Financial Clouds Clearing Away.

GT. NORTHERN MINES A STANDBY

Communications Being Established to Open Up the Mines of the District.

Camborne, March 1—During the past week business has been brisk, consequent upon the Great Northern Mines, limited, and the Calumet & B. C. Gold Mines, Limited, disbnrsing some $8,000 in pay checks. The financial clouds that for a time were hovering over the camp are clearing away and the citizens generally are at last awakening to the fact that the Fish river camp if going to take its place in the front rank of the gold camps of the province.

Besides the two payrolls mentioned, Camborne receives much financial benefit from the different lumbering outfits employed along the Fish river. It is announced that the Harbor Lumber Company will erect a modern mill at this place to replace the one recently destroyed. It will be located on Fish river and will add a considerable payroll.

The $2000 conditionally appropriated by the government toward the construction of the Fish river road beyond Camborne to the mouth of Boyd creek will be turned over to the Harbor Lumber Company, who have undertaken to build the road. It is to be constructed on the west side of the river and a a bridge will be built on in the vicinity of Boyd creek.

An agitation has been started for the purpose of circulating petitions here and at Ferguson, Beaton and Trout Lake City, urging the government to establish a daily mail service to the upper Lardeau. At present there is a three-time a week service,

"Why Smith Left Home"

Mr. C. P. Walker's well balanced comedy company, which has been on a trip to the Pacific Coast, presenting "What Happened to Jones" is now returning with Mr. Broadhurst's equally funny conception, "Why Smith Left Home." This company will appear here on Wednesday next. A brighter, cleaner, more piquant piece has never been written. It is so constructed that none of Mr. Walker's players is left without an abundance of opportunity for doing very good comedy work. The result is that working together they are able to bring about the very best results in the line of merriment. Millard Reed, Miss Millard and the other talented members of the organization will be seen to the very best advantage in this eagerly anticipated performance of "Why Smith Left Home."

BEAR POURS TROOPS INTO KOREA

Russian Cruiser Is Active Seizing British Colliers—The Defence of Port Arthur Being Safeguarded.

Chefoo, March 1.—The 29th Japanese Infantry occupyig Pingyang, midway between Seoul and the Yalu river, on Sunday met a body af Russian Cavalry scouts north of Pingyang and drove them back.

It is estimated that 60,000 Japanese troops have landed at Chemulpo. The transports now are not accomranied by war vessels.

The Japanese who commanded the merchant vessels which were sunk at Port Arthur, on landing here shaved their heads, as a mark of disgrace they felt at the failure of the project. The crew of the Jinsen Maru wrote their names on the foremost flag which remained above water when the ship went down.

Liaoyang, March 1. — General Machtchenko, with a detachment of mounted Cossacks, has reached Kasanja, Korea, and is expected to arrive at Ichoyang today.

The Korean officials are fleeing from the places traversed and are informing the Japanese of the approach of the Russians. The Cossacks have seized the telegraph line in north Korea. A Japanese Major and five men, captured by Cossacks at Wiju, have been brought to Liaoyang. Snowstorms are raging here and the frost is intense. The railroads are working perfectly and troops are arriving uninterruptedly.

Suez, March 1. — The Russian cruiser Aurora, with five torpedo boats, has arrived here. The British coal laden steamers Ettrickdale from Barry for Sabang, and Frankby from Barry for Hongkong, were brought here by the Russian vessels which captured them, and also the Norwegian steamer Matilda from Penarth for Sasebo, have been released by order of the Czar.

St. Petersburg, March 1.—Discussing the attitude of China, the Sviet today says it considers China is a secret ally of Japan and, that like America and Great Britain, she will do everything possible to injure Russia.

Paris, March 1. The St. Petersburg correspordent of the Echo de Paris says orders have been telegraphed to Port Arthur that the place be fortified and defended as completely as possible.

That correspondent adds that he learns that no Russian vessels will leave the Black sea, contrary to rumors appearing in the foreign papers. The Manchurian railway and telegraph lines are admirably guarded from Port Arthur to Mukden and Harbin.

The correspondent further says he is assured from high officers that nothing is known concerning the rumor that the foreign minister Lamsdorff is to be replaced by the present Russian minister to Denmark.

Paris, March 1.—Paul Delourde, the royalist refugee, who has been living in Spain since his expulsion in 1900, has been interviewed by the correspondent of the Matin at San Sebastian. He said that at the present, when he was advised by the chamber of deputies to keep silence, it was not fitting for him to talk, but he upheld the principle that France must honor her engagements at whatever cost, postponing until afterwards the discussion as to whether a pact signed by the president of the republic was really in the interest of the nation. "However," he added, "Foreign Minister Delcasse seems to act with a circumspection which lacks neither skill nor patriotism.

West Kootenay Power Company Over Worked—Likely to Be so

Nelson, March I.—J. A. McDonald, superihtendent of the West Kootenay Power & Light company, was in the city yesterday on a business visit. He reports that among the anticipated extensions of the power service will be the installation of about 500 horse power in the plant of the Rossland Power company at Trail, where a large concentrating plant is being erected. Five hundred horse power is being installed in the White Bear plant at Rossland. The electric hoist, which is already in operation, consumes 150 horse power. Next a 20-drill air compressor is to be put in. It will take 300 horse power to furnish propulsion for this part of the plant. The motor for this portion of the machinery has already been shipped from Toronto and should arrive here shortly. A rock crusher is also to be put in and this will require a motor of 100 horse power. Later on a concentrator is to be installed to concentrate the lower grade ores from the mine, and this will require to keep it in motion another 100 horse power.

Mr. McDonald said that the power company had desired to repair their wheels at the falls for some time and so improve the service, but were unable to do so until the War Eagle people put in a temporary steam service. The steam service had now been set working and the necessaay repairs to the plans at Bonnington would be proceeded with at once.

ROSSLAND STOCKS.

Never at any period in the history of the camp has the price of notable mining companies been so low as at the present time. Of course there are special excuses to be advanced, such as the general financial depression in the east and such as the present war, but after all this is no justification for selling such a stock as War Eagle, with hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of good ore in sight, at such an absurd figure as 12 cents, or Centre Star, in an even more enviable category, at 25 cents. Or take the White Bear not many years ago the discovery of good ore at depth in a mine would have sent the stock up, the fact of the company spending many thousands in erecting the necessary machinery to take it out profitably would yet have advanced the shares, and the news that the mine was actually shipping, had a railway spur to the mine. was erecting a concentrator to treat the lower grade rock so that the cost of development should have been so much the less, would have skied the scrip. White Bear would have rivalled the flight upward of many a stock well known to Rosslanders. But all the move the shares have made has been but one cent!

However, as the speculator does not seem inclined to try his fortune in creating one rapidly out of the rise and fall in mining ventures, a conclusion, perhaps, which Rossland has nothing to grumble over, the investor should take the present opportunity. If there ever was a time in Rossland past or future, when the public could get in on the ground floor it was hard, and will be hard, to rival the present.

TIBET.

The Empire can well afford to laugh at the threats of the Colossus of the North, a colossus whose feet are indeed proving to be of clay, in in its fulmidations against the British occupation of Tibet. Were Indea to absorb Tibet India would be but following the example laid down by Russia for two centuries past in her march from the Ural mountains to the Pacific ocean. Russia can not assail Tibet. At her nearest point she is 1000 miles from Lhasa. If Great Britain wants to annex Tibet she can have it for the asking. There was only one power, and that a subsidiary state of the Goorkhas, which could object, and the Goorkhas has informed their Tibetan brethren that the demands of the Viceroy of India were nothing but reasonable and nothing but that which the Grand Lama himself had agreed to several years ago. Like many another ignorant potentate he, Lama of Lhasa, has sought to play off Great Britain against Russia just as King Thebaw of Mandalay sought to play off the French against the British and ended by losing his kingdom 20 years ago.

But it is China that the Empire is chiefly concerned in its Tibetan expedition. China is bounded on the east by the sea, by Manchuria on the north, by Tibet and Burma on the west and southwest, and by Siam and Cochin China on the south. Between Manchuria and Tibet on the boundaries lies in that huge gap nothing but desert. Now if Russia should win in the north and advance into China it would end by her annexing the whole of that country and shutting its trade to every nation but the Russian. But the Empire has large interests there. The Commonwealth of Australia maintains several regular trading lines with Far Cathay. Canada is similarly linked. The British port of Hongkong, off the coast of South China, has few equals in shipping or wealth in the world. If Russia should win out in its present struggle all this is lost to the Anglo Saxon race. And the China trade is well worth having, witnass the struggles of centuries. This is where the Imperial interest comes in. This is where Canada is drawn into the vortex. There is no finer market for the lead and silver ores of the Kootenay than China. The trade is but young but it is growing. Much of this trade would Canada get were the Bear in control!

Fearing this the Empire is on the watch. Through Burma and Tibet it can pour troops into China to meet the advancing Muscovite if it becomes necessary. Russia would not only have to meet the advancing on the Chinese side of Bhamo, at Mengtszu, at Tali, but at the same time would have to guard against a dangerous flank attack from some unknown point to the west on the Tibetan frontier. Russia would be operating among enemies, the Empire among friends. France might attempt an advance from Cochin China, but Cochin China is itself hostile and the French troops are few and the native regiments undependable. Great Britain can aid plucky little Japan no better at the present crisis than by pushing the Tibetan expedition,

All those gaudy buterflies of the new day, that stately home and that fair flower herself, shrank into nothing; and as the white lightning leaps through the dull void of midnight, and shows for one dazzling second some long remembered country, ashine in every leaf and detail, to the startled pilgrim, and then is gone with a ghostly mirage of its passage, so in that surprising moment, so full of import, Blodwen rose to my mind against all reason and likelihood—Blodwen the Briton, the ruddy haired—Blodwen radiant with her gentle motherhood—Blodwen who could scream so fiercely to her clansmen in the forefront of conflict, and drive her bloody chariot through the red mud of battle with wounded foemen writhing under her remorseless wheels more blithely than a latter day maid would trip through the spangled meadow grass of springtime—Blodwen rose before me!

Oh! 'twas wild, 'twas foolish, past explaining, nonsense: and, angry with myself and that white maid who stood and hung her head before me I stroked my hand across my face to rid me of the fancy, and, gathering myself together, made my bow, murmuring something fiercely civil, and turned my back upon her to seek another group.

Yes; but if you think I conquered that fancy, you are wrong. For days and days it haunted me, even though I laughed it to scorn, and, what made the matter more difficult, more perplexing, was that I had not guessed in error— the unhappy Isobel had loved me from first sight, and, against every precedent her nature would have warranted, grew daily deeper in the toils. And I, who never yet had turned from the eyes of suppliant maid, watched her color shift and fly as I came or went, and strode gloomy, unmindful through all her pretty artifices of maiden tenderness, burning the meanwhile with love for her disdainful sister. It was a strange medley, and in one phase or another pursued me all the time I was in that noble keep. When I was not wooing I was being wooed. Alas! and all the coldness I got from that black browed lady with the goddess carriage and the faultless skin I passed on the poor, enamoured girl who dogged my idle footsteps for a word.

Thus, on one day we had a tournament. All round the great castle, under the oaks, were pitched the tents of the troopers, while the pennons and bannerets of the knights and barons, as we saw them from the turret top, shone in the sunlight like a field of flowers. The soldier yeoman had their sports and contests on the greensward, and we went down to watch them. Thor! but I never saw such bronzed and stalwart fellows, or witnessed anything like the truth and straightness of those stinging flights of shafts the archers sent against their butts! Then the next day, following the sports of the common people, in the tiltyard inside the barbican, we held a tourney, a mock battle and a breaking of spears, a very gorgeous show indeed, and near as exciting as an honest melee itself.

So tuneful in my ears proved the shivering of lances and the clatter of swords on the steel panoply of the knights, that, though at first I held aloof, stern and gloomy with my futile passion, yet presently I itched to take a spear, and, since those sparkling riders liked the fun so much, to let them try whether my right hand had lost the cunning it learnt before their fathers were conceived. And as I thought so, standing among the chief ones in that brilliant tourney ring, up came the white rose and tempted me to break a lance, and sighed so softly and brushed against me with her scented draperies, and tried with feeble self command to meet my eyes and could not, and was so obviously wishful that I should ride a course or two, and so prettily in love, that I was near relenting of my coldness.

TAKES IN THE JACKPOT

Athelstan Mine Incorporporates Neighboring Property.

Steps are being taken by those interested in the Athelstan mine in Wellington camp to incorporate that property, taking in also the Jackpot, which has been acquired since the syndicate took hold a few months since. This is being done primarily for the convenience of those interested and not particularly to make sales of the shares.

While the getting of the company in shape is going on, the shipping of ore will be discontinued. For some time the syndicate has been working on a plan to get a spur built to the mine by the C P. R., a distance of three miles, as the grade would run, and a favorable reply is expected shortly. Up to the present the ore has all been hauled on wagons or sleighs for a mile up hill to the Winnipeg spur, whence it was taken to the smelters of the district.

In consequence of the stoppage of shipments, the force at the Athelstan has been materially reduced, and but few men are being kept on development.

Work was taken up at the Athelstan last June by local syndicate, who obtained an option on a majority of the shares of the old company. Shipments of ore have been steady, and it is popularly believed that the returns from the smelters have been most satisfactory. But the cost of hauling the ore has been quite an item, and this will be discontinued for the present, at least. George H. Collins has been in active charge of the Athelstan since it resumed. Mr. Collins was formerly in charge of the Golden Crown, also in Wellington camp.

SEASON'S SNOWFALL

The Record of the Beautiful Since Incorporation of the City

The snowfall for the past month is certainly a record for the past few years. The snowfall of Rossland varies considerably. The records of the Rossland Meteorological office are at present with the head office at Victoria, but will be returned shortly. However it may be stated that the greatest snowfall was in the winter of 1899 1900, which totalled 203 inches. The year before was the smallest on record, being 132 inches.

Last year the snowfall was 180 inches which was distributed as follows: September, 1 inch; November, 43 inches; December, 43 inches; February, 7½ inches March, 16 inches; April 2½ inches.

This year the corrected record stands as follows: November, 34½ inches; December, 22 inches; January, 38½ inches; and last month 76 inches.

It will be seen that there fell more snow during February of this year than in the January of the year before by nine inches. The total snowfall this season to date is 171 inches, while at this time last year only 163 inches had fallen, and after this date last year a fraction of under 17 inches of snow fell.
