THE EDENOGRAPH

OCT 14 1904
VICTORIA, B.C.

VOLUME I. NUMBER 22. ENDERBY, B. C., OCTOBER 12, 1904. PRICE, $2 A YEAR

Enderby Doings

Mrs. A. Falkner and family arrived Tuesday morning from the east.

F. Pyman received an assortment of handsome finger rings this week.

Alex Dale opened his restaurant in the Metcalfe building this morning.

Half a carload of Christies' biscuits arrived this week for H. W. Harvey.

The Enderby Trading Co. is receiving shipments daily for their new store.

The ladies of the Reading Circle will meet at the home of Mrs. Geo. Bell, Thursday afternoon.

Thos. Hoben visited the Okanagan from New Denver last week, stopping over at Enderby one day.

The Kamloops Lumber Company shipped four cars of lumber to the Territories this week from Enderby.

Mrs. H. W. Wright returned from the coast Monday morning, after attending the Provincial fair and other events of interest.

Grand Chancellor Ferguson, K. of P., passed through Enderby en route to Kelowna this morning. He will return this way, Friday or Saturday.

The electric lights put in by the mill company, at the mill, the office and boarding house are perfect—way above the average, thanks to the thorough work of electrician Sellers.

Messrs. Loughed, Morgan and Wood, of Revelstoke spent last week at Mara lake on a hunting expedition. They were loaded down with guns and boats and bait, but didn't bag much game.

Owing to the unusually low water, it is not possible to get the pile timber for the new bridge at Enderby down the river this year, and the building of the bridge has been delayed until spring.

Jas. Bell and Miss A. Folkard were married last Wednesday afternoon by Rev. Mr. Venables at the home of the bride's parents, and left the same afternoon for Revelstoke, returning Monday morning.

Tom Wellman has moved into his new home on the 20-acre tract recently purchased in the Strickland addition. He has his property cleared from the railroad to the river, and will plant it to fruit trees.

Chief Constable Simmons was in Enderby Tuesday to assist in the prosecution of the case against H. Blurton. He afterwards went up the Mabel Lake Valley after some Indian witnesses in another case.

Charles Hancock's saddle horse attempted to jump a picket fence in the pasture field at the Stepney ranch on Monday and was spiked by three pickets. The injury was so bad that the animal was shot on the spot.

Messrs. Vankleek and Wolfenden returned from their hunting trip with H. Blurton, of Mara, Sunday evening, bringing with them the head of a fine buck and several bear skins. They did not get within shot of any caribou.

The foundation for the new brick block to be built by Geo. R. Sharpe is nearly completed. It will give a basement with six-foot ceiling, where Mr. Sharpe will install a sausage making machine and meat curing apparatus.

R. H. Trueman, the man who makes you look pleasant long enough to take your photo by looking pleasant all the time himself, will be in Enderby on the 17th and 18th of this month. This will be the time to have your Xmas photos taken.

A valuable saddle horse belonging to the Stepney ranch and another belonging to A. L. Fortune, were stolen from the tie post at the postoffice Saturday evening, and were found the following morning tied in the woods some distance from town.

The C.P.R. roadmaster suggests that teamsters should take a little pains in driving over the crossing at Cliff street, so as not to damage the ties, since the company has so graciously put in the new street crossing and sidewalk, and keeps the crossing open.

In order to bring the matter before the citizens of Enderby and have some action taken, Mr. Rosoman asks that all interested in the question of a library will meet at the present reading room Thursday evening at 3 o'clock to discuss the matter with him.

Forest Fire Inspector Reid had H. Blurton of Mara up before Magistrates Fortune and Barnes Tuesday morning under the forest fire act, but there was no evidence to prove that Mr. Blurton was responsible for the fire complained of and the accused was acquitted.

In order to put a chain in the new conveyor the sawmill has not been running since Tuesday noon. This conveyor carries the trimmings 300 feet from the mill and will dump them on the river shore, where a burner will be started as soon as the pile gets above high water.

About quitting time Friday evening Wm. Bradley fell from the scaffolding at the roof of the Hale residence, and had his hip thrown out of joint, and was carried home on a stretcher. Dr. Bentley was called, and on learning of the nature of the injury he summoned Dr. McSorley to assist him. The joint was set, and Mr. Bradley is slowly recoverng.

Contractor McDonald is demonstrating the thoroughness of his work in the finishing of the interior of the Bell block. Every corner is rounded, every board is matched, every crack—but there are no cracks. For counter tops he shipped in from the coast three slivers 30 inches wide, 2 inches thick and 26 feet long, and another of the same thickness and width but 14 feet long. And in the four boards one little knot is apparent.

J. C. Metcalf moved into his new building this week, and he now has one of the most convenient and modern store rooms in the Valley. It is 24x40 feet, with two large windows for display purposes. The interior is finished in drab, with blue trimmings; the exterior is dark green with black and red trimmings, with a touch of yellow to catch the eye. On the west side the shelves are stocked with groceries, and the east shelves are filled with men's furnishings, rubber goods, etc. It is a very tony looking establishment.

Prof. Louis A. Hepburn, of New York, late instructor of Beaman's Conservatory of Dancing in Montreal, who has since conducted classes in Calgary, Medicine Hat, Edmonton, Revelstoke, Cranbrook, Fort William, Port Arthur, Nelson, Grand Forks and Greenwood, expects to organize a class in dancing in Enderby. Prof. Hepburn has had a most extensive and varied experience as a teacher of dancing and the dramatic art, social refinement, deportment and etiquette, and has in his possession testimonials which vouch for the most satisfactory results from his instruction. He will be in Enderby shortly to look into the matter. He now has schools in Vernon and Armstrong.

Bell Block About Finished.

Contractor McDonald will soon turn the keys of the Bell brick block over to the owner. He is now putting on the finishing touches. By the first of November it is expected that all the rooms will be ready for the occupants. Then there will be some doin's there.

The dimensions of the building are 90x60; two storys. It is entirely of brick, and presents a very substantial appearance. The front of the lower floor is plate glass, and the second story windows are arched, with single-paned lights. A six-foot stairway leads from the street to the upper floor.

The lower floor will be occupied by the Enderby Trading Company, and the Enderby Pharmacy, and the upper floor by the L.O.L. lodgeroom; the Enderby Trading Co's dressmaking parlors, presided over by Miss McLeod, Dr. Bentley's and other office rooms, and THE EDENOGRAPH printing emporium.

The Annex Opened.

The carpenters have finished the upper story of the Enderby Hotel annex, and today Mr. Wright is furnishing ten of the rooms for occupancy. The balance of the rooms (eight) will be put in condition to receive roomers as soon as possible. The lower floor is nearly finished also, and by the end of the week the wires should be strung to the building and the whole lighted by electricity. This will give Enderby as comfortable a hotel as can be found anywhere.

The hotel rooms are very neatly finished in oil and varnish, and the furnishings are all new and first-class.

It is intimated from outside source that the Bank of Montreal will occupy the corner room until a suitable building can be erected for it; but this is not confirmed either by Mr. Wright or the bank people.

The business of the Vernon Hardware Company has been purchased by James Vallance, who has been for the past eight years in the hardware business in Sandon, B.C. A joint stock company will be formed to carry on the business, which will be conducted under the old name.—Vernon News.

An Excellent Performance.

Last Wednesday evening a crowded house greeted the Harold Nelson company at the Enderby Opera House. The company played the romantic, military drama "Heart and Sword," and the presentation was the cleanest, neatest and cleverest that has ever been seen in Enderby. Harold Nelson is one of the cleverest of Canadian actors, and in "Heart and Sword" he has ample scope to bring his cleverness and elocutionary powers into play. He was seen at his best Wednesday night—his best, because it always takes the best that is in a man to make the best of the worst of circumstances.

His support was good in every respect, the play being well balanced throughout. Miss Scott and Miss Chadwick were great favorites. Miss Chadwick speaks her lines as if she were in a dream, but her graceful and petite figure offset all this. As "Willie" she was just charming, the boys said. Every member of the company came in for their share of applause.

The best thing of the evening was not on the program. It was a roast by Harold Nelson himself. Mr. Nelson can roast a man to a brown finish as naturally as he plays the devil in Goethe's "Faust," and with no more effort. He talked about the manager of the hall. That's all. Won't tell you what he said, but it was highly appreciated. And all because manager Tompkinson didn't attend to his part of the agreement. The company had to climb through a window to get into the hall, and lots of other dirty things. It was all so unique, and he told what he thought of Mr. Tomkinson so cheerfully that it made everybody feel good.

The performance simply shows what clever people can do, bonched on a dry goods box, and surrounded by painted canvass to keep them from falling off.

Any Time Will Do.

Owing to the run in capital letters in the publishing of the prize list, we are unable to print the school report and some other interesting articles this week. They will appear in our next issue.—Armstrong Advertiser.

Incorporation

Attorney Fred Billings came from Vernon Friday evening, bringing with him the petition, plans, and all the papers necessary to complete incorporation for the town of Enderby. These were placed in the hands of the committee having charge of the business. That evening a meeting of the committee was held, with Mr. Billings present, and the matter was thoroughly gone into. On Saturday Messrs. Harvey and Bell took in hand the petition to be signed by the property owners, and in a short time enough signatures were had to make incorporation possible. The majority is more than two to one in favor of it. Indeed, there is scarcely any opposition.

The committee are now waiting to have a few matters settled, relative to school, drainage, and revenue, before taking the final step. These matters will require a few days delay, when, if all is favorable, the matter will be closed at once and Enderby will start the New Year a full-fledged town.

With the matter of incorporation settled, Enderby will have taken up the responsibilities of self-government, and places herself in a position to do things quickly and well. The business men and property owners generally are taking every precaution to guard against extravagance, and if the present policy is adhered to, we will have a town that will attract home-seekers from all quarters. There is that harmonious spirit that portends good. The proposed limits of the town are small; there are no additions thrown upon the town by real estate promoters, where the streets are to be graded, sidewalked and sewered. The improvements can easily be kept within the limits of the revenue and the rate of taxation thus kept down.

Proud Distinction

Salmon Arm fruit growers are to be congratulated on the prominence given to their display at the Provincial exhibition. They have earned for their district a distinction that is more valuable to them than columns of printed matter and volumes of talk about the district. The display in the Hudson Bay windows, spoken of below by our correspondent, will be viewed by thousands, and all will speak a good word for the Arm.

SALMON ARM ITEMS.

W. M. Pratt, our veterinary and druggist, is making many improvements about his place.

Geo. McKay has let a contract for clearing five acres to Lawrence & Jones on Mr. Cherrie's fruit farm.

Everyone is preparing his land for next year's crops. A large area is being cleared for orchards to be planted next year.

We can all insure against fire at McCallum's office in the Stewart block, he having the agency of three companies.

Our fruit growers are looking happy. Their showings at Kamloops carrying off many of the prizes. They made a splendid district exhibit at New Westminster. Salmon Arm fruit was one of the attractions there—so much so, that the Hudson Bay Company of Vancouver took the whole exhibit to place in their large windows. Every Armite may feel proud of their first district exhibit.

Enderby Can't Oblige.

It is somewhat amusing to hear citizens of Vernon give advise to Enderby about incorporation. All who have ventured to speak on the question earnestly advise that we do not incorporate. Just what is behind it all we do not know, but this is sure: if the citizens of Enderby will sit still and let things jog along any old way until Vernon wakens up and asks her to incorporate, we all will be paying our compliments to St. Peter and waiting for our grand children to climb the golden stairs, before we get the signal. Vernon owes her present prominence to the fact of her being the only incorporated town in the Valley. Had she not incorporated Vernon would be only a village today. Even after the extravagance that Vernon has suffered from the town is far ahead of where it would have been had it remained an unincorporated village. It is natural for Vernon to discourage any move tending to energize this end of the Valley. She has always had the distinction of being the one incorporated city in the Okanagan, and as such has drawn trade and support from the unincorporated villiages. It is the only town in the Valley that can afford to sit still and let others come to it. Enderby cannot. Enderby must rustle if this end of the Valley is to be kept before the home-seeking public

It is not a question of what Vernon citizens would do if they were in Enderby. The question is, would the citizens of Vernon go back to the days when it was a village? It is a question, too, of what Enderby citizens are going to do with Enderby. The Okanagan Valley is just starting on an era of prosperity the likes of which it has never known. If Enderby is to hold up its end it must act for itself now, regardless of what others think it ought to do. We have got to look to the future, the foundation for which we must lay today. This is Enderby's opportunity to hold this end of the Valley level with the southern end. Are we going to sit in the shade and wait because others are not ready for us to move.

Perhaps!

Light Ware Like Silver.

Did you ever use aluminum ware cooking utensils and table sets? Perhaps you never saw anything so nice as the stock shown in the window and on the shelves of the Armstrong Hardware company. We are sure you never saw anything nicer. Mr. Armstrong will be pleased to show and tell you all about the goods. For beauty, utility and serviceability, there is nothing so good as aluminum. It looks like silver ware, is the lightest metal known, and will stand more heat than any other. The Armstrong firm has in stock everything from dainty little egg holders, salt and pepper shakers, to camping outfits of 26 pieces that weigh just eight pounds. The camping outfits are as unique as they are handy. Included in each outfit is everything needed for the kitchen and table in camp life, all compactly packed in a stew kettle not so large as a small pot.

Voice From The Pulpit.

Gen. 21:17—"Fear not, for God hath heard the voice of the lad." From this text Rev. Mr. Venables preached Sunday evening. Taking the characters of Hagar and her son Ishmael as typical of the individual heartsick with trouble, he said: "Many a man's heart has been depressed since then, and many, like Hagar, have withdrawn to suffer as it were out of sight of others. And yet, how many have found that when they least looked for it they were not alone, but that the desert of their sorrow was full really of the presence of God. There is a lesson for all in this history of Hagar and Ishmael. God's eye is upon us now, as it was upon Ishmael then, and He is our protection as He was Ishmael's then." God had a purpose for Ishmael. Had he remained at home he would have been Isaac's servant, but was cast out and so became a prince. He has His purposes for us. One of them is that we should work for him, for the advancement of his kingdom. We can do it by working for the church, for it needs it much. It needs the help of every member. Conscience speaks. If we stifle the voice it is sin against God. You must at least render an account of your use of every talent.

In our last issue we quoted the Kelowna Clarion to the effect that, as a result of an interesting experiment in irrigating a small strawberry patch after the first crop was taken off, D. E. Gellately, of Gellately's, Okanagan lake, expected to be able to produce marketable berries in September next. We have since been shown a box of these late strawberries, which was sent to a gentleman in this city. The berries are fully matured and of good flavor, and when produced in quantities next year should command a price that will adequately reward the ingenious enterprise of the producers.—Vernon News.

ENDERBY'S PROSPERITY.

Time is the great test. When the early settlers came into the Okanagan 20 or 30 years ago, and looked up and down the Spallumcheen river for land suitable for farming and stock raising, they selected that in this end of the Valley. More recent settlers have gone farther up the Valley, preferring the dryer locality. But subsequent events have proved, and are proving each year, that the Enderby District is vastly superior for cattle raising, fruits, vegetables, hay and cereals. This in a large measure accounts for the revival of interest in this section. The incoming of people and money has not abated, and will doubtless continue throughout the winter, and next spring and summer will exceed that of the past. Enderby's prosperity is not of the transitory nature. It is the genuine article. There has been no booming. The advantages of the district have been plainly stated. The closest investigation has been solicited. And is still solicited.

Enderby has the business to back it up. And behind the town there is the farming section. We do not ask you to take anything for granted. That's not business. See the proof. Look over the Valley. Investigate. Enderby can stand it. Don't you think so?

ARMSTRONG FAIR.

The Armstrong and Spallumcheen Agricultural Society is to be congratulated on the success of the fall exhibition. These annual exhibits are a good thing for the Valley, and especially for the Armstrong district. But, if the Society wants to make the exhibits permanently successful and of lasting benefit; if it would make it a general thing, avoid dissatisfaction, and encourage exhibitors from points outside of Armstrong, it should do what it can to overcome the feeling of exhibitors that partiality is shown in the awarding of prizes. It is not difficult to avoid this, but it is difficult to overcome the feeling when once it is created.

THE MINT PROMISE.

Two years ago the Laurier government promised the Canadian people a mint for Canada. It was to be built in one year. It has not been built yet, and there isn't any evidence that it is going to be built. It was only a promise. Like most campaign promises it resulted in nothing, and was apparently made to catch votes.

The question of a mint for Canada is as important, if not more important, than the question of government ownership. When we consider the immense resources of Canada; her great growth and her dawning importance as a nation, we are amazed at her adherence to the monetary laws of infant colonial days. Think of it! We have not one dollar of legal tender money gold. Not a cent of Canadian coined money! Dependent upon England for our Canadian silver coins, and upon the United States for what gold we have to use in our bartering with other peoples! Is this a comforting thought? Does it inspire your national pride?

When the mint question was raised two years ago, the presidents of the banks of Canada also raised against it. They did not like to think of having their bank bills replace by gold and silver coins, and they told Sir Wilfred so. At all events, Sir Wilfred went back on his country; the mint was not built. But all bank presidents are not so blind to Canada's interests, and some of them say things away from home that they wouldn't say at a directors' meeting. Not long ago the president of the Imperial Bank of Canada was visiting Vancouver, and while there he talked about a mint. He said:

"Canada needs a mint, both for business and sentimental reasons, and no part of the whole country would benefit so much by it as British Columbia. Here gold, silver and copper are mined, and the big gold country to the north is tributary to the province. Now all this gold goes to United States banks, only to come back to Canada as coinage. There is an assay office in Vancouver, and the benefit of that institution being there has been obvious. But the gold is nearly all eventually taken to the United States, there coined, and Canadian financial institutions have to receive it back from across the line.

"This country is literally flooded with American silver. On every dollar of that silver, the country to the south makes roughly fifty cents. Why should Canada not make that fifty cents on her own silver, mined and minted? The United States makes the difference between the bullion price of the silver in the open market and the value of the dollar after the stamp is on it.

"There was very little use refusing American coinage, or even discounting it. The better way would be to accept the money at par, and then ship it all back to the States. With a mint turning out Canadian coinage, our own money would soon become the universal medium of exchange in the country, and Canada would reap the resultant profit between the value of the metal and the value of the coin.

"The sentimental advantage of having a Canadian coinage, too, is great. There is no doubt that the ordinary man, having before him from childhood the continual idea of the emblem of a foreign country, as it appears on the United States coins, becomes impressed, unconsciously perhaps, with the idea of the importance of that country and of that emblem. Why not have the king's head on that coinage, and make that impression a Canadian one? As it is we are advertising another country at the expense of our own."

"DOWN WITH POPERY."

To what absurd limits men will go in the name of religion! Just now a movement is on foot in England to push Popery out of the Established church. Year after year, in that secret, subtile way characteristic of the organization, the Church of Rome has been fastening its fangs upon the Church of England, until today the Established church is so inoculated with the curse of Popery that the great English people have risen up in open revolt.

At the annual Church of England congress held in London last week, as the procession of bishops and clergy, in their robes, marched to the Cathedral they were greeted with cries of "Down with Popery," "Oh, for another Luther" "Traitors," "It is Popery in the streets" "Send them all to Rome," etc.

This is a healthy sign. When we are fully civilized there won't be any Church of Rome, Church of England, or Church of Anythingelse. There will be one church, the Church of God, and instead of being priests' puppets, men will be friends and brothers to Christ.

From Mill to Consumer.

A number of British Columbia manufacturers have withdrawn from the membership of the Western Retail Lumber Dealers' Association, and have formed themselves into a company known as the Manufacturers' Lumber Company, for the purpose of establishing a system of retail lumber yards throughout the Territories and Manitoba. This has been taken by the public press to imply that "war has been declared" between manufacturer and retailer, but such is not the case. The purpose of the new company is to directly compete against the inroads of American lumber, which has been promiscuously scattered through the Prairie Provinces and handled by agents of American companies. Under the present system it was next to impossible for manufacturers or dealers to do business under existing conditions.—B. C. Lumberman.

Yes, Sir: We're Studyin'

The citizens of Cranbrook, Enderby and Ymir are considering incorporation. All are growing, thrifty towns that need improvements, the expense of which is too great to be met by voluntary subscription, where all property owners would not bear their share alike. A careful study of the life of each of the smaller cities of British Columbia since incorporation will afford them a good lesson in how to govern themselves.—Slocan Drill.

How It Is Done.

A patron of a certain newspaper once said, "Mr. Printer, how is it you never call on me for pay for your paper?" "Oh!" said the man of types, "we never ask a gentleman for money." "Indeed!" the patron replied. "How do you manage to get along when he don't pay?" "Why," said the clicker of cold lead, "after a certain time we conclude he is not a gentleman, and ask him."

HANK PECLAR IN THE DARK WOODS.

WE HEAR men lay great stress upon what they please to term consistency. But, know this, sweetheart, there is a consistency that appears to the ordinary mind and the casual observer to be inconsistent, and there is another consistency that is stagnation, pure and simple. There is a consistency in one's conduct toward God and Nature that is inconsistent in the eyes of little men, and another consistency which, as Emerson put it, "is the hobgoblin of little minds, adored by little statesmen and philosophers and divines, and with which a great soul has simply nothing to do." As well concern ourselves with our shadow on the wall as to limit ourselves to this consistency that retards.

Let us first make sure of growth. Let us not be alarmed if Sarah Jane or Sally Ann thinks we are inconsistent. Consistency and purity are one. All things are pure and consistent to a mind that is not shackled by prudery and bigotry. The most innocent expression will often convey the most "suggestive" thoughts to a mind that is impure.

Let us grow! Let us not be satisfied to think and act as we did yesterday. Yesterday's thoughts were good for yesterday, but they will not do for today. Let a man adopt this principle in his daily social and business life, that he will walk with no other guide but his God, and, presto! The first stone that will be thrown at him will come from the straight-laced corner. Let a man take God into his business as familiarly as we would take the hand of a friend; let him feel that his bedchamber is as holy as the pulpit, and that the most menial service is as important as preaching the gospel, and the good old fathers of the long gown will shoot orthodoxy into him from the high places.

But let us not quarrel. They have their work; we have ours. If it is your business to think with and talk to men who think and act for themselves, independent of what their neighbors think and act, be faithful in that business. But don't, please don't, hold a plumb-bob under your neighbor's nose.

Let us hitch our go-cart, however small it be, to that Bright Star, and so consistently inconsistently live that we shall draw other men in happiness to it. Man, however animalistic he has grown, is still the best thing created—except woman. Being intended for so good a thing, he is a fool to stop and quibble and cringe and debauch before the gods of folly, frills and frizzes.

The closer we get to Nature, the closer we get to God. And nothing is so consistently inconsistent to the little mind as Nature itself.

Won't Shrinks

That's what those who know say of the "WOLSEY" UNDERWEAR. You can't make them shrink. It has been tried. Listen: "Dear Sir, The "Wolsey Underclothing I got from you some time ago has been thoroughly tested in my laundry. The instructions given to my flannel washer were to shrink the goods if possible, and I felt quite sure that the process to which they were subjected would shrink them, but after repeated trials I found them as large as ever, and perfectly soft. I can vouch for the fact that the "Wolsey" brand of Underwear is positively unskrinkable. Yours very truly, M. M. Pyke, proprietor Pyke's Steam Laundry, Ottawa." You can get these goods of us now. Take It Easier.

Don't you worry;
Don't you hurry;
Take it easy when you can.
Allers choppin'
Without stoppin'
To grind your ax 's a foolish plan.

Don't keep mussin'
Roun' an' fussin'
Over somepin'. Some I know
'S so all-fired
Worn an' tired,
Make the folks about 'em so.

Don't keep fightin'
Without sightin';
Take your time an' git your aim.
Don't ferever
Shoot an' never
Bag your proper share o' game.

Don't you borrow
Care and sorrow;
Make more progress, so I find,
Sometimes settin'
Roun' a-lettin'
Things go 'bout as they've a mind.

DOMESTIC INFELICITY

"Do you know the cause of most railway accidents?" asked a Division Superintendent on the Lake Shore of me the other day, as we were waiting on the platform at Ashtabula.

"What causes most accidents? Why, disobedience of orders," I answered.

"You are only partially right—the cause lies deeper. Why should a railway employee disobey orders? Why should an engineer run past the station where he is ordered to stop?—it is his own life he endangers most. Why should a train-dispatcher send out two trains facing each other on one track? Or why should a switch-tender throw a switch in front of a fast express?

"You call these accidents,—but that is not the word—they are the result of wrong mental conditions: and this wrong condition is usually domestic infelicity.

"Do you remember when two trains met, head-on, out in Indiana last year? The engineer of one of those trains had in his pocket an order to take the side-track at a certain station. He ran by that station at the rate of 50 miles an hour, and in five minutes there was a crash that snuffed out 54 lives and $200,000 worth of property.

"I knew the engineer. Let us call him Hank Bristol, for that wasn't his name. He was married to a smashing, dashing, beautiful creature, and they boarded at a hotel—had no children. I boarded there, too, and we all made eyes at Hank's handsome wife. She used to play the piano and sing a little, and recite. The love of one plain, honest man was not enough for her—she craved the admiration of the clever. She wasn't a bad woman—just an idle one, one who spent every spare cent Hank made, on finery, and, of course, wanted the finery and herself admired.

"Hank was proud of her, too. One evening he kissed the dear creature good-bye and started out to make a night run. He went to the round-house, and at the last moment the Ol' Man decided to save Hank back and let him take out a special carrying the President and Directors of the road, in the morning. Hank was tickled. It was a great compliment to him. He went home to tell his wife—he used to tell her everything.

"But when he got home, she wasn't there—she had gone to the theatre with a boot and shoe drummer.

"Hank went away and walked the streets all night—his wife never knew, and I believe she doesn't yet. He walked the streets all night, and ran out the special in the morning.

"But after that he was never the same. He used to confide in me—he just had to tell some one to keep his heart from bursting.

"He grew absent-minded, lost flesh, appetite gone, was nervous—the doctor said he should quit coffee and cut out half the tobacco.

"I knew what was the matter: he was jealous. I told him so—and he laughed a laugh that gave me goose-flesh. 'I jealous? Why, Bill, you don't know me—I jealous? The idea! No. I'm only mad at myself, Bill, because I'm married to a damned fool of a woman, who makes my heart eat itself out with grief because she lives on the fringe of folly. Why don't I leave her! My God! Bill, that is the trouble—I can't—I love her!'

"Hank didn't work on our road or I'd never have let him touch a throttle-valve, even if he had been my brother. I knew it would come. He was found under his engine, the order that he had disobeyed in his pocket, and a picture in his watch of the woman who caused the disaster. No, it probably has never dawned upon this woman that she caused the wreck. She wore deep mourning, and the cutest little black bonnet with a white ruche. She was the most fetching widow you ever saw, and she knew it.

"Yes, that is what I said—marital infelicity causes the railroad wrecks and most others, too.

"The only safe man is one whose heart is at rest—who has a home, and a wife who stays there and minds her business, looks after the babies, has no secrets, and does not make eyes at other men—that's the kind! I know every man that works for me, and I know a disturbed, distressed and jealous man a train-length away. My heart bleeds for 'em, but I serve the public and none such can run an engine for me.

"Do you see that man in the blue overalls down there at the end of the platform? Well, he is the engineer who will take out this train. See how calm, satisfied and self-possessed he is; he has no cares, no anxieties beyond the desire to do his work well. See him now walking around his engine, lovingly looking it over. He is not so awfully brilliant, but he will never disappoint you. Now, when we start, about two miles out, you will hear the engine give three soft toots, and over to the left, a little woman will come out of a white cottage and wave he apron!"

The conductor called "All aboard!" The bell clanged warningly, we stepped into the coach and the train started. We had reached the outskirts of the town and were skimming along at the rate of 30 miles an hour.

The engine gave three short, soft whistles. I saw the white cottage, a woman standing on the back porch with children holding on to her skirts all 'round—she was waving a big check apron!

"What did I tell you?" asked the Superintendent—"that man's heart is at rest—he will never forget an order—he is safe; his mind is free, so he does his work! He is at peace with the world. You can always trust a man who honestly loves and is loved honestly."---The Philistine.

Under The Olive Tree

WITH HANK BEKLAW

Let's quit blabbing.

Fight and the world fights with you.

There is no sin so sinful as the sin of believing that we are without sin.

So long as the thing is done, what difference does it make who does it?

I take it all back. If you are in love, don't make the best of it. Let "it" make the best of you.

The boy that shirks today will tomorrow be the man who slinks, and skims, and lops through his business.

The word "sacred," printed across the cover sheet, has given many a poor ballad an a-men chorus and a ready sale.

There is much to admire in the man in blue jeans who's children gather at the gate or run down the road to meet him.

The man that is afraid of others getting credit for his accomplishments, is usually the most ready to take that which belongs to another.

Sentiment! Of course, sentiment. Where is the man in business, in love, in war that has accomplished anything really worthy without it!

It does not matter so much what we were before we were born, or before man became man. The great question is what are we going to be as men, now and hereafter.

If I had my choice between one million dollars and one single thought that would lead one soul one inch closer in touch with his fellows and his God I would—think about it. Wouldn't you?

A man's politics is like his religion. It should be a private matter, and until we can talk reasonably with and respect each other, and honor one another's opinions, we shall not be wholly civilized.

If you are living right—doing your work for the work's sake—loving and suffering for love's sake—just doing things because they ought to be done—and not for praise or glory—it will not much matter what your neighbor thinks about it, will it?

There is this about it: flowers about the church door may mean a little labor, but don't you think your service of worship would be more acceptable to God from a bed of roses that required care and labor to bring to bloom, than from a nest of thistles that are the outgrowth of carelessness, and a desire not to do anything but pray and to listen to prayer?

Autumn Thoughts.

By M. A. P. Mara.

'Tis Autumn and the yellow leaves
Are falling thick and fast.
The summer glory now is o'er,
Its radiant beauty past.

'Tis but a little since those leaves
All fresh and green appeared.
The tall trees reared their stately heads
As if no storm they feared.

A little while and they shall stand
All naked, gaunt and bare,
With leafless, quivering boughs uptossed
Upon the wintry air.

Again a little, they shall stand
In vernal beauty clad,
The sun shall shine, the flowers bloom
And all the earth be glad.

My life is like an autumn day
E're sinks to rest the sun;
The hopes I cherished—all are fled,
They perished one by one.

'Tis but a little since I thought
Those hopes would never fade,
Nor dreamt how soon the friends I loved
Would 'neath the sod be laid.

A little while, and I shall lie
At rest within the tomb,
The storms of life will all be o'er—
Its sunshine and its gloom.

Again a little, I shall rise
And in that world of light,
Where not a hope is unfilled
With well loved friends unite.

THE next issue of THE EDENOGRAPH will be from the new Bell Block, where we have secured larger quarters. You will find us upstairs. Our reception room will be somewhat open for a day or two, but finally we hope to make it hot enough to drive the plasterers and carpenters and painters out. Then we'll lay Brussels for you. In the meantime call us down by 'phone without ringing. If we can't reach you, we'll throw it. THE EDENOGRAPH.

In the Pulpits

What the Local Pastors Talked About Sunday

And during it all the flies and bees were bumping their heads against the windows, trying to get out into the fresh air and cheering sunshine of God's love.

Rev. Mr. Campbell took the 17th and 18th verses of 1. Peter: 4, Sunday morning for a sermon to the unhappy Christian. The Christian life, he said, was not to be treated lightly. It was ever one of trial, and tributation; straight and narrow; filled with sacrifice and awful responsibility. No man should enter upon it believing it to be one of ease and pleasure. It is one of continual striving and fainting not; the most faithful barely being saved.

And if the faithful are barely saved, "What shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God. If the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear."

There is a difference between men—the man striving to serve God, and the one caring nothing for God and His laws. They are not on the same footing in God's sight, despite the popular belief and the carelessness of men who are drifting. No amount of reasoning would convince any man of fairness that the position of the man who strives earnestly to do the will of God is in the end the same before God as the man whose life has been for self alone, regardless of His will or His way. There must be the faithfulness to the end, if we are to have the reward of faithfulness. The reward of the faithful is not given to the indifferent, the careless; the one unwilling to sacrifice anything for God, but living for self only.

"Let us consider one another," Heb. 10; 24, was the text chosen by Rev. A. tion for others is the most helpful of Christian duties. It has been said that E. Roberts Sunday evening. Considera- "man is a selfish creature;" but man with the spirit of Christ in him becomes thoughtful and considerate for others. We must consider one another in the daily life. A "little help is worth a good deal of pity," and help is the full expression of sympathy. Christ in his Sermon on the Mount gave a new law. "It has been said an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, but I say unto you, that ye resist not evil; but whosever shall smite thee on the one cheek turn to him the other also. And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain." The gospel of the extra mile is the teaching for the Christianity of today. It is for us to do the little things that make life so much brighter for others, and thus show the spirit of Christ. We must consider one another in the matter of Christian experience. Each of us has a message of cheer and help for someone else. We need to exercise true sympathy for each other as we endeavor to do the will of God upon earth. Christians should always be ready to speak the word of encouragement to one who is trying to find the true light. A word spoken in the right spirit may lead a soul to God. Consideration for others in times of sorrow and difficulty needs no emphasizing. "The heart knows its own bitterness, and a stranger cannot intermeddle with its joys" is wonderfully true, but we may "rejoice with those that rejoice, and weep with those that weep," and thus give expression to our real sympathy.

THE MARKET.

The supply of poultry on Friday's market, New Westminster, was a very good one, and the sales were brisk. The full-grown chickens were all in good condition, and brought buyers regularly. The prices per dozen for these older fry were from $6 to $7. The broilers were very plentiful, prices travelling between $3.50 and $5 per dozen. Ducks were the weakest line among the poultry, but the demand here was strong for birds in good condition. The quotations here were from $6 to $7.50 per dozen.

Butter was well represented on the exhibition mart. The quality of the offerings were very fair. The price of butter was 30c per lb., some going at 25 cents. Eggs are still in demand, and increased supplies do not seem to be coming in. The retail quotation was even at 40c per dozen, while wholesale they brought 35c. and 36c. steady.

The vegetable market was a good one. Potatoes were going only in ton lots at $16, while beets were not on hand. Onions brought $1.50 per sack, while cabbage secured 40 cents for the same quantity. Turnips were 50c. per sack.

The fruits have slackened off with the coming in of the fall and the exit of summer. Apples were the only noticeable class in the fruit division on the mart, and though they were plentiful the demand will remain weak till the fall stock is consumed. The prices ranged from 50c. to $1 per box.

Lord Dundonald Done.

There has been no echo in this country of the excited nonsense which the Canadian Jingoes uttered on the departure of Lord Dundonald. He mistook his latitude. If he had struck his heroic pose in Cape Town, he would have been welcomed at Southampton as the saviour of the Empire. Canada is another affair. For him on landing there were no bands braying Rule Britannia and Conquering Hero. For him, on the contrary, only the cold shoulder and the question, "Why did you make such a fool of yourself?" We are sorry for Lord Dundonald—a brave soldier, who deserved a better fate. But his experience will probably be profitable to those who come after him. Militarism must not go monkeying with self-governing colonies. If it does it will share the fate of the monkey with the buzzsaw.—London Review of Reviews.

Let's Try It In Enderby.

An American has asserted that "when woman takes to gardening the doctor takes a holiday." He adds that weeding gives gracefulness, and lawn mowing strong lungs. If further recommendation of gardening for women be required, we would recommend to the reader's notice an article on the subject in the Lady's Realm. "The beautiful old gardens with their lawns and vegetables, their gnarled fruit trees and gay flower beds, belonging perhaps, to some country gentleman or village rector, are, says the writer, often regarded as an unavoidable and unpleasant expense. They could, however, be converted into a source of considerable income if only able-bodied women would turn their superabundant energy—which now is used in pleasure making—in another direction."
