THE TABLES TURNED.

The Democrats Turn the Tables on the Republicans and Make Large Gains.

The Cottonseed Oil Trust Shows a Handsome Shortage of half a Million.

The Cashier of a Toledo Bank Embezzles a Large Amount of Cash.

WHALING NEWS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 6.—The whaling steamer Belvedoc, Captain Cook, has arrived, 14 days from Fox island. She brings no further news from the Arctic fleet. She captured one small whale, making her catch three in all. As passengers she brought down Capt. Whiteside, the engineer and three of the crew of the steamer Lucretia, which was wrecked on Sept. 5th, on a shoal off the northwestern part of Herald island. Capt. Whiteside said that the reef on which he struck is improperly placed on the chart. The steamer sank so rapidly that the crew had barely time to get the boats and make their escape. Luckily the steamer Belvedoc was near and picked them up. The whaling bark Lancer has also arrived from Fox island. Her entire catch numbered only two, which will just about pay the expenses of her trip.

STILL REPUBLICAN.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 6.—With fourteen towns missing, the total vote in Massachusetts is: Brackett, republican, 123,691; Russell, democrat, 117,523; Blackmer, prohibitionist, 13,263.

WHOLESALE ROBBERY.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Nov. 6.—Ex-Cashier E. S. Vanhoesens, of the Toledo National bank, was arrested to-day charged with embezzling $58,000 of the bank's funds during his incumbency. John McKee, teller of the bank, was also arrested charged with embezzling $1,200.

GREAT SHORTAGE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The investigation of the finances of the Cotton Seed Oil trust, made by two members of the committee on plans of reorganization, was announced at the meeting of certificate holders held to-day, and shows a shortage of $522,511, of which Flagler and Moss, the ex-president and treasurer of the trust, offer to make good $250,000.

HORSEFLESH AT LOW RATES.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—At an auction sale of horses to-day the first lot offered were those of D. McCarthy, of San Francisco, the bidding was very slow and the prices were conceded on all sides, very low. They ranged from $800 to $2,000. The latter price for Hidalgo, a bay gelding, sire Sultan, dam Atherton.

INVESTIGATING.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 6.—The investigation into the loss of the steamer Granada, which was totally wrecked at Point Tejupon, Lower California, on the night of June 22d, has commenced. Capt. Deering, her commander, only arrived from the scene of the wreck on the Panama steamer on last Friday, causing the delay in the investigation.

RAIN COMING.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 6.—Fair weather, with the exception of light rains in the western portion, from Portland northward, is predicted for Oregon and Washington until 8 a. m. Thursday.

PASSENGER LIST.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 6.—The steamer Umatilla sailed for Victoria and Puget Sound ports this morning with the following passengers for Victoria: W. Lock, W. T. Stern, Mrs. H. Wallace, J. Gray, Mrs. Humphreys, Mrs. J. H. Gaeddes and two children, H. J. Scott.

FORAKER TO CAMPBELL.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 6.—At one o'clock this afternoon Governor Foraker sent the following telegram: Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 6.—To Hon. Jas. E. Campbell, Hamilton, Ohio: To the full extent, the defeated candidate can do so with propriety, allow me to offer my congratulations and assure you that it will give me pleasure to extend to you every courtesy that I can show you in connection with your inauguration and the commencement of your administration.
(Signed) J. B. FORAKER.

VIRGINIA DEMOCRATS VICTORIOUS.

RICHMOND, Nov. 6.—Large Democratic gains in every section are shown by the returns received from two-thirds of the State. The gains now exceed 30,000 over that of 1888, with losses less than 200. In the legislature the Democrats will have a two-thirds majority on the joint ballot.

IOWA GOES DEMOCRATIC.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Nov 6.—Later returns show the election of the entire Democratic State ticket by a majority probably exceeding 10,000.

THIRSTY TULARE.

TULARE, Cal., Nov. 5.—Tulare presented a strong temperance aspect this morning, and early seekers for the reviving cocktail were sorely disappointed. Every saloon in the city was closed, the proprietors having given bond on the contract binding each to remain closed until further orders. Their action was the result of an ordinance passed by the board of trustees fixing the liquor license at $100 per quarter.

INTERESTING CEREMONY.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 5.—The president started the machinery of the Montgomery (Ala.) exposition at noon to-day, by touching an electric key at the White House in the presence of all the members of the cabinet.

OTTAWA NOTES.

OTTAWA, Nov. 5.—A large number of persons assembled at the Quebec Government offices in Montreal this morning to witness the payment of the Jesuit Estate money. Mr. Mercier and his Cabinet and many prominent politicians were present. The money was passed over to Father Turgeon, the Superior of the Jesuits.

The astronomer, Otto Klotz, has returned from Alaska, whither he had been sent by the Dominion government to gather data for the settlement of the Alaskan boundary. The result of his mission will be utilized in the negotiations now in progress between the British and American governments. Some trouble, it is expected, will be experienced in locating the southern portion of the boundary, which the treaty provides shall, despite the mountain ranges, follow the sinuosities of the coast at a distance of ten miles therefrom.

Three thousand Orangemen to-day celebrated the anniversary of the discovery of the gunpowder plot. The streets were paraded. At a public meeting the speakers, including Col. O'Brien, M.P., and Mr. Charlton, M. P., the government was denounced and the usual anti-Jesuit resolutions were passed.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Mr. Gamble's Story.

EDITOR COLUMBIAN—Sir: In reply to Mr. Cunningham's letter in Monday night's COLUMBIAN, regarding the interests of truth, I should like to give a little light on the same subject.

When Mr. Major and myself went around and got a largely signed requisition for Mr. Corbould, Mr. Major told me of a conversation he and Mr. Cunningham had had on the subject of sending a representative to Victoria by acclamation. Mr. Major said that Mr. Cunningham had stated that he would be willing to withdraw from the field, but the only man he would withdraw in favor of was Mr. Corbould, and that if a requisition was got up for him he would throw up both hands and support him.

Now, we thought, as Mr. Cunningham had said this, that it was only fair to give him the chance to fulfill his promise. So we called on Mr. Cunningham, as he states, and told him we had a largely signed requisition, and asked him if he was willing to retire in favor of Mr. Corbould, as in all probability it would be a fight between the two of them, as it was understood that, if Mr. Jenns' supporters agreed to it, Mr. Jenns would retire from the field.

Mr. Cunningham's answer was, "No, I will not withdraw for any man, not even if I get only ten votes." "But," said Mr. Major, "did you not say, Mr. Cunningham, that, if a requisition was got up for Mr. Corbould, you would throw up both hands and support him?" "I did say so, but I won't do it."

At this reply we withdrew, as we considered it waste of time getting promises from Mr. Cunningham, as he would probably change his mind when it suited him.

Yours faithfully,
A. G. GAMBLE.

The Political Contest.

EDITOR COLUMBIAN.—Sir: The efforts of Mr. Cunningham's opponents have resulted in bringing forward Mr. Corbould as a candidate for the vacant seat in the house, and the contest being between two only is sure to create interest among the electors. It is well known that Mr. Corbould (and I may add some of his strongest supporters, too) is largely interested in the progress of Vancouver. Is it not possible, yea probable, that, like other human beings, he will succumb to personal interests? What assurance have we that Mr. Corbould will be less zealous in the future of his own interests, but that henceforth he will sacrifice himself on the altar of Westminster? Has he done aught to commit himself to the side of this city?

Vancouver is rapidly growing in power as well as size, and her ambition to become possessed of the chief institutions of the district is well known. That city is now not a bad field for lawyers, and many of the profession would lose little by transferring their business and themselves there; and if the seat of the supreme court be there they would certainly find an advantage in being near it. The principle applicable to mainland representatives by mainlanders should be followed in having a constituency supported by a person whose interests lie therein. Mr. Cunningham's interests are bound up in the progress of Westminster, and this fact alone should be a guarantee that he will not build up anything to lessen their value. Since his residence amongst us Mr. Cunningham has identified himself with every matter having for its object the advancement of his adopted city. Contrast the work of Mr. Cunningham with the indifferent interest taken by Mr. Corbould in reference to matters affecting our prosperity. May we not reasonably take each gentleman's actions in the past as a criterion of his future conduct? Mr. Cunningham in fighting for Westminster is protecting himself, and, as he has nothing to gain but everything to lose by doing otherwise, I think the electors may safely trust him with the representation of this city. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for space in your columns. Yours, etc.,
FOR WESTMINSTER.
5th November, 1889.

Cassiar Gold.

Gold Commissioner Crimp, of Cassiar, who came down by the Corona on Saturday night, reports that the season just closed has been a very satisfactory one for his district. The weather has been fairly good, and all the claims have paid well. Operations are now practically at an end for the year, although a few of the claims are still being worked. The Bonanza, on Dease creek, has done the best this year, panning out from $7,000 to $8,000. On the Tibbet creek the McVicar & Foster Company's claim has also done well, while Quartz Creek has fully justified expectations in regard to its richness.

In all, Cassiar has produced this year between $12,000 and $13,000 worth of gold more this season than last. Had it not been for the rain and the freshets which washed out the low lying claims, this output would have been very considerably increased. Most of the gold came from the tunnels and hills, while the Chinese have done badly this season.

The health of the district has been unusually good, only two miners having died, and both from diseases acute and of long standing. It is Mr. Crimp's opinion that next season will far surpass the one just over, and in ten years more Cassiar will be one on the largest gold-producing districts in British Columbia. —Colonist.

Miss Katie Vankoughnet, daughter fo the late Hon. P. Vankoughnet, of Cornwall, Ont., suicided early Friday by hanging herself with a towel in the cellar of her residence. She had been depressed in spirits for some time.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria

ANGRY FRENCHMEN.

The French Papers are Extremely Annoyed that the Prince of Wales Visited Egypt.

An Englishman Eaten by Cannibals in the Solomon Islands. A Cruiser Squares Accounts.

Dr. Peters, the German Explorer, and his Party Massacred by Natives.

THE FRENCH ANNOYED.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—The Journal des Debats says the only ministers of the powers who attended the Prince of Wales' reception in Cairo were those of Germany, Denmark and Greece. The princes' journey was not only useless, but it showed small regard for French feeling. France has not abandoned her claims in Egypt.

REFUSED THE RIBBON.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—Alex. Harrison, the marine painter and member of the American art jury of the exposition, has refused the decoration of an officer of the academy, conferred on him by the jury of awards. To a correspondent he said: "I have refused the decoration because it was nothing but a little purple ribbon for which I had no use."

EATEN BY NATIVES.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—News is received of the murder of an Englishman named Nelson by the natives of one of the Solomon Islands. Nelson and three native boys, who were in his employ, were decoyed into a hostile locality, and after being killed were devoured. A British cruiser afterwards punished the natives by shelling and destroying a number of villages. The inhabitants fled to the interior. Some other instances of cannibalism on these islands are reported.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 6.—The steamer Bulgarian from Boston has arrived. On Monday fire was discovered in her hold and only its timely discovery saved the vessel from destruction. Several bales of cotton were damaged before the fire was subdued.

THE ATCHISON RAILROAD.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—A meeting of the Atchison bondholders advises all parties to accept the plan of reorganization, provided the interest on the income bonds be made cumulative after the year 1892.

VALUABLE PRESENTS.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 6.—Among the Sultan's presents to the imperial visitors are a jewelled collar valued at £5,000 for the empress, and a sabre studded with diamonds for the Emperor William.

HIGHER WAGES.

HAMBURGH, Nov. 6.—One thousand ship carpenters have struck for better winter pay. The masters are inclined to accede to their demands provided the men will work the same number of hours as in summer.

CHARGES DUPLICITY.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—Resuming his address for the Times before the Parnell commission to-day, Sir Henry James quoted from the speeches made by Davitt in 1880 and argued that the quotations showed the purpose to combine the forces of both moderates and extremists in the American Clan-na-Gael with those of the constitutional party in Ireland, to keep Ireland unsettled. The organization was to cloak its real object with constitutional forms. Parnell has not then assumed the disguise of moderation, but associated with Fenians. His reception at Cork in March, 1880, on his return from America had decidedly a Fenian character, and when his friends welcomed him at dinner, Biggar made the memorable Hartman speech wherein assassination was encouraged and applauded, the killing of the czar by the nihilists being fresh in every one's mind. The commission has been furnished with evidence regarding the importation of arms into Ireland, through men openly supporting Parnell, and who were members of the league in active sympathy with its work, "Surely" said Sir Henry, "If it had been proved that crime was ripe in many districts where no distress existed, but where the people had been aroused against the league the source of crime must be held and proved."

DR. PETERS MURDERED.

ZANZIBAR, Nov. 6.—A report has reached here that the Masais or Somalis, have murdered Dr. Peters, the German explorer, in charge of Emin Bey relief expedition, and the entire party except one European and one Somala, who was with the party, both of whom were wounded and are at Ngao. The latest known about Dr. Peters, who started inland from Vitu, July 20th, is that he reached Korwowa, a long way up the Tann river. It is not known whether the second column, which left Vitu in September, ever joined Peters' advance party.

A PRINCELY PRESIDENT.

PARIS, Nov. 5.—President Carnot has given another contribution of 725,000 francs for the poor of Paris.

WHAT ABOUT CANADA?

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The Standard thinks the time is not yet ripe for federation, but believes the mother country will endorse whatever plan of settlement is devised upon by the Australian colonies.

THE RUSSIANS LOTTERY MAD.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 5.—A perfect mania for speculation has seized the people in consequence of the new lottery loan. The offerings have been at least a hundred times more than the amount of the loan.

THE UNSPEAKABLE TURK.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—It is asserted by the Daily News' correspondent in Crete that the outrages upon Christians still continue, and that three leading Christians have been arrested. The common people are bastinadoed on the flimsiest pretexts.

CALLS THINGS BY THEIR RIGHT NAMES.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—Sir Henry James continued his argument for the Times to-day before the Parnell commission. He declared Parnellism to be a conspiracy to destroy landlordism and rupture the Union. Parnell's visit to America, though ostensibly to collect money for the relief of the districts, was really to secure support for the league's treasonable schemes, and he instanced men well known as plotters against the British government.

VICTORIA NEWS.

Vice-Regal Movements. Loggers Supposed to be Murdered by Indians. The Islander Detained.

Special to THE COLUMBIAN.

VICTORIA, Nov. 6.—The governor-general returned from Nanaimo by his special train last evening in time to open the citizens ball, which closed the festivities in his honor. Four hundred couples occupied the floor of the large assembly hall, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The scene at midnight was most animated and charming. His excellency and Lady Stanley led the grand march at 9 o'clock, in which a hundred couples took part.

The men of B.C.B.G.A. will be paid at parade to-day.

The str. Rustler, arrived at Nanaimo from the north, brings news that four loggers are missing at Bute Island and Humprey's Channel. All four are supposed to have been murdered by Indians.

Heavy investments of Victoria capital are being made in and around Port Angeles, Wash., directly opposite this city. The cause of the excitement is said to be the almost certain construction of a railroad from Portland to Port Angeles.

This morning his excellency visited the jubilee school and embarked on H. M. S. Amphion at 10 o'clock for Vancouver. While on the trip to Nanaimo his excellency rode on the cowcatcher the better to enjoy the scenery.

The Islander has not arrived up to 10 o'clock this morning, and is probably detained by the dense fog which wrapped the city and straits last night.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

Herring's Opera House, Saturday, November 9th.

The manager of the opera house has secured the services of the eminent actor, Mr. McKee Rankin, who will appear at the opera house next Saturday evening, supported by Miss Mabel Bert and a powerful company, in "The Runaway Wife," a charming domestic story, abounding in many deft touches of humor and pathos. It is a pure home story appealing to no particular class, but to humanity at large, and contains that "one touch of nature that makes the whole world kin." The scenes of the play are laid both in America and England, and the story is pure in its conception, in fact in its purity lies its latent strength. Mr. Rankin, although never having visited this city, is well known throughout the province. He is a Canadian by birth and education, and comes here highly recommended.

CRIMINAL COURT.

Before His Honor Judge Bole.

Ah Foo, indicted for perjury, elected yesterday to be tried summarily and his trial was fixed for December 4th, bail being taken in $4,000 for his appearance. Mr. Hammersly prosecutes and Mr. McColl defends.

John Bradley, charged with stealing goods from Ellard & Co.'s store, elected to be tried by jury.

Mr. Eckstein asked his honor if he would hear an application from H. Dominy, charged with stabbing an Indian boy, as it was probable he would consent to be tried summarily.

His honor said: "I wish in this case to direct attention to the fact that the law has made stabbing a very serious offence, and I feel that in any case of conviction before me that I shall be coerced in the discharge of my public duty to inflict severe sentences." His Honor concluded by saying he would hear the application on Monday.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Strange Utterances.

EDITOR COLUMBIAN.—Sir:—The governor-general is making a progress through British Columbia, and almost everywhere his advent has been hailed with the loyal enthusiasm of the people, almost everywhere, but not quite, and it has remained for a Christian minister to draw a self-imposed and indecent (not to use a harder term) contrast between Lord Stanley and the King of Heaven. If Lord Stanley had come here like a second Herod, and had the people fallen down and worshipped him as a god, the ill-natured and unchristian christianity of this preacher would have had excuse. But nothing of this nature has happened. Lord Stanley has come here as the embodiment of the principles of our government, and as the representative of our good queen. As such he has been received, and I think in keeping with the apostolic injunction to "fear God and honor the king," and even in accord with the direct teaching of Christ himself, "Render unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and to God the things that are God's." For Lord Stanley, as such, I care little; for the governor-general, the representative of our excellent system of government, I have the most profound feeling of enthusiastic respect. Life is too full of knotty problems for the christian preacher to aid in solving, without his endeavoring to raise a spirit of bitter and uncharitable strife where no reason warrants. Mr. Kennedy's reference to the Anglican prayer-book is unworthy of remark, save that it displayed an undercurrent of intolerance, and therefore was unchristian. His scriptural quotations were altogether certainly not apropos to the governor-general's reception and reminded one of the old saw that "the devil can quote scripture when it suits his purpose." LOYALTY.

A Rich Find.

Mr. Hall, the Hudson Bay Co.'s head officer at Fort Simpson, who has been making a tour of the interior and is at present in Victoria, reports the discovery of a rich new creek in Omineca district. He has been giving the tip to all the old miners on his way down, so that they can secure their claims before the news beomes general and the gold fever sends hundreds to the newly discovered treasure bed. The new find was first reported by an Indian who made the discovery while on a hunting trip. Obtaining the location of the creek from him, an old miner at once went to the place indicated and found it even richer than he had been led to expect. Very shallow and easily worked, the creek carries a large amount of gold; $10 being secured to one pan by the prospecting miner. He has settled down, with great hopes for the future of the creek; and already the old miners are flocking about him.—Colonist.

"How Lord Dufferin got even on Chicago" would do as the heading of part of a report in a late number of the London Times. The distinguished nobleman was presented with the freedom of the burgh of Kirkcaldy, which, as his lordship put it in his reply to the address, has ever been foremost in advancing the interests of the kingdom of Fife, and the adjoining and not less honorable kingdom of Scotland. Regretting in a humorous way, that, as an ambassador, his tongue was tied at a time when other men were stirring the country with exciting and vivacious speeches, Lord Dufferin said he knew they would excuse him, and not endeavor to treat him as he had, when viceroy of Canada, been treated in Chicago. When there, he was invited to visit the board of trade; but being very unwell, sent an excuse, as he felt it would be impossible for him to make a speech. Promptly came a reply, assuring him that no speech was expected, that he was asked only to meet a few gentlemen in a private room, over some sherry and biscuits, have a chat and shake hands. Feeling equal to that, he went—met a few gentlemen, had a glass of sherry and a chat, and rose to take leave. But when he endeavored to go out as he had come in, he was shown through a different door, along a narrow passage, through another door into the enormous corn exchange of Chicago. "Before me," said his lordship, were 4,000 eager faces and a glass of water, and behind me a voice which cried, 'The governor-general of Canada will now address the meeting.'" The future historian of Kirkcaldy will have to its roll of honors that it gave Lord Dufferin a chance to get even on Chicago, by exposing the character of its hospitality.

A GRATEFUL and comforting discovery has recently been made by a Dutch physician, and his name, as yet undivulged, should go down to posterity as that of one who has cleansed the fair fame of many of his fellow creatures who for ages past have rested under the stigma of an unmerited and baseless calumny. Red noses, says this wise man, are the signs of overtaxed mental faculties. Whenever this gentleman has a patient whose proboscis is of the strawberry order he at once treats him for nasal tumour, and the result (so he says) is marvellous. At once the sufferer becomes bright and cheerful, and his mental faculties assume their proper brilliancy. The glad news will be read by many, and we can now account, without difficulty, for the brilliancy of the nasal organs on the faces of some of our acquaintances. We are now sure that they have been burning the midnight oil to a very large extent, not, as uncharitable people would suppose, in the bar-rooms and saloons, but in the quietude of their own libraries, with a wet towel round the throbbing forehead, and sipping an infusion of green tea to keep the mental machine in a proper state of wakeful activity. When paterfamilias comes home unusually lively, and so excited in fact that he is quite unable to wind up his chronometer with the house door key, the irate partner of his joys will be able to account for the dazzling brilliancy of his rubicund visage in the consideration of the fact that perhaps he has been listening to the eloquence of some learned professor, and remembering this, she will not, as was heretofore too frequently the case, endeavor to increase his knowledge by making him see stars with the aid of a flat iron, or, failing that, the kitchen poker. It is really astounding to notice how the human intelligence is developing. A very short time ago, and the unsteady gait or "ruby nose" would have been attributed to liquor, rather than literature, but all this seems likely to be changed, and when Dives, after attending a public dinner, wends his way homeward with a distinct hiccough, and endeavors to walk on both sides of the street at once, the extraordinary nature of his behaviour must in future (if the Dutchman speaks truth) be attributed rather to the brilliant wit of the company or the oratory of the speakers than to the pickled salmon or devilled bones.

One of Chicago's millionaires was arrested the other day for cruelty to animals and fined in the police court. Another one in Rhode Island lately applied to a New York court for a writ of habeas corpus to get him out of a private insane asylum, where he had been wrongfully confined. Still another in New York does four men's work every day, carries burdens to crush an ordinary man, is a victim to insomnia and dyspepsia. Yet nearly all mankind want to be millionaires. Ex.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

"Well, I can't see any fun in after Jin' court," said an observant old lady. "Every time a witness goes to tell anything that's got anything to do with the case, all the lawyers jump up and holler, and the judge rules the testimony out."

Paul du Chaillu, who first attained fame by his discovery of the gorilla, caused a sensation at the recent annual meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science by reading before it a paper in which he maintained that the English race is descended from the Vikings. Should this prove to be true, what effect will it have upon the Anglo-Israel theory? asks an exchange.

Otto, the mad King of Bavaria, is thus described by one who has seen him at Fustenried: "Tall and almost as gigantic in stature as his brother, the late King Ludwig, his appearance is sufficient to startle anyone who has seen him for the first time. His hair is long and unkempt, and his bushy brown beard reaches down below his waist. There is a kind of wild, weird look in his eyes, the gaze of which remains steadfastly fixed straight ahead into empty space. The only person who can succeed in bringing a gleam of intelligence to his face is the sixty-year-old Mme. Marie, who was his nurse when a child. She is the only person who is permitted to speak to him."

New York's chances of securing the World's Fair of 1862 seem to be growing beautifully less every day. Chicago leads the running at present, and St. Louis and Washington are quickening their pace. A meeting of representatives of a number of the Middle and Southern States was held at the latter city the other day, at which a memorial to Congress was prepared which concludes as follows: "Your memorialists pray that the dignity of the Nation be not entrusted on the the proposed occasion to the keeping of any corporation, association, or municipality, upon any inducement whatever, but the Expoition be held at the National Capital exclusively under the direction and control of the General Government, and that from the Treasury of the United States, overflowing as it is with revenues far in excess of the needs of the government, the excess of the expenditures, if any above the receipts, be met."

THE WHISPERING CORN.

Have you e'er walked at early morn
Beside a field of stately corn,
Just while the red sun crossed the rim
Of this round world, mist-wet and dim?
Often have I, if but to hear
Mysterious whisperings far and near.

'Tis just at nature's waking time,
While hillsides yet are white with rime,
And while the first lark, rising, flings
Dew-spray from off his early wings,
And now and then a faint sound tells
Where cattle rise and shake their bells.

"Hush," says the corn, "with dog and gun,
I see a hunter hither run.
Oh, trembling hare, far inward hie;
Lie close, oh, partridge, do not fly."
The hunter lists. It seems to say:
"No game is lurking here to-day."

Sometimes the farmer comes to see
And then it says: "Here's gold for thee,
Which sun and air and sky and soil
Have gathered to reward thy toil.
Ten thousand sentinels in line
Guard each his gift for thee and thine."

Or if some Dives walks for health,
Worn out with care of useless wealth,
It whispers: "You make gold of tears,
Of hunger, curses, prayers and fears,
But here are alchemists whose gold
Must feed the hungry, warm the cold.

Sometimes with heavy heart there goes
A love-lorn swain along the rows;
Then "List," it lisps, "at husking bee,
When rafters ring with rustic glee
Of brown-cheeked maids and merry men,
Ah! you shall kiss her, kiss her then."

Thus oft in low, mysterious wise
Soft voices from the tall corn rise.
Lulled lispings, as though unknown tongue
Whispered the long lush leaves among.
They tell me secrets sweet and true;
They'll whisper, if you wish, to you.

—George Horton, in Chicago Herald

AFFINITIES.

Cousin Mark and Miss Kent, and Their Broken Declarations.

"I wouldn't marry the best man that ever lived!" And she meant it, or, what answers the same purpose, she thought she meant it. After all, how few of us ever really know what we mean! "I engaged myself once, when a girl, and the simpleton thought he owned me. I soon took the conceit out of him and sent him away about his business." The voice was now a little sharp. What wonder, with so galling a memory! "No man shall ever tyrannize over me—never! What the mischief do you suppose is the matter with this sewing-machine!"

"Annoyed at your logic, most likely," said my friend, a bright young matron, as she threaded her needle. "My husband is not a tyrant, Miss Kent."

"I am glad you are satisfied," was the laconic reply.

It was quite evident by the dress-maker's face that she had formed her own opinion of my friend's husband, and was quite competent to form and express an opinion on any subject. Miss Kent was a little woman, fair as a girl and plump as a robin. She wasn't ashamed to own that she was forty years old and an old maid. She had earned her own living most of her life and was proud of it. She was a good nurse, a faithful friend and a jolly companion, but stroke her the wrong way and you'd wish you hadn't in much shorter time than it takes me to write it. Her views on all subjects were strikingly original, and not to be computed.

"What are you going to do when you are old?" persisted the mistress of the establishment.

"What other folks do, I suppose."

"But you can't work forever."

"Can't say that I want to."

"Now, Miss Kent, a husband with means, a kind, intelligent man—"

"I don't want any man. I tell you, Mrs. Carlisle, I wouldn't marry the best man living, if he was as rich as Crœsus, and would die if I didn't have him. Now, if you have exhausted this question, I should like to try on your dress."

There was something behind all this I knew well. My friend's eyes danced with fun, and as Miss Kent fitted the waist she threw me a letter from the bureau.

"Read that," she said, with a knowing look; "it may amuse you."

This is what the letter said:

"MY DEAR JENNIE—I shall be delighted to spend a month with you and your husband. There must be, however, one stipulation about my visit—you must say no more about marriage. I shall never be fooled again. Twenty years ago to-day I wrecked my whole life. ("Better embark in a new ship, hadn't he?" put in Jennie, sotto voce.) "So unsuitable was this marriage, so utterly and entirely wrecked have been its consequences, that I am forced to believe the marriage institution a mistake. So, for the last time let me assure you that I wouldn't marry the best woman that ever lived, if by so doing I could save her life. Your old cousin, MARK LANSING."

"R-ch, isn't he!" said Jennie, and then pointed to the chubby little figure whose back happened to be turned.

I shook my head and laughed.

"You'll see," said the incorrigible.

"See what?" inquired Miss Kent, quite unaware of our pantomime.

"That parties which are chemically attracted will unite. Of course an alkali and acid. Don't you think this sleeve a little too long, Miss Kent?"

"Not after the seam is off. But what were you saying, Mrs. Carlisle? The other day Prof. Boynton's I saw some wonderful experiments."

"And did they succeed?" inquired Jennie, demurely.

"Beautifully."

"So will mine. I never yet botched a job in my life."

"I don't think I quite understand you," replied Miss Kent, perplexed.

"No? I always grow scientific when talking about marriage, my dear."

"Bother!" was all the little woman said, but the tone was much better-natured than I expected.

The next week Cousin Mark arrived, and I liked him at once. An unhappy marriage would have been the last thing thought of in connection with that gentleman. He had accepted the situation like a man, Jennie told me, and for fifteen years carried a load of misery that few could have endured. Death came to him at last, and now the poor fellow actually believed himself an alien from domestic happiness.

Singular as it may appear, Cousin Mark was the embodiment of good health and good nature; fifty perhaps, though he didn't look it, and as rotund and as fresh in his way as the little dressmaker was in hers. As I looked at him I defied any body to see one and not be reminded of the other. True, he had more of the polish which comes from travel and adaptation to different classes and individuals, but he was not a whit more intelligent by nature than the bright little woman whom Jennie determined he should marry.

"I was surprised you should think it necessary to caution me about that, Cousin Mark," cooed the plotter, as she stood by his side, looking out of the window. "The idea of my being so ridiculous!" and in the same breath, with a wink at me: "Come, let us go to my sitting-room. We are at work there, but it won't make any difference to you, will it?"

Of course Cousin Mark answered: "No," promptly, as innocent as a dove about the trap being laid for him.

"This is my cousin, Mr. Lansing, Miss Kent." And Mr. Lansing bowed politely and Miss Kent arose, dropped her scissors, blushed, and sat down again. Cousin Mark picked up the refractory implements, and then Mrs. Jennie proceeded with rare caution and tact to her labor of love. Cousin Mark, at her request, read aloud an article from the Popular Science Monthly, drawing Miss Kent into the discussion as deftly as was ever fly drawn into the web of a spider.

"Who was that lady, Jennie?" Cousin Mark inquired in the evening.

"You mean Miss Kent?" said Jennie, looking up from her paper. "Oh, she is a lady I have known for a long time. She is making some dresses for me now. Why?"

"She seemed uncommonly well posted for a woman."

Under any other circumstances Mrs. Carlisle would have resented this, but now she only queried: "Do you think so?" and that ended it.

Two or three invitations to the sewing-room were quite sufficient to make Cousin Mark perfectly at home there, and after a week he became familiar enough to say:

"If you are not too busy I should like to read you this article."

"Oh, I am never too busy to be read to," Miss Kent would say. "Sit down by the window in this comfortable chair and let's hear it."

After a couple of weeks, when the gentleman came in hoarse with a sudden cold, Miss Kent bustled about, her voice full of sympathy, and brewed him a dose which he declared he should never forget to his dying day; but one dose cured. After this occurrence Miss Kent was a really wonderful woman.

Ah! what an arch-plotter! Jennie let them skirmish about, but not once did she give them a chance to be alone together. Her plans were not to be destroyed by premature confidences, until the very evening preceding Cousin Mark's departure for California. Then Miss Kent was very demurely asked to remain and keep an eye on Master Carlisle, whom the fond mother did not like to leave quite alone with his nurse.

"We are compelled to be gone a couple of hours," said she; "but Cousin Mark will read to you—won't you, cousin?"

"Certainly, if Miss Kent would like it," replied the gentleman.

The infant Carlisle, thanks to good management, was never awake in the evening, so the victims of this matrimonial speculation would have plenty of time. The back parlor was the room most in use during the evening, and out of this room was a large closet with a large blind ventilator, and out of this closet a door leading to the back stoop and garden. Imagine my surprise when I was told that Mr. Carlisle was going to the lodge, and that we, after profuse warnings about the baby, and promises not to be gone too long, were to proceed to this closet overlooking the back parlor by the way of the back gate and garden. In vain I protested.

"Why, you little goosie," laughed Jennie, "there'll be fun enough to last a lifetime. John wanted to come awfully, but I knew he'd make an awful noise and spoil every thing, so I wouldn't let him."

The wily schemer took the precaution to lock the closet door from the outside, so there was no fear of detection. On a high bench, still as two mice, we awaited results.

Presently Cousin Mark, as if arousing from a protracted revery, asked: "Would you like to have me read?"

"Oh, I am not particular," replied Miss Kent.

"Here is an excellent article on elective affinities. How would you like that?"

Jennie's elbow in my side almost took away my breath.

"Who is it by?" she inquired.

Jennie exclaimed (clear in my ear): "That's to gain time, see if it ain't."

"It's by a prominent French writer, I believe," answered Cousin Mark.

"I don't think I care for a translation to-night," said Miss Kent.

"Nor I, nor reading of any kind," he continued. "This is my last evening in New York, Miss Kent."

"I hope you've enjoyed your visit," she returned.

Jennie (into my very head this time): "She's as shy as a three-year-old colt."

"I didn't think I should feel so bad about leaving," Cousin Mark went on.

"He is the wreck, you remember," whispered Jennie.

A long pause.

"I think I hear the baby," exclaimed Miss Kent.

"Oh, no," said Cousin Mark. "You are fond of babies, are you not, Miss Kent?"

No answer from Miss Kent.

"I have been a very lonely man, Miss Kent," Cousin Mark resumed, "but I never realized how lonely the rest of my life must be until I came to this house."

"Oh, how lonely!" echoed Jennie.

"Now I must return to my business and my boarding-house—boarding-house for a man so fond of domestic life as I am, Miss Kent."

Just then we very distinctly heard a little kind of a purr, which sounded very like a note of intense sympathy from Miss Kent.

"I have friends in San Francisco, of course," said Cousin Mark, "but no fireside like this, no one to care for me if I am ill, nobody to feel very badly if I die."

"That'll fetch her," said Jennie.

"I wish that I lived in San Francisco," said Miss Kent, in a little quivering voice. "You could call upon me at any time if you needed any thing."

Jennie in convulsions.

"If you will go to California with me, Miss Kent, I'll wait another week."

"Why, Mr. Lansing, what do you mean? What would folks say!" she said.

"We don't care for folks," said Mark. "If you will go, we will have a house as pleasant as money can make it. You shall have birds and flowers and horses, and all the scientific monthlies that you want, deuced if you shan't, and you shall never sew another stitch for any body but me. Will you be my wife?"

Just then Jennie and I stopped up another peg, and there was that little old maid, who would not marry the best man that ever lived, hugged close to the man's breast who wouldn't marry the best woman that ever lived, not even to save her life. We came away then, but it's my opinion that they remained in just that position till we rang the bell half an hour later.

"How did you know?" I asked of Jennie.

"My dear," she answered, "my whole reliance was upon human nature; and let me tell you, dear goosie, whatever else may fail, that never does."

"Why, Miss Kent, what makes your face so very red?" inquired Jennie, upon entering; "and Cousin Mark, how strangely you look! your hair is all mussed up."

"And I hope to have it mussed often," said Cousin Mark, boldly. "Miss Kent and I are to be married this week."

Jennie laughed till her face was purple, and when I went upstairs Miss Kent was pounding her back.—Waverley Magazine.

FINALLY RECOGNIZED.

How a Missouri Senator Succeeded in Catching the Speaker's Eye.

This bit of Missouri history is taken from Henry George's Standard. The writer doesn't sign his name:

Stilson Hutchins is a well-known newspaper man of Washington. He used to live in Missouri, and at one time represented his district in the Legislature, of which body he was elected the Speaker. There was in the same Legislature a member from another district—a man whom Hutchins had conceived a prejudice against. This man wanted to bring up a bill in the interest of his constituency, but he never seemed to be able to catch the Speaker's eye. Day after day he would wait until routine matters had been cleared away, when he would rise in his place, and, in the peculiar Missouri high treble, address the presiding officer, but without receiving that recognition without which no member of a parliamentary body can proceed. The member finally became tired of such treatment, and one morning after the House had been called to order he marched in with a rifle on his shoulder, which, when he reached his seat, he leaned up against his desk. He sat there quietly until he thought the routine business was about all disposed of, when he slowly picked up his rifle and cocked it. When the last motion had been put and disposed of our friend arose, placed his rifle against his shoulder, drew a bead on Speaker Hutchins and drawled out: "Mr. Speaker." There was a silence as of death in the Assembly chamber for a few moments, which was finally broken by the Speaker himself, who slowly and distinctly said: "The gentleman from —— has the floor." The member lowered his rifle, uncocked it, and then, as if nothing had happened, proceeded to lay his bill before the legislators.

Have You Ever Tried It?

Very few people know how many different ways there are of changing a quarter of a dollar. According to a Philadelphia man who had more leisure than business on his hands, there are 313 ways of changing that piece of money. The pieces used are the 20-cent piece, 10-cent piece, 5-cent piece, 3-cent piece, 2-cent piece and the 1-cent piece. To make all the changes without using the same coin twice would require 1 233 1-cent pieces, 614 twos, 378 threes, 184 fives, 59 tens and 9 twenties, making 3,584 pieces, worth $53.75.

The common drunk arrested last night was released this afternoon on $5 bail. He had imbibed so much of the potteen that he was not quite sober when let out.

The man, Chapelle, who was thrown off the wagon during the runaway yesterday, had one of the small bones of the leg broken. He is under the care of Dr. Walker. The wound is painful, but not serious.

Owing to the non-arrival of the vice-regal party this evening, a good deal of matter prepared for this issue had to be laid over, and in consequence we are unable to present our readers with so full a paper as usual.

Game was very plentiful on the market to-day, but Thanksgiving dinners had to be provided for and consequently the supply was nearly exhausted by evening. Some exceedingly fine venison was displayed by W. H. Vianen this morning.

A man was found lying paralyzed with strong drink, in the streets last night. He was taken to the police station and money to the amount of $207.35 was found in his pockets. The man was too drunk to appear before the magistrates this morning.

The present glorious weather will serve better to impress our distinguished visitors with the natural advantages of this province than any amount of verbal assurance. It is queens' weather, and her majesty's representative must have brought it along with him.

British Columbia always gets pretty close to the front. Samuel J. Worth, of this city, who is attending the Picton, N. S., academy, has won second place in first year, class D. John T. Blaikie, a brother of J. M. Blaikie, one of our well known citizens, took first place.

British Columbia is noted for its luxuriant growth of ferns, but a speciman of this plant was found near Burnaby Lake a few days ago that overtops anything we have yet heard of. The fern measured 19½ feet in height, had branches between four and five feet long and the stalk near the ground was over an inch thick. Close to where this mammoth was found were many more ferns averaging from 14 to 16 feet in height. Mr. Robson was the discoverer of these wonderful specimens of fern growth.

Annual Prize Meeting.

The annual prize meeting of the New Westminster Rifle Association takes place to-morrow on the Brownsville range. The committee of management has been actively engaged during the past few days collecting subscriptions and prizes for the meeting, and have succeeded in making a very creditable list. The value of money prizes alone will amount to $150. Teams from Vancouver and the North Arm are expected to take part in the shooting. The first match begins at 9 o'clock, and intending competitors must leave the city by the 8 o'clock ferry.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria

NO RECEPTION TO-NIGHT.

The Failure of the Amphion to Reach Vancouver Forces a Postponement of the Vice-Regal Reception.

The str. Rithet arrived from Victoria this afternoon, having left the Island capital at 7 o'clock this afternoon. She encountered a heavy fog all the trip across, but made the river without much trouble. The captain is of the opinion that H. M. S. Amphion, with the vice-regal party aboard, which left Victoria at 10 o'clock this morning, would not be able to reach Vancouver until late this evening, as the fog grew more dense about the time the warship left port. It is also very probable that the Amphion will not reach Vancouver before to-morrow morning, so that the governor-general's official reception is indefinitely postponed. The city officials, however, will take the earliest possible opportunity of making the public acquainted with further particulars regarding the reception. The Liberati concert at the Opera House will come off as announced. At an informal meeting of the reception committee, this afternoon, it was decided that the addresses of welcome will be presented to his excellency this evening after the concert, at the Opera House, should the vice-regal party arrive by 10 p. m.

Pear Trees in Blossom.

Strawberries, raspberries and other small fruits, ripening in the open air in the month of November in Westminster is not bad and speaks well for the climate, but when the pear trees after yielding a most prolific crop, burst out again in full blossom it is time to drew the line and call a halt on perpetual summer. A. C. Morrison, of Sapperton suburb, has a few pear trees out in spring garb and THE COLUMBIAN has been made the recipient of a handsome bouquet of the blossoms. It is hardly possible the fruit will mature before the cold weather comes.

Campaign Communications.

We print three communications to-day, which have for their subject more or less directly the political pot-pourri at present agitating the Royal City. Our columns are open for the discussion of this or any other question of a public nature, without any condition as to whether correspondents shall sign their proper names or a nom de plume. The only conditions we do make are that communications must be brief as possible and to the point (this we must insist on, in order to accommodate all who may wish to occupy our limited space), and that matter properly be longing to an advertisement, should not be embodied in the letters.

The Ethics of the Bar.

The lecture last night at the Y. M. C. A. rooms by Mr. A. C. Brydone-Jack, on the "Ethics of the Bar," was not so well attended as it deserved. The lecturer briefly sketched the history of law from the remotest times, and gravely assured his hearers that although the words "lawyer" and "bar" sounded startingly similar, there was a wide distinction. The speaker said the lawyers used to have great trouble in collecting their fees in the olden time, but to day it was quite different, as the matter was considered rather as a debt of honor than as a stringent obligation. The lecture was most instructive and amusing, and Mr. Brydone-Jack may be induced to repeat it at some future date.

The Fishery Steamer.

Mr. George H. Cooper is building a fine steamer at Sapperton which he intends to use in the deep sea fisheries. The new craft will be 90 feet in length, 12 feet beam and 8 feet hold. She will be furnished with 60 horse-power engines which it is expected will give the vessel a speed of 12 knots per hour. The new steamer will be complete and ready for operations early next spring, and she will cruise between the mouth of the Fraser and Queen Charlotte Islands in the cod and halibut fisheries. She will be the most complete fishing vessel on the coast, and will be furnished with the first trawel nets ever used in Northern Pacific waters. Mr. Cooper was for some years a fisherman on the coast of England, and the experience gained there will doubtless prove of much value to him in these waters.

A Great Disappointment.

A very strong feeling of disappointment became general this afternoon when it was positively learned that the vice-regal party could not arrive. Many citizens had shown the utmost zeal in preparing the decorations, which were very effective and pretty, indeed; and, naturally they felt put out at this unwelcome intelligence. The opera house had received the attention of two gentlemen whose artistic taste and skill are there to speak for themselves. The fine, new wharf belonging to Messrs. Mathers and Milligan, had also been put into a state of creditable ornamentation, a dais prepared, carpet laid down and Chinese lanterns got ready.

The heevy fog which prevailed in the gulf all day made it impossible for the man-o'-war conveying their excellencies, to reach Vancouver, and in consequence of this unfortunate circumstance much of the time and trouble expended on the work of decoration will be thrown away.

Caledonian and St. Andrew's Society.

The adjourned meeting of the Caledonian and St. Andrew's Society, held last evening was the most successful business meeting the society has had for a long time. Mr. L. F. Benson occupied the chair in the absence of the chief, Mr. A. Ewen, who, however, came in late in the evening. Several new members were admitted and a considerable amount of dues in arrears was collected. The election of officers resulted as follows: Chief, Mr. A. Ewen (re-elected); first chieftain, Peter Grant; second chieftain, James Stevens; Secretary and Treasurer, S. McIntosh; chaplain and warden, John McMurphy, senr.; directors, James Punch, L. F. Benson, James Laidlaw, T. F. Sinclair and Thomas Mowat. The chief, first and second chieftains and the secretary were appointed a committee to complete arrangements for the annual dinner on St. Andrew's night, Nov. 30., or, that being Saturday, such other evening as they may deem most convenient. The meeting adjourned a few minutes before 10 o'clock.

Mr. Major's Rejoinder.

EDITOR COLUMBIAN.—Sir: I will be as brief as possible in reply to Mr. Cunningham's effusion of yesterday. I feel I owe you an apology for giving that gentleman a chance to "dead-beat" his election address in your columns.

He begins by saying that as he has been on friendly terms with me for a long time, he cannot account for my action, except on the supposition that I am excited by the "bare chance" of getting Mr. Corbould into the legislature to look after some supposed interests or schemes of mine in connection with my Vancouver property.

It is true that we have been on friendly terms for a long time; but it is now evident that it was a one-side arrangement. As soon as I refused to be hitched to the kite-tail of Mr. Cunningham's ambition, he showed the value of his friendly professions by publishing a grossly untruthful and slanderous statement about me—conduct which I would not put up with from a friend of fifty years' standing; and when I, as calmly and gently as possible, repel the attack which he made upon me, he begins to whine about my violence! I have sought no quarrel with Mr. Cunningham, and seek none; I simply claim the right to repel unjust attack.

I own some property in Vancouver; (I have none in Oregon, though). I paid 100 cents in the dollar for it, and as I have done so, and have the titles, I fail to see wherein I need the assistance of either Mr. Corbould or Mr. Cunningham.

It may be a crime to own property in Vancouver. If it is, I think Mr. Cunningham had better look after his own principal supporter—the gentleman who, at the recent public meeting, proposed his unanimous election. That gentleman, I believe, owns about ten times as much property in Vancouver as I do.

But even if I owned the whole of Vancouver—even if I had gone there and declared my solemn intention to become a citizen—I don't understand how it affects the point at issue, which is, did Mr. Cunningham or did he not volunteer the statement that he would retire in Mr. Corbould's favor if that gentleman came out; and did he or did he not acknowledge, in the presence of the witness whom I named, that he had voluntarily made that offer? I have already said, and repeat that he did both. Whether he was under the influence of a "strong delusion" at the time or not, I can't say—I can only testify as to the facts.

In his column of windy imaginings, Mr. Cunningham says I told him that if he resigned (from the council) I would sell out and move away. This new fiction, like those which preceded it, has a slight admixture of truth. I said he was needed in the council (I confess I have had a little new light since I said so); but the rest of Mr. Cunningham's statement is the product of his own "imaginative nature." I never said I would sell out and move away, nor did such a thought ever enter my mind.

When Mr. Cunningham says that he could not have volunteered to resign, because "the interests involved are of too serious a nature for such a thought," does he refer to private interests—axes to grind, in fact—or is the sentence an instance of monumental cheek—an assertion that he is the only man in New Westminster fit to represent us in the local house?

I have now done with this matter until and unless Mr. Cunningham is prepared to rebut the testimony of my witness to his acknowledgment. Should I, however, be compelled to trouble you for further space, I propose to pay you advertising rates.

Wm. McIlwraith, editor and proprietor of the Capricornian and Morning Bulletin, Rockhampton, Queensland, Australia, paid us a friendly visit to-day. Mr. McIlwraith, whose home is right under the tropic of Capricorn, is on a health and pleasure tour in more northern latitudes. He is delighted with British Columbia and enthusiastic about establishing closer trade and communicative facilities between this part of the British empire and the land of the Southern Cross.

LATE CANADIAN NEWS.

Miss Minnie O'Connor, of Toronto, has instituted proceedings against dentist Frank Stowe, to recover damages for injuries received through carbolic acid spilling over and disfiguring her face while attending to her teeth. Stowe claims the accident was the fault of the patient.

The order-in-council of May last, providing that steamships plying in Canadian waters with boilers constructed in the United kingdom, and inspected by the imperial board of trade of England, shall be exempted from inspection in Canada for a period of twelve months from date of inspection in the United Kingdom, has been cancelled, says a late Ottawa dispatch.
