Dear Mrs McVicar :

I have just returned from a visit to the postoffice where I placed my manuscript in the mail. If all goes well, it will arrive in plenty of time for "evaluation, corrections and criticisms" to be promptly made. I hope that on the whole you may approve of it. I have certainly done the best I could.

The April issue of the Alumnae Magazine has just reached me and I read Miss Wolf's article on Miss Pfefferkorn with great interest and approval. It is good to know that the support of the head of the School of Nursing will be given generously to Miss Pfefferkorn -- this should go far to assure the success of the whole project.

I am afraid it might lead to misunderstanding if I were to try to give you any information about my own work. Would it not be better to be guided by the outcome of the forthcoming meeting? Within a few days, you will have seen the manuscript yourself and I am quite content to let that speak for me.

My "aviary" does not compare with yours but then I cannot afford such lavish hospitality! Nevertheless, I am having a lot of fun with my weedy little garden and cherish every little green shoot in it -- including the dandelions.

With best wishes to you both,

gratefully yours

Ethel Johns
