BROADVIEW.

Work on this property is demonstrating every day the increasing value of the property. About two cars of ore have been rawhided to the foot of the trail, which will be shipped at an early date to determine the best method of treatment preparatory to the establishment of reduction works. Messrs. Mishaw and Bottorff, the Eastern managers, will visit the property early in July.

A ROYAL WELCOME

ACCORDED TO VISITORS FROM KASLO BY LOCAL CONSERVATIVES.

Dan McLennan's dining room was the scene of great festivities on Monday night, the occasion being a supper tendered to the visiting members of the Liberal Conservative Executive of the Riding, by the Trout Lake Association.

Fred C. Elliott, president of the Riding, filled the position of chairman in his own happy Irish way, while Robert Scott, president of the "Local" occupied the vice chair. To the right of the chairman sat Neil F Mackay M.P.P. C. H. Bonner, secretary; L. Hannah and Eric Johnson and on the left S. H. Green, Mayor of Kaslo; Magistrate James Anderson; J. Canning and Edward Mobbs, Mayor of Gerrard.

After the onslaught on things material, for which, by the way, congratulations are hereby extended, not to Dan, but to Mrs. McLennan; Miss Nellie O'Brien; and Johnny Hickman, and we speak without fear of contradiction when we say it was GREAT. Chairman Elliott welcomed the visitors to and presented them with the freedom of the city, (he afterwards presented them with the keys of the gaol.)

The first call was made on N. F. Mackay, who in response, spoke for some time on the progress and present prosperous conditions of British Columbia. He also spoke very highly of the work accomplished by Premier McBride in London on the "Better Terms" question.

Mr. McKay was followed by Mayor S. H. Green who after paying some very flattering compliments, floated off into the realms of bliss by talking Kaslo Fruit Fair. He was followed by Magistrate Anderson, who found it hard to keep from saying "Five dollars or 30 days." He however poured forth his eloquence in Scotch and brought down the house when he mentioned Bob Green's name for next Dominion Member. The "flea in his bonnet" however, was to get money spent on roads, especially up the South Fork and by the way he is after it, "Mac" will either have to "pot-latch.' or go crazy.

Charlie Bonner, the hardest-worked man of the Association, spoke words of wisdom and good advice, but following his chief, the mayor, struck the blazed line of Kaslo Fruit Fair.

L. Hannah, who assumes the position of "nurse and general care-taker of the crowd," referred to the hard work he had had in keeping them in order on the way up.

Eric Johnson, J. Canning and Ed. Mobbs all followed enthusiastically over the possibilities of the Conservative party in general, and of the candidature of Bob Green for this constituency.

J. H. Young, of Vancouver, who pronounced himself to be an old Toronto Conservative, was called upon to say a few words, which he did in a way that was appreciated by all present.

Many of the local men made short addresses, each emphasizing the welcome extended by the Chairman.

During the evening Messrs. Gowing and Cheeseman enlivened the proceeding with songs, executed in first-class style.

NOTICE.

New Library coming in. All old volumes must be returned at once.

DOMINION DAY CELEBRATIONS.

The arrangements for the football match and tug-of-war between the boys of Lumberopolis (Gerrard,) and Terminal City, (Trout Lake) are all made and a hot time may be expected.

Lastly, but not "leastly," the Ladies of Trout Lake are arranging for a social "hop" in the evening, at which refreshments will be served.

Camborne will celebrate in royal style. According to the posters $600.00 is to be distributed in prizes. The day's festivities will conclude with a grand ball. Music by the famous Camborne orchestra.

LOCAL NEWS.

The Ven. Archdeacon Beer will visit us again on July 14th. and conduct the services in the Anglican Church.

Captain Gore, Harry Macdonell and F. Coleman, C.P.R. officials made a flying trip through the town last Friday. Mr. Coleman is the new divisional superintendent, succeeding Mr. J. Lawrence. In the few minutes talk the "Review" had with him he evidenced his willingness to do all in his power to meet the wants and requirements of this end of the division.

Cap. and Mac wanted a game of sluff badly, but a message received, put them on the road to Beaton, "money-saved boys."

P. A. Lindgren and Martin Nelson are hard at work on the Linson View up Canyon Creek.

Neil O'Donnell and J. T. Lauthers are getting out timber at Five Mile for the Silver Cup people.

Preparations are going ahead for the resumption of work on the Big Tunnel. The end of the week ought to see the drill punching.

A new gold discovery has been made on Cascade Creek by Jack Chism and partners.

Fred Mummery and Frank Barber are punching a hole in the rock on their property on Canyon Creek. The boys have a good showing of ore.

Glen's ranch is a scene of activity at present. Billy has logs 9 feet thick, clear, which he is putting into the creek.

He is hampered somewhat by lack of men.

The big LeRoy people of Rossland, have voluntarily increased the wages all round. Muckers now receive $3. 25 per day.

Labor shortage the cause.

Talk about hard times! As an illustration of what we are suffering there are more pianos coming into the burg than at any time in its history and consequently on every hand can now be heard chords and discords, selections from Handel, Mendelsohn, General Booth and other great masters, the general favorite seeming to be "Turkey in the Straw" but all indicative of the musical talents of the community

CHARLES L. COPP

TELLS OF HIS EXPERIENCE IN THE NORTH COUNTRY.

Chas. L. Copp returned a few days ago, from the Coast, where he has been since last March.

While away, Mr. Copp went as far as the northern boundary line of British Columbia, visiting all the points of any importance, including the new town, Prince Rupert, Port Simpson and Essington.

In an interview with the "Review" he stated that the town of Prince Rupert was somewhat of a dissapointment to him, as he judged—from the amount of campaign talk during the last provincial elections—that it was a piece of ground pre-eminently suited for agricultural purposes and an ideal town-site. He found however, that for agricultural purposes a man could not "raise a disturbance" on it; as for the terminal for the G. T. R. he stated his belief that when the town was built, it would be over on the Indian Reservation, which is all that could be wished for. Kaien Island would—he believed—be to the new town what North Vancouver is to Vancouver City.

On the Queen Charlotte Island where Mr. Copp spent quite a long time, he found large copper deposits which have been discovered during the past year and in which large capital is already beginning to take an interest. Considerable development work is going on and so far, proving highly satisfactory. Values run from $40.00 to $60.00 per ton, which—taken in conjunction with the easy methods of handling and cheap tide water transportation—makes it an ideal mining country.

Ike Thompson, an old Lardeauite, was one of the fortunate discoverers of these deposits and as a result, is now living on "Easy Street."

While on his trip, every camp gone into, Mr. Copp was greeted by 'old boys' from the Lardeau many of whom are on the high way to affluence.

In comparing the new discoveries in the north with the Lardeau, Mr. Copp stated that while some very rich discoveries have been made, it is as yet confined to a very small area, but the number of prospectors heading for there would undoubtedly widen the field to a considerable extent.

He considered this district however, to be equally as good and as far as development went—to be proven. He found, however, that the coast country was much better known, and men who held properties were disposing of them on good, easy terms, meeting capital a little more than half way, thereby getting their properties opened up much quicker than by holding for big cash prices, which has been one of the draw-backs o this country.

In conclusion, we might say that Mr. Copp is one of our 'old timers' and a man who thoroughly understands prospecting and mining and who by hard work and study has made himself familiar with every phase of the subject and we are glad to give our readers his opinions through our columns.

Beaton is fast coming to the front as an ideal fruit camp.

Apples, pears, plums and small fruits are showing up splendidly and this year's production will far eclipse any previous record.

Local and General.

The following is an extract from the British Columbia Gazette dated June 20th. 1907:

'JAMES CARSON MURRAY, of Trout Lake, Esquire, to be Stipendiary Magistrate for the County of Kootenay, and to have jurisdiction under the Small Debts Act in the Territory situated within a radius of twenty miles from the Post Office at Trout Lake City."

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson returned last week from Revelstoke.

Will Skinner got a good-sized black bear on the first slide up the North Fork, a few days ago.

Otto Olson, Alex. Underwood and a few more of the boys were down from the Cup this week for a couple of days.

Alex. Biggar finds it hard work to secure men. He is in every night meeting the boat to pick any strays, but finds none.

Bob Madden of the Lakeview Hotel, assisted by the celebrated artist, Alex McLean, have been beautifying the walls of that famous hostelry during the past week.

Percy Boyd and Lance Hillman have purchased the Lennoxville Hotel, at Gerrard, from Ed. Mobbs, the price—we understand—being $5,000.00.

The new proprietors will take possession in a few days.

Mr. Mobbs will in the future, devote his entire energies to the opening-up of his mineral interests.

Fred Elliott and Geo. Yuill returned from Nelson, Monday night, coming up Kootenay and Trout Lake in the launch recently purchased by Mr. Elliott.

The trip was made in good time and the launch is a beauty.

After this, please: Commodore Elliott and Cap. Yuill. "Chug, chug."

Still they come! What? Why everything for the ladies and childrens wear, also mens goods, corsets—all sizes and shapes, a nice line of table oil-cloth 45 ins. wide at 30 cents a yard etc. etc. at F. Murray's store.

Few were the houses of the more pretentious sort that did not mourn in prospect the going of son or brother or close friend. Mothers already wept not in secret, fathers talked with husky bravado, and every one was very kind to those who were to go, speaking to them gently and bringing them little foolish presents. Nor could the hearts of girls now longer mask as blocks of ice to the prospective conquistadores. Eugene Madrillon's young brother, Jean, after a two years' Beatrice and Benedict wooing of Trixie Chenoweth, that notable spitfire, announced his engagement upon the day after his enlistment and recounted to all who would listen how his termagant fell upon his neck in tears when she heard the news. "And now she cries about me all the time," finished the frank Jean blithely.

But there was little spirit for the old merriments. Fanchon, Virginia and five or six others spent their afternoons mournfully, and yet proudly, sewing and cutting large pieces of colored silk, fashioning a great flag for their sweethearts and brothers to bear southward and plant where stood the palace of the Montezumas.

That was sad work for Fanchon, though it was not for her brother's sake that she wept, since, as every one knew, Jefferson was already so full of malaria and quinine that the fevers of the south and Mexico must find him invulnerable, and even his mother believed he would only thrive and grow hearty on his soldiering. But about Crailey Fanchon had a presentiment more vivid than any born of the natural fears for his safety. It came to her again and again, reappearing in her dreams. She shivered and started often as she worked on the flag, then bent her fair head low over the gay silks, while the others glanced at her sympathetically. And when the flag was completed save for sewing the stars upon the blue ground she took it away from the others and insisted upon finishing the work herself.

It was at this juncture, when the weeping of women was plentiful, when old men pulled long faces and the very urchins of the street observed periods of gravity and even silence, that a notion entered the head of Mrs. Tanberry—young Janey Tanberry—to the effect that such things were all wrong. She declared energetically that this was no decent fashion of farewell; that after the soldiers went away there would be time enough to enact the girls they had left behind them, and that until then the town should be made enlivening. So she went about preaching a revival of cheerfulness.

Mrs. Tanberry came in and worshiped it.

Nor was her vigor spent in vain. It was decided that a ball should be given to the volunteers of Rouen two nights before their departure for the state rendezvous, and it should be made the noblest festival in Rouen's history. The subscribers took their oath to it.

Miss Betty laid out her prettiest dress that evening, and Mrs. Tanberry came in and worshiped it as it rested, like foam of lavender and white and gray, upon the bed, beside the snowy gloves with their tiny, stiff lace gauntlets, while two small white sandal slippers, with jeweled buckles where the straps crossed each other, were being fastened upon Miss Betty's silken feet by the vain and gloating Mamie.

"It's a wicked cruelty, princess!" exclaimed Mrs. Tanberry. "We want to cheer the poor fellows and help them to be gay, and here do you deliberately plan to make them sick at the thought of leaving the place that holds you! Or have you discovered that there's one poor vagabond of the band getting off without having his heart broken, and made up your mind to do it for him tonight?"

"Is father to go with us?" asked Betty. It was through Mrs. Tanberry that she now derived all information concerning Mr. Carewe, as he had not directly addressed her since the afternoon when he discovered her reading the Journal's extra.

"No; we are to meet him there. He seems rather pleasanter than usual this evening," remarked Mrs. Tanberry hopefully as she retired.

"Den we mus' git ready to share big trouble tomorrer!" commented the kneeling Mamie, with a giggle.

Alas, poor adoring servitress, she received a share unto herself that very evening, for her young mistress, usually as amiable as a fair summer sky, fidgeted, grumbled, found nothing well done and was never two minutes in the same mind. After donning the selected dress, she declared it a fright, tried two others, abused each roundly, dismissed her almost weeping handmaiden abruptly and again put on the first. Sitting down to the mirror, she spent a full hour over the arrangement of her hair.

When Mrs. Tanberry came in to tell her that Nelson was at the block with the carriage Miss Betty did not turn, and the elder lady stopped on the threshold and gave a quick, asthmatic gasp of delight.

"Oh," said Mrs. Tanberry, "you make me want to be a man! I'd pick you up and run to the north pole, where no one could ever follow. And I can tell you that it hurts not to throw my arms round you and kiss you, but you're so exquisite I don't want to touch you!"

"Dance wid de han'somdest," screamed Mamie, pursuing uproariously to see the last of her as she jumped into the carriage, "bow to de wittriest an' kiss de one you love de bes'!"

"That will be you!" said Miss Betty to Mrs. Tanberry and kissed the good lady again.

CHAPTER XVI.

It is a matter not of notoriety, but of the happiest celebrity, that Mrs. Tanberry danced that night; and not only that she danced, but that she waltzed. To the lot of Tappingham Marsh (whom she pronounced the most wheedling vagabond, next to Crailey Gray, of her acquaintance) it fell to persuade her; and, after walking a quadrille with the elder Chenoweth, she waltzed with Tappingham. More extraordinary to relate, she danced down both her partner and the music. Thereupon did Mr. Bareaud, stung with envy, dare emulation and essay a schottische with Miss Trixie Chenoweth, performing marvelously well for many delectable turns before he unfortunately fell down. It was a night when a sculptured god would have danced on his pedestal: June, but not overwarm, balm in the air and rose leaves on the breeze; and even Minerva's great heels might have marked the time that orchestra kept. Be sure they waltzed again to "Those Endearing Young Charms:"

Oh, the heart that has truly loved never forgets,
But as truly loves on to the close,
As the sunflower turns on her god when he sets
The same look that she gave when he rose.

Three of the volunteers were resplendent in their regimentals—Mr. Marsh (who had been elected captain of the new company to succeed Vanrevel) and Will Cummings and Jean Madrillon, the lieutenants. This glory was confined to the officers, who had ordered their uniforms at home, for the privates and noncommissioned officers were to receive theirs at the state rendezvous. However, although this gala adornment was limited to the three gentlemen mentioned, their appearance added "an indescribable air of splendor and pathos to the occasion," to quote Mr. Cummings once more. A fourth citizen of the town who might have seized upon this opportunity to display himself as a soldier neglected to take advantage of it and stole in quietly toward the last in his ordinary attire, leaving his major's uniform folded on a chair in his own room. The flag was to be presented to the volunteers at the close of the evening, and Tom came for that—so he claimed to his accusing soul.

He entered unobserved and made his way, keeping close to the wall, to where Mrs. Bareaud sat, taking a chair at her side, but Robert Carewe, glancing thither by chance, saw him and changed countenance for an instant. Mr. Carewe composed his features swiftly, excused himself with elaborate courtesy from Miss Chenoweth, with whom he was talking, and crossed the room to a corner near his enemy. Presently, as the music ceased, the volunteers were bidden to come forward, whereupon Tom left Mrs. Bareaud and began to work his way down the room. Groups were forming and breaking up in the general movement of the crowd, and the dissolving of one brought him face to face with Elizabeth Carewe, who was moving slowly in the opposite direction, a small flock of suitors in her train.

The confrontation came so suddenly and so unexpectedly that before either was aware they looked squarely into each other's eyes full and straight, and both stopped instantly, as though transfixed, Miss Betty leaving a sentence forever half complete. There was a fierce, short vocal sound from the crowd behind Vanrevel, but no one noticed Mr. Carewe, and then Tom bowed gravely, as in apology for blocking the way, and passed on.

Miss Betty began to talk again, much at random, with a vivacity too greatly exaggerated to be genuine, while the high color went from her cheeks and left her pale. Nothing could have enraged her more with herself than the consciousness, now suddenly strong within her, that the encounter had a perceptible effect upon her. What power had this man to make her manner strained and mechanical? What right had his eyes always to stir her as they did?

Ah, that other should have come, if only to stand between her and this tall hypocrite, whose dark glance had such strength to disturb her. What lies that gaze contained, all in the one flash—the strange pretense of comprehending her gently, but completely—a sad compassion, too, and with it a look of farewell, seeming to say, "Once more I have come for this—and just 'Goodby!'" For she knew that he was going with the others, going perhaps forever, only the day after tomorrow—then she would see him no more and be free of him. Let the day after tomorrow come soon! Miss Betty hated herself for understanding the adieu, and hated herself more because she could not be sure that, in the startled moment of meeting before she collected herself, she had let it go unanswered.

She had done more than that. Without knowing it, she had bent her head to his bow, and Mr. Carewe had seen both the salutation and the look.

The young men were gathered near the orchestra, and, to the hilarious strains of "Yankee Doodle," the flag they were to receive for their regiment was borne down the room by the sisters and sweethearts who had made it, all of whom were there except Fanchon Bareaud. Crailey had persuaded her to surrender the flag for the sake of spending this evening, next to his last in Rouen, at home alone with him.

The elder Chenoweth made the speech of presentation—that is, he made part of it before he broke down, for his son stood in the ranks of the devoted band. Until this incident occurred all had gone trippingly, for every one had tried to put the day after tomorrow from his mind. Perhaps there might not have been so many tears even now if the young men had not stood together so smilingly to receive their gift. It was seeing them so gay and confident, so strong in their youth and so unselfish of purpose. It was this and the feeling that all of them must suffer and some of them die before they came back, so that when Mr. Chenoweth, choking in his loftiest flight, came to a full stop, and without disguise buried his face in his handkerchief, Mrs. Tanberry, the apostle of gayety, openly sobbed. Chenoweth, without more ado, carried the flag over to Tappingham Marsh, whom Vanrevel directed to receive it, and Tappingham thanked the donors without many words, because there were not then many at his command.

Miss Carewe had been chosen to sing "The Star Spangled Banner," and she stepped out a little from the crowd to face the young man as the orchestra sounded the first chord. She sang in a full, clear voice, but when the volunteers saw that as she sang the tears were streaming down her cheeks in spite of the brave voice they began to choke with the others. If Miss Betty Carewe found them worth weeping for, they could afford to cry a little for themselves. Yet they joined the chorus nobly and raised the roof with the ringing song, sending the flamboyant, proud old words thunderously to heaven.

EXECUTION IN INDIA.

How Sentence of Death Was Carried Out on Streets of Hyderabad.

The decision as to whether the murderer should be executed or imprisoned for life was, says The Civil and Military Gazette in describing an execution at Hyderabad of a Pathan who had shot his brother-in-law, as is usual, left to the murdered man's relatives, and his widow, the sister of the murderer, voted for his death.

On the day for the execution there appeared in the streets a band of sweepers armed with leafy twigs, followed by a squad of the city Arab police with fixed bayonets. Then came the criminal, dressed in new white garments, with a new halter around his neck and new ropes attached to his arms. The ends of these ropes were held by policemen. The ordinary thing is for the condemned man to walk, but in this case he was so overcome that he had to be conveyed in a jutka.

On arriving at the fatal spot the murderer was made to alight and kneel down, while the policemen handed over charge of the cords to the executioner's attendants, one of whom, seizing the end of the halter, stood in front of the felon, while others held the cords pinioning the arms behind. The executioner, brandishing a broad, heavy sword, keen as a razor, in a suggestive fashion, and prancing up towards his victim asked three times in a loud voice: "Who authorizes the execution?" The chief of the city police on duty thrice replied: "The Amin."

Then an attendant armed with a long needle pricked the condemned man in the back, causing him to start forward. At the same instant those holding the cords laid themselves back in opposite directions as in a tug-of-war contest, with the result that the wretch's neck was stretched; and, following the reply of the chief of police, the executioner's blade descended fair and true on the neck, severing the head completely.

Trap For the Burglar.

A phonographic device that will call the police by telephone adds a new hazard to the dangers of the burglar's profession. When an attempt is made to force a window or door with which proper connections have been made, an electric current operates a phonograph in the garret. The machine calls up central and asks for the police station. The phonograph then informs the officers of the robbery, giving street and number, and repeats this information as long as the receiver is down. Meantime the intruder, all unconscious that an alarm has been rung in, virtually walks into a trap and if the call is promptly responded to is soon in the lockup.

Why Do Plants Grow Erect?

Exactly why trees and other plants grow erect has never as yet been definitely determined. Some of the scientists have given it as their opinion that the phenomenon of erect growth was and is in some manner related to the action of light. That this hypothesis is untenable was proved by Dr. Maxwell S. Masters of England, who found that sprouts on green posts thousands of feet underground in the mines always assume the erect attitude.

Quaint Verses On Tomb of Mariner.

The destruction by fire of the historic and beautiful Abbey of Selby not only deprives Yorkshire of its most perfect monastic church, but robs the country of a national relic of surpassing interest. Few churches possess the architectural interest of Selby Abbey. It owes its foundation in 1068 to William the Conqueror, whose son Henry, afterwards Henry I., is traditionally supposed to have been born in Selby.

One of the most curious epitaphs in the Abbey of Selby was in the reredos on the east side. It read:

"Tho' Boreas with his Blustering blasts,
Has tos't me to and fro,
Yet by the handiwork of God
I'm here enclosed below.

"And in this Silent Bay I lie
With many of our Fleet,
Until the day that I set sail
My Admiral Christ to meet."

A SPRING DANGER

Many People Weaken Their Systems by Dosing with Purgative Medicines

A spring medicine is a necessity. Nature demands it as an aid to enriching the blood and carrying off the impurities that have accumulated during the winter months. Thousands of people, recognizing the necessity for a spring medicine, dose themselves with harsh griping purgatives. This is a mistake. Ask any doctor and he will tell you that the use of purgative medicines weaken the system and cannot possibly cure disease. In the spring the system needs building up—purgatives weaken. The blood should be made rich, red and pure—purgatives cannot do this. What is needed is a tonic, and the best tonic medical science has yet devised is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. Every dose of this medicine actually makes new, rich blood, and this new blood strengthens every organ and every part of the body. That is why these Pills banish pimples and unsightly skin eruptions. That is why they cure headaches, backaches, rheumatism, neuralgia and a host of other troubles that come from poor watery blood. That is why the men and women who use Dr. Williams Pink Pills eat well and sleep well and feel active and strong. Miss Mabel Synnott, Lisle, Ont., says: "I was pale and weak and suffered greatly from headaches, and I found nothing to help me until I began taking Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These have completely restored my health and I bless the day I began taking them."

But be sure you get the genuine Pills with the full name "Dr. Williams Pink Pills for Pale People" on the wrapper around each box — all other so-called pink pills are fraudulent imitations. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Why Do Trees Grow Erect?

Exactly why trees and other plants grow erect has never as yet been definitely determined. Some of the scientists have given it as their opinion that the phenomenon of erect growth was and is in some manner related to the action of light. That this hypothesis is untenable was proved by Dr. Maxwell S. Masters of England, who found that sprouts on green posts thousands of feet underground in the mines always assume the erect attitude.

ANOTHER JOB FOR ALCOHOL

That the method of garbage disposal is about to be revolutionized by the manufacture of denatured alcohol is the statement made to the common council of Milwaukee by Dr. W. A. Boyd, of Rockford, Ill. Milwaukee now pays $1.83 a ton for burning its garbage at a municipal plant, and Dr. Boyd has offered to do the work at 70 cents a ton, and at the end of ten years give the city his plant. Milwaukee gets no return in the way of by-products from burning its garbage. Dr. Boyd says he will get grease, fertilizer and alcohol from the waste. Alcohol would be the most important of the by-products.—New York Tribune.

CRYING BABIES

Babies do not cry for the fun of it, nor is it always because they are hungry, as so many young mothers think. Nine times out of ten baby's cry indicates that his little stomach is out of order. Mothers will find instant relief for their suffering little ones in Baby's Own Tablets. A few doses will cure the most obstinate cases of constipation, indigestion or vomiting, and a Tablet given now and then to the well child will keep it well. Mrs. Mary Pollock, Gawas, Ont., says: "Baby's Own Tablets have been a great benefit to my baby. They have made him happy, peaceful and contented, when before he used to cry all the time. I have more comfort with him since giving him the Tablets than I ever had before. He now sits and plays and laughs while I do my work. What greater praise can I give Baby's Own Tablets." ARTIFICIAL NUTMEGS

Artificial nutmegs are made in Belgium in so clever a manner that they can hardly be distinguished from genuine ones, especially if mixed with the latter. A chemical analysis has shown them to consist of a mixture of finely powdered nutmeg (from extracted or injured kernels) and about 20 per cent of mineral substances. The following means of detection are recommended: When the kernels are cut the well known plantlike structure so characteristic in genuine nutmeg is absent. If the kernels are treated for three or four minutes with boiling water they become soft, and can be rubbed up into a powder with the fingers; on being burned they leave about 18 per cent of ashes, while true nutmeg contains only 2 to 3 per cent; the imitation nuts are generally much heavier than the genuine article.

STEAMSHIP ENGINES.

A Thousand Tons of Coal Daily Feed the 192 Furnaces.

One of the most impressive manifestations of the power of the modern steam engine is the sight of an up to date freight locomotive starting a train of forty or fifty cars and gathering way until the whole mass is thundering over the rails at a speed of twenty-five or thirty miles an hour. When we attempt by our unaided strength to move a heavy piece of furniture, we understand very well what is meant by mass and inertia. To move a single loaded freight car on the level by human power it is necessary to crowd around it as many men as can lay their hands or shoulders against it in a united propulsive effort. And hence when we see not one, but forty or fifty loaded cars, started from rest and swung into their full stride by a single locomotive the latter becomes symbolical in the popular mind of majestic power.

It is for this reason that to represent the horsepower which will be necessary to drive the new Cunard liners at twenty-four and one-fourth knots an hour we have taken the average sized freight locomotive as our unit of comparison. The least amount of power which the designers of the Lusitania and Mauretania found would be necessary to drive these ships at their contract speed was 68,000 horsepower. Now, the horsepower of the average freight locomotive is about 2,100, and consequently the total thrust on the four propellers of each of these ships will be equal to the total pull exerted by thirty-two modern American freight engines. One of these locomotives could haul on the level a train of fifty cars, whose total length would be just a third of a mile. Consequently the whole 68,000 power of the Cunarder expressed in terms of locomotive work would be sufficient to haul a train of 1,600 cars, whose total length would be over five miles.

To develop a minimum of 68,000 horsepower and a maximum that will possibly run up to 75,000 or 80,000 horsepower calls for a boiler and engine plant of truly titanic proportions. Steam will be supplied by twenty-five cylindrical boilers, of which twenty-three are double ended and two single ended, the former being seventeen feet three inches in diameter and twenty-one feet long. The coal will be burned in these boilers on 192 furnaces, the total area of whose grates would be represented by a square measuring sixty-four feet on each side, containing about 4,000 square feet of surface. Night and day an army of several hundred firemen will be continuously shoveling coal into these furnaces, where it will be burned at the rate of about 1,000 tons every twenty-four hours, and to insure that the coal is burned at a fierce white heat the air will be forced through the grates continuously by means of powerful electrically driven fans, the rush of air being also assisted by the four great smokestacks, through which the products of combustion will be discharged high up in the air at about 150 feet above the level of the grate bars.—Scientific American.

Queer Mental Disorder.

A singular mental disorder is reported of a patient confined at Bicetre, France. He professes to remember nothing except the month and year in which he was born. Lest he should forget the date of each new day he fills sheet after sheet of paper with memoranda. It is not a case of true amnesia or loss of memory; otherwise he should be unable to speak or write. It is a "fixed idea" of forgetfulness, a delusion, not an incapacity to remember. It has been argued by some that all the delusions of the insane are the result of the imagination filling the gaps which exist in an impaired memory. But this is the first case which has been described of une idee fixe d'oubli.

Spokane's Ambition.

Spokane has an honorable ambition to be a state capital. To achieve it Spokane would make a new state, to be called Lincoln. To the eastern counties of Washington it would add the northeastern counties of Oregon and the "panhandle" of Idaho. Such would be the new state. To round things out nicely it would recompense Idaho with the southeastern counties of Oregon. What is left of Washington and Oregon it would turn into a single state. Up to the present Spokane only has consented to this remaking of the map.—New York Tribune.

Submarine Auxiliary.

When a submarine boat becomes disabled beneath the surface of the water and cannot rise, its crew is in a bad predicament. To remedy the difficulty an inventor has contrived an auxiliary boat to be carried in the submarine and to be a part of it, practically, until needed. In time of accident the crew of the incapacitated submarine would enter the little craft, and when the containing chamber had been flooded the bolts would be withdrawn and the vessel with its human freight would clear itself and rise to the surface.

New York Subway Mistakes.

"There are four fool things that New York has done in its subway that are big mistakes and the causes of much unnecessary delay in operating the lines," said a man from London when he made his first trip from the bridge to Harlem in an hour. "The first is having stations on curves; second, making station platforms too short for increased train lengths; third, making entrances and exits of cars at the same points, and, fourth and worst of all, making tracks cross each other at Ninety-sixth street."—New York Herald.

Cash or Credit.

Women should not get credit. Neither should men. Cash is the cure. Tradesmen maybe would have a bad time for six or twelve months, and many a lady would have to "lie low," but in the end we would get both our trade and our money, and she would get her dress and at far less cost.—London Opinion.

Cold in the Chest Seemed to be Unmovable But Cure was Soon Effected by

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine

It is waste of time to use ordinary cough mixtures for serious colds on the chest, and time is of infinite value when the lungs are in danger.

The risk is too great, especially when you wait to think that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is for sale in nearly every store that keeps medicines at all.

This letter gives you some idea of the effectiveness of this great medicine.

Mrs. A. Barnum, Ingersoll, Ont., writes:—"My husband had a very severe cold on his chest and got so bad he could not speak above a whisper. The cough medicines he tried seemed to have no effect and reading about Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine I sent for a bottle. In two days he was cured and is very grateful for such a medicine. He says we will never be without this medicine in the house."

The very name of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is sufficient to explain the simple and yet powerful and well-known ingredients of which this great medicine is composed.

While linseed sheathes the mouth, tongue and throat, with a protective coating to prevent injury from hard coughing, turpentine disinfects and stimulates the ulcerated parts of the bronchial tubes and lungs and is almost specific for bronchitis.

Other ingredients which along with these go to make up Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, soothe the nerves, loosen the cough, aid expectoration, and by thorough action on the whole system completely cure coughs and colds, bronchitis, asthma, whooping cough and sore throat.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 25 cents a bottle at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every bottle.

AN EVEN BREAK

There was once a sporting parson at Eastington, a place on the English coast which was a favorite landing place for woodcocks at the time of their immigration to England. When the birds arrived, exhausted by their long flight, everybody in the parish, including the parson, at once turned out to join in the sport of knocking them down with sticks. One Sunday the people were in church, and the parson in the pulpit, when the church door was cautiously opened, and a head appeared with a beckoning finger. "Well, what is it?" asked the parson. "Cocks is coom!" The parson hurriedly shut up his sermon case. "Shut the door and lock it," he cried to the clerk. "Keep the people in church till I've got my surplice off. Let's all have a fair chance."

PEEPS INTO WOMEN'S LETTERS

If our readers could spend one morning looking through the letters received from all over Canada by the Zam-Buk Co., it would bring home to them with irresistible force the healing virtues of this great household balm. Old women, young women, wives, mothers and even young girls have something to say about how Zam-Buk did this or that good office in their home. Many of these writers give permission to make extracts from their grateful testimony. From these the following were taken at random:

"I was troubled for some weeks with salt rheum in hands and arms and was using a salve which did me little good. On receiving a supply of Zam-Buk I applied it, and it really seemed to act like magic! The itching and burning ceased, and in a few days the skin was cleared and healthy." So writes Miss E. A. Butchard, of North Keppel.

"Three boxes of Zam-Buk cured me of Eczema, from which I had suffered a long time." So says Mrs. Gladden, of Mansonville, Que.

"Zam-Buk cured a case of blood poison in my family, and I wish to thank you for the great blessing it has proved," is the effect of a letter from Mrs. Webb, of Dovercourt.

And so one could go on quoting extract after extract, showing how Zam-Buk cures chronic sores, ulcers, abscesses, bad leg, itch, and blood poison; takes the soreness out of cuts and burns, and grows new, healthy skin over injured or diseased places. All stores and druggists sell at fifty cents a box, or the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, will mail for price.

A REVISED EDITION

A small citizen of Springfield, Mass., says Lippincott's Magazine, made out a list of the things he hoped to receive for his approaching birthday, and this is what his fond mamma found recorded as the first item of all:

"Anew testimunt, reversed virgin!"

"HOMES, HEALTHFUL AND BEAUTIFUL"

Under the above caption the Alabastine Co., Limited, of Paris, Ontario, have put out probably one of the handsomest booklets on home decoration ever issued in Canada. While designed primarily as a catalogue, the book is handsomely illustrated with numerous cuts of the interiors of rooms in colors, and, as well as containing complete information on wall decoration, is filled with many valuable suggestions, both pictorial and otherwise, on tasteful home furnishing. It is a book which needs only to be seen to be appreciated.

"Homes, Healthful and Beautiful" is gotten out in the form of an edition de luxe, and is too expensive a book to distribute promiscuously to everyone who might write for it merely out of idle curiosity. The Alabastine Co. are therefore making a charge of ten cents for it, which amount, while not nearly covering the cost of the book, is intended to discourage those who would write for it merely to gratify an idle whim.

It is well worth reading. A copy will be mailed to any address on receipt of ten cents.

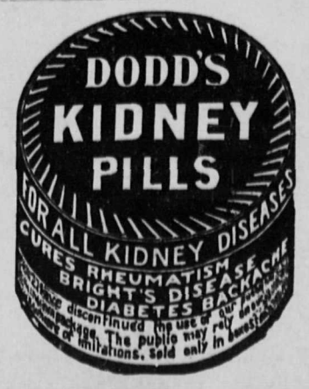
Making a Skirt.

In making skirts be sure to have all creases pressed out before arranging pattern on material, if material has a nap, or, should it be a large design, lay pattern on the one way. If not, you may reverse pattern up and down, which would prevent its matching when put together. Be sure that the pattern is arranged in the correct way.

Traitor.

"They say that he fell overboard as the ship rolled on its side."

"You might say that he left the ship in the lurch."—Yale Record.



KITCHEN ECONOMIES.

A Substitute For the Fish Kettle and Other Makeshifts.

If you have no fish kettle tie the fish in a piece of coarse muslin before cooking it, so that there may be no delay in lifting it out when done. Rub it slightly with vinegar or add a little to the boiling water, as it whitens the fish and makes it firmer.

Small mustard tins make good spice boxes if a neat label is placed on the front of each tin. An earthen pan is the best receptacle for keeping bread fresh, but if this cannot be obtained a large tin with a good lid makes a capital substitute.

For the cutter which is used for stamping out rounds of pastry use lids of tins, tops of tumblers or wineglasses. A good set of weights and scales should find a place in every kitchen. Quantities may sometimes be guessed pretty accurately, but there are many things which must be weighed.

A salamander is used to impart a brown color to any preparation. The instrument is made red hot and held close to the preparation till it is browned. A fire shovel made red hot will do as well. If you have no tongs for turning steaks and chops, this can be done with two spoons.

Every housekeeper knows that by using a fork the juice runs out and is wasted, and the meat will look white inside.

When pinched with the spoons it should feel soft; if hard, it is too much cooked; if spongy, it is underdone. A chair placed upside down on another chair makes a very good stand for a jelly bag. A tall music stool is still better. Cheesecloth folded four times makes a much better strainer than the old fashioned flannel bag. Dip it first in boiling water and let the straining be done before the fire. If an egg whisk is not possessed, a plate and a long handled knife will do as well.

Covering Furniture.

An original idea for covering furniture has been tried and proved successful by a woman who wished to have some unsightly chairs in her furnished flat improved. She bought a lot of Roman blankets with wide dark blue and red stripes and had an upholsterer cover her sofa and chairs with them, just as though he were using tapestry or velours. These looked so well that she has had her bedroom chairs also covered with blankets having alternate pink and floral stripes. She has had portieres and inside curtains made of blankets matching those on the chairs, and the effect is really charming, and, as the blankets are very cheap, they cost much less than one would suppose. She says that everything depends upon the color of the blankets chosen. Of course very pronounced stripes would be ugly upon furniture, but the more subdued or delicate colors give a most satisfactory appearance to a room. Here is an opportunity for the amateur upholsterer to try her hand.

Rhubarb Recipes.

Rhubarb and Orange Marmalade.—String and cut in pieces one inch long two pounds of rhubarb. Peel half a dozen oranges and shred the yellow rind. Put it into a preserving kettle with the oranges, rhubarb and a pound and a half of granulated sugar and place over a slow fire. Cook and stir until it is the right consistency and then pour into jars, but do not cover until quite cold.

Rhubarb Jam.—To each pound of cut rhubarb allow one pound of sugar and one lemon. Peel the lemons as thin as possible and slice them, removing all seeds. Cut the rhubarb into pieces an inch long and into the bowl on top of the lemon and the peel, then put the sugar on top of the rhubarb, cover and set away in a cool place overnight. In the morning put the mixture into a preserving kettle and let it simmer gently for three-quarters of an hour. Remove it from the stove, allow it to cool and pack into jars, covering it with paraffin or brandied paper.

Dressmaking Hints.

New cotton often causes needles to break because of its exceeding harshness. This difficulty may be overcome by rubbing along the part to be sewn with a dry piece of soap. The plan answers equally well whether the work be done by hand or machine. Don't hang skirts wrong side out when putting them away. They are bound to crease, and with light ones, so a professional dressmaker says, whatever dust has been collected by the lining and clung in spite of your brushing is bound to sift through to the right side and stick. Go over skirt linings every couple of months with a cloth wrung out—as hard as you can—of water. That cloth should be just one tiny remove from perfectly dry. But the amount of dust it will collect from what you probably thought was a perfectly clean lining is astonishing.

A Government to Kick About.

"We kick about our own government," said a reformer, "and it is doubtless pretty bad, but what would we think if it took the taxpayers' money to pay every year a pension of $50,000 to the Goulds, another of $75,000 to the Astors and another still of $25,000 to the Vanderbilts? That is what goes on in England. The English doctor, the English druggist, the English carpenter, all sorts of hardworking Englishmen, are taxed $200 or $300 a year, and the money goes to pay the huge pension of some ducal loafer who is already too rich. Charles II., for instance, granted an eternal pension of $95,000 a year to the Duke of Richmond and Gordon. In all the years since Charles II.'s time that pension has been paid out of the taxpayers' pockets. To this day it is paid. The present Duke of Richmond and Gordon settles for his dinners at the Ritz in London or at Ciro's in Monte Carlo with money earned by English butchers, bricklayers and blacksmiths."—Exchange.

The Lion's Mouth.

The use of the lion's mouth as the vent of a fountain is so common that it cannot be regarded as accidental. As a matter of fact, the custom (like so many customs—not forgetting the fountain pen) came from Egypt, which adopted it because the annual inundation of the Nile takes place when the sun is in the constellation Leo—the lion. The allusion is too obvious to need pointing out. The oldest fixed date (4241 B. C.) can be traced to Egypt, where the calendar was introduced in the middle of the forty-third century. And the history of modern shipbuilding began in Egypt, where it can be traced to about 3000 B. C. The most recent discoveries give to the land of Egypt a clean run of about 1,000 years without any admixture of foreign races. "Egypt, land of hidden mysteries, great mother of science and art, what thinking mind has not dreamed of thee!"

Husband Would Settle.

From India comes a story of the discomfiture of a very distinguished soldier. It happened at a big dinner, where he had taken in a pretty American globe trotter, who asked him to pass a dish of almonds and raisins.

"With pleasure," replied the gallant son of Mars, "but do you know that what you have asked for is called in the vernacular kissmiss and that the penalty of a kiss attaches to the request?"

"Is that so?" answered the woman calmly. "I must consult my husband," and she called across the table to him and told him of the request.

"Quite so," he replied, "according to the custom of the country it is a just debt and must be paid, but is the general aware of the arrangement made when we married that I must settle all my wife's liabilities?"

Submerged Aristocrats.

Some curious letters are quoted by Mr. Percival Bickerstaffe the pedigree searcher, in an interview with a representative of the London Tribune. One runs:

"I am a plumber and gasfiter out of work. My stummick is empty, but in my art is the blud of noble burth. * * * I claim the family title and tenements which I will not be denyed the same."

A city clerk wrote:

"I have long suspected that I am of high birth. People tell me that I have manners above my station of life. My photograph herewith shows that I have an aristocratic cast of face and will perhaps be a clew to my ancestry. I do not ask for fortune, but I aspire to the pride of race."

THE LATE MR. C. B. RECORD,

FOUNDER OF THE RECORD FOUNDRY.

Reproduced above, is a portrait of the late Mr. C. B. Record, the founder and original head of the Record Foundry & Machine Co., of Moncton, N.B., and Montreal, P.Q.

Previous to Mr. Record going into the manufacture of stoves, those used in Canada were almost wholly of American manufacture. The character of the work turned out by the Record Foundry & Machine Co., at once gave their stoves a standing, and as a result a very large business soon grew up, largely owing to Mr. Record's untiring industry and perseverance against many obstacles.

Although Mr. Record retired from active business as far back as 1879, the solid basis on which he had established the industry, has resulted in its growth from a sturdy pioneer into one of the largest stove manufacturing plants on the northern half of the American continent. With two large plants, one in Moncton and one in Montreal, the Record Foundry & Machine Co. are known from Halifax to Vancouver, and their "Calorific" and "Admiral" furnaces and "Penn Esther" ranges recognized as the standard of Canadian excellence.

ON THE SCRAP HEAP

In an Irish court recently an old man was called into the witness box, and being infirm and just a little blind, he went too far in more than one sense. Instead of keeping up the stairs that led to the box, he mounted those that led to the bench. Said the judge, good humoredly:

"Is it a judge you want to be, my good man?"

"Ah, sure, your honor," was the reply, "I'm an ould man now, and mebbe it's all I'm fit for."

The judge had no ready retort.—Tit-Bits.

As a first aid there is nothing in the handy medicine line so certain in curative results as Bickle's Anti Consumptive Syrup, the far-famed remedy for colds and coughs.

COOKING A SQUASH

A correspondent of the Listener writes:—I think you will enjoy the following from our English cousins. We have laughed ourselves weak over it. A barrel was sent to London at Christmas containing apples, a Hubbard squash, some cranberries and sweet potatoes. This is from the reply: "The apples were fine, but the potatoes, alas, had gone quite bad and yellow. The cranberries are very handsome, but seem somewhat acid to our taste. The squash was a novelty, and I daresay we didn't know exactly how to deal with it. We put it on the table for dessert, but James found it extremely difficult to cut. Later I stewed it with lemon and sugar, and we all declared it delicious."

Grim Joke In a Blue Book.

A grim piece of humor appears in the British blue book dealing with the taxation of unimproved land values in the colonies. The tax commissioner of Adelaide, after referring to the inaccurate returns, says:

"Side by side with these inaccurate returns it has been pleasing to note the completeness with which others have been prepared in the minutest particulars, and we cannot fail to recognize the thoroughness of the taxpayer who returned that piece of land of his, measuring nine feet by six feet, in the —— cemetery, and under the column 'Name of Occupier' gave that of his departed wife."

The Two Vanrevels

Few were the nooses of the more pretentious sort that did not mourn in prospect the going of son or brother or close friend. Mothers already wept not in secret, fathers talked with husky bravado, and every one was very kind to those who were to go, speaking to them gently and bringing them little foolish presents. Nor could the hearts of girls now longer mask as blocks of ice to the prospective conquistadores. Eugene Madrilon's young brother, Jean, after a two years' Beatrice and Benedict wooing of Trixie Chenoweth, that notable spitfire, announced his engagement upon the day after his enlistment and recounted to all who would listen how his termagant fell upon his neck in tears when she heard the news. "And now she cries about me all the time," finished the frank Jean blithely.

But there was little spirit for the old merriments. Fanchon, Virginia and five or six others spent their afternoons mournfully, and yet proudly, sewing and cutting large pieces of colored silk, fashioning a great flag for their sweethearts and brothers to carry southward and plant where stood the palace of the Montezumas.

That was sad work for Fanchon, though it was not for her brother's sake that she wept, since, as every one knew, Jefferson was already at work on malaria and quinine that the fevers of the south and Mexico must find him invulnerable, and even his mother believed he would only thrive and grow hearty on his soldiering. But about Craney Fanchon had a presentiment more vivid than any born of the natural fears for his safety. It came to her again and again, reappearing in her dreams. She shivered and started often as she worked on the flag, then bent her fair head low over the gay silks, while the others glanced at her sympathetically. And when the flag was completed save for sewing the stars upon the blue ground she took it away from the others and insisted upon finishing the work herself.

It was at this juncture, when the weeping of women was plentiful, that the old men pulled long faces and the very archons of the street observed periods of gravity and even silence, that a question entered the head of Mrs. Tanberry—young Janey Tanberry—to the effect that such things were all wrong. She declared energetically that there was no decent fashion of farewell; that after the soldiers went away there would be time enough to exact the girls they had left behind them, and that until then the town should be made enlivening. So she went about preaching a revival of cheerfulness.

Mrs. Tanberry came in and worshiped it.

Nor was her vigor spent in vain. It was decided that a ball should be given to the volunteers of Rouen two nights before their departure for the state rendezvous, and it should be made the noblest festival in Rouen's history. The subscribers took their oath to it.

Miss Betty laid out her prettiest dress that evening, and Mrs. Tanberry came in and worshiped it as it rested, like foam of lavender and white and gray, upon the bed, beside the snowy gloves with their tiny, stiff lace gauntlets, while two small white sandal slippers, with jeweled buckles where the straps crossed each other, were being fastened upon Miss Betty's silken feet by the vain and slothful Mamie.

"It's a wicked cruelty, princess" exclaimed Mrs. Tanberry. "We want to cheer the poor fellows and help them to be gay, and here do you deliberately plan to make them sick at the thought of leaving the place that holds you! Do have you discovered that there's one poor vagabond of the band getting off without having his heart broken, and made up your mind to do it for him tonight?"

"Is father to go with us?" asked Betty. It was through Mrs. Tanberry that she now derived all information concerning Mr. Carewe, as he had not directly addressed her since the afternoon when he discovered her reading the Journal's extra.

"No; we are to meet him there. He seems rather pleasanter than usual this evening," remarked Mrs. Tanberry hopefully as she retired.

"Den we mus' git ready to share big trouble tomorrer?" commented the kneeling Mamie, with a giggle.

Alas, poor adoring servitress, she received a share unto herself that very evening, for her young mistress, usually as amiable as a fair summer day, fidgeted, grumbled, found nothing well done and was never two minutes in the same mind. After donning the selected dress, she declared it a fright, tried two others, abused each roundly, dismissed her almost weeping handmaiden abruptly and again put on the first. Sitting down to the mirror, she spent a Celtabour over the arrangement of her hair.

Then Mrs. Tanberry came in to tell her that Nelson was at the block with the carriage Miss Betty did not turn, and the elder lady stopped on the threshold and gave a quick, asthmatic gasp of delight.

"Oh," said Mrs. Tanberry, "you make me want to be a man! I'd pick you up and run to the north pole, where no one could ever follow. And I can tell you that it hurts not to throw my arms round you and kiss you, but you're so exquisite I don't want to touch you!"

"Dance wid de han'somdest," screamed Mamie, pursuing uproariously to see the last of her as she jumped into the carriage, "bow to de wuhtriest an' kiss de one you love de bes'!"

"That will be you!" said Miss Betty to Mrs. Tanberry and kissed the good lady again.

CHAPTER XVI.

It is a matter not of notoriety, but of the happiest celebrity, that Mrs. Tanberry danced that night; and not only that she danced, but that she waltzed. To the lot of Tapplingham Marsh (whom she pronounced the most wheedling vagabond, next to Craney Gray, of her acquaintances) it fell to persuade her; and, after walking a quadrille with the elder Chenoweth, she waltzed with Tapplingham Marsh. More extraordinary to relate, she danced down both her partner and the music. Thereupon did Mr. Barsaud, stung with envy, dare emulation and essay a schottische with Miss Trixie Chenoweth, performing marvelously well for many delectable turns before he unfortunately fell down. It was a night when a sculptured god would have danced on his pedestal: June, the air overwarm, balm in the air and rose leaves on the breeze; and even Minerva's great heels might have marked the time and her chestra kept. Be sure they waltzed again to "Those Endearing Young Charms."

Oh, the heart that has truly loved never forgets,
But as truly loves on to the close,
As the sunflower turns on her god when he sets
The same look that she gave when he rose.

Three of the volunteers were resplendent in their regimentals—Mr. Marsh (who had been elected captain in the new company to succeed Vanrevel) and Will Cumming and Jean Madrilon, the lieutenants. This glory was confined to the officers, who had ordered their uniforms at home, for the privates and noncommissioned officers were to receive theirs at the state rendezvous. However, although this gala adornment was limited to the three gentlemen mentioned, their appearance added "an indescribable air of splendor and pulled down to the occasion," to quote Mr. Cummings once more. A fourth citizen of the town who might have basked upon this opportunity to display himself as a soldier was unable to take advantage of it and stole in quietly toward the last in his ordinary attire, leaving his major's uniform folded on a chair in his own room. The flag was to be presented to the volunteers at the close of the evening, and Tom came for that—so he claimed to his accusing soul.

He entered unobserved and made his way, keeping close to the wall, to where Mrs. Bareaud sat, taking a chair at her side, but Robert Carewe, glancing thither by chance, saw him and changed countenance for an instant. Mr. Carewe composed his features swiftly, excused himself with elaborate courtesy from Miss Chenoweth, with whom he was talking, and crossed the room to a corner near his enemy. Presently, as the music ceased, the volunteers were bidden to come forward, whereupon Tom left Mrs. Bareaud and began to work his way down the room. Groups were forming and breaking up in the general movement of the crowd, and the dissolving of one brought him face to face with Eliza beth Carewe, who was moving slowly in the opposite direction, a small flock of suitors in her train.

The confrontation came so suddenly and so unexpectedly that before either was aware they looked sqiarely into each other's eyes full and straight, and both stopped instantly, as though transfixed. Miss Betty leaving a sentence forever half complete. There was a fierce, short vocal sound from the crowd behind Carewe, but no one noticed Mr. Carewe, and then Tom bowed gravely, as in apology for blocking the way, and passed on.

Miss Betty began to talk again, much at random, with a vivacity too greatly exaggerated to be genuine, while the high color went from her cheeks and left her pale. Nothing could have enraged her more with herself than the consciousness, now suddenly strong within her, that the encounter had a perceptible effect upon her. What power had this man to make her manner strained and mechanical? What right had his eyes always to stir her as they did?

Ah, that other should have come, if only to stand between her and this tally hypocrite whose dark glance had such strength to disturb her. What lies that gaze contained, all in the one flash—the strange pretense of comprehending her gently, but completely—a and compassion, too, and with it a look of farewell, seeming to say, "Once more I have come for this—and just 'Goodby'." For she knew that he was going with the others, going perhaps forever, only the day after tomorrow—then she would see him no more and be free of him. Let the day after be tomorrow come soon! Miss Betty hated herself for understanding the adieu, and hated herself more because she could not be sure that, in the startled moment of meeting before she collected herself, she had let it go unanswered.

She had done more than that. With

The destruction by fire of the historic and beautiful Abbey of Selby not only deprives Yorkshire of its most perfect monastic church, but robs the country of a national relic of surpassing interest. Few churches possess the architectural interest of Selby Abbey. It owes its foundation in 1068 to William the Conqueror, whose son Henry, afterwards Henry I., is traditionally supposed to have been born in Selby.

One of the most curious epitaphs in the Abbey of Selby was in the reredos on the east side. It read:

EXECUTION IN INDIA.

How Sentence of Death Was Carried Out on Streets of Hyderabad.

The decision as to whether the murderer should be executed or imprisoned for life was, says The Civil and Military Gazette in describing an execution at Hyderabad of a Pathan who had shot his brother-in-law, as is usual, left to the murdered man's relatives, and his widow, the sister of the murderer, voted for his death.

On the day for the execution there appeared in the streets a band of sweepers armed with lathy twigs, followed by a squad of the city Arab police with fixed bayonets. Then came the criminal, dressed in new white garments, with a new halter around his neck and new ropes attached to his arms. The ends of these ropes were held by policemen. The ordinary thing is for the condemned man to walk, but in this case he was so overcome that he had to be conveyed in a jutka.

On arriving at the fatal spot the murderer was made to alight and kneel down, while the policemen handed over charge of the cords to the executioner's attendants, one of whom, seizing the end of the halter, stood in front of the felon, while others held the cords pinioning the arms behind. The executioner, brandishing a broad, heavy sword, keen as a razor, in a suggestive fashion, and prancing up towards his victim sabred three times in a loud voice: "Shall I authorize the execution?" The chief of the city police on duty thrice replied: "The Amin."

Then an attendant armed with a long needle pricked the condemned man in the back, causing him to start forward. At the same instant those holding the cords laid themselves back in opposite directions as in a tug-of-war contest, with the result that the wretch's neck was stretched and, following the reply of the chief of police, the executioner's blade descended fair and true on the neck, severing the head completely.

Trap for the Burglar.

A phonographic device that will call the police by telephone adds a new hazard to the dangers of the burglar profession. When an attempt is made to force a window or door with which proper connections have been made, an electric current operates a phonograph in the garret. The machine calls up central and asks for the police station. The phonograph then informs the officers of the robbery, giving street and number, and repeats this information as long as the receiver is down. Meantime the intruder, all unconscious that an alarm has been rung in, virtually walks into a trap and if the call is promptly responded to is soon in the lockup.

Why Do Plants Grow Erect?

Exactly why trees and other plants grow erect has never as yet been definitely determined. Some of the scientists have given it as their opinion that the phenomenon of erect growth was and is in some manner related to the action of light. That this hypothesis is untenable was proved by Dr. Maxwell S. Masters of England, who found that sprouts on green pests thousands of feet underground in the mines always assume the erect attitude.

STEAMSHIP ENGINES.

A Thousand Tons of Coal Daily Feed the 192 Furnaces.

One of the most impressive manifestations of the power of the modern steam engine is the sight of an up to date freight locomotive starting a train of forty or fifty cars and gathering way until the whole mass is thundering over the rails at a speed of twenty-five or thirty miles an hour. When we attempt by our unaided strength to move a heavy piece of furniture, we understand very well what is meant by mass and inertia. To move a single

A Government to Kick About.

"We kick about our own government," said a reformer, "and it is doubtless pretty bad, but what would we think if it took the taxpayers' money to pay every year a pension of $50,000 to the Goulds, another of $75,000 to the Astors and another, still of $25,000 to the Vanderbilts? That is what goes on in England. The English doctor, the English druggist, the English carpenter, all sorts of hardworking Englishmen, are taxed $200 or $300 a year, and the money goes to pay the huge pension of some ducal loafer who is already too rich. Charles II., for instance, granted an eternal pension of $95,000 a year to the Duke of Richmond and Gordon. In all the years since Charles II.'s time that pension has been paid out of the taxpayers' pockets. To this day it is paid. The present Duke of Richmond and Gordon settles for his dinners at the Ritz in London or at Ciro's in Monte Carlo with money earned by English butchers, bricklayers and blacksmiths."—Exchange.

The Lion's Mouth.

The use of the lion's mouth as the vent of a fountain is so common that it cannot be regarded as accidental. As a matter of fact, the custom (like so many customs—not forgetting the fountain pen) came from Egypt, which adopted it because the annual inundation of the Nile takes place when the sun is in the constellation Leo—the lion. Egypt is too often cited as a need pointing out. The oldest fixed date (4241 B. C.) can be traced to Egypt, where the custom (like so much else) is introduced in the middle of the forty-third century. And the history of most shipbuilding industries is there it can be traced to about 3000 B. C. The most recent discoveries give to the land of Egypt a clean run of about 1,000 years more than Mr. Keley's foreign races. "Egypt, land of hidden mysteries, great mother of science and art, and thinking mind has not dreamed of thee!"

Husband Would Settle.

From India comes a story of the dis comfiture of a very distinguished soldier. It happened at a big dinner where he had taken in a pretty German globe trotter, who asked him to pass a dish of almonds and raisins.

"With pleasure," replied the distinguished son of Mars, "but do you know that what you have asked for is called in the service language that means the penalty of a kiss attaches to the request?"

"Is that so?" answered the woman calmly. "I must consult my husband," and she called across the table to him and told him of her request.

"Quite so," he replied, "according to the custom of the country it is a just debt and must be paid, but is the general aware of the arrangement made when we married that I must settle all my wife's liabilities?"

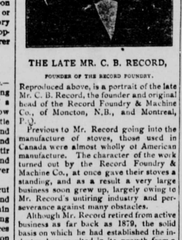
Submerged Aristocrats.

Some curious letters are quoted by Mr. Percival Bickerstaffe the pedigree searcher, in an interview with a representative of the London Tribune. One runs:

"I am a plumber and gasfitter out of work. My stummick is empty, but in my art is the blud of noble burth. ✶ ✶ I claim the family title and tenements which I will not be denyed the same."

A city clerk wrote:

"I have long suspected that I am of high birth. People tell me that I have manners above my station of life. My photograph herewith shows that I have an aristocratic cast of face and will perhaps be a clew to my ancestry. I do not ask for fortune, but I aspire to the pride of race."



THE LATE MR. C. B. RECORD,

FOUNDER OF THE RECORD FOUNDRY.

Reproduced above, is a portrait of the late Mr. C. B. Record, the founder and original head of the Record Foundry & Machine Co., of Moncton, N.B., and Montreal, P.Q.

Previous to Mr. Record going into the manufacture of stoves, those used in Canada were almost wholly of American manufacture. The character of the work turned out by the Record Foundry & Machine Co., at once gave their stoves a standing, and as a result a very large business soon grew up, largely owing to Mr. Record's untiring industry and perseverance against many obstacles.

Although Mr. Record retired from active business as far back as 1899, the solid basis on which he had established the industry, has resulted in its growth from a family concern to one of the largest stove manufacturing plants on the northern half of the American continent. With two large plants, one in Moncton and one in Montreal, the Record Foundry & Machine Co. are known from Halifax to Vancouver, and their "Calorific" and "Admiral" furnaces and "Penn Esther" ranges are recognized as the standard of Canadian excellence.

KITCHEN ECONOMIES.

A Substitute For the Fish Kettle and Other Makeshifts.

If you have no fish kettle tie the fish in a piece of coarse muslin before cooking it, so that there may be no delay in lifting it out when done. Rub it slightly with vinegar or add a little to the boiling water, and it will ren ders the flesh and makes it firmer.

Small mustard tins make good spice boxes if a neat label is placed on the front of each. An earthen pan is the best receptacle for keeping bread fresh, but if this cannot be obtained a large tin with a good lid makes a capital substitute.

For the cutter which is used for stamping out rounds of pastry use lids of tins, tops of tumblers and wine glasses. A good set of weights and scales should find a place in every kitchen. Quantities may sometimes be guessed pretty accurately, but there are many things which must be weighed.

A salamander is used to impart a brown color to any preparation. The dish containing the article to be treated is placed close to the preparation till it is browned. A fire shovel made red hot will do as well. If you have no tongs for turning steaks and chops, this can be done with two spoons.

Every housekeeper knows that by using a fork the juice runs out and is wasted, and the meat will look white inside.

When plunged with the spoons it should feel soft; if hard, it is too much cooked; if spongy, it is underdone. A chair placed upside down on another chair makes a very good stand for a jelly bag. A tall music stool is still better. Cheesecloth folded four times makes a much better strainer than the old fashioned flannel bag. Dip it first in boiling water and let the straining be done before the fire. If an egg whisk is not possessed, a plate and a long handled knife will do as well.

Covering Furniture.

An original idea for covering furniture has been tried and proved successful by a woman who wished to have some unsightly chairs in her furnished flat improved. She bought a lot of Roman blankets with wide dark blue and red stripes and had an upholsterer cover her sofa and chairs with them, just as though he were using tapestry or velvet. These looked so well that she has had her bedroom chairs also covered with blankets having alternate pink and fawn stripes. She has had portieres and inside curtains made of blankets matching those on the chairs, and the effect is really charming, and, as the blankets are very cheap, they cost much less than one would suppose. She says that everything depends upon the color of the blankets chosen. Of course very pronounced stripes would be ugly upon furniture, but the subdued tones of delicate colors give a most satisfactory appearance to a room. Here is an opportunity for the amateur upholsterer to try her hand.

Rhubarb Recipes.

Rhubarb and Orange Marmalade.—String and cut in pieces one inch long two pounds of rhubarb. Peel half a dozen oranges and shred the yellow rind. Put it into a preserving kettle with the oranges, rhubarb and a pound and a half of granulated sugar and place over a slow fire. Cook and stir until it is the right consistency and then pour into jars, but do not cover until quite cold.

Rhubarb Jam.—To each pound of cut rhubarb allow one pound of sugar and one lemon. Peel the lemons as thin as possible and slice them, removing all seeds. Cut the rhubarb into pieces an inch long and into the bowl on top of the lemon and the peel, then put the sugar on top of the rhubarb, cover and set away in a cool place overnight. In the morning put the mixture into a preserving kettle and let it simmer gently for three-quarters of an hour. Remove it from the stove, allow it to cool and pack into jars, covering it with paraffin or brandied paper.

Dressmaking Hints.

New cotton often causes needles to break because of its exceeding harshness. This difficulty may be overcome by rubbing along the part to be sewn with a dry piece of soap. The plan answers equally well whether the work be done by hand or machine. Don't hang skirts wrong side out when putting them away. They are bound to crease, and with light ones, so a professional dressmaker says, whatever dust has been collected by the lining and clung in spite of your brushing is bound to sift through to the right side and stick. Go over skirt linings every couple of months with a cloth wrung out—as hard as you can—of water. That cloth should be dust one tiny remove from perfectly dry. But the amount of dust it will collect from what you probably thought was a perfectly clean lining is astounding.

Making a Skirt.

lking skirts be sure to have all pressed out before arranging on material, if material has a y should it be cut with the arn on the one way. If not, you verse pattern up and down, would prevent its matching ut together. Be sure that the is arranged in the correct way.

Cash or Credit.

Women should not get credit. Neither should men. Cash is the cure. Tradesmen maybe would have a bad time for six or twelve months, and many a lady would have to "lie low," but in the end we would get both our trade and our money, and she would get her dress and at far less cost.—London Opinion.

TROUT LAKE CITY

THERE have been fortunes made by judicious investment in Real Estate, and more fortunes will be made than ever the next two or three years. The one who reaps the harvest is the original investor, for he has his money on a certainty.

Now let us point out to you that there is no better spot on the Continent to buy Real Estate than TROUT LAKE.

Trout Lake is the prettiest spot in the Kootenays; as a pleasure resort it has no equal. Boating and fishing may be indulged in the year round; while big game in abundance is to the found on the hills. Its climate is superb, there being no great extremes, it being mild in winter and cool in summer. It can beast of some of the finest hotels and residences in British Columbia. Its streets are well laid out and graded. There are two excellent general stores, and a glance at the advertisements in this journal will show that all trades are fairly well represented. Write with confidence to Agents.

IT has never had a "boom"—its growth has been steady. It is the head of navigation, and the terminal of the Lardo branch of the C.P.R. All roads (in the Lardeau) lead to Trout Lake. It is the commercial centre of the richest mineral district on the continent, and has banking facilities provided by the Imperial Bank of Canada; first class school accommodation under the direction of S. Shannon, B.A.; a good water system; government offices; County Court sittings; Methodist Episcopal and Anglican churches and cottage hospital.

There are valuable ranch lands on the outskirts awaiting settlers. Its lumber resources are magnificent, and a band saw mill with a capacity of 60,000 ft. per day is at the head of the lake. The mines tributary are proving out bigger producers every year, with new prospects opening up rich bodies of ore.

There will be a big rush this year, so if you would know more, write at once to either of the agents at the addresses below.
