IS ENTICED TO CONCONULLY

By Bert Miller and Handed Over to a Detective—Will Be Taken to New York.

After seventeen years!

Charles A. Hinckley, alias Charles S. Morris, bank embezzler, absconder, townsite agent and mining promoter, is in jail at Conconully, Wash., awaiting extradition proceedings. He is wanted in New York city for robbing his late employer, the West Side bank, of $97,000. He was decoyed across the line from his present home, Olalla, B. C., by "Bert" Miller of Grand Forks, who will now receive a long standing $10,000 award. Miller's partner in the clever piece of strategy was Fred Whitaker, a resident of Columbia, now visiting in New York. The story of Hinckley's arrest near Princeton, B. C, on a similar charge seventeen months ago, the preliminary hearing in Rossland before Judge Forin and the prisoner's discharge on a technicality, the Extradition Act not being retroactive to character, are still fresh in the public mind.

Just how young Miller induced Hinckley to cross into American territory has not yet transpired. At all events, the opinion is held by knowing ones that the scheme was planned by Whitaker, and the task of carrying it into effect was entrusted to the other individual. They are intimate personal friends. Early in December Whitaker left for New York, his former home, ostensibly on mining business, but in all probability with the object of conferring with the West side bank directors. Miller, who possesses a superabundance of nerve, disappeared from Grand Forks two weeks ago, and no explanation respecting his whereabouts was offered. From the sequel it would appear he had not been idle. There is not a doubt that he must have had a reasonable pretext for inducing Hinckley to leave British territory. Miller is a smooth and plausible talker. He had the advantage of being intimately acquainted with the absconder, as well as with various details of townsite business. To disarm suspicion was no easy task. The solvent must have been some mammoth townsite deal in which Hinckley was to obtain the lion's share. The region which they visited is remote from transportation and the outside world; and Hinckley's acquaintanceship with Miller probably disarmed all suspicion. A New York detective made the arrest. Hinckley is now in custody at Conconully, Wash., a point southwest of the Colville reservation. The extradition proceedings required between states in criminal matters, are expected to be purely formal, and Hinckley's removal to New York for trial will speedily follow.

"Bert" Miller reached Loomis, Wash., last evening.

On Sept. 26, 1899, Chas. A. Hinckley, alias Chas. S. Morris, was arrested in the vicinity of Princeton, B. C., on a charge of grand larceny. Behind the arrest there was a story of considerable interest. Hinckley, when the West Side bank started in New York city, in the year 1868, was made the paying teller, and he held that position till May 14, 1884. During this period Hinckley was a model bank officer, and was held in high esteem by the president and the directorate, for he was noted for the strictness of his business methods. On May 14, 1884, Hinckley transacted the business of his office with his usual care and promptness, but the next morning he was not at his desk. The cash of the bank was counted, and it was found to be just $97,000 short. Then it was realized by the management that Hinckley had betrayed the confidence reposed in him, and had stolen the funds of the bank and decamped with them. The bank marked the amount to profit and loss, and has since prospered. This is shown by the fact that two years ago it had $400,000 in its reserve fund. Every effort was made to locate the missing teller. Detectives were employed, rewards offered, but had the ground opened and swallowed him he could not have more completely disappeared. The officials of the bank learned in the summer of 1899 that Hinckley was located in Columbia. That he was the vice-president of the townsite company there, and accordingly Messrs. Theodore M. Bertine, cashier of the West Side bank; Frederick A. Camy, attorney for the same bank, and Amazi L. Camp, came to Rossland from New York, for the purpose of causing the apprehension of Hinckley. They worked very quietly, knowing that their quarry was shy, and might take the alarm and flee if he realized that he was about to be apprehended.

A few days later Amazi L. Camp, who knows Hinckley well, accompanied the arresting officer to the Boundary country, and there it was learned that the man sought for was in the vicinity of Princeton. The twain hurried to the point. There Hinckley was located, and he was at once recognized by Mr. Camp and placed under arrest.

The officers of the bank stated that Hinckley was then about 57 years of age, and that when he left New York so hurriedly 15 years before, he left his wife behind him. They knew nothing of his whereabouts until then from the time that he left New York.

Hfnckley went to Columbia in the fall of 1898. He had been operating in mining in the Lake of the Woods country and had been very successful, it was claimed. At that time he was reputed to be worth some $50,000. When he was operating in the Lake of the Woods country he made frequent trips to Toronto, and had considerable business in mines with Messrs. Fox & Ross, the mining brokers. Among other things suggested by this firm to Hinckley, who was then known as Chas. S. Morris, was the purchasing of an interest in the Columbia Townsite company. He came west with Mr. Ross, and soon after acquired a fourth interest in the Columbia townsite, and was very active in its management, and also speculated considerably in mines.

Beyond these facts but little is known of Hinckley's career since he left New York city. He was extremely reticent as to his past life, ond the facts that are now known concerning him show that he had a good cause for his reticence.

Hinckley was brought to Rossland and arraigned before Judge Forin, who refused to commit the prisoner for extradition, holding that the alleged offence had been committed prior to the negotiation of the extradition treaty, and therefore, that its provisions were not retroactive. Hinckley accordingly got his liberty and subsequently left for Keremeos.

The story of how Hinckley's existence became known to the bank has not hitherto been published. A detective was summoned from Denver to Columbia to work on an arson case nearly two years ago. He happened to be exceptionally bright and speedily recalled that Morris looked not unlike a police picture of one Hinckley, wanted in New York for grand larceny. Investigations pursued during his stay, coupled with Morris' uneasiness when in the presence of strangers, resulted in the exchange of communications with the New York authorities. When the plot had ripened, Morris had already left Columbia for Olalla and the Keremeos valley.

That Hinckley, alias Morris, has redeeming traits, was evidenced by his action in visiting New York, years after his flight, in order to attend the funeral of his devoted wife. He took great risks, but escaped detection. He was wont to speak of this exploit with considerable pride, since his former career became known in British Columbia. His interests at Olalla are extensive. He is associated with two well-known citizens of Rossland, in the ownership of a townsite there, as well as in the ownership of nearly a score of valuable mineral claims.

THE CITY FIRE CHIEF

Question Discussed at Last Night's Meeting.

THE VOTE RESULTS IN A TIE

People Religiously Inclined Must Waken in Time for Church Without Aid of Bell.

Last night, at the special meeting of the council to discuss fire department matters, there were present the Mayor and Aldermen Caulfield, Naden, Ross, Sullivan and Sutherland. The fire brigade held a meeting in their rooms previous to the meeting of the council, and came to the meeting about twenty strong, and all evidently prepared to fight the city orators with even greater oratory.

After the mayor had called the council to order, President Bannerman of the fire department stated the wishes of that organization, which were briefly:

1. A paid fire chief and driver.
2. That the fire chief devote his whole time to the duties of his office.
3. That the driver should take orders only from the chief.
4. That A. D. Hallett be chief.
5. In the event of A. D. Hallett as chief not receiving the support of the council the department be allowed to name another person for the position.

The mayor was in favor of carrying out the recommendations of the department, as also was Alderman Sutherland.

Alderman Naden favored procuring an expert chief.

Alderman Caulfield wanted a strictly volunteer department.

Alderman Ross was in favor of getting the best man that could be procured for the money.

Alderman Sullivan favored Hallett as chief, and was also in favor of making him perform other duties besides those of fire chief.

A number of the firemen spoke, and with the exception of Frank Miller, they equalled the members of the council in their endeavors to make the fewest possible points in the longest possible time. Mr. Miller, in a few words, pointed out the qualifications of A. D. Hallett.

The discussion lasted until 11 o'clock, when a ballot was taken, which resulted in three for the recommendations of the fire department and three against.

The question of using the fire bell on Sunday morning for the purpose of waking people in the habit of attending church services, was also discussed at length. Alderman Caulfield was strongly in favor of being wakened. Aldermen Sullivan, Naden and Ross did not favor needless interference with the slumbers of the people. The mayor said he was always able to make church connections by his watch. Alderman Ross suggested that the mayor's watch hadn't been running on standard time for the past two years. The question was put to a vote, which resulted in a tie.

It is believed that the council adjourned shortly after this vote was taken, as the reporter left at this stage, and the firemen had gone a couple of hours before, so it may safely be concluded that even the members of the Greenwood city council would not talk to empty benches much after 12 o'clock.

CITY DECORATIONS.

Visible signs of mourning for the Queen were to be noticed during the past week and in no way more conspicuously than in the decorations of the windows and fronts of the business houses of the city. Patriotic merchants vied with each other in thus giving expression to the public sense of loss. While all this work was noteworthy, as voicing the almost universal sense of sorrow, some of it was also worthy of note on account of the artistic taste displayed. The inside decoration of one building in particular called forth much favorable comment, i. e. the Auditorium. This was dressed by Greenwood's well-known decorative artist, C. J. Wood. Sombre black was the prevailing color, gracefully looped and festooned from ceiling and gallery, and at intervals intertwined with the royal purple. A picture of the dead Queen filled the centre of the stage.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

At the council meeting on Monday evening the question of the appointment of a fire chief was discussed. Alderman Caulfield strongly insisted that Greenwood needed no paid officials in the department and wished the office of paid chief abolished. Contentions of this kind are not what might be expected from one who pledged himself a few weeks ago to look carefully after the city's interests.

Alderman Naden informed the council that where the city had a paid chief and driver in the fire department, the insurance rates in such place were less than they otherwise would be. Surely then it is in the interests of the city to retain such paid men in the department. The insurance rates at the present time are almost prohibitive in Greenwood, and if the removal of a paid chief would increase the rate, the business men of the city should take a hand in the controversy and insist that a chief be appointed who will devote his whole time to the department's interest, and take every precaution to safeguard the city against destruction by fire.

At a meeting of the department on Friday evening, February 1st, A. D. Hallett was re-endorsed for the position of chief. Mr. Hallett has had considerable experience in the handling of fires in the east and for nearly three years in Greenwood, and has given satisfaction to property owners. His endorsement by the department should be seriously considered by the council, but whether he is the choice or not, a paid fire chief is an absolute necessity, and it is to be hoped that the city fathers will be sufficiently interested in the welfare of the town, to appoint some one of experience to the position, and do everything in their power to assist the volunteer force to attain the highest degree of efficiency.

Sir Alfred Miner, the British commissioner in South Africa, has administered the following stinging rebuke to W. T. Stead, the English journalist who has been espousing the cause of the Boers. He says: "I have received your broad sheet, and as you have asked my opinion, you shall have it, and I will also forward it to the press. My opinion is that you ought to be ashamed of yourself for circulating so vile a slander against your fellow-countrymen. You seem to have made it your mission in life to vilify your country and to slander the brave men who have suffered and borne so much for their country. It seems to me a pity that you don't remove yourself to France, and offer your services to the gutter press, where they would undoubtedly be appreciated. As to a letter of A British Officer, I decline to believe that any British officer could so demean himself as to spread so gross a calumny against his fellow soldiers without having the courage to put his name to it. If, indeed, any British officer had stooped so low, I can only say that he is a contemptible coward, and I should like to have the opportunity of telling him so to his face; but in my opinion the British officer does not live far from the office of W. T. Stead. Personally, I prefer to believe the testimony of Lord Roberts, Sir Redvers Buller and other brave generals as to the conduct of our soldiers in South Africa. I don't know if you have taken the trouble to read Lord Roberts' touching farewell to his troops when he speaks of the gallantry, the patient endurance, the good conduct and humanity of our brave soldiers. If you have read it and it has not made you ashamed of yourself, I am afraid nothing will."

How is Your Eyesight?

I have made arrangements with
J. C. LANNERBERG.
the Eye Specialist of Rossland, B. C., to remain with me for some weeks. People with defective eyesight should not miss this opportunity.

There are many ailments due to defective eyesight, and many people suffer through life with headache and nervousness when relief can, in nearly all cases, be received by wearing a properly fitted pair of glasses.

Some people object strenuously to the wearing of glasses, especially by children, and express their fear that "if they once begin to wear them they are afraid they can never leave them off again." To fight against the assistance which art may supply in this direction is absurd. Why should not they be worn through life, if by their aid discomfort is removed and sight preserved, while through their lack, vision is indistinct, eye-pains or headache prevail, and the tendency is toward the destruction of the eye When the eyes feel tired through overwork a pair of glasses properly fitted will give instant relief, and such glasses in many cases need to be worn for only a few months, and the benefit experienced will more than pay for any imaginary discomfort from wearing glasses.

With twenty years' experience in correcting chronic eye trouble, he feels well able to give the very best of satisfaction in the work, and when no aid can be had in restoring lost vision he will truthfully say so. All work guaranteed. Consultation free.

CITY COUNCIL.

At the regular meeting of the council on Monday evening, Mayor Jakes was in the chair and Ald. Naden, Caulfield, Sullivan, Sutherland and Ross present. The fire department, in a letter to the council, recommended the reappointment of A. D. Hallett as chief, with the un derstanding that no other duties would be assigned him. M. Eilderman, the driver, wrote explaining to the council that owing to the telephones being up stairs, it was often impossible for him to hear alarms coming in. The communication from the fire department evoked considerable discussion. Ald. Naden believed that an expert chief should be procured—a man trained in the business of fighting fires.

Ald. Sutherland was in favor of appointing any one the fire department might recommend.

Ald. Ross believed with Ald. Naden that if a salary was to be attached to the position of fire chief and no other duties were assigned him, the appointment should go to a trained fireman, otherwise the department should be made purely voluntarily.

Ald. Caulfield was in favor of a volunteer department throughout, not on the grounds of economy, but efficiency. He believed in dealing generously with the department, giving them funds to encourage the whole brigade in the matter of hose contests, firemen's races, etc. In this way a more enthusiastic department could be secured than by putting all the money in one man's pocket.

Mayor Jakes stated that there were three different courses before the council and it was difficult to decide the best for the city. It was finally decided to defer consideration until a special meeting—Friday evening—when the firemen are asked to be present and discuss the matter with the council.

A petition from the business men asking that the fire bell be used for fire alarms only was laid over until the same meeting. A communication from the Nelson Board of Health asking the council to join them in urging the necessity of compulsory vacination throughout the province, was referred to the medical officer of health after the mayor had pointed out the importance of such regulations.

The mayor also called the attention of council to the habit the government have of foisting their sick and destitute upon the city and the council asked the city solicitor and board of health to report on the matter.

The medical officer of health was asked to examine Twin Creek from Phoenix down and report to the council its condition from a sanitary point of view.

The council passed a vote of thanks to the clergy, Midway band, Mr. Furguson and other marshals, Mr. Whiteside, Mr. Mr. F. H. McKenzie, the different fraternal organizations and Trades and Labor Council for their great assistance in connection with the memorial services.

After authorizing the fire and light committee to hire a horse for the department the council adjourned until next Friday night.

A FIREMAN'S CLOSE CALL.

"I stuck to my engine, although every joint ached and every nerve was racked with pain," writes C. W. Bellamy, a locomotive fireman, of Burlington, Iowa., "I was weak and pale, without any appetite and all run down. As I was about to give up, I got a bottle of Electric Bitters and, after taking it, I felt as well as I ever did in my life." Weak sickly, run down people always gain new life, strength and vigor from their use. Try them. Satisfaction guaranteed by Miller Bros. and J. L. White. Price 50c.

THE MINE KNOCKERS.

With the dawn of civilization jealousy was born, and the passion grows stronger as the world advances. There always will be men who manage by lack of either intelligence or energy, to miss the train of prosperity and remain disgruntled and soured the rest of their lives. This class is appropriately termed "knockers."

In the mining camps the knocker is found in a great variety of form. There is the knocker who has been told that the title will not bear investigation; that the ore is too low grade to work; that the ore bodies are pinching; that Bill Smith has a better mine for less money; and that, generally, all mine owners are suspicious characters—unless the knockers are personally identified with the deal. In some of the western mining sections the principal "knocker" is the old timer who came here with the soldiers. He has never left the country, never seen the marvels that modern invention have developed in the great mines of the world, or even been 500 underground. His knowledge is gained from the little band of local knockers who hang around the hotel and store and wonder by what right these new comers change the conditions of mining.

In the search for metals two men may start equal. Both locate on the same lode and work with the greatest harmony. At night as they sit by their camp fire, their hopes, ambitions and sorrows are shared. But let one of these men interest capital in his individual claim and coolness springs up at once between them.

The old partner cannot understand why it was not his claim that was thus developed. The friends drift wider and wider apart. One grows rich, the other becomes more bitter. The property may be equally valuable, but the owners are not equal in energy and push.

Perhaps the best definition of a knocker is one who has failed. Do you recognize the character we have drawn?—American Mining News.

An effort will be made to get the legislature to provide funds for the construction of a bridge across the Similkameen river at Oroville. The proposition should at once commend itself to people living in northern Okanogan as a great benefit. For years a delapidated ferry has done service, in a measure, in the transporting of freight and people across the Similkameen. Nearly all winter the ferry has been unable to cross the river. The inconvenience of the present arrangement was no more apparent than, when but a short time ago, nearly everyone in this part of the country was threatened with a flour famine, on account of the fact that freighters could not get across the river at Oroville. Speed the day when a bridge shall take the place of the delapidated ferry at Oroville.—Drill.

The Alliance is very strong in the east, and has for its object, the securing, as far as possible, one day of rest in the week for every citizen. It does not seek to bring in the arm of the civil law, in the interests of religious observance of the day, but simply seeks to secure the privilege to every person of attending religious ordinances if they choose.

MEMORIAL SERVICES.

Nearly every resident of Greenwood and large numbers from Midway, Deadwood, Phoenix and Summit Camp took part in the memorial services held here Saturday last. At 2 o'clock the procession formed at the city hall and marched to the Auditorium. Following was the order of procession:

Midway Band.
Police and Firemen.
Mayor and Aldermen.
Members of Former Councils.
Clergy.
Board of Trade.
Masons.
Independent Order Odd Fellows.
Knights of Pythias.
Trades and Labor Council.
Greenwood Miners' Union.
American Citizens.
Citizens.

In the Auditorium the services were under the direction of Rev. W. H. Anderson, Presbyterian minister in the city. He was assisted by the other clergymen of the city. A. M. Whiteside had charge of the musical part of the programme, and was assisted by choirs of the different city churches. Mayor. Jakes delivered a short address.

WEST FORK NOTES.

Rendell, B. C., Feb. 3.—A. Fisher has a crew of seven men at work laying the foundation for his new saw-mill here. He expects to have the mill running in about ten days, and will employ regularly a force of from ten to twelve men. The mill is located on the Rendell townsite, opposite the Bell cabin. The intention is to saw about 400,000 feet of lumber this winter.

W. Logan, the packer, has taken the contract to rawhide two carloads of ore from the Sallie mineral claim to the wagon road. The first load of this ore left Beaverton yesterday, for the Pyritic smelter at Boundary Falls, and another load will leave here tomorrow. The Sallie is owned by Robert Wood, of Greenwood, and others, and carries very high grade ore.

We had a fall of snow yesterday, and as a consequence the roads are in excellent condition for hauling ore. The shipments of Carmi ore are being hurried during the continuance of the good roads.

The people of Rendell, Beaverton and Carmi have a social hop at Beaverton every week, which is much enjoyed by all in the camp.

The weather is extremly cold here to day and expect to have to pull down the blinds tonight to keep from freezing.

The business outlook here is becoming more bright each week, and before spring opens we expect to have a real hustling camp on the West Fork.—W. F.

THE CANADIAN'S PART.

During the past weeks the part which the Canadian soldiers took in the capture of General Cronje at the battle of Paardeberg has been told and re-told by the greatest authority on the subject—General Roberts—and several of his leading officers. The picture, which is given free by The Weekly Globe to its yearly subscribers, is pronounced by those who were there a very accurate description of the scene. A sample of it can be seen at this office. It should be in every home in Canada.

The Horseshoe restaurant is still feeding everybody. The best steaks, the best chops, the best cutlets, the best pastry, the best mush, hot cakes, coffee, tea and cocoa, and Jackson's best brand of Myers' creek cream.

The B. C. dining room has been reopened and is now furnishing better meals than ever before.
