NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Jerusalem seems now to be a rapidly growing city. This is due to the great number of Jews who are flocking there yearly. They now number 30,000 more than the Moslem and Christian populations combined.

Sarah Holland, a woman evangelist, preaching among the negroes at Brunswick, Ga., distributes a load of watermelons free at the meetings. The crowds that go to hear her preach are enormous. Sarah would be an acquisition to the S. A.

A recent cartoon in a New York paper, hits of the present situtation very well. John Bull is represented with a number of bags of gold hanging from his belt as approaching Uncle Sam with the remark—"It's a pot of trouble to buy you up piecemeal; what will you take for your whole blooming country, anyway?"

Talking to a newspaper interviewer in Paris a few days ago, Edison, the inventor, was asked: "What is electricity, after all?" And the practical scientist replied: "It is a mode of motion, a system of vibrations, a certain speed of vibration produces heat, a lower speed light, still lower something else." This answer from a man who has done more wouderful things with electricity that any other, is typical of the uncertainty of even the most practical workers in mysterious forces.

The jealousy of city against city is not, it would seem, confined to the maritime provinces. The Toronto Globe having given a kindly recommendation to the people of Toronto to attend the Hamilton Carnival meets with but a surly acknowledgment from the Hamilton Times. Inter-civic jealousy and the rude and vulgar expression of it are a discredit to Canadian intelligence and good feeling, to say nothing of patriotism. All Canada ought to be able to rejoice ungrudgingly at the success and prosperity of any part of her wide Dominion.—Halifax Critic.

A Canadian exchange sounds the following not uncalled-for note of alarm: We again raise our voice in warning to the Dominion goverment on the Mormon movement into our N. W. Territories. Let the government be fully prepared, and not have to deal eventually with an accomplished fact, always more difficult to deal with than if combatted in its inception. The foul idea of ploygamy is the essence of the faith, if such it may be called, of those social miscreants. If there is the slighest winking at it in the Mormon settlement in the N.W. it will rapidly increase by immigration from Utah. Let the federal government use a uss a wise and comprensive foresight.

A bill has been introduced into the Imperial parliament for the removal of the civil disabilities of women. The bill of course owes its inception to the recent judgement which voided the election of Miss Coben to the London county council on the ground that women were not eligible. There can be no doubt that the bill is a proper and necessary measure. No great proportion of women perhaps are either capable or desiring of filling such public positions, but there are some who are eminently fit, and when these are willing and are sustained by public vote, it must be felt that the general advance in the status of the sex demands the removal of a disability for which no logical reason exists.

When a gypsy dies, that is the end. Every member of the race has a horror of death, because no gypsy lives who has a faith in the hereafter. They cannot be induced to contemplate it. No genuine gypsy ever accepted Christianity. Barrow, in his many years of Bible and missionary work among them, never claimed to have converted one. In all countries, as is true of a goodly numer of other folks, they occasionally profess a sort of attachment to the ruling creed. For instance we hear of a "gypsy exhorter" in Ohio, and the other day a good Bishop of Delaware was allowed to christen a gypsy child in a camp near Wilmington. But these little hypocrisies are all in the way of gypsy thrift. The entire race belong to the lowest order of agnostics.—Ex.

There is nothing new under the sun. Even the "drop-a-nickle-in-the-slot" device is old as the pyramids, remarks the Boston Transcript. Thomas Ewbank, in his "Hydraulics and Mechanics," published in New York, 1851, describes a device referred to by Heron or Hiero, in his "Spiritalia." The "Spiritalia" was published by Baldus in the seventeenth century, and contained an exposure of many of the frauds of the Egyptian hierarchy. In this work will be found a description of a device for automatic dispension of the purifying water by the worshippers on their entrance to the temple. By a strange concidence five drachmæ were required to operate the apparatus. "In spondea hoc est invasa sacrificii injecto quinque drachmorum numismate aqua ad inspergendam effuit." ["Spiritalia," xxi.] i. e., a coin of five drachmæ being cast into the vase the water will run out for sprinkling.

MANY WRECKS.

The Great Storm on the Atlantic Coast Continues and Many More Wrecks Occur.

A Tug and Passenger Steamer Collide on the St. Lawrence. Two Men Killed.

The Canadian Pacific Railway Co. Largely Increasing their Elevator Capacity.

ANOTHER WRECK.

LEWES, Del., Sept. 13.—In addition to the losses previously reported the news comes of the wreck of the schooner W. O. Snow, of Quinton, Mass., from Philadelphia, coal laden, with a loss of all on board, nine persons. This raises the total loss of life to 30.

CREW PICKED UP.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Capt. Joseph McKee, of the s.s. Yemassee, which arrived this morning from St. Augustine, Florida, reports that at noon yesterday, off the north east lightship, he picked up 2 life boats containing Capt. C. A. Bull, his wife, 2 children and 14 of the crew of the bark Albatross, which they had abandoned on account of her sinking condition a few hours before. The bark was from Copenhagen, oil laden.

WANTED AN EASY LIFE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—F. W. Gasswein, hardware dealer, 39 John street was murdered in his office, at 11:20 o'clock this morning by a man unknown to the employees. The murderer was taken to the old ship station and the coroner notified. The name of the man who killed Gosswein is Christian Dyhle, a machinist, and lives at 1215 Sargent street, Philadelphia. He had some trouble recently over a patent suit, claiming he had been beaten out of it, and on entering Gosswein's office to-day demanded $500 in order that he might enter the Old Men's Home at Philadelphia. Grosswein refused and Dyhle shot him.

GOT DAMAGES.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept 13.—The jury in the breach of promise case of Annie Berry, the variety actress, against Geo. Woodhead, a young man with a comfortable fortune, for $25,000 damages, gave the plaintiff a verdict for one fifth of that sum last night.

PRISONER'S ESCAPE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 13.—J. R. Dollar, Albert Donavon and Gus Mercy, prisoners at state prison at San Quentin, serving terms for burglary, and employed as bakers in the prison mess, made their escape last night.

ON HIS TRACK.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 13—Wm. E. Denny, assistant postmaster of Booneville, Ind., who disappeared on Aug. 8th, with $7,000 belonging to the money order fund in his office, has been located in this state. The post office inspectors believe they will capture him within the next few days.

CONTENTED AMERICANS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The fifty Americans who have been making a tour in Europe for six weeks, arrived to-day on the City of Rome. All returned more contented with their lot because of the comparison made on the other side. Without an exception, they are of the opinion that the American workman is better paid, better housed, better fed, better clothed and generally better off than his European fellows.

STEAMERS COLLIDE.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Sept. 13.—The str. Rothsay, of Kingston, and the tug Maria, of Ogdensburg, N. Y., collided between here and Maitland last night, and two lives were lost. The Rothsay had an excursion party on board. She was beached; the Maria sank immediately. Sam Jordan, of Waddington, and Wm. Sullivan, of Ogdensburg, N. Y., both of the tug crew were the only persons drowned in the collision. The tug was valued at $10,000.

DIED OF REMORSE.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 13.—Monroe Gray, who shot and killed his wife and William Ditch, five years ago, and who after a sensational trial was sent to prison for one year, suicided this morning by shooting himself through the heart. Gray had been brooding over the tragedy ever since he left prison.

C. P. R. ELEVATORS.

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 14.—Representatives of the Canadian Pacific Railroad were in Duluth to-day locating a system of wheat elevators. The Canadian Pacific will build a 150,000 bushel elevator at Fort William next winter. This will give the Canadian Pacific a total terminal capacity of 5,000,000 bushels.

VAN HORNE DENIES.

MONTREAL, Sept. 13. — President VanHorne of the Canadian Pacific Railway, denies the report that his company is negotiating with the New York Central for a Buffalo connection.

FROM THE OCEAN.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—All sorts of rumors have been current of disasters to shipping. Ocean steamers arrived to-day as follows: Teutonic, from Liverpool, Eng., State of Georgia, Glasgow; Hammonia Bremen and Pennland, Hamburg. Passengers report that they have had a thrilling experience during the past few days, but all passed through safely.

WHAT THE COAL MEN THINK.

BOSTON, Sept. 12.—The senate committee on the relations between the United States and Canada continued its sessions to-day. John L. Batchelor, representing the Coal Trade Association, was the first witness. He thought that the removal of the duty on coal would be to increase the sale of our soft coal to Canada. Without duty our coal would be very cheap to Canadians, compared with Canadian coal. He did not think the removal of the duty would tend to sustain our diminishing iron industries, nor would it make coal cheaper. The idea was absurd. F. H. Odoirne, coal dealer, said that the removal of the duty would result in reciprocity, which would double the quantity of our bituminous coal in Canada. T. J. Jefferson Coolidge, representing the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company of Manchester, N.H., said he was largely interested in the cotton manufacturing industry. On questions of Canadians coming here and returning instead of being naturalized, the witness said his company employed 7,000 operatives, one-half of whom were Canadians. Of these, four-fifths remainded here and became American citizens. They were frugal, temperate and law-abiding citizens. Mr. Coolidge said he believed in the scheme of a Zollverein. He thought it would be advantageous both to Canada and the United States, especially to the former, as it was the smaller country.

CARGO ON FIRE.

QUEENSTOWN, Sept. 12.—The fire in the hold of the steamship Britannic started on the morning of September 5th, and originated in the cotton stowed under one of the port hatches. When the flames were discovered the passengers, with the exception of a few stalwart occupants of the steerage, were ordered off from the burning part of the ship. The officers and crew, with the assistance of the steerage passengers selected, worked with energy and will to extinguish the flames, which were subdued in about two hours. Part of the burning cotton was thrown overboard and the remainder was hoisted on deck and thoroughly drenched. On the morning of the 6th the smouldering fire in the hold again burst into flames, but it was quickly extinguished. The passengers enthusiastically praise the conduct of the officers and crew.

PETITION HELD BACK.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—A profound sensation has been created by the development that the petition of Mrs. Maybrick to the queen, praying for pardon for the sake of her two children and her mother, and protesting in the most solemn words her innocence of the crime imputed to her, never reached her majesty, but was suppressed at the home office. The home secretary will be rigidly questained concerning the matter upon the re-assembling of parliament. Another discovery is, that while the agitation for pardon was in progress an official in the home office went to Liverpool and secretly interviewed Nurse Yap and several other witnesses for the prosecution, with a view of securing further testimony against the unfortunate woman, and which, from one cause or another, had not come out in court. Prominent lawyers say that this course of procedure was unprecedented and the developments have given an additional impetus to the movement towards securing the full and unconditional pardon of the convicted woman.

VICTORIA NEWS.

Another Sealer Returns with a Large Catch.—A Blue Jacket on the Swiftsure Falls From the Mast and is Killed.

Special to THE COLUMBIAN.

VICTORIA, Sept. 13.—The Victoria schooner W. P. Sayward, Capt. Laing, arrived this morning from Behring sea. She has on board sixteen hundred sealskins. She sent down by the schooner Wanderer one thousand skins. These were transhipped at Sandy Point before entering Behring Sea. This makes the Sayward's catch for the season twenty six hundred skins. She saw nothing of American the Victoria schooner Tilly, homecutters. On the way down she spoke ward bound, with about fifteen hundred skins.

The steamer Sardonyx arrived at six o'clock this morning from the north with a large cargo of canned salmon.

A blue jacket named Darling fell from the maintopmast crosstrees this morning to the deck of the Swiftsure, a distance of ninty feet, and was instantly killed.

Police Court.

(Before T. C. Atkinson, P. M., and P. McTiernan, J. P.)

It is many long months since the police court held such an array of the youth and beauty and old age and ugliness, of the noble Siwash family as it did this morning. The auditorium was almost packed with the sleepy-eyed Indians, and had the court charged an admission fee the receipts would have been sufficiently large to make even the eyes of Constable Smith water at the sight. The cause for the assembling of this vast multitude of swampish humanity was the arrest of a dusky maiden, named Lucy, who, it appears is one of the leading lights and fashion patterns of all Siwashtown. She was accused of having an intoxicant in her possession, which she frankly admitted, and smiled pensively as Constable Smith lifted the identical bottle from the table and gave it a vigorous sniff. The constable smiled also, evidently pleased with its contents, and carefully placed the bottle to one side. After considering the case the court decided to remand Lucy for sentence.

Wm. Roe got somewhat the worse of firewater yesterday afternoon and lay down on the railway track to sleep off its effects. A passing Siwash gently lifted him from his dangerous position and placed him in the nice soft mud in the ditch. William objected to this attention and returned to the track, where constable Smith found him fast asleep. Fined $2.50 or 10 days.

Wm. Dryfield pleaded not guilty to supplying whisky to a Squamish Indian named Charley, but both Charley and constable Billy swore differently and he was fined $50 and sentenced to one month in gaol with hard labor.

Thos. Andrews was identified by Lucy, and other witnesses, as the person who had supplied her with the whisky that caused her arrest. He was fined $50 and one month's imprisonment.

John Johnson, a Swede with a wonderful liking for water, pleaded not guilty to the charge of supplying gin to a Hydah Indian named John. The latter, however, swore to the contrary and the court imposed the usual $50 fine.

GRATIFYING TO ALL.

The high position attained and the universal acceptance and approval of the pleasant liquid fruit remedy Syrup of Figs, as the most excellent laxative known, illustrate the value of the qualities on which its success is based and are abundantly gratifying to the Cal. Fig Syrup Company.

THE HUNTED CZAR.

Nihilists Emigrate to Denmark to Greet the Czar on His Coming Visit.

Cardinal Manning's Proposal for a Settlement Accepted by Dock Owners and Strikers.

Russia will Build Lines of Railway to Her Frontier for War Purposes.

THE HUNTED CZAR.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 13.—A number of nihilists recently arrived in Denmark and the authorities are taking extraordinary precautions for the protection of the czar during his coming visit at Copenhagen, as it is feared an attempt on his life is intended.

THE STRIKE SETTLED.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The directors of the dock companies and strikers have accepted Cardinal Manning's proposed compromise that the payment of increased wages shall commence Nov. 4th. Work will be resumed at once.

CARDINAL MANNING AS MEDIATOR.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—After his conference with the directors of the Dock companies, Cardinal Manning informed Messrs. Burns and Tillett that although the directors adhere to their point and intended putting increase into operation January 1st, they were still open to negotiations looking to a compromise. Cardinal Manning said he was authorized to say to strikers that if they had other terms to suggest it would be necessary for them to first agree amongst themselves. The directors had nothing from the men at present which they considered sufficient to warrant their deliberations and were firm in their resolve to make no overtures to them. If, however, the leaders would formulate final proposals they would be presented through Cardinal Manning and the directors would consider them.

WAR PREPARATIONS.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—It is learned from St. Pteraburg that the czar has ordered an immediate increase of the rolling stock on the railways in the southern portion of the Russian empire, and more especially on those along the Austro-Hungarian frontier. This action is the realut of repeated urgings on the part of the Russian minister of war, who has taken the ground that in case of war the facilities for the effective mobilization of the army would be wholly inadequate. Austria has within the last year added greatly to the capacity of her railroads for the quick transportation of troops, and if Germany has not done likewise it is only because she did not need to, her railway system having years ago been brought into a state of perfection from a military point of view. Thus while the three emperors are talking peace to one another, and to the world, these ministers are apparently acting on the principle that the best way to preserve peace is to be prepared for war. At least this seems to be the only explanation that can reconcile the words of the rulers with the acts which they permit on the part of their representatives. The cost of the proposed improvements in the Russian railway facilities is estimated at 2,000,000 roubles and the actual amount expended will probably be much greater, unless the Russian government officials and contractors have recently changed their methods.

CHOLERA IN TURKEY.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 12.—Cholera has made its appearance here.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Want to Have Some Say Themselves.

EDITOR COLUMBIAN.—SIR: The good people of Port Haney were considerably surprised to learn through your columns, that a certain individual had been appointed to represent them before the Hon. Mr. Dewdney, in regard to certain road matters. However just the claims of the people may be for a road into Stave river valley, nevertheless, when a deputation is appointed to represent them, they wish to have something to say about such appointment outside of the individual himself. PUBLIC.

Port Haney, Sept. 11th, 1889.

LATE CANADIAN NEWS.

O'Connor will be given a reception on his arrival in Toronto the week after next.

On Tuesday the receipts at the *turnstile for the first day of the in*dustrial exposition, Toronto, were over $800, which is ahead of last year. The weather is very fine, and the attendance steadily increasing.

Lord Stanley, governor-general, will arrive at Winnipeg on the evening of Monday, Sept. 23rd, remaining in the city four days. On Oct. 4th he will open the annual rifle meeting of Assiniboia at Regina.

A Montreal despatch of yesterday says: Two young men, John Hennessey and Michael Mulcahy, were arrested last March, charged with having committed a criminal assault on Melina Roberts. Hennessey was tried in June, convicted, and sentenced to fourteen years in the penitentiary, loudly protesting his innocence. Mulcahy was tried to-day, and the watchman, who saw the whole affair, swore positively that neither Mulcahy nor Hennessey was implicated. The minister of justice will be asked to investigate, and release Hennessey.

Friday Evening, Sept. 13, 1889.

In writing on the subject of the Southern Railway, a few weeks ago, in anticipation of a proposed new agreement between the city and the company and the company and the contractor, we mentioned two points, at least, which it was desirable should be explicitly stated and understood, viz., that the particular limits should be defined in the agreement within which the main bridge over the Fraser should strike the north bank of the river at this city, and that the full amount of the bonus of $150,000 should be paid to the company upon the completion of the road to Bellingham Bay with certain other necessary and accompanying works, and not before. The stipulation with regard to the bridge, we are glad to notice, has been satisfactorily incorporated in the agreement as published yesterday; and, while the bonus is not provided to be paid in the manner suggested, clause seven of the agreement between the city and the company (providing for the reverting of lands to the city, and also for the refunding of the bonus, in the event of the company failing to fulfil its agreement) insures the city against all loss in any event. So far the city's interests seem well protected and the agreement as a whole to be the most fair and advantageous for the city yet made in railway matters. Clause five of the agreement between the company and the contractor might, however, we think, in the interests of the city, be more explicit than it is, in so far as it refers to the steam ferry which is to be constructed and maintained in case the contractor should decide not to build the bridge at once. The bridge, it is clearly stated, will be a free traffic as well as a railway bridge, and the ferry, which may have to serve in lieu of the bridge for a few years, should not be less. We trust that it may yet be possible to make clause five of the agreement between the company and the contractor more explicit on this point. Such may be the present intention of the clause, but it does not appear to us to be sufficiently clear on so important a matter. The agreement and also the by-law, it has been seen, provide for a compensation fund of $5,000, out of which it is agreed to reimburse the company for actual expenditures (not being moneys expended in construction) made by it since the ratification of the Sheafe contract, last year. The $5,000, however, will not be handed over absolutely to the company, but so much of it as may be proper will be paid by the city council to the company, on the detailed statement of the company's expenditures being submitted to the council in the same manner as any ordinary account.

Fish-culture by means of hatcheries has undoubtedly passed beyond the experimental stage and is being more widely recognized every day as a certain and satisfactory method whereby depleted fish streams may be re stocked, depletion itself checked and prevented, and an increased productiveness realized and maintained. The inspector of fisheries has kindly called our attention to an article in the current number of Forest and Stream, entitled "a British Fish Hatchery," "by an English fishery commissioner," which shows the very large importance that our nearly always conservative friends in the Old Country are beginning to attach to fish-culture as a means of restoring fished out and barren streams and other waters to their former or even greater productiveness. "In consequence of the depleted condition of many of the rivers in the United Kingdom," says the writer of the article referred to, "rendered so by the multifarious malpractices of mankind, the science of fish-culture has become a recognized necessity, and is now resorted to as a means of resuscitating barren locations and restoring decayed fisheries to a condition of plenteousness. During the past few years a steady advance has been made in the science and not only has the number of fish-culture establishments increased, but the methods of hatching and rearing fish through the various stages of development have undergone great improvements, so that the science has now been brought within the range of practical utility. At the present time the demands for fish wherewith to stock waters are in excess of supplies, and coarse fish are quite as much needed as trout. Being impressed with the large amount of decay that prevails in our rivers and the depleted condition of waters capable of sustaining fish, and recognizing in fish-culture a power sufficient to restore them to a state of plenty, Mr. William Burgess, some years ago, founded a fishery at Malvern Wells, in the Midland, on a large scale, and called it the Midland Counties Fish-culture Establishment. The success attending its formation was such as to induce him to considerably extend its scope beyond his original conception, with the result that it has now become the largest establishment of the kind in England. Its object is to develop fish life in the waters of the United Kingdom to meet the dual requirements of food and sport. In order to carry this into effect upon a sound, practical and extensive basis, every facility has been provided for hatching ova and rearing fish in sufficient quantities to meet existing demands. * * * In all his operations Mr. Burgess emulates nature as closely as possible, not only with a view of raising strong, vigorous fish, but in order to rear them with the lowest possible mortality. Two hatcheries exist, one being for the incubation of Salmonidæ ova, and the other for those of coarse fish, such as perch, roach, carp, tench, etc. The Salmonidæ hatchery is large and roomy, and is capable of bringing to life many millions of young fish. The mode of hatching is that known as the 'overflow system,' the incubating apparatus being supplied with spring water, which is concentrated in a colossal reservoir, whence it passes through filters into the hatchery. The hatching boxes are slightly elevated one above another in order to provide for a slight fall of water, which has the effect of aerating it throughout. The species and varieties of fish hatched embrace not only all British, Scottish and Irish Salmonidæ, but transatlantic varieties as well, the ova of the latter having been courteously granted by Col. Marshall McDonald, U.S. fish commissioner. The ova are laid down in the winter months, and in the spring the hatching house is crowded with struggling masses of young fish. Here they remain until nature deprives them of their self-contained store of food, when they are turned adrift to seek their living in nursery ponds, pending distribution in public waters. Although an ample supply of natural food exists in the ponds, the fish are fed artificially as well, thus supplementing the food store. In addition to Salmonidæ culture, a very large amount of space is devoted to the artificial propagation of coarse fish, such as perch, carp, tench, roach, etc." The pisiculturists of the Old Country are not doing things by halves, it will be seen. Recognizing the value of a principle, they are applying it most thoroughly. In fish culture there are great possibilities, certainties we might say, for the conservation and building up of our splendid fishing industries. Already we have, unmistakably, experienced benefits from the salmon hatchery on this river, and it may be confidently anticipated that much more good is to follow. When, in addition to our native and lordly salmon, other varieties of fish are introduced, and our numerous rivers, lakes, and sea arms stocked to their full capacity, what dimensions will the piscatorial resources of the province not attain to?

AN ALIBI.

Being False It Could Not Withstand Investigation.

The man who sits down to deliberately plan a crime works every point and detail to one common center—an alibi. The law has common sense enough in this one particular to presume that a man who is in Boston, for instance, when a murder is committed in Cincinnati could not have fired the shot or struck the blow. Therefore, let one accused of crime prove to the jury that he was at some other point at a certain critical hour, and he must be declared innocent. This knowledge makes the alibi a favorite defense. If not clearly proved, it always raises doubts and affords opportunity for argument. On the other hand, however, when an alibi is fairly beaten by the prosecution, then circumstantial evidence becomes the death trap of the accused, and he has no show.

One of the best laid alibis I ever ran up against in my career as a detective, and one of the easiest to work out after I got the end of the thread in hand, was put forward in a case in Iowa about twenty years ago. The situation was this: In a small village in the western part of the State lived a Miss Clarinda Moore, a spinster about forty-five years of age. She was worth fifty thousand dollars, and she had adopted a boy named Byron Fergus. At the date of which I am writing this boy was no longer a boy, but a young man of twenty-three. He was employed as a clerk in a dry-goods house, and boarded and lodged at home. He was adopted at the age of twelve, and on the day he reached his majority Miss Moore made a will leaving him every thing. This fact was known to all in the village. Fergus was a model young man. No one could point out a single bad habit. He was trusted and respected by all, and had he been accused of the slightest dishonesty no one would have believed the charge.

Ina smaller village six miles away Fergus had an aunt who was a widow and lived alone, with the exception of having the company of a servant girl. He was in the habit of going over there about once in two months and remaining over Sunday. On these trips he drove a horse and buggy belonging to the village cooper. The horse had a peculiar habit which will be described later on. One Saturday evening of a July day Fergus drove away on one of these trips. There were two or three women at the gate in company with Miss Moore when he drove away. The only thing out of the usual run was the remark that Byron looked rather pale and seemed a bit nervous, but probably this would never have been thought of but for what came to pass.

At eleven o'clock that night there was a thunder-storm, and an insurance agent who was on the road between the two villages, with horse and buggy, drove into a fence corner and sheltered himself as well as possible with the waterproofs. In the midst of the storm a horse and buggy came along. The driver was so enveloped by waterproofs that the agent could not tell whether he was old or young, large or small, white or black. At that spot the road had been lately graded up and was very soft. The stranger was urging the horse to trot, but the beast found the mud too deep and could only proceed at a walk. As the strange horse came opposite there was a long, vivid flash of lightning, and the agent saw that the animal had his head turned to the right and his tongue out. This was the peculiar habit of the cooper's horse when on a walk. When trotting he held up his head and kept his tongue back. The agent identified the horse to his perfect satisfaction, and called out to the driver, asking who he was. Instead of halting or replying the man struck the horse sharply with the whip and was out of sight in a moment.

"That's old Shepperd (the cooper), and he's afraid I am a highwayman," laughed the agent, and, the rain now beginning to cease, he made ready to resume his journey.

Miss Moore was an early riser, and, moreover never missed church services. As the day was fine and she was not seen at church, two or three of her friends called at the house on their way to ascertain her excuse. They found the curtains down and the doors locked. As they knew of young Fergus going to his aunt's the evening previous they reasoned it out that he must have returned during the night for Miss Moore, she perhaps being wanted for an emergency. This theory satisfied them until about four o'clock in the afternoon, when one of them returned to gather a bouquet of flowers. She then noticed bloody finger-marks on the back door, and, trying the door, found it unlocked. She dared not enter the house, but two or three men were summoned to make an investigation, and in a few moments it was discovered that a murder had been committed. The dead body of Miss Moore was found in the sitting-room at the door of her bed room. She had been struck three terrible blows with a club or other blunt weapon, each one breaking the skull.

I was visiting the sheriff at this time, and we were driving through the village when the first alarm was sounded. I was, therefore, at the house among the first, and being placed in charge by the sheriff I kept the people out until I could make an investigation. The murderer had not obtained forcible entry to the house. Not a single article of value had been removed, nor had any ransacking been done. The woman had been struck down where the body lay, but her hands were clenched as if she had grasped the weapon of death and it had been pulled away from her. The palm of one hand was torn and bleeding. I did not know either the dead woman or Fergus, but I wanted authority to arrest the latter. When this fact became known I was regarded as an idiot or a lunatic. A general cry went up that Fergus could no more be suspected than an angel in Heaven, but while the sheriff was left to secure the necessary papers I drove out to interview the young man and break the news to him. If Fergus was guilty his defense would be an alibi, and he had carefully arranged the details. He would be expecting the news, and be braced up to play a part.

I found him making ready to hitch up drive back. He had never seen me before, and he did not know my profession. As I entered the barn he looked startled and turned pale, but recovered himself after a minute, and asked the nature of my business.

"You know, of course, that Miss Moore is dead?" I carelessly replied.

"How—how should I know it?" he exclaimed, turning very white.

"Well, she is dead, poor thing."

"And do they charge me with it?"

"With what?"

"Her murder?"

"I hadn't said she was murdered. I told you simply that she was dead. How did you know she had been murdered?"

He saw the trap he had fallen into, and he gasped and stammered and did his best to smooth it over. I pretended not to lay it up as a point against him, and speedily arranged that he should return in my vehicle and leave the cooper's rig where it was. After the first shock he braced up wonderfully, and his demeanor on the way home was entirely that of an innocent man. He expressed great willingness to give us all possible information, but at the same time advanced and clung to the theory that no one but a tramp could have been guilty of the crime. Upon reaching home he displayed considerable grief and emotion. In fact, he rather overdid it. It was more like acting out a part. The people were indignant that he should be suspected, and he was not put under restraint. Indeed, no warrant had been issued for him.

Early the next morning, satisfied in my own mind that Fergus was the murderer, I drove out to his aunt's. I found that he arrived there at seven o'clock Saturday night. Half an hour later he complained of headache and went to bed, saying he would be down again by nine o'clock. As he did not keep his promise, the hired girl knocked on his door at that hour, but receiving no reply, was told not to disturb him. He was not seen by the inmates of the house until seven o'clock Sunday morning. The girl was up at five, and as she crossed the yard she saw that his window was up, and some of his clothing was hanging in the sun. At the barn I found the cooper's buggy washed clean. Fergus had done this Sunday forenoon. He had not made a good job on the horse, however, and I found plenty of mud on his fetlocks. As it was dusty Saturday night when he was driven over, this mud must have been picked up after the storm. I found the harness stiff and damp from being wet, and the cloth cushion of the buggy was still damp. Hunting further, I found the fresh tracks of horse and buggy turning into the barn-yard after the rain. The window of the room occupied by Fergus opened on the roof of the shed. At the lower edge of the roof stood a leach. On the edges of this leach and on the roof I found mud. On the carpet in Fergus' room I found more of it. He had scraped and cleaned his boots and flung the dirt into a stove, whence I got half a pound.

All this I got without the aunt suspecting that I was after proofs. I then returned to the scene of the murder, and after an hour's search discovered the place where a horse had been hitched for some time. It was in the rear of the house, on an open space and under a tree, and the horse had pawed up the ground and gnawed the bark of the tree. The footprints of a man could be faintly traced across the garden, and I had no doubt that Fergus came and went this way. On the fourth day after the funeral I learned from the insurance man what he had seen during the storm, and then a warrant was issued and Fergus was taken into custody. By this time the townspeople had begun to think it a queer case. Fergus had gone over the house and declared that nothing had been taken. No suspicious characters had been noticed in the neighborhood. Jewelry and money had been left lying on the bureau, showing that the object could not have been plunder. Did the woman have an enemy? No, not one, as far as we could learn. Who could profit by her death? No one but Fergus, and yet this was one of the strong points he brought forward. It was known to a score of people that she had made her will in his favor. Would not every thing be his at her death?

To clinch our case and make circumstantial evidence good we must show a motive. This seemed hopeless, but I went at the task, hoping evidence might aid me if Fergus was guilty. I examined his personal effects over and over again in search of a hint, but for two weeks after he had been sent to jail I discovered nothing. Then I got the clue where I ought to have secured it before. In a drawer in his desk I found several advertisements plainly in the interest of swindlers. One of them read:

"A steady young man with $10,000 cash capital can double it in one year in a legitimate enterprise. For particulars address Box 891," etc.

Another read:

"If you have nerve and $5,000 in cash we will make you a millionaire in one year. We permit the fullest investigation before investment. Write for particulars."

A third just hit his case:

"Are you a young and ambitious man, feeling that you could get ahead if properly backed and encouraged? Have you any money? Can you get from $1,000 to $3,000? If so we will positively guarantee you $100 in return for every dollar, and inside of a year."

I felt sure he had written some of these parties, but as I could not find any letters from them I set out to hunt them up in person. They were bold-faced swindlers, and they bothered me some, but in the end I got five letters written by Fergus. In one of them he stated that he would soon have money to invest, and expressed his satisfaction at the particulars of the speculation as far as given him. The greed of gain, then, was his incentive. The woman who had been mother and sister to him came of a long-lived race, and was in good health, and a month before her death was told by a doctor in the hearing of Fergus that she was likely to live to be ninety or one hundred years old. Until her death the young man could hope for little or nothing, as she was obliged to make the interest of her capital support her.

Murderer or not, the boy was the legal heir, and he employed the best legal talent in the West to defend him. The lawyers might take every dollar if they could but clear him. It was a veritable fight for life with all the money and most of the talent on one side, but that web of circumstantial evidence kept drawing closer and closer, and it could neither be broken nor explained away. Had Fergus been innocent a frank reply to each question would have explained it. Being guilty, his evasions only made matters worse. The jury were out fourteen hours before finding a verdict of guilty, but within an hour he had made a full confession. He told me that he had been planning for two months, and that he believed he had arranged details until his case could withstand the most minute investigation of the highest detective talent.—N. Y. Sun.

A GOOD BEAR STORY.

But Unfortunately It Has a Very Sad and Unsatisfactory Ending.

Many years ago a New Hampshire boy found a very young bear cub near Lake Winnipisseogee, and carried it home with him. It was fed and brought up about the house of the boy's father, and became as tame as a dog, says the New York Ledger. Every day its youthful captor had to go to a school at some distance, and by degrees the bear became his daily companion. At first the other scholars were shy of the creature's acquaintance, but ere long it became their regular playfellow, and they delighted in sharing with it the little store of provisions which they brought for their day's sustenance in small bags. After two years of civilization, however, the bear wandered to the woods, and did not return. Search was made for him, but in vain.

Four succeeding years passed away, and in the interval changes had occurred about the school alluded to. An old dame had succeeded to the ancient master, and a new generation of pupils had taken the place of the former ones. One very cold winter day, while the school-mistress was busy with her humble lessons, a boy chanced to leave the door half open on his re-entrance, and suddenly a large bear walked in. The consternation of the old lady and her boys and girls was unspeakable. Both school-mistress and pupils would fain have been "abroad," but the bear was in the path, and all that could be done was to fly as far off as possible, and hide behind the benches.

But the bear troubled nobody. He walked quietly up to the fire-place and warmed himself, exhibiting much satisfaction in his countenance during the process. He remained thus about a quarter of an hour, and then walked up to the wall where the provender bags and baskets of the pupils were suspended. Standing on his hind feet he then took hold of these successively, put his paws into them and made free with the bread, fruit and other eatables therein contained. He next tried the school-mistress' desk, where some little provisions usually were; but finding it firmly shut, he went up again to the fire, and after a few minutes' stay before it he walked out by the way he came.

As soon as the school-mistress and her pupils had courage to move, the alarm was given to the neighbors. Several young men immediately started after the bear, and as its track was perfectly visible in the snow, they soon came up with it and killed it. Then it was that, by certain marks upon its skin, some of its pursuers recognized in the poor bear no enemy, but an old friend of their own recent school days. Great regret was felt for the death of the creature. It was like killing a human friend rather than a wild animal.

Japanese Kindness.

A picture of Japanese life drawn by Prof. Morse shows such a pleasant relation existing between the human and the brute creation that no Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is needed: "Birds build their nests in the city houses, wild fowl, geese and ducks alight in the public parks, wild deer trot about the street. He had actually been followed by wild deer in the streets, nibbling melon rind out of his hand, as tame as calves and lambs on our Michigan farms. A dog goes to sleep in the busiest streets; men turn aside to not to disturb him. One day a beautiful heron alighted on the limb of a tree, and the busy jostling throng stopped. Every man's hand went into his pocket, just as they would with us, but instead of bringing out a "popper," out came pencil and sketching paper.

It Made Mother Strong

"My mother has been using PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND for nervous prostration, accompanied by melancholia, etc., and it has done her a world of good. It is the only medicine that strength ens the nerves.' G. H. BEERS, Orbisonia, Pa.

"I am in my 64th year. Have been afflicted in several ways—could not sleep, had no appetite no courage, low spirits. I commenced using Paine's Celery Compound, and felt relief from the third day after using it. I now have a good appetite and can sleep well. My spirits and courage are almost like those of a young man.' S. C. KINKAID, D. D., Gonzales, La.

Paine's Celery Compound

Strengthens and builds up the old, and cures their infirmities. Rheumatism, indigestion and nervousness yield quickly to the curative power of Paine's Celery Compound.

A Perfect Tonic and Invigorator, It GIVES NEW LIFE.

"I am now 69 years old and have tried several remedies, but none had any effect until I used Paine's Celery Compound. I feel entirely different for the short time I have used it. I can walk nearly straight, sleep sound and well, and feel as though there was new life and energy coming into my whole system." H. MYLIUS, Cleveland, Tenn.

Paine's Celery Compound is of unequaled value to women. It strengthens the nerves, regulates the kidneys, and has wonderful power in curing the painful diseases with which women so often silently suffer.

The Fortesque street improvements are well advanced.

The str. Gladys left for Chilliwhack this morning with a full load of freight and 20 passengers.

The services of three young ladies required during exhibition week. Apply to Miss Peebles. 3*

The str. Maude left this afternoon for Victoria with 250 tons of flour, feed and farm produce.

The juvenile cricketers go to Hastings to-morrow to play Rev. Mr. Clinton's Vancouver class.

Walker & Co. have Sapperton Lots near New Hospital and Ross-Maclaren Mills at old prices. *

The gross receipts of Holy Trinity church choir concert were $77; expenses $21.60; net profits $55.40.

Richards, Haywood & Mackintosh have 5-acre Brownsville lots at $20 an acre; half cash, balance in 6 months, without interest. sel0m1

The str. Rainbow carried an unusually heavy load of freight to Victoria this morning. It was largely composed of fruit and farm produce.

Wild strawberry plants are beginning to blossom again. If the weather remains fine we will have a second crop of strawberries in a few weeks.

The barque C. C. Funk has loaded 500,000 feet of lumber at the Royal City Mills, and will have all her cargo aboard and ready for sea by the end of next week.

The tug Active, of the Royal City Planing Mills Co., has been handsomely painted throughout, and looks every inch a beautiful craft. She leaves for the north on Monday to bring down a tow of logs.

Contractor Bradshawe will have finished all the heavy work on the Agnes street improvements by to-morrow evening. On Monday he will begin giving the street its finishing touches, sidewalking etc.

The corporation of Victoria city has received a writ summoning it to appear in cause of the provincial government vs. the city, action being brought to recover the portion of the school teachers' salaries due from the city.

A special despatch to THE COLUMBIAN from Tacoma this morning says a deputation of firemen was at the wharf and met the team. The boys are all well and will do their best to win. Twenty-eight teams will take part in the races.

Messrs. H. T. Read & Co. received a carload of "Elephant" brand white lead from Montreal to-day. That one line of paint can be imported in such large quantities, is the best evidence of the extensive building operations now in progress in Westminster.

The police are requested to subdue a nuisance in the shape of brown wrapping paper, which is thrown on the streets by the butcher boys. One tradesman on Columbia street regularly gathers these stray leaves and cremates them opposite his doorway. He and several others intend to enter complaint in this matter.

Constable Billy, the Indian policeman, lost his fine new pair of electro-plated handcuffs, yesterday, and insisted that the whole police and detective forces should turn out and search for them. The moderate request was not complied with and Billy had to hunt alone. He found the missing "nippers" in the school grounds.

The members of the Hyack Fire Co., with hose reel, arrived yesterday from Westminster on the Atlantic Express and took the Premier for Tacoma. The Vancouver team, as announced, also left. Our boys were all adorned with button hole bouquets, and several large cut bouquets ornamented their hose reel. They all look well and confident.—News-Advertiser.

It will be noticed that Messrs. W. & G. Wolfenden give notice in this issue that they intend clearing out their whole stock of dry goods, clothing, etc, at cost, they having decided to retire from that branch of the business, and confine their operations to the grocery line only. This is a genuine sale, and the Messrs. Wolfenden mean exactly what they say.

From the upper portion of the city this afternoon a very heavy column of smoke was to be seen rising from the river bank, apparently about half the distance between this city and Ladners on the Lulu Island shore. As the fire did not appear to cover more than a small extent of ground, it was the opinion of many that the smoke did not come from a bush fire, but from some buildings on the river bank.

On the 26th of September, the greatest exposition ever held on the Pacific coast will be opened in Portland, and will continue for a full month. The association has expended $250,000 on the building and grounds, and every available inch of the six and one-half acres of floor space in the mammoth building has been taken by exhibitors. A reduction of railway fares on all lines has been secured, and no doubt thousands of people from all over the Northwest will take this opportunity to visit Portland and see its mammoth exposition. The great live stock show, which will be held from October 14th to 19th, will also attract a great many people.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria

The Cohoe Run.

Although a number of the cannerymen have decided not to pack the cohoe run this year, for fear of over production and a consequent fall in the market price of canned salmon, yet there are not a few of the packers who will take advantage of the run and increase their present pack as largely as possible. An effort was made by a few of the leading packers to come to an agreement not to can any more fish this season, but the movement failed owing to a diversity of opinion regarding the possibility of over production. On Monday the season opens again, and once more the fishermen's boats and floats will give the river a lively appearance.

Tidal Wave on the Fraser.

On Wednesday morning at 1:45 o'clock a tidal wave, of small magnitude, struck the Fraser river, the water rising and subsiding three times with a rushing sound that surprised and startled those who witnessed the phenomenon. The surface of the river was perfectly calm at the time and the moon was shining brightly, so there is no guess work as to the exactness of the occurrence. The water seemed to rise up from the bed of the river and rush over to each shore, the waves reaching a foot higher than the then present water mark. Three times this occurred and then the water resumed its placidity again. Had this wave any connection with the great tidal wave that swept the Atlantic coast on the previous day?

Capt. John was Untruthful.

Capt. John, the rascally Siwash who swore yesterday that Greer had not attempted to supply him with whisky, was so smitten by his conscience after leaving court that he went to his spiritual adviser and openly confessed to him that he had lied in his evidence. The Rev. Father ordered him to repeat his confession to Mr. McTiernan, Indian Agent, which he did, deeply regretting that he had departed from the truth, and acknowledging that the epithets addressed to him by Constable Billy were fully justified. Capt. John hed so effectively, yesterday, that he was honorably acquitted of the charge laid against him, therefore he could not be tried again for the same offence, and Mr. McTiernan had to be satisfied with giving the Siwash a few hints on the value of evading the police court for the future.

The Latest Mill Property Purchase.

The sale of the Hastings Saw Mills Co., of Vancouver, to the Royal City Planing Mills Co., of this city, which has been in negotiation for the last three months, was concluded a few days ago. By this sale the Royal City Planing Mills Co. acquires the whole property of the Hastings Saw Mills Co., including mill site, water frontage, machinery, timber limits, steamers, etc. The negotiations of the purchase were conducted by Mr. John Hendry, who is now at the head of the most extensive lumbering company on the British Columbia coast. The Hastings mills will be enlarged and considerably improved, and its present capacity greatly increased. Special attention will be paid to the export trade, which the new management intends to increase largely. The sale is one of the largest and most important ever concluded in connection with the lumber industry of the province.

Their Reason Gone

The young man named Cutler, at present in the provincial jail suffering from a mild attack of insanity, will be removed to the insane asylum at New Westminster, the commitment papers being ready. It is thought he will eventually recover his reason. The other unknown, at present confined in the provincial jail, afflicted with dementia, still maintains silence. The officials have been unable to learn his name or connections, he refusing to talk. He is a conundrum, and the only time he speaks is at midnight, when he generally asks his guardian for a drink of water and then relapses into silence. He will remain where he is owing to the New Westminster asylum being filled with patients.—Times. In Westminster we have a case exactly similar to the latter. The supposed lunatic acts in a perfectly sane manner, but refuses to talk when spoken to, although he has spoken several times since his arrest. Can it be possible that there was a deep laid scheme arranged between the two men. If there was it has been frustrated quite unintentionally.

A Large Constituency.

It may not be generally known, but it is a fact nevertheless, that Mr. D. Chisholm, M. P., for the district of New Westminster, represents the largest constituency in the whole of Canada. It is over 1000 miles in length, from 90 to 450 miles in breadth and embraces more than 5000 miles of coast line. It is larger than the whole province of Ontario. The revision of the voters' list, for Dominion purposes, necessitates a visit of the revising officer to every polling division in the constituency, for the purpose of holding a court of revision. Distant Cassiar is among the points which the act says must be revised, but the trip is a long, tedious and dangerous one, and it is not to be wondered at if the revising officer should hesitate before undertaking the journey. When Hon. Mr. Dewdney was in the city the matter of the court visiting Cassiar was laid before him, along with the expenses of the trip, the time occupied in making the journey and the handful of voters to register at the end of it. Mr. Dewdney telegraphed to Ottawa the facts as laid before him, and asked that further instructions be issued.

The bellowing of calves at a west end meat establishment, on the main thoroughfare of the city, is becoming such an unmitigated nuisance, that the surrounding merchants are determined to take some action to have it stopped. The bellowing, it may be cogent to remark, is caused by the calves having their feet tied together like bunches of radishes, and in this somewhat constrained position the poor little brutes are hoisted on to the weighing stand, hanging from the beam by the aforesaid amalgamated pedal extremities, hence the vocal protests, both loud and long.

Mrs. Besta Romy, a widow 45 years of age, and eleven years of widowhood, of Southwold, Ont., has entered suit against Samuel Hunt, a prominent resident of the same township, for seduction, claiming $5,000 damages.

A THRIVING FIRM.

The Pacific Carriage Works, Foundry and Machine Shops. A Prosperous and Increasing Business.

An industry of which the city has good cause to feel proud is the Pacific Carriage Works, operated by Messrs. Reid & Currie. From very humble beginnings the Pacific Carriage Works has grown into a business with more than a provincial reputation. A representative of THE COLUMBIAN visited in there this morning, and buttonholing the senior partner, Mr. John Reid, obtained the following information: The company have employed twenty-five hands nearly all summer, and last spring, owing to heavy cannery orders, had to work night and day. About $5,000 or $6,000 worth of cannery work has been done by Messrs. Reid & Currie, which in the past has always gone to Victoria. The firm has large orders on hand now for canneries up the coast. Two powerful and improved turning lathes, 2 latest style planers, 2 drills, a bolt making machine, bolt screwing machine and two fans for blowing the cupola in the foundry and the forges, make up the working power of the machine shops. All kinds of machinery are repaired in this department, as well as every branch of engine fitting. The steam power at present in use has been found much too small to meet the demands of the business, and the firm are putting in a 20 horse-power engine with a 1400 cut driving wheel to run the machinery.

In the foundry is the new cupola, lately built, and having a capacity of from 3 to 3½ tons: a small brass cupola is also in use for small castings, bearings and the like. Nine moulders have been employed all summer. Great improvements will shortly be made in the moulding shops, with a view to the better handling of heavy work. Upstairs in the carriage department the same busy activity that characterizes the machine shop and foundry can be noted. A fine phæton has just been finished for Ald. Keary, and is a credit to the shop. Messrs. Reid & Currie will send several buggies manufactured at their works to the exhibition. They have sold this season three car loads of buggies, waggons and other vehicles in Westminster and neighborhood; also about a car load of carriage material. The firm are agents for almost every kind of machinery, marine, stationery, cannery, lumbering and pumping, and have supplied large orders to the Royal City Planing Mills, Brunette Sawmills, Ross-McLaren Mills, Gilley Bros., brick and tile making machinery to the Pottery Works, besides sending heavy consignments to Vancouver and Victoria. They supplied, lately, one of the largest pumps in the country to the Royal City Planing Mills for fire protection. The firm are agents for the Williams Foundry and Machinery Company, of Toronto, perhaps the largest dealers in machinery in the Dominion, and they have on hand, at present, some of their steam pumps, many of which have been sold in the city. Mr. Reid says the works will have to be moved to premises twice the present size to meet the growing demands of their business.

THE ROYAL COLUMBIAN.

The New Royal Columbian Hospital at Sapperton. Short Sketch of Building, and its Surroundings.

As the traveller from New Westminster begins the ascent of the gentle declivity just north of Sapperton, on the Port Moody road, he will observe, if he look carefully, the gables, roof-crest and chimney tops of what looks like a large villa ornee, just overtopping the summits of the circumjacent trees. The scene, as he draws nearer and turns off the main road, to his right, to reach the house, will recall to his mind the lines of Felicia Hemans anent the "stately homes of England;" for this looks exactly like the summer or suburban residence of some wealthy city man. But the mind of the stranger is soon disabused of this idea, and, if he is philanthropic, he will be pleased to learn that not for the purpose of providing a luxurious home for a few sybarites, but for the far nobler aim of extending help to all, irrespective of color, rank or creed, this beautiful edifice took shape. It is, in fact, the new hospital which is shortly to be opened, and will take the place of the old Royal Columbian hospital, which has done so much service, and so much to make Agnes street, in that vicinity, "awfully homely." Perhaps a brief sketch of the construction of so notable an institution would be appropriate at this time. The main building rests upon a foundation of solid granite and rubble-stone, and the basement contains three large rooms, comprising a furnished room, furnace room and a large room for general storage. The furnished room was intended as a strong room for violent cases of insanity. Towards the rear the building is supported upon stone piers. The main front faces the town and looks out upon the river, with side elevation and a large entrance facing the road. The main hall runs the full length of the building and is 10 feet wide, crossed at the centre by a transverse hall extending from front to rear of the hospital. Off the main hall are found the operating room at the north-west corner, bed-room, drug room, lavatory and baths, dining room, with dummy running to floors above, pantry, and in rear of the house and well out of the way, the kitchen, bed room for servants, and the laundry, which is fitted up on the most approved principles. There is also a lavatory and all conveniences, in this quarter of the building. Immediately behind the lavatory is the morgue. Near the main entrance are the office on one side and the reception room on the other, also the women's ward. Up stairs on the second floor, which is approached by two staircases, one at each end of the hall, terminating at a landing across the centre of the hall, from which a single staircase leads to the third floor—on the second floor are, a large ward, 19 by 33 feet, and 3 smaller wards, 19 by 23 feet, also a number of bed rooms and all the necessary sanitary fixtures. The third floor will not be used for some time; but when it is found necessary to enlarge the accommodations down stairs, this floor can be fitted up on the same scale of comfort and convenience as the others. Detached from the main building and at the north side of it is found a little gem of architecture in the steward's lodge, which contains parlor, dining and drawing rooms, bed rooms, bath room, and is fitted with all the best modern improvements and accessories to the civilized idea of comfort.

Both buildings are finished in native cedar throughout, with turned corner blocks and casings.

The main building is sheathed inside with lath, ship lap, and is plastered. Outside of frame is covered by 1x6 rustic. The floors are deafened, and every room in the house will be warm and comfortable, even in the depth of winter, while the perfect system of ventilation will make it a summer retreat of delicious coolness. Pivotted transoms over the windows in the main building can be worked independently, and in all the wards are ventilating flues. The plumbing is complete in every respect, not only the most improved appliances having been used, but several ingenious devices for the expulsion of foul air, the invention of Mr. Clow, the architect, have been put in. Pipe has been laid all ready for gas. The house will be supplied throughout with hot and cold water. The style of the building is of the melange description, one might call it the Salmagundi, or the Pot Pourri, or the ad valorem style; it is, in fact, one of those delightful architectural concoctions for which the architect can offer no excuse, and which everybody says is perfectly beautiful, which is always a valuable acquisition to a city's architecture, and which, like a good novel or a good ragout, contains insinuations of everything that is pleasing to the cultivated taste. The hospital may be put down as the villa style, ornamental, it has shingled roof, with pretty gables here and there, rough cast and timbered, and sometimes containing either windows or ventilators. The so called clipped shingles look very effective and pretty, something like fish scales, in their regularity. Dentil cornices obtain all around the building. At the entrance near the road is a broad piazza, 14 by 28 feet. The main building is 50 by 72 feet, and, including the wings at both ends, measuring 15 feet each, makes the total length 100 feet. The grounds will be laid out in consonance with the elegant appearance of the building. Away up in the top of the building are one or two of those peculiar little windows known to the architectural "perfesh" as eye winkers! from the one which faces the river and city, a view of indescribable beauty can be obtained, a sort of coup d'oeil, as it were, of the south western part of the Westminster district. The only trouble is the peep-show character of the window, for it is so "aggerawatingly" small that only one person—especially reporters, who have always big heads—can look out at a time.

Messrs. Clow & Maclure are the architects, and Mr. Purdy the contractor. The hospital will be ready for occupation in a week or two, it is expected, and will be worthy a visit—not as a patient, but to personally examine its excellences.
