THE GOLD CUP

Successful Work Carried Out at Ymir

Ymir, Jan. 22—Manager Wolfe, of the Gold Cup mine, while in town today, reported the shaft from the tunnel station being sunk 40 feet with 5½ feet of ore in the bottom. The ore, specimens of which he had with him, certainly look well, being liberally sprinkled with gold and showing much sulphides. His mill is now busy treating the ore, the first test being very satisfactory, showing that the ore is free, and very little loss in the tailings. The concentrates run $108 to the ton, as follows: Gold $74, silver $12 copper $22. The ore concentrates 1 to 50. The value of the ore now being milled runs $12.

Prices cut and slashed, for the next 10 days, at the Crescent.

COMPARISON OF FOODS

Comparative Cost of Living to Workmen in Different Countries.

On the question of comparative cost of living of workmen's families in the United States and England answers are given to certain questions by English trade union representatives who visited the United States. The replys differ greatly, but the majority of the representatives thought that the American workers are better fed than the English because wages are higher. The price of food in the United States is much the same as in England; some articles are dearer and others are correspondingly cheaper. The American workers seemed to be better housed, although rents are higher, ranging, it would appear, from twenty to 100 per cent. more.

The following table shows the average weekly income of families included in the statistics, and the amounts they spend on foods alone in the countries mentioned.

	Weekly Income	Spent on Food
Great Britain	$ 8.13	$3.68
France	6 11	2.76
Germany	4.78	2.26
United States	11.13	4·2
Belgium	5.42	2 60
Switzerland	5.21	2.88

IS LILLOOET VACANT

Question Before the Legislature

NO EXTENSION OF 8 HOUR LAW

Private Members Day at the House —Various Matters Discussed

Victoria, Jan. 22.—A ripple of interest was created by a criticism by Oliver of Hawthornthwaite's bill respecting the slaughter of deer as he voiced a rumor which had been circulated ever since the measure had been introduced. The bill not only prohibits the slaughter of deer, but repeals a clause in the present act which prohibits the exportation of rawhides.

Oliver mentioned that the bill was peculiarly favorable to certain large fur dealers in Victoria, who had thousands of dollars worth of deer hides which they could thus dispose of at a profit. The bill, however, passed second reading.

Mr. Oliver also made an attempt to secure the appointment of a committee to investigate whether the seat for Lillooet is vacant or not, in view of the statement made, yesterday by the premier in that connection. He first asked the speaker to rule on it, and suggested that McDonald was too honorable to hold a seat to which, according to the premier's admission. he was not entitled. The premier, however, disputed the claim that he had admitted the seat to be vacant, and the incident passed.

Mr. Paterson challenged the bill which Hawthornthwaite has up amending the Steam Boiler Inspection Act. He took the ground that the act originally was intended as a protection only for property and life, whereas there was now a tendency to create a close corporation. His remarks were elicited by a section offered by Mr. Bowser, whereby it is provided that a third-class engineer shall be entitled to take charge of a steam plant of not more than 250 horse power or of a compound engine plant up to 150 horse power. Paterson pointed out how unjust it was to make the horse power of engines the basis of test. If a man could run an engine of 100 horse power he could run an engine of double that capacity. Moreover he reminded the house how onerous they were making the act for certain people. He instanced the case of a logger using a donkey engine whose engineer fell sick or left, and whi chaccording to thebill, must then close down till another engineer could be secured. He thought provision should be made for temporary engineers under such circumstances.

Hawthornthwaite was unsuccessful in his effort to secure an eight-hour day for engineers, The bill was reported.

Rules were suspended to permit of the selection of a committee, consisting of Messrs. Clifford, Ross, McInnes, Young and Munro to enquire into the report of the arbitrators on the Government house contaact.

The Opposition agreed, exception being taken, however to Ross, whom, they claim, is not a member of the house.

A bill was brought down by message to provide $250,000 for the New Westminster bridge, in addition to the $750,000 already spent on it.

To Oliver, the premier said the Government was considering whether or not to cancel the C. & W. reserve.

Green, in answer to a question, said he paid his own expenses on his recent visit to Kootenay.

CONSERVATIVE NOMINEE

Martin Burrill of Grand Forks to Contest Yale Cariboo

Kamloops, Jan. 22.—The Conservative Convention was held here yesterday and resulted in the nomination of M. Burrill, of Grand Forks, as the Conservative candidate.

There were eighty-nine delegates present, one delegate being allowed for each twenty votes cast at the provincial elections. The total voting strength including proxies was three hundred and nine.

Ex-premier Semlin was chairman of the convention and J. T. Robinson secretary.

Three nominations were received.

M. Burrill, of Grand Forks, was proposed by J. P. Gray, of Greenwood, seconded by Isaac Crawford, of Grand Forks.

W. L. Shatford, of Vernon, proposed by Price Ellison, seconded by W. A. Johnson, of Quesnel Forks.

J. T. Robinson, of Kamloops proposed by mayor Michel and seconded by James Gill, of Kamloops.

Each of the three candidates addressed the convention and their qualification were freely discussed during their absence before the vote was taken.

The first ballot resulted in Shatford receiving 144 votes; Burrill 110 and Robinson, 54. Robinson was dropped and a second ballot gave Burrill 167 and Shatford 138.

Burrill's nomination was made unanimous on motion of Shatford, seconded by Robinson.

CHINESE LABOR.

A prominent member of the Transvaal government, Sir Percy Fitzgerald, in passing the second reading of the bill authorizing the importation of Chinese into the Transvaal for labour in the mines of the Rand, took exception to the interference of Messrs Deakin and Seddon, the premiers of Australia and New Zealand, in that they have cabled the Transvaal authorities their objections to such importation.

Sir Percy Fitzgerald wishes that these gentlemen would mind their own business. The trouble is that the premiers with whom Sir Percy is finding fault are very much minding their own business. It is vitally the concern of every Briton that which is going on in some other part of the Empire. Men like Deakin and Seddon, although the latter was only a "common miner", are looking forward to the day when there will be no restrictions as to the intercourse that shall be enjoyed by all portions of the Empire with each other and by individual colonists or old country dwellers in passing from one part of the Empire to the other and exercising their profession or calling. So that an Australian, a New Zealander or a Canadian who objects to enter into competition with the Celestial in his own country will also have the same objection should he migrate to another. Furthermore, in these days when commercial reciprocity is being more than talked of and is becoming an imperial fact it is not fair that the worker in one part of the Empire, where Chinese cheap labour is religiously barred, should have to enter into competition with another portion of the Empire where that labour is not so barred. The effect would be to reduce the standard of living of any race on the face of the earth. This being the case it is self evident that Mr. Seddon or Mr, Deakin were attending strictly to business when they cabled their objections to the Transvaal's new policy. Not only is it likely that such a course of action is apt to create formidable barricades in the way of closer commercial unity within the Empire but, regarded locally, the result of the recent enactment will be to prejudice South Africans against the new rule in the Transvaal. And of such dissatisfaction the Bond is ever ready to take advantage. However, as is well known, there is much prejudice in South Africa against the Celestial, and it is probable that such prejudice will cause the law now made by the ill advised action of the Transvaal a dead letter.

AN OIL CONCENTRATION

Has Been Worked in South America for Some Time.

It may surpris the mining men of Rossland, who regard themselves as pioneers in the science of oil concentration to learn that they are by no means the first to use oil concentrators on the American continent. In the famous Youli district in Peru, one of the richest silver camps in the world, and a district in which the properties were worked by the aborigines centuries before Christopher Columbus arrived on this side of the Alantic, oil concentration is being successfully carried on at four different mines and an order has just been placed for the shipment to the port of Callao of machinery for two units of 100 tons capacity each for an oil mill which is to be built at the Carahuacra mine, one of the most ancient silver mines in America, and one which has no doubt been in continuous operation longer than almost any other property, except possibly the Rio Tinto and the famous lead mides of Larium of Greece.

The Carahuacra is now a modern mine in all its equipmeut, but owing to the presence of zinc in the ores, it has not been possible to work it since 1893, when silver slumped. Recent tests of oil concentrating at Santo Barbara, in Peru, and the success of the process at other Peruvian properties, has proven that the Carahuacra mines can be worked to a profit with the aid of an oil concentrator. The mines of the Youli district produce an ore almost identical with the galena of the Slocan and East Kootenay, and they have the same trouble there in separating the zinc.

'Why, you rogues!' he said, as his drunken melody found no echo in the great hall—'why, you sleepy villains! am I a strolling troubadour that I should sing this alone to you?' And then, as his bleared and dazzled eyes wandered round the empty places, the spilt wine and overturned trestles, he smiled again with drunken cunning. 'Ah!' he muttered; 'then they must be all under the tables! I thought that last round of sack would finish them! Hallo, there! Ambrose! De Voeux! Jervaulx! Jolly comrades! —sleepy dogs! Come forth! Fie on ye!—to call yourselves good monks, and yet to leave thy simple, kindly Prior thus to himself!' and he pulled up the table linen and peered below. Sorely was the Churchman perplexed to see nothing; and first he glared up among the oaken rafters, as though by chance his fellows had flown thither, and then he stared at the empty places, and so his gaze wandered round, until, in a minute or two, it had made the complete circle of the place, and finally rested on me, standing immovable, a pace from his elbow.

At first he stared at me with vapid amusement, and then with stupid wonder. But 'twas not more than a second or two before the truth dawned upon that hazy intellect, and then I saw the thick short hands tighten upon the carving of his priestly throne, I saw the wine flush pale upon his cheeks, and the drunken light in his eyes give place to the glare of terror and consternation. Just as they had done before him, but with infinite by more intensity, he blanched and withered before my unrelenting gaze, he turned in a moment before my grim, imperious frown, from a jolly, rubicund old bibber, rosy and quarrelsome with his supper, into a cadaverous, sober-minded confessor, lantern-jawed and yellow—and then with a hideous cry he was on foot and flying for the doorway by which his friends had gone! But I had need of that good confessor, and ere he could stagger a yard the golden apostolic crook was about the ankle of the errant sheep, and the Prior of St. Olaf's rolled over headlong upon the floor.

I sat down to supper, and as I helped myself to venison pastie and malmsey I heard the beads running through the recumbent Abbot's fingers quicker than water runs from a spout after a summer thunder shower. 'Miserricordia, Domine nobis!, murmured the old sinner, and I let him grovel and pray in his abject panic for a time, then bade him rise. Now, the fierceness of this command was what marred, because my mouth was very full just then of pastie crust, and the accents appeared to carry less consternation into my friend's heart than I had intended. The paternoster began to run with more method and coherence, and, soon finding he was not yet halfway to nether abyss he had seen opening before him, he plucked up a little heart of grace. Besides, the avenger was at supper, and making mighty inroads into the the provender the Abbot loved so well: this took off the rough edge of terror, and was in itself so curious a phenomenon that little by little, with the utmost circumspection, the monk raised his head and looked at me. I kept my baleful eyes turned away, and busied me with my loaded platter—which, by the way, was far the most interesting item of the two—and so by degrees he gained confidence, and came into a sitting position, and gazed at the hungry saint, so active with the victuals, wonder and awe playing across his countenance. 'I see, Sir. Priest,' I said, 'you have a good cook yonder in the buttery,' but the Abbot was yet too dazed to answer, so I went on to put him more at his ease (for I designed to ask him some questions later on), 'now, where I come from, the great fault of the cooks is, they appreciate none of your Norman niceties —they broil and roast for ever, as through everyone had a hunter appetite, and thus I have often been weary of their eternal messes of pork and kine.'

CORRESPONDENCE

WHY DISMISSAL?

EDITOR EVENING WORLD: Will you kindly enlighten me, and probably the general public, why a certain member of recently elected alderman are utilizing their energies to the detriment of municipal advacement, instead of striving to accomplish that for which they were elected?

I refer to such members of the council as are simply howling for the decapitation of City Clerk McQueen, and why? Is it because that gentleman is always "on deck" during business hours? Is it because during such hours he is ever obliging, courteous and correct? Is it in fact because he is so well qualified and competent to fill the position that these men who have been dubbed with civic hon ors persistently cry for his dismissal? Who do they wish put in Mr. McQueen's place, and for what purpose? Surely the public are entitled to some explanation as to why so serious a step is contemplated as the dismissal of the city clerk, particularily as the present incumbent has held office for so many years and has "city affairs" at his finger ends from date of incorporation of the town of Rossland.

Yours Respectfully,
H. B. MACKINTOSH.

January 21, 1904.
