Cris reluctantly suffered herself to be led away amid the derisive hootings of Sam and his friends.

"Ain't you goin' with her?" asked Sam provokingly. "She wants her

Mr. Daniels tripped.

Braddy, so's to take care of her if Winfield comes to school again."

Bradley's temper was slow to rise, but it was rising now.

"Who are you talkin' to?" he demanded.

"You. Who do you s'pose?"

"Well, you'd better shut up."

"I had? S'pose I don't want to?"

"Then I'll make you—that's what!"

"You will?"

"Yes, I will."

"You ain't the size. Takes a man, not a monkey."

"I'll show you whether I'm the size or not."

"You will?"

"Aw, gee!" said one of the bigger boys. "I wouldn't take that from no Wellmouth kid, if I was you, Sam."

"Nor I, neither," said another.

Thus encouraged, Sam bristled up to his opponent and looked down at him sneeringly. Bradley didn't give way an inch, and the two boys rubbed jackets as they moved slowly about each other. The surrounding group looked delightedly expectant.

"Stop your shovin'!" commanded Sam, giving his enemy a push with his shoulder.

"Stop yourself," said Bradley, pushing back.

"I'll put a head on you so's the old maids won't know you."

"I'll make you snivel worse 'n you did in school this mornin'."

"Well, Sam," exclaimed a spectator in huge disgust, "'fore I'd take that!"

The Hammond boy did not really want to fight, but, thus goaded, he suddenly gave Bradley a violent push with both hands. The next instant both youngsters were clasped tightly together, gripping each other about the neck and wrestling savagely. In a moment they fell with a thump and rolled over and over, pounding, kicking and scratching. The snow flew, and the crowd whooped and pushed and strained to see better.

Then there was a rush, a frightened scurry, and both combatants were pulled apart and jerked to their feet, while Mr. Daniels, holding each by the coat collar, glared down upon them.

"You may come with me," he said, with chilling calmness.

The scene in the schoolroom that followed was brief, but exciting. Bradley held out his hand and bit his lip stubbornly while the ferule descended—once, twice, twelve times.

"There!" said the teacher. "Now, you may take your seat. For a new scholar you begin extremely well. Now, Samuel!"

The Hammond hand having received its share of beating and its owner also sent to his seat, Mr. Daniels said: "Both of you will lose your afternoon recess. I shall also give each of you a note, telling of your punishment, to take home."

At half past 4 that afternoon Bradley, with the note tightly clasped in his hand, walked dismally up the walk to the Allen back door. The thought that he had disgraced himself forever in the eyes of his protectors burned like a fire under his new cap; also there was a bitter feeling that Gus, the cause of all his trouble, had not been near him to console or ask pardon.

It was typical of the boy that he had not thought of destroying the note. He handed it to Miss Prissy the moment he opened the door. She read it and sat heavily down in the chintz rocker.

"My soul and body!" she wailed. "Tempy Allen, come here this minute! Here, for mercy's sake, read this!"

Miss Tempy's agitation was even more marked than that of her sister.

"Oh, oh, oh!" she cried, waving the condemning sheet of paper like a distress signal. "How could you? How could you? I don't b'lieve a relation of the Allens was ever whipped in school before. What shall we do, Prissy? And his first day too!"

Bradley, with direful thoughts of self destruction in his mind, twisted his new cap into a ball, but said nothing.

"He says you were fightin' and there was somethin' else," said Miss Prissy. "Tell the whole story now—every word."

The boy began slowly. He told of shutting the dog in the closet, but was interrupted by the older sister, who demanded to know whose dog it was.

"Whose was it?" she asked. "Why don't you answer? Don't you know?"

"Yes'm."

"Then whose was it?"

Bradley shifted his feet uneasily on the mat.

"I ain't goin' to tell," he muttered sullenly.

"Ain't goin' to tell? Why, I nev"—

She was interrupted. The door behind Bradley flew open, and Gus appeared, tearful, but determined.

"Miss Prissy and Miss Tempy," she began, "don't you scold Bradley—don't you, now, a bit! It was all my fault, every mite of it. Oh, dear, dear!"

And, with sobs and amid the ejaculations of the astonished sisters, she told the whole story, omitting nothing and sparing herself not the least. When the recital was finished Miss Prissy was the first to comment upon it.

"Well," she exclaimed, "this is the most—I never did—There, Tempy, if this ain't a lesson in keepin' bad comp'ny, then I don't know. Augusty, you'd better go home, I think."

Gus looked at Bradley appealingly, then at the sisters, and, with another burst of sobs, flung herself out of the door and slammed it behind her.

"That awful dog girl!" sputtered Miss Tempy. "I knew what she was from the time she spoiled this very floor with her dreadful critters. Bradley Nickerson, don't you ever speak to her again. Now promise."

But that promise the boy would not make, although the argument lasted for an hour and ended in his being sent to his room without his supper.

"It looks to me," said Miss Prissy that night, "as if we'd got about as much on our hands as you and me could handle, Tempy."

"It certainly does," agreed her sister nervously. "I think it's our duty to ask Cap'n Titcomb's advice right off."

CHAPTER IV.

WHEN the captain called, which he did the next forenoon, the tale of Bradley's eventful first day at school was told him in all its harrowing completeness. Miss Prissy, by previous agreement, acted as story teller, and Miss Tempy was a sort of chorus, breaking in every few moments to supply a neglected detail or comment on a particular feature.

"And we didn't know what to do," concluded Miss Prissy. "He wan't goin' to tell us whose dog it was, and"—

"I don't b'lieve he ever would have told," broke in Miss Tempy, "if that 'dog girl' herself hadn't come bouncin' in, and"—

"And he won't promise not to speak to her again, neither," continued the older sister. "We sent him to bed without any supper"—

"That is, any real supper," interrupted the chorus. "Of course we took up some cookies and things when we found he wouldn't come down, but"—

"And he won't promise this mornin', and he went to school without promisin'. What do you think we ought to do, Cap'n Titcomb?"

"She's noisy and a tomboy," said Miss Prissy decidedly.

"Yes," said Miss Tempy; "and she likes those dreadful dogs."

"Um—hum," answered their visitor, with unimpeachable seriousness. "Of course that's a terrible drag, but maybe she'll cut 'em adrift when she gits older."

"Well, we don't like her," said Miss Prissy, with decision. "And we wish you'd speak to Bradley about it. You know," she added, looking down, "I put a lot of dependence in your judgment, Cap'n Titcomb."

"So do I," said Miss Tempy quickly; "jest as much as Prissy does. I b'lieve in you absolutely, Cap'n Ezra."

"Yes, yes, of course," hurriedly replied the captain. "Well, I'll speak to the boy by and by and see what I can do."

"Brad," he said, as they came out of the Allen gate after dinner, "what's this I hear 'bout you gittin' the rope's end yesterday? Never mind spinnin' the whole yarn. I cal'late I've heard the most of it. You and the Hammond boy had a scrimmage, too, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir," said Bradley doggedly.

"Hum! Think you'd have licked him if the skipper hadn't took a hand?"

Bradley looked up at his questioner, saw the twinkle in his eye and an-

"Think you'd have licked him?"

swered with a sheepish grin: "Don't know. Guess I'd have tried mighty hard."

The captain roared. "I presume likely you would," he chuckled. "I understand you've sort of took that little Baker craft next door in tow. She seems like a smart girl. Do you like her?"

"Yes, sir."

"I jedge Prissy and Tempy wouldn't enter her for the cup. Now, Brad, mind I ain't coaxin' you to go back on a friend, but the old mal—that is, your ladies at home, have set out to make a man of you. They're your owners, and you're expected to sail 'cordin' to their orders. If there's one thing that I've always stuck to it's 'Obey orders or break owners.' Sometimes owners' orders don't jibe exactly with your own ideas, but never mind—they pay the wages, see?"

THE BAY HORSE.

An Old Arab Legend That Tells of His Unmatched Speed.

The bay colored horse is said to be the swiftest of all the horses. A story to illustrate this is told of a certain Arab sheik who, having been engaged in a fight with another tribe, was taking his flight with his little son.

They were both mounted on a magnificent white mare which belonged to the sheik and which had always been highly valued on account of the great speed at which it could go. After having ridden some little distance the sheik asked his son to look around and see if they were being followed. The boy replied that there was some one riding after them on a black horse. The sheik seemed satisfied on hearing this report, but presently repeated his question. The boy answered that they were still being pursued, but that this time the horse was white. "Never mind," said the father; "mine is faster."

In a few minutes he asked for a further report, and the reply was the same, with the difference that the horse was a chestnut. The shiek, however, put his question a fourth time, but upon being told by his son that the pursuer was mounted on a bay he cried out, "Then we are lost, for there is no horse which it cannot overtake." His words proved to be true, for in a short time they were caught up with and captured.

LEATHER BOUND BOOKS.

A Little Vaseline Improves and Preserves the Binding.

An official of the Congressional library was talking with a friend who recently had purchased a handsome set of leather bound volumes and said:

"You had better examine those volumes carefully to see if the leather needs feeding. If it is new stock they will be all right let alone for several years, but if they have been on the shelves for some time the leather will have lost most of its natural oil and become brittle. This applies especially to books kept in private houses, which are as a rule much hotter than the book stacks of a large library. There is nothing more attractive than a fresh, well preserved leather binding on a volume and scarcely anything less so than a dilapidated, cracked one.

"You can add years to the life of a leather binding and a hundred per cent to its appearance by rubbing in a little vaseline with a piece of raw cotton—not too much, just as much as the leather will thoroughly absorb. Where the binding bends is where it is most likely to crack. The leather will not be greasy, as the vaseline will be absorbed. One treatment every year or two is sufficient unless the books are unduly exposed to heat."

FAITH IN NEW ONTARIO.

District Has Great Possibilities Says R. R. Gamey.

That the people of New Ontario who talked secession cannot be blamed much for complaining, but that the district is one of great possibilities is the opinion of R. R. Gamey.

Speaking of the trip of the Provincial Ministers and others in New Ontario, he said recently:

"In Port Arthur, Fort William and Fort Francis, which we visited, matters are getting on nicely, and the Ministers are leaving a good impression.

"This is where the real agitation commenced and a week ago the Ministers were presented with a bill of grievances. A number of the requests made had already been dealt with by the Legislature last session, such as increase of school grants, aid for building schools, cheaper school books, etc.

"I have met many of the people and I fancy the outburst was an accumulation of aggravations extending over years, and for which the late Government were largely responsible, if any Government can be blamed. No doubt that Government, like all the people of older Ontario, lacked confidence in the possibilities of this country and, for that reason, never took the question of the Government of this section as seriously as they should have.

Sell to Actual Settlers.

"My opinion now is that between the Lake of the Woods and the Rainy Lake, north of Rainy River and the Minnesota State, lies a splendid section of country from an agricultural standpoint. In about thirty townships possibly two-thirds of the land is splendid, but quite impossible for the settler to open up or deal with from an individual standpoint.

"The late Government located many veterans on these lands, thus making it harder still for an actual settler; that, of course, cannot be remedied now, but Hon. F. Cochrane has made it possible for them to obtain a deed which may lead to some of these lands being sold to actual settlers.

"What is wanted now is about $100,000 judiciously expended on leading roads by a competent Government engineer, about $50,000 expended on a carefully-thought-out drainage system and then the ordinary grants in co-operation with the municipal councils for a few years.

Censures the C. N. R.

"The Canadian Northern have utterly failed to give this locality anything like reasonable service.

"There is much valuable timber here, which is wanted in the western market, but the people here are afraid to make contracts as they know that they cannot depend on getting cars to deliver, and the poor settler, who could make a good living by taking out timber, is actually suffering. In fact, the neglect and utter disregard of the C.N.R. in this section is criminal negligence in some cases as, indirectly as your crossings in Toronto are.

"The postal facilities are bad. There is no mail-car on this line and a letter going from here to the next station is actually carried past that station to Winnipeg, and then back on the next train.

Promising Country.

"The people do not take Toronto papers to any extent and are out of touch with the east, so that they cannot be blamed much for kicking.

"The trip of the Ministers will do much good, because the Conservatives party lack a publicity bureau and the people are coming to visit them and learning what the Government have really been doing. All day long matters are being discussed in a manner that will be beneficial to both the people and the Government.

"I think if the Government will launch out with liberal expenditure and regulations, this is one of the most promising of the newer portions of our province, and 100,000 happy, prosperous and contented people could be located between Lake of the Woods and Rainy Lake."

Game and Forest Reserves.

Although I am no pessimist regarding the permanence of animal life, I am compelled to believe that unless several great provincial game and forest reserves are at once set aside in British Columbia, the mountain sheep of that province are doomed to speedy extinction. To the Stoney Indian, to the hungry trapper, and to every sportsman, that fine animal is so great a prize, both for its valuable trophy head and for food, that it will continue to be sought everywhere, so long as the law permits the hunting of it. It would indeed be cause for great regret if any combination of circumstances should bring about in the splendid mountains of British Columbia the extinction of the grandest mountain sheep in America.

For several reasons I am totally opposed to the trapping of grizzlies for their skins, to poisoning them, and to permitting any hunter to kill more than one grizzly per year. In other words, I think the time has come to protect this animal, at least everywhere south of latitude 54 degrees. As a state asset, every live, wild grizzly of adult size is worth from $300 to $500, and as a hunter's grand object, it is worth much more. The trapping and poisoning of this noble animal should stand forever.—Wm. T. Hornaday, director New York Zoological Garden.

Made a Hit.

"Ever been on the stage?" asked the corner grocery egg.

"Sure," answered the cabbage. "I was once cast for the villain and made a great hit."

GREAT CANAL SCHEME.

Mr. R. W. Perks Speaks On Canadian Enterprise.

Mr. R. W. Perks, M.P., one of the most eminent laymen in Methodism in England, and also one of the largest contractors of the old country, recently was a visitor to Toronto. He spoke here before the Toronto Methodist Conference.

His business purpose in coming to the Dominion was to look into the proposition of constructing a $100,000,000 ship canal in Canada. While in this country he made no announcements of significance on this scheme. A few days ago he arrived back in England and gave an interview to The London Daily News, which is published as follows:

The great £20,000,000 Canadian canal scheme has been advanced a big stage, and all estimates, etc., are now ready for the consideration of the Canadian Government.

Mr. R. W. Perks, M.P., landed from the White Star liner Celtic, from New York Sunday night. He has been eight weeks in America in connection with this enterprise, and during that period he has traversed the route for the projected canal from end to end, acting in this survey for the company which will undertake the construction of this new ship canal, in conjunction with Messrs. C. H. Walker & Co., the firm of London engineering contractors, in which Mr. Perks is a partner. They were interested in the construction of the Manchester Ship Canal.

The new scheme is to provide a Canadian ship canal which will enable ocean-going steamships to transport the grain and other produce from the interior of the Dominion direct to Liverpool by water. The new waterway is to extend from Georgian Bay through three of the great lakes and down the Ottawa River to Montreal and the St. Lawrence. The plans provide for a depth all the way sufficient to take any vessel drawing up to 24 feet. Obviously, a great Canadian waterway, directly connecting the fertile interior with the Atlantic liner services, should prove an invaluable aid to the rapid development of the productive resources of Canada.

"My plans," said Mr. Perks, "are now all formulated, and ready for presentation to the Canadian Government, and I am to see the Dominion Premier, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, on the subject in London next week. I have carefully scrutinized and checked the estimates of revenue and all the various engineering details, and I have conferred with my friends in America and in Canada as to the best methods of putting the business into practical form. That has now been done. I shall, after my interview with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, probably return to Canada to get the business completed."

INDIANS TALK BLOODSHED.

Chief of Oka Tribe Resents Enclosure of Land.

A recent despatch from Oka, says: The fact that Chief Angus Corinthe has announced that there will be bloodshed in Oka if the fencing of public land is proceeded with, gives those who know the ways of the Indian here more concern than all the alarmist rumors that have been set afloat at different times during the last few years. Almost every year there have been, so to speak, pocket rebellions here, in the course of which, at various times, the provincial police and detectives, as well as those of the Dominion, have been called out for service. The outlook, however, has never before been so serious as at the present. Those who know Angus Corinthe know him as a careful, deliberate man, who would not openly proclaim such defiance as he has done unless he had thought the matter out carefully.

In connection with this it must be remembered that a little over a year ago he deliberately tried to bring things to an issue by cutting down a tree on the disputed domains to make a flagstaff for his property in the village. He defied the gentlemen of the seminary at that time to put him in jail, but, thanks to the moderation of the latter, who are somewhat tired of the constant trouble with the Indians, nothing serious happened.

In the present case, whatever occurs will not be at the instigation of the Board of Health of the province, which objects to cows and other animals roaming around through the village. The village authorities have been ordered by the Board of Health to enclose the meadows, and, owing to threats, have asked for the protection of the provincial police.

Raising Holstein Cattle.

The Dutch system of feeding and rearing Holstein-Friesian cattle is simplicity itself. The calves are given whole milk until about five weeks old, when the ration is gradually changed to skim milk and grain. The grain is cooked or steamed and fed with the milk at first and later is fed dry immediately before the milk is given. When grass is available it forms the entire ration for heifers, and during winter the rations are only sufficient to keep them growing. Bulls are fed in the same manner until they are a year old, after which they are closely confined, but regular exercise is given daily. Bulls used for breeding are kept in stables or paddocks and are well fed, but not allowed to become fat. Roots in winter and green forage in summer are largely used.—Professor W. A. Kennedy, Iowa Agricultural College.

THE SUFFERINGS OF THE DYSPEPTIC

Due to Neglecting to Keep the Liver Right, the Digestion Good, the Bowels Healthy By Using

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

You may shudder to think of yourself as a dyspeptic—as one who, through stomach troubles, has come to look on the dark side of things, and to be ill-tempered and grouchy—but if you neglect treatment for repeated attacks of indigestion you will most assuredly become a chronic dyspeptic.

The great mistake is to put the blame on the stomach, and strive in vain for lasting benefit from tablets and so-called digestives. The real cause of trouble in nine cases out of ten is with the liver.

Thousands of persons are being cured of complicated cases of indigestion by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, because of their direct action on the liver, thus ensuring a good flow of bile—good digestion and healthful action of the bowels.

Mr. C. D. Bennett, Maple Grove, Megantic Co., Que., writes: "I had dyspepsia very bad. The food would sour, my stomach would swell up, I suffered a great deal and could not sleep. As the result of using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills I am now entirely cured, and can eat any kind of food without feeling any bad effects. They have made a new and a younger man of me, and I cannot say too much in their praise.

"Dr. Chase's Ointment cured a friend of mine of piles when he was so bad he could not work or even stand up."

Mr. Wm. G. Purdy, Bridgetown, N. S., writes: "When I wrote to you for Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills I was a sufferer from kidney disease, stomach troubles, and liver and bowel disorders. By using one pill at bedtime every night my health has gradually improved until I can say that I am in better health than I have been for twenty years. All other medicines failed, but Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have cured me."

This treatment is thorough, far-reaching and of lasting benefit, and cures the most severe cases of chronic and intestinal indigestion, as well as biliousness and constipation; 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Signs of Future Wealth

"Yes, I think my son-in-law is going to be able to get along in the world."

"Does he seem to have a proper appreciation of the value of money?"

"I don't know whether you would call it proper or not, but he got my daughter to get married in her graduation gown, and then he struck me for the price that her wedding outfit would have cost if they had waited till fall."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The policeman at the crossing grabbed the arm of the pedestrian who was hurrying across the street, and brought him to a standstill.

"What are you stopping me for?" demanded the pedestrian. "I'm not getting in anybody's way, am I?"

"Nary a bit, sor," answered the officer. "I wanted to ask ye a question, sor; that's all. Fwhat's the score?"—Chicago Tribune.

Death Comes to All—But it need not come prematurely if proper precautions are taken. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and to have prevention at hand and allow a disease to work its will is wickedness. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil not only allays pains when applied externally, but will prevent lung trouble resulting from colds and coughs. Try it and be convinced.

Where is Your Hair?

In your comb? Why so? Is not the head a much better place for it? Better keep what is left where it belongs! Ayer's Hair Vigor, new improved formula, quickly stops falling hair. There is not a particle of doubt about it. We speak very positively about this, for we know.

Does not change the color of the hair.

Ayer's — Formula with each bottle. Show it to your doctor. Ask him about it, then do as he says.

Indeed, the one great leading feature of our new Hair Vigor may well be said to be this—it stops falling hair. Then it goes one step further—it aids nature in restoring the hair and scalp to a healthy condition. Ask for "the new kind."

There are few pills so effective as they in their action.

Pedometers, cyclometers and other machines for recording distance date from the Romans. The Roman Emperor Pertinax, in the second century, affixed one to his chariot. He was able to see how far he went over the admirable Roman roads. Although the Romans knew nothing of automobiles, it was possible to make 100 miles a day over these celebrated roads with relays of horses.

Induced the French to Walk

The celebrated Dr. Tronchin, friend of Voltaire, Rousseau and Diderot, whose biography has just been published, was the inventor of walking.

In France until his epoch (1709-1781) the leisured class never walked either for health or recreation. Walking was only practised by the Tiers Etat; folks footed it from one place to another simply because they possessed neither coach nor Sedan chair. Dr. Tronchin, an imitator in many other respects, induced "les elegants et les elegantes," writes a historian, to take what is now called a constitutional.

To stroll abroad was named tronchiner, after the inventor, and for their airings both sexes had special costumes and shoes, the latter being more especially necessary. The verb tronchiner, by the way, has not had the fate of our "to boycott," having passed into disuse long ago.—Westminster Gazette.

Met His Match

Once while Bishop Talbot, long known as "the cowboy bishop," was attending a meeting of the dignitaries of the church at St. Paul, a tramp approached a group of bishops on the hotel porch at noon and asked for aid. "No," one of the churchmen replied, "I don't think we can do anything. But down there is the youngest bishop of us all (pointing to Bishop Talbot) and he's a very generous man."

The tramp went to Bishop Talbot and the others watched with interest. They saw a look of surprise come over the tramp's face. They saw that the bishop was talking eagerly, earnestly. They saw that the tramp looked perturbed, but they finally saw something pass from hand to hand. The tramp tried to get away without speaking to those of the group, but the former spokesman called to him: "Well, did you get something from our young brother?"

The tramp grinned sheepishly. "No; I gave him a dollar for his blamed new cathedral at Laramie!"—Exchange.

CAPTAIN AS DIVER.

Shark Oversees Risky Piece of Work.

A sea captain's ingenuity and pluck are the subject of a capital story which comes from Hartlepool. Captain Ivor Mattson, of the Swedish barque Flora is the hero of the adventure, which occurred when the Flora was on a voyage from Norway to the Cape. Heavy weather was encountered in the Bay of Biscay, and the water commenced to make its way into the vessel at the bows. Despite the fact that the pumps were kept going—by means of the windmill on deck when possible, and at other times by hand—the water rose steadily in the hold, and eventually the Flora, which was by this time in the South Atlantic, was in a well-nigh waterlogged condition. The captain then decided upon heroic measures. It was impossible to stop the leak from the inside, so he determined to try and stop it from the outside. For this purpose a diving suit of some form was necessary, and out of a piece of sail cloth, Captain Mattson fashioned a huge bag, sixteen feet long and two feet in diameter, fixing metal rings at intervals inside in order to keep it in shape. At a suitable height he put in a small window, scraping the back off a cheap mirror for the purpose. Armholes and sleeves were fitted, and the whole apparatus so rigged up that the bag could be loweed into the water to the requisite depth to enable a person inside it to examine the hull of the vessel under water. Captain Mattson himself descended in this novel diving suit, and discovered, after considerable difficulty, two places where the water was entering.

With the aid of rags, rope, etc., he caulked the apertures, the dangers of the task being increased by the fact that, whilst the leakages were some four feet below the actual water line of the vessel, their depth momentarily increased to eight feet or so as the ship dipped to the long Atlantic roll. The pitching of the vessel, too, caused Captain Mattson to be continually thrown with more or less force against the hull, and indeed the friction gradually wore a hole in the canvas at the foot of the bag. Through this the water entered the bag and immersed Captain Mattson to the chin before he could call out to his men to haul him up. Another unpleasant interruption was caused by a shark. All the morning before Captain Mattson commenced operations a large shark had been swimming around the vessel. The crew had fished for him with meat, etc., but without success, but at length the monster, rising to grab at so insignificant an article as an empty match box that had been thrown overboard, Captain Mattson had a shot at him with a revolver. The shark was just below the water when the bullet hit him, and evidently not much damage was done. Still, he swam away, and was not seen again until Captain Mattson was below in his extemporised diving suit. The crew at once warned the captain of the shark's approach, but the captain decided to go on with his work. The shark came up, and Captain Mattson, keeping close to the side of the vessel, saw him come round the bows. The pilot fish that accompanied him inspected the canvas bag, but the shark passed, apparently unheeding, some four or five feet off. Captain Mattson was at first somewhat afraid the shark might attack his hands, and had his knife ready to defend himself if necessary. The leakages being repaired, the Flora, continued her voyage to Cape Town, which she reached in safety, and, as a recognition of his daring and ingenuity, Captain Mattson was the recipient of several handsome presents.

Concrete Houses.

It is possible to build a house today, and such houses have already been constructed, which shall be entirely of re-enforced concrete except for such minor items as doors and window frames. This, says the Cement Age, makes a house which is entirely unburnable from within and practically unburnable from without.

Clannish Scots.

The London Standard says the Scottish race is the most clannish, the most ubiquitous, the most pertinacious and the most instinctively coherent in the world.

Wonderful Memories.

Seneca, the tutor of Nero, could repeat 2,000 words exactly as he heard them. Pope could turn at once to any passage which had struck him when reading, and Leyden, the Scottish poet, was also remarkable for his memory. Leyden is credited with having been able to repeat an act of parliament or a long legal document after having heard it once.

Important News Items of the Week.

Oct. 5th.

The Hague—The sitting to-day of the Committee on Arbitration was the most important and animated since the beginning of the peace conference, and led to the approval of the principle of obligatory arbitration by 31 votes to 6. The negatives were Germany, Austria-Hungary, Greece, Turkey, China and Roumania.

Four of the powers abstained from voting, they being Japan, Luxemberg, Montenegro and Switzerland, and there were four absentees, Argentina, Guatemala, Nicaragua and Venezuela.

Sydney—"Wireless telegraph will be a commercial success within the time I have mentioned," said Signor Marconi to-day. "Every day I am talking with Cliffden and receiving replies."

Oct. 6th.

Ottawa—An young Englishman, who said he was an Oxford undergraduate, came to Canada last week to be "ordained to the Anglican ministry." He saw Canon Kibon, who did not at once place him on a friendly footing, so he went on a drunk. Then he appealed to charity for aid to get out of this frigid country to a warmer clime. Deportation was below his family dignity, so he agreed to return on a cattle boat.

Seddon, Ala.—One of the most daring and successful crimes ever recorded in the South was committed here Saturday night, when four masked robbers looted the First National Bank of $575,525, murdered Sheriff John Williams of this county, who was endeavoring to stop them, and escaped with their booty.

Nanaimo—"Be it resolved, that this meeting condemn the action of the Dominion Government and Hon. James Dunsmuir in these matters, and request that the Government at once take proceedings to abrogate the Japanese treaty and protect the workers in British Columbia from its disastrous effects."

The foregoing section of a long resolution, which was passed by a big majority, was the most tangible result of a meeting here on Saturday night to form a branch of the Asiatic Exclusion League. J. H. Hawthornthwaite, M. L. A., Ralph Smith, M. P., Rev. M. Miller and Rev. Mr. McLeod were on the platform and the meeting was somewhat stormy.

Oct. 7th.

New York, N. Y.—With three cheers for President Roosevelt and three more for Emperor William of Germany the convention of the German-American National Alliance adjourned to-day to meet next year in Cincinnati. The Committee on German Language reported in favor of placing that language in high schools and in upper grades of grammar schools on at least an equal footing with Latin.

Chicago—Frederick L. Hoffman, statistician for the Prudential Life for a number of years, has tabulated the available statistics of the country. He has published his figures for 1906, covering sixty-five cities with a population of more than 17,000,000. This shows 2,919 suicides, an average of 18 per 100,000 of population, and a decrease of .8 per cent from the average for the last ten years.

Oct. 8th.

Tokyo, Japan—The cholera outbreak is getting alarming proportions in Tokyo. Nineteen new cases have been reported recently. The municipality has issued urgent instructions regarding the means to be employed to prevent its spread and cautions the populace.

Sept. 9th.

North Sydney, N. S.—With the arrangements for a wireless service between Europe and America so far progressed that the transatlantic service may be taken for an assured fact. Wm Marconi, the Italian inventor, will leave within a fortnight, for the station at Clifden, Ireland, the European terminal, where he intends to conduct further experiments looking to the transmission of aerial messages direct from Europe to the Pacific Coast. A station will be erected at Vancouver, B C, as a part of this plan, which is intended as one of the preliminary stage of wireless communication around the world.

Tokio, Japan.—An announcement has just been made of a colonization scheme which will open up millions of acres of land in Korea to Japanese settlement, and officials aver that this will solve the question of immigration to America.

Sept. 10th.

Chicago, Ill.—The Chicago & Alton Ry. Co.'s appeal from the $60.000 fine imposed a year ago by Judge Landis for rebating has been overruled by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Vienna, Austria.—Emperor Francis Joseph who has reigned for 59 years is ill and much uneasiness is felt regarding his condition.

Sept. 11th.

Mobile, Ala.—Nearly all vessels in the Central American fruit trade will within the next few weeks replace their Norwegian crews with Chinamen. The Chinese required will be 10,500.

Buda Pesth.—Upwards of 60.000 trade unionists march in the parade, as a demonstration in favor of universal sufferage for Hungary.

Everyone knows that for anything to become known, it must be talked about. For an article to become popular its virtue must be made the subject of a public announcement. That is advertising! Consequently if the survival of the fittest applies to business principles as well as it does to other walks of life, the better the advertising—the better the publicity—the better the results. Good results mean good business, and good business is what every merchant advertises for. If he did not wish to excel in his particular line, he would not take the trouble to write an advertisement, much more pay for the costly newspaper and magazine space.—British Advertiser.

After a honeymoon trip to Seattle and Portland, Mr. and Mrs. Drew will locate in Vancouver.

Busy Man's Magazine.

The October "Busy Man's Magazine" is a particularly strong strong number, surpassing, in fact, any previous issue of this many-in-one publication. Much space is devoted to Canada and Canadians. A sketch of Sir Robert Gillespie Reid shows how his enterprise has advanced the interest of Canada and Newfoundland. An interesting account of a pleasant afternoon spent in the company of William Henry Drummond, Canada's beloved "Habitant" poet, is contained in this number Other articles of special importance are. "Past, Present and Future of the Middle Classes," "China's Rejection of Opium," "The Canadian Railway Commission," "Robert Henderson, Discoverer of the Klondike," and "What Men of Note are Saying."

Foot Ball Guide.

"The Official Canadian Foot Ball Guide," is the title of the current number of the Spalding Athletic Library. This book is No. 308, Group 2, of the Spalding Series and covers in a complete way the game throughout the Dominion of Canada. Some of the many features of the book are as follows: Officers, passed officers, champions, constitution, championship regulations and playing rules of the Canadian Rugby Foot Ball Union, the Ontario Rugby Foot Ball Union, the Quebec Rugby Foot Ball Union and the Canadian Intercollegiate Rugby Foot Ball Union. It also contains half tone illustrations of the prominent Rugby Teams throughout Canada, as well as all the Officers of the Association. This book should be in the hands of all Canadian Rugby players. It will be sent postpaid to any address in Canada, by the publishers, the American Sports Publishing Company, 21 Warren street, or Messrs. A. G. Spalding & Bros., 443 St James street, Montreal, Canada, upon receipt of the price 10c.

Woman's Home Companion.

The Woman's Home Companion for October is primarily a Fashion Number, not that the other regular departments are slighted in the least, nor that the fiction is in any way below the excellent standard the Woman's Home Companion has set for itself. Grace Margaret Gould, the Fashion Editor, has done more than any other one person to make this October issue interesting and helpful, contributing, as she does, page after page of attractive and practical designs for fall and winter costumes. A particularly novel and helpful page gives photographic illustrations of the newest silks, fabrics and trimmings; another shows the new hats, going into detail as to shapes and colors. There are still others of waists and lingerie.

THE ADVOCATE Is Issued in the interest of Mt. Pleasant & South Vancouver.

"The Advocate" gives all the Local News of Mt. Pleasant from week to week for $1 00 per year; six months 50c. An interesting Serial Story is always kept running; the selections in Woman's Realm will always be found full interest to up-to-date women; the miscellaneous items are always bright, entertaining and inspiring. New arrivals on Mt. Pleasant will become raedily informed of the community and more quickly interested in local happenings if they subscribe to "The Advocate."

The Function of an Advertisement is first to draw attention and to leave a favorable and as far as possible a lasting impression.

The first and principal object of a very great deal of advertising is not directly that of selling goods, but of establishing a worthy fame—a recognized reputation—to make the goods and the house known. Customers must come with some idea of the goods they seek, the more knowledge the better. With confidence inspired by effective advertising, it is then up to the salesman to do the rest—to make good by courtesy and a skillful presentation of the wares which should be up to all that has been advertised.

THE ADVOCATE is the best advertising medium for reaching Mt. Pleasant People—to gain their favorable attention to your goods and store. Advertising rates reasonable—not in the Publishers' Association high rate combine.

—"The Advocate" is always pleased to receive from its readers any items of local interest such as notices of people visiting on Mt. Pleasant or of local residents visiting outside points, all social affairs, church and lodge news, births, marriages, etc.

I like to read advertisements. They are in themselves literature, and I can gauge the prosperity of the country by their very appearance."—William E. Gladstone.

The Pope's Secretary

Cardinal Merry del Val, the Pope's famous Secretary of State, was born in London—a fact of which few people seem to be aware—and received some of his education at a preparatory school near Windsor. He is a wonderful man in many respects, and has a prodigious memory. On one occasion, after the late Pope had addressed in his native tongue an assembly of English people, he turned to the Cardinal and asked him to interpret what he had said. Without the slightest hesitation the young Secretary of State proceeded to do as he was bid, repeating most of the Pope's own expressions word for word.

WISE PARENTS

Guard Their Children's Health by Giving Them Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

The health of the growing boy or girl should be carefully guarded. During the growing time there is a danger of the blood becoming poisoned and the health seriously impaired. The blood should be kept pure and the child will grow strong, healthy and active. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an ideal tonic for the young. They never fail to bring color to the pale cheeks and strength to the growing body. To a reporter of L'Avenir du Nord, Mr. Jos. Provost, of St. Canute, Que., tells how these pills saved his daughter Marie from a life of misery. He says: "A year ago my daughter, a girl of thirteen, was very weak. She was so ill that I feared she was going into consumption. Though I tried remedy after remedy she remained in this weak state for several months and I began to think she would never get better. I read of the good Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had been in a case of anaemia, so got some for her. Soon she began to improve; her appetite returned; she grew strong; color came into her cheeks and today she is as healthy as any young girl could be. I firmly believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved her life."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are equally as successful in bringing those of mature age back to health as they are in building up the young. They make pure, rich blood—that is why they banish anaemia, rheumatism, St. Vitus dance, heart palpitation, indigestion and the secret ills of girlhood and womanhood. But you must get the genuine, bearing the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper around each box. All other so-called Pink Pills are imitations. If your medicine dealer does not keep the genuine pills they will be sent at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MARKED FISH IN THE SEA.

Thousands Caught, Numbered and Put Back In British Channel.

Catching fish, measuring and marking them and then returning them to the sea with the chance of retaking them later is part of the work carried on by the Marine Biological Association of Great Britain.

By means of a stream trawler the fish are caught in the usual way. Each haul is carefully recorded, the fish are counted and measured and all details of locality, time, number, species, sex and size are put down, together with accurate observations on the water, the depth and bottom of the sea, the kinds and quantity of food available, etc. These data are subsequently tabulated and charted.

The method of marking the fish is interesting, and has been attended with valuable results. The fish chiefly used during the few years the experiment has been in progress have been plaice, because the proposals which have been made to interfere with the catching of them were based on inadequate knowledge.

The fish are marked on the dorsal surface with a very thin convex metal disk bearing a number. This is attached to a fine silver wire which is passed through the thinner part of the fish and secured on the underside by a small bone button. The fish do not appear to suffer inconvenience, and their growth is not interfered with in any way.

The thoroughness with which the North Sea is swept by the nets of the fishing fleets is demonstrated, says Discovery, by the fact that out of 5,039 marked plaice of all sizes, 992 were recaptured within a year. This represents 19.7 per cent., or nearly one-fifth but for the medium sized fish the figures are far higher, ranging from 28.4 to 39 per cent. for the whole of the North Sea and to 43 per cent. in the more northern portions.

The men of the regular fishing fleet co-operate by forwarding to the laboratory of the association at Lowestoft all the marked fish they catch. At the laboratory reference to the records easily establishes how much the fish has gained in size and weight since the previous catching. Moreover, the distance between the spot where it was released and the place where it was caught establishes its movements.

ROGUE ELEPHANT'S WORK.

Human Life and Property Destroyed By Them In India.

Mr. Lloyd and Mr. James were camping in the vicinity of Mohergong Garden when one of their elephants, breaking his chains, made for freedom and to this day roams the Terai Dooars and the Mooroong with his jungle mates, writes the Terai, Bengal correspondent of The India Field.

For thirty years that and other elephants have been allowed to work their wicked will on human life and property unrestrained, and the tale of mortality has grown year by year till it is past bearing. About two years ago the Government offered a reward of 300 rupees for the destruction of Mr. Lloyd's runaway, which is now known as the club-footed rogue by reason of same malformation caused by the chain round his foot, which made it swell out. He is said to have but a single tusk. I am under the impression that the same animal is known by the name of "the Rooara rogue," and the number of his victims alone mount high, though I am certain that he is not the only offender.

Last September an old woman and her two young children were sleeping in their hut. Hearing movements about their granary in the night, one of the children woke up their mother, saying there were thieves at their dhan. The sound of human voices was enough. An elephant which had just torn off the grainhouse charged the house and killed the woman and child, one child escaping by hiding.

Next morning showed this animal to have been a female, for she had a calf with her. Though retreating to the Government reserved forest at night, Terai elephants are getting bolder and bolder, advancing well into the cultivated houses and gardens everywhere, till the dread and loss caused by them are so great that tenants are throwing up their lands on all sides.

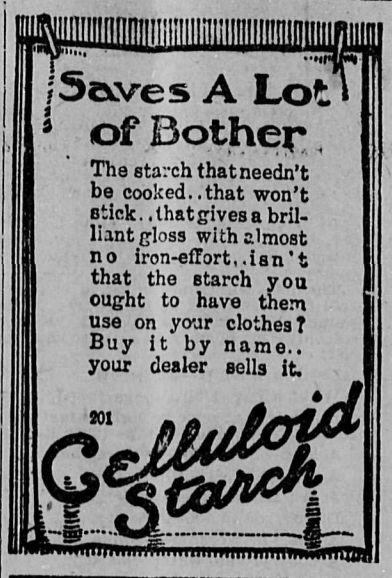
To Broil a Steak.

Few housewives understand the art of broiling, and consequently chops and steaks are often robbed of their delicate flavor by frying in a pan.

A steak or chop properly broiled should have a thin, well browned crust. Beyond this crust the meat should be red and juicy, hardly a shade less done in the middle than near the surface.

If the broiling is to be done on a range, have the fire very bright and clear. Open every draft, that smoke and flames may be drawn up the chimney. Place the piece of meat in the double broiler and hold it as near the coals as possible until the surface is brown, turning frequently. It will take three or four minutes for this. Now raise the broiler several inches above the bed of coals and continue the cooking until the meat is done.

The broiler must be turned often. A good rule is to count ten slowly, then turn the broiler. A steak or chop cut a little more than an inch thick will cook nicely in ten minutes. If liked well done, it should be cooked for twelve minutes.



Pearls Increase in Price

A good deal has been said about the high prices at a recent sale of jewelry in auction rooms, and surprise has been expressed that one pearl necklace alone should have sold for £6,800.

A. G. Maginnis, joint managing director of a goldsmiths and silversmiths company, said that that price was by no means exceptional for a necklace. "I have had the identical necklace in my hand, and I certainly do not think it was dear at the price. But we have in stock a number which are far more valuable. At the Paris exposition of 1900 we had a white pearl necklace on show, the price of which was £90,000. Such prices as £25,000, £30,000 and £40,000 are not at all uncommon.

"The reason that pearls bring in such enormous prices is that fine specimens are scarce. First, they must match. Not one in a thousand is perfectly round. Then necklaces are usually made so that the pearls are large in front and taper off gradually at the back. This adds to the difficulty of matching them. To make up a really well matched necklace may take years.

"Undoubtedly the price has gone up during the last ten years, and it is still going up. This is due partly to an increased demand. Then the company which took over the Ceylon fisheries about a year ago is closing them down for twelve months to enable the oysters to recuperate. Therefore, during the next year or so very few new pearls will come into the market."—London Tribune.

FILTERING WATER.

A Cheap Method of Purifying Drinking Water.

As efficient a filter as can possibly be secured may be made in a few minutes by any one at the cost of a few cents.

Take a new flowerpot, close the opening in the bottom with a piece of sponge, on top of which place a layer of small stones, previously well cleaned. The layer should be about two inches deep. The upper stones should be smaller.

Next procure some freshly burned charcoal, which has not been kept in a damp or ill aired place. Reduce this to a powder and mix it with twice its bulk with sharp, cleanly washed sand.

With this mixture fill the pot to within a few inches from the top, cover it with another layer of small stones and place a piece of flannel around the rim. The flannel should be large enough to tie around the pot and also to leave a little hollow in the center.

The charcoal should be renewed about twice a month.

Cleaning Steel Knives.

How do you clean your steel knives—in the old way on a knife board?

Suppose you try the German fashion, which is much simpler than the ordinary manner and saves a good deal of work.

Take the cork from a big bottle of some sort and dip it into knife powder that has been moistened a little with water. Place the knife flat on the kitchen table and rub it with the cork. In an incredibly short time the knife will be clean and beautifully polished and will only require to be rubbed off on a cloth.

A Giant Spoon.

It is said that the largest spoon in daily use is the wooden soup stirrer at Rilo monastery. The old spoon at Rilo is famous. It has been used for more than twenty years and has had predecessors of its own kind for centuries. It has stirred soup for thousands of refugees who have sought safety in the monastery from the persecution of the Turk. The monastery was built in medieval times. It has a curious kitchen. It is a room twenty feet square, but nearly one hundred feet high. Its rock walls gradually slope together as they rise, forming a dome with a hole about a foot in diameter at the top. A depression in the earth floor holds the fire, made of pine logs. Over the fire is hung a great iron caldron, which holds more than twenty gallons of soup. The cook climbs up on a big square stone and stirs the soup with the great spoon. The smoke from the pine rises with the steam of the soup to the dome and out through the opening.—Boston Transcript.

THE RECORD ADMIRAL FURNACE

Is fitted with the improved Record Triangular Grate—the most perfect furnace grate on the market. Of the four triangular grate bars, each bar is operated by the use of a handle applied to either of the two centre bars. To remove this handle after shaking is impossible until the grate bar has been returned to its original position, flat and in place, without any of the cogs sticking up. The result is that the bars are always flat under the fire and that it is impossible for lumps of coal to drop through and be wasted. The Record Triangular Grate can be entirely removed from without without lying on stomach or bothering with a light. 104

When the Old Dam was Destroyed

SKINNY scratched his left ear with a slate pencil. This, accompanied by a careless scraping of his feet, caused all the "Bloody Robbers," who were always to be found in the rear of the schoolroom, to take particular notice.

When he felt the eyes of all the band riveted upon the back of his head, slowly and solemnly Skinny pulled his right ear thrice.

Their leader had spoken. Each "Bloody Robber" must report in the cave after school, or be denounced as a traitor.

Those versed in the bandit lore will understand why, an hour later, each member of the band glided away by himself and took a circuitous route that brought him to the grove of trees near the cave.

Skinny, of course, arrived first at the council chamber and was arrayed in the full regalia of a robber chieftain, when he heard the first peculiar whistle from the grove. Giving an answering signal, a form slid quietly down the bank, and the first of the band stood before him.

Scarcely had the leader haughtily returned the salute of his minion and received the mysterious password before a second whistle was heard.

Fifteen minutes afterward the "Bloody Robbers" were in session, seated upon boxes and planks brought thither with great care and labor.

"Comrades and fellow-brigands," Bill Kane was saying (he had just learned that new word, and was proud of it, too), "I heard that they're going to take away the old dam tomorrow. This will make the water go up over the mouth of our cave, so's we'll have to move. That's why Captain Dick Deadeye (indicating Skinny) has called our meeting. Now"—just then he stopped shortly, turned, and made a dive for the entrance of the cave.

Presently Bill returned clutching tightly in his grasp the struggling form of little Tommy Bowes, who had innocently wandered into the cave.

Dire threats were made against the unfortunate Tommy, and a council was at once established to decide his fate. The captive, bound and gagged, was thrust into a dark corner of the chamber and left there, wondering whether he was to be shot or hung.

"Sufferin' Jehosaphat!" exclaimed Ike Jones, stationed near the entrance, "if the water ain't comin' in here like sixty!"

"Take all belongings and git!" was the imperious command of Captain Skinny. "They've gone and busted the dam today without waitin'!"

All the band gained the outside in safety. Dolefully they stood on the bank watching the water steadily rising over the mouth of the cave, which opened in the bank close to the water's edge.

"We've fergot Tommy Bowes!" gasped Skinny. Seizing the rope which Bill had saved, Skinny tied one end around his waist, gave the other to Bill and dived down through the opening of the cave.

Inside the cave sloped steeply, so that Tommy was still unharmed, although scared half to death. Hurriedly cutting his bonds, Skinny dragged him to the entrance, from where the boys pulled them up the bank.

Tommy was almost drowned, but gamely declared he was all right, upon which the "gang," to a man, patted him on the back and muttered words of encouragement and admiration.

In order to "make up" to Tommy, he was then and there made a member of the "Bloody Robbers," which, he was given to understand, was the highest honor he could ever hope to attain in this world.

As Skinny bitterly remarked, however: "It wasn't much use bein' a robber if you didn't have a cave."

THE ENCHANTED KETTLE

THERE once lived in Japan a wise old man named Shohun-Shokan.

All day long Shohun-Shokan buried himself in ponderous volumes, so you can see that by virtue of so much reading he became very learned, indeed. One look at his bulging forehead and deep-set eyes and you became awed to think of the vast amount of knowledge such a head must contain.

Shohun-Shokan sat gazing meditatively at the walls of his little room, covered with the letterings of wise sayings innumerable. Before him boiled his little kettle.

In surprise, he rested his eyes on the kettle. Its musical murmur had changed to a growl, and, there before him, two pairs of legs appeared at the bottom, a tail at the handle and a peculiar snout at the mouth.

This strange creature capered about so merrily that the lid rattled and the water overflowed from the kettle part of it.

The fame of Shohun-Shokan's possession spread throughout the land, and he was induced to travel through the country exhibiting the enchanted kettle. It appeared to be very fond of its master and obeyed all his instructions. Many a crowd was highly amused at the sight of a kettle walking upon a tight-rope or doing other antics. Shohun-Shokan grew wealthy rapidly.

Finally, believing that he should not abuse the favor of the gods by accumulating too great riches, he announced his intention of spending the rest of his life in quiet study.

With this end in view, Shohun-Shokan purposed to bestow his enchanted kettle upon the nearest shrine. Hardly had the creature been placed on the altar, when, lo! it resumed its former shape—a mere kettle. It may be seen there to this day.

This is why all aged Japanese always examine a kettle carefully whenever they see one, in the hope that perhaps the gods may favor them as they did Shohun-Shokan.

China's Way.

In China people pay their doctors only when they are well. When an Emperor falls sick, for example, the salaries of the court physicians are cut off until he is well again. Needless to say, they work very hard to bring him back to health.

PENNY WISE

HERE is a nice game to train you to be observant. Try it the next time you have a party of friends in to spend the afternoon.

The hostess must prepare as many plain white cards as she has guests, and to each have fastened a penny and a pencil.

On one side of the card must be written the name of a guest, and on the other a list of things to be found on a penny.

The list, with questions and answers, will be given here; but, of course, in the game the latter are not put on the card, as only the hostess has the completed list:

Used in warfare—An arrow.
What a caged bird longs for—Liberty.
A flower that once brought catastrophe to the Netherlands—Tulips (Two lips).
A long-eared animal—Hare (hair).
A tropical fruit—Date.
A hat trimming—Feathers.
Discovered in 1492—America.
A place of worship—Temple.
A body of salt water—Sea (C).
A drink—Tea (T).
A name of a lover—Beau (bow).
Found on corn—Ear.
Carried by a warrior—Shield.
Found on a flag—Stripes.
Often called for at a meeting—Ayes and noes (eyes and nose).
Worn by a victor—Wreath.
Edge of a hill—Brow.
One bottle of perfume—One scent (one cent).
A part of a bottle—Neck.
Sent by Uncle Sam—Letters.
Freshness—Cheek.
A slang expression for talking—Chin.
Seen by Columbus—Indian.

At a given signal all begin to write. The time given for guessing can be left to the hostess. The one who has guessed the most answers wins a prize, the next wins the second, and there may also be a booby prize.

This list can be changed or added to by any boy or girl who can see more things on a penny than has Polly Evans.

THE ROLLING BOX

CUT a sheet of paper, about seven inches long and six inches wide, in the shape of a cross. Then make a box by overlapping the two sets of opposite sides, as shown in the diagrams, and pasting.

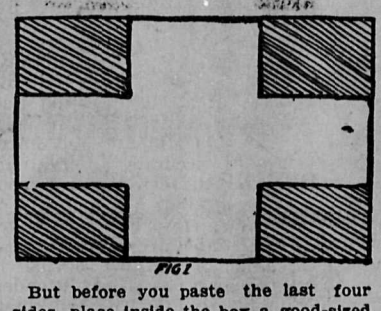

FIG 1

But before you paste the last four sides, place inside the box a good-sized marble.

Be sure that the paste is thoroughly dry before you play your trick.

When you are sure that the sides are s curely fastened together, place the box at the top of a sloping board or book.

The box will turn over and over as it rolls down to the very bottom, just as you see in the picture.

THE LITTLE SISTER

I HEAR some fellows say they'd like
To have a little sister,
But if mine were a dog or "bike,"
I don't think I'd 'a' missed her.

On afternoons when chums call you
To go with them a-swimmin',
She's sure to sob, "Boo-hoo! boo-hoo!"
With tears her eyes a-dimmin'.

You never can go anywhere
But she comes toddlin' after;
And she can't even take a dare,
Or swing on the barn rafter.

Why do folks wonder that you're kind
Of cross and lots put out, when
You have her Saturday to mind,
And season's fine for troutin'?

How she's a single bit of use
To find I've not been able;
But still I guess I'd hate to lose
My little sister Mabel.

The Little Beggars

THEY were real big, too. One was eight and the other six, and they certainly should have known better.

It all came about through mother sending them to see grandma. You have to go quite a way to the old farmhouse, and mud-puddles are so nice to play in that you don't wonder, do you, that they stopped awhile before a fine, big one?

Now, somehow, mothers don't like mud-puddles, especially when you have your best clothes on, so, when the two saw before them a little beggar boy and girl of just their sizes, wasn't it natural they should ask them to change clothes for a few minutes? At least they thought so.

The one who was eight and the one who was six were having a delightful time when, happening to look up, they spied the two beggars running down the hill as fast as they could go.

Course, they couldn't go to grandma's now. Forlornly they trudged home to pour their tale of woe into mother's ear.

But perhaps you can understand why mother wasn't exactly pleased when the two little "beggars" burst into the room where she was entertaining her guests.

Yes, they s'posed they had been naughty; but, after all, wasn't it hard to be sent to bed after trying with all their might to do right?

Johnny's Excuse

JOHNNY'S excuses are really the funniest ever. Having been down late for breakfast several times lately, his mother told him that the very next time it occurred he would have nothing to eat.

"Johnny," said his mother, "you remember what I told you."

"Yes, mother, but really and truly I could not be down in time this morning."

"Why not?"

"You see, I was half asleep and half awake, and somehow I dreamed I was in church, and I knew you would not like me to get up during the sermon."

Johnny had his breakfast that morning.

Cut Rates

They were talking about a musical entertainment for charity. "We could never make it pay," said Fannie. "I heard father say only the other afternoon that these singers get as much as $300 for an evening!"

"Nonsense!" said Polly. "I know an organ-grinder that'll play an hour for 25 cents, and throw in a monkey."

Clever Catch

Johnny—Did I ever tell you the story of the two wells?

Tommy—No; let's hear it.

Johnny—Well, well.

"SEVEN-LEAGUE" BOOTS

HAVEN'T you often wished you had a pair of "seven-league" boots? With them you could walk miles and miles and see such a lot of things. Wouldn't it be fun?

Over in Germany they have a queer kind of boots with which you can walk twice as fast as you do without them, and it's fine exercise, too.

As you will see by the picture, the shoe is like a big metal spring, with a support, and having a rest for your foot.

When putting them on, the first shoe is strapped to your foot and ankle, and a leather brace running up the leg fastened so that the foot is held firm, then you stand on the boot, and while in this position buckle on the other. Needless to say, it takes a little practice to keep your balance.

HOW THE BOOTS ARE USED

You walk as you do ordinarily. As you place your foot on the ground the metal spring is pressed down. Stepping forward releases the pressure, the spring flys up and you are pushed forward quite a distance.

It is really great fun. Perhaps you may have a pair of "seven-league" boots some time.

Getting Even

A MERRY little party had paid the customary five cents each to fish in the stream which ran through Farmer Jones' orchard. It was a very warm day, and soon one of the anglers announced his intention of taking a swim. Farmer Jones, who just then appeared on the scene, strongly objected.

With a wink to his companions, the wit drew the attention of the farmer to the sign-board, which read: "Admission to the river, five cents."

"So, having paid for it, here goes," said he, taking a header.

Farmer Jones then pounced on the bather's clothes.

"I reckon ye paid for your clothes and all," he chuckled, "an' they're going in, too!"

So they did—every stitch—amidst roars of laughter.

What Foreign Mothers Do to Keep Baby Safe.

In Ireland a belt made of hair is placed about him.

Garlic, salt, bread and steak are put in his cradle in Holland, while Welsh mothers use a pair of tongs or a knife in the same way.

Baby's face is swept with a pine tree in Spain to bring him good luck.

He Wouldn't

Musical Lady—Wouldn't you like to be able to sing and play, my boy?

The Boy—No, ma'am; at least, not if they'd say such horrid things about me as they do of you.

CAMPING OUT

BILL KANE chewed one straw savagely, while with another he tickled Joe Stanton's ear.

Just as Joe was about to pitch into him, Bill arose and demanded in a loud voice:

"When is this here camp going to start? We might as well have it now as any time. 'Course, Joe's going away—he always does do the wrong thing—but some one else 'll be away soon, and we can miss Joe best."

After Joe and Bill were separated, Captain Skinny said, impressively:

"Bloody Robbers, 'tention! How many of us think it's best to start camp tomorrow?" Every one thought it was best, except Joe, and his mouth was stuffed so full of hay that he couldn't say anything.

This important matter now disposed of, the "gang" left their secret meeting place in Warner's hayloft, promising to meet at Bill Kane's next morning at 8 o'clock sharp.

All arrived at Bill's backyard promptly. Nearly every "robber" was more or less scared, for he knew mother or aunt or some one would soon find out that a frying pan or a tin bucket or other articles, as well as half the supply of food in the house, had gone with him.

Billy was quickly hitched to the wagon; everything that a goat could possibly haul was loaded on it, and away they started. All felt much better when out of reach of pursuit.

They were going to camp in Rocky Lot, of course. There was a fine place by a great pile of rocks that made the nicest sort of a fireplace. Nearby a clump of trees gave a pleasant shade, and, when the sheets had been pitched in the form of a tent, it was really comfortable inside.

No matter at what time the "robbers" reached camp, it was always necessary to prepare a meal at once.

Skinny was chief cook as well as captain. It wasn't long before he had a good fire going in the fireplace fashioned among the rocks, the assistant cooks bringing the wood and Skinny applying the match.

Then he directed two of the fellows to get water from the spring, which was about a mile away; and another was sent to dig out the potatoes from beneath a pile of quoits and horseshoes in the wagon.

Meanwhile some "smart chap who wasn't mindin' his own business" rolled one of the stones away from the fireplace. It was still hot when Skinny picked it up just to see how far he could throw it. It didn't go far, but it certainly left his hands quickly enough. The fellows 'way over at the spring heard him yell, and came running so fast to see what was the matter that they split all the water and had to go back for more.

But at last the potatoes were pronounced done, and the "gang" was invited to commence on them and "somethin' that didn't need cookin'" until the stove turned out some other toothsome articles.

The potatoes were cooked long enough—in fact, they were burned almost to a crisp. But under the watchful eye of Skinny each "robber" ate one potato before trying the eatables that didn't need cooking. Nobody wanted a second one. Bill Kane noticed, too, that Skinny ate only half a potato.

Every one had eaten breakfast but a short time before. In spite of that, however, it took quite a great deal to satisfy each hungry "bandit."

After the repast some of the fellows pitched quoits and horseshoes, and others wandered through the woods, a short distance away.

All were to be on hand before long to pick sides for a game of ball. But they were called together before that to repair the damage made to their tent and other camp equipment by a mad bull which had come through the fence of the next field, putting all to flight.

By the time the bull was chased away and things put in some sort of order all were hungry again. And, as nothing remained to eat, it was decided to go back to town.
