than has been endured on almost any other of the ever-recurring periods of dull trade.—London Economist.

It seems hardly possible that the House of Lords should come out of the battle without receiving a wound which sooner or later must prove mortal. The principle of hereditary government on which it rests is too hopelessly dead, its own record is too fatally bad, its uselessness, and worse than uselessness, even as a conservative institution, is too flagrantly apparent. Moreover its material foundation, the immense rent roll of the landed aristocracy, is now, owing to the depression of agriculture, rapidly slipping away. Slow as the march of English progress is, numerous as are the sources against Democracy in a land of ancient wealth and fixed tradition, the days of the House of Lords are now numbered. The attempt to find for hereditary monarchy and aristocracy a new basis in demagogism, under the name of Tory Democracy, having failed in the hands of Disraeli, who was its projector, is not likely to succeed in those of Lord Randolph Churchill.—Toronto Week.

The amount of revenue which opium contributes to the Indian and Chinese exchequers in proportion to cost of production is wonderful. In India the revenue from this source in 1839-50 was $3,900,000; in 1879-80 it was $54,100,000, and two years later $46,800,000. In the last named year the cost of production and manufacture in Bengal was only ten million dollars, but the produce sold for thirty-seven millions, leaving the government a net profit of nearly $27,000,000, or 270 per cent. The native states of British India produced large quantities which on being shipped to Bombay contributed to the Indian government nearly $11,000,000. Nearly the whole Indian export goes to China, and there the import of the same year contributed a large revenue again, the Chinese government levying on it $10,500,000. The Chinese consumers paid in all for this Indian opium $84,000,000. Strange as it may seem this vast amount is consumed by little more than a million people. These cannot belong to the poorer classes in China for the average daily expenditure for each smoker is about 21 cents, certainly more than a member of the poorer classes could pay out of his scanty wages.—Globe.

These be "parlous" times in Russia. The reigning Emperor is seriously apprehensive. Every precaution is taken to protect the person of his august majesty. A matured plot against his life has been discovered. Neither public execution, nor the dreaded consignment to the wilderness of Siberia, with hard labor in the mines as an additional detriment, affects the resolute Nihilists. According to the Moscow Gazette, sedition has reached as high as Lieutenant-Colonels in the army, and is not likely to stop there. The Viedomost thinks that the "canker of Nihilism has eaten through every class of society, private and official." A St. Petersburg correspondent of the London Times says that "the Rector of the University of Kharkoff has informed the students, who are showing signs of demonstrating against the eviction of their comrades at Kieff, that in conformity with the new University statutes, all those taking part in any kind of meeting will be immediately and summarily expelled," Yet, in spite of this warning, three hundred of the students, arose in insubordination and were dispersed by the police. Expulsion had no terrors for them. Says the correspondent: "Indications of growing agitation are observable in other universities, and further troubles are very probable." A dispatch from Vienna says that a letter to the Political Correspondence from St. Petersburg "refers to another increase in Nihilistic agitation in that capital. In the provinces a manifesto has been circulated among the peasants, urging them to hostilities against the higher classes. This has led to some risings against landed proprietors." A few of the peasants have been executed for revolt. To the Nihilists is attributed the cause of the disturbance. They are here, there and everywhere in Russia. The "matured plot" against the Czar's life may be only an existence of police imagination. At any rate the police have discovered nothing definite in that direction yet. But it is natural enough that his Imperial Majesty is sensitively apprehensive. It is natural enough, too, that the conspirators against his person, if such there be, keep their rigicidal intention a profound secret not to be penetrated by the guardians of the law. The assassin, when he strikes, especially at a shining mark, strikes unexpectedly. The Czar is well guarded, both in his palace and on the road when travelling; but certain of his recent predecessors have fallen, notwithstanding precautions, whether in their stately home or on the highway. The present ruler of All the Russians does not evidently sit on a throne of quietness. His daily life is one of continual uneasiness that displays itself in his every public motion.—San Francisco Bulletin.

A Terrible Operation.

A terrible surgical operation was performed at the general hospital in this city on Saturday last, when a man's tongue was cut out in order to prevent him from dying a painful, if not an excruciating death. The victim was a man, apparently about fifty years of age, who came to the general hospital a few days ago to be treated for what he supposed was simply a sore tongue. The doctors, after making an examination, found that the man was suffering from a cancer which had formed on his tongue, and the only remedy was immediate amputation of that most useful organ. The unfortunate individual decided to submit to the operation rather than suffer the torture to which he had been subjected to for some time past. When he had given the surgeons the facts with reference to his case they found that the disease was simply the result of the habit of excessive smoking. The patient had been a smoker. The pipe which he had generally smoked was a common clay one, the stem of which had been broken off short, leaving a ragged edge. This sharp edge had, at first, caused simply an abrasion of the skin, which became painful. The smoker, not dreaming of the cause or the result of a continuance of the practice, kept on smoking his short clay pipe until after some time it was only with intense pain that he could speak, and was unable to take any solid food. At last the pain became such that he deemed it advisable to visit the general hospital, in order to get relief, if possible. Amputation was the only means of relief. The operation was performed by Dr. Macfarlane in the presence of a large number of students and physicians. Of course the latest scientific appliances were used to make the unfortunate man suffer as little as possible. He is now doing quite well at the hospital, and, although past the middle age, will likely live some years, but without the power of speech or sense of taste.—Toronto Globe.

Moonshining in Ireland.

The place selected for the operations of the distiller is usually some natural hollow, or a sheltered spot partially hidden by some overhanging rock. But occasionally there are much more habitable places prepared. A favorable example of this is an artificial cave dug out in the side of a high bank close to a stream, the proximity of which is always necessary for their operations. The entrance is generally concealed with great ingenuity by a luxuriant growth of furze and other shrubs. Inside, a raised seat of earth, on which some heather has been strewn, and a rudely built chimney complete the structure. The functions of the chimney are not by any means exhausted by being brought up to the natural level of the earth. As is well known, burning peat has an easy recognizable odor, and if this drew attention to a wreath of smoke ascending in the midst of a field, the chances of a long life for the still-house would be very small indeed. Instead, therefore, of being directly brought out, every conceivable artifice is employed to render the smoke invisible. Sometimes it is led into a drain; at others into a thick growth of underwood; again, it is carried for some distance and allowed to make its escape in such small quantities as to be practically imperceptible. In one case of which we knew, the still-house was under ground, in the vicinity of the owner's cottage, and advantage of this was taken to convey the chimney up the earthen fence and effect a junction with the flue of the kitchen. In some cases a dwelling-house is chosen in such a locality as to defy suspicion. An example of this occurred in a market town where distillation was carried on for many years in the main street, within a hundred yards of an important constabulary barracks, and the owner in this case was said to have amassed a considerable amount of money. For aught that is known, many similar instances may still exist, as the shrewdness shown by the choice of such a hiding-place renders detection, except through treachery, a most unlikely event. It would be well, perhaps, to add that in the case just related, the proprietor of the still was a bachelor.—Chambers' Journal.

Wednesday Morning, Dec. 10, 1884.

There seems little reason to doubt that Khartoum is still safe in the hands of Gen. Gordon, and that the expedition for its relief will be successful. Gen. Wolseley has had experience enough, one would suppose, to prevent him running any serious risks in a matter where the completeness of the arrangements were of the greatest importance. All the world is anxious to obtain an authentic history of the most remarkable siege of modern times, and the enterprising historian who first gives such a history to the world may realize a fortune. The relief must be affected very soon, or the expedition must fail.

A New Boom.

When Mr. Van Horne visited this city some months ago he stated very plainly what were the intentions of the railway syndicate respecting the western terminus. No person who heard his utterances, and who knew the circumstances, could find reasonable ground upon which to doubt that the road would go down to Coal Harbor. But there were some persons who professed to doubt this, and who even declared that Mr. Van Horne's statements were sufficient to establish Port Moody as the permanent terminus. Of course these persons were owners of Port Moody lots. A report of the interview between Mr. Van Horne and the committee who met him in this city was published in THE COLUMBIAN. It was a fair and impartial report, but it was twisted and distorted and denounced by the Port Moody Gazette and the Guardian of this city, and by persons whose interests were likely to suffer from the publication of the truth. We need hardly say that very recent events have shown both that Mr. Van Horne's statements were true and that they were correctly reported by this journal. The arrangement between the C. P. R. syndicate and the government and private property holders at Coal Harbor has been completed. It is definitely stated that steps will be taken at once to extend the railway to Coal Harbor, and there will be fixed the great wharves and terminal works of the company. We are sure every person in the province, except those who have large interests at Port Moody, will be glad to know that the terminus has been finally fixed. Many branches of trade have been languishing because of the uncertainty which existed. People who had money would not invest it while this uncertainty continued. If Mr. Van Horne's notions of the terminal city were not excessively wild, there must quickly commence a boom at Coal Harbor such as was never before known in this province. Mr. Van Horne said the railway syndicate would spend in terminal works and buildings between five and six millions. The expenditure of this sum will of itself have a great influence upon business in British Columbia, but private enterprise will also be stimulated. We pointed out long ago that the chief drawback to advancement at Port Moody was the uncertainty of its remaining the terminus. There will be no such uncertainty at Coal Harbor, because the terminus cannot go beyond that place. It may be expected, therefore, that people will eagerly acquire property at Coal Harbor and with confidence proceed to improve it and erect permanent buildings. Between the railway syndicate and private enterprise we look for a very large amount of work at Coal Harbor during the coming year. Employment will be furnished to a large amount of skilled labor, and the beneficial effects will be felt in all branches of trade. We are not among those who see in this change of terminus an influence adverse to the interests of New Westminster. On the contrary, we think the nearer the main line comes to this city the better will it be for our prospects. It is much better for us to be practically on the main line than to be the terminus of a branch so near the terminus. We are of opinion that the boom now beginning to show itself at Coal Harbor will be of very great advantage to this city. This should become the distributing point for Coal Harbor supplies for some time to come at least, and it should receive an impetus during the next year or two which will place it far ahead of any city in the province. We look forward with the utmost confidence and hope to the events which lie before us, and we are certain these events will bring solid prosperity to those who wisely take advantage of them.

Cattle Kings.

A great convention of stockmen met at St. Louis not many days ago and discussed matters pertaining to the interests of their trade. The convention was remarkable for several things, but specially for the amount of capital and the audacity of some of the propositions made. The stock business has grown in the western states and territories until it has become a vast and most important industry, and it is growing still. It is estimated that there are now west of the Mississippi 21,943,000 cattle, valued at $533,650,871. The value of cattle slaughtered in the United States in 1880 is quoted at $800,000,000. There are some individual stockmen and stock associations who are very wealthy. The Texas Live Stock Association, for example, holds $45,000,000 worth of cattle. Statistics show that in some of the states and territories nearly the whole country is occupied by the stock. Texas, with an area of 170 million acres has 119 million acres of grazing lands. Arizona is worse, for its whole acreage is 72 millions and its grazing lands 65 millions, or 90 per cent. The same percentage is found in Montana, in Indian Territory, and nearly the same in Wyoming. The whole grazing lands west of the Mississippi amount to the enormous quantity of 784,667,760 acres! But the cattle kings seem disposed to rebel against the smallness of their heritage. They have not room for the rapidly-increasing herds, and they have let it become known that they are after a large-sized piece of government property. It is said that the transportation of cattle from west to east is both expensive and dangerous—dangerous because the animals are very liable to catch disease. For this reason they propose a scheme for what is known as a national trail. This is a tract of land, six or eight miles wide, extending from a point in Texas north to Canada! The trail would embrace 25,000,000 acres of land. Most of this land belongs to the government, and congress will be asked to hand it over to the cattle kings. This proposal is backed up by associations $50,000,000 strong. It is said that some people in the east are startled at the magnitude and audacity of the proposal. But nothing emanating from a monopolist should startle anybody. The stock business is undoubtedly one of great importance, but it is not more so than some others. Not long ago one of these stock associations took up a large quantity of government land for grazing purposes. The land was in a square, and comprised only a narrow border or margin enclosing an immense area. This was enclosed by fences, and, of course, no outsider could gain access to the interior square! The cattlemen, therefore, occupied the whole territory because they had acquired lawful possession of the outside rim. The stock business in British Columbia is also an industry of large proportions, and some of those who have been for any length of time engaged in it have retired with comfortable fortunes. But British Columbia stockmen are a modest race, and no one would ever suspect them of contemplating a raid on the public domain. There is an incident related which shows something of the character of the average cattle king, and how small a circumstance sometimes determines a large event. It is well known that St. Louis used to be the great cattle centre, and that the centre is now at Chicago. The reason of the change is thus explained: When the cattle-growing business was in its infancy a tall, gaunt, grizzled, homely-looking party having made arrangements for a great cattle-drive to Kansas City and St. Louis, called upon one of the then St. Louis railroad magnates. He was snubbed by clerks and stared at by underlings, but with pants in boots and sombrero on the back of his head he stalked by the attendants into the private office of the magnate. The big man looked up aghast at the intrusion. "Howdy, Captain," said the ranchman. "I thought I'd jes drop in and see what rate you could give on cattle to St. Looey." The big man appeared more dumbfounded, and, jumping at a very hasty and damaging conclusion, he assumed an air of snobbishness and frigidity, and told his visitor to tell his employer to come around, as he did not do business with anybody except gentlemen. "I'll make you and your town suffer for this," muttered the disgusted cattle-owner. Two hours later the Hannibal and St. Joseph road made the biggest contract of the year to carry several hundred thousand head of cattle from Kansas City to Chicago. The man induced all his friends to do likewise, and the action of the railroad magnate directed the main run of cattle trade for many years to Chicago.

WHERE IS IT?—The narrative by Prof. Chittenden, of the British Columbia University, of his journey among the Queen Charlotte Islands is exceedingly interesting. A LARGE CLAIM.—The suit of the British Columbia Packing Company vs. William T. Coleman & Co. will come up for trial on December 12th. The complaint alleges that in 1882 the defendant entered into an agreement with the plaintiff to handle the product of their cannery for a consideration of 5 per cent. commission. In accordance with this agreement plaintiff, in 1882, delivered defendant 22,250 cases of salmon, and in 1883 5,000 cases. It is alleged that on this delivery $137,000 was due, which the plaintiff has been unable to collect. Therefore plaintiff prays for judgment in the above amount, and such other relief as the Court may deem just and equitable.—Portland News.

C. P. R. STEAMSHIP LINE.—A special cablegram, sent from the Toronto Globe's London correspondent to that paper, dated on November 26th, 1884, says: I undesstand that Mr. Stephen, as the result of his present visit, has ascertained the possibility of establishing a line of steamers to run from British Columbia to Japan. This can be done by arrangements either with existing lines or by building special steamers for the Canadian Pacific R R. Company. On his return to Montreal a decision will be made as to which course will be adopted by the company Mr. Stephen represents. It may be considered certain, however, that a steamship line will be established by the time the Canadian Pacific Railway is completed.

GAMBLING IN PARIS.—A Parisian journal has been making some inquiries regarding the number of gaming houses and gambling clubs in the capital of civilization, and the amount of money which changed hands in them. If the information be trustworthy, it is indeed startling. There are twenty-four of these tripots in Paris, and between $30,000,000 to $35,000,000 are computed to have been lost there during the last five years. The minimum profits of the banks are put down at $1,200 daily, and in the less select gaming houses at $200. Taking the average at $400 per day, the total for the five years comes out at the respectable figure of $17,500,000. Nearly $12,500,000 are set down as the five years "picking" of the croupiers and preteurs. Some of these men make enormous incomes, and it is certainly well within the mark to put down their receipts at $20,000 per annum. Then there is another $500,000 for the administrators and their staffs.

IMPERIAL FEDERATION.—A writer in the Westminster Review has been figuring up that it covers "nearly ten millions of square miles, or about one-fifth of the habitable globe; that its inhabitants number 300,000,000, an increase of 100,000,000 within the last forty years; that its unrolled armies number 850,000 men; that its navy is manned by 60,000 men; that its mercantile ships number 30,000, with an aggregate tonnage of 8 500,000, and manned by 270,000 sailors; and that the estimated value of the whole is about £12,460,000,000." These figures are so enormous as to be absolutely beyond comprehension. But how is this enormous mass to be welded together into one body? Will the Indians be given a voice in imperial affairs? If not, will Canadians, Australians and New Zealanders be given a voice in the management of Indian affairs? Will the empire not, after all, be a Nebuchadnezzar's statue, with head of gold and feet of clay? Will it not be a mere dispersion of authority rather than an aggregation of strength?

SABBATH-SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY.—The anniversary services in connection with the Methodist Sabbath School last Sunday and Monday were unusually interesting. The Sabbath services consisted of a sermon by the Rev. Coverdale Watson in the morning, the singing being conducted by the children. In the afternoon there was an open session of the school, when brief addresses were made by Messrs. Wm. Clarkson, James Cunningham, D. S. Durtis and D. Robson, and the children sang a number of pieces. On Monday the children had tea at 6 o'clock P. M., after which a lengthy programme was given, consisting of dialogues, recitations, juvenile speeches and solo, quartette and chorus singing by the school. The programme was well carried out and seemed to be received with great satisfaction by the large audience which filled the church. Some of those who took part were extremely small, and the manner in which they performed their parts produced immense applause. Mr. H. L. DeBeck, superintendent of the school, presided; the music was under the direction of Mr. T. R. Pearson, and the literary part under that of Miss Matthews. We believe the proceeds of the sale of tickets amounted to about $75.

THE BROWN STATUE.—The bronze statue erected at Toronto on the 25th ult. in memory of the late George Brown is said to be a fine work of art. The Globe says it is 10 feet high, and represents the deceased Senator in the attitude of declamation. The right arm hangs at the side, the hand grasping a scroll. The left arm hangs nearly straight, the hand being held a short distance from the side, and slightly advanced, the fingers pointing downward as if a slight and graceful gesture was just being concluded. The right foot is advanced, and the weight resting more upon the left. The pose is easy and natural, and the effect of the whole striking and life-like. When viewed from the south-west the likeness of the deceased Senator is remarkably good. The statue rests upon a short, round pillar of grey granite, bearing the name "George Brown" in relief. The pillar, in turn, rests upon a base made up of four stones, the uppermost being circular in shape, and the others octagonal, the bottom one having a diameter of eight feet 3 inches. The whole pedestal is 11 feet 6 inches high, making the total height of pedestal and statue together 21 feet 6 inches. Pedestal and statue were designed by the same artist, Mr. C. B. Burch, A. R. A., London, England. The unveiling of this statue was entrusted to Hon. Alex. Mackenzie, and took place in presence of a large gathering.

GROUNDLESS WASTE.—When the city council proposed some time ago to advertise for tenders for the construction of a railway between this city and Port Moody, we pointed out the folly of such a proposal. The statements which had been made by Mr. Van Horne were enough to convince any person that the railway was going down to Coal Harbor, and it was not connection with Port Moody this city wanted, but connection with the main line of the C. P. R. at the nearest point. It appeared to be very improbable that the railway would be taken down to Coal Harbor by way of Port Moody, but by way of Burnaby Lake. The line Mr. Van Horne drew on the map left the main line a good many miles from Port Moody, and the reasonable presumption was that this line, or something very near it, would be adopted. In that event our connecting line would not want to touch Port Moody at all. We pointed out that the cost of advertising this scheme would amount to some hundreds of dollars, and the money would be absolutely thrown away. The result has been as we expected. Accounts have been received from all the newspapers in which the advertisement appeared, except the Sentinel, and they are as follows: San Francisco Bulletin, $120; San Francisco Chronicle, $120; Victoria Colonist, $81; Victoria Standard, $25; COLUMBIAN, $14; Guardian, $4.80. It is probable the Sentinel's bill will be about $5, which will bring the cost of advertising this scheme up to the respectable sum of about $370. This sum has been absolutely thrown away, and the council cannot offer a reasonable excuse for the foolish waste.

A CURIOUS CAPTURE.—A well-known Chinaman was arrested at San Francisco the other day under circumstances which were both peculiar and ridiculous. He was a star actor, who on the Chinese stage had drawn $4,000 a year, and his fame had reached this side of the Pacific. But he had no permit, and when he attempted to land from the steamer Arabic the customs authorities would not permit it. Hoa Chung (for by this euphonious name he was known) managed to elude the vigilance of the officers, however, and escaped to the shore and disappeared from view among his countrymen. He easily found an engagement at the Chinese theatre in San Francisco, for his reputation was certain to draw a house. But it wouldn't do for him to be announced in his real name, because the discovery of his identity would lead to his capture by the customs people. If his true name did not appear on the bills, however, the attraction of his fine reputation would be lost! The theatre manager billed him under a name which retained just enough of the original to identify him in Chinese eyes as the veritable Hoa Gee Chung. This identification went further than had been anticipated, for the officers caught on to the fact and laid plans for capture. The night for Hoa's appearance arrived, and an officer applied for admission to the theatre. This was denied. He went and disguised himself and applied again. This time he was successful. Having satisfied himself beyond doubt that the star actor was the man he was looking for, he made his way to the green room and arrested him. The manager was completely broken up, and begged the officer to allow Hoa to finish the play or he would be ruined. This was agreed to; but the officer stood on the back of the stage and kept an eye on the star. In this he was wise, for it quickly became evident that Hoa needed watching. When a favorable opportunity presented itself he made a bolt from the stage, and tried to escape from the theatre by a side door. The officer nearly lost his victim; but as Hoa was just about to leap from the stage the officer caught his pig-tail and the actor came up with a jerk. He was dragged across the stage by the tail, in front of the whole audience, and conveyed to more safe quarters. The spectacle was quite original, and did not appear on the bills!

THE HISTORY OF HUNDREDS.—Mr. John Morrison, of St. Anns, N. S., was so seriously afflicted with a disease of the kidneys that dropsy was developing and his life was despaired of. Two bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters cured him after physicians had failed.

Two Bodies Found!

LADNER'S LANDING, Dec. 8.—A body was found at Point Roberts last night with a pair of pants on; supposed to be one of the men drowned near the Fraser river lighthouse about two moths ago; also, some clothing supposed to belong to another person. If there are any of the friends of those men in this vicinity, they may identify them by the clothing.

AN INTERESTING BUDGET OF NEWS.

[By Telegraph to The Columbian.]

VICTORIA, Dec. 9th.—The Colonist of to-day says: Mr. J. C. Rykert, representing the New Haven Smelting Company, composed of sixty-five miners who have made locations at Kootenay lake, had a very satisfactory interview with the Premier yesterday, and will leave for the lake to-day.

The company will proceed to erect a sixty-ton smelter, and will place a powerful steamer on the lake early in the Spring.

Colonel Holmes has received instructions to place the batteries that defend Esquimault and Nanaimo harbor in a condition of perfect order. This is probably a preliminary action to the erection of the military barracks on the Indian reserve. The five Metlakahtla Indians who were sent down on the charge of a riot, and the bills against whom were thrown out by the grand jury, were liberated yesterday on personal sureties of $150 each, and Mr. Duncan in a similar amount. It is improbable that they will be further proceeded against.

High Sheriff McMillan will resign as Dominion License Commissioner.

The steamer Amelia, while at Cowichan wharf yesterday, sprang the cross head of her engine, and the engineer, deeming it imprudent to continue on to Nanaimo the boat was tied up and the piece brought to Victoria for repairs. In the assises on Monday last Justice Creese informed A. H. Maynard that he was liable to a fine of $50 for each day he had not attended. He would reduce the total fine to $25, to be paid at once into court. Mr. Maynard said business matters which had to receive attention called him to San Francisco. The fine was imposed to show that jurors must attend the court when summoned.

Barnes and McDonough, charged with jail breaking, were placed in the dock and convicted.

Barnes was sentenced to six months and McDonough to one year's imprisonment.

In the case of Ah and Ah, the Skeena Indians charged with the murder of Charles Youmans, the jury returned a verdict of guilty.

Formation of Worlds.

The following is the Globe's report of a lecture on astronomy, delivered at Toronto by Prof. R. A. Proctor, the eminent scientist. The title of the lecture was the "Birth of the Solar System." After referring to the certainty that the solar system has been "developed" to its present condition, and the impossibility of determining how it has been developed, the lecturer described the wonderfully ingenious nebular hypothesis of Laplace—how the vast nebulous mass extending from *the present position of the sun to be*yond the orbit of Neptune, rotating its inconceivable mass, slung off in waves vast rings, which, finally gathering around some thicker part, consolidated into one planet after another, the central core meanwhile diminishing in volume and increasing in density as it shrunk finally into what we now know as the sun. The Saturnian system, as a small illustration of the imperfect or yet abortive formation which the nebular development admitted of, was alluded to. The difficulties connected with were briefly alluded to. The theory of meteoric growth was explained and many interesting facts stated in regard to meteors that are annually showered upon the earth, and interesting speculations indulged in as to what possible aggregations of meteoric matter may have formed in the past. While admitting much of the meteoric theory, Prof. Proctor said it appeared to fail to account for the origin of the bodies which form the solar system. At this stage of the lecture the gas was turned off, and a gloom like that which pervaded the solar nebula when it extended to the outmost verge of the solar system filled the hall. Then a series of magic lantern views were cast on an immense screen behind the platform. The first was an illustration of the nebular formation of the system before the rings slung off by the contracting central orbe had formed into planets. The strange misty rings with their incipient planets and the great gloomy vapor solar mass in the centre mass give an idea of the grandeur of things celestial, such as few imaginations venture to picture. Then followed illustrations of various theories of planet formation, grand in their suggestion of terrific force. From illustrations of the theories of the origin of the system, the lecturer went on to show what light the appearance of Jupiter and Saturn threw upon the question of how the solar system originated. The system really consists, said the lecturer, of five great bodies, each *with its attendant planets, the sun oc*cupying the central position, with the inferior planets out to Mars, as its dependants. Jupiter, Saturn, Venus and Neptune, are suns in themselves,

HALF-GLOWING MASSES,

that have not yet consolidated into planets which can sustain life. These great planets give light and heat to the worlds revolving around them. The analogy between the spots and cloud rings of Jupiter were pointed out. The ring system of Saturn and its process of formation were shown in a series of views accompanied by copious explanations. The existence of the asteroids was ascribed to the attractive influence of Jupiter on the vapor belt, lying betwixt Jupiter's orbit and that of Mars. The solar surface, over which fiery storms of glowing gases played with unconceivable velocity, and with the sound of the cataract, whirlwind and thunder storm combined, was made the subject of a few eloquent sentences. Venus, and the proofs of its atmosphere, oceans, &c., were briefly commented upon. Mars was illustrated by many views, showing the great preponderance of its land surface, as if the oceans had shrunk away, and showing also the cloud formations and ice caps, so prominent on that planet. The moon occupied considerable space in the lecture, and the numerous and grand views, shown on the canvass, of its mountains and rugged surface, gave a very vivid idea of the

from which, myriads of ages since, the last trace of ocean and of life had faded away. The history of the solar system, the various stages of its development, as shown in the sun, in the half-formed great planets, then in Mars, later in the condition of our earth, and finally in the dead world, the moon, showed the progress to fullness of life and then to death. Views of the stellar depths passed rapidly over the canvas, as the lecturer eloquently drew the picture of millions of worlds advancing on to desolation and death, like that of the moon. He then asked if it were not possible that with the death and change there might not be in the universe something which was renewing the youth of its world life.

Blaine's Delicate Reproof.

During a debate in Congress some years ago Blaine lost his temper. After the discussion was over an Illinois Congressman said to him:

"Mr. Blaine, I am not very well acquainted with you, and so I cannot speak as freely to you as I would to an old friend, but I feel that I ought to tell you that you made a —— fool of yourself yesterday."

Blaine answered with a sigh: "I am afraid I did forget myself."

Then, turning into a chuckle, he added: "What kind of language do you use when you are reproving a man with whom you consider yourself thoroughly intimate?"—Texas Siftings.

Charlie Ross Again.

ST. CATHARINES, Nov. 21.—A young lad about 15 years old, light hair and complexion and blue eyes, was brought to the Journal office on Thursday afternoon by two men, named Thomas Wright, of Port Dalhousie, and Isaac Kingston, of this city. These men stated that in their opinion and from what they had seen and known of the boy, that he is the long lost and much sought for son of Walter Ross, of Philadelphia. The boy, on being questioned, says that he believes he is 14 or 16 years of age. His first recollection is of playing in Philadelphia with a boy named Anderson, who lived near his parents' residence. He says that his own name is Charlie Ross. He was taken away from his home by a gipsy, who was called John Fleets, in a covered wagon, and given something that set him asleep. After travelling a considerable time he crossed a long bridge, which he now believes was the Niagara Suspension Bridge. He remained with the gypsies for four or five years and finally ran away from them near London, Ont., on account of ill-treatment. He then wandered about the country, working for various people in various places, and for a year or two past in this neighborhood, amongst his employers being Messrs. Newman and Reid, of Post Dalhousie, and Mr. Vine, of this city. Mr. Kingston, of this city, had seen the boy with gypsies, and learning that his name was Charles Ross took an interest in him, and both he and Mr. Wright believe that he is the veritable and long lost Charlie Ross. The boy says that the gypsies marked him with a hot needle on his chin, they scarred him with a letter on his thumb, and a letter Y and a straight mark on one foot. The boy is now in charge of Mr. Wright, of Port Dalhousie, who will maintain him until such time as Mr. Ross, of Philadelphia, can be communicated with.

Richmond Council.

Council met December 1st; present, Reeve, and Couns. Daniels, Loudon, Reid, D McDonald, and Kilgour. A communication was read from Thomas Paine, asking permission from the council to erect a wharf at the south end of trunk road across Lulu island, on the road limits, for his own private use. On motion, the communication was received and the clerk instructed to reply that in the opinion of the council they have no power to grant such privilege. A communication was also received from W. S. Gore, surveyor-general, calling the attention of the council to section 63 of the "Lands Act, 1884," with reference to gazetting of roadways, and the clerk was instructed to take the necessary steps for gazetting the line of road referred to. The board of works reported several contracts having been let, completed, or part y completed, and recommended payments to be made on the same. On motion, the several reports were adopted. The "ward bylaw, 1884," was then passed through its several stages, read a third time and passed. Coun. Reid introduced the "municipal elections regulations and ballot bylaw," which received its several readings and passed. The following bills were ordered paid: Rowling & Sons, $11; Joseph Salles, $154; J. W. Sexsmith, $300; Adam McDonald, $36.45; A. B. Carcill, $12.50; Yong Wah, $50. On motion, O. D. Sweet was appointed returning officer for the ensuing election. Council adjourned till first Monday in January, 1885.

LATEST BY TELEGRAPH

NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., Dec. 1.—People residing in the vicinity of No. 4 slope, operated by the Susquehanna Coal Company at Naticoke, were greatly alarmed this morning at the discovery of a large fissure in the earth's surface underneath the houses. The water of many of the wells runs into the mine below. For three months past the company has been endeavoring to prop up the roof of the mine, but with little success. The strongest foundations erected are giving way to the pressure above. A cave-in is feared, which may result in engulfing, if not seriously damaging, many houses on the surface.

GIBRALTAR, Dec. 2.—There has been a fresh collision between the Spanish and British authorities. A Spanish cruiser captured a vessel in British waters, which was supposed to be a smuggler. The British thereupon sent an armed launch in pursuit of the vessel and recaptured it, and along with its captor it was towed into harbor. What the final result will be is not yet clear.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Thornton, English Ambassador to Russia, has been appointed English Minister at Constantinople. Marier, English Minister to Spain, has been appointed successor to Thornton. In the Commons to-day Gladstone presented the redistribution bill. It provides that all towns of less than 1500 inhabitants, and small burroughs, shall be merged into counties; that all towns of 50,000 inhabitants be entitled to one member. England will possess six additional members. The membership for Wales and Ireland are unchanged. Scotland will have twelve additional members, and the city of London will have thirty-seven, Liverpool four, Glasgow four, Birmingham four, Manchester four, Yorkshire sixteen and Lancashire fifteen additional members. The second reading of the redistribution bill will take place on Thursday. It will be referred to a committee to report thereon after the Christmas holidays.

PARIS, Dec. 2.—An official bulletin of the Panama Canal Company gives a resume of the statements of Commander Gorringe, formerly of the United States Navy, which were published some time ago in America, giving the result of his inspection of the work on the canal up to July of this year. At that time only one-seventeenth part of the actual cutting of the canal was finished, while the expenses so far incurred amount to one-sixth of the estimated total outlay. Commander Gorringe concluded that the canal will eventually cost $120,000,000 and will be completed at the latest by January 1, 1890. The American contractor, Nathaniel McKay, reports 20,000 natives of the Caribee Islands employed in piercing the isthmus. They are mostly occupied in cutting immense trenches through the hills, which will be carried down to a level with the ocean. When that work is finished, and the river Charges has been turned from its course, the most arduous part of the undertaking will be over.

PARIS, Dec. 2.—There were large sales to-day of Panama canal shares, the result of President Arthur's statement to the American Congress relative to the Nicaragua treaty.

DUBLIN, Dec 2.—The Freeman's Journal considers the redistribution bill an equitable measure, and says Gladstone has fulfilled his pledge to Ireland. The Nationalists will now probably be able to elect some members in England. The Irish Times rejoices that the leaders of both parties were wise enough to create no new Irish grievance.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The Irish party is divided in support of the redistribution bill. The threatened coalition of Tory and Liberal discontents has been found impossible, and there appears to be no common basis of action for them. All opposition to the bill is fast disappearing, and the second reading is expected Friday. Parliament will adjourn on Saturday.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—It is reported that Abram S. Hewitt, of New York, will be the probable successor of Minister Lowell. The Pall Mall Gazette says that Hewitt's eminent position as a philanthropist and his free trade views fit him exceedingly for the position, but whoever comes to England will find Lowell a very difficult man to succeed. Lowell maintains a close reserve upon the question of his retirement from the embassy.

BERLIN, Dec. 2.—The committee to which was referred the proposed navigation laws for the Congo river, placed them for revision in the hands of a subcommittee representing England, France, Germany, Portugal and Belgium. Baron Lambermont, one of the Belgian delegates, will present the report of the committee to the Conference on Thursday.

PANAMA, Dec. 2.—There are revolutionary murmurings throughout the interior, and should a disturbance occur in Cuaca a general conflict is expected. The revolutions in Panama and San Leander have terminated. The general government have mortgaged the mint in Bogota to raise $50,000. O'Leary has written the secretary of the treasury from London, stating that however advantageous may be the proposals Columbia may make for loans for the construction of railroads or other public works, it will be impossible to obtain money in England until satisfactory arrangements have been reached with its former creditors. Another revolution is in progress in Equador. General Alfero left here on the 16th ult. with about 2000 Equadorian exiles in the steames Alajueta purchased the day previous. The steamer went to Esmeralda, where Gen. Alfero was most enthusiastically received. He has an abundant supply of munitions, and his cannon and Gatling guns are of the latest pattern. He is beloved throughout the Republic, and it is probable that he will obtain the Presidency at the cost of very little bloodshed. Alfero is the leader of the Liberal party, and undoubtedly, if he is successful, church and state will at once be separated, and religious toleration will be established for the first time in the history of the Republic. The Alajueta was attacked in Columbian waters by the Equadorian man-of-war Santa Lucia, but repulsed the attack. The United States steamer Shenandoah has sailed from Callao for Mollendo, Peru, to inquire into the facts connected with one of Carceres' arbitrary acts. An American steamer carried a cargo of guano from Huacho to Molendo. The guano, which has been sold by the Iglesias government, was security for the freight, which had to be paid. Carceres' authorities claimed the guano as national property, and ordered its sale on his account. The captain of the ship protested to the Legation at Lima, and the Shenandoah has gone to make inquiries.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—It is stated that the French fleet is cholera stricken at Formosa. Quarantine has been established at Saigon. No quarantine has yet been established at Hongkong.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—A dispatch from Dongola says that the Mudir has received news that El Mahdi is dead, and his followers are dying fast. The camel corps and Staffordshire regiment will start for Ambuko next week.

GIBRALTAR, Dec. 3.—The Spanish cruiser which captured the supposed smuggler in British waters, and was afterward captured with her prey by a British steam launch, was a revenue cutter.

ST. JOHN (N.B.), Dec. 3.—The attacks of Orangemen upon redemptionists has continued three days—Wednesday, Friday and Saturday last. They were brutally driven out of Conception Bay amid hootings, stone-pelting and violent execrations. Great indignation exists among Roman Catholics. The protection of the United States government for its citizens has been invoked.

YESTERDAY'S DESPATCHES

(Special to the Columbian.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 8.—A Guaymas dispatch says that a pearl weighing ninety-three carats, the largest known, and valued at $17,000, which was purchased of an Indian diver for $90, was shipped to London yesterday. It was found at Mineye on the coast of Lower California.

DONGOLA, Dec. 8.—The camel corps and three regiments under Col Stewart will arrive at Ambukol near the end of this month, and will be ready to cross the desert to Shendy, should Gordon urgently require them.

HONGKONG, Dec. 8.—Reports reach here that a fresh encounter occurred in Tonquin between the Chinese and French in which the Chinese were defeated and forced to retreat. The Chinese military authorities are preparing to throw a large force across the frontier into Tonquin. The French blockade of the island of Formosa is only nominal. The French fleet is anchored at Kelung, while trade with other ports goes on as usual.

DONGOLA, Dec. 8.—A messenger who reached here yesterday from Khartoum says the officer sent by Gen. Gordon to capture Shendy shelled the inhabitants out of the place and took many prisoners. Also, that small parties of rebels make daily attacks on Khartoum, but are invariably repulsed with heavy loss. The Mahdi, he says, fears to make an open attack on the ground that it would result in great slaughter to his followers.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—Senate passed senatorial reform bill as drafted by committee, 36 yens, 24 nays. Chamber of deputies discussed public worship estimate bill. Lepere, vice-president chamber, demanded suppression of worship budget. Trappel denied chambers possessed right to take such steps which would be equivalent to denunciation of the Concordat. Vice-president Lepere then demanded to negative first clause of bill; carried by 378 to 140. Subsequently bill was adopted, notwithstanding objections of Martin and Feville to the proposals of committee to reduce salaries of bishops and archbishops in Montreal.

Late heavy rains washed out 80 feet of new dam on Yamaska river. The water rushed down with such force that the river bank was torn out to the depth of 80 feet.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—Morin, shot by Madame Clovis Hughes, died to-day.

DUBLIN, Dec. 8.—The corporation by a vote of 31 to 12 resolved to change the name of Sackville street to O'Connell st. A deputation of tradesmen appeared and protested against the action. Mr. Sullivan, M.P., warned them that they were opposing the wishes of the Irish people. This was construed as a threat to boycotte them. The tradesmen are raising a fund to test the legality of the act of the corporation.

SUAKEM, Dec. 8.—1500 rebels who attempted to-day to destroy the railway here were repulsed by the Egyptian cavalry.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Capt. Dudley and mate of the wrecked yacht Mignonette, found guilty of murder in killing the boy Parker for food to keep themselves alive, were to-day sentenced to death. It is believed they will certainly be pardoned.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—The Prince of Wales now asks parliament for an allowance for his eldest son, Prince Albert Victor, until the young man marries.

MONTREAL, Dec. 9.—Over $9,000,000 of 25 millions of Canada Pacific land grant bonds have been redeemed and cancelled by the sale of land. Five millions are deposited with the finance department of the government as security for the execution of the contract, and ten millions lodged in trust until the earned balance outstanding under million.

Our Story.

A REMARKABLE STORY.

A spark of animation and new life had lighted up in Mrs. John's eyes. It was not a very elevated kind of hope, perhaps, yet no hope that is centered in the success of another can be altogether ignoble. She wanted to see her child happy; she wanted Hester to have her chance, as Ellen said. That she should be seen and admired and made much of was, Mrs. John felt, the first object in her life. It would not be without some cost to herself, but she did not shrink from the idea of the lonely evenings she would have to spend, or the separation that might ensue. Her mind, which was not a great mind, jumped forward into an instant calculation of how the evening dresses could be got—at what sacrifice of ease or comfort.

She did not shrink from this, whatever it might be. Neither did she let any visionary pride stand in her way as Hester did. She was ready to forgive, to forget, to condone all offenses—and in the long discussion and argument that followed, Mrs. John was almost more eloquent than Ellen on the mutual advantages of the contract. She saw them all the instant they were set before her. She was quite tremulous with interest and expectation. She ran over with approval and beaming admiration as Ellen unfolded her plans. "Oh, yes, I can quite understand: you want to strike out something original," cried Mrs. John. "You must not think I agree with Hester about Catherine's parties. I think Catherine's parties are very nice; and relations, you know, must expect to give way to strangers, especially when there are not enough of gentlemen; but it will be much pleasanter for you to strike out something original. I should have liked it when I was in your circumstances, but I don't think I had the energy. And I am sure if Hester can be of any use—Oh, my darling! of course you will like it very much. You always are ready to help, and you have plenty of energy—far more than I ever had—and so fond of dancing, too; and there are so few dances in Redborough. Oh yes, I think it is a capital plan, Ellen! and Hester will be delighted to help you. It will be such an opening for her," Mrs. John said, with tears of pleasure in her eyes.

Hester did not say much while the talk ran on. She was understood to fall into the scheme, and that was all that was necessary. But when Ellen, after a prolonged visit and a detailed explanation to Mrs. John, which she received with the greatest excitement and interest, of all her arrangements as to the music, the suppers, and every other particular they could think of between them, rose to take her leave, she put her hand within Hester's arm and drew her aside for a few confidential words.

"Don't think of coming to the door," she said to Mrs. John; "it is so cold you must not stir. Hester will see me out. There is one thing I must say to you, dear," she added, raising herself to Hester's ear when they were out of the mother's hearing, "and you are not to take it amiss. It must be a condition beforehand—now please, Hester, mind and don't be offended. You must promise me that you will have nothing to say to either of the boys."

The quick flush of offense sprang to Hester's face.

"I don't know what you mean. You mean something you have no right to say, Ellen!"

"I have a very good right to say it—for I'm a married lady and you are only a girl, and of course I must know best. You are not to have anything to say to the boys. Any one else you like I am sure I don't mind, but will do anything I can to help—but not the boys. Oh, I know something about Harry. I know you have had the sense to— Well, I don't understand how far it went, but I suppose it must have gone as far as it could go, for he's not clever enough to be put off with anything less than a real No. But you may have changed your mind, or a hundred things might happen. And then there's Edward: Aunt Catherine would be wild if anything got up between you and Edward. I never said so, the only thing is, you must promise me to have nothing to say to them. There are plenty of others—much better matches and more eligible; and it's always a pity to have anything to say to a cousin in that way. You're sure to set the family by the ears; and then it narrows the connection, and you keep always the same name, and there are ever so many drawbacks. So just you promise me, Hester, there's a dear—never," said Ellen, seizing her with both hands and giving her a sudden, perfumy kiss, "never"—and the salute was repeated on the other cheek—"to have anything to say to the boys—"

"The boys! If you think I care anything for the boys! I shall have nothing to say to anybody," cried Hester, with indignation, drawing herself out of this too urgent embrace. Ellen tossed back all her bracelets and shook her golden locks and her seal-skin hat, and made an agitation in the air of scent and sound and movement.

"Oh, that's being a great deal too good," she cried.

Hester stood at the door, and looked on while Mrs. Algernon got into her victoria and drew the fur rug over her and was driven away, waving the hand and the bracelets in a parting jingle. The girl was not envious, but half contemptuous, feeling herself in her poverty, as much superior to this butterfly in furs and feathers as pride could desire. Hester did little credit to the social gifts, or the popularity or reputed cleverness in her own way, of her gay cousin who had been the inspiration of Harry and now was the guide of Algernon Merridew. She said to herself, with the downrightness of youth, that Ellen was a little fool. But her own cheeks were blazing with this parting dart which had been thrown at her.

The boys! She had a softened feeling of amity toward Harry, who had done all a stupid young man could do to overcome the sentence of disapproval under which Hester was aware she lay. It had been embarrassing and uncomfortable, and had made her anything but grateful at the moment; but now she began to feel that Harry had indeed behaved like a man, and done all that a man could to remedy her false position and give her a substantial foundation for the native, indomitable pride that none of them could crush, though they did their best. No; she would have nothing to say to Harry. She shook her head to herself and laughed at the thought, all in the silence of the veranda, where she stood hazily gazing out through the dim greenish glass at Ellen, long after Ellen had disappeared. But Edward! that was a different matter altogether. She would give no word so far as he was concerned. Edward was altogether different from Harry. He piqued and excited her curiosity; he kept her mind in a tremor of interest. She could not cease thinking of him when she was in his neighborhood, wondering what he would do, what he would say. And if it did make Catherine wild, as Ellen said, that was but an inducement the more in Hester's indignant soul. She had no wish to please Catherine Vernon. There had not been any love lost between them from the first, and Hester was glad to think she was not one of those who had in any way pretended to her kinswoman's favor. She had never sought Catherine, never bowed the knee before her.

When she went to the Grange it had been against her will, as a matter of obedience to her mother, not to Catherine. If it made Catherine wild to think that there was a friendship or any other sentiment between Edward and the girl whom she had so slighted, then let Catherine be wild. That was no motive to restrain Hester's freedom of action. All this passed through her mind as she stood in the veranda in the cold, gazing after Ellen, long after Ellen was out of sight. There were many things which gave her a sort of attraction of repulsion to Edward. He had tried to deceive Roland Ashton about her, telling him she was about to marry Harry, when he knew very well she had refused to marry Harry. Why had he done it? And in his manner to herself Edward was two men. When they were alone he was more than friendly; he was tender, insinuating, anxious for her approval, eager to unfold himself to her. But when he saw her in the Grange drawing-room he never went near her.

In early times she had asked why, and he had answered with deceiving words—asking how she thought he could bear to approach her with commonplace civilities when she was the only creature in the place for whom he cared at all; a speech which had pleased Hester at first as something high-flown and splendid, but which had not preserved its effect as time went on; for she could not see why he should not be civil and show some regard for her presence, even if he could not devote himself to her. And why could he not devote himself to her? Because it would displease Catherine. When Catherine was not present, there was nobody for him but Hester. When Catherine was there, he was unconscious of her existence. This, of course, should have shown clearly to Hester that he was not worthy of her regard, and to some degree did so; but the conviction was mingled with so lively a curiosity in respect to him, so strong an opposition as regarded her, that Hester's moral judgment was confused altogether.

She was anxious, eager to overcome her adversary, excited to know what Edward's meaning was. He would not stand up for her like a true friend, but at the same time he would never let her alone, he would still let her see that she was in his mind. She disliked him, yet— She almost loved him, but still— Nothing could be more tantalizing, more entirely unlike indifference. To think of meeting Edward in society, yet not under Catherine's eye, made her heart beat loudly. She had never done this hitherto. She had met him by chance on the Common or in the country roads about, and his voice had been almost that of lover. She had met him before the world, and he had scarcely seemed to know her. But how could these meetings test what he meant? This it was that made Ellen's proposal exciting, even while she herself half scorned it. Harry? no! Poor Harry! she would not disturb his peace, nor say a word, nor even look a look which should put him in jeopardy. But Edward?—ah! that was a different matter. It was with all the vehemence of a quarrel that she snatched at the chance put into her hands, even when she had seemed to scorn it. To know what he meant—to know what was his real state of mind! If he would be afraid of what the world would say—in that case there was no scorn which Hester did not feel herself capable of pouring out upon her unworthy admirer; but if things proved different? Ah! then she did not know what softening, what yielding, she might not be capable of. The very thought melted her heart.

And yet she had thought herself more "interested" (this was what she called it) in Roland Ashton than in any man whom she had ever heard of before. The world had seemed all blank to her when he went away. His step at the door had made her heart thrill; the commonplace day had brightened up into something smiling and sweet when he came in. But then she had been fighting a duel with him half her life as she had been doing with Edward. She was not curious to know what Roland meant. She thought (with a blush) that she did know—more or less—what he meant. But Edward was a sort of sphinx—he was an enemy to be beaten, a riddle to be read. She said to herself, what would please her best would be to force him into self-abandonment, to carry him so out of himself, that he should give up all pretenses and own himself at her disposal, and then to turn her back upon him and scorn him. Would she have done so? She thought she would, and that in this lay the secret of her interest in Edward and his crooked ways. She would see what was his true mettle, she would be able indeed to judge of him now.

"Hester," said Mrs. John, appearing at the open door, "what do you mean by lingering in the cold to get your death? You will be chilled to your very bones. You have not even a shawl on and in this cold place. What are you doing? I have called you three times and you never paid any attention. Even to stand here for five minutes freezes me."

"Then don't stand here, mamma," said Hester, taking hold of her mother's arm and thus leading her back in the old way. They did not walk about very much together now. Hester preferred her own thoughts to her mother's society, and Mrs. John was not sorry to be left quietly by herself at the fireside. How long it seemed since the time when she held her mother's arm clasped in hers whenever she moved, and used it as a helm to guide that timid and trustful woman wherever she would! A little compunction came over her as she made use of that well-known expedient again, and steered her mother (all the more gently for that thought) back to her own chair.
