NOTES AND COMMENTS.

A farm journal says that "the best way to preserve apples is to keep them exposed to the air." That is the proper method when you are sure that there is not a boy within a hundred miles; otherwise the safest plan is to put the apples in a burglar-proof safe with a combination lock.—Ex.

An American exchange perpetrates the following: The fact that Gen. Harrison chews tobacco having leaked out, the first thing we know some plug of a punster, in spite of all preventive legislation on earth and the fear of retribution beyond the grave, will remark that Gen. Harrison's life is one of chawy. Don't juice see?

Writing from Grahamstown, Cape Colony, Mr. L. A. Eddie gives an account of some extraordinary showers that fell there on August 14 last. A storm commenced near midday and lasted till late the next morning. At intervals during this period heavy showers of rain fell, after which large areas were found to be covered with water as black as ink. Two theories are put forward to account for the observed facts, one attributing it to dust in the air from a recent volcanic eruption, while the other considers the phenomena to be due to the passage of the earth through a dense meteoric stream, the dust of which suspended in the atmosphere was carried down by the rain, and being essentially iron, formed, on being mixed with the organic acids of the soil, a true ink.

An exchange says: It is a matter of surprise to many people to learn that there are still in the state of New York 1900 Indians who live on reservations and maintain their tribal relations. Four hundred and fifty of these live on the Onondaga reservation, 178 on the Oneida, 439 on the Tuscarora, 500 on the Tonawanda, 150 on the Shinnecock, 1044 on the St. Regis, 1305 on the Cattaraugus, and 834 on the Allegany. A portion of these Indians are nominally Christians, but the great majority of them have never embraced Christianity and are classed as "pagans." The state of morals on all the reservations is extremely bad, the marriage relation being almost entirely disregarded. Civilization has swept past and surrounded these insolated barbarians, but it has not improved their condition.

The new German minister, says the New York Sun correspondent at Washington, is now quite the foreign attraction, and not altogether because he is new or because his court coat is more brilliant with sparkling decorations than many other court coats. The man's face is fascinatingly handsome. He is a tall blonde, the yellow blonde, and his physique is of the splendid type of the German soldier. In the conventional black broadcloth he would have the unmistakable air called "distinguished." Fancy, then, this tall, blonde Teuton in the court uniform of dark blue cloth, half covered with gold embroidery, and the breast of the coat half covered with the shining jewels of decorations, his royal rewards for service, and you see by far the most striking figure in the diplomatic corps, and one attracting most notice at the reception. His homely face is positively fascinating in its strength, and quick, varying expression.

This is the style in which a leading Edinburgh paper does up the last Gladstonian triumph: It is done, and well done! West Edinburgh gave a brave result; Ayr bore the tide of victory splendidly on; Govan is magnificent. The Clydeside workers—men of political thew and sinew—have driven into the heads of the coercionist party a lesson that will remain, bolted and rivetted, with a majority of 1071 votes. To have won a seat, by however trifling a number of votes, would have warranted rejoicing; but Govan has done much more. It has dealt the manner of stroke which the adversary understands. Public opinion in Ireland may be insolently ignored; ministers and their allies may dishonor themselves by flouting the spirit of the constitution and reviling the people; when Scotchmen wield this Thor's hammer even the strongest government quakes. The unionists will invoke miracles to disguise the effects of the blow. They will evolve harmless mysteries from their own special multiplication table. But a majority of 1071 is the sort of fact that abides, looming large above the mists of sophistry. And if it cannot be obscured, as little can it be melted down in that sooty unionist pot which is always employed to change a defeat into a "moral" victory. One explanation and one only will suffice—the electors of Govan have resolved to make an end of the government, which has been tested and proved to be base metal. That is why the hammer has come down with so much heartiness and native pith. Scotland cheers the stroke.

ANOTHER WOMAN MUTILATED.

EDINBURGH, Feb. 11.—A sensation was caused at Dundee by the finding, to-day, by the police, of the mutilated body of a woman. The abdomen was ripped up and the body squeezed into a wooden chest. It is thought by many to be the handiwork of "Jack the Ripper."

JACK THE RIPPER.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—Another woman murder and mutilation has been discovered, and the probable murderer arrested. The murder is similar in its details to those committed by the Whitechapel fiend, "Jack the Ripper." The following are the circumstances as far as known: The man and woman, names unknown, came to Dundee 3 weeks ago and took a small house. They said they came from London. Suspicion was directed against them from the beginning and they were watched by detectives. Recently the woman disappeared and the detectives had not seen her leave the house and no trace could be found of her departure. Yesterday the man was arrested and the house searched, when a horrible discovery was made. A box in the basement was broken open by the police and in it was found the body of the missing woman. Her head had been cut off, legs amputated, and stomach ripped open. The awful work bore all the appearance of having been done by the same hand that perpetrated the successive horrors in London. There is reason to believe the man now in custody is that man. In this respect, however, the police authorities maintain great reticence.

O'BRIEN REMOVED.

DUBLIN, Feb. 11.—Wm. O'Brien was removed to-day under a strong military and police guard from Clonmel to Tralee. At Clonmel a large crowd gathered and stoned the guards, who made a charge upon the crowd and forced them back by means of their batons. Finally they got the prisoner safely on the train. At Tipperary another demonstration occurred. The people were apprised of the removal and when the train arrived there was a large crowd at the station. They respected the officers, who dispersed them.

THE PARNELL COMMISSION.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The sessions of the Parnell Commission were resumed this morning. Lecaron's cross-examination was continued. He said that during the last fortnight he got various documents from Mr. Anderson, an official connected with the home office, who allowed him to see all the correspondence with the department on this subject. Mr. Anderson afterwards introduced Lecaron to Secretary Houston, of the Loyal Patriotic Union. The witness said for the first three years of his self-imposed enlistment as a spy, he received no pay from the government, and now he only received pay in part. Mr. Anderson had opposed his testifying before the commission, and declared if he did so he would do it on his own responsibility. Mr. Anderson selected documents he thought would be useful in giving evidence, but Mr. Houston selected those which had been read in court. "I made the first proposal to come here and testify," said Lecaron. Referring to the American, witness said that the Irish Brotherhood had captured and controlled the National League. Lecaron said he had practiced medicine and kept a drug store and had become rich. He had held high military offices in the brotherhood, but never an executive office. Bradley, of Philadelphia, was now at the head of the executive. In 1882 the Brotherhood numbered 22,000 members. The number is now higher and increasing. The suppression of the league and the persecution of the Irish members of parliament gave an impetus to the organization. "Devoy," said Lecaron, "is a professional Irish politician." After the convention in 1881, both parties were of the same mind about the outrages. None thought that the league would become a source of danger to the brotherhood. Sir Charles Russel quoted from a report which read that "serious danger menaces our league which threatens to crush a revolutionary movement." The witness said he believed the words in the report, "extreme leaders," referred to the Parnellite members of parliament. The league and brotherhood sent subscriptions to the league in Ireland. The brotherhood tried to control the subscriptions intended for the league. Lecaron said that all the delegates to the convention had credentials from the league or clubs affiliating therewith. Sir Charles Russell asked that Lecaron's letters to the government concerning this matter should be produced. Lecaron said, "Do you wish to risk men's lives?" Sir Charles Russell: "The judges will read the names first and then decide whether the names should be published." Later Sir Charles Russell handed to the judges the paper, stating that it contained so grave a statement that he wished to obtain the opinion of the judges as to whether it should be noticed. The witness said that in the west of America the Irish demonstrations were exclusively and in the east mainly in the hands of the revolutionary party. At most of the meetings the mayors of the respective towns presided and respectable people attended. Sir Charles Russell quoted from the preamble of the constitution of the National League of America to show that the origin of the organization was the establishment of a peasant proprietorship and just laws. The witness said that General Jones was the originator of the communications between the "I. R. B." and the Russian minister at Washington in view of a possible war between England and Russia.

ASSIGNMENT.

BOSTON, Feb. 9.—Glidden and Curtis, selling agents of the Pacific Guano Co., and of the Ohio & Western Coal Co., assigned to Jno. C. Ropers for the benefit of creditors. Their liabilities are very heavy, consisting largely of endorsements on paper of the Guano company. A meeting of the creditors will be held soon. The firm have endorsed paper of the Ohio & W. Coal Co. corporation with a capital of five millions, of which Glidden is president. While it is thought they will pay all obligations, it is probable the company will be placed in the hands of a receiver to protect all creditors.

DEFREYCINET TALKS DUTCH.

PARIS, Feb. 9.—DeFreycinet, minister of war, has issued a circular in which he reminds the French officers and soldiers that political demonstrations by troops are forbidden and will be repressed.

VICTORIA NEWS.

The "Times" Enlarged.—A Petition to have a Line of Steamers to Queen Charlotte Island Subsidized.—For the Sealing Grounds.

[Special to The Columbian.]

VICTORIA, Feb. 11.—The Times has been enlarged to the same size as the Colonist. The first issue of the new edition will come out this evening.

The str. Walla Walla arrived from San Francisco at 10 o'clock last night and left for the Sound this morning.

A petition is being circulated asking the government to subsidize a steamer to make monthly trips between Victoria and Queen Charlotte Islands.

The schooners, "Ariel" and "W. P. Sayward" have left for the sealing grounds.

At the police court this morning Thomas Healy, for unlawfully entering the store of Gilmore and McCandless, was committed for trial.

LATE CANADIAN NEWS.

The net debt of the Dominion was $236,620,000 in December, an increase during the year of $2,682,000.

A bill has been introduced in the Dominion house by Mr. Mara to incorporate the Athabasca Railway.

The Ontario cotton mills were put up at auction last Friday and sold for $150,000 to Edward Gurney, of Toronto.

A new steel steamer is now being built at Owen Sound, Ont., for the C. P. R., which will be named the Manitoban.

Mr. R. R. Dobell, of Quebec, has gone to England to promote a scheme to construct a direct cable from England to Canada.

The Canadian Lumbermen's Association will shortly send a deputation to Ottawa to ask the government to abolish the export duty on logs going to the States.

The exodus of visitors has already begun from Montreal, and the trains Saturday left heavily freighted. The carnival ball at the Windsor Hotel was a great success, nearly 1,000 people being present.

The Springhill, N. S., coal mine has been shut down for a week past and 1,100 men are out of employment. This is owing to the sudden increase of freight rates on the I. C. R., which renders competition with the United States miners impossible.

A large deputation of ladies representing the Women's Christians Temperance Union and the newly formed Women's Enfranchisement Association interviewed the Ontario government the other day asking that the ballot be granted to all women whether married or single. Premier Mowat said that personally he was in favor of women suffrage. He hoped to remain in power long enough to be instrumental in conferring that boon upon the women of Ontario.

Judgment was given on Saturday by the Ottawa supreme court in the appeal case of the Manitoba Mortgage Co. vs. the Bank of Montreal. The appeal was unanimously dismissed with costs. The judges held that A. W. Ross had a perfect right to endorse cheques on behalf of Col. McMillan and the late Col. Kennedy under a power of attorney held by him to sell certain lands. This is an interesting point, as the Manitoba courts held that Ross had no right to mortgage under the power of attorney.

The bill was at once enrolled and sent to the house.

AWAITING DEVELOPMENTS.

DAMS PROHIBITED.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Representative Dunn has reported a bill from the committee of marine and fisheries recommending that the damming of streams in Alaska be prohibited. A majority of these streams are shallow and rise in small lakes and the damming prevents salmon from returning from the sea to their spawning grounds.

AN UNGRATEFUL VILLAIN.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb 11.—A crank named Wm. Reed, this morning attacked and killed Father Ashfield, the priest attached to St. Peter's Catholic church. Reed used a knife, stabbing the priest to the heart. Father Ashfield helped Reed in many ways, only recently procuring his release from jail.

FAILED IN HIS PURPOSE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 11.—James Willey, the real estate agent who has begun proceedings for divorce from his wife, found her in her room early this morning with Bert Clark, a painter. He shot Mrs. Willey three times and Clark twice but failed to inflict any serious injuries. Willey then surrendered himself. No traces can be found and it is supposed they left the city.

Daily British Columbian

Monday Evening, Feb. 11, 1889.

The proposition of the Coquitlam Water Works Co., the particulars of which have been laid before our readers, has been before the city council for two weeks now. At the last meeting no action was taken on the matter, but it will, probably, come up to-night. No one will blame the council for taking sufficient time before deciding on so important a question as the city's future water works. At the same time, all possible expedition should be used, and the works got under way. An alternative scheme for supplying the city with water has been mentioned. We know nothing of the details, however, with the exception that the idea appears to be to take the water from the river, forcing it into reservoirs on the hill by means of powerful pumping apparatus. Between two schemes, if there be two, there must be a choice; and no choice should be made without the council and the public being made thoroughly acquainted with every detail, every advantage and disadvantage, of the two different propositions for supplying the city with water and the means for sewerage. On the face of things, being unacquainted, as we have intimated, with the advantages that can be urged in favor of the second scheme, we should, in the interests of the city, unhesitatingly pronounce the Coquitlam Water Works scheme the best that can be proposed. In the first place, it is a gravitation system, which obviously has great advantages over a scheme necessitating the pumping of water into a reservoir from the river. Then the water supply—from a mountain lake—is known to be the purest possible, as well as inexhaustible; it is available at all times, and the high level of the lake insures a pressure that is guaranteed to throw water 100 feet above the highest point in the city. This last feature is invaluable in connection with fire protection and sewerage, as well as for hotels and other purposes. Water from the river, on the other hand, would require filtering, and even supposing the pumping machinery suffered no disastrous break-downs, the service would hardly be so satisfactory as from the gravitation system. As to the respective cost to the city of the two schemes, we are not prepared to make a comparison. The Ccquitlam Co. have laid their proposition, embracing the cost to the city of their scheme, before the council. We have already characterized this proposition as a reasonable one and, on the whole, favorable to the city. With regard to the provision that, at the end of ten years, the city might take over the water works at some fair valuation, to be mutually greed upon, some more definite clause might be substituted we believe; for instance, that the city should obtain possession of the water works at the end of 10 years, if it wished by reimbursing the company for all its outlay with the addition of 10 per cent. on the amount so expended. This, however, is merely a detail to be arranged according to the judgment of the council. Otherwise, the proposition of the Coquitlam Water Works Co. appears to be a very fair one, as we have intimated. As no definite proposals have yet been furnished by the promoters of the second scheme, we are in the dark as to the proposed cost to the city. But even if the cost of the Coquitlam water works should considerably exceed that of the other, it would by no means follow that the cheaper scheme should be adopted. In fact, it would require very strong reasoning to convince us that the Coquitlam Water Works scheme was not, everything considered, the best by large odds of any that could possibly be submitted, and we believe that the majority of our citizens think so too.

A writer in America gives some interesting observations on journalism and how journalists are produced. Says the writer: The great Cornell School of Journalism has been tested and found wanting. The New York World, animated by a spirit of journalistic enterprise, conceived the idea of testing the capacity of the Cornell school to do actual newspaper work. Hearing that the students of the university were to be vaccinated en masse, the managing editor of the World telegraphed to the professor of journalism as follows: "Please wire the World full report made by your school of the vaccination of Cornell's thousand students—scenes, incidents, etc. Must file the report by 7 o'clock, as a test of efficiency of school." Although four hours notice was given, Prof. Smith and his school failed to get their copy to the telegraph office, and the simple test offered by the World demonstrated that the great theoretical school of journalism was not capable of doing practical newspaper work. This failure of collegiate journalism has been somewhat discussed by the press of the country, but chiefly in a satirical vein. The true criticism, however, lies in the simple statement that "journalists are born, not made." Journalism is not an exact science, the fundamental principles of which can be mastered in the class-room, and any attempt to define laws and principles for the conduct of a newspaper must eventually prove fruitless. Theoretically, it is very instructive to lecture upon the conduct of a newspaper to a class of under-graduates, and impress upon their minds the peculiar rules and customs prevailing in a newspaper office. The professor can resolve his class into a working staff—have editorials written, give news assignments, edit copy, call for literary reviews, and specials; but as all this will be done as an exercise, and not as practical work, it is questionable whether it will be of any more value to the student than a like amount of freshmen rhetoric or sophomore essay work. It certainly does not equal one-tenth of the practical experience of newspaper work obtained from a year's connection with a college paper. Unlike law and medicine, journalism presents no great principles to be mastered. The successful journalist depends more upon his knowledge of men and events, combined with a faculty for the graphic expression of thought, than he does upon defined laws and precedents. There is no such thing as a precedent in journalism. Each paper has its individuality as strongly impressed upon its pages as a man's character is written upon his countenance. Methods which have proved successful in certain instances and localities, when tried elsewhere will lead to certain failure. A newspaper, besides being a news-gleaner, reflects the public sentiment of the community in which it exists. In order to accomplish this, its staff, from the editor-in-chief to the "night police," must possess a knowledge of men and events which cannot be acquired in the class-room, and can only be obtained through nature and contact with the world. Individuality is the first essence of success in journalism. The man who employs the stereotyped rules of expression acquired from Hart's rhetoric and instilled by the college professor, will never advance to the front rank of journalism. He must develop an individuality of his own, and his work should reflect his observations of the world in characteristic language. Every newspaper has a character of its own.

DANGER IN SMOKING.

Need of an Invention That Will Make Tobacco Harmless.

Experience of a Man Who Used Cigarettes, Cigars, a Meerschaum and a Corn-Cob with Very Little Satisfaction to Himself.

When I lived in London I traveled every day some distance on the underground railway, writes Luke Sharp in the Detroit Free Press. I got on at Turnham Green station, in the western suburbs, and got out at the Temple, right in the heart of the metropolis. This was in the morning. In the evening, naturally, I reversed the journey. The morning journey was the up trip, and on that one I had to climb a stairway to get to the train, and when the journey was finished I found myself down under ground. When the down journey was ended it left me away up on a station perched on an embankment. It is wonderful the curious experiences a person can have in a place like London.

The journey under ground never quite suited my taste for traveling. The scenery in the tunnel is not at all beautiful nor even interesting. But what I most objected to was a certain sulphurines in the atmosphere which seemed to irritate my breathing apparatus. I asked the company to remedy this, but they claimed that that was the style of air demanded by the majority of their passengers, and they declined to change it merely to oblige one captious man, who would probably growl no matter what they did. They said that if I wanted mountain air I should go to Switzerland. I pointed out to them that it was very convenient for a person living in Switzerland to come to his office in the Strand every morning at nine o'clock, but that made no impression on them, and as I had not time that year to build an elevated road to suit my own requirements I had to put up with the underground, although I managed to give the company a good deal of trouble with my complaints.

This roundabout introduction is for the purpose of showing how, annoyed by the smoke of the engines, I took to smoking myself. A physician whom I suspect of having a grudge at me recommended me to smoke while on the underground journeys, and although up to that time I had never smoked a whiff in my life, I took to the apparently mild and harmless cigarette. I thought I could get as little of the effects of tobacco out of a cigarette as out of any form the weed assumes, and I still adhere to that opinion.

Without intending to brag in any way, I may say that by perseverance and strict attention to business, I soon augmented my ability as a cigarette consumer. I began in a small way, smoking three or four cigarettes a day, and by industry I got to be a regular wholesale establishment, burning up from forty to fifty cigarettes every twenty-four hours. Naturally I was very proud of this and I came to be very much respected—by dealers in tobacco—and they pointed to me as an example of what might be done by dogged adhesion to the work on hand.

Not feeling quite up to the mark, I one day consulted my regular physician. He felt my pulse and shook his head gravely. When my doctor shakes his head it means at least five dollars out of my pocket, so I began to feel alarmed.

"Do you smoke?" he asked.

"Yes."

"What?"

"Cigarettes."

"How many a day?"

"About sixty-three."

"Well, they're killing you; you'll have to stop."

"Is tobacco so injurious as all that?"

"Tobacco? No. But cigarettes are. You can use all the tobacco you want—but take it in the form of good cigars."

Well, I switched off on the cigar habit. I applied to the smoking of cigars the same habits of earnest application that had been so signally successful with the cigarettes. Next consultation I had on the subject of health with the M. D. (same man) he said:

"Smoke any?"

"A little."

"What?"

"Good cigars."

"How many?"

"Oh, five or six a day."

"Well, you'll have to stop that. It's killing you."

"Why, I thought you said that tobacco was—"

"Oh, tobacco's all right, but not in the form of cigars. Take to a pipe. That's the only rational way of using tobacco."

So I began "hitting the pipe." Got myself a nice meerschaum—carved beautifully—and began to color it. When I tackled the doctor afterwards he said:

"Use tobacco at all?"

"Yes."

"How?"

"In a pipe."

"What sort of a pipe?"

"Nice meerschaum."

"Let's see it."

I took the pipe out of its silk-lined case and he looked at it and then at me in a pitying way.

"No harm in tobacco, is there?"

"Oh, no harm in tobacco," he said. "Of course not. But I should think that a man of sense would see that smoking the same pipe is a most dangerous occupation. It gets saturated with nicotine and so you'll have to quit this pipe or write out a receipt for your life insurance."

"Well, what am I to do? Chew or snuff?"

"Neither. Take a cheap pipe that you can throw away. Buy a new one every week."

I then took to the corn-cob pipe—retail price five cents. It has a label on it that reads: "Missouri Meerschaum." It is made by some patent process from the cob of Indian corn, and it is very light and portable. I took great comfort out of the corncobs. They are varnished on the outside, and when you get a good fire started this varnish begins to sizzle and fume and fill up the room with a delightful burnt leather odor.

The physician called in on me one day while I was smoking. "Good gracious!" he cried, aghast, "don't you know that the corncob is the most deadly thing you can smoke!"

"I throw one away every day or two and take a new one. I buy them by the car lot—job lot, you know."

"That's just the trouble. The varnish on a new pipe is of the most dangerous character, and when you inhale it you won't live very long, let me tell you that."

Now, what I want to say to inventors is this: Set your wits to work and invent some plan by which tobacco can be consumed without endangering life. A life-saving system as applied to tobacco will make the fortune of some future inventor.

He Meant "C. O. D."

An "up North" clergyman, says the Albany (N. Y.) Argus, was recently annoyed at the delay of a New York firm in shipping some stained glass windows for his church, so he hied himself to the telegraph office and indited and had wired to the delinquents the following terse and expressive telegram:

"To ——, New York.

"Send those windows p. d. q. ——."

The windows came in short order, but imagine the consternation of the clergyman and the horror of some of his church members when a "leaky vessel" in the form of a messenger boy, who had glanced at the original message, found that he could not keep the secret and told it to another youth, who directly repeated it to his mother—and then it was the subject of street talk. Some of the good people of the town are still wondering how the pastor came to be so familiar in his quotations with the peculiar abbreviations of Colonel Bardwell Slote, the "member from the Cohosh decstrick."

Barrels Made by Machine.

The cooper trade threatens to be a lost art if modern science continues its inroads upon it. A Philadelphia man has just invented a machine that, with the help of six men, will turn out as many barrels in a day as sixty men can make. The machine has been successfully operated, and coopers are taking a good deal of interest in it. If it proves financially successful, it will probably revolutionize the cooper's trade.

AN OLD SALT'S YARN.

How Peter Johnson Was Used as a Plug to Stop a Leak on Shipboard.

Old Peter Johnson, a familiar "landmark" of South street, and who, in the memory of the oldest deck hand in this city, has never been known to stir away from his seat on an old box at the corner of South street and Coenties slip, tells the New York Evening Sun a most remarkable tale of the troubles through which he had to pass to become an American citizen, and to run away from his birthplace in Sweden.

It seems that Peter, whose name is not Peter at all, but some thing in which all the letters in the alphabet are combined, was born in a little hamlet in Sweden. Ever since he first read a translation of "Robinson Crusoe," at the age of ten, Peter had a violent passion for the sea. One day he heard of America. He asked how far off this great land might be, and his father replied that it was on the other side of the great Irish sea and across the Atlantic. The next day Peter made up a little bundle of necessaries and started off to find this glorious El Dorado. He reached Leis, a small fishing port on the coast of Sweden.

Walking along the wharves he saw a bark of about eight hundred tons that was advertised to start for New York on that very day. He had never heard of New York, but as he clambered over the port rail of the little ship he blindly hoped that it was somewhere near his goal. On board he found all deserted. By accident Peter stumbled into the hold of the ship. He secreted himself among a number of barrels, and as he was very tired he fell asleep. About ten hours afterward he was awakened by a peculiar clanking noise. The ship was rolling horribly. Her wooden sides were being strained to the utmost extent, and Peter's heart stood still.

"Well, the end of it was," said the old man last evening to the writer, "that I went on deck. I was a mighty sick colloose, I can tell you. But I wasn't too sick to see that something horrible had happened. The cap'n stood near the wheel looking hopelessly toward shore, and didn't even notice me. The sea was runnin' high. A heavy gale had caught us to leeward and we had sprung a leak. Our ship was pretty fast and we were out of sight of land. The leak was a big one and our ship was fillin' fast. All the men were at work at the pumps, but the water was gainin' on 'em and they were losin' heart and hope. When the cap saw me he didn't fire off and cat-tail me. No; he just caught me by the shoulder here and he jest looked up to Heaven thus way, and he jest said, 'Thank God!' sorter happy like.

"Then he hurried me down into the hold and then he said somethin' to one of the men as was at the pumps. The man went away, but he soon come back 'n told the cap that all was right.

"Then the cap'n took me down into the bow of the old hulk. That's wher' she'd sprung a leak. Ther' was a hole 'bout the size of your body on the starboard side. The cap'n, he and the man then cotched me up, an' mates, would you believe it? they just stuck me in that hole up to my armpits, they did, blast me if they didn't! It was mighty uncomfortable to me, but it stopped the water from flowin' in. After a while the water was all pumped out, an' then the carpenter fixed the hole. For my part of the work the cap'n gave me free passage, and here I am."

And then Peter Johnson closed his teeth on an old clay pipe, nor would he open them again to say one word in explanation of his strange adventure.

A CHEMICAL RACKET.

It Was Good, But Didn't Work to Every Body's Satisfaction.

Said a druggist to a Chicago Tribune reporter: "A commercial traveler whose business is selling baking-powder of a low grade was in a quandary what to do. His customers saw the analytic comparison by diagrams in newspapers and naturally would want the purest. In his dilemma he came to me to ask if I could not put up some chemical dodge on the other fellows to get even for the advertisement. I mixed him a compound and gave him strict instructions how to use it. By a little sleight-of-hand trick he could pour the contents out of a bottle into a glass of water and it would turn black or green, as he desired. I advised him to call for the green color when professing to analyze any of the admittedly purest baking-powders, but when testing those which rivaled his own imperfect goods then he should shake the water until it was black as ink. Of course, you understand his own powder would always call for the green color.

"I didn't see my friend for some time afterward, and then I was surprised to see him carrying a grip of shoe samples. He told me he had quit selling baking-powder, that there was nothing in the business and that he had a better thing of it in shoes."

"How did the chemical racket work?" I asked.

"Don't say any thing about it—that confounded thing bust up the whole business.

"How was that?' I inquired.

"Well, if you won't give me away I'll tell you. You see I went into a store where I had never called before and saw a number of show-cards of various baking powders hanging on the walls. I commenced the usual story about the superiority of our goods over all competitors, and when the proper time came produced my bottle of mixture and asked for a spoonful of each kind of powder they had in stock.'

"The clerk smiled rather wickedly as he gave it to me, but I didn't tumble worth a cent. I went through the whole magic performance, turned one black, another green, another dark green, and so on, when a man stepped out from behind the counter.'

"'What blamed foolishness is this?' he asked, rather savagely.

"'I assured him that it was a chemical test which had cost the house thousands of dollars to have made.'

"'Chemical fiddlesticks! Leave your samples right here, sir,' he added, 'and I will write Mr. Smith (the cashier at our house) to pay your salary due and you may go, sir. I am Dr. ——'

"'Great Scott! Here was the inventor of the baking-powder himself—my employer—whom I had never seen, and I had been trying to work the cheap Jack dodge on him. Every ounce of the powder I had been experimenting upon was our own manufacture.'"

MR. WHYMPER'S BLUNDER.

How a Famous English Artist Made Himself Ridiculous.

Charles Whymper, the well-known engraver and animal painter of London, told the following story a few years ago: "I dined at Alderman So-and-So's last night, and as a mark of honor his eldest daughter was assigned to me to take down to dinner. She's a bright girl, but the way she drops her 'h's' is enough to make a man's hair turn gray. But I got along very nicely with her and Lady Bletherington on the other side, until the ladies were on the eve of retiring to the drawing-room. The Alderman had but recently moved out to Highgate; and I was talking about the beautiful scenery near the house, the views to be had from the windows, the fine air, and so on, when Miss —— suddenly said: 'I think I get prettier every day, don't you?' What could she mean? I didn't dare to answer her, so I said: 'I beg your pardon—what did you say?' 'I said I think I get prettier every day.' There was no mistaking her words, so I said: 'Yes, indeed, you get prettier, and no wonder in such fresh air and—' But just then she caught her mother's eye, and with the other ladies she rose and left the room. As she went out she looked back over her shoulder with such a withering scorn in her eyes that I knew I had put my foot in it somehow. Then it flashed upon me that I had misunderstood her; she had dropped an h; what she had said was not a silly compliment to herself—the sentence really was, 'I think Highgate prettier every day.'" Mr. Whymper was never invited to Alderman So-and-So's again.

The Masonic ball, which comes off on the 20th inst., is absorbing the attention of the ladies, who are making great preparations for the event. Considerable interest is evinced in the proposed site for the new recreation ground and park, and several hundred people strolled through it yesterday. Mr. Trimmins, the architect, of Victoria, was in the city last week in connection with the enlargement of the Caledonia Hotel on Front street. The news comes from the new Eldorado that rich quartz ledges have been discovered on the north side of the island, and that a stampede has set in for that quarter. Millionaires in future are to be met with on all sides, while returned prospectors with pockets full of quartz are thick as mosquitoes in New Jersey. The Texada Gold and Silver Mining Co. intend to prosecute vigorously the development of their claims on the island.—Courier.

The Cloth Identified.

The webs of cloth found in the house of Ah Jim, which was searched by the police last week, turn out to be the property of a tailor named Symons of Vancouver. Constable Pearce sent samples of the goods to Chief of Police Stewart who took them to Mr. Symons who identified them immediately as a portion of the cloth lost by him a few weeks ago. The case against the five Chinese is greatly strengthened by the identification of the cloth by Mr. Symons and it is expected still stronger proof of their guilt will be obtained before the case is heard on Wednesday.

The Southern Railway.

Mr. Chas. King, of the Northern Pacific Railway and Mr. P. Dickinson, a New York capitalist, arrived in the city yesterday on business connected with the Southern Railway. A meeting with the board of trade and members of the city council and the directors of the Southern Railway was held this morning, and, it is understood, the meeting resulted most satisfactorily. The rumor that the Northern Pacific has purchased the Southern Railway is not without foundation, and before the end of the present week the public will be put in full possession of all that has transpired. Mr. King and Mr. Dickinson were shown over the city yesterday by a number of prominent citizens. Both gentlemen expressed themselves as delighted with our beautiful townsite and prophesied a great future for the Royal City. They left for Tacoma this afternoon.

St. Andrew's Church.

The corner stone of the new and handsome edifice that was opened for public worship yesterday was laid on July 12th, 1888, Rev. Robt. Jamieson being master of ceremonies and using the beautiful silver trowel, suitably inscribed, that was presented to him on the occasion by Mr. R. F. Anderson, chairman of the building committee. As Mr. Jamieson had been the organizer of the Presbyterian church in this city and its pastor for many years, and had strongly advocated the building of the new church, and also voluntarily surrendered his house and lot on the church property to make way for the new building, it was considered quite appropriate that he should have the honor of laying the corner stone of the new St. Andrew's. For the prosecution and subsequent successful completion of the building much credit is due to the building committee, who have labored faithfully throughout, and also to the pastor, Rev. Mr. Scouler, whose experience in church building (his congregation at Hamilton having erected a fine brick church) enabled him to give valuable counsel and assistance. The ladies of the congregation are also entitled to a large share of praise for their devoted efforts towards the interior furnishing of the church. The building itself is modern gothic in design rectangular in plan, and is substantially erected in brick and stone. It presents a massive and imposing appearance in its strong outline of buttresses, gables and trimmings. The principal entrance is well marked by a fine tower and spire of good proportions, the full height being 105 feet. Another public entrance is by a porch on the opposite corner. Besides these there is a pastor's entrance and a choir entrance near the back end of the church. A few easy steps from the public entrances lead to a large vestibule, which is well warmed and lighted, and provided with conveniences for the disposal of wraps, &c. From this vestibule are the entrances to the body of the church (the doors opening outwards), and two handsome stairways lead to the gallery overhead. The auditorium is lofty and well lighted and ventilated. The walls are plastered in stucco, the roof being of open timbered construction, finished in native cedar. In rear of the pulpit platform is the organ and choir gallery, the front of both galleries being neatly finished in open Gothic panelling. At the right is the choir entrance room and opposite the pastor's room. The seating and pulpit are exceptionally fine, being handsomely constructed in native alder. The design of both is beautiful, and the workmanship would be hard to excel. The seats are cushioned throughout. The floor is graded slightly, ascending as it recedes from the pulpit. The lighting of the church is by gas reflectors. The heating is by a hot air furnace in the basement, where there is ample room for fuel and general storage. The accoustic properties of the building are well nigh perfect, delighting all who have spoken in it so far, and deserve more than a passing notice, as this most desirable end is difficult of attainment. The architect, Mr. G. W. Grant, deserves great praise for having so successfully secured this desirable end. The aisles, platforms, and pulpit have been beautifully carpeted by the ladies. Altogether the new edifice, both exterior and interior, presents a handsome, commodious, and most substantial appearance. The seating and pulpit, it should be mentioned, were manufactured by the R. C. P. Mills, from designs by the architect. Messrs. Ackerman Bros. were contractors for the whole work, which reflects credit upon them, as well as upon the architect, Mr. Grant. The grounds have been tastefully laid out and furnished with a neat fence, and all that remains to fully complete the building is the outside painting, which it was thought advisable to postpone till the summer. The pastor and congregation of St. Andrew's may well be congratulated on possessing such a beautiful and commodious house of worship, which is a credit and an ornament to the city as well.

THE CHURCHES.

What Our Reporters Saw and Heard at Several of the City Sanctuaries Yesterday—Opening of St. Andrew's.

OPENING SERVICES AT ST. ANDREW'S

The new Presbyterian brick church, corner of Carnarvon and Blackwood sts., was opened yesterday to public worship. At the morning service (at 11 o'clock) the beautiful and commodious building was comfortably filled by an audience of between six and seven hundred. The service commenced with the usual short prayer and the singing by the choir and congregation of the 122nd Psalm—"I joyed when to the house of God," etc., —to the tune of St. Paul' The first lesson was read from 2nd Chron., 6 c., beginning at the 18 v., also Psalm 132, from 13 v., Rev. Thos. Scouler, pastor of the church, officiated so far. Rev. Donald Fraser, of Victoria, read the second lesson in the book of Haggai, 2 c., from the 3 to 9 vs., inclusive; also Acts, 1 c., 4 to 12, vs., and portions of Acts 2 c., beginning with the 1 and 22 vs., Hymn 101—"Spirit Divine, attend our prayers,"—tune Milton, was sung, followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. Fraser. During the collection, which followed, the choir rendered very creditably, a portion of the 24th Psalm, to the grand old tune of St. George's Edinburgh.

Rev. Mr. Fraser announced as his text Acts 1 c., 8 vs.,—"But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you, and ye shall be witnesses unto me,"—and said: The Holy Spirit is the source of life and power in nature and in grace. The Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters and infused life into ancient chaos. The Spirit is the source of human reason and intelligence. The Spirit of God is the author of regeneration and of sanctification. Our attention in the words of the text is called to-day to a special exercise of the Holy Ghost, that is, the working of the Holy Spirit in equipping God's people, for active Christian service. It has occured to me that the discussion of this subject will be very appropriate here this morning. This place has been built at great expense and and sacrifice of thought, and now it has been set apart for the worship of God. In our united prayers we ask God to come and dwell here. Now brethren, our attention is directed to the power which God has promised and which is absolutely necessary to doing the Lord's work in the world. Our attention is very early attracted, in God's word, to the power of God's spirit equipping men for his service. (Here the preacher cited a number of examples from both the Old and New Testaments.) We find that the Spirit has been working in all ages. The Spirit entered upon the Lord Jesus and upon His apostles. The apostles were very weak men until they received power from on high. But, what a change took place on the day of penticost. This was the result, not of the eloquence of Peter, but of the power of the Holy Ghost. We have, then, abundant testimony of the fact that the men who have done great things for God have been men that have been moved by the Holy Ghost. The Holy Spirit fits men for Christian duty by giving them sympathy for the lost. I think that this lies at the very root of success in Christian work. Unless we enter upon our work for souls sympathizingly and earnestly, we might just as well not enter upon it at all. One of the greatest secrets of the power of Jesus Christ in moving the heart of men was His tenderness and sympathy. The speaker continued, showing that it was the duty of all Christians to be filled with the Holy Spirit and to be witnesses for Christ, calling attention to the fact that there were so many Christians not active in the Lord's work, and concluded an eloquent and impressive discourse by saying: What could be more appropriate in this opening service of this beautiful church than to bow before God in this very hour and ask Him to send the power of the Spirit upon every one of us.

After a fervent prayer by the Rev. Mr. Fraser, Paraphrase 20—"How Glorious Zion's Courts Appear"—was sung to the tune "Irish." This was followed by the baptism of the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Lyal, and the singing of hymn 255—'See Israel's gentle Shepherd stands," &c—to the tune of "St. Peter," and the congregation was dismissed with the benediction.

At 2:30 p.m. Rev. Thos. Haddon, of St. Paul's Reformed Episcopal Church, preached a short sermon, specially adapted to the congregation, who were mostly children, this being the Sabbath school hour. The Rev. gentleman took for his text Luke 8c., part of 5v.—"A sower went out to sow"—and held the interested attention of his audience while he described in simple language and apt illustration the meaning of the parable and applied the lessons it was fitted to teach both scholar and teacher. The full choir was present and led in the praise.

In the evening Rev. Mr. Fraser again conducted the services and took as his text, Revelations 1c. 17-19 vs. inclusive—"And when I saw Him, I fell at His feet as dead. And He laid His right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; I am the first and the last," &c.—and preached an able and interesting sermon, which our space forbids us noticing. During the taking of the collection the choir rendered "Jackson's Te Deum" very acceptably, and the 100th Psalm and hymns 252, 248, 304, throughout the service, were well given by the choir and congregation.

Mrs. Trew presided at the organ throughout the various services, with her well known musical taste and skill. It should be mentioned here, parenthetically, that, at the last congregational meeting, Miss Jamieson resigned the position of organist, which she has occupied for the past nine years, and Mrs. Trew, the present organist, has been appointed her successor. To Mr. Geo. Lyal, choir leader, is due credit for the laudable efficiency manifested by the choir. On the pulpit platform had been placed some very handsome camelias and cala lilies, the latter in full bloom, which added beauty and grace to the scene. The collections during the day for the building fund, exclusive of the regular collections, amounted to $300.

At the Baptist church yesterday Rev. Mr. Baldwin preached in the morning, and the Cow-Boy evangelist in the evening, when several immersions took place. There was no service in the Methodist church in the morning. In the evening Rev. Mr. Hicks, the Boy Preacher, delivered a good sermon. Owing to the space required for the opening of St. Andrew's, we have been unable to do justice to other church services, but shall do so on future occasions.
