District Council Meets

At a meeting of the District Council last night the clerk announced that on September 22nd it had been resolved at a joint city and district committee meeting (Alderman Smith presiding) that the following recommendations be unanimously made: (1) That a permanent committee of six—three from the city and three from the district of North Vancouver—be appointed, and all matters relating to the franchise of the B. C. Electric Railway Co. and the Vancouver Power Co. be referred to the committee for report before action be taken by either council. (2) That the B. C. Electric Railway Co. be communicated with immediately, the city requesting an extension of the Lonsdale avenue line, and the district requesting a written reply to their previous communication on the subject. On the motion of Councillor Bridgman, this report was adopted.

Councillor Ward moved that Councillors Allan, Bridgman and Loutet be elected on that committee and that the recommendation be adopted.

On the motion of Councillor Bridgman, seconded by Councillor Ward, Councillor Allan was empowered to see to the lighting of the new City Hall at Lynn Valley.

It was announced that the council would meet in committee at 4 o'clock on Thursday afternoon and that the public meeting would be at 4.30.

On the suggestion of Councillor Allan it was resolved that a 4-ft. sidewalk be made between Lynn Valley Road to Fromme.

The council dealt with certain correspondence, most of which was referred to the board of works with power to act.

REV. E. C. FAKELEY RETURNS TO MICHEL, B. C.

This week the Rev. E. C. and Mrs. Fakeley return from England to take up their ministerial duties at Michel, B. C. For the past two years Rev. Mr. Fakeley has had charge of the Methodist mission field in Lynn Valley and is well known in both city and district. The cause of Methodism was well served under the regime of Mr. Fakeley and everyone in Lynn Valley—whether Methodist or not—regretted his leaving. Of cheerful disposition, unaffected and unspoiled amid flattering surroundings, with a gift of fluency possessed by few who attempt like work, he speedily became a favorite of all who knew him, and it is no wonder that the Methodist church of Lynn Valley is today well organized and can boast a parsonage on the church lots and plans well ahead for the erection of a church. A good working board and a live ladies' aid are further evidences of his executive ability. After finishing his course at Columbian College, New Westminster, he was ordained by the Conference of B. C. in May last, and sailed for England soon afterwards to perform the vows made years earlier—before coming to B. C.—with Miss L. Dowle, of Buckland, Kent, England. The following account of Mr. Fakeley's wedding is taken from the Dover (Eng.) Express and East Kent News of Friday, July 14th, 1911:

"The wedding took place at Buckland Wesleyan Church on Wednesday afternoon, in the presence of a large congregation, of the Rev. E. Charles Fakeley, of Michel, British Columbia, and late of Dover, and Miss L. Dowle, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dowle, of 15 Millais Road, Buckland. The officiating ministers were the Revs. W. J. Sippell, D.D. (Principal of Columbian College), A. T. Fakeley (brother of the bridegroom), and S. Birt Coley. The service was a choral one, and Mr. Bainbridge at the organ played suitable wedding music. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a dress of white silk, trimmed with white insertion, and she had a tulle veil, with orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet, the gift of the bridegroom. There were three bridesmaids—the Miss Fakeley (sister of the bridegroom), Miss Anderson (cousin of the bride), and Miss Phyllis Hall. The first two wore pale blue Swiss embroidered dresses, with white crinoline hats and ostrich feathers, and they carried shower bouquets of pink roses, and wore pearl and enamel pendants (the gifts of the bridegroom). Little Miss Hall wore a white Swiss embroidered dress, with large white hat, and carried a bouquet of pink roses, and wore a gold brooch (the gift of the bridegroom). Mr. Frank Baker was best man. The reception was held in Buckland School Hall. Later the Rev. E. C. and Mrs. Fakeley left for London, the Isle of Wight and Brighton where the honeymoon is being spent. The bride's travelling dress was of sage green cloth, trimmed with silk to match and colored lace, and she wore a pretty colored hat with roses and forget-me-nots. There were numerous and handsome wedding presents."

Mr. and Mrs. Fakeley left Dover en route for Liverpool on Thursday morning, Sept. 7th, calling on Dr. and Mrs. Sippell in London on the way, and sailed on the Empress of Ireland on Sept. 8th. During the voyage out they had the sad and unusual experience of seeing a man either jump or fall overboard, and although every effort was made by the crew of the ship to save him, he was not recovered.

The B. C. Methodist Conference stationed Rev. E. C. Fakeley at Michel, at which place he is due this week, and it is safe to say that Methodism in Michel is in for a prosperous time under Mr. Fakeley's ministry. All friends will not only join in wishing a life of happiness and usefulness for Mr. and Mrs. Fakeley, but will look eagerly forward to the next conference when it is expected opportunity will be given to renew the acquaintance of Mr. Fakeley and to meet his partner for the first time.

POLITICAL EQUALITY LEAGUE.

A meeting of the Political Equality League was held on Sept. 22nd, at the home of Mrs. (Dr.) E. R. Follick where a local league was formed. The meeting was called to order by Mrs. Lashley Hall of Vancouver, who gave an interesting talk on the working of the league. The following officers were duly elected:

Mrs. J. L. Gallagher, pres.
Mrs. E. R. Follick, chairman of literature.
Mrs. J. A. Candlin, hon. pres.
Miss Phoebe Harrison, sec.
Mrs. Hopkins, treasurer.

A member from Victoria and several from Vancouver were present. Great interest was manifested. It is hoped that the ladies of North Vancouver will take an interest in this organization.

RAFFERY — LOWE

The wedding took place on Saturday afternoon, at the Methodist parsonage of Mr. Oliver Henry Raftery, North Vancouver, and Miss Hazel Fern Lowe formerly of Elkhart, Indiana. The Rev. W. C. Schlichter officiated. Mr. and Mrs. Raftery will make North Vancouver their home.

'INLET QUEEN' CHANGES HANDS.

Mr. H. C. Y. Hall has sold his cruising launch, "Inlet Queen," to Mr. Ellsworth McMillan, of this city. It will be remembered that Mr. McMillan was unfortunate in losing his auxiliary cruiser in the fire at Wallace Shipyards some months ago, and he has come back strong in the purchase of the "Inlet Queen," which is one of the best known and best appointed launches of the larger size on the inlet. The "Inlet Queen" was built in Vancouver by Mr. Hall's special order about one year ago. Since the boat was placed in commission, Mr. and Mrs. Hall have practically made their residence on board and have cruised over the waters of the Gulf of Georgia along the mainland and the island coasts, from Victoria to Campbell River, having travelled, according to Mr. Hall's reckoning, not less than 700 miles. The new owner is one of the most enthusiastic of the many local sailors, hunters or fishermen in an amateur way and his hosts of friends will heartily wish that the pleasure and benefit derived from the acquisition of the "Inlet Queen" may exceed his most sanguine anticipations.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Last evening the usual monthly social evening of the Epworth League of the Methodist church was held in the church and was enjoyed by a full turnout of the members and a number of visitors. The president, Mr. Dickenson, opened the meeting, and after the usual religious exercises the evening was given over to a well arranged programme arranged by Mrs. Markle, the fourth vice-president. Among the items were the following: A solo by Miss Townsley; comic reading, Mr. T. Martinson; duet by the Misses Markle; hints to league members by Mr. Wear; selections by the Osborne orchestra. The league is to be congratulated on the talent which it has in its midst.

Next Monday the Rev. Ronald McLeod will deliver an address to the league at their usual consecration meeting; topic, "The Development of Latent Power." A cordial invitation is extended to all who are interested in our work to visit any of our meetings.

City Council in Session

New Sewerage System Now Ready for Use—Connections to Be Made at Once—Burner to Be Built at City Dumping Grounds—Litigation With Contractors to Be Avoided.

At the regular session of the City Council on Monday evening there were present Aldermen McRae, Henderson, Dick, Smith and Kittson. Mayor McNeish presided.

Communications were dealt with as follows: From J. M. Hay, asking for a sidewalk on Ridgway avenue to his property, Lot 25, Block 99, D. L. 550; board of works. From Mrs. L. Lockhart, with reference to previous application for opening of 7th street; from E. A. Haawell, re adoption of measures to prevent surface water from street from flooding the basement of his house. Board of Works; from M. B. Jackson, Jr., asking for a ditch on the south side of 16th street to Forbes avenue; from A. D. Nye, with reference to opening of roadway from Victoria park to 6th street; from H. A. Shaw and others, asking that the street on the south side of Ottawa Gardens be cleared of boulders; board of works. From the city engineer reporting that the road roller has been delivered in good working order and recommending the payment of balance of purchase price, namely, $1,650; ordered paid. From A. H. Martin, asking for water service to his property, Lot 17, Block 241, D. L. 545; waterworks committee. From the water commissioner to the effect that on account of his being called away, he had decided to postpone the hearing of the application of the city for water record for storage purposes on Lynn Creek until October 30th. From L. Gray Donald, special commissioner, to investigate the water conditions generally on the watershed from which North Vancouver and Vancouver procure their water supply, to the effect that he would be in the city on the 20th. Inasmuch as this letter did not arrive until after the date set for Mr. Donald's arrival, the clerk to reply expressing regret that sufficient notice was not given to enable the Council to meet him and give him full information as to local conditions. From G. G. Palmer, asking refund of $25 paid by property; board of works. From C. Templar, asking that pile of logs near his residence be burned. From the London and British America Company, submitting claim for damages done by the flooding of Knight block, on the Esplanade, amounting to $79.50, as follows: P. S. Thomas, $10.25; H. W. Young, $11.50; Fulton Furniture Co., $32.75 and $25.00. This claim caused considerable discussion, Aldermen Kittson and Dick asserting that in only one instance was the damage caused by the opening of an old culvert by a street gang, as alleged, the water in the other instances having come in through the roof; board of works. From Mr. Frith, Esplanade east, complaining of the presence of the city dumping ground within a short distance of his residence. Alderman Henderson explained that arrangements had been made to erect a small burner in the near future. From the city engineer to the effect that the sanitary sewer system is now ready for use, and recommending that property owners be requested to connect their houses with the same. Notice to be published accordingly and public to be informed that the necessary permit may be obtained free of charge from the sanitary inspector. From T. J. Stevens, asking permission to construct a septic tank under the sidewalk on Ottawa Gardens. Not granted. From Joseph P. Dubberley, asking permission to connect with sewer on Chesterfield avenue; city engineer. From the McAlpine, Robertson Construction Company, asking for roadway to six houses now about completed on Cumberland Crescent; board of works. From the city engineer, advising Council that Romano Pinto Co. had issued a writ against him for $538.65, of which $450 is amount deducted for overtime on their contract, and the balance for cost of cave in on St. Patrick's avenue. Alderman Henderson considered that the city was embarking on a hazardous course in allowing itself to be drawn into litigation in such matters; they should be settled by arbitration. Alderman Kittson declared that the city engineer had drawn plans and specifications which the contractors had accepted. The engineer should be allowed to interpret his own plans and should be backed up by the City Council. Alderman Dick declared that the engineer was correct in his position. City money would be well spent in showing contractors that they must live up to specifications. If it cost $500 to ensure first class work, it was money well spent. Mayor McNeish suggested that it might be well to appoint a committee to arrange a conference between the contractors and the Council. Alderman Dick was of the opinion that in such a case the contractors should seek the interview, not the Council. Alderman Kittson did not agree with the suggestion to meet the contractors. Alderman Smith declared that the city was beginning a very expensive process in going into the courts with contractors. Not only so, but such methods would drive contractors away from the city and there would be no response to advertisements for tenders. Differences with contractors should be settled amicably. He was in favor of a conference. Mayor McNeish advised the Council that he would see the contractors and arrange a meeting between them and the Council with a view to an amicable adjustment of differences. E. Parnell and others petitioned for sidewalks, are light and water service at Harbor View Tract, D. L. 544. Referred to respective committees. A petition from twelve property owners was presented, asking for the opening of 24th street; board of works.

Accounts were passed as follows: Board of health, $16.20; local improvement account, $32,377.39; board of works, $621.90; waterworks, $901.05.

Under reports of committees the committee appointed to confer with the District Council with reference to tramway matters recommended first that a committee of six, three from each council, be appointed to whom all matters of moment which may arise with reference to the franchise of the B. C. E. R. Co. shall be referred before action is taken by either council, and second, that the B. C. E. R. Co. be requested to extend their line on North Lonsdale. The latter clause was adopted at once, but a difference of opinion arose with reference to the first clause, Alderman Kittson being of opinion that matters might arise in which the interests of the city and the district were not identical, in which each party should be free to proceed on its own initiative. The clause was finally amended to read that "matters of moment in which the joint interests of the city and district were affected" should be referred to such a committee. Council adjourned.

SPECIAL MEETING OF BOARD OF TRADE.

A full attendance of the members of the Board of Trade is desired tomorrow evening at the City Hall to hear President McCandless, of the Vancouver Board of Trade, and ex-President Malikin, regarding the Peace River Railway, and also to hear President Hodgson, of the South Vancouver Board of Trade, on the subject of Municipal Telephones.

As these topics are of deep interest to all our citizens, the meeting will be open to all, whether members or not.

FERRY DIRECTORS.

A brief meeting of the Ferry Directors took place on Friday afternoon. Mr. C. A. Damon, advertising agent, applied for permission to place advertising cards on the upper deck of Ferry No. 3. The application was refused.

The board passed for payment the monthly accounts and wage bills for August, the former amounting to $5,250.55 and the latter $4,756.95.

SACRAMENT OF BAPTISM PERFORMED IN LYNN VALLEY.

On Sunday last—Children's Day—Dr. G. C. Pidgeon, Professor of Systematic Theology in Westminster Hall, conducted the morning service in the Presbyterian church, Lynn Valley, and performed the sacred rite of infant baptism. The service was principally for the children of the union Sunday school, and on that account the front seats were all filled by the young people of the valley. Mr. Van Munster conducted the opening exercises with Mr. W. Knowles—superintendent—at the organ. Then Dr. Pidgeon baptized the four children presented—Gordon Purdie, Daisy Blanche Archibald, Edith and John Henry Wagborne—afterwards preaching on the subject, "The Race of Life." The attendance was large in spite of the fact that an epidemic of measles invaded the valley, robbing the Sunday school, and even keeping some of the children who were to have been baptized.

Mr. R. D. Gladwin, cashier of the J. C. E. at Halifax, N. S., who has been paying a short visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Gladwin, North Vancouver, has returned to N. S. He was very much pleased with what he saw in the west.

Local and Personal

Grading work is being carried out on the Esplanade, 1st and 2nd streets.

The new boiler which is being installed in Ferry No. 3, will be ready for use in the course of the next few days.

The school in Lynn Valley was closed for an indefinite period yesterday owing to a serious outbreak of measles.

A tent belonging to three young men, pitched near the waterfront and St. Patrick's avenue, caught fire and was partially destroyed on Friday last.

Mr. Wallace, of the Wallace Shipyards, has taken out a permit to build a big machine shop on the same site as that on which stood his shipbuilding plant which was burned down a few months ago.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. V. Hall have returned to the city and have taken apartments in the "Colonial" apartment house, 8th street east.

Mr. Charles Mee has, during the last six weeks, been travelling up north on the Grand Trunk Pacific on some business connected with his mining interests. He is expected home in a few days' time.

The funeral took place on Saturday of Gladys Mary, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Kirkness, of Nye street, North Vancouver. The child, who was nine months old, died on Friday after a month's illness.

A smoking concert was held Saturday night, in honor of the opening of the new boat house in connection with the North Vancouver Yacht Club. A program was contributed to by Messrs Percy Ward, P. H. Lamb, C. S. Watson, E. Adamson, and H. Ramsey, to the pianoforte accompaniment of Mr. Venner.

The annual meeting of the Catholic congregation of St. Edmund's church took place on Sunday after Mass. The Rev. Father Bedard presided. A committee was elected to continue the work for the coming year, several of the former committee having found it impossible to retain office. It was agreed to build a residence for the priest as near to the church as possible. The position of choirmaster was given to Mr. John Garvie.

About fifty of the young people of the Baptist church congregation and their friends met at the pastor's home last (Monday) evening for social intercourse. After a short programme was completed the remainder of the evening was spent in an informal way by playing games, etc.

The new addition to the city hall is now completed, and the offices of the mayor, city clerk, city treasurer, and the police station are being transferred to their new quarters. The engineer's office will also be situated upstairs in the new department.

If the fine weather continues, the grading will soon be completed on 1st street, 2nd street and the Esplanade. No little difficulty is being experienced in certain portions owing to the extremely soft composition of the road bed after the recent rain. The steam shovels on 1st street, Manon avenue, and St. Patrick's avenue are doing excellent work.

Among the building permits recently granted, it is interesting to note the inclusion of Mr. Andy Linton, who intends to build a boat shop on the Esplanade. Mr. Linton has for years been quoted as a successful boat builder in Vancouver, and his taking out a permit in this city will doubtless give the boat building industry considerable impetus.

From Liverpool to Lonsdale

Miscellaneous Impressions in a Long Journey.
(By "IAN HILL.")

When I settle myself squarely before a blank sheet of paper and dip my pen into the inkpot, I am all the time perfectly aware that, in the orthodox sense, I am not really qualified to do so. Nine people out of ten, very rightly, perhaps, will contend that no experiences are worth writing up that are not in some way unique and educationally valuable. These that I am commencing are neither. They are scribbled, therefore, for the edification of the "tenth" who is content to nod over his newspaper and tell himself continually that the only difference between the writer's impressions and his own is that the other fellow has put his on paper.

We stood—our party—in a touching cluster, within the portals of the Liverpool Art Gallery. Rain streamed continuously off all the projecting portions of the great guardian statues, the countenances of which bespoke placidity in spite of the downpour. We peered into a dirtier sky than had ever canopied England since early May. O cruel and melancholy fact! After three months of glorious good nature, the heavens chose our day of sailing to let loose all the water that had been accumulating!

Well, well, we made the best of it, a policy more often written and read than acted upon. One of us commandeered a four-wheeler, after several resultless rushes at engaged cabs and taxis, and into this we crawled, thankful at last to be off the stone flooring of the Art Gallery, thankful to be doing something definite and dry at the same time.

Slowly, but surely, we gained the docks. There she lay, the great "Laurentic," berthed in the company of other smaller ships, which looked, by contrast, like anchored cobbles, a mammoth hive into which thousands of bees seemed to be clambering. On the wharf, in the hissing rain, relatives of the bees stood bravely, pathetically under shiny umbrellas. Here and there a handkerchief fluttered to the eyes in response, perhaps, to a wafted kiss from one of the crowded decks. Between the groups, now and again, an immense carthorse moved solidly, dragging in his wake a luggage-laden vehicle. A moment later the same trunks and impedimenta were crawling up the luggage gangway on moving ribbons.

Discipline in excelsis! One wave of a constable's hand and an errant passenger was given his proper bearings. Officials in oilskins briskly examined tickets, smiling now and then into the faces of old patrons. Some stalked on board in a calm majestic manner, others fussed and fumed, stamped bither and thither with explosive queries ready for utterance, queries which were sometimes neither pertinent nor sensible.

Third class passengers had been aboard since early morning, but their friends and relatives still stood miserably on the drenched quay. Second class patrons were, most of them, visible amidst the first class travellers were striding and tripping (if hobbled) over the gangway, leaving tips and cigar smoke behind them.

Suddenly, while our party stood watching this wonderful panorama, some invisible bell clanged ominously. The rain-drenched umbrellas on the quay were raised, to disclose pale faces. There was a greater fluttering of handkerchiefs, a greater straining of sore eyes. The several gangways slid away one after another from the boat side, as if frightened into flight by the stropitous hoot that had just been sounded amidsthips. Almost before we were perfectly aware of it, the monster "Laurentic" was in motion.

A quivering breathless period—even for those to whom no hand was waved. A succession of moments which many on board (and doubtless many on shore) had chosen not to endure. Beside us stood a slight young girl, governess apparently to a French family. Using her trembling hands as a megaphone, she called brokenly to her elderly father and her tearful mother, "I am going below when the ship moves." Even as she spoke the liner was gliding away. But she did not go below. She lingered on the upper deck till her parents were mere specks on the fading wharf. Then, almost blind with emotion, she turned away. She was one of many.

Still the rain beat down, to the keen discomfort of eyes straining for a last glimpse of the old country. It pattered on the newly swept decks, and hissed in the white painted gutters. "Like the rainy season at Vancouver," said a male traveller with his black mustache blowing moist in the breeze.

Only a faithful few watched Liverpool fade into nothingness. I formed one of that loyal company. "Ah!" breathed I to myself, "this happens only once in a lifetime! It is something to remember and write about!" I turned round briskly (and a little proudly) and collided with a smiling steward. I asked him a few questions.

"Yes," he observed, "this is my seventeenth crossing." Seven—I gazed open mouthed at a man of such colossal experience. Then, very subdued and modest, I asked him the way to my berth.

The man obeyed and was immediately sworn.
"Mr. Storme," said his counsel, "will you tell the jury—"
"Wait a minute," said the man on the witness stand, interrupting him with a gesture, "you have made a mistake—my name is not Storme."
"What!" exclaimed his counsel, unprepared for this.
"What!" repeated the judge. "Do you mean to say, sir, that the name Storme is an alias?"
The judge, from his manner, was unquestionably convinced of the man's guilt.

"I mean," replied the man in a loud, firm voice, looking the judge squarely in the face, "that my name is not Storme—that I am not H. Stanleigh Storme—that I am not the prisoner."
"What's that? What's that?" cried the prosecutor. "Not the prisoner? What in God's name do you mean, sir?"
"I mean," replied the other, "just what I say. H. Stanleigh Storme, the prisoner, is the man who has just left the witness stand, and who has left the court. I tried to tell you time and time again that the man who took the stand was the prisoner himself, but you wouldn't listen to me."
"He was the prisoner, the criminal, the bank robber himself, and you never knew it. He knew that I was coming here to take the stand against him—though I had told no one but him—and he took the stand in my place and told my story—the story that I meant to tell—that I would have told. He knew it just as well as I did, and he could tell it better."
"I don't believe it!" exclaimed the prosecutor. "Your honor, it is a mere ruse—"

The other man again interrupted. "You haven't even the commonest observation," he said to the prosecutor. "You know the voice of H. Stanleigh Storme. Is it like mine? You are familiar with his face. Look at mine. The one thing that Storme did not tell you was that the very points of difference between us were in the voice and in the color of the skin. His face is florid, more or less, mine is always pale—"

"By George," exclaimed the sheriff in an audible voice to the crowd about him, "that accounts for it."
The judge adjusted his spectacles and looked long and earnestly at the man. Then he leaned back with an air of conviction.
"This man is not the prisoner," he said finally: "he is not H. Stanleigh Storme."
The prosecutor thought for a moment. Then he spoke.
"Why, then, did you not take the stand when I called your name?" he asked severely.
"You did not call my name," returned the other.
"I did," retorted the prosecutor. "I did call your name—the name of Wesley Warburton."
The man smiled and shook his head. "My name is Henry F. Townsend," he responded quietly.
"What!" returned the prosecutor. "Do you mean to tell me that you didn't write this letter to me signed Wesley Warburton? Look at it!"
"If you care to find out," responded Townsend slowly, "you are liable to discover that that letter is in the handwriting of H. Stanleigh Storme—ask the bank men here—and," he continued, "it's my opinion that you'll have to look a long way before you find any real man of the name of Wesley Warburton!"
"But these exhibits!" went on the lawyer. "How did the prisoner come to have charge of these?"
"That's simple enough," returned the other. "He had a copy of the newspaper just as I did, and it was an everyday job for a man like H. Stanleigh Storme to prepare copies of letters from memory—letters that he had handed me in the past. Here are my proofs—look at them." And he placed another batch of papers in the hands of the district attorney.

The whole thing is plain. Storme is a clever fellow, and he knew beforehand that I was coming, and he knew what I was here for. He knew that the man who had the first say would win out and cast suspicion on the other man. It was a simple thing for him to take the stand and tell my story. He knew it all by heart. And it was a simple thing to get off the stand and walk out in the open air a free man from henceforth. And mark my word, gentlemen, you'll never find him."

And they never did. For H. Stanleigh Storme was only half right in his last statement to the court.
The judge had his address all right in that he was correct. But he was laboring under some grievous misapprehension when he told the judge that he could be found there any time, if wanted.
For they tried it many, many times, and with great persistence—later. And they found he'd proved an alibi.
"Now who was stringing us, Burke?" said O'Connell after it was all over. "Was it the devil or H.

Stanleigh Storme?"
"Well," responded Burke, stretching his head, "it's about the same either way. There's no difference, so far as I can see, between the two."
And O'Connell was in much the same frame of mind.

CHAPTER XVIII Storme Proves Another Alibi.

The facts set forth in the foregoing narrative were all within the personal knowledge of the writer; for what happened later he is dependent wholly on evidence at second hand, but which nevertheless is in all respects reliable.
The writer sat within the courtroom at each trial, and in fact reported for a local sheet such of the facts as were afterwards made public, but immediately after the second trial associated himself with a leading paper in an Eastern city.

It was with feelings of considerable pleasure that he found himself confronted on the street not long since by a bearded denizen of the old place. From this man he was able to glean such further facts relative to H. Stanleigh Storme as were of interest to him.
"Well, sir," said the visitor. "I'm glad to see you. I haven't seen you for a couple o' years at the outside—not in fact since I saw you at the Storme trial. Do you remember it? You were on the Blade about that time."
"The Star," corrected I. "Did they ever hear of Storme?" I asked.
"Hear of him?" replied the old man. "Why, ain't you heard? Didn't you know about it?"
"Tell me," I requested.
"Why, no," responded he, "they never got him out there; but somebody did on here East. Why, man alive, he's been sent up—he's jailed, though on another charge, and," he added, "under another name."
"Another name?" I said. "What name?"
The old man slowly smiled.
"It's a name that's well known by this time, I guess, pretty much all over. Did you ever hear of Stephen Duckworth?"
"What!" I exclaimed. "Stephen Duckworth! The man that tried to float that million dollar bond scheme—the forger. Why, he's in state's prison in this state; been there a month, at least."
"Exactly," returned my old friend, "that's where he is. And that man," he continued, "is H. Stanleigh Storme. I thought you knew it all the time. They've got him under lock and key this time for fair. He won't get out too soon."

It was about dinner time. I led the way into the cozy corner of a downtown restaurant, where we regaled ourselves and whiled away an hour.
"And the other fellow, Townsend, what became of him?" I asked.
The old man wiped the soup off his wide expanse of short front and nodded his head.
"I don't suppose," he answered, "that C. T. & A. Railway had a better manager than they've got now. I know they haven't in my time. His name," he added, "is Henry F. Townsend. He's one of the best business men in the place, and they all swear by him."
"They swore on him a bit after that last trial on account of the blame fool way in which he'd been taken in, but when they came to cool down, they concluded all around that Townsend wasn't to blame any more than anybody else—the whole town had been took in, the banks and the police force the most of all."
"Henry F. Townsend told a straightforward story, and he was a straightforward man, and they came to understand that pretty soon. There wasn't anything against him except that he was mixed up in this unfortunate thing about the same way everybody had been, and they found there was a good deal in favor of him. He stayed right there and bore the brunt of the whole thing—said he was all right and intended to stick to it."
"And he did. And he won out. Some of his old railroad people got interested in the C. T. & A., and they slapped Townsend right in as assistant manager—you see he knew all about the business. And then, by George, the manager resigned and Townsend stepped right into his shoes. And he's all right, is Henry F. Townsend."
"He never married, I suppose?" I queried.
The old man smiled again.
"Yes, he did," he answered. "And that was another funny thing."
"Do you remember that Dumont robbery—the thing Storme turned before he went for the First National? Well, sir, Townsend married that girl—the Dumont girl. I believe she'd known Storme, or something of that kind, and I suppose Townsend met her in some way after the trial, but anyway, she married him, and they're both all right."

"It was a funny thing, though. They say she saw the burglar in her house that night and recognized him; and it must seem queer to her when she looks at Townsend, for if ever a man looked like Storme, he's the man, though he's changed his looks some now, too.

"That Dumont girl is rich, too; rich as mud, they say. So Townsend, what with the railroad and other things, is pretty well fixed, and happy, too, I guess; as happy as they make 'em. Well, sir," concluded the old man, reaching for a bunch of toothpicks. "I'm due uptown about this time and I guess I'll be moving."
"I'll go with you," I responded.

As we passed a newspaper bulletin in the way up the street, we saw a crowd around it.

"Well, by George," exclaimed my companion, "will wonders never cease? Look at that. That's about the man we were talkin' of just now."

I looked. Upon the bulletin, in fresh black paint, appeared the following words:

Duckworth's Desperate Escape
Stephen Duckworth, the Notorious Bond Forger, Breaks His Prison Bonds

Cannot Be Found. Possess Scouring The Country In Search.

The old man squeezed my arm. "What do you think of that?" he asked. "You take my word for it, they'll never get him—no, sir, they can't do it. I'm bettin' on any man the first letter of whose last name begins with H. Stanleigh Storme. If he's out, he's out for good."
And he was. Officially, Stephen Duckworth was supposed to be confined in cell No. 148. Actually, he was far away.

They find his bars sawed, the cage broken, and the bird flown.

Officially, the record in the warden's office set forth that Stephen Duckworth, the famous forger, bank robber, and swindler, was safe within the clutches of the law. But it was not true.
As he had often done before, H. Stanleigh Storme had once more proved an alibi.

"Some fellow ought to write a book about him," exclaimed the old man again as we started on once more.

I assented.
"I will," I said.
And, accordingly, I have.

Dogs.

Dogs were formerly indigenous to the indigent, but since the advent of dog licenses, whereby a dog, without a maid or a valet, is presumed to be guilty until it is proved innocent or shot, they have been grafted on family trees, with their own separate heraldry as substitutes for children, thereby furnishing considerable consolation for race suicide.

Dogs are divided into two great classes—pedigreed and verdigreed. Verdigreed are of two kinds—mad dogs and dogs. Pedigreed are of several kinds, chief among which are watch dogs and sheep-dogs. Watch-dogs are so called because they are small enough, and usually cranky enough, to be carried around in the place of watches by people who have plenty of time. Sheep-dogs are so called because they are led around by sheepish-looking people.
Those dogs are considered the handsomest by connoisseurs which lock the ugliest to other people.

Challenge the Judge.

It was a case in an Irish court, and, the prisoner seeming hard to satisfy, jurymen after jurymen was asked to leave the box. However, all things come to an end, even in Ireland, and at last the swearing of the jury was completed. And then the prisoner leaned over the dock and sought the ear of his counsel.
"The jury's all right now, I think," he whispered; "but ye must challenge the judge: I've been convicted under him several times already, and maybe he's beginnin' to have a prejudice."

Sophistry of a Sophist.

A certain archbishop, when asked woman to misstate her age, replied: "A lie may be defined as a statement made by one rational being to another rational being, with the intent to deceive. Now, as no rational being would think of asking a woman her age with the expectation of being answered truthfully, one of the elements of the lie is lacking, and the woman's statement cannot, strictly speaking, be defined as such."

Australia has Tallest Tree.

Australia claims to have the tallest tree in the world. It has long been thought that to California belongs this distinction, but, while California trees are of gigantic dimensions, they do not come up to Australia's eucalyptus trees. The Californians are noted not so much for their height as for their girth and diameter. The tallest tree in California yet discovered was found by actual measurement to be 340ft high. Australia's record gum tree can beat this by 140ft.

LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION.

The definite announcement from Sir Wilfrid Laurier that he will retain his seat in the Dominion House as leader of the opposition will be received with gratification throughout the country. For many reasons he is the logical and the best equipped man for that position. His term of fifteen years at the head of the government has given him a comprehensive knowledge of national affairs and a ripeness of experience which places him in a position to render valuable service to Canada as leader of the opposition. However radically the Conservatives, when in opposition, may have differed from the policy adopted by Sir Wilfrid Laurier as premier in his administration of the several departments of the government, they at all times manifested, as a party, every respect for him personally and accorded him all due consideration as the Prime Minister of Canada. As leader of the opposition, that attitude toward him will not undergo any change upon the part of the Conservatives from the government side of the House, and it is certain that speaking from the left of the Speaker the ex-premier will at all times command a respectful hearing and his utterances will be recognized as deserving careful consideration upon the part of the government and its supporters.

Aside, however, from the recognized advantage of the presence of Sir Wilfrid Laurier as opposition leader, one cannot but note the fact that in his determination to remain in the House in that capacity he has exhibited again his astonishing faculty for hasty change of position relative to matters of public importance, of which his political career provides many instances. His utterances from the platform during the campaign just closed gave the people to understand in unmistakable language, that, if defeated, he would retire from public life, and specifically stated that he would on no account consent to again act as leader of the opposition in the House at Ottawa. Once the elections are past, however, and it is certain that he has been overwhelmingly defeated, he promptly comes forward with the facetious announcement, "I will stay with the boys," and by way of explanation deigns to add, "It would be desertion to leave them now." Doubtless, the ardent adorer of Sir Wilfrid Laurier will contemplate this masterful deliverance with rapt admiration and will compare the ex-premier to the dutiful captain who refuses to desert a sinking ship. There are others, however, who will see in this sudden change of front yet another indication of the crushing nature of the defeat which the Laurier administration experienced at the polls on Thursday last. So completely decimated are the Liberal forces that there is no one left who is at all capable of leading but Sir Wilfrid himself. His chief ministers all went down in the deluge; there is no member of his government who has survived who is equal to the task of leading the opposition; therefore, for Sir Wilfrid to withdraw at the present juncture would leave the fragments of his former splendid forces in a state of subject impotence and dismemberment, the humiliation of which is too much for the whilom first minister to contemplate. Inasmuch as his own presence as leader of the opposition is the only possible means of accomplishing any degree of deliverance from the predicament into which his supporters have fallen, Sir Wilfrid finds it imperative to retain that leadership.
 Be the underlying motives of this change of front what they may, the fact remains that the presence of Sir Wilfrid as opposition leader will very greatly enhance the usefulness of the minority in the House.

NEW LIGHT ON OLD THEMES.

Many of those utterances upon the part of leading statesmen and other recognized authorities in the United States, which were considered more or less ominous in relation to Canada previous to the recent elections, will be found to have entirely changed their aspect and to be most encouraging and consoling when viewed in the light of the change wrought in the political situation in the Dominion as the result of the polling on September 21st.

To begin with, the oft quoted words of President Taft at the New York banquet may be taken:

"I have said that this was a critical time in the solution of the question of reciprocity. It is critical because unless it is now decided favorably to reciprocity, it is exceedingly probable that no such opportunity will ever again come to the United States. The forces which are at work in England and in Canada to separate her by a Chinese wall from the United States, and to make her part of an imperial commercial hand reaching from England around the world to England again by a system of preferential tariffs, will derive an impetus from the rejection of this treaty, and if we would have reciprocity, with all the advantages that I have described, we must take it now, or give it up forever."

It is highly gratifying that an authority so eminent as the President of the United States may be quoted to the effect that the affiliations of the Dominion are now settled once and for all and that the destiny of Canada is that she should become the chief factor in the building of a solid British Empire "reaching from England around the world to England again." The more literally such a prophecy is fulfilled the better will Canada be pleased.

Mr. James J. Hill likewise gave utterance to some very significant sentences which "look good" in the new light which was shed upon matters upon the ever-to-be-remembered 21st of September. This, for instance:

"The effectuation of that agreement would practically destroy Great Britain's scheme for Imperial federation, a scheme which not only implies closer bonds politically between Great Britain and her dependencies, but closer relations commercially, and undoubtedly preference for the products of the dependencies in the great markets of the world located in Great Britain.

"If our government rejects the proffers of reciprocity now under consideration, Canada will certainly turn the current of her trade as far as possible toward Great Britain. In that direction it will pass her entire agricultural output through her own water channels to the Liverpool markets, and from Great Britain will be bought an increasing proportion of supplies of manufactured goods of all kinds. Our food products will have to compete in the world's markets of Liverpool and London at a disadvantage with the products of Canada."

The effectuation of that agreement did not eventuate, not because the United States rejected the "proffers of reciprocity," but because Canada was wise enough to decline with emphasis. The result, therefore, upon the authority of Mr. Hill, will be that Imperial Federation and all that it implies will proceed unto its consummation while the mutual trade between Canada and Great Britain will be developed to its utmost limit, to all of which Canada most devoutly responds: "So Mo't It Be."

Senator Beveridge, of Indiana, in an inspired moment, broke into the ranks of the prophets and cried:

"There must be reciprocity with Canada. Our tariff with the rest of the world does not apply to our north-ern neighbor. That policy already has driven American manufacturers across the Canadian borders, built vast plants with American capital on Canadian soil, employing Canadian workmen to supply trade. That capital should be kept at home to employ American workmen to supply Canadian demand."

The eminent senator certainly laid hold of a highly patriotic idea from the standpoint of the United States, but unfortunately for its survival the Canadian electors did not see the matter exactly in that light and so, "The best laid plans of mice and men." The citizens of Canada are prepared to welcome capital from the United States or from any other country for the purpose of developing Canada's natural resources within Canada's borders, but if that capital is to be "kept at home" then any benefits that may be derived therefrom must be gathered from some source other than Canada's raw materials. By inference it follows from the remarks of Senator Beveridge that American capital will continue to come in yet larger quantities, to build yet vaster plants on Canadian soil, employing ever increasing multitudes of Canadian workmen to supply trade, all of which tallies exactly with the true fitness of things from the Canadian viewpoint.

The Northwest Miller waxed eloquent over the prospect which reciprocity opened up for the great milling industry of the United States as follows:

"The disposition of Canada's surplus is a question upon the answer to which depends the future, not only of the milling interests of the (American) Northwest, but indeed of the United States. Should this surplus be shipped abroad, it must inevitably mean the destruction of the American export trade, the shifting of the American milling centre, the gradual decline of the American milling interest to a comparatively unimportant place in the list of large American industries.

"The miller who is able to grind this enormous (Canadian) crop will be the miller of the future, and where he is, there will be the great mills of the world."

The Canadian electors have decided that the miller who grinds the enormous Canadian wheat crop shall be located on Canadian soil and they have no desire at all to evade the mild impeachment of such an eminent authority as the Northwest Miller when it declares "There will be the great mills of the world." They have no doubt about it.

The Minneapolis Journal, a representative newspaper, thus summarized the commercial significance of reciprocity: "The Taft policy not only spells North American commercial union, but also the doom of British Imperialistic commercial unity.

"Today, England is our best customer, and Canada is our third best customer. But our foreign trade wanes and that of Canada grows. If we push Canada into England's arms, the trade arrangements between the two will tend more and more to shut us out.
 "How long will our trade with these two customers last if reciprocity fails? Our Canadian trade must fall off, as the east and west channels of her commerce are scoured by use. And Canada will more and more supply English needs in our stead."

The chief difficulty, from the standpoint of the above, would appear to be that the spelling match did not end in favor of the "Taft policy." True, the United States carefully avoided pushing Canada into England's arms, but finding herself snugly ensconced in those arms, Canada declined the flattering invitation to separate herself therefrom. In the opinion of the above authority, therefore, British Imperialistic commerce not only survives but is destined to steadily strengthen and develop. All of which Canada considers a "consummation devoutly to be wished."

This profitable exercise might be extended indefinitely but the above are sufficient to demonstrate that even in the opinion of the most eminent thinkers of the United States along political and economic lines, Canada made no misstep in the action which was taken at the polls on Thursday last.

The New Ridgeway School

Corner Stone Laid by Mr. A. R. Steacy

There is a world-wide superstition that the bride whom the sun shines on will prosper. Applying the same theory to educational enterprise, there will be very little doubt but that the new Ridgeway school will be shortly a flourishing institution. There was something providential in the postponement of the laying of the corner stone from Friday, September 15th (which proved to be a miserably wet day), to last Friday, which fulfilled everybody's most sanguine meteorological hopes. A good natured sun shone warmly upon the whole ceremony, and made it a pleasant and memorable one. Quite a goodly number of prominent citizens were present, the clergy were lavishly represented, and a concourse of school children, accompanied by teachers and parents, stood round in orderly clusters, bursting into patriotic song between the speeches.

The seat of honor was given to Mayor McNeish, who, in his preliminary remarks, referred to the great educational advancement of North Vancouver. Thanks to the hard work of everybody concerned, said his worship, they had now in British Columbia a system of education which was second to none.

He called upon Mr. M. S. McDowell, one of the school trustees, whose duty it was to place a box containing sundry articles and documents in a specially provided cavity.

Mr. McDowell emphasized the advantage enjoyed by British Columbia, which was a young province, in having the educational experience of older provinces to work upon. When the British government was founding the school system of the Transvaal, they came to the province of New Brunswick to get ideas for that system. It spoke well for the North Vancouver authorities that they also had copied the system of New Brunswick. Mr. McDowell referred in complimentary terms to the courtesy they had always received from Mr. Alexander Robinson, the superintendent of education at Victoria.

He then deposited the box containing the following documents, etc., in the prepared cavity.

The latest copies of the North Vancouver Express, the Daily Province, the Daily World and the Daily News-Advertiser.

The statistical statement of public schools from the date of the incorporation of the city (May, 1907) to the present day.

Rolls containing the autographs of the following: The mayor and aldermen of the city and city officials; the city board of school trustees and officials; the president and other office-bearers of the board of trade; the architects, contractors and inspector of works connected with the building; and a list of names of members of the teaching staff of the city schools.

Printed pamphlets and written statistics of the City of North Vancouver.

Silver coinage of Canada of the latest minting.

Text books as used in the schools of the province of British Columbia.

Mr. McDowell expressed the hope that if occasion arose future generations might have the pleasure of finding that box intact.

Then followed the formal presentation of the trowel to Mr. A. R. Steacy, by Mr. Jones, of Messrs. Jones & Gillam, architects. Mr. Steacy, after apologizing for the buskiness of his voice, which he said was very bad that day, expressed his pleasure in participating in such a pleasant labor as laying the foundation stone of a building which in future would be known as the Ridgeway school. His board had allotted him the honor of placing that stone. He felt that he could truly say that that day's event would be an epoch in their history. Mr. Steacy then gave some interesting particulars of the advancement which has been made educationally in North Vancouver. In the year 1906 they had one building, 53 pupils and one teacher. In 1907, there were 201 pupils, with three teachers, and the relative assessed value of school lands was $12,365. In 1908, they had 316 children and five teachers, and the assessed value of school lands assessed at $20,250. In 1909, they had enrolled 341 pupils, had seven teachers and possessed school lands assessed at $35,000. In 1910, the pupils numbered 444, the teachers eight, and the relative assessed value of school lands was $54,000. In 1911, they had 615 pupils, thirteen teachers, and the assessed value of school lands was $151,540.

"We are now," said Mr. Steacy, "in our small but ambitious city making substantial headway." The chairman of the school board then formally laid the corner stone, which was of granite and bore the following inscription:

North Vancouver City
"RIDGWAY SCHOOL."
Erected 1911.

This stone was laid by A. R. Steacy, Esq., 15th September, 1911.

Board of School Trustees:
A. B. Steacy, Chairman.
M. S. McDowell, A. G. Perry,
J. W. Hay, J. D. Fraser.
Geo. Campbell, Secretary.

According to formality Mr. Steacy then declared the stone to be "well and worthily laid."

The school children having rendered a patriotic song, the Rev. Mr. Schlichter made some appropriate remarks. He declared that he would have rather had the duty of laying the corner stone.

"Look wise, and that's all there is to it," said Mr. Schlichter. After congratulating everybody on their good fortune in having fine weather, the speaker expressed a hope that education in North Vancouver would now go ahead more rapidly than ever.

The Rev. H. C. Hooper said that with one exception, nothing could be more important in any city than education. He trusted that he would live to see the time when the teaching of religious knowledge would be included in the school curriculum.

Other speakers were the Rev. A. J. Prosser, the Rev. Ronald McLeod and Alderman McRae.

Mr. A. G. Perry, one of the trustees, outlined the causes which led to the building of the new school. It had been found that they were greatly in need of an additional school in the east end of the city. They knew that it would not be any use putting up anything in the way of a small structure, so it was decided to erect a fire-proof building, containing eight rooms, to be extended to sixteen rooms when occasion arose. The architects in the matter have been Messrs. Jones & Gillam. The contract was drawn up on a Thursday evening. On the Friday morning it was signed, and in the afternoon was passed by the board. On the following morning they were at work on the chosen site. They had found that the price of material had been greater than they had anticipated, so that in January they proposed to come to the ratepayers for more money to complete that magnificent structure.

After a brief address from the president of the board of trade, Mr. Alex. Phillip, Trustee Fraser moved a vote of thanks to the Mayor and all the speakers for their presence at that interesting ceremony.

Lord Charles Beresford

The Man and His Opinions.

"I regard today as Canada's birthday as a nation, and while propriety prevented me before from giving expression to my thoughts and wishes I am more than glad to be able today to tell the people of Canada how much I rejoice with them in their splendid victory, for I consider it essentially a victory of the Canadian people to have preserved their national integrity and industrial and economic freedom."

Lord Charles Beresford.
The pinnace, in which we all sat, purred along smoothly towards the flagship, which, with its great sides glinting in the sun, lay anchored among the foremost warships of the fleet. Already a cluster of small figures was visible on a wide stretch of deck—figures which were presently to become life-sized and reveal themselves as Lord Charles Beresford and his officers. Now and again the admiral raised his sparkling telescope, which he held under his arm just as I had noticed in photographs, and, peering over the waters at some vessel of the fleet, mentioned something which we all felt must be very important indeed, to the officer nearest him.

I shall never forget that first glimpse of "Condor Charlie," as the whole world popularly knew him. I have seen innumerable pictures of Napoleon, standing on St. Helena in one unvaried attitude (so unvaried that I have come to cynically disbelieve the Emperor ever stood that way). And I had seen Lord Charles depicted in the papers rather Napoleonic—short legs sturdily astride, keen head slightly forward, arms folded behind him, and with that eternal telescope under one of them. Consequently it made me blink incredulously and look again, and take a third look under the shade of a hand, when Lord Charles materialized above us, just as I had seen him depicted, even to the telescope.

He has been described as the "hull-dog" type (facially as well as temperamentally), but the classification is not very apt. His mouth certainly droops rather sternly, with that curve which is noticeable in the mouth of his own favorite animal, but there is nothing at all savage or ill-tempered in his personal appearance. His blue eyes, which, like most sailors' are wrinkled round very lavishly, are distinctly mischievous, and his expression, on each of the three times I have seen him, reminded me of the old country squires that are discoverable on almanacs at Christmas.

He has been accused of pomposity. Most persons in authority have to meet this accusation. If Lord Charles is pompous, it is mannerism—not affectation. He is a keen disciplinarian, has a mania for accuracy and precision in trifles, and keeps a very warm corner in his heart for subordinates who are victimized by the red-tape inanities which frequently occur at headquarters.

These last two characteristics necessarily render his opinions specially worth our attention. A man who is accurate and precise will go into the minutest points of any problem that he attacks. A man who recognizes, and has always recognized in the past, that those in high quarters err very humanly at times will put aside all partisan prejudice and give his opinion straight from the shoulder. Therefore, Lord Charles Beresford's recent pronouncement on the reciprocity fiasco should be cut into and pasted in your memories as the dictum of a man whose principle has always been to "say what you think very decidedly, but think it well over beforehand."

Thus, according to an interview recounted in the Daily News-Advertiser, does Lord Charles Beresford write his epitaph to reciprocity:

"I am particularly delighted with the outcome of this campaign because it was not based upon the question of partisanship but upon the issue of empire and country, and I believe that I am correct in this analysis because many Liberals must have cast their votes with the Conservatives to accomplish this glorious result, which proves to me that the people of any country may be trusted to answer wisely and decisively 'yes' or 'no' when important issues are plainly put before them. All Europe is interested in the outcome of this election because it solidifies the British Empire, and I believe that Canada, with its enormous resources, its energetic and virile population, will some day be the centre of the British Empire. I regard today as Canada's birthday as a nation because by this election it has resolved upon its future course, and with the marked ability it has shown in finance, industry and agriculture it is well able to take care of itself, thereby benefiting the empires of the world. Had Canada accepted a reciprocity pact with the United States its affairs must have been drawn, sooner or later, into a political arena, and what that would have meant ultimately may be best understood by the fact that for every dollar Canada puts down America can put down a thousand, and for every man, America puts down a hundred. People and nations generally think of their own person and selfish interest and if I had been an American citizen I should have worked with all my might for reciprocity because I would have been certain to benefit by it. I have the greatest admiration for Americans and their wonderful achievements and I don't blame them in the least for having tried to gain a most important foothold for their energy and ingenuity. I believe that if reciprocity had been carried it would have been the beginning of the end of the British Empire as a whole."

Lord Charles, who commented thus on the defeat of reciprocity, has, on the heels of another Napoleon of the sea, been in our midst. Hardly had Admiral Togo departed than Lord Charles Beresford arrived—an interesting brace of heroes with nothing more in common than success and stature.

"IAN HILL."

Children's Day was suitably celebrated in North Lonsdale Presbyterian church last Sunday by a special children's service in the evening. Almost a record attendance was noted, the church being comfortably filled. The special children's collection—outside the usual offering—amounted to $4.35, which sum is to be forwarded to the Central Children's Day Fund. Suitable addresses were given by the superintendent, Mr. M. Phillips, and Mr. Van Munster.

The occupant of a house on 4th street had a narrow escape from fire on Sunday afternoon. She had apparently thrown ashes which contained live coal into the basement, with the result that a fire commenced to spread along the basement wall. Fortunately this was detected from outside by W. E. McBaily, who, after several attempts to enter the basement, succeeded in arousing the occupant of the house, who, unaware of her danger, had been placidly sleeping. An extinguisher was obtained from the Fire Hall and by this means a serious blaze was promptly averted.

SALE OF WORK AND CONCERT IN LYNN VALLEY TOMORROW.

The Ladies' Aid of the Lynn Valley Presbyterian church are putting on a sale of work during the afternoon in the church, on the car line and Centre road. Afternoon tea will be served and a good time is assured. In the evening a grand concert has been arranged by the Ladies' Aid and will be contributed to in its entirety by visiting artists, mostly strangers to Lynn Valley. Mr. Robert Scott is to give solos on the violin; Mr. T. W. Ward, on the piano, and accompanist; and Mr. Nansen and D. Campbell, tenor and baritone solos, respectively. These have been heard on one or two occasions in Lynn Valley, but the other performers are on for the first time. These include Miss MacDonald, soprano; Miss Bessie MacDonald, elocutionist; and Mr. Robert Robertson, baritone, and Mr. Percy Ward.
