Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria

SCIENTIFIC MISCELLANY.

The record of meteorological observations kept at the Paris Observatory was begun in 1666.

Fly-wheels with rims of steel wire are now made in Westphalia, and may be run at three times the speed of cast-iron wheels, which are limited to about forty yards per second for the rim.

Berthelot has found the sceptre of Pepi I.—dating back 3500 or 4000 B. C.—to be of pure copper. He agrees with many archaeologists that the use of pure copper must have preceded that of bronze, and believes that the introduction of bronze cannot date back beyond 50 to 60 centuries.

The British Museum contains what are probably the oldest pieces of wrought iron now known—a sickle blade found by Belzoni under the base of a sphinx in Karnac, near Thebes; a blade found by Col. Vyse imbedded in the masonry of the great pyramid; and a portion of a cross-cut saw exhumed at Nimrod by Mr. Layard.

PLASTER FLOORS.—A new process for hardening plaster Paris, making that substance suitable for flooring purposes, has been communicated to the French Academy of Sciences by M. Julte. The plaster is mixed with one-sixth of its weight of fine, freshly-slaked lime, and used with as little water as possible. After becoming thoroughly dry, it is treated with a saturated solution of either zinc sulphate or iron sulphate. With the first the hardened plaster remains white, while the second, by gradual oxidation, yields the color of iron rust, which gives a fine imitation of mahogany under an application of linseed oil.

PHOTOGRAPHIC PROGNOSTICATION.—The disaster to the war-ships stationed at Apia has reminded Mr. H. E. Gunther of the theory of Dr. Zenger, of Prague, who suggested the use of photography in weather prediction. Photographs of the sun are claimed to offer almost infallible indication of atmospheric and subterranean disturbance at least 24 hours in advance. The photographs often show rings about the sun, and when these rings are unusually large and heavy, violent storms, thunder-storms or magnetic disturbances will soon be experienced. The establishment of a photographic observatory at every ships' station is urged.

AN INTERESTING PRODUCT—Oxalo-molydic acid is a new substance, possessing peculiar properties, which has been discovered by M. Pechard, a French chemist. When dry the crystals may be preserved unchanged without special precautions, but if moist they quickly become colored on sunlight. Characters written on paper with the solution remain invisible in a weak light, but turn to deep indigo in the sun's rays though the solution itself is practically unaffected. A sheet of paper dipped in the solution and dried in the dark, will give a very sharp blue print when exposed behind a photographic negative. Water instantly bleaches the color so that a moist pen may be made to write in white on blue paper. Gentle heat, however, changes the blue to black, and fixes the color.

GREAT WASTE-SPOTS—The Sahara Desert, according to Mr. Joseph F. James, is a diversified area 3100 miles long by 600 wide. Summer is its only season, its days scorching, its nights cold. Its soil is chiefly gravel and coarse sand. Its oases enable caravans to cross it, although much of the area is otherwise waterless and destitute of alll vegetation and animal life. The Desert of Gobi, the Asiatic Sahara, is more than 1800 miles long and 500 wide. It is a plateau 5000 feet high, a waste of sand and rock, with few oases, and only five tree in a distance of 500 miles. Ice forms nearly every night, and the temperature often falls to 30° or 40° below zero. The interior of Australia rivals these two great deserts, and is the most terrible of all to travellers on account of its heat and the lack of water. It containes about a half-million square miles, and the northern part is almost entirly destitute of vegetation. The Arabian Desert is a sandy waste of about 50,000 square miles, dotted here and there with a few stunted bushes or dwarfed palms. A characteristic of this and other Asiatic deserts is the suffocating simoon. A large part of Persia is a desert tract, in which vegetation is so rare that one may travel 300 miles and see only one tree. Here the salt desert, with a porous crusted surface, extends 100 miles in length by half as much in width. In South America the Puna extends for 350 Spanish miles in length at an elevation of 12,000 feet. A brown grass covers the ground, there are but few trees, and a single tuberous plant can alone be cultivated. Animal life is comparatively abundant. Another desert of Peru—now partially subdued by man and crossed by a railroad—stretches 1200 miles along the Pacific, from 8 to 50 miles wide. The Great American Desert of the United States is a basin region of many hundreds of square miles of rock, sand and alkali, with a growth of sage brush and a little animal life.

THE GREAT MILL.

The Usual Budget About the Sullivan-Kilrain Fight. Movements of the "Heroes."

A New York Yarn About British Gold Buying up U. S. Railroad Restaurants.

Latest Phase of the Irish Question. An Irish-American Republic to be Established.

KILRAIN ARRIVES.

NEW ORLEANS, July 6.—The Kilrain train passed Sidewell, Miss., at 10:03 this morning, ahead of time, and reached here at 11 o'clock. Five hundred people were at the depot and great excitement prevailed.

THE GREAT MILL.

NEW ORLEANS, July 6.—Sullivan expressed pleasure this morning that the fight is only 24 hours off. Intense heat and lack of walking exercise is telling upon him and Muldoon admits if state interference should prevent the fight taking place for several days it would be necessary to take the champion to Biloxi, or some other watering place on the coast, where the heat would be tempered with the salt breezes and pedestrian exercise be possible. The managers assert, however, with the same smiling confidence as a week ago, that the mill will come off on schedule time, and it will be over and back in the city before either state or local authorities can get within a good many miles of the ring. The latest report is it will be pitched on one of the islands in Pence river, somewhere in the neighborhood of Sidell, about 30 miles from the city on the North Eastern road, with which a contract has been made. It is altogether probable this is near the mark, as the point in question is some distance from the county seat, and the mill could take place without interruption. Governor Lowry's latest proclamation offering $1,000 for the arrest or deliverance of Sullivan and Kilrain on Mississippi soil is laughed at by the backers of both principals, who say if he knew as much as they do he could save himself some worry, and his subordinates a good deal of annoyance. Representatives of Governor Lowry reached here this morning to watch arrangements and notify all sheriffs of counties on the state line when the various trains start and if possible their destination. Mississippi troops will go out to-night under command of Colonels R. M. Levy and George S. Green. Kilrain's arrival this morning was signalized by one of these terrific thunder storms for which this portion of the state is noted. Rain fell in sheets for over an hour turning Gravier street, Charles, and other streets in the business centre into a river, flooding stores and driving the occupants to take refuge on the counters and chairs. A special train with Prof. Donovan, of New York, President Walmsley of the southern athletic club, and California athletic and four others went out at 7.30 this morning to rush the Kilrain party over the Mississippi state line, and they reached here again at 11 o'clock.

Despite the rain storm a big crowd met Kilrain at the depot and gave him a hearty reception. Accompanied by an escort, the party entered five carriages and were driven to the Southern Athletic club. Speaking to a United press reporter, Kilrain said he was in excellent condition and felt confident of success. He will go out this afternoon to the West end and will witness the swimming match between Prof. Butler and Clark, which Charlie will referee.

DEPUTY SHERIFF SHOT.

VISALIA, Cal., July 6.—J. N. Wren, deputy sheriff, was shot by Charles Reavis last night, while resisting arrest. He died two hours later without recovering consciousness. Reavis is still at large. A hundred well armed men are on his trail this morning. It is not expected he will be brought in alive.

THE N. P.'S ANNUAL REPORT.

NEW YORK, July 6.—Work on the Northern Pacific's annual report is in progress. Indications are the company will have a handsome profit from its branch roads, based on the whole mileage of freight handled, originating on its branches. The earnings of branch lines, based on mileage alone, show a deficit.

SHIPPING.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—Arrived, steamer Walla Walla from Victoria; ship Valley Forge from Departure Bay; bark Sagamore from Port Gamble; barkentine Quickstep from Port Discovery.

QUITE JUSTIFIABLE.

CALIFORNIA, July 6.—Wm. Holt was shot and instantly killed here last night by A. H. Fennell. Holt was a noted desperado. He was drinking heavily, and threatening to kill several persons. Among them was Fennell. He had shot and seriously wounded an Indian early in the evening. Fennell was a mining man of San Francisco, and he had never spoken to Holt. Fennell was examined and discharged to-day on the ground that the homicide was justifiable.

IT WOULDN'T WORK.

CHICAGO, July 6.—The attorney of John F. Beggs, under indictment for complicity in the Cronin murder, this morning applied before Judge Fully for a writ of habeas corpus. The judge denied the motion, and Beggs was remanded to jail.

ANOTHER BRITISH GOLD STORY.

NEW YORK, July 6.—The latest story concerning the investment of British capital in the U. S. is that nearly a million dollars has been offered for Delmonico's establishment, and should the offer be accepted, the scheme afloat is to purchase the whole system of railroad restaurants in various parts of the country. The story is given color by the statement of Dorval, a prominent caterer of this city. He has been offered the position at the head of the New York end of the enterprise.

A RATTLING FIRE.

PENO, Nev., July 6.—This morning about 10 o'clock a fire broke out in a tea and coffee store, which resulted in the total destruction of N. P. Jaques' hardware store, Leete's saloon, Rother Bros', tea and coffee store, A. H. Mannings' tin shop, John Sunderland's shoe shop, Baptist church, John Smith's two dwelling houses, besides quite a number of smaller buildings. The loss will not exceed $20,000, insured for about $10,000.

TRAINS COLLIDE.

RANDOLPH, N. Y., July 6.—A passenger train collided with a freight on the N. Y. Penna. & Ohio Ry. near here early this morning. The freight engineer, Esmann, of Meadville, Pa., and baggage master Wentz were killed. The firemen of both trains were hurt. The only passenger injured was Fred Sibley, of Jamestown, and his injuries are slight.

A CLOSE RACE.

PHILADELPHIA, July 6.—The Cornell university crew has defeated the university of Pennsylvania crew in the 1½ mile race. Cornell's time, 6 min., 40 sec.; Pennsylvania crew, 6 min., 40½ sec.

ERIN GO BRAGH.

CHICAGO, July 5.—A number of prominent Irish Americans held a meeting to discuss the feasibility of organizing an Irish American republic to advance the interests of the Irish race. After a lengthy discussion it was unanimously decided to adopt a plan of action prepared by Wm. T. Griffin. Accordingly an organization was perfected to be known as the Irish American Republican Association, and an election of officers was held. It is the intention of the projectors of the above named associatinn to organize a land syndicate, composed of influential and wealthy Irishmen, and to send representatives to Canada, Chili, Peru and Mexico. The latter country, it is understood, would be willing to dispose of Lower California or neighboring state under certain conditions, with the privilege to purchasers of establishing an Irish American republic thereon. The money expended on improvements necessary and land will be secured by mortgage without interest or at very low rate of interest, and will be collected in small annual instalments. This money will be used to build and equip a navy, organize an army, develop the resources of the country, and establish a republic.

OTTAWA NOTES.

OTTAWA, July 5.—Commander Gordon, of the Canadian fisheries protection service, reports the mackerel fishery on the Atlantic seaboard almost a complete failure this season and recommends the adoption of restrictive measures.

The proposal of the newly formed Irish-American republican association to establish a Franco-Irish republic in Canada is laughed at in official circles. Said a military official to-day: Canada had on the basis of the last census a million men available in the time of trouble, and it would fare badly for the invaders.

Prof. Saunders, director of experimental farms expects to visit the government farm at Agassiz in August.

VICTORIA NEWS.

Serious Accident to a Sailor.—The Kamloops-Amitties Baseball Match.

Special to the COLUMBIAN.

VICTORIA, July 6.—Yesterday afternoon a bad accident occurred on the ship Duke of Abercorn, at anchor in the royal roads. Several sailors were heaving up anchor when the winch got away from them. The handle flew around with great rapidity striking a sailor, named Andrew Bitala, on the head. The scalp was torn off and the bones laid bare. The skull is not fractured and the man will likely recover. He is in the Marine hospital.

The Amities and Kamloops baseball clubs play at the Caledonian grounds at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Quite a number of people from New Westminster and Vancouver came down to see the match. It is thought the game will be a good one. The weather is warm and fine.

A public meeting is called for next Thursday, at Victoria theatre, to discuss ways and means for the early construction of the Victoria, Saanich & New Westminster Railway. The mayor will preside.

The hose team made a run, wet test, last evening, distance 400 feet, hose 200 feet, and got water in 34 seconds.

At the end of the fifth innings Kamloops scored 6, Amities 1.

School Board Meeting.

A meeting of the school board was held in the new city hall on the evening of the 4th inst. Present, trustees Johnston, Calbick, Sinclair, Duncan and McKenzie. In the absence of the mayor Mr. Johnston took the chair.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The secretary read a letter from Mr. Pope, superintendent of education, enclosing in tabulated form the results of the last written examinations of the public and high school.

On motion the letter was received and placed on file, and the enclosure therewith placed on the table.

A communication was read from Mr. Coatham and Miss Rogers, enclosing their annual reports of attendance and enrollment of pupils, and also recommending certain improvements in the building and yards.

On motion the recommendation was received and the matter of improvements was referred to Mr. Calbick with the view of being carried out.

The duplicate reports having been duly counter-signed by the trustees present, were ordered to be forwarded to the education office.

A communication from Miss Rogers affecting the interests of the school was read and filed.

On motion Mr. Calbick was instructed to procure a cabinet for the mineral specimens obtained by D. Chisholm Esq., M. P., from the geological director at Ottawa. A drawer-case for the school board's books and papers was also ordered to be placed in the city hall.

The secretary reported that the building of the west side school house would proceed at once.

Mr. McKenzie having stated that he proposed making a tour across the continent, Mr. Sinclair was appointed secretary pro tem.

The meeting then adjourned to meet again at the call of the chairman.

The American excursionists celebrated the 4th by a picnic on the Red river. When three miles above Winnipeg the steamer struck a rock, and all were obliged to ride or walk home.

BARGES BURNED.

Fire at the London Docks Destroys Three Barges and Property Valued at $300,000.

The Egyptians, under Col. Woodhouse, Give the Dervishes Another Terrible Thrashing.

Latest Advices from Samoa Report a Treaty of Peace Between the two Native Chiefs.

BARGES BURNED.

LONDON, July 6.—The fire which broke out in some sheds on the river front this morning, extended a hundred yards along the docks. Seven barges were burned; loss, $300,000.

THE FIFTH VICTORY.

LONDON, July 6.—The Massachusetts rifle team has won its fifth consecutive victory here, defeating the south London rifle club.

A TERRIBLE DEFEAT.

CAIRO, July 6.—The Egyptians, under Col. Woodhouse, again defeated the Dervishes, of whom 900 were killed and 700 taken prisoners.

PEACE ARRANGED.

SIDNEY, N. S. W., July 6.—Advices from Samoa state a treaty of peace has been concluded between Mataafa and Tamasese. The investigation of the charges that the British consulate at Apia has given assistance to Mataafa has been ended. The consul is exonerated.

SAID TO BE SETTLED.

LONDON, July 5.—The Daily News says that the communications which have been passing for some weeks between the foreign office here and the state department in Washington on the subject of the Behring's Sea difficulties have resulted in a thorough understanding between the two governments, which will avert the possibility of a controversy in the Behring Sea during the seal fishing.

PARNELL COMMISSION.

LONDON, July 5.—Before the Parnell commission to-day Mr. Davitt opened his own case by calling to stand Mr. Loudon, formerly member of the commons for Mayo. Mr. Davitt questioned him as to the periodical famines in Mayo. The witness said they were due entirely to the system of rack rents. He insisted that the Mayo branch of the land league had never voted a single farthing to foment crime. The murders of Lynen, Hudd and Kavanagh were the work of the herds league, an organization part of whose policy was the shooting of herds belonging to land leaguers. Witness said he had never informed the authorities of these facts, although he had frequently denounced the herds league in public. His reason for not giving the authorities the information he possessed as to the authors was that he did not wish to give himself on the level with informers.

POLITICAL NOTES.

LONDON, July 5.—Lord Randolph Churchill has definitely determined to stand for central Birmingham, local conservatives refusing to obey the dictates of the central authority, who desired that John Albert Bright might be permitted to retain his seat as a liberal-unionist. This action on the part of Lord Randolph and his supporters is likely to cause much trouble for the conservative managers, as the unionists will probably rebel if one of their number is displaced by a conservative in contravention of the distinct understanding that he was not to be opposed. Many shrewd political observers see in this incident the rock upon which the present government is destined to go to pieces.

The Dover liberals have asked Sir Hercules Robinson to stand in the election to fill the Dixon vacancy. It is probable that Sir Hercules will consent.

Lord Salisbury's withdrawal of the land transfer bill is due to his fear that it would be defeated in its final passage. This is in line with the policy which the tories have been pursuing all through this session. They present elaborate schemes of legislation pass them through the initial stages in parliament far enough to be able to form an estimate as to the opposition they are likely to develop, and then, at the first sign of danger, they ignominously run away, abandoning their convictions but holding on to office.

While the temperance—or more correctly the prohibition—wave has taken a backward roll lately, all over the continent, there is every evidence that this is merely the natural action, or re-action, of all great movements, in either the physical or moral sphere, that have a resistless momentum, but draw back alternately that they may strike the more swiftly and surely. So does the sea wave retreat down the beach, and the wielder of the axe withdraw his blade, and the mower swing back his scythe. Even the mighty steam-engine exemplifies the same principle of action and re-action. Nearly every manifestation of continued and applied force exhibits this phenomena, on the surface at least, while the steady trend is in all these cases ever forward. There is in this apparent crisis of the temperance cause in America, a cotemporary well observes, no faltering, and no paltering on the part of any of the great churches of the country upon this vital question. In spite of the fact that there is a strong ebb of the tide of prohibition for the time throughout the whole continent, caused chiefly by the disappointment of expectations which were too great to be immediately realized, and partly by determined organization on the part of the opponents of the movement, the whole Christian church, Roman Catholic as well as Protestant, is not even discouraged, and instead of taking any backward step all have shown firm fronts and are determined upon a further advance.

Elsewhere will be found an important notice concerning the British Columbia exhibit to the Toronto industrial exhibition. "Any person in the city or elsewhere who has, or expects to have, before the date of the exhibition at Toronto, such articles as are deemed worthy of being exhibited, will confer a favor by communicating, as soon as possible, with some member of the committee. All articles to be so exhibited will be packed and sent free of charge to the exhibitor." This notice refers particularly to the contribution from Westminster and vicinity to the British Columbia exhibit to be sent to the Toronto exposition this fall. It will be remembered that the city council very properly appropriated $200 towards this purpose some weeks ago, and the local committee that has the business in hand (names of which will be found in the advertisement referred to) is a good guarantee that a creditable display will be made by the royal city this year at the Toronto exhibition, if the committee itself is properly supported and assisted by every patriotic citizen in a position to aid in the good work. The Toronto exhibition has got to be an established and most important institution—it is practically an annual exposition of the natural resources, products, industries and arts of the Dominion—and as such should be encouraged from the broadest standpoint, while from narrower, but perfectly praiseworthy motives, British Columbia and each of its cities and different sections should seek to excel in their respective quotas of exhibits.

The anti-Jesuits estate act agitation is not dying out in the east, as certain publicists and journals predicted it would; but, in both Ontario and Quebec, conferences, synods and assemblies, as well as public meetings and an influential contingent of the press, are finding against the measure and putting their indictments in no uncertain words. When the matter came before the Dominion parliament last spring, it will be recalled that high constitutional ground was taken by the government leaders and the great majority of the rank and file of both political parties in the house, this being the basis, too, of the opposition to disallowance expressed by all the Conservative and a number of other journals. As everyone knows, only thirteen out of the whole house were found to vote disallowance of the Jesuits' estates act when the question finally came to a division. The agitation since that has for its definite point and object the submission of the disputed act to the supreme court of the Dominion, so that the question of its constitutionality may be authoritatively and impartially settled by a competent tribunal. The Dominion authorities, and particularly Sir John Thompson, minister of justice, are very loth to accede to this quite reasonable demand, for the reason, it would appear, that, if the court found against the constitutionality of the measure, the government would be placed in an "awkward position" and that the burden of actual disallowance would fall upon its shoulders instead of on the court's. The demand, however, is eminently reasonable, and within precedent and practice, and cannot well be evaded or resisted. Of course, if the Canadian supreme court should declare in favor of disallowance, the question will probably be carried by "the other side" to the "highest court in the empire;" but hardly more important questions have gone the same road before with satisfactorily final results, and there is no good reason why the Jesuits' estate act should not answer as to its constitutionality before the bar of the supreme court of the Dominion at any rate, without further delay or shifting.

The race question in the South is becoming more complicated. The newspapers in the Southern States, according to an exchange, are discussing the chances of white labor supplanting colored labor in the hot climate of that region. The doctrine of the South in the slavery days was that negro slavery was essential to the existence of the cotton-growing and other industries of the South, and that whites could not labor in the heat with safety. Since the conclusion of the war Northern capital has been largely invested in the Southern States, and to a limited extent there has been a movement of white people there. The discussion began by the Memphis Avalanche declaring that the cotton crop can be produced by white labor, and giving Texas as an example of what the whites can do in that way. Another paper denied that Texas illustrated the contention that white labor could attend to the cotton crop, asserting that "only a few small cotton fields in north-eastern Texas are cultivated by white labor, and nine-tenths of the Texan cotton crop is grown on the river bottoms in the southern and south-eastern counties, where a white man cannot labor, can scarcely live, in the summer." This view again is contradicted by positive statements from other southern papers, that white men suffer less from sunstroke than colored men when engaged in out door labor. The cotton crop, in more than one part of the country, is said to be raised by whites in increasingly large numbers, and the New Orleans Times-Democrat comes to a rather surprising conclusion: "The News and Courier, which made a careful investigation of this matter in South Carolina, county by county, a few years ago, found that 30 per cent. of the cotton was raised by white and 70 per cent. by colored labor. In Mississippi the state census of 1880, taken coincident with the U.S. census, showed that 328,568 bales were produced by white and 627,240 bales by negro labor. In these states, with large negro majorities, nearly a third of the cotton crop was raised by the whites, whereas thirty years ago not over 400,000 bales, or one-tenth the crop, was grown by them." Speaking practically, however, thinks an exchange, the back-bone of Southern labor is still the colored race, whatever may be the case in the future. It will somewhat complicate the race problem in the United States if the colored people migrate in large numbers to other states, and still remain a preponderating element in that part of the union peculiarly their own. The two races cannot unite, and if statisticians are not gravely astray, there is trouble ahead for the big republic.

WIDOW

The young folks are a-having
The jolliest sort of time,
And Mary Anna's laughter
Sounds like a silvery chime,
As she sends the lignum vitæ
A-whirling through the wires,
Or knocks Will Alker's ball away,
Clear out among the briers.
And it somehow sets me thinking
How I used to carry water
From the spring o' Sunday evenings,
For the Widow Spilkin's daughter.

Those were happy days to us,
Though we didn't play croquet,
We'd never heard of such a game,
But sparked the good old way.
The ladies dressed in plain homespun,
Without a bang or bustle;
They warn't afraid to look at you,
And gloried in a tussel.
But the most enjoy'ble thing to me
Was when I carried water
From the spring o' Sunday evenings
For the Widow Spilkin's daughter.

Things have changed amazing sight
In these forty years or more,
With the telegraph and phonograph,
And iron wagon's roar.
But I ain't a-goin' to grumble,
For I think the change is right,
And the world is rushing swiftly
Out of darkness into light.
But, somehow, I love recalling
How I used to carry water
From the spring o' Sunday evenings,
For the Widow Spilkin's daughter.

Yonder is an aged woman
Walking out among the bowers,
Where a glory falls about her
As she plucks the brightest flowers.
And she looks as sweet and pretty
As she did so long ago,
'Ere the frosts of many winters
Crowned her lovely brow with snow.
Yes, to me she is as pretty
As when I carried water
From the spring o' Sunday evenings,
For the Widow Spilkin's daughter.

So I think I'll drop my musings
And join her in the shade;
I'll play the bashful lover,
She shall play the blushing maid.
For I know her cheek will crimson,
And her eyes will brighter grow
When I slip my arm around her,
As I used to long ago.
And—since I've thought about it—
I believe I'll fetch some water
From the spring this Sunday evening
For the Widow Spilkin's daughter.
—Yankee Blade.

AMONG THE APACHES.

The Story of a Government Mail Carrier.

By Judicious Lying He Won the Friendship of a Captive Chief, Which Afterward Saved His Life—Days of Suspense.

A year previous to the time General Custer was ordered West to begin a vigorous campaign against the Indians the Apaches were in their glory, and they boasted that they could defeat any force of soldiers sent against them. I was scouting and mail-carrying in Texas for the Government, and after many close shaves was finally captured by the red devils.

A month before my capture I was out on a scout on the Rio Pecos river, our party numbering eighteen men. One day at noon we went into camp in a grove of cottonwoods. The Lieutenant in command informed me that he had lost his revolver from its holster during the last mile of our ride, and asked me to ride back in search. Instead of riding I returned on foot, and had the luck to find the weapon only about a quarter of a mile away. I then cut across an elbow to reach the grove, and when within stone's throw came suddenly upon an Indian pony in a dry gulch, and at the same instant discovered his owner crouched behind a bowlder with his back to me and his face to the grove. I had him under my rifle before he could turn his head. He had a rifle in his hand, but I called out to him to lay it down or I would fire, and after a moment's hesitation he obeyed. Then, as I kept him covered at a distance of only seven or eight feet I called to the men in the grove, and several of them came hurrying down in response.

I had captured a son of Black Cloud, chief of one of the Apache bands, and the boy was named after his father. He was only fourteen years old, and his presence there exemplified the ruling traits of Apache character. Three hours before he had discovered our party while out hunting with a party of his own. They dared not make an open attack, but the young chief, single-handed and alone, was going to pick off the Lieutenant, and then make his escape to boast of it. He was greatly chagrined by his capture. We were on our way back to Fort McKavett, and we determined to carry him in prisoner. When he was informed of this he earnestly begged me to kill him, saying that he could never hold up his head among his people again. Had he been wounded and rendered helpless it would not have been so bad; but to be taken as he was would forever disgrace him. We bound him fast to his pony and set out for the fort.

Three hours after his capture we got sight of a single Indian a mile away to our right on a knoll, and as we halted young Black Cloud informed me that it was one of his tribe, who wanted to have a talk with us. Signals were exchanged between the two, and the stranger soon came galloping in. He was one of the hunting party, and had been dogging us for twenty miles to find out if the boy had been captured. As he halted in our midst, and saw the ignoble situation of the boy, his first thought was to fight for him. I called his attention to the fact that any move of his would result in the death of both, and then explained how the youth was captured. Knowing the conceit of the tribe, I spread it on very thick, alleging that it required our whole force to make the capture, and it was not accomplished then without a hard fight. This falsehood made the boy my friend for life, while it put the other in better humor. I stated that young Black Cloud would be taken to the fort and held prisoner until exchanged for some white captive, and gave my word that he would be well treated meanwhile. He sent a message to his father to the effect that he was not afraid, and hoped to be at liberty in a few days, and two hours later we had him safely lodged in the guard house at the fort.

Two weeks after the capture of young Black Cloud I was called into the Colonel's office one evening and asked if I thought it possible to get through to Fort Concho with dispatches. The Apaches had us almost in a state of siege, being seen every day within five miles of the post, and the chances of making a sixty-mile ride across the plains lying between the two forts without running against a party of hostiles was not one in fifty. At such perilous times a Government rider is not commanded to go. He is asked certain questions, however, in a manner which decides him to make the attempt. I left the post at nine o'clock at night of an August evening perfectly satisfied that I should be dead or a prisoner before midnight. Before setting out I went in to see young Black Cloud and say goodbye. When I told him of my journey he took from his neck a buckskin string, to which was attached the tooth of a grizzly bear, and handed it to me with the remark:

"You can not get through. You will captured or killed. If not shot down, show this to my people. They will know who it belongs to. They may trade you for me, and I shall thus get back to my tribe."

A thunder-storm was coming up as I took my departure. For a full hour I rode ahead at a steady gallop, one moment in darkness so black that I could not see the ears of my horse, and the next in a blaze of light so brilliant that it blinded me. By the time the storm had passed I was a good fifteen miles from the fort, and as I had seen nothing to alarm me I began to hope that I would get through all right. Between ten and eleven o'clock I pulled my broncho down to a walk for the first time, when he suddenly uttered a snort of alarm and started off with wild jumps. Three or four rifles cracked, and as the reports reached me the horse fell in a heap and flung me far over his head. I was momentarily stunned by the fall, and before I had made a move to get up I was seized by at least three Indians, who were not a minute in binding my hands and feet. When I got a clear head once more it was to realize that the Apaches had me a secure prisoner, and that there were six or seven warriors about me.

The Indians knew that I was a white man, but they didn't know who they had got hold of until morning came. During the interval I lay on the wet ground guarded by two of the warriors, and almost immediately after my capture two men were sent off in different directions with news of it. A party of twelve Apaches arrived just be*fore daylight and ten more at sunrise,* and among the latter I recognized Black Cloud, father of the boy. One of the men had recognized me as "The-white-man-who-hurries," as the Government riders were called, and as being in the party who captured the chief's son. No one ever saw such a mad lot of redskins before or since. They wanted to torture me, and yet they realized that through me the boy could obtain his liberty. The chief at first declared that he had disowned his son, and that he might rot in confinement before he would exchange a white prisoner for him. When I called his attention to the charm young Black Cloud had given me the old man pretended to believe that it was a sign the boy was dead, and he ordered my immediate torture. I was jerked to a sitting position, my boots cut off, and the devils were about to use their knives on my feet when the old man changed his mind and restrained them. Black Cloud demanded the particulars of his boy's cap*ture. I saw that he felt degraded over the* event, and was ready to disown the youth, and I made out a strong defense for the little chap to save my own scalp.

It was finally decided to spare my life for a few days, and I was conducted to a camp in the foot-hills between the two forts. While Black Cloud wanted his son back, some of his advisers contended that he should wait until securing some cheaper prisoner. They insisted on making me out a very important personage, and it was well known that I had killed or wounded several of the tribe in different scrummages. Another thing that bothered them was how to make the exchange and not get beaten. Treacherous and deceitful to the last degree themselves, they would not credit the whites with having any honor. It was argued, too, that the commander of the fort would exchange the boy for a private soldier or any sort of prisoner, and that I had done them too much damage to be set at liberty. There were three days in which my fate was undecided, and during the last day a stake was driven and fagots collected for a fire to torture me. I had no voice in the council, being bound and under guard, but it was at length decided to make the exchange. So cautious and fearful were the Indians that it took a week to effect what might have been done in a day. I wrote a note to the commandant explaining the situation. This was carried in by a squaw, who was permitted to see and converse with young Black Cloud. He replied that he would exchange. The Apaches then wanted the boy turned loose before they released me, but this I would not hear to, knowing they would murder me. It was finally arranged that he was to be escorted a mile outside the fort and turned loose on his horse. I was to be taken to within a mile of the fort, and turned loose on foot. The parties were to occupy eminences half a mile apart, and the hour was to be nine o'clock in the morning. This plan was carried out. Twenty soldiers came out with the boy, and about the same number of Apaches escorted me. The treachery of the copper-faced devils was soon exemplified. They had posted five warriors in a dry run to shoot me down as I made for the fort. The boy doubtless suspected some such move, for as soon as released he came galloping straight for me, and after a "how-how" and a hand shake he insisted that I walk beside his pony until we reached the gate of the fort. When I was safe he waved his hand and rode away to be received with yells and cheers, and it was then we saw the treacherous rascals creeping out of the cover where they had been stationed. A year later, after a fight in which over forty of the bravest Apache warriors had gone to earth, I found young Black Cloud among the dead, having been hit four times. He had a Winchester and a revolver from which every cartridge had been fired.—N. Y. Sun.

OUT OF FASHION.

Mahogany Furniture No Longer Considered the Correct Thing.

"A few years ago," said an up-town furniture dealer to a New York Sun reporter, "nobody cared much to buy bedsteads, tables, book-cases or sofas made of any other wood than mahogany. Indeed, large pieces of furniture of any of the lighter woods were thought to make a rather vulgar display. The piano was the only exception to this rule. At all times rosewood was the most popular frame for one of these instruments, but this was not due to any notion that rosewood was handsomer, but simply to the fact that the great heaviness and density of mahogany stilled the music. Now black walnut, cherry, ash, oak and every sort of light wood that will take a high polish are seen in fashionable houses, but of the heavy, old, wine-colored mahogany rarely a stick. I think it was the musical necessity of using lighter wood that caused the revolution in general furniture making. When people changing their residences saw the difficulty with which pianos were carried to the vans they began to wonder how much power it would cost to lift them if they were made of mahogany, and this led to the reflection that fully two-thirds of the weight of the entire household furniture might be knocked off if it were manufactured in lighter woods.

"Then began the decadence of mahogany—decadence of its utility as a furniture wood, I mean, for in its integral parts it is almost everlasting. It is undoubtedly the richest, handsomest and most stately of all woods, but its popularity has been crushed beneath its own weight. A few conservative people in New York, and many in England, still furnish their houses with it, but such persons are not afflicted with the migratory fever that leads the average American family to seek a new home about once in two years. Mahogany furniture once placed in position seems to be nearly as immovable as when the dark wood was in its native forests, and the restless, nomadic householder of to-day does not care to be anchored to his dwelling."

Filling a Long-Felt Want.

Some day or other every reporter will carry around a phonograph, and when he interviews a man the latter's words will be taken down with an accuracy admitting of no dispute. Then when the interviewed gentleman comes around in the morning like a volcanic eruption to explain that his language was distorted and all that sort of thing, the reporter can quietly pull the phonograph with one hand and a gun with the other and ask him what he is going to do about it. When this scheme can be successfully operated a long-felt want will be filled. As it is at present, when a man gets into trouble because of his remarks being faithfully printed he at once swears that the reporter mixed up his words with an egg beater and then run them in. In such a manner the guileless newspaper man frequently gains a reputation for lying which he does not deserve.

He Acted Well His Part.

Captain William Jameson, of Friendship, Me., is called the Paul Revere of the Meduncook. He received the name in the following way: It was during the war of 1812, and the British, with muffled oars and under cover of darkness, were trying to reach and burn the little fleet of fishing schooners at the head of the Meduncook river, hoping also to gather in some chickens, eggs, etc., from the settlers along the route. Jameson, then a boy of fourteen, mounted his horse and rode through the town, giving the alarm at every house. He then returned home, jumped from his horse, and catching up his little flint lock rifle with twenty-four rounds of cartridges, started off on the run across lots to join his neighbors at Bradford's Point. The British soon found that they were discovered and hastened back to their ship.

The Age of Trees.

The average natural age of the oak is from 1,500 to 2,000 years; of the elm, 350 to 500 years; the maple, 600 to 800 years; the yew tree, largest of all, 2,500 to 3,000 years; the cedar, 800; linden, 1,200, and the cypress 350. There are trees now standing believed to be more than 5,000 years old.

It Made Mother Strong

"My mother has been using PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND for nervous prostration, accompanied by melancholia, etc., and it has done her a world of good. It is the only medi*cine that strengthens* the nerves.'
G. H. BEERS,
Orbisonia, Pa.

"I am in my 61th year. Have been afflicted it several ways—could not sleep, had no appetite no courage, low spirits. I commenced using Paine's Celery Compound, and felt relief from the third day after using it. I now have a good appetite and can sleep well. My spirits and courage are almost like those of a young man.'
S. C. KINKAID, D. D., Gonzales, La.

Paine's Celery Compound

Strengthens and builds up the old, and cures their infirmities. Rheumatism, indigestion and nervousness yield quickly to the curative power of Paine's Celery Compound.

A Perfect Tonic and Invigorator, It GIVES NEW LIFE.

"I am now 69 years old and have tried several remedies, but none had any effect until I used Paine's Celery Compound. I feel entirely dif*ferent for the short time I have used it. I can* walk nearly straight, sleep sound and well, and feel as though there was new life and energy coming into my whole system."
H. MYLIUS, Cleveland, Tenn.

Paine's Celery Compound is of unequaled value to women. It strengthens the nerves, regulates the kidneys, and has wonderful power in curing the painful diseases with which women so often silently suffer.

Port Kells

This Fine Townsite, at the Fresh-Water Junction of the

—WITH THE—

FRASER RIVER

12 Miles Above Westminster,

Has just been Surveyed, and the Lots are for sale by

WOODS, TURNER & GAMBLE
—AND—
ALBERT J. HILL & COMPANY
OF NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C.

The advantages and prospects of this Plot for a future thriving Town are many.

The Land in the vicinity is good.

There are inexhaustible IRON ORE DEPOSITS, of superior quality, immediately adjacent, as well as vast strata of the finest BUILDING SAND and POTTERY CLAY.

On the Townsite are a number of valuable MINERAL SPRINGS.

Communication by land and water is unequalled, by reason of the location of the Townsite on the Fraser River and the Southern Railway, while the natural elevation and lay of the land can not be excelled as a situation for a fine town.

The ground is open and clear of heavy timber.

The site has been selected as one of the most important statio s on the Southern Railway, and with the completion of the road, in the near future, must, with all its other advantages, spring into prominence at once.

Those who apply early will have the pick of the Lots.

A clear title given with every purchase.

Parties wishing Lots can apply as well, on the premises, to

In the notice of the St. Charles Hotel, which appeared in yesterday's World, it should have read the Misses Ryan, instead of "Messrs," and the word "brothers" should have read sisters.—World. Evidently a case of too much Dominion Day with the "wretched reporter."

J'Lascelle's racing mare, "Mayflower," on her return to Nanaimo from Vancouver, the other day, while being landed from the steamer, backed over the gang plank into the water. The animal swam ashore, and with the exception of some severe scratches on the legs, was but little injured.

There was a very stormy meeting of the city council Wednesday night. The "row" arose over the "park" question and was sustained with acrimonious vigor for nearly two hours.—Westminster cor. Newsr-Advertiser. Go from home—i. e., look in the Vancouver papers—for authentic Westminster news.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria

The Seattle Evening Press has been sold, the purchasers being Messrs. W. E. Bailey and L. S. J. Hunt of the Post-Intelligencer. The new management will not take charge until August 1st.

We would call special attention to an advertisement in another column concerning Westminster's contribution to the British Columbia exhibit at the Toronto industrial exhibition this fall. Everyone should take an interest in this matter and contribute to the success and credit of the Westminster and provincial exhibit on that occasion.

A rumor is afloat to the effect that the city of New Westminster, rather than loose the chance of railway connection with the American system through an independent line, will give a further subsidy of $200,000 on condition that Whatcom will give $100,000. The Royal City is a plucky one and deserves to go ahead.—World. Go from home—i. e., look in the Vancouver papers—for authentic Westminster news.

The Presbyterian Sunday school picnic to the North Arm yesterday was a great success. The superintendent and teachers did all within their power to make the day pleasant for the children, and they succeeded. Games and races were among the items on the programme, and they were heartily entered into by many. Mr. McCleary came in for many thanks for his kindness in many ways. The return trip was greatly enjoyed by all.

Among the cargo of the bark Doric Broderson from Liverpool is the steel frame and machinery for a steamer for Ewen & Co. The steamer will be put together at Colvin's shipyard by Gray & Munro, of the Victoria Machinery Depot. The steamer is eighty feet in length. The engines are triple expansion, with steel boilers. It will be completed in the course of two months and will be used in the service of Ewen & Co.'s canneries and in towing. When completed the cost of the steamer will be $25,000.—Colonist.

On the Sands.

The str. Yosemite arrived in port at an early hour this morning from the sand heads, having made an unsuccessful attempt to release the stranded steamship Karluck from her perilous position. The vessel had settled deeper in the sand during yesetrday, and even after many tons of coal had been thrown overboard, and the full strength of the Yosemite's powerful engines applied, she refused to move. A couple of hours were spent in fruitless efforts to pull her off, and then, as the tide was receding further attempts were suspended till to-morrow morning, when a fresh attack wil be made. The tides are making every day, and it is hoped the Karluck will be got off before full moon, but if a storm comes up in the meantime there will be little chance of saving the vessel.

The Toronto Exhibition.

A prize list of the Toronto Industrial Exhibition has been handed into this office by Mr. Seitz, of the city hall, secretary of the British Columbia Exhibit Association. It contains a list of exhibits for which prizes, diplomas, etc, will be offered, and full instructions in regard to the rules and regulations and the manner of making entries, and all information necessary for exhibitors. The exhibition lasts from September 9 to 21 inclusive, and is intended to eclipse all former exhibitions, a difficult thing to do, judging from the excellency of the past ones. Accompanying it is a form of entry and also an essay by Prof. Thos. Shaw, of the Agricultural College, Guelph, read at a recent convention, and relates to the duties of exhibitors. It is full of pungent "horse sense," and would do most exhibitors good to read it.—News-Advertiser.

Scott Road Dudes.

There was a time when the bachelors of the Scott road were content to wear flannel or wincey shirts, but that day has gone by, and the old simplicity of apparel so manly and robust looking is giving place to fashionably cut cloths, boiled shirts and cut throat collars. It is not to be supposed from this that the young farmers perform their daily labors in dress suits and white kids, for they are still willing to work in "low neck and short sleeves," but it is on Sunday after the cattle have been foddered, the cows milked, the chickens fed and the geese navigated to the water, that they shine bright and glorious; in fact one would take them for splended specimens of London or Parisian fashionables. The reason for this radical and unexpected change was given in THE COLUMBIAN a few weeks ago, viz: the arrival of five handsome young ladies in the district. The changes wrought during the past three months have, indeed, been marvellous, but we look for greater things still, and expect to see the young farmers shortly appear in aristocratic drags, driving tandem, even if the ox team has to be pressed into service to complete the "rig out."

East Zorra, about five miles from Woodstock, Ont., was visited Thursday by a flood. Mud Branch creek, ordinarily an insignificant stream, became swollen to enormous proportions by heavy rain falls, and as it tore through the country it carried with it bridges, culverts and fences. Two lives are reported lost.

During the six months ending with June 16,321 immigrants entered Manitoba, as compared with 18,000 for the whole of 1888.

A Brush in the Straits.

The steamers Islander and Olympian had a brush in the Straits yesterday on the return trip from Port Townsend. A large number of people went out to Beacon Hill and at about 8:30 the distance between the two steamers could readily be discerned. The Olympian was seen to be about two and a half miles ahead, and going gallantly along at a lively rate. Volumes of black smoke poured out of her funnel and steam was evidently kept at full head. She arrived in the harbor and had just got her lines ashore when the Islander also entered the harbor. There was perhaps 12 or 14 minutes between the two whistles. As the Olympian passed the C. P. N. dock she was given three cheers and when the Islander was docking the Olympian's passengers and crew gave her three cheers and a tiger, which Capt. Irving acknowledged with three whistles. From officers and passengers of both steamers it was learned that the Olympian started from Port Townsend eight minutes ahead of the Islander. When the Islander got inside there was a long gap between the two steamers. The screw for a time seemed to gain a little on the paddle steamer, but after that simply held her own. The Olympian had just been thoroughly repaired and was in a fine condition, while the Islander has to receive considerable repair before being at her best. The Islander will soon receive a new screw and another opportunity may occur to test the speed of the two boats.—Colonist.

Police Court.

Before T. C. Atkinson, P. M.

Henry Dominy charged with greviously wounding Auguste, an Indian boy, with intent to murder, on the night of June 27th.

Dr. Fagan, sworn, said: Examined the boy and found a wound on the hip joint on the left side; it was a sharply defined wound quarter of an inch wide, but cannot say how deep it was as it would be dangerous to probe; it was deep and in a dangerous position; it was a dangerous wound; the boy was under my treatment four days; he is now out of danger; he left the hospital without my permission.

Auguste, sworn, said: Was sitting on the cannon in the drill shed on the night of the 27th; Dominy's boy was leaning back near me; and Woods was along side of me; Johnny Gossett was 6 feet away; I saw the hand with the knife that stabbed me but do not know which boy did it; the knife was stuck in and pulled right out; was speaking to no one at the time; Dominy was there when I went into the drill shed; Dominy and Woods were alone together and Gossett was by himself; I did not speak a word to anyone of the three during the time I was there. As soon as I felt the stab I turned quickly and no one was near except Dominy and Woods; I turned so quick I saw the hand that stabbed me; there was no persons there when I saw the hand go down; have known Dominy about a year; have not spoken to Dominy since; Dominy's father came to our house twice since and spoke with my brother Paul; did not hear what they said; I told Mr. McTiernan last Saturday that it was either Woods or Dominy that stabbed me.

Willie Higgins: was at the drill shed the evening Auguste was stabbed; think I spoke to Dominy outside; first saw him inside lying beside the cannon; Woods was with him; they were sitting together; it was about three-quarters of an hour after I saw him that the stabbing occurred; there was no pin-sticking that night Eickhoff and L'Hussier were with me; we were playing with no one else; Dominy did not ask me for a knife; I did not tell Constable Pearce Dominy asked me for a knife; I did not tell him much; I told Mr. Pearce Dominy had Mead's knife; I might have told Mr. Pearce Dominy asked me for a knife, but I don't know.

Wm. Prescott Woods, sworn, said: Was in the drill shed the evening of the stabbing; was there with Dominy; was there when Auguste was stabbed; was sitting close to the cannon, and Dominy close to me on the farther side; we had been in that position about half an hour and were talking together; a young Indian and a boy named Hogan and other boys were there; I had not spoken to the other boys for 10 minutes; did not see any person near Auguste, Dominy or myself for 10 minutes before the stabbing; the nearest person was one yard away; Dominy asked me for a pin; a minute later I felt blood falling on to my hand; during that minute the bell rang for a raffle and I looked away; when I saw the blood I told Dominy he had cut the Indian; Dominy laid the knife beside me that he had stabbed the Indian with; I got up and left and Dominy tried to make me remain, but I would not; I would not remain as I did not want to have anything to do with it; I saw Dominy stab the Indian; I left because I thought Dominy would accuse me; I had a knife during the evening, but I gave it to Fraser a quarter of an hour before; he asked me for it; I went home from the drill shed quietly and did not hurry; saw Dominy put his arm across me; Fraser was in the front of the shed when the stabbing was done.

Fred. J. Hogan swore he saw Dominy stab Auguste with a knife; he was standing close by at the time; he was sure Woods did not do it; Woods did not leave the shed after the stabbing; saw him there ten minutes afterwards.

Squamish Joe sworn, said, it was Woods who stabbed Auguste; Dominy's father came to our house on Tuesday and talked with me; he asked me to go to the court and tell about the stabbing; he told me Woods cut my brother; Dominy came only once to see me; I am sure he was not there twice; I went with Mr. Pearce to Mr. Henley's where Dominy worked, but did not tell him Dominy was the man who cut my brother, and did not point out the accused as the boy who stabbed Auguste.

Sydney J. Pearce, chief of police, sworn, said, Paul, the last witness, came to me on Friday morning and said his brother had been stabbed and he knew the man who did it, but did not know his name; met him later in day and he said he had found the man and said it was a boy named Dominy; told him to meet me Saturday morning; we went together to where Dominy was working and he pointed Dominy out, saying "that is the man who stabbed my brother;" he spoke good English and I understood all he said. I swear I did not misunderstand Paul.

Mr. McColl, for the prosecution, and Mr. Gaynor, for the defense, addressed the court, Mr. McColl suggesting the advisability of holding the accused to bail instead of sending him up for trial. His honor concurred with this, and held Dominy in $1,500 personal surety and three sureties of $500 each to appear for trial at the next assizes.

Supreme Court.

[Before the Hon. Mr. Justice McCreight.]

Tietjen v. Harling—This was an application made yesterday for an injunction to restrain the defendant from manufacturing and selling cigars under the name of the "Little Mainland" the word "mainland" being part of the plaintiff's registered trade mark in reference to the same article. It was contended on behalf of the plaintiff that the act relating to trade marks prevents the use by another of a part, as well as the whole, of a person's trade mark, and that the word "mainland" is as much a part of the trade mark in question as in the diagram within which it is written. Besides the authority of the act the English and Canadian reports contain abundant authority in support of the plaintiff's claim. The plaintiff's counsel cited among many others a case wherein it was decided that where a mineral water was sold under the name of "Apollinaris water" it was an infringement to use the name "London Apollinaris water," and so also was it decided to be an infringment to use the name "Imperial Bibasic" where the trade mark was "Imperial." A trade mark is supposed to afford the fullest protection to the owner thereof, and the law, as the authorities clearly show, will restrain a person from using in anyway a part of another's trade mark in respect of the same article. Should the quality of the "Little Mainland" cigar be reduced it is certain to injure the name of the "Mainland" with which it cannot help being confounded.

His lordship, at the request of the defendant's counsel, who was not prepared to go on, adjourned the application to Victoria, where argument on behalf of the defendant will be heard on Wednesday. Mr. Eckstein for plaintiff, Mr. Jenns for defendant.
