RAPID CREEK DEAL.

THE CALUMET AND HECLA TAKEN OVER AND BEING OPERATED

A deal has recently been closed as a result of which one of the richest mines in the Poplar Creek district will be developed and operated at once. In fact, the reopening of the workings has already begun.

The property is the Calumet and Hecla on Rapid Creek, owned by Jack Chisholm Capt Fitzsimmons, Billy Mullin and J Simpson

The Calumet and Hecla is in the famous Poplar Creek gold zone It contains a large formation vein through which runs a shoot of free milling gold more than a foot wide and very rich. The vein traverses the claims from end to end.

The work done on the properties consists of open cuts stripping the vein on the surface and a shaft about 50 feet deep, in high-grade ore all the way.

Since the end of last July, when the rich discovery was reported, negociations for the transfer of the property have been in progress with party after party. The owners were not in a financial position to operate themselves, but were not willing to part with control without what they considered a fair value for it.

F. Caldwell, of the Pontiac mine, near Kaslo, is the lucky man who has finally succeeded in interesting eastern capital to an extent sufficient to warrant the beginning of work on the scale required. Mr. Chisholm is now at the property in charge of the work.

Notice is hereby given that 60 days after the publication of this notice in the British Columbia Gazette, I intend to make application to the Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works for a special license to cut and carry away timber from the following described lands situated in West Kootenay District.

LOCAL MINING.

BROADVIEW.

The development of the Broadview is proving up eminently satisfactory.

The drift on the 300 foot level is now in about 350 feet, and has a nice showing of galena ore on the foot wall carrying values of over $52. 00 per ton.

For better ventilation, an upraise to the surface is being made about 300 feet from the portal of the drift. A good body of quartz, carrying good values in copper has been encountered in this part of the works.

A store-house has been built on the north fork, also a stable at the mine.

SILVER DOLLAR.

Manager Emmens, of the Silver Dollar, has been advised that the last car of machinery for the mill has been shipped from London, Ont.

The development is going ahead steadily, An upraise is being made to the surface in south drift

About 25 feet more has to be driven in the cross-cut tunnel to tap the No 2 vein.

SILVER CUP.

Very encouraging reports drift down about the Silver Cup This property, which has been a steady shipper for years, is—from all reports—in better shape than ever before.

From the 700 foot to the 300 foot level, there is ore in every part of the workings. A barge-load left the dock Monday morning for the smelter.

Manager Merry is very reticent when talking for publication, but we can congratulate him on the work done in 1906, on this—the Lardeau's famous mine.

Tommy Evans and Scotty White are getting matters into shape at the Big Tunnel to start their 500 foot contract,

Neil O'Donnell and Jim Grant came down from the Winslow, for a holiday. They have been driving to tap the lead at depth, and still have about 15 to 20 feet to go to reach the desired point.

The Winslow is a "good un".

POPLAR IMPROVING.

BOTH TIMBER AND MINERAL RESOURCES BEING DEVELOPED.

Poplar is wakening up, and prospects are brighter than they have been for many "moons."

For a time, those interested were "laying on their oars" waiting for the Great Northern Company to open-up the Swede and Lucky Jack properties As time passed, and nothing was done, the patience of the 'waiters' became exhausted, and they are now preparing to 'get down' to business

The Poplar creek region is undoubtedly rich, enough work has been done on numerous properties to demonstrate their worth, and it only remains for the owners to get sufficient capital to open them up, and make dividend payers.

Poplar is also fortunate in having immense timber resources, with the Lardo river as a means of transportation Some of the limits are now being logged by the Canadian Pacific Timber Company, while another outfit has contracted to clean out the river, so as to drive logs through to Kootenay Lake.

On Rapid creek, the Hecla is being worked, under the direction of the indomitable Jack Chisholm.

At Gold Hill Geo W Stead has eastern parties going in for placer mining on a large scale, and we understand the Buffalo group has changed hands, and will be worked extensively.

One of our best posted and Conservative men made the statement to the "Review" not long ago, that inside of 5 years there would be 10, 000 employed in mineral and timber between Ferguson and Lardo.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

British Columbia's industries are doing well.

Provincial Mineralogist Robertson estimates the mineral out-put for the year 1906, at $24, 000, 000-00, an increase of $2, 000, 000, 00 over the previous year

The value of the "fisheries" is estimated at $9, 750, 000, 00, topping Nova Scotia—hitherto the largest producer—by nearly one and a half million.

Query: If the Socialist members of the Provincial Parliament had voted with the Opposition would the "Nelson News" call them "revolutionists? "Nit"

....

Simply because a Minister resigns his "port-folio," the "Nelson News" imagines the whole party is gone to the "Demolition bow-wows."

The last three years of British Columbia government—as far as 'parties' are concerned—can be summed up in two words:—

Conservative—Construction.

Liberal—Obstruction.

The Conservative Convention, to nominate a candidate for the Provincial House, will assemble at Kaslo on the 7th inst.

BIRTHS.

Born: at Ferguson. January 1st to the wife of Charles Olson, a son

Also at Ferguson, on January 2nd, to the wife of Joseph Hawkins, a son.

We congratulate both Charlie and Joe on the arrival of the boys, and trust their journey through this 'vale of tears' will be a long, honorable and profitable one.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E Fowler came up from Poplar, the end of last week.

The Grand Hotel at Poplar is now under the direction of Mr. A. Aylwin.

"Mother" Burril had quite a family gathering at Christmas.

She was the happiest—and no doubt the most worried—woman, in Trout Lake. Just imagine! sons, daughters, sons-in-law, daughters-in-law, and grand-children gathered together and mother slaving herself out' to give them all a good time.

Many of her adopted children who call her "mother," were also present, and added to the pleasures of the gathering.

The "Broadview boys" were regaled on New Years' day with a big 'turkey dinner.'

Manager Emmens sent the 'boys up a box of good cigars, to help their digestion (there's where Murray got even.)

The management also gave the boys a holiday on Christmas day, with full pay. It pays! good men are scarce.

The Curling Club had its initial "scop her up" on Monday night.

The teams were "skipped" by Fred Campbell and Steve Woods. The result was 12-5 in favour of Campbell's rink.

There will be a Fancy Dress Carnival at the Rink, Trout Lake, on Saturday, January 12th.

Frank Abey and son George, were over from Camborne during the week.

Frank reports business good, but feels like a "fish out of water" at not being able to take a "whirl" in Trout Lake politics.

CHAPTER XI.

ST. LAZARE street was crowded by carriages, whose occupants were impatiently awaiting their turn to drive up to the door. Nearly all the costumes were rich. Some were original Among the latter was a clown. His costume was in perfect keeping. Indeed, his whole makeup, his insolent eye, coarse lips, high cheek bones and a beard so red that it seemed to emit flames in the reflection of the dazzling lights were in accord. He carried in his left hand a canvas banner, upon which were painted six or eight pictures, coarsely designed like those found in strolling fairs. In his right he waved a little switch, with which he would every now and then strike his banner, like a quack retailing his medicines. A crowd surrounded this clown, hoping to hear some witty speeches and puns, but he kept near the door and remained silent. About half past 10 he quitted his post. M. and Mme. Fauvel, followed by their niece Madeleine, had just entered. A compact group immediately formed near the door. During the last ten days the affair of Provence street had been the universal topic of conversation, and friends and enemies were alike glad to seize this opportunity of approaching the banker, some to assure him of their sympathy, and others to offer equivocal condolence, which of all things is the most exasperating. Belonging to the body of elderly men, M. Fauvel had not assumed a fancy costume, but merely threw over his shoulders a short silk domino. On his arm leaned Mme. Fauvel, nee Valentine de la Verberie, who graciously greeted her friends. Her beauty had once been remarkable, and tonight the effect of the soft wax lights and her very becoming dress half restored the freshness of youth. No one would have supposed her to be forty-eight years old.

But Madeleine was the object of universal admiration, beautiful and queenly in her costume of maid of honor, which seemed to have been especially invented to set forth her superb figure.

Forgotten by the crowd, the clown had taken refuge in the embrasure of a window, where he kept his eyes upon a couple not far off. It was Madeleine, dancing with a splendidly dressed doge—the Marquis de Clameran. He appeared to be radiant, rejuvenated and to all appearances triumphant. At the end of a quadrille he leaned over his partner and whispered compliments with the most unbounded admiration She seemed to listen, if not with pleasure, at least without repugnance, now smiling and now shrugging her shoulders.

"Evidently," muttered the clown, "this noble scoundrel is paying court to the banker's niece. So I was right yesterday. But how can Mlle. Madeleine listen so graciously to his flattery? Fortunately Prosper is not here."

He was interrupted by a distinguished looking elderly man in a Venetian mantle, who said to him:

"You know, M. Verduret"—half seriously, half banteringly—"what you promised me?"

The clown bowed respectfully, but with not the slightest shade of humility.

"I remember," he replied.

"But do not be imprudent, I beg of you."

"Monsieur the count need not be uneasy; he has my promise."

"Very good. I know what that means."

The count walked off, but during his short colloquy the quadrille had ended, and the clown lost sight of M. de Clameran and Madeleine.

"I shall find them near Mme. Fauvel," thought he.

And he at once started to search among the throng for the banker's wife.

Incommoded by the stifling heat, Mme. Fauvel had sought a little fresh air in the grand picture gallery, which, thanks to the talisman called gold, had been transformed into a fairylike garden filled with orange trees, japonicas, and and many rare plants. The clown saw her seated near a grove not far from the cardroom. Upon her right was Madeleine. On her left stood Raoul de Lagors, dressed in a costume of Henry III.

"I must confess," muttered the clown from his post of observation, "that the young scamp is very handsome."

Madeleine was very sad. She had plucked a camellia from a plant near by and was mechanically pulling it to pieces as she sat with her eyes downcast. Raoul and Mme. Fauvel were sitting together in conversation. Their faces were composed, but the gestures of one and the trembling of the other betrayed preoccupation and a serious discussion. In the cardroom sat the doge, M. de Clameran, so placed as to have full view of Mme. Fauvel and Madeleine, although himself concealed.

"It is the continuation of yesterday's scene," thought the clown. "If I could only get behind those camellias, I might hear what they are saying."

He pushed his way through the crowd, but as he reached the desired spot Madeleine arose and took the arm of a bejeweled Persian. At the same moment Raoul went into the cardroom and whispered a few words to De Clameran.

"There they are," muttered the clown. "The two rascals certainly hold these poor women in their toils. What can be the secret of their power?"

His attention was attracted by a commotion in the picture gallery. There was to be a wonderful minuet danced in the ballroom. The Countess de Commarin and the Princess Korasoff, with her superb emeralds, which were reported to be the finest in the world, had both arrived. In an instant the gallery became almost deserted. Only a few forlorn looking people remained. The clown thought it a favorable opportunity for carrying out his project. He abruptly left his position, flourishing his switch and beating his banner, and, crossing the gallery, seated himself in a chair between Mme. Fauvel and the door. As soon as the people had collected in a circle around him he struck a comical attitude, standing up with his body twisted sideways and his hat on one ear. With much buffoonery and volubility he made the following remarks:

"Ladies and gentlemen, this very morning I obtained a license from the authorities of this town. And what for? Why, gentlemen, for the purpose of exhibiting to you a spectacle which has already won the admiration of the four quarters of the globe. Inside of this booth, ladies, is about to commence the representation of a most remarkable drama, acted for the first time in Peking and translated by our most celebrated authors. Gentlemen, you can take your seats. The lamps are lighted, and the actors are changing their dress."

Here he stopped speaking and imitated to perfection the feats which mountebanks play upon horns and kettledrums.

"Now, ladies and gentlemen," he resumed, "you wish to know what I am doing outside if the piece is to be performed under the tent. The fact is, gentlemen, that I wish to give you a foretaste of the entertainment which you may enjoy by paying the small sum of 10 cents. You see this superb picture? Very well. It represents eight of the most thrilling scenes in the drama. Ah, I see you begin to shudder. And yet this splendid picture gives you no more idea of the acting than a drop of water gives an idea of the sea or a ray of light of the sun."

"Do you know this clown?" asked an enormous Turk of a melancholy Punch.

"No, but he can imitate a trumpet splendidly."

"Oh, very well indeed! But what is he driving at?"

The clown was endeavoring to attract the attention of Mme. Fauvel, who since Raoul and Madeleine had left her had abandoned herself to a mournful reverie. He succeeded. The showman's shrill voice brought the banker's wife back to a sense of reality. She started and looked quickly about her, as if suddenly awakened from a troubled dream. Then she noticed the clown.

"Now, ladies, we are in China. The first picture on my canvas, here to the left"—he pointed to the top daub—"represents the celebrated Mandarin Li Fo in the bosom of his family. This pretty woman leaning over him is his wife, and these children playing on the carpet are the fruits of a happy marriage. Do you not inhale the odor of happiness emanating from this speaking picture, gentlemen? Mme. Li Fo is the most virtuous of women, adoring her husband and idolizing her children. Being virtuous, she is happy, for the wise Confucius says, 'Virtue is better than vice.'"

Mme. Fauvel became interested. She left her seat and approached nearer to the clown.

"Do you see anything on the banner like what he is describing?" asked the melancholy Punch of his neighbor.

"No. Do you?"

The fact is that the daubs of paint on the canvas represented one thing as well as another, and the clown could call them whatever he pleased.

"Picture No. 2!" he cried after a rolling of drums. "This old lady seated before a mirror tearing out her hair, especially the gray ones—do you recognize her? No, you do not. She is the fair mandarine of the first picture. I see tears in your eyes, ladies and gentlemen. Ah, you have cause to weep, for she is no longer virtuous, and her happiness has departed with her virtue. Alas, it is a sad story! One fatal day she met on the streets of Peking a young ruffian, fiendish, but beautiful as an angel, and she loved him—the unfortunate woman loved him!"

During this tirade he had turned about till he faced the banker's wife, whose countenance he closely watched while he was speaking.

"You are surprised, gentlemen," he continued. "I am not. The heart never grows old, and the most vigorous wallflowers flourish on old ruins. This unhappy woman is nearly fifty years old—and in love with a youth! Hence this heartrending scene, which should serve as a warning to us all."

"Really," grumbled a cook dressed in white satin, who had passed the evening in carrying around menus which no one read, "I thought he was going to amuse us."

"But," continued the clown, "you must go inside of the booth to witness the effects of the mandarine's folly. At times a ray of reason penetrates her diseased brain, and then the sight of her anguish would soften the most unpitying. Enter, and for the small sum of 10 cents you shall hear sobs such as the Odeon never echoed in its halcyon days. The unhappy woman realizes the absurdity and inanity of her blind passion. She confesses to herself that she is madly pursuing a phantom. She knows but too well that he in the vigor and beauty of youth cannot love a faded old woman like herself, who vainly makes pitiable efforts to retain the last remains of her once enchanting beauty. She feels that the sweet words he once whispered in her charmed ear were false. She knows that the day is near when she will be left alone, with nothing save his mantle in her hand."

As the clown addressed this voluble description to the crowd before him he narrowly watched the countenance of the banker's wife. But nothing he had said seemed to affect her. She leaned back in her armchair perfectly calm and occasionally smiled.

"Can I be on the wrong track?" muttered the clown uneasily.

M. de Clameran joined the circle.

"The third picture," the clown continued, "depicts the old mandarine after she has dismissed that most annoying of guests—remorse—from her bosom. She promises herself that interest shall supply the place of love in holding the seductive youth. It is with this object that she invests him with false honors and dignity and introduces him to the chief mandarins of the capital of the Celestial empire. Then, since so handsome a youth must cut a fine figure in society, the lady must needs to sacrifice all of her possessions for his sake—necklaces, rings, bracelets, diamonds and pearls—every jewel she possesses. The monster carries all these to the pawnbrokers on Tientsi street and then has the cruelty to refuse her the tickets, so that she may have a chance of redeeming her treasures."

The clown thought that at last he had fulfilled the conditions. Mme. Fauvel began to betray signs of uneasiness. Once she made an attempt to rise from the chair, but it seemed as if her strength failed her, and she sank back, forced to listen.

"Finally, ladies and gentlemen," continued the clown, "the richly stored jewel cases were emptied. The day came when the mandarine had nothing more to give. It was then that the young scoundrel conceived the project of carrying off the jasper button belonging to the Mandarine Li Fo, a splendid jewel of incalculable value, a badge of dignity. It was kept in a granite chest and guarded by three soldiers night and day. Ah, the mandarine resisted a long time. She knew the innocent soldiers would be accused and crucified, as is the custom in Peking, and this thought restrained her. But her lover besought her so tenderly that she finally yielded to his entreaties, and the jasper button was stolen. The fourth picture represents the guilty couple stealthily creeping down the private stairway. See their frightened look—see"—

He abruptly stopped. Three or four of his auditors rushed to the assistance of Mme. Fauvel, who seemed about to faint. The clown felt his arm roughly seized by some one behind him. He turned and faced De Clameran and Lagors, both of whom were pale with anger.

"What do you want, gentlemen?" he asked, with his most gracious air.

"To speak to you," they both answered.

"I am at your service."

He followed them to the end of the picture gallery, near a window opening on a balcony. Here they were unobserved except by the man in the Venetian cloak, whom the clown had addressed as "monsieur the count." The minuet having ended, the orchestras were taking a brief rest, and, the company pouring into the gallery, it became very crowded. The sudden faintness of Mme. Fauvel had passed off unnoticed save by a few, who attributed it to the heat of the room. M. Fauvel had been sent for, but when he came hurrying in he found his wife composedly talking to Madeleine. Not having as much control over his temper as Raoul, M. de Clameran angrily said:

"In the first place, monsieur, I would like to know who you are."

The clown determined to answer as if he thought the question were a jest.

"You want my license, do you, my lord doge? I left it in the hands of the city authorities. It contains my name, age, profession, domicile and every detail"—

With an angry gesture M. de Clameran interrupted him.

"You have committed a gross insult!"

"I, my lord doge?"

"Yes, you! What do you mean by telling this abominable story?"

"Abominable! You may call it abominable, but I, who composed it"—

"Enough, monsieur. You will at least have the courage to acknowledge that your performance was a vile insinuation against Mme. Fauvel?"

The clown stood with his head thrown back and mouth wide open, as if astounded at what he heard. But any one who knew him would have seen his bright black eyes sparkling with malicious satisfaction.

"Upon my word," he said as if speaking to himself, "this is the strangest thing I ever heard of! How can my drama of the Mandarine Li Fo have any allusion to Mme. Fauvel, whom I don't know from Adam or Eve?"

"Do you pretend," said M. de Clameran, "to be ignorant of M. Fauvel's misfortune?"

"A misfortune?"

"I refer, monsieur, to the robbery of which M. Fauvel was the victim and which has been in every one's mouth."

"Ah, yes, yes, I know. His cashier decamped with 350,000 francs. It is a thing that almost daily happens. But as to discovering any connection between this robbery and my play, that is another matter."

M. de Clameran made no reply. A nudge from Lagors had calmed him as if by enchantment. He seemed to regret having uttered the significant words drawn from him by excitement.

"Very well," he finally said in his usual haughty tone. "I must have been mistaken. I accept your explanation."

But the clown, so humble a moment before, said:

"I have not made nor do I intend making any explanation."

"Monsieur"— began De Clameran.

"Allow me to finish, if you please. If unintentionally I have offended the wife of a man whom I highly esteem, he is her protector; not you. Perhaps you will tell me he is too old to demand satisfaction. If so, let him send one of his sons. One of them is here. You asked me who I am. In return I ask you who are you—you who constitute yourself Mme. Fauvel's champion? Are you her relative, friend or ally? What right have you to insult her by pretending to discover an allusion to her in a play invented for amusement?"

Surprising Knowledge.

A certain English baronet who had a dense and absolute ignorance of books and past events took a notion to be presented to his king, George III. The baronet lived near a spot where one of the most celebrated battles had been fought during the wars of the roses, but of that fact he had never chanced to hear. His mind was set upon more tangible things. He had no use for information which was not up to date. When he was presented to his sovereign, the king, who had looked him up and was prepared with the right thing to say, remarked graciously, "You come from the scene of a very celebrated battle, I understand, Sir William?"

"Well, your majesty," was the answer, "I did have a round or two with the blacksmith, but I'm very much surprised that your majesty should have heard of it."

Captain Cook and Australian Natives.

The natives of Australia knew the medicinal virtues of roots and herbs so well that when first discovered by Captain Cook, the great English navigator, they were practically free from disease. Bileans for biliousness (the great Australian herbal remedy) are compounded from the finest medicinal herbs and are altogether superior to the medicines in use before their introduction.

It is a well-known fact that most liver and stomach medicines contain mercury, bismuth and other mineral poisons. If taken for long these substances cause such serious effects as loosening the teeth, causing the hair to fall, etc. Now Bileans are a household medicine absolutely devoid of all such harmful ingredients. They are purely vegetable and are a certain cure for all liver and stomach troubles, indigestion, head ache, constipation, piles, female ailments, etc. They cure constipation without causing griping. If you are feeling 'run-down' or out of sorts they will stimulate you wonderfully. Bileans, without the slightest discomfort prompt the liver and digestive organs to act in nature's normal way, leaving those organs strengthened and stimulated to continue the performance of their duties without further assistance. They produce a gentle action on the bowels, curing or preventing constipation, cleansing the stomach, and ridding the system of all impurities.

(AN AUSTRALIAN NATIVE)

Bileans for biliousness are also a certain cure for skin eruptions, biliousness, sick headache, bad taste in the mouth, foul breath, dizziness, fainting, feelings of uncomfortable fulness even after a light meal, wind pains, anaemia, debility, etc. They improve the general circulation, and are a boon to pale-faced girls and weak women. Obtainable from all druggists at 50 cents a box, or from the Bilean Co., Colborne street, Toronto. Cut out this article, write across it the name and date of this paper, and post it to the above address with your own name and address, and a 1c stamp to pay return postage, and a free sample box will be mailed you.

ENTHUSIASTIC MOTHERS.

When mothers become enthusiastic over a medicine for little ones, it is safe to say that it has high merit. Every mother who has used Baby's Own Tablets speaks strongly in praise of them, and tells every other mother how much good they have done her children. Mrs. Alfred Marcouse, St. Charles, Que. says: "I strongly advise every mother to keep Baby's Own Tablets in the house always. I have used them for teething troubles, colic and other ills of childhood and found them the most satisfactory medicine I ever tried." These Tablets are guaranteed to contain no poisonous opiate and no harmful drug. They are equally good for the new born baby or the well grown child, and are a sure cure for all their minor ailments. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Women as Travelers.

As a matter of genuine fact women, in nine cases out of ten, are better travelers than men are. To begin with, if not so stodgily accurate, although that by no manner of means follows, they are more fluent in modern languages. They chatter in them, say the male things. Ergo, they are the more colloquial, the readier to circumvent the wiles and extortions of kellner or of garcon.—London Gentlewoman.

THE SHEEP INDUSTRY.

Every Phase of It in a Prosperous Condition.

It needs no extensive analysis of market reports or the presentation of extended tables to establish the fact that the sheep market for some years past has been paying good prices, says a writer in the Breeder's Gazette. Lambs, wethers, ewes and wool sell well, so that every phase of the industry from the producers' standpoint is in a prosperous condition. It is the man who is now every day in the business that finds every turn of it satisfactory to him, and not only the lamb feeder or wool buyer, as it has been very often in the past. Moreover, there is a steadiness throughout the year in the sheep markets which has not been in such evidence before, for, with the exception of the unusual advance for early or Easter lamb, the market runs unusually level at all seasons.

As an economical agent in using farm products in the making of meat the sheep has strong claims as a leader. In the use of grass the sheep is generally considered more economical than the steer, and in the returns in meat from the staple farm crops, corn, wheat or peas, it has both the steer and the hog beaten, and when it comes to doing the same with corn and alfalfa the lamb again has the figures of reliable tests in its favor. In these things the lamb pleases the producer.

The sheep, too, is one of those tubs that stand on their own bottoms. It does not have to follow a steer to make the most profit, nor does it need to be an appendix to the dairy industry to make it an economical producer of profit. I merely mention these things that conditions may be the better understood and not to disparage other lines of honest effort.

Again sheep may be economically handled in small or large numbers, which is a matter yet to be demonstrated in the case of some others that are money makers on a small scale, but not so proportionately when the business is expanded.

Racing at Fairs.

An English correspondent of the London Live Stock Journal who is the secretary of a fair association asks others to co-operate with him in the formation of an organization to encourage the breeding and improving of trotting horses. His object is not to benefit himself as a breeder or owner of trotters, for he has none, but to improve the attendance at the agricultural shows. He says that the "gate" is greatly influenced by trotting races. This has been the experience of fair managers in this country. Not many agricultural fairs would be financially successful without the attraction of harness racing, but it is rather surprising to find such a condition in Great Britain. Racing at our leading fairs is entirely free from the objection of gambling, and in some respects the sport is at its best there.—National Stockman.

Starting a Flock of Sheep.

To give my actual experience, I began one fall with twelve yearling ewes and hired a Cotswold ram for $5. In due time my ewes all brought twin lambs except one and raised them all. About the end of September I butchered the best one and sold twenty-two a few days later to a neighbor for $100. I then got a full blood Oxford ram, and the next flock of lambs was fully as good, if not better. To start a flock my way would be to get the desired number of lambs in the fall, preferably full bloods, but good grades will do, and to breed from them, then keep them all, and in the spring they should shear from twelve to fifteen pounds of wool. In the fall I would get a well bred Oxford ram for breeding.—C. Schinnerer in American Agriculturist.

Care of the Cow's Teats.

The care of the teats should always be observed by the milker and when they get hard and rough should be anointed with vaseline, as cracked teats are an annoyance to the milker, hurtful to the cow and have a tendency to lessen the flow of milk. Long finger nails are also a discomfiture to the cow, and the milker should keep them well pared to avoid trouble.

Some cows will not give down their milk for some milkers as readily as to others, and it is often necessary to change milkers and try to find one whom the cow takes a liking to and for whom she will give it down. The holding up of the milk has a tendency to lessen the secretion and consequently the flow.

Grow Feed on the Farm.

The Massachusetts state crop report contains an article by Professor F. S. Cooley on "Some Causes Affecting the Profits of Dairying." On the subject of feeding dairy cattle the professor urges that feeds be produced on the farm as far as possible. Usually the best practice is to purchase only feeds rich in protein and raise the coarse fodders on the farm. Cows fed on starvation rations yield no profit, and those overfed with expensive feeds are also kept at a loss. The point of highest profit in feed must be determined by experiment and calculation and varies with the locality and circumstances of the feeder.

The machinery of the modern sugar mill is so complete that from the time the cane enters the crushing rolls until the same is emptied from the vacuum pans no human labor is required to manipulate it.

According to the English table of expectation of life, out of 1,000,000 children born the survivors at the age of sixty would be 182,350 males and 187,477 females, of whom ten years later there would be 114,370 males and 123,697 females, or a total of 237,977.

"Cotton in the ears," said a physician, "should be used by all those who swim out beyond their depth. You know how often good swimmers of that type drown, don't you? Their drowning is imputed to cramp, but you will never find one of the drowned with his ears stuffed with cotton. Why? I'll tell you why. Because it isn't cramp that causes these drownings. It is a perforation of the ear drum, followed by unconsciousness, due to the pressure of the water. Cramp isn't, after all, the deadly thing it is made out to be. If you get a cramp in your leg while swimming it is easy enough to roll over on your back and float. The cramp won't kill you. But a perforation of the ear drum is different. It takes away your senses, and down you go like a log. So always, if you are going to do much swimming, stuff cotton in your ears."

VIBRATION.

Designs In Sand Formed by the Production of Sounds.

Did you ever hear that you can make drawings by sound, or, rather, that the sound vibrations will cause designs to be made with the proper implements at hand? Here is the way to do it:

At a hardware store get a piece of sheet brass one-eighth of an inch thick and six inches square. The sheet should be perfectly flat, or if it is not it should be hammered so and the edges rounded off. In the center of the sheet cut a hole three-sixteenths of an inch in diameter. If the sheet has been hammered it must now be heated in a redhot stove and cooled slowly.

Now cut a six inch piece from a broom handle and fix one end of it firmly in a block of wood. The other end you must round off and screw the plate of brass on it.

If you draw a violin bow over the edge of the brass plate a tone will be sounded. Practice this until the tone is quite clear and strong. Now sprinkle some sand on the plate, and the grains will dance about while the note is sounded, showing that the plate is in vibration.

Now put your finger on the edge of the plate in the middle of one side. At the corner of the side at an angle of forty-five degrees draw the bow, and the sand will form in two lines at right angles, starting from your finger. This is because the plate now vibrates in parts, one part moving up, while the other moves down, and the lines between these parts have no motion. Therefore the sand settles in them.

By drawing the bow at regular distances from the finger or by touching the plate in more than one place at a time while some one else draws the bow a variety of sand figures will be made.

If you will mix a little lycopodium powder with the sand when the plate vibrates it will form curious little heaps and whirlpools, which add to the moving effect of the designs.

Instead of a brass plate you may use one of glass six or eight inches square, and its sharp edges you may smooth down with a file moistened with turpentine.

To prove to yourself that the plate is still or almost so at the sand lines make a cardboard cone about ten inches long, two and a half inches in diameter at its larger end and small enough at the other end to fit into a rubber tube, which should be about two feet long. Let one person cause the plate to vibrate, while another holds the large end of the cone over the plate, applying the rubber tube to the ear. When the middle of the cone is exactly over a sand line scarcely any tone at all will be heard, and the nearer the cone is to the sand line the weaker the sound will be, while it will be clear and strong at the farthest points from the sand lines, proving that the sand falls into lines, and as the parts of the plate move in opposite directions on each side of the sand lines their effect is equalized or destroyed, causing no sound in the air in the cone balance when directly over those lines.

Trees In Sicily.

The ancient poets used to sing of the dense forests of Sicily. Today the mountains are bare. The question of reforesting is a difficult one. Attempts at starting new growth are frustrated by the peasants, who tear down fences and drive in their goats. Only under military protection could new forest trees be grown.

DOCTORS PRONOUNCED IT A BAD CASE OF PARALYSIS

Was Paralyzed for Six Months and Could Obtain No Relief--Cure Came With the Use of DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

Paralysis is always looked upon with dread but people who are suffering from the ordinary symptoms of nervous exhaustion such as sleeplessness, headache, indigestion and loss of energy and ambition often forget that neglect alone is enough to lead on to paralysis.

While this severe case of paralysis was cured by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food it is always wiser and safer to prevent such dangerous diseases by watching minor symptoms and keeping the nervous system in good condition at all times.

Mrs. W. R. Sutherland, St. Andrews, Man., writes:—

"In February, 1903, I was stricken with paralysis, fell helplessly on the floor and had to be carried to bed. The doctor pronounced it a bad case as I had no power in my tongue of left leg. I remained in that condition for six months without obtaining benefit from the doctor's prescriptions or other medicines.

"My husband advised me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by the use of this treatment all symptoms of the disease disappeared. I can now talk plainly, my leg is all right and I can do my housework. How grateful I am to be cured by so wonderful a remedy."

Notwithstanding the mystery that is associated with the nerves and disease of the nerves there is nothing mysterious about the way in which the vitality of the nerves is restored by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

In nature are found certain elements which go directly to form new, rich blood and create new nerve force. Because Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is composed of those very elements of nature, it builds up the nervous system as no preparation was ever known to do.

By enriching and purifying the blood it forms new, firm flesh and tissue, rounds out the form, restores a healthful glow to the complexion, and gradually but naturally and certainly replaces weakness and disease with health, strength and vitality.

HIGH RENT FOR GOOD LIGHT

Diamond Dealers Spare No Expense to Show Their Gems.

Diamond cutting is probably the only manufacturing industry in New York that can afford a location in the heart of the financial district.

The workshop here is said to be superior to that of the Amsterdam and Antwerp factories in the mathematical accuracy with which the facets of large stones are cut. New York, consequently, sends cut stones to Europe, besides supplying the United States.

The bulk of the New York diamond trade, including a considerable amount of the cutting, is done in Maiden lane, between Broadway and Nassau street, a single block. Most of the dealers occupy offices in modern skyscrapers.

To show their gems they need a clear, steady light, which in the case of natural light is afforded only by a northern exposure; hence, offices on the lower side of Maiden lane cost 20 to 25 per cent more than offices on the upper side.

The difference in rent would be still greater but for the fact that courts admitting northern light are provided in the buildings that face the south. Artificial light may also be used.

One house shows gems in a room draped with black velvet and lighted by electricity. Its natural light was ruined by the erection of a yellow brick building on the opposite side of the street, the reflection from which gives an inferior color to the purest stones.

Maiden lane rents are higher even than Broadway rents, reaching $4.75 a square foot per annum for offices just above the ground floor.—Washington Post.

Hudson Bay.

Referring to place names reminds one that the care of the Hudson Bay Co. in seeing that its title is spelled as above has led countless people to refer to Canada's inland sea as Hudson's Bay. It is no more Hudson's Bay than certain other natural features are Hudson's River, or Mackenzie's River. The proper name is Hudson Bay. It is so on the authorized maps and in the standard geographies, and it is specifically so designated by the authority for settling such matters in Canada, the Geographical Board. Gentle reader! don't let people delude you with the idea that to "speak proper" you must say Hudson's Bay.

The Separator In Missouri.

The hand cream separator is a very potent factor in Missouri dairying. It came slowly at first, but of late very rapidly. It has come to stay and has brought additional prosperity with it. Any man with ten ordinary cows who is where he can patronize a creamery, either centralized or local, cannot afford to be without one. The extra cream saved in one year over the deep can or crock system will usually pay for the machine, and the machine if treated decently will last for ten or fifteen years. There are half a dozen makes of separators on the market. Competition has forced them all to become good and stay good. The farm separator is now to the dairy farmer what the twine binder is to the grain farmer. It is possible to cut grain with a cradle, but it would not pay to do it in that way. The milk producer can make some money in the old way of raising cream, but it does not pay.—R. M. Washburn in Kimball's Dairy Farmer.

Didn't Belong to Colorado.

In the early days of Leadville there was a singular character living by the name of Major Martin McGinnis. The major was the important man of the camp, and when any distinguished parties came to the city they were received by Major Martin McGinnis and presented with the freedom of the camp on a gold plate. The French government sent three mining engineers over to examine and to report upon the mineral deposits of this locality. They were received by Major Martin McGinnis, who put them in carriages and took them around the camp. As they were going up California gulch the Frenchmen suddenly jumped out of the carriage and commenced to hammer and chisel upon a large black bowlder that lay alongside the road. The major watched them gesticulating to one another, and he finally said to the interpreter: "What do they mean? What are they talking about?" The interpreter said, "They say that rock don't belong here." The major said: "The deuce it don't! You say to those foreigners that I won't stand for them coming over here and running down our country. Tell them that they can find anything anywhere in Colorado."

The Frenchmen were right, however, for this black rock was a meteor and had fallen from the skies.

Hot Soda Baths.

Hot soda baths are recommended by some persons for rheumatism, and the way they are taken is this: Fill the tub half full of water as hot as can be borne, add half a pound of common baking soda and immerse the body for at least twenty minutes, keeping up the temperature by the addition of hot water from time to time. Vaseline or cold cream should be rubbed into the skin after the latter has been dried in order to replace the natural oil.

"Tippecanoe" Harrison.

General Harrison cultivated the friendliest spirit with all of his frontier soldiers, wore a buckskin jacker, was the keenest of woodsmen and in moments of leisure made real companions of his men. He could swing an ax, hunt the deer or coon, and he shot with the best. His homely, hardy ways won their love as his daring stimulated their courage. For half a century he was the archetype of pioneers, as Lincoln came to be to the generation that came after. Even yet the magic word of "Tippecanoe" will stir the reminiscences of many octogenarians in the middle west.—Lynn Tew Sprague in Outing Magazine.

Papyrus.

The papyrus used by the ancient Egyptians was made from the stems of a peculiar water reed growing in all parts of Egypt. The outside layer of the plant was removed, and beneath this there were found a number of layers of a delicate, pithy membrane. These, being separated, were placed in layers. A second layer was laid at right angles to and above the first and sometimes a third over the second. Heavy pressure was then applied, and the layers were firmly cemented into a fair article of paper. No gum other than what was contained in the plant itself was used in the process. The papyrus was very much stronger than the average paper made by the modern machines. The sheets were commonly made from six to twelve inches square.

Zoroastrian Rites.

Zoroaster enjoined purity of body as well as of soul, and the Avesta prescribes very elaborate ablutions and lustrations to remove any defilement. The greatest pollution is that which arises from contact with anything dead, as death is the creation of Ahriman and his greatest triumph over the power of Ormazd. The code of the Vendidad assigns the "nine nights' ablution" for the purification of persons so polluted. It consists in a series of sprinklings with holy water and other liquid, accompanied by a wearisome amount of ceremonial detail, to exorcise the spirit of defilement. The Greek writer Lucian in one of his humorous dialogues seems to ridicule this purificatory rite when he says that the Magi in nine nights cleansed Pythagoras of all his sins in life.—A. V. The Real Trouble.

The other afternoon a man rushed into the Reading terminal, galloped up the stairs and dashed for the train shed just as the gates were closed against him.

He looked as if he wanted to swear most vociferously, but he was out of wind, and all that he could do was to lean against the fence and soulfully sigh. It was then that the grinful idiot, who is always on hand, paced over and butted in.

"Did you miss your train, old boy?" he queried, with a smiling glance at the panting one.

"No," was the grouchy rejoinder. "I chase myself up here that way every five minutes to see them shut the gates."

"What made you so late?" queried the other, not at all abashed. "Is your watch out of order?"

"No, my watch is all to the good," replied the man who missed the train, "but I think that my feet are about two minutes slow."

How to Cleanse the System.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of scientific study of the effects of extracts of certain roots and herbs upon the digestive organs. Their use has demonstrated in many instances that they regulate the action of the liver and the kidneys, purify the blood, and carry off all morbid accumulations from the system. They are easy to take and their action is mild and beneficial.

Gathorne Hardy, first earl of Cranbrook (who was twice secretary of war and lord president of the council) died last week at Hemstead Park. The deceased was the first earl, the title having been created in 1882.

EACH MEAL AN AGONY.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Cure Obstinate Indigestion After Other Medicines Fail.

"When I was first troubled with indigestion I did not bother with it, I thought it would pass away naturally. But instead of doing so it developed into a painful chronic affection, which in spite of all I did grew worse and worse until I had abandoned all hopes of ever getting relief." These words of Mrs. Charles McKay, of Norwood, N.S., should serve as a warning to all who suffer distress after meals, with palpitation, drowsiness and loss of appetite—early warning of more serious trouble to follow.

"I used to rise in the morning," said Mrs. McKay, "feeling no better for a night's rest. I rapidly lost flesh and even after the most frugal meal I always suffered severe pains in my stomach. I cut my meals down to a few mouthfuls, but even then every morsel of food caused agony, my digestion was so weak. Some days I was so weak I could scarcely drag myself about the house, and I was never free from sharp piercing pains in the back and chest. I grew so bad that I had to limit my diet to milk and soda water, and even this caused severe suffering. In vain I sought relief—all medicines I took seemed useless. But in the darkest hour of my suffering help came. While reading a newspaper I came across a cure that was quite similar to my own case, wrought by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I thought if another person had been cured by these pills of such suffering as I was experiencing, surely there was hope for me, and I at once sent to the druggist for a supply of these pills. The first indication that the pills were helping me was the disappearance of the feeling of oppression. Then I began to take solid food with but little feeling of distress. I still continued taking the pills with an improvement every day, until I could digest all kinds of food without the least trouble or distress. I am in splendid health to-day and all the credit is due to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills go right to the root of indigestion and other troubles by making rich, red blood which tones and strengthens every organ of the body. That is why they cure anaemia, with all its headaches and backaches and sideaches, rheumatism and neuralgia and the special ailments of growing girls and women of all ages. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Civil Crown.

The civil crown was a Roman honor given to the soldier who saved the life of a citizen by slaying an enemy.

Vulgarity So Irish Trait.

There are certain nations that have the quality of vulgarity strongly in the blood, and indeed it seems to testify to a strong and full blooded vitality, a desire for self assertion, and thus we may expect to find vulgarity dogging like a shadow the footsteps of strong, capable and pushing nationalities. But there are certain nations that have been accused of many faults that yet have never been accused of being vulgar. The Irish are a case in point. They have been accused of levity, of undue conviviality, of frivolity, of a tendency to romance, of untrustworthiness, of irresponsibility, but they have never been accused of vulgarity. There lies deep in the Celtic temperament a rich vein of emotion, a strong relish for the melancholy side of life. It is on this that their incomparable sense of humor is based, and it may be said that no one who feels at home with melancholy, who luxuriates in the strange contrast between the possibilities and the performances of humanity, is in any danger of vulgarity, for one of the essential components of vulgarity is a complacent self satisfaction, and if a man is apt to dwell regretfully on what might have been rather than cheerfully upon what is there is but little room for complacency.—A. The byssus, or silky beard, by which the mussel moors itself to the stone, is a familiar object of our sea rocks. It is in its nature like the silk of the silkworm and exudes in a glutinous thread from an organ at the base of the foot. The following is an instance in which the mooring of the mussel was useful to effect a purpose which human skill could not accomplish: A large bridge, with twenty arches, in the town of Biddeford, in Devonshire, crosses the Torridge river near the spot of its junction with the Taw. The tide flows so very rapidly here that it was found impossible to keep the bridge in repair by means of mortar. The corporation therefore keeps boats employed in bringing mussels to it, and the interstices of the bridges are filled by hand with these mussels. It is supported from being driven away by the tide entirely by the strong threads which these mussels fix to the stonework, and by an act or grant it is a crime liable to transportation for any person to remove the mussels unless in the presence and by the consent of the corporative trustees.

Where Weakness is, Disease Will Settle.—If one suffers from any organic weakness, inherited or contracted, there disease will settle when it attacks the body. Therefore drive out the pains that beset you, do not let a cold or cough harass you, and keep the respiratory organs in good healthy condition. This you can do by using Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Prevention is the wisest course.

Select as far as possible females which conform to the standard of excellence of the breed. If this is accomplished it will insure a uniformity in type that is highly desirable. If in addition to this it is possible to select cows and heifers that are similarly bred they will be more likely to produce uniformity in their offspring.

THERE have been fortunes made by judicious investment in Real Estate, and more fortunes will be made than ever the next two or three years. The one who reaps the harvest is the original investor, for he has his money on a certainty.

Now let us point out to you that there is no better spot on the Continent to buy Real Estate than TROUT LAKE.

Trout Lake is the prettiest spot in the Kootenays; as a pleasure resort it has no equal. Boating and fishing may be indulged in the year round; while big game in abundance is to the found on the hills. Its climate is superb, there being no great extremes, it being mild in winter and cool in summer. It can boast of some of the finest hotels and residences in British Columbia. Its streets are well laid out and graded. There are two excellent general stores, and a glance at the advertisements in this journal will show that all trades are fairly well represented. IT has never had a "boom"—its growth has been steady. It is the head of navigation, and the terminal of the Lardo branch of the C.P.R. All roads (in the Lardeau) lead to Trout Lake. It is the commercial centre of the richest mineral district on the continent, and has banking facilities provided by the Imperial Bank of Canada; first class school accommodation under the direction of S. Shannon, B.A.; a good water system; government offices; County Court sittings; Methodist Episcopal and Anglican churches and cottage hospital.

There are valuable ranch lands on the outskirts awaiting settlers. Its lumber resources are magnificent, and a band saw mill with a capacity of 60,000 ft. per day is at the head of the lake. The mines tributary are proving out bigger producers every year, with new prospects opening up rich bodies of ore.

There will be a big rush this year, so if you would know more, write at once to either of the agents at the addresses below.
