CAREER OF THE LATE F. S. HUSSEY

Superintendent of Provincial Police for twenty years—Notable instances of Courage and Capability.

Frederick Stephen Hussey, Superintendent of Provincial Police, who died at Victoria on Friday last, was born in Beaminster, Dorsetshire, England, September 17th, 1852, son of Stephanus and Ellen Hussey. Came to B. C. in 1875, was a member of the provincial police for 33 years; married Eleanor Venables Good in Los Angeles, Cal., and was a member of the A. F. & A. M.

The above was the man's description of himself, as published in "Who's Who". Within that brief sentence. "Came to British Columbia in 1875, and was a member of the provincial police for 33 years" lies a wealth of experience, a history of adventure, a record of personal daring and unflinching discharge of dangerous and onerous duties, seldom equalled in this world. It is a wide page and long one on which that history is written, and across it dance many strange characters. It would make a remarkable story, a story of pluck and tact and unselfishness, a story in which the golden thread of human kindness and humanity was always interwoven in the woof of stern response to the highest sense and realization of duty. Across that page would flit the shadows of desperate criminals brought to justice; of hopeless souls in whom a new hope had been inspired; of friendless ones who found a friend; of black sheep brought back into the fold of honest endeavor. Thereon would be inscribed the keen regard of men in the most eminent offices alongside the humble, but sincere tributed of men like Old Bill Miner, who, despite their deeds, were manly men, and loved Hussey for his very nerve, his uncompromising justice and his strong manhood.

The late superintendent when he first came to this province from England, took up mining and prospecting for a few years, but in 1878 he became government agent and mining recorder at Spence's Bridge, Lytton and Ashcroft, and since then until his death Friday last he has been a member of the provincial police. He succeeded superintendent Roycroft as superintendent of provincial police and governor of provincial jails, in 1891. For several years past he has resided at the Rocabella at Blanchard street and Victoria crescent. A souvenir cherished by one of the late Mr. Hussey's old friends, Mr. John Bean of Victoria, is a free miner's certificate issued to Mr. Dean by Mr. Hussey at Spence's Bridge, on February 13, 1886.

The half-masted Union Jack drooping disconsolately at the parliament buildings, betokened but imperfectly the general and genuine sorrow of his associates of the civil service at the death of Superintendent Hussey, for it is no exaggeration to say that he commanded the unqualified esteem and respect of all who were permitted to know him intimately, as few men did.

Superintendent Hussey — keen student of humankind, fearless and resourceful, of infinite tact and patience the model administrator — all who have been brought in touch with the administration of law and justice in B. C. for years have admired as they recognized his strength and fitness as an officer.

"In the death of Supt. Hussey," said Acting Attorney-General Hon. W. R. Ross, "British Columbia has lost a public officer whose record was an unblemished and exceptional one. Fearless and capable in the discharge of a duty, an able administrator, and of a man of determination and initiative resource, he is thoroughly entitled to a very large measure of credit for the good repute enjoyed by this western province as law-respecting and law-enforcing. His death can scarcely be said to have come as a surprise, for he has been breaking up during some months past. We have endeavored to lighten his official burdens—indeed to relieve him of departmental responsibilities during his recurrent illnesses—but even while at the hospital he has insisted upon doing his work. And thus he died as he would have wished—in the harness. His administration of the police department of this province will be remembered as that of a courageous, able, honest man, who recognized his duty and served his country well."

The simple tribute of the men who worked with the late superintendent, testifies to the fact that he was a splendid man, a true friend, a just chief. He was a blunt, modest, reserved man. He was a police official always, carrying out the law to the letter, irrespective of circumstances or persons. Self never entered his thoughts. His record is clean and straight and unassailable. As a superior officer he was always kind and considerate, but he always demanded loyalty to duty from those under him. He was liberal. He was fearless to a degree and especially fond of animals, never omitting an opportunity to befriend or defend them.

As an illustration of Chief Hussey's humanity to man, there is no better story than that of his dealings with a giant stoker attached to one of the British warships stationed at Esquimalt, some years ago. This stoker, a hairy Brobdignagian kind of a man could handle three ordinary men at a time, and when infuriated or drunk he could take care of a half dozen. He was constantly in trouble with his superiors, and on the occasion in question, he was thrown into the provincial jail for insubordination. He was not there long before he was ordered to the dark cell in shackles because of a nasty little custom he had of flinging his jailors about and bringing his manacled fists down upon their heads. The dark cell only made matters very much worse. In a terrible fury the giant was so unmanageable that it was dangerous to go even near him, and finally word was sent to Chief Hussey that he had better come in person and try and quiet the man.

The chief went at once and met the big stoker who was heavily manacled and handcuffed, and guarded by two jailors, in a small room. "Now just take those irons off the man and let me talk to him alone." The chief's voice was pitched low and sharp. His eyes raked the stoker from head to toe. "But chief" the warder protested, "he will kill you if we do. We'd have to shoot him. The man is just crazy."

In spite of repeated protests and warnings, the chief insisted on having his wishes carried out. "I have no gun," he said, raising his coat tails and showing his hip pockets, "and there won't be any fight."

When the warden and jailers had reluctantly withdrawn the chief turned on the hulking, mystified stoker, and said: "Now come over here and sit down. I want to talk to you. You've been kicking up all kinds of a row here and you've got to stop it I haven't got time to monkey around trying to settle things between you and the jailers here. You ought to have more sense. What's the matter with you anyway? Why don't you take your medicine when you've earned it?"

The prisoner broke out into a terrible attack upon the jail officials and his superior officers in the navy. They had bullied and maltreated him, he said, and he wouldn't stand it.

"Well," continued the cool voice of the chief "you just behave yourself and everything will be all right. Now you must finish your term in the dark cell, but if you will give me your word that you will act like a man, you won't be manacled or cuffed."

The stoker refused to give his word.

"All right," said the chief rising and making for the door, "in that case we'll have to deal with you accordingly."

Chief Hussey had hardly reached the exit when the giant called after him: "I'll give you my word, Mr. Hussey."

"I'll take your word," the chief called back without turning around.

Two weeks later the stoker was made a "trusty" at the jail. When his term was finished he walked into Chief Hussey's office. "Do you know me chief?" he asked. The chief could not definitely place him until the ex-stoker recalled the incident. The chief complimented him on his exemplar behaviour.

"Well, Mr. Hussey," said the big man, "if they'd treated me in the navy like you treated me I'd have been one of the best men they had. You won't ever hear anything against me again."

The chief discovered that the man was out of the imperial service and had no money and no job. Thereupon he sent him to a hotel where he was told he could board until something turned up, at the chief's expense. Later Mr. Hussey sent the man to Captain ——, who gave him a job on a steamer. The ex-stoker became one of the chief officers on this vessel and is now a respected officer on board an American trans-Pacific liner.

One of Chief Hussey's many anecdotes, not connected with himself particularly, related to old Bill Miner, an unfortunate who possessed many good qualities and a man whom Mr. Hussey liked although he pursued him relentlessly and fearlessly in the discharge of his duty. One day some time ago a party of ranchers and their wives were gathered together at a friend's house about fifteen miles from the town of Kamloops. It was a Sunday morning and a bright sunshiny day. Presently the party was joined by a stranger, a man of winning personality and evidently a gentleman. Soon after his arrival one of the ladies remarked that it was too bad they had no preacher so that they might hold a church service. The stranger rose to the occasion. He sang and prayed and preached a sermon that was really eloquent. The party were all sorry when he left.

Two days passed and then the hold-up of a C.P.R. train near New Westminster by a group of daring bandits electrified the province. Eventually the crime was traced to Bill Miner and some of his associates and they were on trial at Kamloops when a woman approached Chief Hussey and asked if she might see "Mr. Miner." The chief took the woman to the court room and pointed the bandit out.

"Yes," she said regretfully, "that's the man all right. Just to think of his being here. And he made such a beautiful prayer!"

A few years ago Mr. Hussey was in charge of a posse which went in pursuit of a desperate murderer named Kennedy who escaped to Read Island after killing his victim. The island is rocky and when the late police officer was seeking the hiding place of his quarry he suddenly descried Kennedy leaning over a ledge of rock near the highest point of the island with a Winchester pointed at him. What followed illustrates the courage of the dead man. He stood for a moment looking to either side to convey the impression to the murderer that he had not noticed him, and then swung around and stood with his back toward the rifle of the desperate man. There he stood looking about the island with his glasses while the desperado had a bead drawn on him, and then calmly walked off until he was safe under cover. At once he gathered in his cordon and gradually closed in on the murderer. As the cordon drew close Supt. Hussey called upon Kennedy to surrender. Kennedy poked the rifle over the ledge and said he would kill anyone who came forward. Supt. Hussey said: "It's no use, Kennedy, you can't get away," and walked forward. The reckless daring of the police officer unnerved the murderer and he threw down his rifle and waited for the arrest.

On another occasion, some years prior to this, Supt. Hussey was working in connection with a coal mining strike concerning which there was much feeling and many threats were made. The ringleaders had a shack in the woods and one of them was reported to have made a threat that he would kill that policeman Hussey.

As soon as this was reported to the head officer he went to the shack, alone and unarmed, threw up the latch and walked in. He calmly shut the door and turned on the assembled men. Then he pointed toward the man who was reported to have made the threat and asked him if it was true that he had threatened to kill him. The striker swore and repeated the threat, whereupon Supt. Hussey walked over, took him by the coat collar and walked off with him and none of those present raised a finger. The nerve of the superintendent overcame any thought they might have had of prevenling the arrest of their comrade.

In the earlier days of the province, when life and property were not considered secure in the upper country many instances were noted of the work of the late Supt. Hussey. Among these stories is one of how he acted with regard to an alleged bad man. He was sitting in his little office at Lytton one day when a resident ran in and said the bartender at the hotel wanted him to come quick as there was a bad man there with two revolvers who was shooting up the place and making threats. The superintendent went at once to the bar room and walked in.

"I'm from Texas, and I'm a bad man," shouted the stranger, as the policeman came in. "Here," he shouted to Mr. Hussey, "we don't want any policemen here; you get out."

Hussey walked over to the rowmaker and his fist shot out and met the point of the jaw of the supposed bad man who went down and out. His revolvers were taken away from him and when he came to he was marched off to the lockup.

In the early days of C. P. R. construction the late Supt. Hussey was at Lytton and while there some Chinese started a wash-house. The railroad workers were averse to the presence of the Chinese and a number of them at-

BRIDGE DEVELOPMENTS

Increased Subsidy to Be Sought — Delegation to Ottawa To-day — Bridge Designs to Be Called For.

The joint meeting of the companies and the municipalities interested in Second Narrows bridge, which was held Wednesday afternoon transacted important business in a manner that shows conclusively that all efforts are now to be aimed directly at bridge construction.

In pursuance of the terms of the agreement as adopted it was decided to take immediate steps to induce the government to increase the Dominion subsidy of $200,000 already voted, to $350,000, and to finally dispose of the matter before the approaching dissolution. Mr. William McNeill will leave for Ottawa tonight to further this application while Reeve McNaught and Mayor McNeish are in readiness to proceed to the capital, but their actual departure is contingent on developments there, of which they expect to be advised today. No effort will be spared to have this matter finally settled without delay.

Engineer Donald Cameron was instructed to prepare all necessary data with reference to depth of water, width of channel, etc., which will be required for the purpose of making designs of a bridge, such as it is intended to build.

This information will be forwarded to different engineers and construction companies in order that all who wish may submit plans for the consideration of Burrard Inlet Tunnel & Bridge Company.

The provisions which would be necessary in order that the bridge may carry water pipes, gas pipes, telephone and electric power wires were discussed by the directors with City Engineer Fellowes of Vancouver.

District Council

At the special meeting of the District Council held Thursday evening the chief item of business was that of dealing with a petition from the Lynn Valley Ratepayers' Association with reference to the methods followed by the District Engineer.

The resolution was accompanied by a letter advanced as a reason for the action taken, that in the opinion of the Ratepayers' Association a lack of prudence upon the part of the engineer with respect to the methods of expenditure of monies voted for public works.

The communication gave rise to an extended discussion in which Councillors Allan and Loutet were the chief participants.

Councillor Loutet said that specific charges must be laid. The Council had asked for these every time a complaint of this nature had cropped up and nothing but vague slanders had resulted.

Coun. Allan said that specific charges were not necessary but that any man with common sense would just have to look at some of the various works in the district to be convinced.

After considerable discussion Coun. Loutet made a motion that the matter should be referred to the chairman of the Board of Works to take the matter up with the Ratepayers' Association. Coun. Allan, however, amended this motion and asked that Coun. Loutet meet the Association.

On the reeve putting the amendment to vote it carried unanimously.

Mr. F. C. Stevenson made application for $25 damages to his house in Dundarave by blasting. The clerk was instructed to write and ask for an inventory.

A petition from five property owners in D. L. 600 asking that 24th street be cleared and graded for two blocks between McKay and Lloyd Avenues, was received and referred to the engineer for a report.

The secretary of the Lynn Valley Ratepayers' Association wrote expressing the sentiments of the Association as endorsing the recent action of the council with regard to the Imperial Car and Shipbuilding Co.

The chairman of the Board of Works had a number of recommendations to make, the most important of these being as follows:

The finishing of Centre road, engineer for report.

That noxious weeds throughout the municipality be cut down in accordance with the provincial law to this effect. Board of Works.

That the road from Ald. Campbell's residence to Centre Road be widened to 24 feet. Board of Works with power to act.

That tenders be called for grading the Keith road from the western boundary of 582 through 811 and also for the clearing and grading of Keith Road east from the present termination to Deep Cove. Engineer instructed to call for tenders for the above work.

It was decided that Mr. Probert, the engineer who was injured on the Lynn Valley steam roller, be paid full wages during the duration of his injuries.

Coun. Loutet's recommendation that the secretary take up with Mr. Wagg, property owner, the question of widening Lonsdale through 801 was endorsed by the council.

The clerk was instructed to keep up his correspondence with the Indian department re a thoroughfare through the Capilano reserve.

Oil to Replace Coal

The project of using oil in place of coal as fuel is a problem now under consideration by the ferry directorate. At a recent meeting Manager Heard was instructed to make inquiries and report to the directorate at yesterday's meeting. The present cost of coal for the fleet is $24,000 per year and the expenses connected with coaling make an additional $1,500. The cost of fuel oil for the operation of three boats for a year would be $16,096.50, and the installation of apparatus and burners would be $5,225, making a saving for the first year of $4,178.50 and this would be augmented the second year by the price of installation.

The ferry directorate seem to be in favor of the scheme and without doubt it will be carried out within a few months.

Mr. McDougall, of McDougall-Jenkins, Engineers, Ltd., was before the Board on behalf of his joint interests in this local industry. Mr. McDougall in a recent letter to the Board laid charges against the Ferry Co, that preference had been given to Vancouver firms in competing for ferry work. He had also placed these complaints before the local Board of Trade and a delegation from that body consisting of the president and Mr. A. G. Perry were present at the meeting.

Mr. Alex. Philip, on behalf of the Board of Trade, introduced the question and explained his position as being in the interests of the city only.

Mr. McDougall's first specific charge was that work had been given on the Ferry No. 2 to a Vancouver firm without tenders having been called.

In replying to this Manager Heard said that this was not the case. When a breakdown occurred in the boiler of No. 2 he had called in Mr. Hay of Vancouver to make repairs, having previously been thoroughly satisfied with his work. When, however, it was discovered that the work was of greater magnitude and would involve considerable expense, tenders had been called and were now open to bids from contracting firms.

In this connection Director Kidd has said that the manager had authority to have repairs made when he deemed necessary without consulting the directorate.

Mr. McDougall's next grievance was that in the tendering for pontoons he understood the advertisement as calling specifically for sixteen pontoons delivered in 90 days. In making his bid he figured it impossible to make the 16 in 90 days and had added to his bid a demurrage of nearly $900.

At this stage the speaker's attention was called to the fact that the advertisement called for 16 pontoons or any part thereof, and that the tenders of the Vancouver Engineering Works and the Wallace Shipyards Ltd. were put in itemizing from one to sixteen.

Mr. McDougall's final complaint was that in making repairs to Ferry No. 3 in the latter part of April some of his men had been called by Manager Heard to make the repairs and that after the second day's work on the job a crew from the Wallace Shipyards had been put to work on the same job, whereupon he had immediately removed his crew.

The Finding of the Book of the Law

The temple was a junk shop. Its floors sagged hopelessly. There were wide breaches in the walls. All its fine gold had been stripped to buy worthless truces with the heathen invaders. All the goodly and significant furniture had been crowded into the unoccupied rooms surrounding the courts and their places filled with the altars and emblems of alien religions. The ritual of the Hebrews had ceased and the dust of civilization, the deposit incident to a great city accumulated in the unkempt building. Among other things that had disappeared in the two hundred years of neglect was the yellow scroll of the law. If they had only known it that old neglected parchment was really the nation's palladium. If it had been preserved the nation would have been preserved. It was the written will of Jehovah. Obeyed—the sceptor would not have departed. Aside also from its indescribably precious contents—it was a souvenir of highest value. What hands had penned it. What eyes had scanned it. What lips had read it aloud to what wondering congregations. But its very existence had been long forgotten, if not entirely, at least by the great mass of the people. Quick and great were the gains of honoring God in the restoration of his temple. In that crude age there were no safety boxes or vaults. The custom of hiding treasure maintained the high priest probably secreted the money raised for the repair. He put it under some old plunder in one of the unoccupied rooms perhaps. It was while ransacking the place for the hidden treasure that he made the most remarkable "find" of that age. He unearthed the only, the long lost copy of the Bible. The result of this discovery was of first importance. A rule of life for both individual and nation was found, a standard to which either king or peasant might resort. No wonder that at first reading the king rent his clothes in regret and fear, the will of God as here expressed having been so long and grossly neglected. Because of the low standard of education at that time an interpreter was imperative, some one with the inner light, the sense of the Divine, must needs be found. It was in this way that Huldah entered the trinity of women prophets, joining Miriam and Deborah.

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN

It is an ancient story with modern applications. There are many today to whom the Bible is as perfectly as lost a book as it was to Josiah. The public display of the Bible on the sacred desk is to be commended. In sight it is in mind. Yet the Bible is never to be a fetich. It is only God's vehicle. To worship the instrument is idolatrous. If the book could speak it would cry as the angel did to John "See thou do it not!" Life is more than the "book". In the ultimate analysis it is not so much what a man knows as what he is. Interpretation of the scripture is the distinct function of the ministry as it was of the prophets in olden time. Not, however, that the ministry has the monopoly of the function. Many unordained persons interpret skilfully. But as general education increases need of specific interpreters decreases. Here is an old time illustration of the principle that Jesus enunciated "He who does shall know." Josiah was "doing". It was when he began to repair the temple he found "the book." The bible is a potent book. The reading of it brings things to pass. It provokes either revolt or obedience. Josiah sought an interpretor to make its contents plain. Jehoiakin reached for a knife to cut it in shreds. The bible receives the same opposite treatment today. It should not be thought a thing incredible that the bible was lost in that distant and crude day. Those who could read it could be counted on one's fingers. The bible was practically lost again in the middle ages even in those seats of learning, the monasteries. Luther was twenty years old before he even saw a Bible.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEVOTIONAL SERVICE—August 6, 1911. Job VI 1-11: xlii: 1-6 Lessons From Great Lives (VIII.) JOB

Possibly the poetry of the world never struck higher note than in the book of Job. Certainly Hebrew poetry never did. But in the final analysis the glory of it is that it is fundamental to life. Carlisle calls it "All men's book!" So it is of universal and perpetual application. Wrong theories of God's dealings with men are here exploded. The correct idea of providence is substituted. The aim is not theoretical but practical. The purpose is to put man in tune with God.

Charges Against Engineer

A special meeting of the district council had been convened on Tuesday evening for the purpose of investigating charges made against District Engineer Cosgrove by Mr. McAffee, one of the foremen on municipal work in Lynn Valley, who had been discharged with his gang at the orders of the engineer.

At the opening of the meeting Mr. Cosgrove read the following report which he had prepared at the request of the council:

"Since for some time past it has been the policy of the council to substitute contract work for day work, and through the numerous complaints in council that the men employed in the day gangs did not have the appearance of doing sufficient work, it is therefore because so much work is now let by contract with more to follow, that naturally the day work is becoming displaced.

"Accordingly after going into the matter carefully with the road superintendent, it was decided that we could dispense with the services of Foreman McAffee, and his gang, sending the sidewalk men to Foreman Whipps, who, whilst attending to the water connections can easily overtake the remaining work in Lynn Valley.

This same displacement will have of course to take place all over the district. The west end gang has also been reduced by some eighteen men, the camp help being paid off.

"It will therefore be evident that the trouble has arisen through carrying out the orders of the council, and the very same objection may be raised by, any other foreman when there is not enough work to justify them being kept on.

"As far as Mr. McAffee's charge re discriminating against local men on my part as engineer goes is concerned it is utter nonsense, and I am at a loss to understand why such statement should be made since the road superintendent and the foreman under him employ their own help.

"Preference has been given local men as a general rule, which is illustrated by the fact that Foreman Daves, Belzell, McLean, Wotton, Harman, Hamilton and Whipps, are all residents of the North Shore, and all of whom have been employed as foremen since the commencement of my term of office."

The letter of Ex-foreman McAffee was first taken up by the council and discussed clause by clause, Mr. McAffee flatly charging the engineer with personal spite in firing himself and gang, which however, he was unable to prove. Another point which the letter demanded explanation was, why he, the oldest foreman on the division had been discharged and men having been at work only a few months kept on.

In answer to this, Mr. Cosgrove stated that he was unaware of the time Mr. McAffee had been employed by the district, and that his discharge had simply meant a saving of money He also explained the difficulty of firing a foreman whose work was not completed and putting an older man unfamiliar with the work in his place.

Reeve McNaught thought that the engineer should not discharge men without first consulting the Board of Works, and that in every case the reason of precedent to others should be taken into consideration.

Councillor Loutet thought that this would not be feasible as if this rule were followed out, necessity would occasionally arise to shift foremen from one corner of the municipality to the other.

After a long discussion featured by heated arguments that passed between Councillors Loutet and Allan, the following resolution, moved by Councillor Bridgman was passed:

"That on account of reducing the day work in the district, the engineer issue instructions that all things being equal, the ratepayers of the district shall have the preference, and that outside men be laid off first."

Councillor Allan then made it a motion that Mr. McAffee be reinstated. Mr. McAffee, however, refused to again serve under District Engineer Cosgrove.

Councillors motion which closed the meeting was passed. The motion was as follows: "That in discharging foremen seniority shall as far as possible be taken into consideration."

MINING INTERESTS OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

The annual report of the Minister of Mines for the province for the year ending December 31st, 1910, recently to hand, is replete with interesting and encouraging information with respect to the progress and development of the mining industry throughout the province.

The gross value of the mineral produced up to the end of 1910 was $374,197,650 in the following order, coal $114,012,596, placer gold $71,213,103, lode gold $60,811,067, copper $60,743,405, silver $31,095,602 and lead $24,645,605.

The value of the mineral product for the year 1910 aggregated $26,377,036, the total tonnage of all minerals being 2,216,428. The total number of shipping mines was 83, in which were employed in all 3,107 men. In addition to the above there were 153 non-shipping mines of which 97 were idle and 56 were working, the latter employing a total of 602 men.

The gross output of the coal mines for the year was 3,139,235 tons, of which 2,413,538 tons were sold, the balance being either used for the manufacture of coke, added to stock or used in colliery furnaces.

The production of placer gold during the year was valued at $540,000, an increase of 13 per cent. over that of the previous year. The increase was due altogether to the Atlin district, other districts including Cariboo having shown a decrease.

The value of the gold produced from lode mining for 1910 was $5,533,380, an increase as compared with 1909 of $609,290 or over 12 per cent. The three most important producing camps were Rossland $2,465,455, Boundary $2,176,427 and Nelson $761,359.

The total production of silver for the year was 2,450,241 ounces, valued at $1,245,916, a decrease in amount as compared with the previous year, but a slight increase in aggregate value because of higher average price.

The province produced 34,658,746 pounds of lead during the year, of which two-thirds came from Fort Steele Mining Division. The market value of this product was $1,386,350. The weight shows a decrease of over 22 per cent. as compared with 1909 and the value a decrease of about 19 per cent.

Copper occupies a foremost place among the mineral products of British Columbia and the record for 191 shows a considerable shrinkage in comparison with the preceding year namely 7,353,311 pounds or $1,047,010. The total for the year was nevertheless large aggregating 38,243,934 pounds, the value of which was $4,871,512. The decrease was confined to the Boundary district, all other districts having shown an increase.

Forest fires which destroyed bridges and trestles, thus stopping shipment and also concentrators and other plants, thus stopping the operation of mines, is accountable for a large decrease in the production of zinc, the total output having been 4,184,192 pounds, valued at $192,473.

The report, under the head of "Other Minerals" deals briefly with iron ore, platinum, building stone, marble, red brick, fire brick and fire clay, pottery and drain pipe, lime, Portland cement (260,000 barrels) petroleum, crushed rock and gravel.

WORK OF THE COMMISSION OF CONSERVATION

The second annual report of the Canadian Commission of Conservation reveals the fact that the Commission has already accomplished a great deal of a beneficial nature to the interests with which it deals, while the work which is outlined and upon which the several committees are now engaged promises to greatly enhance the value of the labors of the Commission.

The Commission is organized under several different departments namely the Committee on Public Health, Committee on Lands, Committee on Forests, Committee on Minerals, Committee on Waters and Water Powers, Committee on Fisheries, Game and Fur-Bearing Animals.

The Committee on Public Health is engaged in investigating the prevalence of infantile paralysis and information is being sought with respect thereto, from every physician in Canada. The housing conditions in Canadian centres of population are also being investigated and municipal by-laws governing the same are being examined and compared with those in operation in the best regulated cities of foreign countries, with a view to making such recommendations as will remove unsanitary living conditions in Canadian cities.

The Committee on Lands has in charge an expert agriculturist and data is being gathered from all sources as to the amount of land under field crops, unbroken pasture, woods and summer fallow while the following topics are likewise included: Rotation of crops, seed selection, weed prevalency, insect pests, water supply, illuminants, and typhoid. This is really an agricultural census and the results when tabulated will give a fair idea of the actual conditions of agriculture in the respective provinces.

The Committee on Forests have concentrated their attention on two subjects, namely, the prevention of forest fires and the creation of forest reserves. At their recommendation the Dominion government has set aside the eastern slope of the Rocky mountains as a forest reserve. Amendments to the Railway Act have been recommended whereby railway companies will be held responsible for fires spreading from their rights of way or due to sparks from their locomotives. The Forester to the Commission is now engaged in investigating and in preparing for publication a treatise on forest protection work, natural conditions and causes of fires in British Columbia. This report will also treat of the following topics: Laws relating to the disposal of provincial timber lands, Inventory of Standing Timber, Fire Laws and Their Administration, Insects and other Forest Enemies, Reforestration, Natural Growth and Tree Planting, Forest Reserves and Parks, Forestry Schools in Canada, Forestry in Foreign Countries.

The Committee on Minerals through their mining engineer have been investigating general mining conditions in the Cobalt and Porcupine districts. A report is likewise in course of preparation which will contain a great deal of valuable information on minerals. It will likewise give a synopsis of all the mining laws of Canada, statistics relative to the known mineral resources of Canada, annual production of minerals in each province, data concerning mine accidents with measures adopted in other countries to prevent the same.

The Committee on Water and Water-Powers has made important recommendations with reference to the control and administration of the water powers of the Dominion which are now in the hands of the government. The work of obtaining all possible information respecting the waterways and waterpowers of the Dominion is now well under way. This information will be gathered from every conceivable authentic source and when obtained will be published in a report on Canadian Waterways and Waterpowers to which will be added a chapter on irrigation.

The Committee on Fisheries, Game, etc. has prepared a memorandum on the jurisdiction of the Dominion and the provincial governments in fisheries matters, a summary of the Dominion and provincial laws with reference thereto, statistics showing: 1, Production of Chief Commercial Fish in Canada; 2, Production During the Past Year; a Report on the Canadian Oyster Industry, a General Review of the Character and Extent of the Fisheries of each province.

The 1911 report of the Commission is a bound book of 230 pages and contains verbatim reports of valuable papers on topics along the lines designated above, by specially qualified writers.

Montreal Hopes to Abolish Summer

Artificial Cooling May Eliminate Sweltering Heat and Make Montreal World's First City to Regulate Climate — Novel Cooking School for Men.

(From Own Correspondent)

That Montreal will be the first city in the world to be cooled artificially during the summer months, as soon as an efficient system for accomplishing this result is completed, is the most striking result of the recent hot wave which in five days caused more than 160 deaths and nearly 1000 prostrations, and kept the ambulances going through the streets to such an extent that the city thoroughfares resembled an enormous racetrack.

The possibility of providing a municipal cooling system has been discussed before, but never has anything been done because of the fact that it has been thought that the expense of its installation would be too great. Now however, the realization has come that it would work tremendous economies.

Experts who have looked into the matter, figure that every stifling day causes a loss of at least fifty thousand dollars to the city's business interests through the decreased efficiency of labor of all kinds under the existing conditions. Every day when the thermometer shows ninety degrees or over means a decrease in working efficiency of about forty per cent. it is figured.

Moreover, practically every kind of business feels the effect through the slackened public interest.

Cool air would be supplied the city during the summer, along exactly the same lines as though on a larger scale as those by which heat is supplied to the great office buildings in winter.

The solution of the problem has of course not yet been worked out, but its actual value in dollars and cents, makes its ultimate arrival seem inevitable.

MALE CULINARY EXPERTS

An invasion of women's rights on the part of the male sex is now imminent here as a result of the establishment of a novel cooking school exclusively for men, the first of its kind in the city. In it they will be initiated into all sorts of culinary mysteries which heretofore have been taught to women only, and within six weeks it is expected that the sixteen pupils who have entered up to the present, will be able to make biscuits which will far excel the best that father ever made and rival the famous mother product. Incidentally they will learn to cook meats, make pastry, manufacture a pie, or prepare any other dish which may be desired.

The establishment of this school is not, however, an effort to educate the husbands for suffragettes who can care for the household while the wife is engaged in politics or business. The idea is merely to undermine the sovereign independence of the cook who at present comes close to being the ruler of many households. The founders of the school believe that as soon as a realization is achieved of this that a threat to leave on the part of the cook does not mean that the family will be left in dire straits, a fairer relation will be established all around.

Incidentally, a course in the new school will be valuable to the husband left desolate in the city during the time his family is at the seashore or in the mountains.

Every Loaf weighs 20 ounces Four Loaves for 25c.

¶ Is a Loaf of Bread weighing 16 ounces and sold for five cents, any cheaper than a loaf weighing 20 ounces sold at the rate of four loaves for 25 cents?

¶ The correct answer is NO, the selling price by weight being identical in both cases. Therefore, a man that tries to make you believe that one 16 ounce loaf for five cents is a cheaper buy than one 20 ounce loaf at the rate of four loaves for 25 cents is deliberately misrepresenting facts, and the law of the land brands such a man as being either a knave or a fool or both.

NORTH VANCOUVER

tacked the wash-house and assaulted the inmates. Supt. Hussey hurried to the scene and arrested the ringleaders. Popular opinion was against him and threats were made, but he paid no heed. When he tried to bring the assailants of the Chinese to justice, he had a most difficult task. Witnesses were spirited away, and every possible step was taken to defeat the work of the police officer. A deputation went to him and asked him why he wanted "to make a fuss over a couple of Chinese." The officer replied that he did not care as much about the Chinese as he did about carrying out the law, and he proposed to do it. He finally, after several months of work got a conviction against the men.

Probably the last of the many exciting man hunts in which the late Supt. Hussey figured was the chase and capture of Bill Miner, who, with "Shorty" Dunn and "Slinger" Woods held up the C.P.R. express near Mission in the fall of 1907 and secured a considerable amount of money and securities. The daring of the robbers and the subsequent chase participated in by the provincial police, North-West Mounted police and detectives is still fresh in the minds of the public but Supt. Hussey's part was not blazoned to the world at large to the same extent as were those who secured the lion's share of the honor of the capture.

Supt. Hussey was in charge of the man-hunt which was successfully terminated when the three robbers were sentenced to life imprisonment in New Westminster penitentiary. The subsequent escape of the robbers gave Superintendent Hussey another opportunity of getting after the notorious Miner, but the latter got safely away only to be arrested later in the southern states, where he had once more resorted to his holdups.

During the trial of Miner and the others at Kamloops an incident occurred which showed that the wily old bandit had met his match for cunning. Following the train robbery, a belt was found lying by the side of the railway track near the spot where the express car had been rifled. It was thought the belt belonged to one of the robbers, but to which was unknown. It would prove a strong piece of evidence if the individual to whom the belt belonged could be ascertained as it would show beyond doubt that he was in the immediate vicinity when the crime was perpetrated. Supt. Hussey devised the scheme to take all the prisoners' effects and pile them together and then to have the prisoners select their own articles on the plea that the authorities were desirous that each prisoner should lose nothing. Innocently reposing upon the pile of revolvers, belts and other property taken from the prisoners when arrested, was the belt found by the railway track. Miner was first brought into the room and in an offhand way Superintendent Hussey explained to him the desire of the authorities that each prisoner should choose his effects. Miner evidently believed the superintendent had some ulterior motive but he was unable to fathom it and without hesitation proceeded to select his property, the very first article he picked up being the belt. When he got through he was asked if he was sure everything he had picked out was his and he averred that such was the case. It was not until Miner was in the dock and Superintendent Hussey was giving evidence of Miner's admission that the belt was his that the latter saw through the scheme. Afterwards while en route to the penitentiary he admitted to Supt. Hussey that that was one occasion when he, as he termed it, "gave himself the double cross."

The last thing Miner said to Supt. Hussey as the latter left the penitentiary to return to Victoria was that if he was still in jail at the end of a year's time he would have something to tell the superintendent. Miner escaped, however, and Supt. Hussey never learned what he then had in mind whether it referred to the spot where was hid the securities rifled from the express car or some other information.
