LATEST RETURNS OF OUTPUT

What the Mines Are Doing Over the District—Rossland Doing Well.

The mines have maintained a fair average of output during the week, and the outlook in mining circles is brighter than even a week ago. There is some talk of starting a concentrator to treat the low grade dump early in the spring, but no definite word has as yet reached the camp from London. On the other hand the recent finds on the 1350 level have proved to be even more extensive than was at first thought likely. To set off thiss the Le Roi has declared a net loss on operations for the month of December, which loss, however is conceded to be merely a matter of accounting.

The Le Roi No. 2 is doing well, and the development of the mine beyond the great western dyke has shown the likelihood of the presence of a large body of ore.

The White Bear is about to put in a 20 drill compressor, the machinery for which arrived during the week.

The concentrator at Trail is going up apace, a new lot of machinery having lately arrived which is now about to be installed. On the Elmore concentrator within the camp a new motor will be installed of a more powerful type than the one now in operation, the effect of which will be to lower the cost of concentrating. This motor is now on the ground.

The shareholders of the Velvet have agreed to amalgamate with the Portland, reduce the capitalization, erect a small reduction plant and finish the concentrator already begun upon the property. As soon snow flies operations will probably be started.

THE NEW MONARCH

Copper Property Opening Up Near Nelson

Mr. B. Fallows, mining engineer of Portland, Oregon, passed through the camp yesterday on hi. way to Nelson, where he is going to open up the Monarch Gold & Copper Mines, Limited, a recent Oregon flotation.

Mr. Fallow, in speaking to a WORLD reporter, said that he thought that he had a good thing in the Monarch mine. He assured the WORLD man that it han no connection with the ancieet Monarch now defunct. That Monarch was about four miles above Nelson, whereas this Monarch went eight higher. Mr. Fallows said that the lead upon his property was about 200 feet wide. "Larger than any thing you have in Rossland Sir." Moreover the ledge was exposed for some 2000 feet above water level, and but very little work would develop the property into a paying proposition. He had no intention of smelting, for the ore was of low grade. He had been investigating some time past various processes for the reduction of copper ore, and had come th the conclusion that the Elmore was the best. In fact he had already entered into negotiations with the Canadian Ore Concentrating Company for the installation of a mill as soon as the development work had reached that stage,

MINERAL TAXATION AGAIN

Premier McBride Has Drafted a Bill.

ATTACK ON PROVINGE FINANGES

Munro of Chilliwack Speaks for the Opposition—The Trouble With the Member for Lillooet.

Victoria, Jan 23.—The debate on the estimates was reached yesterday and the Opposition trained its guns on the treasury benches.

McGowan opened the debate for the Government, and was replied to by Munro of Chilliwack.

An interesting announcement was made by the premier during the afternoon, which was that the Government has at last completed its long looked for bill relating to mineral taxation.

McBride's bill to "remove doubt as to the validity of the election of the member for Lillooet," was read a first time but the Opposition would not permit it to advance another stage.

Munro, in speaking to the motion to go into supply, expressed his deep respect for the ministers of finance and his absolute lack of faith in his infallibility as a financer. He charged the Government with being stampeded by the banks as was proved by the fact that there was no difficulty in getting insurance companies in the east to to take up the new loan which the banks did not even touch. The Government, he claimed, had exaggerated the crisis and had created a panic.

The appointment of a commission to inquire into the financial position, he declared to be a disgraceful admission by the Government and house of inability to cope with the situation. The Land bill was freak legislation for which his constituents were paying dearly. Small mills had been driven out of business, and as a result, lands were falling into the Government's hands for the reclamation of which costly dykes had been built. Now the dykes had to be paid for and the land was useless in the hands of the Government.

The appropriations were just large enough to keep up road bosses. The province's only hope lay in the wisdom of the Ottawa government to save them from the effective of the prentice hands of this government.

Paterson said the Government proposed to derive revenue not from the natural resources of the province, but from the men who were striving to develop them. The Land Act, he held, practically recognized confiscation of lands.

KIPLING.

The editorial writer on the Vancouver Province (a popular ex-Rosslander, Jack Kerr) has lately been expatiating on the virtues of Kipling, and particularly commends his idea of training public school lads in England to the use of arms. The WORLD agress with the Province in so far that it states that the advice of the Poet of the Empire should be treated with respect, but thinks that his scheme would better befit Canada than England. For the public school of England has nothing in common with the public school of Canada except the name. There may be said to be three kinds of schools in the Old Country the one, the board school, being almost equivalent to our common schools, the private school, which again is practically the same as our private schools, and the endowed schools, such as Eton, Harrow and a host of others not so well known, including grammar schools of more or less ancient date and which class are known over the water as "public schools." In these schools are brought up for the most part sons of the wealthy and of professional men, although an extensive system of scholarship throws their curriculum open to sons of poor men who can pass certain standards. The education aimed at is general and not technical aud the usual outcome of a public school education is the university, the army or the civil service of Great Britain or India, the last named not necessarily including the university.

But the chief value of the school in England is not so much the book knowledge acquired as the training. The schools in question, and to them Kipling has exclusive reference, are boarding schools admitting but few day scholars. being for the most part situated in the country. Apart from the lessons the boys govern themselves, and a public school is in reality a republic. The motto of these schools, tacit or avowed, is a healthy mind in a healthy body. There are few youths who pay little attention to books and all to play, practically every boy must train in athletic, chsiefly through games. He is forced to so or else his life is likely to be uncomfortable. Now Kipling was a public school boy himself (Westward Ho), but Kipling was short sighted and hardly of the necessary physique. Hence his reference to "flannelled fools and muddied oafs," referring to cricket and football. His proposal is that drill take the part of games to some extent. In fact that drill and rifle shooting be made a game. The unlucky fate of such a movement Kipling himself tells in "Stalky & Co." Public school boys are turned out clean men, knowing what they know thoroughly, having learnt the lesson of governing and being governed, but as business men or classical scholars the are not too generally much of a success, and in these lines it is often wonderful what they don't know. But it is the trainfng rather than the education that the youngsters are sent to acquire. And an integral portion of that training is taught by the games of the "flannelled fools muddied oafs." If the games were cut out would the result be the same? The tendency of the school system at present is broadening, the tendency of drill is somewhat straitening. Athletic and boxing in the gymnasium, the accurate eye required in cricket, the building courage required in a football scrimmage are all of them valuable assets to the future man, especially if he becomes a soldier. But our soldiers at Baardeberg, with no extensive knowledge of drill, showed themselves not at all unworthy of a place among the front rank of the Empire's fighters. The drill would come better in college life or in the first years of business.

A social hop will be given after Paul Kauffmann's musicale, by request on Friday evening at the Miners Union hall, January 29.

The Black Prince

The lessees of the Black Prince, have 43 feet yet to drive on their raise, the total length being 113 feet. For 50 feet of this distance there is a solid shoot of ore, from which two carloads of ore have been shipped. Ore is again coming in the raise and a new body will soon be opened up. A drift has been started frim the raise on the main ore shoot and has gone 10 feet. The ore seam is wide and almost a carload of ore has been taken out. No stoping is allowed under the lease.

Judging by the programme of Paul Kauffmann's musicale at the Miners Union hall, January, 29th., the concert will certainly be worth the admission.

The Brooklyn and Stemwinder at Phoenix will start up full blast shortly, after a shut down of two years.

Bob Fraser reports the finding of an excellent ledge of ore this week on the Evening Star, Wellington camp.

Double shifts are now being worked in the new No. 4 tunnel of the Granby mines, the portal of which is at the back door of the Pioneer block.

Owing to the inability of the smelters to handle all the ore offered, the management of the Athelstan, in Wellington camp, reduced the force considerably this week.

A grass root shipper for the new electric line up the Duncan. One of the best properties on the Duncan is the Comstock group situated near the junction of the west fork and the main Duncan. The lead has been uncovered for over 100 feet and has exposed a foot of clean ore running over $70 per ton.

WINDERMERE.

On Friday last a code telegrm from New York was received by the manager of the Ptarmigan mine at Wilmer, ordering a complete shut down of the mine. This order came as a surprise to all connected with the mine, and no explanation has been given for the change of plans. It is to be hoped that the shut down will not be for long as the Ptarmigan has too large a plant to leave idle.

YMIR

At the Atlin mine they are busy getting out ore, and between now and the first of March manager Daly expects to ship 100 tons.
