An exhaustive bulletin on the production of hogs in Canada for the British bacon trade is ready for distribution from the office of the Live Stock Commissioner at Ottawa. It is divided into fourteen parts each dealing with a section of the bacon industry. The bulletin is No. 10 of the Live Stock Branch. Copies may be secured free by application to the Live Stock Commissioner, Ottawa, Canada. Besides the personal experience of the Live Stock Commission and members of his staff, very reliable source of information within reach was drawn upon in securing data for the bulletin. The bulletin points out that the bacon industry of Canada worth some $13.000.000 per year is worthy of the earnest support of the farmers of Canada.

OUR PRICES ARE RIGHT

Dentistry as we practice it is a serious profession, involving education, carefulness and skill. Therefore we can not compete in prices with the ignorant, the careless or the unskillful. Comparison will show, however, that we charge less than half as much as most private practioners.

But you ask, Is the work as good? We reply, it is better Indeed, no dentist who tries to practice all the different branches of dentistry can achieve such magnificent results as we do with our corps of skilled specialists

WOOD.—Fir Edgings or Slabs, 3 loads for $5, single load $2. Telephone 2434.

The St. Michael's Minstrel Juvenile Minstrel Troupe drew a large audience on Tuesday evening, in fact the Oddfellows' Hall was packed to the doors. There were sixteen in the circle; Mr. Gilbert Boult was the Interlocutor and Messrs. J. Birmingham, Bob Williams, Ben Moyles, Ben Brandrith were the End Men. The costumes were red and white and rather attractive. Songs and jokes were well intewoven during the first part, and second part consisted of a comedy sketch. The choruses were sung tunefully and with spirit throughout, showing good training. The only hitch occurred with the curtain which refused to come down at the end of the first part and caused some amusement. Masters Dave Homewood, Guard Bennett and Sydney rendered their solos in fine style and were heartily encored. The solos by Messrs. Ben Moyles, J. Birmingham and Bob Williams were well sung and each received an encore. Miss Dorothy Parr was the accompanist and proved a clever pianist. The vocal selections were as follows:

Opening chorus, "The Lime Kiln Band."
Song, "Ida Sweet as Apple Cider," J. Birmingham.
Song, "Has Anybody Seen Our Cat," J. Birmingham.
Song, "My Dusky Rose," Master Guard Bennett.
Song, "My Honeysuckle Girl," R. Williams.
Song, "Hiarm Green," B. Moyles.
Song, "When Mammy Rocks Her Little Picks to Sleep," Master Sydney Curtis.
Song, "Moving Day," J. Birmingham.
Song, "My Lindy Lu," Master David Homewood.
Song, "Where the Swanee River's Twining," B. Moyles.
Song, "Let Him Who is Without Sin Cast the First Stone," J. Birmingham.
Final chorus, "Rocking in the Wind."

Barclay—Hatch.

The marriage of Mr. Lorne J. Barclay, Foreman of White & Bindon's Printing Department, and Miss Sara Harriet Hatch, daughter of Mrs. S. Hatch of Thirteenth avenue, took place Wednesday morning at the home of the bride's mother. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. McGee. Miss Florrie Hatch, a niece of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, while the groom was supported by his brother Mr. W. G. Barclay. The ceremony took place under a floral arch, and in the presence of the immediate relatives of the contracting couple. The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of cream silk crepe de chine, trimmed with lace and chiffon. She wore the customary bridal veil and orange blossoms, and carried a handsome boquet.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served. The newly married couple left on a honeymoon trip to Portland and Sound Cities.

The groom's present to the bride was an "Art Bell" piano, and to the bridesmaid a gold locket and chain. Mr. and Mrs. Barclay are both well-known and active workers in fraternal circles, and the many handsome and costly presents they received testified to the esteem in which they are held by a wide circle of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Barclay will reside on Sixth avenue near Ontario street.

Linked by Fate

BY CHARLES GARVICE

Author of "The Verdict of the Heart," "A Heritage of Hate," "Nell of Shorne Mills," "Paid For," "A Modern Juliet," Etc.

The talk ran its course in the light, desultory manner of table-talk, and Lady Fanworthy, in her black silk and priceless lace, leant back with the serenity of the hostess when her dinner is going well, and looked thoughtfully at Vane with the expression in her keen eyes which Lady Letchford had noticed.

Presently Sir Chandos Orme's thin falsetto voice was heard in a moment of silence.

"Dropped in at the Momus last night," he said: he had run up to Town to interview his beauty-doctor the day before. "They're going well and strong. Was in time for that first piece: deuced clever! Harcourt I went behind to—er—see a man I know—told me that he's commissioned the author to write a comedy; and Harcourt expects a big success with it."

"Quite a new man, and very young, isn't he?" said Julian.

"Quite a boy. His name's Herbert Wood," replied Sir Chandos, signing to France to fill his glass—for the fourth time—"and a crimple. Harcourt hasn't seen him yet. He's a friend of the Polly Bainford who's made such a hit in the first piece; and Harcourt communicates with him through her."

"Quite mysterious and—stagey," murmured Judith Orme. "You remember the piece, Lord Lesborough?"

"Yes, quite well, what I saw of it," said Vane. "I should think the author would write a very good comedy. We must all go and see it."

"I say, Shore," said Sir Chandos with the flickering of the eyelids and the twitching of the lips which always followed his fourth glass of champagne, "I had a regular fright just now."

Julian raised his eyes. "Metaphorically speaking, of course," he said. "You were in the Seventy-second, Sir Chandos?"

Sir Chandos showed his perfectly constructed teeth.

"By gad, yes; we weren't easily frightened. But I give you my word I was—well, rather startled. I was coming down from my room the short way—a little late"—he smiled and bowed to Lady Fanworthy—"and I ran up against the most extraordinary looking person. She didn't seem to hear me, when I came behind her, and when she turned—well, outside Madame Tussaud's I've never seen anything like her. A walking corpse, by George! And I fancy she must be deaf and dumb, for when I apologized for running against her she just turned and looked at me like—like a statue, touched her lips and ears and glided into that den of yours. Who is she, eh?"

Julian watched France fill his glass and stopped him when it was half full, before he replied, quite casually:

"She is an old servant of mine. Her name is Deborah. I'm sorry she startled you."

"Oh, that's all right," said Sir Chandos, but grudgingly. "But you must have a queer fancy. If she belonged to me I should send her to Barnum & Bailey's."

"I'm sure you would," said Julian so smoothly that there was a general laugh.

"The fact is," said Vane, with a nod and a smile at Julian, "no one but an old and faithful servant would stand the awful smells of Julian's den."

"You go in for chemistry, I understand, Shore?" said Lord Lisle. "A most interesting study. I used to dabble in it, but quite unprofessionally. What branch have you taken up?"

Julian shrugged his shoulders; the slight shrug which hinted at his Spanish blood. "Oh, well," he replied, modestly, "I am trying to find a new color."

"Really! How interesting! How clever you must be!" exclaimed the young girl. "I hope it will be a nice color, one that will suit us ladies."

"Any color I am fortunate enough to discover will possess that virtue," he retorted with a slight bow.

"One of these days Julian will awake to find himself famous," said Vane; "and in quite a new line for the Mannerings. I don't think any of them has come out strong as a scientist."

"I should so like to see your—laboratory; is that the right name?" said the young girl.

"Julian smiled at her indulgently. "So you shall; whenever you please; though there is very little to see."

"Take my advice, Miss Limmington, and—don't," said Vane. "You'll see nothing but pots and pans in a variety of glass and iron; and you will be assailed by a smell that will haunt you more than any ghost you have at the Grange."

"Lord Lesborough's advice is good, I assure you," said Julian with a charming frankness and modesty.

Lady Fanworthy, who had been listening to the conversation with a non-committal smile and drooped lids, looked up and around the table, gave the sign which every woman at once sees, and no man ever notices, and the ladies rose and followed her to the drawing-room.

Vane gathered the men round him and sent about the claret-jug and crardled port, and set an example by lighting his old briar—the briar which he had smoked on the Fairy Isle. The conversation promptly took a sporting direction, and Vane bore his share of it; but every now and then he became preoccupied and absent-minded, and presently he said:

"Won't any one take any more wine? Orme?"

When they entered the drawing-room, Judith was at the piano playing in the soft, indolent fashion in which women play while they are waiting for the men; and she stopped and looked mechanically at Julian, for, as usual, everybody wanted to hear him sing.

"Is it too soon after dinner, Julian?" said Vane with his hand on Julian's shoulder.

"No," he said, "if Miss Orme will play the accompaniment."

She looked at him, beyond him. "You usually play your own," she said.

"This is a new one," he said; "and I can't play at sight."

She sat down to the piano, with the faintest suggestion of resignation, and played the prelude, and he sang.

It was Pinsuti's "'Tis I," and he sang it—well, his rendering of the famous song would have satisfied even the composer. The conversation faltered and died out, and every one listened in a profound, an emotional silence.

"Oh, it is beautiful, beautiful!" murmured the young Miss Limmington. "What a lovely, lovely voice Mr. Shore has; and how exquisitely he sings!"

Vane, who happened to be near her, nodded perfect agreement.

"Yes; my cousin has a wonderful voice, hasn't he?" he said, warmly. "Ask him to sing 'Kathleen Mavourneen.' I shouldn't be surprised if he makes you cry."

Julian sang "Kathleen Mavourneen," and succeeded in bringing tears to the eyes of more than Miss Limmington.

"First rate; splendid!" said Sir Charles, with a half-defiant glance at his wife. "Sing us something else, Shore?"

But Julian courteously declined. With the Spanish shrug of the shoulders he left the piano and sauntered to the French windows, which had been left open, for the night was warm, and passed out on to the terrace. He thought that he was done, and he lit a cigarette and leant against the stone railing, his eyelids drooping, his long lashes sweeping his sallow cheek. Music excites the performer as well as the listener, and his heart was beating quickly. While he had been singing his eyes had rested upon Judith Orme's profile. From her beauty he had drawn the inspiration which had enabled him to move his hearers as they had been moved. And now his heart was aching for her, as it always ached the moment he was out of her sight. At first he had fought against the passion which had taken possession of him, had tried to argue himself out of it; but he had long ceased to struggle, and now surrendered himself as the demoniac surrenders to the spirit that enthrals it. And jealousy was adding another torture to that of unrequited love, for he had seen, almost on the first day, the day he had called on her with Vane, that she was in love with his cousin. Love makes the dullest man quick-witted and sharp-eyed where the woman he loves is concerned, and Julian had discovered that Judith was not heartless, as the world considered her, but that her heart had been given to Vane. Fate had willed that his cousin should not only step in between him and the Lesborough peerage, but that he should stand between him and the woman whom he loved with an absorbing passion which was nearly akin to madness.

With a gesture of despair he flung the end of his cigarette away and went towards the end of the terrace. As he was descending the steps he saw Sir Chandos Orme coming out of the smoking-room where he had been for the brandy-and-soda which pulled him together after his dinner. At the same moment there was the frou-frou of a woman's dress, and one of the ladies stepped on to the terrace from the drawing-room, and Julian heard Sir Chandos say, cautiously:

"Is that you, Judith?"

Julian went softly down the steps and stood under the terrace listening.

"Yes, father; do you want me?" replied Judith, coming towards him. They stopped almost immediately above Julian, so that he could hear every word, though both father and daughter spoke in a low voice.

"Yes," said Sir Chandos with a slight hiccough. "Look here, Judith, I want to talk to you. I'm getting anxious, uneasy. You don't seem to be making much of this game—now, don't be offended and turn away like that. I won't have it! I've been a good father to you—"

She laughed with a kind of weary scorn.

"I am listening," she said, coldly.

"Well, then, I'll go further and say you seem to me to be making a mess of it. We've been down here—how long is it?—and you are no 'forrader' than you were in London. I've got eyes in my head, of course, and I can see, anyone could see, that Lesborough isn't in the least smitten. The man seems to be like a block of ice, confound him! 'Pears to me you've completely lost your old power over him—"

She leant against the stone coping, her hands clasped tightly, her eyes fixed on the darkness.

—"Now don't go over the old ground and tell me it's my fault, that's all past and gone."

"I was not going to do so," she said in a low voice. "It would be useless."

"Quite so," he asserted. "Nothing is more painful than that kind of—of bickering between father and daughter, especially when they understand each other as you and I do. What I wanted to say was that, in my opinion, Lesborough isn't a marrying man, that he doesn't intend to marry; and that he intends this Julian Shore to succeed him here. You can't help observing this—the fuss Vane makes over the fellow."

CONSUMPTION OF LIQUOR.

Norway Is the Least Intemperate of All the Nations.

Americans are only moderate drinkers compared with those of other countries. The average citizen of the United States, counting in the women and children (which is not fair, but serves for the moment as a basis to figure upon), consumes in the course of a year liquors which contain one and a third gallons of pure alcohol. But the Frenchman, who, though formerly one of the soberest, has become the worst drunkard in the world, absorbs annually three and a half gallons of alcohol. The Belgian and the Swiss come next, with a consumption of two and four-fifths gallons. Then follow the Spaniard with two and a third gallons, the Italian with just a trifle less, the Englishman and German with two and a tenth, and the Austro-Hungarian with about one and three-quarters gallons.

On the other hand, the American citizen by no means stands at the top of the list in respect to sobriety. The Swede drinks only one and a sixth gallons of pure alcohol in a year; the Hollander drops considerably below him, with one gallon even; the relatively virtuous Russian, notwithstanding his much advertised addiction to vodka, absorbs only a trifle more than six-tenths of a gallon, and, finally, the Norwegian, who occupies a proud eminence as the most abstemious man in the world, barely exceeds a modest half gallon of the stuff in a twelvemonth's potations. It might be added for the sake of definiteness that the average person in the United States annually drinks one and a third gallons of proof spirits (which are 50 per cent alcohol), one-third of a gallon of wine and sixteen and a quarter gallons of malt liquors, chiefly beer.

ECSTASIES OF MECCA.

Mecca, at the season of the annual visitation of Mohammedan pilgrims, is thus described in Everybody's in "With the Pilgrims to Mecca," translated from the narrative of Ibu Jubayr Ali of Bandar Adas:

"Like a gigantic catafalque, somber, shrouded in mystery, the Kaaba rises out of the seething sea of white garbed humanity that crowds the great sacred square of Mecca. Its door is covered with plates of solid silver studded with silver nails. From the exterior of the roof, above a stone marking the sepulcher of Ishmael, which lies at the base of the northern wall, there projects a horizontal, semicircular rain spout five yards long, twenty-four inches wide, made of massive gold. Within the roof is supported by three columns of aloe wood; the walls are hung with red velvet alternating with white squares in which are written in Arabic the words, 'Allah-Jal-Jelalah' ('Praise to God, the Almighty!'). The building is packed with pilgrims, praying, weeping, beside themselves in an ecstasy of passionate devotion. Mingled with their voices there rises from outside the chant of the Talbih, the song of the winding sheet, which every pilgrim must sing on entering Mecca, on donning the sacred Ihram, on entering the Haram, and on starting for Mina, the valley of desire, and Arafat, the mountain of compassion."

Great In His Line.

Mr. Robert Barr once showed a portrait of Mark Twain to a silk merchant of Lyons. "Tell me who that is," Mr. Barr said. The merchant gazed at the portrait and answered, "I should say he was a statesman." "Supposing you wrong in that, what would be your next guess?" asked Mr. Barr. "If he is not a maker of history he is perhaps a writer of it; a great historian, probably. Of course it is impossible for me to guess accurately except by accident, but I use the adjective 'great' because I am convinced this man is great in his line, whatever it is. If he makes silk, he makes the best." Mr. Barr told the French merchant who the portrait represented and said, "You have summed him up in your last sentence."—London News.

Speaking of Ancestry.

Mr. Chase has such an exaggerated respect for the blue blood of Boston which runs in his veins that his manner is slightly patronizing. He was lately introduced to a Syrian of good birth and education who lives in this country.

"And may I inquire," he said blandly in the course of the conversation, "if you are of the Christian religion?"

"My family was converted to Christ's teaching at the time of John's second visit to Lebanon," quietly replied the Syrian.—Youth's Companion.

His Intellectual Size.

Cholly Nitwit—D'ye know, Miss Cutter, though I've only just met you, there seems to be a—er—sort of intellectual sympathy between us. You know just how to appeal to my tastes, you know. Are you a literary woman? Dolly Cutter—No, I'm a kindergarten teacher.

The Face.

If we could but read it every human being carries his life in his face and is good looking or the reverse as that life has been good or evil. On our features the fine chisels of thought and emotion are eternally at work.

Like the Stars.

She—You've been out every night since I married you, and you swore you would be as true as the stars above. He—Well, ain't the stars above out every night too?

Inveterate, organic mistrust is always the result of bad education or ignorance.—Raymond.

A Small Matter.

"Oui, madame is ill, but ze doctor half pronounce it something very trifling, very small," said the French maid to an inquiring friend.

"Oh, I am so relieved, for I was really anxious about her," replied the friend. "What does the doctor say the trouble is?"

"Let me recall. It was something very leetle," answered the French maid. "Oh, I have it now! Ze doctor says zat madame has ze smallpox."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Loss of Power To Digest Food

Among the First Indications of Exhausted Nerves--the Cure is

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

The most important function of the organs of the body is the digestion and assimilation of food, and in this process is consumed an enormous quantity of nervous energy.

As the result the moment disorders of the nerves arise, digestion is impaired and the very source of health, strength and vitality interfered with.

To prevent physical bankruptcy the nervous system must be built up by outside aid, such as the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, a preparation composed of the very elements of nature which go to form new blood and nerve cells.

Besides this restorative influence on the whole system, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has an immediate and direct effect on the digestive system.

It stimulates the nerves of taste and induces a good flow of saliva to aid digestion. It excites the glands of the stomach and produces a plentiful supply of the gastric digestive fluids. It sharpens the appetite and arouses hunger.

Especially where appetite and the ability to digest have diminished, as in nervous exhaustion, anaemia, the result of sickness, overwork, or worry, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is by all odds the most effective treatment that can possibly be obtained.

It ensures good digestion, regular healthful action of the liver, kidneys and bowels and the building up and revitalizing of the whole system.

Mrs. George Fuller, Lakeland, Man., writes: "I am very glad to be able to state that I have received great benefit from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. It has cured me of nervous headache from which I used to be a great sufferer, and I am no longer troubled with twitching of the nerves in the arms and legs that I used to have as soon as I went to bed. I am grateful for this cure and shall always recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to anyone suffering as I did."

PEDIGREES TO ORDER.

Thriving Trade In Coats of Arms, With Lineage to Fit Them.

With all our boasted democracy certain classes of Americans are as keen in their pursuit of notable ancestry which will entitle them to display coats of arms as the most snobbish aristocrat could be. An authority in heraldry made the statement awhile ago that only forty or fifty American families at the most are entitled to the insignia of nobility. But nobody can convince the average citizen who has 'made money" of any such thing, and that supports very comfortably a coterie of "genealogists" in New York, London and indeed many of the larger cities here and abroad, who make a business of discovering long lost relatives in the age of chivalry for worthy twentieth century descendants.

Genuine old armorial bearings in many cases represent puns or a play upon the family name in the design, which makes it comparatively easy to cut distinguished ancestry out of whole cloth, hall mark and all, and have the "fake" look passably "actual." For instance, the arms of Sir John Peche as they appear in a window of the chapel at Lullingstone, Kent, consist of two peach trees bearing fruit, an old English E being imprinted upon each peach. The Bacon escutcheon shows a boar and the Lamb family's three lambs.

This tendency is well illustrated among the American families which really have inherited coats of arms. The arms of the Standish family consist of three standing dishes, the Wheelocks of New Jersey display three Catherine wheels, while the Carters of Philadelphia have three cart wheels, and the emblem of the Astor family is a yellow aster. How a coat of arms may be utilized for decorative effect appears in the new Hotel Astor, which is one of the most sumptuously furnished of New York's great hostelries. In frescoes and wall hangings, lace and linen, rugs and carpets, on glassware, china and silver, the aster appears in every conceivable form, fitted to every possible scheme of design. This, too, is an ancient use adapted to modern usefulness.

When it is suggested that the use of family symbols is undemocratic the amateur in genealogy reminds us that Washington, John Adams, Livingston, Jay and many another Revolutionary champion of equal rights used a crest. Furthermore, there is a tradition, at least not disproved, that the most inveterate hater of monarchs, Oliver Cromwell, was having his own family tree looked through for titled ancestors at the time of his death.

A Mixed Costume.

It is said of the late Lord Salisbury that he once had to dress at breakneck speed for a levee and in the absence of his valet plunged at a heap of things and threw them on as they came. He appeared at court in the coat of the elder brethren of Trinity House, the trousers of a deputy lieutenant and a hat of the royal archers. Putting on the finishing touches before the mirror, he hung his sword upon the wrong side and gartered himself about the wrong knee. He had assumed a waistcoat made in days when he was of less ample girth, so that between the hem of this garment and the waist of the trousers was a gap which all but himself observed.

New Gold Theory.

Professor Frederick Soddy of Glasgow university holds the theory that gold is gradually disintegrating into other materials. He has visited the gold deposits of Western Australia and New Zealand, and he expresses his conviction that in all probability gold, like radium, is at once the product of some other parent element and is itself changing to produce "offspring" elements. The professor laments the inadequacy of his resources in the way of gold upon which to experiment and points to the tons of gold perhaps disintegrating in the vaults of the Bank of England.

Unfamiliar.

It is said that a candidate who was more famous for his interest in sport than his knowledge of politics was addressing a Scotch political meeting. Just to test the candidate's ignorance a schoolmaster sent up a slip of paper asking his opinion of the Decalogue.

The candidate was utterly puzzled and turned to some one on the platform and asked him what the Decalogue was. The man on the platform, being something of a wag, whispered in his reply, "Flogging in the army."

The candidate at once turned to the meeting and said, "I would, if elected, certainly do away with the Decalogue at once. But, gentlemen, let me ask you to write all questions in good, plain Scots language, for there are no foreigners here!"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

LINCOLN'S DISPOSITION.

Ordinarily Cheerful, It Held a Strain of Deep Melancholy.

Hopeful and cheerful as he ordinarily seemed, there was in Mr. Lincoln's disposition a strain of deep melancholy. This was not peculiar to him alone, for the pioneers as a race were somber rather than gay. Their lives had been passed for generations under the most trying physical conditions, near malaria infested streams and where they breathed the poison of decaying vegetation. Insufficient shelter, storms, the cold of winter, savage enemies and the cruel labor that killed off all but the hardiest of them had at the same time killed the happy-go-lucky gayety of an easier form of life. They were thoughtful, watchful, wary; capable, indeed, of wild merriment, but it has been said that although a pioneer might laugh he could not easily be made to smile. Lincoln's mind was unusually sound and sane and normal. He had a cheerful, wholesome, sunny nature, yet he had inherited the strongest traits of the pioneers, and there was in him, moreover, much of the poet, with a poet's capacity for joy and pain. It is not strange that as he developed into manhood, especially when his deeper nature began to feel the stirrings of ambition and of love, that these seasons of depression and gloom came upon him with overwhelming force.—Helen Nicolay in St. Nicholas.

THE BARK OF TREES.

Nature's Provision For the Relief of the Growing Plant.

The practical cultivator understands that nature makes provision for getting rid of the bark of trees as the trunk increases in size. On the growth of the past season may be seen small olive spots. These are formations of cork. From year to year, in subsequent development, these little patches spread, really eating their way through the bark. This is the provision which nature makes for finally rifting the bark in each species of plant. These cork cells have their own special lines of development, and this is the reason why each kind of tree has its own particular bark. The characteristics are so prominent that clever observers can select different kinds of trees by their bark even at midnight. As it is the evident intention of nature to get rid of old bark, it is a great help to the tree to assist nature in this respect, and any wash or treatment which aids the plant in getting rid of it is a practical advantage. Soapy water wash or lye water is useful, and even scraping has been found of great advantage. In a rough sort of way lime wash is frequently used, the only objection being the white and glaring color. It is, however, the cheapest and the best of all bark treatment.

THE USEFUL YAWN.

This Lung Ventilating Process Serves a Double Purpose.

The act of yawning is distinctly beneficial in two ways. In the first place it serves the purpose of lung ventilation. The lungs are not filled or exhausted by ordinary respiration. There is a certain quantity of air which physiologists call "residual air" left in the recesses of the lungs after the ordinary respiration. This in time becomes vitiated and affects the blood and, through it, the nervous centers.

The result is a yawn, which is really a stretching of the respiratory chamber to its fullest capacity and the filling of it with freshly inspired air which drives the vitiated air out. Yawning is also beneficial in so far as it opens, stretches and ventilates the vocal, nasal and auditory chambers in immediate connection with the mouth.

The cracking sound often heard when yawning is due to the stretching and opening of the eustachian tubes, which form a communication between the middle ear and the back of the throat. The deafness which often accompanies a cold is due to the congestion of these tubes.—London Hospital.

Postponed.

A bashful young couple who were evidently very much in love entered a crowded street car in Boston the other day. "Do you suppose we can squeeze in here?" he asked, looking doubtfully at her blushing face.

"Don't you think, dear, we had better wait until we get home?" was the ow, embarrassed reply.

The Clock.

The clock has a strange way of telling different tales with the same face. If it is telling one man to hurry up, it tells the next man who looks that there is plenty of time.

Realism.

Because the girl's parasol is red.
The cow, in fact, is purple with rage.

Heroines, Old and New.

Most modern heroines are married women, whereas the nice ones in Shakespeare and in novels before 1890 were almost always unwedded maids. You like Beatrice and Portia and, above all things, Rosalind. You do not lose your heart to Lady Macbeth (though a fine figure of a woman), and you do not desire to compete with Othello in the affections of Desdemona. This may be a too nice morality, but to Victorian taste even widows, in novels at least, come under the ban of the elder Mr. Weller. Nobody but Colonel Esmond ever cared for Lady Castlewood, and Dobbin is alone in his passion for Amelia.—Andrew Lang in London Post.

Cost of London's Crime.

London is paying the penalty paid by all large cities. Crime is inside her gates. In round numbers she has to pay nearly $8,000,000 to keep criminals in check, for that is the sum paid out to her police, courts, prisons and prosecuting officers. It fails to include stolen property, losses due to the idleness of criminals, losses to injured parties, etc.

Serious crimes, such as burglary, housebreaking, counterfeiting, etc., are increasing.

Arrests are more frequent than formerly, and each arrest adds to the expense and loss account of the city. Estimates put the bill of the city's expenses as high as $10,000,000.

In other words, each taxpayer or head of a household of five persons pays $6.81 a year for London's crime. Nor do these millions make up the total loss. There are the hundreds of thousands taken, consumed by the criminals, hidden away, lost or destroyed. Add then to these the amounts paid by private parties to prevent burglary, etc., watchmen, caretakers, burglar alarms, door and window fastenings, safes, revolvers, life protectors, dogs, etc., and one begins to get a fairly good idea of what are the losses due to crime in a large city.

A table prepared in London puts the police and courts down for $9,149,000, the prisons for $583,980, lost property for $1,216,625, loss of injuries, assaults, for $1,216,625, loss by injuries, assaults, inals, etc., $1,167,960 or a total of $13,090,885. These appalling figures cover often only the well known items.

Edward the Confessor.

Edward the Confessor, the last king of England but one before the Norman conquest, was so called because of his piety, his meditative turn of mind and his devotion to religious duties. He is said to have been better fitted by character and natural temperament for the life of a Norman monastery than for that of king of England.

A Sure Cure for Headache.—Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

In British Columbia the dry season affected the output of placer gold. The Yukon continued to fall off, and will do so until under more favorable conditions the permanent forms of mining lower grade bodies of gravel are fully established. British Columbia and Ontario, since the development of mining at Cobalt, are now credited with 98 per cent. of the silver produced in Canada.

Medicines.

"There is a singular idea that prevails among many people that if a little is a good thing more is better," said a physician, "and an incalculable amount of harm is done. There are cases where a little quinine does good, and the patient, instead of going to a physician and finding out how much he wants, buys a quantity at a drug store and takes so much that it is a positive detriment. When persons have been sick and obtained a prescription, they imagine they know just what to do the next time they are ailing and increase the dose, often with most disastrous results. The careless use of medicine by those not familiar with its consequences causes more trouble than almost any other source of ailment to which the human body is subject."

A SPRING TONIC.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Make Rich, Red, Health-Giving Blood.

Cold winter months, enforcing close confinement in over-heated, badly ventilated rooms—in the home, in the shop, and in the school—sap the vitality of the strongest. The blood becomes clogged with impurities, the liver sluggish, the kidneys weakened sleep is not restful—you awake just as tired as when you went to bed; you are low-spirited, perhaps have headache and blotchy skin—that is the condition of thousands of people every spring. It comes to all unless the blood is fortified by a good tonic—by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills not only banish this feeling but they guard against the more serious ailments which usually follow—rheumatism, nervous debility, anaemia, indigestion and kidney trouble. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an ideal spring medicine. Every dose makes new, rich, red blood. Every drop of new blood helps to strengthen the overworked nerves. Overcomes weakness and drives the germs of disease from the body. A thorough treatment gives you vim and energy to resist the torrid heat of the coming summer. Mr. Mack A. Meuse, Sluice Point, N.S., says: "I was so completely run down that I could hardly work. I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, as I had heard them highly spoken of, and a few boxes worked a great change in my condition. I am again feeling as well and strong as ever I did and can recommend the pills to all weak people."

It is a mistake to take purgatives in the spring. Nature calls for a medicine to build up the wasted force—purgatives only weaken. It is a medicine to act on the blood, not one to act on the bowels, which is necessary. Dr. Williams Pink Pills are a blood medicine—they make pure, rich, red blood, and strengthen every organ of the body. M. E. NICHOLS.

M. E. NICHOLS.
Editor-in Chief, Telegram, Winnipeg, Canada.

That the Canadian West is not only the country of opportunity but the country of young men, the prominent positions held by many in the Province of Manitoba, who are in the first years of the fourth decade of their lives afford ample evidence. No more striking example could be given than that of the success met with by Mr. M. E. Nichols, President of the Telegram Printing Company and Editor-in-chief of the daily paper published by that company. Mr. Nicholls is not a western man in so far as years of residence may be counted, but he is western in his trend of mind, his virility, his energy, his independence of thought and fearlessness of expression unrestrained by the fact that he is a loyal and leading exponent of the views of a great political party in Western Canada.

Mr. Nichols has only been a resident of the Canadian West for a short time but his career and work are familiar to the readers of the public press throughout the Dominion. There have been few Canadian Parliamentary correspondents who have contributed brighter or better informal articles to the papers they represented in the Press Gallery at Ottawa than Mr. Nichols during the numerous sessions of the Dominion House in which he represented the Toronto Telegram. To Mr. Nichols may be given the credit of introducing into Canadian parliamentary correspondence the bright style which in now demanded, containing not only departmental news, quasi-editorial comment and picturesque description, but also the personal note as to the parliamentary characters that had hitherto appeared in the public eye of the Dominion merely through a verbatim or curtailed report of a speech. The clever, racy communications of Mr. Nichols to the Toronto Telegram during the Parliamentary sessions at Ottawa became a feature of that paper during the years he was the Ottawa correspondent of that newspaper.

Upon Mr. Nichols becoming Editor-in-chief and the principal editorial writer on the Toronto World the same clever brightness distinguished his style that had given him his reputation as a special correspondent. In close touch for years with Canada's greatest Parliamentarians and public men on the vantage ground of special correspondence at the Dominion capital, compelled in the course of his calling to follow the progress of measures of the greatest moment in their passage and in the debates of parliament, Mr. Nichols obtained a political and personal knowledge of public affairs that has served him well as an editorial writer.

Mr. Nichols' ability was recognized by that astute Parliamentarian and newspaper man Mr. W. F. Maclean, M.P., President of the World Publishing Company, and a few years ago he was tendered the position of managing editor of "The Toronto World." His success in that position as editor of the leading Independent Conservative daily in the publishing centre of Canada is a feature of Canadian journalism and attracted the attention of the leading Conservatives of Manitoba and the shareholders of the Winnipeg Telegram.

Mr. Nichols shrewdly saw the opportunities offered a young man as managing editor of a great Conservative organ in Western Canada and the desirability of financial investment in such an enterprise and he became Editor-in-chief of the Telegram and President of the Telegram Printing Company. In the few months that he has had editorial charge the evidence of his personality and his newspaper acumen has become apparent and the Telegram is considered one of the brightest as well as one of the best informed daily papers published in the Dominion.

Mr. Nichols is a young man to hold such a responsible and important position in Canadian journalism, probably the youngest man in Canada in a similarly important position but if this is the age of the young man Western Canada is peculiarly his country.

He was born in Halton County in the Province of Ontario on February 11, 1873, his father being a native of the state of New York who came to Canada in 1825 and settled first in the Niagara District and afterwards in the Township of Trafalgar in Halton County, where he died in 1898.

Mr. Nichols' mother was a native of Tyrone County, Ireland. Educated at the Public and High School of his native county he for two years taught school in the County of Grey a training considered by many as invaluable to those who subsequently assume managerial authority in the business world.

In 1895 Mr. Nichols began his journalistic life as a reporter on the Toronto Telegram. During the Dominion Parliamentary session of 1897 he went to Ottawa as sessional correspondent of the Telegram and continued to represent that paper until January 1903 when he became Editor of the Toronto World. This position he occupied until October 1905 when he resigned to accept the management of the Winnipeg Telegram.

Mr. Nichols has the advantage of being an all-round newspaper man, having occupied every position on a daily paper from junior reporter to managing editor. During his newspaper career he has had several important assignments of national and international interest among which was the meeting of the Anglo-American Commission which convened first at Quebec and later at Washington.

An Anglican in religion he married in March, 1905, Miss Dora Wood, daughter of Senator Wood, of Sackville, New Brunswick.

In politics Mr. Nichols is a conservative and a member of the Albany Club, Toronto. He is also a member of the Masonic Order, Ionic Lodge, A.F. & A.M., Toronto.

A Popular Route.

The popularity of the Canadian Northern line as a short and direct route between Winnipeg and Edmonton is evidenced by the large passenger traffic being handled by this road. The increasing business is not alone confined to local traffic. The solid through trains to Edmonton carry through first-class sleepers and dining cars serving meals a la carte. This train is a marvel of travelling comfort, gratifying every demand of the tourist and pleasure-seeker. The line runs through a newly-settled and picturesque portion of the Canadian West, which is now attracting the attention of thousands of home seekers, as well as of the shrewd investor. Prince Arthur of Connaught will patronize this line in travelling from Edmonton to Winnipeg, which will afford His Highness an opportunity of viewing the richest agricultural lands of the Canadian West. The fares between Winnipeg and Edmonton and other stations on the Canadian Northern have been reduced, and parties contemplating a trip should consult any Canadian Northern agent for full particulars which will at all times be gladly furnished.

THE CARE OF CHILDREN.

Nowadays wise mothers do not dose their children with harsh griping castor oil or purgatives, nor do they give them poisonous opiates in the form of so-called soothing medicines. Baby's Own Tablets take the place of these harsh and dangerous medicines, and the mother has the word of a government analyst that the Tablets are absolutely safe. Baby's Own Tablets cure indigestion, constipation, colic, teething troubles, diarrhoea, simple fevers and other little ills of childhood. An occasional dose will keep children well. Mrs. R. E. Long, Peachland, B.C., says: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets unsurpassed for teething troubles, breaking up colds, reducing fevers, and other ills, and they make a child sleep naturally. I now always keep them in the house." Ask for the Tablets at your druggist or you can get them by mail from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., at 25 cents a box.

Young Men in Business.

The very struggle to keep one's head above water and guard against failure, hard times, or panics, the constant effort to stretch a little capital over a large business and adjust means to ends, develops managing ability, leadership, staying power, stamina, and grit which no amount of working for others in an ordinary situation could ever produce. It is the spur of necessity constantly pushing us on, putting our powers to the test, and calling upon all our ingenuity and inventiveness and originality—it is the situation that forces us to a perpetual effort to bring things out right—that develops power. We grow most in a situation that forces us to think, study and plan ways and means of engineering our business or enterprise. A young man entering business with little capital, in these days of giant combinations, like a soldier in battle who is reduced to his last few cartridges, must be doubly careful of his aim and doubly zealous in his endeavour, for everything is at stake. He must call into action every bit of judgment, courage, sagacity, resourcefulness, ingenuity, and originality he can muster. He must make every shot tell—every dollar count. What is the result? The young man begins to grow, he feels his master purpose prodding him to do his best; his mind is constantly being stretched over difficult problems; his ingenuity is taxed to make both ends meet, to provide for the coming bills, to pay pressing notes, to tide over a dull season, or to pull his business through hard times or a panic. This is like playing a great life game of chess, where everything depends upon a single move, and where the final result is success or failure. He cannot afford to make a bad move, a misstep might be fatal. He cannot afford to be careless, indifferent, or lazy. It will not do for him to be caught napping. He must be on the alert, watching for every advantage, and looking out for the enemies who would trip him.—Extracted from an article in Success.

Phonograph as a Witness.

The use of a phonograph as a witness ocurred for the first time on a recent trial in the United States court at Boston. In this connection it is recalled that photographs had to fight their way to the witness stand. The right to put telephone conversations in evidence has been upheld in some cases. If the use of the phonograph as a witness becomes general it will also become a universal memorandum. Contracts of all sorts, from a merger deal to a promise of marriage can be recorded as infallibly as on paper or parchment. In breach-of-promise cases, especially, a phonograph would be of great value.

CURE THE MOST EXTREME CASES

STONE IN THE KIDNEYS CANNOT STAND BEFORE DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Ottawa, Ont., March 26, (Special).—While all Canada knows that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the standard remedy for all Kidney Complaints, it may surprise some people to know they cure such extreme cases as Stone in the Kidneys. Yet that is what they have done right here in Ottawa.

Mr. S. A. Cassidy, the man cured, is the well-known proprietor of the Bijou hotel on Metcalf street, and in an interview he says: "My friends all know that I have been a martyr to Stone in the Kidneys for years. They know that besides consulting the best doctors in the city and trying every medicine I could think of, I was unable to get better.

"Some time ago a friend told me Dodd's Kidney Pills would cure me. As a last resort I tried them, and they have cured me.

"I could not imagine more severe suffering than one endures who has Stone in the Kidneys, and I feel the greatest gratitude to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Skulls for Paving.

While municipal authorities are deciding upon the relative value of asphalt, Belgian blocks, vitrified bricks, and wood squares as paving material, the inhabitants of Gwandu, in Africa, have settled the problem to their entire satisfaction by using the skulls of their enemies for paving approaches to their town. More than 1,200 skulls have been used on the roads leading to the various gates. Polished to the whiteness of ivory by the friction of countless feet, they present quite an attractive appearance. When a new pavement is needed there is no scandal about the contract. War is declared upon some neighboring tribe, and the worn-out pavement is replaced.—New York Globe.

An old cushion on which the Crown of Scotland rested was recently placed in the jewel room at Edinburgh Castle. The cushion has been presented to the nation by Sir Patrick Keith Murray, Bart., of Ochtertyre, Crieff. It has been in the possession of the Keith Murray family since the marriage of the late Sir William Keith Murray, eighth Baronet, to the heiress of the last of the Keith Marischals, and who thereby became owner of Dunnottar Castle and Ravelston House, near Edinburgh. It was sent in June last to the King's Remembrancer in Edinburgh, who, on receiving a certificate of authenticity from Sir Patrick Keith Murray, lodged the cushion with the regalia.

Always Raining There.

There is a group of islands to the south of New Zealand called the Sisters, or Seven Sisters, which are reputed to be subjected to a practically constant rainfall. The same may be said of the islands and mainland of Tiera del Fuego, saving for the difference that the rain often takes the form of sleet and snow. On a line running round the world from four to eight or nine degrees there are patches over which rain seldom ceases to fall. This is called the "zone of constant precipitation," but at the same time there are several localities along it with very little rainfall.

Leading Dietetic Authority.

Dr. Robert Hutchison, the leading authority at the present day on the subject of dietetics, is a Scotsman by birth, and was educated at the University of Edinburgh. He was one of the most brilliant students which the university ever had, and he was awarded every prize and scholarship practically which the university had to offer him. Edinburgh did not seem to give him a large enough field for his abilities, and he followed the example afforded by many of his countrymen in going south to the metropolis. There his ability was at once recognized, and, like the late Sir Andrew Clark, he was appointed physician to the London Hospital. Since then his career has been one of interrupted success. He has published what is at the present time the standard work on "Food and Dietetics," and also a manual on children's disease. Dr. Hutchison is a tall, very strongly-built man, clean shaven, with a quiet but impressive manner, and his whole personality spells efficiency. He is possessed of a fund of dry humor, and of many friends.

The Plain Truth.

One of the most notable banquets annually held in the city of New York is unique. Though it is one of the most expensive dinners that the Waldorf Astoria serves, and though it is attended by some of the most eminent professional men and some of the wealthiest financiers in the country, no wines are served, no cigars are smoked, and the only bottles found on the tables are those containing the pure and sparkling Apollinaris. Furthermore the diners all sit down promptly at 6.15 p.m., and the banquet is adjourned at 10 o'clock. It is one of the happiest, freest, jolliest banquets served in the city of new York, and it celebrates the work of an institution universally admired and respected. We refer to the banquet of the Y.M.C.A. At the twenty-fourth annual dinner, marking the thirty-ninth anniversary of the international committee of the association recently, the guests included Governor Utter of Rhode Island, Lieutenant-Governor Bruce of New York, General F. D. Grant, Rear-Admiral Coghlan, President Schenk of the Mercantile National Bank of New York City. Vice-President Cannon of the Fourth National Bank, James Stokes, Morris K. Jesup, a number of college presidents and clergymen, and many gentlemen noted in the field of politics and in literary and artistic circles.

Makes Other Servants Lazy.

Japanese servants long ago won, by their industry and efficiency, the respect of their employers, else they would not be able to get salaries that run from $50 to $75 a month. The yellow servants of other races are just as appreciative of their abilities. They know that they can be relied upon to do their own work and all that the other servants neglect. It is surprising to me how much a Japanese will do of the work that five or six maids are hired to accomplish in a house. He will help the parlormaid at her duties one minute and the next will find him assisting the waitress to set the table. He is not above helping a chambermaid to clean the rooms, and he loves to help the laundress carry the bundles of clothes upstairs. He is delighted to run errands for the cook, and is amiable enough to help the kitchenmaid to peel potatoes when she is late at her work. All this aid and comfort to his fellow-servants is given with no neglect of his master's business. So there is nothing for the housekeeper to say against his varied efficiencies. He does, however, have the effect of making servants more lazy and careless than before. He usually does about half of their work.

KING'S SECOND COUSIN.

Count Albert Victor Gleichen Now Attached In Military Capacity to U. S. Embassy at Washington.

Count Albert Victor Gleichen, who is attached in a military capacity to the British embassy at Washington, is, in spite of his German name and title, an English soldier and in every sense of the word a Briton. He is no stranger to this country, writes the Marquise de Fontenoy, which he visited about sixteen years ago, and on his return home published an article relating his American experiences and which appeared in Murray's Magazine, attracting a good deal of attention on this side of the Atlantic, owing to the fact that he had been imprudent enough to mingle with his praise some criticisms which were not altogether well received here. He is, however, a gallant soldier, one of the most popular men in the English army, alike with his fellow officers and with the rank and file, and besides that an extremely accomplished man, who paints, sketches, plays, and sings, as well as he writes. He is the author of several successful books, one of the most interesting of which is a record of his experiences as a member of Sir Rennell Rodd's mission to the Negus of Abyssinia.

Besides being the godson of King Edward and one of his equerries, Count Gleichen is his cousin. For his father, the late Prince Victor Hohenlohe, who, as Count Gleichen, rose to the rank of admiral in the English navy and distinguished himself in the Crimean war, was a favorite nephew of Queen Victoria, being a son of her half sister Prince Victor Hohenlohe, on marrying Miss Laura Seymour, assumed the title of Count Gleichen, which belonged to his family, and abdicated his rights and prerogatives as scion of one of the mediatized or formerly reigning houses of Europe, descending to the rank of a mere noble. Otherwise he would have been compelled to marry Miss Seymour morganatically. Prince Victor's sister was the mother of the present German Empress, and Count Gleichen is, therefore, first cousin of her German majesty. Thanks to this, he has enjoyed an exceptionally privileged position at the Kaiser's court and in Berlin society, while acting as military attache of the British embassy there. His mother now bears the title of Princess Victor Hohenlohe by virtue of an order of Queen Victoria, though it is not recognized on the continent. One of his sisters, Countess Feodora Gleichen, has achieved no little fame both as a painter and as a sculptress, having won prizes both at the Royal Academy and the Paris salon, while another sister, Countess Valda, who possesses a magnificent voice, married a few weeks ago M. Machell, under secretary of state in the department of finance of the Egyptian Government, and a son of the famous sportsman, Capt. Machell.

Count Gleichen, who holds the rank of lieutenant-colonel in the Grenadier Guards, and who is covered with decorations, is a bachelor, far from rich, and there are no restrictions in the way of his marrying anybody he chooses. His wife will become through her union to him a first cousin of the Kaiser and of King Edward, a German countess, and the helpmate of a charming and accomplished man, who is generally known among his friends by the nickname of "Glick."

I may add that he has seen a good deal of active service, having taken part in most of the Egyptian campaigns, is a graduate of the staff college, has been attached to special missions in Morocco, a country about which he has written, and was so badly wounded in the last war in South Africa that he was reported as dead; in fact, his recovery were little short of miraculous.

How tactful he is is best shown by the manner in which he has managed to retain until now the affection and good will of his two kinsmen, the Kaiser and King Edward.

WEIRD WIRELESS ROMANCE.

A Mysterious Message Which Comes from the Unknown to Cape Clear Every Midnight.

Mr. Marconi tells a weird story in connection with his system of wireless telegraphy. There is a station off Cape Clear, the utmost point of land to the westward of the British Isles. Here are received final messages dispatchd by ships outward bound, and the first hail of vessels that have crossed the Atlantic steering east. To this lonely station there comes shortly after the stroke of midnight a mysterious message, untranslatable, incomprehensible. But always at a certain point, varying night by night, there is delivered one word that is ever the same. It is recognizable only by its unvarying sign. It belongs to no language known to this planet. For two years the mysterious message has never missed arriving invariably between midnight and the stroke of one in the morning. Mr. Marconi's explanation of the phenomenon is as striking as is the incident itself. He believes it is Mars endeavoring to communicate with her sister planet. Why the message should exclusively reach this particular spot on earth, what Mars wants to say, and wherefore the unrequited patience of nightly repeating the communication through two years, are matters to be guessed at. That the mysterious message arrives at the times and in the manner indicated are facts for which Mr. Marconi vouches.

A Gallery of Forgeries.

Paris possesses a very fine gallery of modern masters, largely of the Barbizon school, not one of which is genuine. It is to the painter Hardignies that France is indebted for this queer collection of the spurious. Passing through the Rue de Vaugirard one day, his eye caught some canvases in a window. They were all signed by prominent names—including his own—and every signature was forged. Passing inside, the list became more extensive, and the painter found himself in the presence of false Corots, Diazs, Daubignys, Lancrets, Isabeys, Neuvilles, and even English Turners. The revelation of his own identity enabled Harpignies to become possessed of this collection for something less than the proverbial old song, and it may now be inspected by those interested in such matters at the State furniture depot, where it is preserved as a kind of high-water mark in sophistication.

CAUGHT COLD ON THE C.P.R.

A. E. Mumford tells how Psychine cured him after the Doctors gave him up

"It is twelve years since Psychine cured me of galloping consumption." The speaker was Mr. A. E. Mumford, six feet tall, and looking just what he is a husky healthy farmer. He works his own farm near Magnetawan, Ont.

"I caught my cold working as a fireman on the C.P.R." he continued. "I had night sweats, chills and fever and frequently coughed up pieces of my lungs. I was sinking fast and the doctors said there was no hope for me. Two months treatment of Psychine put me right on my feet and I have had no return of lung trouble since."

If Mr. Mumford had started to take Psychine when he first caught cold he would have saved himself a lot of anxiety and suffering. Psychine cures all lung troubles by killing the germs—the roots of the disease.

THE MARKET QUESTION.

The agitation for a change in the site for the proposed City Market from Westminster avenue to Cordova street should not meet with any recognition.

It is of vital interest to the citizens of Mt. Pleasant to see that the agitation does not gain any force and they should be alive to the situation; also, watch the attitude of their representatives in the Council upon the question.

When the people of the city have decided by vote where the Market site should be, it is strange that a handful of agitators should have the nerve to come forward and endeavor to set aside the plebiscite.

The slowness of the Market Committee which has moved forward no faster than it had to toward building, may account for the restlessness and agitation. Certainly the Committee gives the impression of negligence and insincerity. The work on the Market Building should now be well advanced.

That Cordova street, near the vaudeville theatre, is the heart-of-the-city and most convenient for all the people, is pure nonsense. In a few years Cordova street will be what Water street is today.

How about the people who are to bring produce, etc., to the Market? Must they be compelled to use the C. P. R., and the tramline on Cordova street only for transportation. The site chosen—at foot of Westminster avenue on Mt. Pleasant side of False Creek—has the advantage of roads, tramline, Great Northern Railway and is accessable by water. Boats can come direct from the Fraser river and unload at the Market; the freight cars of the Lulu Island Electric Railway can reach the Market easily; the Great Northern can unload farm products at the doors; the farmers can drive right to the Market via Westminster road and Westminster avenue. The C. P. R., can build a track to the new Market—it being the only means of transportation which does not at present lead direct to the selected site.

The City Council should take immediate action to put a stop to the agitation which has been started, and the Market Committee should attend to business more expeditiously.

Mt. Pleasant citizens should be alive to the interest of this growing part of the city which is destined to be the biggest part of Vancouver in population in the future.

"The Candian Inter-Ocean," Vol. 1, No. 1, is the latest publication received on our exchange table. There are prominent names among the contributors, for example: Hon. R. Lemieux, Hon. R. McBide, Hon. Hugh J. Macdonald, Rufus Pope, H M. Ami M. A., Hon. G. W. Ross, and many others.

There should be a club organized on Mt. Pleasant for the purpose of advancing and protecting the interests of this locality. There are plenty of business and professional men and other men of standing to make such a club or association a success.

Why did she coldly answer "No"?
Because.
Why, when she stood and watched him go,
Did she permit her tears to flow?
Because.

Why did she kneel, when it was late,
Bewailing her unhappy fate
And vowing it was only hate
For him that had oppressed her so?
Because

Why did she toss awake that night?
Because.
Why did she hope he never might
Again intrude upon her sight?
Because.

Why was it, when he came next day,
That to his arms she flew to lay
Her face against his breast and say:
"My prince! My king! My heart's delight!"
Because.

Woman's Trials.

The bitter trail in a woman's life is to be childless. Who can tell how hard the struggle may have been ere she learnt to resign herself to her lonely lot? The absence of this link to bind marital life together, the absence of this one pledge to mutual affection is a common disappointment. Many unfortunate couples become estranged thereby. Even if they do not drift apart, one may read the whole extent of their disappointment in the eyes of such a childless couple when they rest on the children of others. To them the largest family does not seem too numerous.

In many cases of barrenness or childlessness the obstacle to child-bearing is easily removed by the cure of weakness on the part of the woman. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has been the means of restoring health and fruitfulness to many a barren woman, to the great joy of the household. In other, but rare cases, the obstruction to the bearing of children has been found to be of a surgical character, but easily removable by painless operative treatment at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., over which Dr. Pierce of the "Favorite Prescription" fame presides. In all cases where children are desired and are absent, an effort should be made to find out the real cause, since it is generally so easily removed by proper treatment.

In all the various weaknesses, displacements, prolapsus, inflammation and debilitating, catarrhal drains and in all cases of nervousness and debility, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the most efficient remedy that can possibly be used. It has to its credit hundreds of thousands of cures—more in fact than any other remedy put up for sale through druggists, especially for woman's use. The ingredients of which the "Favorite Prescription" is composed have received the most positive endorsement from the leading medical writers on Materia Medica of all the several schools of practice. All the ingredients are printed in plain English on the wrapper enclosing the bottle, so that any woman making use of this famous medicine may know exactly what she is taking. Dr. Pierce takes his patients into his full confidence, which he can afford to do as the formula after which the "Favorite Prescription" is made will bear the most careful examination.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the best and safest laxative for women.

Woman's Realm.

Every preparation is being made for a big trade in broadcloths.

The crowns of hats are receiving much attention this season.

Suede lisle gloves are gaining in popularity as the seasons advances.

The coat shirt, a novelty of the season, has sold well throughout the country.

Valenciennes, baby Irish and batiste insertionst are strongly in evidence.

with wash suits, the washable gingham petticoats will be looked upon with favor.

Yokes ard very prominent in waists of all descriptions, excepting in the tailored effects.

Voils of fine but heavier weave, more one he twine order, will be good property for fall.

Hand painted parsols are a charming novelty and are meeting with a good

Black velvet ribbon is enjoying a distinction it has not attained before in many seasons. It will be very extensively employed for the trimming of gowns and accessories, and in small knots, loops, bows or rosettes, it will serve to relieve and give character to the monotony of a one tone or neutral-tinted toilette. It also finds a place on foshionable hats in a supplementary role. Colored velvet ribbons are employed to a large extent, but at present blacks are apparently in the lead Some of the latest coat of black chiffon taffeta are trimmed on revers, collar and cuffs with black velvet ribbon ,and have a large bow with very long ends, of a very broad width of same, on the front

PROGRESS.

Some time ago there was a notable automobile procession in the city of Buffalo, N. Y. It was notable for its size, and also for the fact that it was entirely composed of automobile wagons (like that in the cut above), built to distribute the advertising literature of the World's Dispensary Medical Association, proprietors and manufacturers of Dr. Pierce's medicines. In many a town and village Dr. Pierce's automobile has been the pioneer horseless vehicle. These wagons, sent to every important section of the country, are doing more than merely advertise Dr. Pierce's Remedies—they are pioneers of progress, heralds of the automobile age.

And this is in keeping with the record made by Dr. Pierce and his famous preparations, which have always kept in the front on their merits. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is still the leading medicine for disorders and diseases of the stomach and digestive and nutritive systems, for the purifying of the blood and healing of weak lungs.

Women place Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in the front of all put-up medicines specially designed for women's use. The wide benefits this medicine has brought to women have been well summed up in the words "It makes weak women strong and sick women well."

The reputation of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets as a safe and effective laxative for family use is international.

It may be asserted without fear of contradiction that no other firm or company engaged in the vending of put-up medicines can rank with the World's Dispensary Medical Association, either in the opinion of the medical profession or of the intelligent public. The Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, which is connected with the "World's Dispensary," is alone sufficient to prove this supremacy. Here is a great modern hospital, always filled with patients, where every day successful operations are performed on men and women whose diseases demand the aid of surgery. No hospital in Buffalo is better equipped, with respect to its modern appliances, or the surgical ability of its staff. Dr. R. V. Pierce, the chief consulting physician of this great institution, has associated with himself nearly a score of physicians, each man being a picked man, chosen for his ability in the treatment and cure of some special form of disease.

The offer that Dr. Pierce makes to men and women suffering with chronic diseases of a free consultation by letter, is really without a parallel. It places without cost or charge the entire resources of a great medical institute at the service of the sick. Such an offer is not for one moment to be confounded with those offers of "free medical advice" which are made by people who are not physicians, cannot and do not practice medicine, and are only saved from prosecution by artfully wording their advertisements so that they give the impression that they are physicians without making the claim to be licensed.

Those who write to Dr. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., may do so with the assurance that they will receive not only the advice of a competent physician, but the advice of a physician whose wide experience in the treatment and cure of disease, and whose sympathy with human suffering leads him to take a deep, personal interest in all those who seek his help and that of his associate staff of specialists.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser (in paper covers), 1008 pages, is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps, or 50 stamps for the cloth-bound volume, to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.
