The New York Dentists

OUR REPUTATION as Painless Dentists is shown by the daily increase in our practice. We have gained a world-wide reputation with our discovery, which, when applied to the gums, teeth can be extracted absolutely painless.

Our patients are so pleased with the results that they not only tell their friends, but personally bring them to our parlors that they may receive the same treatment. In this way, together with the highest-class dentistry, done by our Specialists, our practice has gradually increased till we are second to none in practice.

By the use of our Double Adhesive Suction Chamber we are able to fit the most difficult casts. Where other Dentists Fail We Meet With Success. If your teeth drop when you try to eat with them, or if you are afraid of them striking the pavement when you sneeze, there is something wrong; they do not fit. Our Double Adhesive Suction Chamber overcomes this difficulty and is Our Own Invention and can not be used by others.

Gold Crown, Gold Filling, Bridge Work and all other Dental Work done, painless, and by Specialists and guaranteed for 10 years.

Linked by Fate

BY CHARLES GARVICE

Author of "The Verdict of the Heart," "A Heritage of Hate," "Nell of Shorne Mills," "Paid For," "A Modern Juliet," Etc.

"Decima is the last person to suffer from a delusion," he said. "There was never a more acute, intellectual—but you know, Viv! I shall go and speak to her. I must! I feel as if I could not stand by helpless and see her growing more anxious, more despairing each day. Wait a minute; she is talking to the skipper."

Barnes, the skipper, a young man with a shy smile, behind which lay a profound seamanship, was consulting the chart with Nina. They saw him reluctantly shake his head, smiling still, then pass on. Sutcombe went up to her. Her head had sunk on her hand, and when she raised her face at his approach he saw so wistful, so eager an expression in her eyes, that it went to his heart.

"Will you not come into the saloon and rest?" he said, gently.

She shook her head. "I cannot," she said, humbly enough. "We have been examining the chart again—Oh, Lord Sutcombe, how patient you are! It—it is that that hurts me! If you would only laugh at me, if you would only tell me that your patience is exhausted, that you will bear with my—my whim no longer, I think I should be less heart broken."

"Why should I tell you that which is not true?" he responded, his eyes resting on her bent head with unspeakable sympathy and tenderness.

"And yet it would be so—so natural, so well deserved!" she retorted, bitterly. "Sometimes I wonder why you did not think that I am stark, staring mad, that I am the victim of a wild delusion—"

It was Vivienne's word, but she still smiled.

"For what is it that I have asked you to do, and you, so generously, so trustingly, have consented to do?" she went on with a deep sigh.

"Not a very great thing, surely!" he said, trying to answer and reassure her in a breath. "You have asked us to leave the direct course, to turn aside that we may help you to find a certain island, of which you know, and which you want us to visit."

"An island not marked on the chart, a nameless place, as nameless and intangible as that of a dream. Sometimes," sighingly, despairfully, "I wonder whether it exists only in a dream: whether I shall wake to find that its only place is in my imagination. And yet—no! If you only knew! Why do you not insist upon my telling you all, everything? Why do you not refuse to continue in this mad search unless I give you better reasons for doing so?"

"Because I love you so dearly that if this island ever existed, and the search were as futile as that for the philosopher's stone, I would not turn from it until my heart told me you wished to do so," he might have replied: but instead he said:

"Why grieve so about the matter, Decima? No harm has been done. We have had, are having, fine weather; it does not matter whether we reach port this week or the next. And Vivienne is of the same mind as I. If you would only be less anxious! Do you think we cannot see that the strain is telling on you, and that we do not—suffer? Ah, do not be so unhappy! Nothing—nothing is worth that!"

She pushed the hair from her forehead and looked up at him gratefully.

"How good you are to me!" she said in a low voice. "Well, bear with me a little longer. Listen, Lord Sutcombe. If—if we do not discover this island to-morrow, I will tell you why I have persuaded you to turn out of your course in search of it; I will tell you—all. It is only fair. But give me until to-morrow. Barnes tells me that he will try a new course, that he himself feels certain land, islands, perhaps, are nearer than the chart indicates. Give me till to-morrow at noon!"

"I will give you twelve months of to-morrows if you like," he said, fervently; "we will run in at the next port and provision the yacht for a year's cruise—"

She turned from him half impatiently.

"Only till to-morrow!" she said, and she bent over the chart again.

But her eyes were dim with the pangs of disappointment and failure, for the Ariel had been beating about for weeks in search of the nameless island, and the dream, the bright dream which she had dreamed the night Sutcombe had told her of their loss, and she had been compelled to ask them to let her go with them, was growing faint and pale with the sickness of hope deferred.

After a time she folded the chart, rose resolutely, and with a gesture, as of one throwing off a heavy weight, went to the other two.

"From this moment," she said, "I will say no more, no, not a word. If—if we fail, then you shall think it was just a dream, a delusion—ah, do you think I do not know what is in your minds!" as Vivienne colored and lowered her eyes.

"Let us go and have some music, dear," said Vivienne, laying her hand on Nina's arm tenderly, for she knew that while they remained on deck Nina's aching eyes would scan the sea, that seemed to mock her with its emptiness.

They went below, and Nina, acting up to her resolve, played and sang and talked, as if her heart were not racked with suspense; but as she lay in her berth that night the bitterness welled up in her. And it was not altogether unselfish. For as the Ariel had approached the spot where she imagined the Fairy Isle to be, there had arisen and grown an aching longing to see once more the place where she had suffered—and, ah yes, for a short time, enjoyed—so much. Vane Mannering was lost to her—she did not know whether he was alive or dead—but for a few fleeting hours she had basked in the knowledge of her own love for him, and the hope that his love might turn to her.

She slept at last, a fitful sleep, but was up on deck soon after dawn, and Barnes, at his wheel, touched the peak of his cap and smiled his shy greeting.

"Nothing, Barnes?" she asked with repressed eagerness.

"Nothing, miss," he admitted reluctantly. "I've changed her course for west due west, and—we shall see, miss. We may sight land before noon—"

"To find another group of islands—but not those we want," she said with a sigh, as she turned away. Barnes shook his head at the sails. She who had been so ready with the sweet smile, the gentle word which had won the hearts of the men, as they had won the heart of their master, had grown almost irritable and impatient, and Barnes as he watched her standing at the bow with her hand shading her eyes, hopeless and incredulous of "Miss Decima's island," shook his head again.

But he held on to his course, and about noon Nina, who had been leaning against the taffrail, her eyes fixed on the sea, uttered an exclamation and pointed at some object floating on the waves.

"Seaweed!" said Sutcombe, coming quickly to her side, and he turned towards her with an eagerness almost as keen as her own, then shouted the word to Vivienne. In silence, almost breathlessly, they watched and waited. But "Miss Decima's luck," as the men had grown to call it, pursued her even now; for as they gazed a slight mist rose above the horizon, gradually crept towards and enveloped the yacht, shutting out sea and sky. Down came the sails, and the vessel floated like a bird through the white fog. They should have anchored, but Barnes withheld the order, and, taking some soundings, let the vessel drift.

Nina turned away; her eyes were dim and on her lips flickered a smile that was worse than tears.

"Fate is against me!" she said. "The time is up—and I am beaten! Lord Sutcombe, I—I—give it up!"

"Wait!" he said. "Look!" and he waved his hand toward the mist.

It was lifting as swiftly as it had fallen; before it had quite cleared out spread the sails, and the Ariel drove through it. Clearer and yet clearer grew the air, and then, so suddenly that they had scarcely time to exclaim, there lay before them the vision of an island, green as an emerald, and set in a golden line of sand, with the shrill cry of the sea-birds circling round it, the waving of the fir-trees on its crest.

It was Vivienne who first cried out. Nina stood, her hands clenched on her bosom, her eyes like those of one in a trance. Sutcombe turned to her with an instinctive gesture of sympathy, for her lips were white and her breath came painfully.

"It is the island, at last!" she said.

The skipper's word of command rang out, the "Aye, aye, sir!" of the men followed sharp upon it, the sails fell as if by magic, and the Ariel was anchored within, as it seemed in that clear air, half a mile of the island which even yet Nina could scarcely help regarding as a vision.

Sutcombe took her hand and pressed it, and she turned to him as if awaking from a dream; but with surprise he saw that there was no joy in her eyes, only an expression of satisfaction that was not untinged with sadness.

"We will land at once," he said. "You wish it?"

"Yes," she said, "let us go. When—when we are there I will tell you, I will explain. Your patience—ah, how great it has been, how sorely tried!—shall not be tried any longer. Yes, let us land. But, wait!" She put her hand to her head as if trying to think, as if some difficulty had occurred to her. "Lord Sutcombe, I want that only you and Lady Vivienne and I should land—at first, at any rate. Can you manage it so?"

"Why, of course!" he responded with an encouraging smile as he looked into the lovely eyes whose every expression he knew by heart. "I will take just sufficient men to land us, and they shall remain in the boat until, well, as long as you wish them to do so."

She nodded and stood watching the launching and manning of the boat. The crew of the Ariel were disciplined like a man-o'-war's men, and they rowed with stolid faces and incurious eyes, whatever they may have felt, to the nameless island which they had been chasing so long.

As the boat approached the sand-fringed shore, Nina's face grew paler, and she turned it away from the others, though there was no need, for Sutcombe and Vivienne studiously avoided glancing at her. He helped her out of the boat, almost as gently and carefully as he helped Vivienne; and as if absorbed in her own thoughts, Nina silently led the way up the beach.

The huts were still standing as they had been left, but Nina's eyes were fixed on a spot where a mound rose on the shingly strand. She stood there for a moment, her head bent, her lips moving; then she walked on to one of the huts.

"Go in," she said, motioning them to enter her own hut. "Yes, I—I—am at home! Did you not guess?" as they entered and stood and looked round them, at last regarding her with astonishment. "I once lived on this island. I was wrecked here, with some of the passengers and the crew of the Alpina. Sit down, Lady Vivienne, I want to tell you."

Leaning against the rough hut she told them the story of the wreck, that is, a part of the story, for she made no mention of Vane Mannering, who had been the prominent figure. "My father died—and a friend, a friend who was like a brother to me— It was at their grave I—stopped just now."

Sutcombe's eyes were fixed on her with the tenderest sympathy.

"I—I am not surprised at your wanting to find the island, at your anxiety to revisit it," he said in a low voice.

But Nina shook her head. "I had another reason," she said. She might well have said reasons, for assuredly the longing to see once again the place in which she had tasted such misery and such happiness had drawn here there. "It is the reason that I asked you to let us come alone. Lord Sutcombe, this island was discovered, so to speak, by the unfortunate castaways, who dragged themselves to land here that night," she shuddered; "but my father made another discovery, and it is that which led me to ask you to let me come with you on your cruise, and gave me courage to persuade you to alter the course of the Ariel. You remember the night you told me of your loss?"

Sutcombe nodded. Was there any one night, any one incident connected with her, which he was likely to forget?

"That night I remembered—I think for the first time, strange as it may seem—this discovery of my father's, and an idea in connection with it flashed into my mind. Tell me, Lord Sutcombe; I am his only daughter, child. That which belonged to him, when he died, now belongs to me, does it not?"

"Most certainly!" replied Sutcombe, all in the dark, but patiently waiting for the light. "You inherit everything of which he was possessed."

"I am glad," she said, as if relieved. "Wait for one minute!"

She went outside, but even at that moment she paused and looked round with an aching heart, a heart that throbbed painfully with the memories of those short days of vague, uncertain bliss. The whole island seemed to speak of Vane; seemed to be crying to her: "You have come back; but where is he, our master!" She drew her hand across her eyes and roused herself from her reverie, and, going to the back of the hut, scraped away the soil from a small mound, took up two or three of the pieces of gold quartz, and, re-entering the hut, laid them on the rough table just as her father had done on the night of their discovery.

Sutcombe and Vivienne looked from them to her questioningly.

"Do you not understand?" she said with a smile, almost of contentment; for it was sweet to be able to repay, even thus inadequately, some fraction of the goodness of these friends of hers.

"What is it?" said Sutcombe, taking up one of the pieces. "Why! It's not—"

FOR ANAEMIA YOU MUST HAVE IRON

And Anyone Can Use Iron, As It Is Combined With Other Ingredients In

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Anaemia or bloodlessness is indicated by paleness of the lips, the gums and the eyelids, and is most frequently found in girls and young woman.

Other symptoms are deficient appetite, impaired digestion, irritable temper, shortness of breath, dizziness, fainting, headaches, easily fatigued, depression and despondency.

The blood is lacking in the life sustaining power which is necessary to the proper working of the bodily organs, and can only be restored by the use of iron, as any qualified physician will tell you.

But iron alone cannot be taken into a weakened stomach. In Dr. Chase's Nerve Food iron is combined with certain nerve restoratives in such a way as to be easily assimilated into the blood and thus afford immediate and lasting benefit to the system.

And more than this, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, through its action on the nerves, sharpens the appetite and aids digestion, so that help is also afforded in deriving the full nourishment from the food taken into the body.

On account of these two ways in which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food enriches the blood and builds up the system, it is beyond doubt the most effective treatment for anaemia and similar wasting diseases that was ever compounded. Note your increase in weight while using it.

Mr. Albert Saunier, Willow Bunch, Sask., writes:-

"I received the two boxes of Dr Chase's Nerve Food which I ordered from you and have found it to be an excellent medicine. It has proven a splendid treatment for headache and a run down system, and I have recommended it to many people.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

THE CROPS.

What They Mean to the Country and Its People.

Early in the spring the country begins to ask, "How are the crops?" Our prosperity during the twelve months following the harvest depends in a very large measure on the answer to this question. Out of the ground comes our wealth. In these years of abundant prosperity the farmer takes from the earth each harvest season products of a value of $4,000,000,000, and more than a third of this enormous sum represents the two great crops of the west—corn and wheat.

The question, "How are the crops?" becomes each year, therefore, as the harvest time approaches one of vital importance, and the earlier the knowledge of the size and quality of the crops the more valuable it is to the commercial community. Railway men need to know in advance the outcome of the harvest that they may prepare for the transportation of the crops to the markets. Bumper crops mean big tonnage not only of products from the farms to the consumers, but also of merchandise from the manufacturing towns to the farms, bought by the farmers with their produce. When railway men are assured of big crops they spend many millions of dollars for new locomotives and cars and rails and many millions more for the improvement of their roadbeds and the extension of their lines into new territory. The steel makers are jointly interested with the railway men in the harvest, for one-fourth of the enormous product of the steel mills of this country is purchased by the railways. When the crops fail the railways cancel their orders for rails and bridges and equipment, and steel descends from prince to pauper. Then all the big manufacturers of the country, whether of wagons or plows, of shoes or clothing, must know whether their great customer, the farmer, is to have money to spend from harvest to harvest. So it is with the merchants all through the agricultural country. Even more important is early knowledge of the crop prospects to the bankers, who must not only finance the movement of the crops to market, but must also know whether the harvest is to cause expansion or contraction of capital ventures through the country. Then there are the flour millers and elevator owners, who are directly interested in the marketing of the crops. Finally there is the great body of men who speculate in the rise and fall in commodity prices and who risk many millions of dollars in backing their opinions as to the volume of the crops and the demand for them in the markets of the world.—Frank Fayant in Success Magazine.

The Early Astronomers.

The early astronomers were all astrologers and claimed to be able to predict the future careers of various individuals by "casting horoscopes" showing the position of the planets at the time of their birth. The position and movements of the various celestial bodies were not only supposed to control the destinies of men, but were also thought to bring weal or woe, tempest or sunshine, upon the earth itself. A man born when the sun was in the constellation of Scorpio was believed to be naturally bent toward excessive indulgence of the animal passions. One born when the sun was in Pisces was predestined to grovel or be a servant, while one whose earthly career was opened when the great luminary was in Aries would be a great scholar and a man known to the world despite all opposing influences.

Matrimony and Patience.

Matrimony and patience! It is not always a perfect combination, is it? In South Africa the savage tribes have a peculiar ceremony which they put the matrimonial candidate through previous to his entering the holy state. His hands are tied up in a bag containing five ants for two hours. If he bears unmoved the tortures of their stings he is considered qualified to cope with the nagging and daily jar and fret of married life. Such a man would make an admirable husband. He would not be upset by the thoughts of a spring bonnet or grow irritable every time the steak was overdone. The idea of having a patience trial for those about to marry is one that civilized people might adopt.

STAGECOACHING DAYS.

An Old World Era With a Decided Flavor of Romance.

The old coaching days, as far as convenience for travel was concerned, were the dawn of the great days of our present rapid means of communication. The seventy years or so in which mail coaches waxed and flourished and finally died out before the incursion of railways and steam engines have a decided flavor of romance attached to them, and no doubt the coming and going of stagecoaches lent a certain amount of color and interest and life to the country places and towns through which ran the great main coaching roads. The Bath road, the Dover road, the York road were highways of communication along which rolled the heavy private coaches and chariots of the country magnates, and the stagecoaches with their steaming horses passed the various stopping places with the regularity of clockwork.

These stagecoaches, with their complement of coachmen and guards, afforded endless subjects of interest and illustration to the artist and the literary men of the day. Imagine Charles Dickens without stagecoaches and denuded of all his vivid descriptions of the scenes such as those in the yard of the White Hart inn, High street, Borough, in "Pickwick," or of the mail coach on the Dover road in "A Tale of Two Cities." It is difficult for the present generation to realize the fatigue and the wintry cold of such long journeys, when frozen feet were enveloped in a little straw, and a "shawl" folded round the neck was thought to be a fit protection against the keen night air.—London Standard.

THE PRIVATE WON.

Rebuked His Superior Officer and Escaped Court Martial.

Charles Bradlaugh when in the British army was orderly room clerk, and a newly arrived officer once entered the room where he was sitting at work and addressed to him some discourteous order. Private Bradlaugh took no notice. The order was repeated with an oath. Still no movement. Then it came again, with some foul words added. The young soldier rose, drew himself to his full height and, walking up to the officer, bade him leave the room or he would throw him out. He went accordingly, but in a few moments the grounding of muskets was heard outside, the door opened and the colonel walked in, accompanied by the officer.

It was clear that the private soldier had committed an act for which he might be court martialed, and as he said once, "I felt myself in a tight place." The officer made his accusation, and Private Bradlaugh was bidden to explain. He asked that the officer should state the exact words in which he had addressed him, and the other, who had, after all, a touch of honor in him, gave the offensive sentence word for word. Then Private Bradlaugh said, addressing the colonel, that the officer's memory must surely be at fault in the whole matter, as he could not have used language so unbecoming to an officer and a gentleman. The colonel turned to the officer with the dry remark: "I think Private Bradlaugh is right. There must be some mistake." And he left the room.

A Scotch Test.

Auchtermuchty is the happy town which every Scot, proud of his unpronounceable tongue, uses as a shibboleth to test the linguistic skill of the southron. If you cannot say "Auchtermuchty" you are still an uneducated barbarian. The meaning of the word happens to be as monstrous as its sound. "The high ground of the wild sow" is not a name one would choose for a garden city. People, however, are found to flock to it as a summer resort, and as it has a lover's pool, the town has probably attractions more real than its name. In the early part of last century Auchtermuchty went bankrupt and was deprived of all its property except the jail and one or two other assets of an equally necessary character. It is now rich, peaceful and radical.

Rhodesia's Largest Nugget.

Weighing 21.62 ounces, a gold nugget which measures five and a half inches in length and three inches in width was recently found near Bulawayo. It is believed to be the largest yet found in Rhodesia, and is now in the British South Africa company's museum at 2 London Wall buildings, E. C.—London Mail.

MINE PROSPECTING.

Hard Work Says One of the Initiated —The Outfit Needed—Get to Work Daily at Daybreak.

This coming summer will see one of the wildest scrambles after mining property ever witnessed. In other countries there have been districts opened to staking at a given hour, a mad chase has taken place, a few days' excitement, and all was over.

At Cobalt the disappearance of the snow will be the signal, but owing to a find being necessary before a claim can be held, and that a find may not be made without the expenditure of a great deal of work, the sight of several hundred men all trying to find discovery, will be indeed an interesting one.

The principle of the "grub stake" is being employed largely by people desiring to put money into a Cobalt venture. The working of a "grub stake" is for one man to put up the money, the other fellow to do the work, and each to share in the profits (if any).

The class of men that were sent into the Cobalt district last year on "grub stakers" was very far from being ideal.

About one-half of the town site's population at that time was made up of young fellows, and old fellows, and all sorts of fellows, having a good summer's outing at somebody else's expense.

To prospect in Cobalt is no picnic and the man who would make a find in the jackpot next summer has got to be a hustler, or else the goddess fortune will play a funny prank.

To prospect with any chance of success the prospector has got to be right on the ground, so that he may step out of his camp in the morning and go to work at daybreak.

Six miles a day through the Cobalt bush is a day's work, so the man who thinks to do anything by living in a hotel in Cobalt and walking out from town and finding a claim in the morning, is away off.

Prospecting is about the hardest kind of work a man can go at.

Only the most inaccessible spots bear a chance of yielding anything to a superficial search. To get near these spots the prospector must move his tent and all that is his on his back. To flounder thus hampered through the bush to the accompaniment of the buzzy mosquitoes, and to the tender solicitations of black flies, is calculated to make one think of what he did with his winter's wages.

The man who should be selected to be sent to Cobalt is he with a good recommendation as a hard worker and as having a good big stock of horse sense.

Nine chances out of ten the man who has read his mineralogy and has a host of technical terms ready to shoot, will pitch his camp on a pretty spot by some lake and start in to enjoy himself.

The man who thinks that mines are "found" is mistaken.

The first finds in the Cobalt region were the result of accident, but outside of that all have been secured only by hard work.

Foster, whose quixotic attempt at stocking his mine was the sensation of Cobalt a week or two ago, prospected all the summer of '94 and into May of '95, and even then it was his father, who had recently joined him, who actually made the find. He started to amuse himself digging before breakfast, and uncovered Cobalt bloom right where the boy's camp was pitched.

If two fellows go into the Cobalt district to work, and make a serious effort to try and find something, and prospectors generally go in pairs, what they need is a A tent 7x9, some blankets and a few cooking utensils, an axe, etc. All should be of the lightest possible make, for all must be carried on their backs to the point where they are to be used.

If the idea is to go north then a larger and more extensive outfit is required. Tent 8x10, probably, with a stove.

Here it may be said that the common folding stove is worthless after being set up and used a few times. Get one put up to stay.

Take good grub and cook it well.

Caught at His Own Game.

They were drummers, and had landed in a rural hotel far from any place of entertainment.

It was agreed to spend a pleasant hour asking each other questions, but should anyone ask a question he could not answer himself he had to stand a supper to the company.

A bullying fellow proposed that the new man, the novice on the road, should begin.

"Very well," said the novice. "You've all seen the hole that a squirrel makes in the ground?"

"Yes," replied the drummers, in chorus.

"You have possibly observed there is never any earth at the mouth of it?"

"Yes."

"Do you know why?" proceeded the novice. "No."

"Well, it is this. The squirrel, in digging his hole, commences at the bottom and scrapes all the earth inside."

"Ah, my man," said the bullying one, "but how does he get at the bottom to begin?"

"That's a question of your own asking," said the novice. "Better answer it or—pay for the supper."

He paid. The novice is called "novice" no longer.

Government Is Firm.

Several officials of the Grand Trunk Railway were in consultation with the Government recently in regard to the railway's request to be allowed to erect and conduct licensed hotels in Algonquin Park, says The Toronto Globe. It will be remembered that such a request was emphatically refused by the Government some time ago, on the ground that it would be unwise to alter in any way the law forbidding the sale of liquor in the park. The Globe understands that this attitude was firmly maintained by the Government at the conference. The G. T. R. officials were again informed that the company could rent sites, under certain conditions, for the erection of two hotels if they decided on building two, but that they would not be licensed to sell liquors, and must be run on strictly temperance lines.

The impression was gathered that the company will accept this decision of the Government, and commence to build almost immediately one hotel in the park, under the conditions laid down The company expects to carry many tourists to the park this summer.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

A cold in the head can often be speedily cured by inhaling burnt camphor.

Alum water for burns or cuts is a quick and pleasant remedy. Keep a bottle on the medicine shelf.

Onion juice is good for the croup. Stew onions with sugar and a very little water until it forms a sirup. Strain and give a tablespoonful at a dose.

To inhale steam from a bowl of boiling water is very good for a sore throat. The sufferer should lean over the steam, drawing it in both throat and nostrils.

A New York woman recommends a novel remedy for cinder in the eye—namely, a loop of horsehair run up under the lid. Of course the hair should be thoroughly sterilized before being used.

To make a poultice antiseptic will keep a part free from gangrene and similar complications. Dissolve in the boiling water with which the poultice is made as much boric acid as it will take up.

Blending Perfumes.

The blending of perfumes will be found delightful for sachet bags. The two odors that mix most perfectly are violet and heliotrope, and the addition of a little sandalwood to these will produce an exquisite odor that will baffle those who smell it as to the identity. White rose and heliotrope blend very sweetly, and lilac and violet make a dainty combination. A little sandalwood or orris root added to almost any combination of odors will increase the pungency and make the result more lasting. Carnation is a delightful and spicy odor in itself, but the addition of white rose makes it sweeter and a little daintier. A number of odors combined in various ways and scattered through one's effects in tiny sachet bags or envelopes will produce an odor that is altogether fascinating, delicate and difficult of detection.

BLOODLESS GIRLS.

Can Obtain New Health Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Anaemia means bloodlessness. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new rich, red blood and thus cure anaemia. When the blood is poor the nerves are starved and irritable. Then comes hysteria, neuralgia, sleeplessness and other nerve disorders. Headaches, backaches and sideaches wear out and depress the poor pale victim. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills soon bring ruddy health and lively vigor. They sooth the jangled nerves and give new strength to every organ. Miss Winnie Allen, Montreal, says: "I was so weak and run down that my friends thought that I was going into consumption. I was as pale as a corpse, had no appetite and did not sleep well. The least exertion tired me out, and if I walked a few blocks I would be almost breathless. My sister advised me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after using them for a few weeks I am again enjoying good health, and have a good color. I think every weak girl should take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure any case of bloodlessness just as surely as they cured Miss Allen. The pale anaemic needs only one thing—new blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, rich blood with every dose. That is why they cure all common diseases like anaemia, indigestion, neuralgia, palpitation of the heart, headaches and backaches, St. Vitus dance, partial paralysis and the secret troubles that make the lives of thousands of women miserable. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Rise of Maurice Barres.

Maurice Barres, recently elected to the French academy at the age of twenty-four, began his literary career with a magazine of his own, Les Taches d'Encre (Spots of Ink), chiefly notable, perhaps, for the audacity with which the young magazinist advertised his wares. Even in this magazine, however, the future novelist and essayist showed signs of promise, and Jules Claretie, director of the French National theater, wrote to a friend: "I have just received a paper called Les Taches d'Encre, bearing the signature of Maurice Barres. The name means nothing to you? Then bear it in mind, for it is going to become celebrated."

His Hand a Sundial.

Walter Nason, living in Newport, Me., has the mysterious ability of being able to tell the accurate time of day by simply looking in the palm of his hand as another would look at his watch. No one has been able to learn his method, and in fact he himself cannot explain the source of his power. Many of the people of the village who doubted his power and who looked upon it as a "fairy story" have by their own observation and experiments become convinced of its truth.—Thurston (Me.) Journal.

The Flying Machine.

Santos-Dumont has constructed a flying machine with which he expects to win the Deutsch-Archdeacon $10,000 prize for machines heavier than the air. This new machine is to be a "helicoptere," or screw flier, an apparatus which will raise, support and propel itself through the air solely by the power of horizontal and vertical propellers.

SUNLIGHT SOAP

is better than other Soaps but is best when used in the Sunlight way. Follow directions.

SUNLIGHT WAY OF WASHING

FIRST.—Dip the article to be washed in a tub of lukewarm water, draw it out on a washboard and rub the soap lightly over it. Be particular not to miss soaping all over. THEN roll it in a tight roll, lay in the tub under the water, and go on the same way until all the pieces have the soap rubbed on, and are rolled up.

Then go away for thirty minutes to one hour and let the "Sunlight" Soap do its work.

NEXT.—After soaking the full time rub the clothes lightly out on a wash board, and the dirt will drop out; turn the garment inside out to get at the seams, but don't use any more soap; don't scald or boil a single piece, and don't wash through two suds. If the water gets too dirty, pour a little out and add fresh. If a streak is hard to wash, rub some more soap on it, and throw the piece back into the suds for a few minutes.

LASTLY COMES THE RINSING, which is to be done in lukewarm water, taking special care to get all the dirty suds away, then wring out and hang up to dry.

For Woolens and Flannels proceed as follows:—Shake the articles free from dust. Cut a tablet of SUNLIGHT SOAP into shavings, pour into a gallon of boiling water and whisk into a lather. When just lukewarm, work articles in the lather without rubbing. Squeeze out dirty water without twisting and rinse thoroughly in two relays of lukewarm water. Squeeze out water without twisting and hang in the open air.

The most delicate colors may be safely washed in the "Sunlight" way.

SAVE THIS WRAPPER IT IS VALUABLE PREMIUM COUPON FOR SUNLIGHT SOAP PREMIUMS

$5,000 REWARD will be paid to any person who proves that Sunlight Soap contains any injurious chemicals or any form of adulteration.

Your Money Refunded by the dealer from whom you buy Sunlight Soap if you find any cause for complaint.

Samples of Churchill's Wit.

Winston Churchill, the English convert to Liberalism, is making a reputation for sharp wit. His curt retort to a woman heckler, "Madam, I will not be henpecked," was the best thing of the recent campaign. He is now raising a moustache. A fair lady was being taken into dinner by the budding politician. "Mr. Churchill," she said, I like your politics as little as I like your moustache." It should have been a crushing shot, but not so to Churchill. His reply was on the instant: "Madam, you are not likely to come in contact with either." — Exchange.

Fun for the Readers.

The little weeklies of the towns of Australia are livelier and more abusive of each other than the "Kickers" and "Inconoclasts" of American frontier towns. The editors of these rival journals must possess a peculiar qualification—the ability to "slang" the opposition paper and all connected with it. CURED HIS WIFE of LA GRIPPE

Quebec Man tells how the Great Consumptive Preventative was an all-round Benefit

"My wife took La Grippe when she was in Ottawa," says R. N. Dafoe of Northfield Farm, Que., in an interview. "She got a bottle of Psychine and after using it for a few days she was quite well. I took a cold and am using it and am getting all right. I think Psychine is one of the best tonics on the market to-day."

There you have the whole matter in a nutshell. La Grippe and colds are among the forerunners of consumption.

This man had one, his wife had the other. Psychine not only cured both but it built them up so that their bodies are strong enough to resist disease. All seeds of consumption are killed by

MR. HEUBACH'S PLANS ARE NOW COMPLETE

The Advantages and Beauties of Tuxedo Park Described by the Originator of the Enterprise.

Winnipeg.—As the work of developing Tuxedo Park is being pushed forward, a thoroughly modern suburb will be evolved. Combine the layout of the city of Washington, D.C., with the pleasures, comforts and conveniences of the famous Tuxedo Park, N.Y., and you have a fair idea of what Winnipeg's Tuxedo Park is to embrace and to be.

Mr. F. W. Heubach, of the firm of F. W. Heubach, Ltd., and father of the Tuxedo Park enterprise, was seen at his offices in the Union bank building, and was asked just what his plans were for the development of this new suburb.

"That would be a long story, said Mr. Heubach, "but perhaps I can give you a general idea in a few words."

"As you know, the property which now comprises Tuxedo Park was the old Wright farm, a high, dry and largely wooded tract of 200 odd acres situated upon the Assiniboine.

"As a homesite its situation is ideal. It will be easily and quickly reached by the Portage Avenue trolley and extensions through Fort Rouge. In addition to this we have every assurance that as both the Canadian Northern and Canadian Pacific Railways run directly through the property a suburban station will be erected and commuters' trains run from both city depots. This will make Tuxedo the most accessible of all Winnipeg suburbs.

"In planning Tuxedo Park our idea has been not only to provide beautiful suburban homesites, but to also afford residents all the comforts, conveniences and amusements of metropolitan life. Tuxedans will be supplied with water through our own or the City mains and will also have gas or electric light.

"For their leisure hours we have laid out a speedway, the longest straightaway course in the world, golf links, tennis courts, athletic grounds.

"The harmonious beauty of Tuxedo Park, and the interests of Park residents, will be preserved by our building restrictions which will prevent the construction of any unsightly or undesirable buildings.

"All commercialism; that is, all stores, groceries, butcher shops and the like will be confined to a small territory which we have set apart and which we have designated as the "Village."

"These features, the diagonal streets, avenues and boulevards; the shade trees and sloping lawns, all combine to make Tuxedo one of the most desirable residential districts in the West.

"That an investment in these lots is bound to prove most profitable goes without saying. Here we are surrounding on three sides the buildings and grounds of the Government Agricultural College, and on the west adjoining the new City Park. And this alone is a guarantee of the continual development and increasing values of Tuxedo property. Add to this the improvements we are making and you can readily understand that Tuxedo offers an opportunity for investment which no thinking man can afford to pass by."

Mr. Heubach grew enthusiastic in telling of the beauties of Tuxedo and of the many advantages of owning a home there. He is sincere in his belief that Tuxedo Park is destined to become the most popular as well as the most desirable of all Winnipeg's suburban districts.

"Just think," he said, "a scale plan that enables the man of small salary to stand shouder to shoulder with men of wealth in the acquirement of this property, and that without pinching or undue economy; a proposition by which each purchaser of a lot is given a bond which can be made to earn for him as high as one-third of the price of the lot; nominal taxes, and a home on the Assiniboine! Isn't that going to appeal to every sensible man?

"Certainly it ought to."

"A race track?"

"No, we have that out of our program, as a splendid one is being built by Mr. R. J. MacKenzie at Sturgeon Creek."

A boaster related to an admiring crowd some of his marvelous deeds. Afterwards a smaller man who knew him well remarked to a friend that the boaster, to his certain knowledge, had never done the things he had claimed to have done. "And why," said the friend, "didn't you call him a liar then and there and let the crowd know what sort of a man he is?" "For the simple reason," answered the small man, "that my nose is of a blamed sight more importance to me than his reputation is to him."

The First Air Brake.

Persons who should have known better thought Westinghouse visionary when they were told that he proposed to stop a train by air. Nobody seemed inclined to let him try his plan on a real train, but they did not object to his working a model of it in a shop where he couldn't do any harm, nor involve anyone else in expense. He knew that his scheme would work, but he could not make anyone else believe it. So he continued to sell his invention for replacing derailed cars on the track, and to talk about his brake to any railroad man was willing to listen.

"Well, have you ever stopped a train with this air thing of yours?" they would ask.

No, he couldn't say that he had done so. Nobody would let him try it even on a train of dump cars

One day he arrived in Pittsburgh, selling his other invention and talking about his brake notion to a man connected with a railroad out there.

"That's a great idea of yours," said the man, we will try it on our line!"

So the officials of this railroad permitted Westinghouse to put his new "kickshaw" on one of their trains. road for any lossesc mfwy cmfwy cmf road for any damage that might be caused to the train as the result of the trials! The train was equipped On the designated day the confident inventor and a group of skeptical railway men boarded the train on which the first air brake was fixed. Off went the train on its trial trip; the engineer put on full speed, and just as he had rounded a curve he saw ahead, at a grade crossing, and in the middle of the track, a loaded wagon, a man and a boy and a balky horse. The engineer moved his little lever, and the first train that was ever stopped by air pulled up at a standstill several feet short of the obstruction.

Thus, on its first trial, the Westinghouse air brake saved life and prevented damage to property. Thenceforward talking was unnecessary; all that had to be done was to make brakes. The inventor thought of that clause securing compensation to the railroad for any damage he might do to the train, and he laughed. His fortune dated from that day. He was then only twenty-two.—Success Magazine

"Deed an' 'tis, honey," was the reply.

A DANGER TO CHILDHOOD.

No mother would give her little one poison if she knew it, and yet all the so-called soothing syrups and many of the liquid medicines given children contain poisonous opiates, and an overdose will kill. When a mother uses Baby's Own Tablets she has the guarantee of a government analyst that this medicine does not contain one particle of opiate or narcotic that it cannot possibly do harm. This assurance is worth much to the mother who cares for the safety of her little ones. Mrs. Charles McLaughlin, DeBert Station, N.S., say: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for colic, stomach troubles and other ailments of childhood and find them so valuable that I would not be without them in the house." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The buxom maid had been hinting that she did not think much of working out, and this in conjunction with the nightly appearance of a rather sheepish young man, caused her mistress much apprehension.

"Martha, is it possible that you are thinking of getting married?"

"Yes'm." admitted Martha blushing.

"Not that young fellow who has been calling on you lately?"

"Yes'm, he's the one."

"But you have known him only a few days."

"Three weeks come Thursday," corrected Martha..

"Do you think that is long enough to know a man before taking such an important step?"

"Well," answered Martha with spirit, "'ain't 's if he was some new feller. He's well recommended. A perfectly lovely girl I knew was engaged to him for a long time."—Everybody's Magazine.

Two brothers, of whom a writer in the Wasington Post tells, got on none too well with each other for reasons which will be plain to all.

"Here," said the mother to the elder of them one day, "here is a banana. Divide it with your little brother, and see that he gets the lion's share."

The younger child a few minutes later set up a great bawling.

"Mamma," he shrieked, "John has not given me any banana!"

"What's this?" inquired the mother hurrying in.

"Why," explained the elder boy, "lions don't eat bananas."

"Do you mean to tell me that you have lived in this out-of-the-way place for ten years?"

"That's right, stranger. Just ten years."

"I'm surprised. I can't see what you find to keep you busy."

"I can't find anything. That's the reason I like it."—Milwaukee Sentinel

AFTER 18 YEARS OF SUFFERING

AN ONTARIO FARMER FINDS A CURE AT LAST IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

The Direct Cause of All His Trouble was a Strain in the Back Which Affected His Kidneys—Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Him.

ARDOCH, Ont., May 14—(Special.) Mr. Ami Jeanneret, of this place gives a very interesting account of his experience with Dodd's Kidney Pills. He says:—

"I hurt my back and strained my kidneys and for 18 years I suffered on and off intense agony. I was subject to attacks of Rheumatism and Lumbago. My joints were stiff, my muscles cramped. I lost my appetite, my flesh began to fall away, my nerves were shaken, I could not rest or sleep at night and I was sinking into a deplorable condition when I was advised to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I used six boxes and I am now as strong and healthy as ever I was. I am certain I owe my cure wholly to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Undismayed.

An English clergyman had a rich parishioner, Lady Blank, who dictated to and hectored him outrageously. At length he declined to put up with this kind of treatment and told her ladyship so. Thereafter she refused to put anything in the offertory, merely making a stately inclination over the plate. This moved an elder to remark in her hearing:—"We could with less of her manners and more of her cash." The clergyman, dining at a lord's table, told this story with great success one evening. The host said, with a frown: "Are you aware, sir, that Lady Blank is a relative of mine?" The clergyman smiled slightly. "No," he said, "I wasn't; but in future when I tell the story I'll always be careful to mention the relationship."—Springfield Republican.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Not a nauseating pill.—The excipient of a pill is the substance which enfolds the ingredients and makes up the pill mass. That of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills is so compounded as to preserve their moisture, and they can be carried into any latitude without impairing their strength. Many pills, in order to keep them from adhering are rolled in powders, which prove nauseating to the taste. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are so prepared that they are agreeable to the most delicate.

Reading Biographies as a Stimulus.

We cannot help living in some degree the lives of heroes who are constantly in our minds. Our characters are constantly being modified, shaped, and molded by the suggestions which are thus held.

The most helpful life stories for the average youth are not the meteoric ones, the unaccountable ones, the astonishing ones like those of Napoleon, Oliver Cromwell, and Julius Cæsar.

The great stars of the race dazzle most boys. They admire, but they do not feel that they can imitate them. They like to read their lives, but they do no get the helpfulness and the encouragement from them that they do from reading the lives of those who have not startled the world so much.

It is the triumph of the ordinary ability which is most helpful as an inspiration and encouragement. The life of Lincoln has been an infinitely greater inspiration to the world than the life of Napoleon or that of Julius Cæsar.—O. S. Marsden in "Success Magazine.

A Modern Bow Street Runner.

Chicago reports an improvement in the service of a summons by a constable. He did not pry open the door or burst in the window. He hired a "full dress suit," and donned it with all the articles of apparel that the books lay down as correct to go with that garment. Entering an automobile he drove up the Lake Shore Drive, and when he reached the number he wanted "he alighted, swinging his lavander Spring overcoat on his arm, stepped lightly up to the palace door, touched the electric bell, handed the attendant his card, was admitted to the reception room, was received by the lady upon whom he wanted to serve the summons, was bowed out." A Model City Government.

The government of Manchester is a business. Its liabilities are about $156,000,000; its assets are about $147,000,000; and the deficiency about $9,000,000, represents the amount which the ratepayers have to contribute each year. The figures indicate that it is a big business. The management of this big business is absolutely in the hands of the city council acting through its committees. As I have said, the system is simple, and the responsibility cannot be evaded as it can be in a muddled-up, complicated system like that of New York or Chicago or Newark. The people know what has to be done, and they know who has to do it. But, even at that, big figures are confusing to the average mind. And then, too, it is well to submit the figures which a city council publishes to an unsympathetic eye. And so, because the people of Manchester propose to know what is done with their money, they have in their service two men whose business it is to investigate and publish at regular intervals, every tendency of the council toward carelessness or extravagance. Never for a moment are the councillors permitted to forget whose money it is that they are managing with such fluent ease.

These two men are known as elective auditors. They are elected directly by the people, and the more merciless their attacks on the council the better they please the people. They are free from the slightest obligation to the council. They have access to all facts and figures, for the people of Manchester find it difficult to understand why their government managed by their personal representatives with their money, should not work wholly in the light. These reports are published weekly in the Manchester City News."—Samuel Merwin in "Success Magazine."

Slightly Mixed.

Two correspondents wrote to a country editor to know respectively, "The best way of assisting twins through the teething period," and "How to rid an orchard of grasshoppers."

The editor answered both questions faithfully, but unfortunately got the initials mixed, so that the fond father of the teething twins was thunderstruck by the following advice:—

"If you are unfortunate enough to be plagued by these unwelcome little pests the quickest means of settling them is to cover them with straw and set the straw on fire.'

While the man who was bothered with grasshoppers was equally amazed to read:—

"The best method of treating is to give them each a warm bath twice a day and rub their gums with boneset."

To know is to prevent. — If the miners who work in cold water most of the day would rub their feet and legs with Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil they would escape muscular rheumatism and render their nether limbs proof against the ill effects of exposure to the cold. Those setting out for mining regions would do well to provide themselves with a supply before starting.

"I have here," began the poet, "a short poem which I wrote on 'Niagara Falls.' My friends think it quite remarkable."

Over 1000 Elevators in the West.

Next in importance to the growing of good crops is the proper storing of them after they have been grown. In the Canadian West proper storage of wheat has engaged the attention and capital of some of the strongest financial men and is yearly attracting men and capital from the south and east. The rapid handling of wheat is reduced to a science in the Canadian West. To any wheat growing area so far inland as the Canadian West, the cheapest route to the sea is a matter of primary importance so that terminal elevator storage on a large scale began almost before interior storage was considered.

The Canadian Pacific railway erected their first elevator at Fort William the head of interior navigation, as early as 1884, when elevator "A" was begun. It received the crop of 1885 and was considered a giant in those days, having a capacity of 1,250,000 bushels. It is still doing business at the old stand, and has been joined by B, C, D and E, all o. modern construction and equipment and with a total capacity of 8,500,000, and in addition there are located at Fort William the Empire elevator with a capacity of 1,700,000 bushels, and the Ogilvie with a capacity of 500,000 This gives Fort William a storage capacity of 10,750,000.

Port Arthur, the adjoining town, has the largest wheat elevator in the world. This is the magnificent tile tank elevator of the Canadian Northern railway with a capacity of 6,500,000 bushels. The King elevator in the same town has a capacity of 800,000 bushels. The terminal storage at Port Arthur and Fort William, twin towns on Lake Superior, reaches the immense total of 18,500,000 bushels. This shows a striking growth for the past 21 years.

The operation of this immense elevator plant is of the most modern type. All the elevators can be reached by freighters of 18 foot draught and the total loading capacity at the head of the lakes is 435,000 bushels per hour. The unloading from cars takes longer than to load into vessels, yet 145,000 bushels or 145 cars can be unloaded hourly, and a higher rate than this has been made during he rush before the close of navigation.

Like all prairie countries, where a farmer may put in a hundred acres of wheat before he builds a house or stable, the need of storage was early felt in the Canadian west. For a time it was met by small elevators and flat warehouses, and considerable wheat was loaded direct from the threshing to the cars. ...n the rapid increase of crops this was soon outgrown, and elevator companies with a large capital were formed. Large elevators were erected all over the country at every wheat centre, their tall, gaunt red figures being seen for miles across the level prairie.

In 1900, just six years ago, there were 519 elevators at interior points in the Canadian West with a total capacity of 15,379,000 bushels. Last year there were 1,018 elevators with a capacity of 28,768,030 bushels, representing an investment of close on $55,000,000, no slight indication in itself of the permanent character of wheat growing as an industry in the Canadian West.

All these elevators are under government supervision, each elevator being under license and its capacity duly attested, being on file in the office of the "warehouse commissioner," whose headquarters are in Winnipeg. All grain is subject to government inspection at Winnipeg and is there graded through the office of the chief grain inspector of the Dominion of Canada. All grain weighed into terminal elevators is weighed under the inspection of the government weighmaster, and the cars must strictly comply with the conditions in the certificate of inspection made at Winnipeg. All grain weighed into vessels must be weighed under the eye of a government weighmaster. In fact everything is done to safeguard the interest of the farmer and to maintain the high standard of Western Canadian wheat.

Of late years there has been a marked increase in the milling capacity of the West. Large mills are now in progress of building or are being planned for Kewatin, Winnipeg and other points. These added to the large mills already in operation at various centres and numerous smaller mills at country points will increase the total milling capacity of Western Canada to over 30,000 barrels daily.

SUNDAY AT THE FARM.

On Sunday mornin's years ago, when but a little lad,
I used to come to salt the cows in this same field with dad.
The little clouds that floated round I thought were bits of wool;
The sky was blue as 'tis to-day and calm and beautiful.

Now dad is gone and mother, too; they lie up on the hill,
Just by that clump of poplar trees, beyond the old red mill.
For time has kept a-creepin' on, and you and I are men,
And little Bobbie thinks the thoughts that I was thinkin' then.

And now I come out here and set me down a spell,
Where rustlin' leaves and wavin' grain
seem whisperin', "All is well."
I wish that all who'd like to feel their dead is safe from harm
Could come out here and spend with me a Sunday on the farm.

AN IMPERIAL CRISIS.

Prof. Leacock of McGill and His Opinions on the Empire.

"I'm inclined to think that the period in which we now live will be in the future looked upon as a period of Imperial crisis," began Prof. Leacock of McGill University in an address before the Toronto Canadian Club recently. Proceeding, he pointed out that the coming years would be the years of great empires. It will no longer be a little England, a little Holland, a little France. In the vast extent of the British Empire there were divisions which might become dangerous, divisions in commerce, divisions in military arrangements and in other ways. In the British Empire there were a severance and a sunderance in the tariffs—one tariff in Canada, another in Newfoundland, another in the Leeward Islands, and so on. In military and naval defence, too, there were the same divergencies, and in control of the seas lay the safety of the Empire, yet the whole burden of the navy, totalling $184,000,000 was laid on the shoulders of the people of Britain, and that burden had reached its high-level mark and could not be increased, yet Canada practically subscribed nothing towards the cost of the navy. The traditions and the necessities of Britain required a fleet equal to the combined fleets of any two European, but now Japan and the United States were entering on a course of military and especially of naval expansion, which might change the balance of naval power.

What was necessary was really a reconstruction of Imperial relations. He was aware that many people were opposed to the very idea of any Imperial reconstruction, and they were urged to allow the ordinary evolution of affairs to work out a settlement of the difficulties surrounding the peoples of the Empire. After a playful reference to the doctrine of evolution, which had given so much trouble to theorists, he clearly realized that the idea of Imperial federation, with the necessary creation of local Parliaments for all parts of the Empire, would not be readily accepted by the British people. He thought the conservatism of the British people would be slow to adopt these proposals. If, however, such a plan was not yet feasible, he thought that to the present 670 members of the British House of Commons, there might be added 166 representatives from the white populations of the colonies. Comparing the population of Canada with that of Ireland, he urged that the Dominion should have its representatives at Westminister to make or unmake Imperial Cabinets as did the Irish members. Without direct representation, Canada could not directly influence the British Imperial Parliament.

With such a representation the tariff question, and that of Imperial defence would be dealt with in a proper manner. Canada and the other colonies would thus be represented in an Imperial Parliament which would have the power to enforce taxation for Imperial purposes. He was aware that such a proposal would be looked upon as quixotic by many. There were, however, many who would talk and rave about their willingness to pay 50 cents or $1 annually to the British Exchequer towards the cost of defence, but how many had sent their money direct to Britain. It required some force or authority to compel such payments.

Our safety lay in union with the Empire. We could not exist as an independent nation. The forces of sectionalism were at work, and it was time to have done with the Canada first cry and unite for the Empire.

The Era of Constantinople.

The era of Constantinople, extensively adopted in the Greek empire, like several others, began with the foundation of the world, which is fixed at B. C. 5508. This era was generally followed by the adherents of the Greek church and prevailed in Russia until the reign of Peter the Great.

Canada's Proud Moment.

The Greeks in their noble effort to regain their ancient prestige as the champion athletes of the world have found that not alone have the hero's harp and the lover's lute found the tame their shores refused mo scenes that echo further west than their sires' islands of the blest. Their old athletic precedence has also left them, and not even rested on European soil. North America would seem to be today the home of the highest virility, and in North America, Canada holds her own.. We have not yet seen separately stated what Canada's prowess was in general exercises at the Olympic games at Athens. She was grouped with the rest of the empire, and the whole empire only took thirty-six points against seventy-five taken by the United States. This was probably to be looked for. The United States has some 75,000,000 of the pick of European populations. The British empire has some 55,000,000 whites, and the mother country has sent much of her best blood across the sea. The man who won for the United States the third in the Marathon race was an Irish-American. The first place in that supreme event was taken for Canada by William Sherring of Hamilton, who will be acclaimed by a vastly larger world than any of the old Olympic winners ever conceived of. Canada will do him honor because he has won her the highest honor in the eyes of the world, which has not advanced yet beyond the stage when physical prowess wins more attention and glory than either intellectual or moral eminence. But, further than that, Canada owes thanks for the best advertisement that could have been given her as the land in which physical health and strength are capable of the highest development, and therefore the best of lands to live in. The value set upon this success is shown by the congratulations of the British ambassador at Athens telegraphed to the governor-general. Canada has had her Hanlon and her Renforth and Scholes in aquatics. She has occasionally held the Kalapore cup with her rifles, and has, on two occasions, won the blue ribbon of rifle shooting, the king's prize, and now she has gained from the pick of the world's athletes a prize the most romantic and widely advertised of all.—Montreal Witness.

A Woman's Health

Is a heritage too sacred to be experimented with. For her peculiar and delicate ailments only medicines of known composition and which contain no alcohol, narcotics, or other harmful or habit-forming drugs should be employed. Such a medicine is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—a remedy with a record of over forty years of cures to recommend it; a remedy, the makers of which print its formula on every bottle-wrapper and attest its completeness and correctness under oath; a remedy devised and adapted to woman's delicate constitution by an educated physician—an experienced specialist in woman's diseases; a remedy, every ingredient of which has received the written endorsement of the most eminent medical writers of all the several schools of practice for the cure of woman's peculiar diseases; a remedy which has more bona-fide cures to its credit than any other sold by druggists for woman's special requirements. It is not given away in the form of "trial bottles" to be experimented with, but is sold at a fair price by all dealers in medicines.

If a woman has bearing down, or dragging pains, low down in the abdomen, or pelvis, backache, frequent headaches, dizzy or fainting spells, is nervous and easily startled, has gnawing feeling in stomach, sees imaginary floating specks, or spots before her eyes, has melancholia, or "blues," or a weakening disagreeable drain from pelvic organs, she can make no mistake by resorting to the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It will invigorate and tone up the whole system and especially the pelvic organs.

No woman suffering from any of the above symptoms can afford to accept any secret nostrum or medicine of unknown composition, as a substitute for a medicine like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which is OF KNOWN COMPOSITION and has a record of over forty years and sells more largely to-day than ever before. Its makers withhold no secrets from their patients, believing open publicity to be the very best guaranty of merit.

Dr. Pierce invites all suffering women to consult him by letter free of charge. All letters of consultation are held as sacredly confidential and an answer is returned in plain sealed envelope. Address: Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y.

Woman's Realm.

Perforated leather is one of the newer things of the season, and is made up in belts' hats and various trimming accessories for coats and costumes.

Stunning Oriental embroideries and the heavier grade of lace, linen and silk are employed for raw silk gowns, and seem to bring out their simple but serv ceable beauty.

Shirtwaist suits of wash materials have been taken freely, with the greator interest displayed in linen, chambray and lawn. White continues to be the favored color.

In art embroidery attention is chiefly directed at the present time to articles of wear. These include waist patterns, collars, cuffs, belts, corset covers, hats, parasols, etc.

Embroidered pique Dutch collars are an important feature of the neckwear trade just at present, and buyers are speaking favorably of them and also placing large orders.

Batiste is the accepted fabric for spring and summer wear in the corset line, although some exquisitely brocaded silks have sold in the more expensive class of goods.

Lace mitts are selling well in the cities. Anything will sell that has over a two clasp length. Black and white is preferred because of the scarcity, any color is readily taken.

Business on the separate cloth skirt in fancy material has been good. Voiles, panamas, and fancy worsteds are the materials most in demann with a slightly lesser interest in silk skirts.

Linen suits are receiving much attention at the present time. There is also inquiry for colored linen suits, and since tan is becoming so fashionable quite a few of that shade are being sold.

Long gloves will unquestionably be in great demand for fall, and the supply of kids can not be increased. The glove problem is becoming a serious one with the jobber as well as with the retailer.

The fall millinery color card is chiefly remarkable for its array of what are now called pastel tones, although they are much deeper and far less opaque than the pastels of a few years ago.

The tendency in dress goods for late summer and early fall wear is mid-greys with slight colored overcheck effects. As the season advances dark mixtures will be more prominent, gradually running into black. A feature of woollens is the persistent demand for blacks and blues, which continues without change in spite of the rush for greys. The same is true of plain white linens, which promise to be quite as much in evidence next year as this, with very little change. Embroidered goods are also a strong feature.

Among the fabrics which hold a prominent place in the fall trade in dress goods are French serges, India twills, Panamas, prunellas and Henriettas. Light and mediumtweight poplins have been meeting with favor. In imported and domestic lines both a steady demand is reported for black voiles. Order for fancy woollens, serges and broadcloths are said to have been booked for the new light weight season on the imported grades, and the domestic market is expected to follow suit In the color schemes for the fall a preference is exhibiting itself for dark shades. Green is becoming a more popular shade. Dark plaids are said to be selling well also.

THE CHEAPEST PLACE IN THE CITY.

Every individual is liable, at any time, to become a reporter. No matter how large a force a newspaper employs, nearly all information must be gathered at second hand, must be reported to the reporter. To say that the press is unreliable, is almost equivalent to saying that the people are unreliable, for the people furnish the news in nine cases out of ten and ought to have pride in seeing to it that the newspaper is promptly and correctly informed. No one should complain of a newspaper, who has been derelict in his duties thereto. The President of the United States is not too exalted in his position to neglect to furnish the press, in a straightforward, reliable and truthful manner, with all information that ought to be published. The people who want good newspapers should follow his example.—From an address by Melville E. Stone at Harvard University.

A newspaper can not be conducted without the support and goodwill of the public; the public can not afford to do without the newspaper. Each is dependent upon the other. While the newspaper is a public servant, yet, the paper has some rights which the public must recognize.

In conducting a newspaper the publisher must depend largely upon the goodwill of the public to supply the local news. This condition leads the publisher to ask, in season and out of season, that people supply any items with which they are familiar. And many times the number of items published is controlled by the citizens who do or do not furnish the news.

In addition to publishing news items the average paper also each year publishes numerous church and society notices relating to business and social meetings. For these no charge is made, though their publication has a cash value to the societies; and if paid for would bring the publisher several hundred dollars a year. As nearly everybody belongs to some church or society may be regarded as paying in full for all service rendered it by the public in supplying news items.—Milton, Wis., "Journal.

There was a large attendance of players at the practice of the Mt. Pleasant Band on Monday evening in Oddfellows' Hall. The progress of the Band is remarkable and it will give a concert on Mt. Pleasant about the 1st of August. The Band is in need of more clarionet players; any young man who has a desire to learn the clarionet can now avail himself of the chance. Bandmaster Timms will give lessons free to those who will join the pupil, of course, must provide his own clarinet. On Monday and Wednesday evenings Mr. Timms will be at the Hall an hour earlier than usual to meet those who may desire to learn, and each practice night an hour's instruction will be given to beginners before the regular band practice. Such an opportunity as both presents itself and should be taken advantage of. During the rehersal on Monday evening the President, Mr. W. R. Owens, treated the players to ice cream from the Lady Maccabees Social, which was appreciated both by the Bandmen and the Maccabees.

The New York Dentists

OUR REPUTATION as Painless Dentists is shown by the daily increase in our practice. We have gained a world-wide reputation with our discovery, which, when applied to the gums, teeth can be extracted absolutely painless.

Our patients are so pleased with the results that they not only tell their friends, but personally bring them to our parlors that they may receive the same treatment. In this way, together with the highest-class dentistry, done by our Specialists, our practice has gradually increased till we are second to none in practice.

By the use of our Double Adhesive Suction Chamber we are able to fit the most difficult casts. Where other Dentists Fail We Meet With Success. If your teeth drop when you try to eat with them, or if you are afraid of them striking the pavement when you sneeze, there is something wrong; they do not fit. Our Double Adhesive Suction Chamber overcomes this difficulty and is Our Own Invention and can not be used by others.

Considering that the Maple Leaf and New Westminster lacrosse teams met Saturday last, and has been thoroughly discussed, it is sufficient to say at this date, the Maple Leaf boys covered themselves with glory. They played fast and clean lacrosse throughout the game, and they had the famous Royal City team pretty well fagged out in the last quarter. The Maple Leaf team has demonstrated its claim to rank with the best team in the League and before the schedule is over will in all probability rank second. On July 21st, the Maple Leaf team will meet the Vancouver Seniors on their home grounds, Brockton Point.

Linked by Fate

BY CHARLES GARVICE

Author of "The Verdict of the Heart," "A Heritage of Hate," "Nell of Shorne Mills," "Paid For," "A Modern Juliet," Etc.

"Yes, it is gold!" she said, her face flushing, her eyes glowing.

But Sutcombe's face grew pale, and, laying the quartz down, he drew back.

"I—I congratulate you, Miss Wood," he said—not "Decima," as he had of late slipped into calling her. "If—if there is much of this, you—you must be very rich!"

"I!" she said. "Ah, yes, I suppose so; but—but it was not for myself—" She stopped, for his face had grown hot, and his eyes flashed almost resentfully. Vivienne laid her hand upon his arm imploringly.

"Wait, wait till she has finished, Sutcombe," she whispered.

Nina looked from one to the other and, comprehending, colored almost as hotly as Sutcombe.

"No, no!" she said. "I—I was not going to offer you these, indeed they are not mine"—she paused—"only half of it is mine. But there is plenty more; my father said the island was an Eldorado; and the gold is yours, any one's who comes and likes to dig for it. Indeed, one need not dig very much, for it lies in the beds of the streams, and in streaks in the rocks—"

Sutcombe gazed at her in amazement too great for words.

"And—and no one knows of this but you!" he exclaimed at last.

"No one but I—and one other, the—the person to whom half of the gold belongs."

He wiped his brow, for to the least mercenary of men the presence of a vast quantity of gold, with prospective possession, is rather a discomposing fact, one not to be contemplated without a thrill.

"And he?" he asked, breathlessly. "Where is he? Why is he not here?"

The color left her face and her lids drooped.

"I do not know," she said in a low voice. "He—he may be dead!"

"He did not escape with you?" asked Sutcombe.

She made a movement of her hand, as if the question, the subject, pained her.

"No—I left him here. I—ah, do not ask me any more!"

Vivienne leaned forward and touched her hand. "No, no, dear, we will not! Oh, do you think we do not understand! To be wrecked here on this lonely place! To have suffered, as you must have suffered—no, not a word more shall be spoken, dear Decima!"

Sutcombe leaned against the log wall of the hut, his arms folded, his eyes fixed, not on the gold, but on the floor.

"And it was for us, for us that you have worn yourself to a shadow with anxiety and hope deferred," he said. "That we might have this gold—"

"Why not?" she broke in. "Would you not have done the same for me, for any friend? And what true friends you have been to me! And what is the use of it if it cannot be put to such good service?"

"And you never thought of yourself?" he said, very quietly. "You were not rich—"

"Very poor, indeed," she said with a laugh.

"And you never thought of finding this island, this Eldorado, for your own benefit?"

"No," she said simply; "what should I have done with it? What is the use of money when—" She paused. "Besides I was lucky so soon. I thought so much of my work, of my play, that if the gold had been lying on Hampstead Heath instead of on a mysterious island in the wide ocean, I don't think I should have troubled to take the train for it." She sighed, then, with a winning smile, she went up to him and touched his sleeve. "Lord Sutcombe, you won't let scruples interfere, you won't—make difficulties?"

He longed to take the hand that touched him so pleadingly, to draw her outside and say, "I will take the gold you offer me so generously if you will be still more generous and give me that which I value beyond all the gold in the world—yourself!" But he knew, though he could not have told how he knew, that this was of all moments the worst for such a question; of all places, this the least favorable.

"No," he said, drawing in a long breath. "I'm not so churlish—so foolish. I am still too amazed—at present, it all seems like a story out of an adventure book—to quite realize it; but—I accept your generous offer. If the gold is here for the finding—well, Vivienne and you shall be rich."

"Yes!" said Vivienne with womanly cunning. "I accept unreservedly. I have hated the thought of being poor! Why, think of it! We should have had to sell the Ariel at Melbourne, have been obliged to go in for farming, or something of that kind, or settled in some stuffy town on the Continent. And now we can keep the dear old yacht, and we can all go back to England—and you can buy back Southerwood, Sutcombe—I told you how it passed from us, Decima? And I can get those pearls I wanted, and—oh, what will you do with all your money, you millionairess?" she broke off, drawing Nina to her and hugging her.

Nina tried to smile. What, indeed? The uselessness of the gold mocked her at that moment as it had mocked her the day it had been found. There was only one thing she wanted, and it is the one thing no money can buy—forgetfulness! But she strove to dispel the black shadow from her mind.

"Oh, I'll found a National Theatre—for the performance of artistic dramas—by 'Herbert Wood!'" she said. "But now let us be practical, as Polly would say. This is a dangerous secret, Lord Sutcombe. You know now why I thought it better that we should land alone?"

He nodded.

"Let me think!" He took out his pipe. "May I? Thanks! Yes, the the men mustn't land here, at any rate; they must not come further into the island than necessary. We want water—"

"There is plenty near the beach!" said Nina, stifling a sigh: back came the times when she walked from the stream with the can in her hand, and Vane coming to meet her to take it from her.

"Quite so. They shall get what they want, and Barnes shall take the Ariel on a cruise, leaving us here. There are enough provisions—"

And there are fish and duck, and turtles in plenty," said poor Nina, trying to smile.

Vivienne clapped her hands and nodded gleefully, though all the time she was watching Nina from the corner of her gentle eyes. "Why, it will be like a picnic, a real picnic! Even if there had not been all this wonderful gold, it would have been worth all the trouble—ah, but not your anxiety, dear!—just to see so beautiful and romantic a place. It is like a Fairy Isle!"

Nina turned away swiftly; the name was like a stab.

They talked over Sutcombe's plan, and presently he went down to the beach, signalled the boat and sent it off for rugs, bedding and provisions; and when these were brought he went aboard, told Barnes they intended picnicking on the island, and ordered him to take the Ariel on a cruise and pick them up in a week's time.

When he came back he found that the two women had already started the picnic. Nina's hut had been transformed into quite a snug and comfortable bower with the aid of the rugs and other things brought from the yacht, and Nina, Vivienne told him, was down at the old "saloon" getting tea.

"It's the most wonderful, the most bewitching place, Sutcombe," Vivienne said from the cosy nest in which Nina had bestowed her. "The 'saloon' is the large hut where the men lived. We have arranged that you are to sleep in a corner of it—for the other hut is not so comfortable, Decima says. She thinks of everything; indeed, she is as wonderful as the island! I tell her she is the fairy of the enchanted spot, and that presently she will wave her hand and we shall wake up to find we are on board the Ariel and that we have been asleep and dreaming. Have you looked at those lumps of gold again, Sutcombe? Are you sure they won't turn into 'chunks' of just common rock? Can you realize yet this good fortune of ours?"

"No," he said. "I can only realize that she has made us rich again, that— I'll go and see if I can help her."

When he went down to the saloon, carrying some provisions with him, Nina was sitting over the fire she had made, her head resting on her hands, her eyes fixed dreamily and sadly on the blaze. Her whole pose reminded him of Millais' exquisite "Cinderella," and he stopped and looked down at her for a moment with his heart's longing in his frank blue eyes; and the longing slid into a yearning to pierce the secret of the sad face that she turned to him, sad though she smiled and said, brightly enough:

"It is nearly boiling. Have you brought the tea? It is past Lady Vivienne's time, you know."

"Yes, here's the tea," he said. "But I was not thinking of Vivienne, Decima, but of you. How could I think of any one else at such a moment? To speak of thanks"—he made a gesture of despair—"but if you knew how full my heart is—"

"Don't!" she said, quickly, and with a touch of reproach. "Have I even tried to thank you both for all your goodness to me? Be as generous!" She laughed up at him through the thin veil of sadness. "There! It is boiling at last. The teapot! Thanks. Now, if you'll carry the kettle—"

She gave him no time for more words, but talked quickly and brightly as she led the way back to the ladies' hut. Her effort at cheerfulness did not end here, and proved successful, for, notwithstanding the shadow of the past which hung over her, the fact that she had been able to befriend these two who had been so good to her uplifted her.

"We shall have to work hard," she said, as she poured out the tea, "for a week is not a long time."

"We can send the Ariel away again, or we can come back, now that we know the way here," said Sutcombe eagerly, for the thought that they three were alone on this island, that he should see her nearly every hour of the day was a secret joy to him; but Nina did not respond.

"You will soon tire of the solitude," she said in a low voice. "Tomorrow I will take you were we—I—saw some of the gold. There is a spade"—she winced as the scene of the burial of her father and poor Fleming rose before her—"and some other tools we brought from the wreck; and while you are getting the gold, I will go and fish."

"You fish! Why, how did you learn, who taught you?" cried Vivienne.

"I—I—have watched—people fishing," said Nina.

Vivienne looked round wonderingly. "Oh, it's just a dream, as I say!" she laughed. "Think of it, Decima! Here are you and we two sitting here on this remote island, just we three on this fairy isle, and far away in giddy London, with its electric lights and its ceaseless crowds, are our friends, the people we know, leading the same old dreary, monotonous lives, in the same old, smoky air. Why, Decima, do you realize that they are just at this moment—or is the time different?—thronging to the Momus to see the latest successful play? If they could only see the author!"

They busied themselves with the necessary work of this most realistic picnic until nearly nightfall, and at last Vivienne, suddenly growing tired with the excitement, was persuaded by Nina to go to bed.

Sir Arthur Nicolson, the chief representative of the British mission at the Morocco conference, will receive the Knight Grand Cross of St. Michael and St. George.

CARE OF THE DAIRY CALF.

Method Employed at Minnesota Experiment Station.

The following method of caring for calves is in use at the Minnesota experiment station dairy barn and seems to give the most satisfactory results, writes P. D. S. in Northwestern Agriculturist. After the calf has run with his mother two or three days and has been put in good order by her colostrum milk he should be taken away and shut up in a very small pen, a partition off from the large calf pen, so that he cannot suck the other calves' ears, which is a very objectionable practice to allow in a bunch of calves.

Now, right at this stage comes a very critical time for the calf. White scours only too often attack him at this period, and often, too, he is laid low by calf cholera. Now is the time to give a preventive. Take about a pint bottle of milk at the temperature of 98 degrees F., no cooler, and put in it a teaspoonful of any of the good creosote disinfectant compounds for sale in the market. This, of course, is a germicide and will kill the germs of the cholera in the stomach of the calf. I know this to be a good remedy and if given will often save a calf's life.

The next thing the calf must do is to learn to drink out of a pail. This often takes time and patience. Be free with both, as a little dairy calf three days old is pretty tender and must be handled carefully. First of all, you must have that whole milk at the temperature of the mother's body, about 98 degrees. The cause of the most of the scours in calves is feeding cool milk. Dip the finger in the milk and then let the calf suck it off once or twice, meanwhile drawing his head in this way closer and closer to the pail until his muzzle is right in the milk. After he once gets his mouth into it he will very soon learn to drink. He should be fed on whole milk for about a month and then for two or three weeks on half and half and then on skim milk.

At the station we find it a very good practice to put blood meal and bone meal in the skim milk. Others use flaxseed meal with very good success.

After the calf is a month old perhaps he will eat a little hay, and then you can turn him out in the big pen with the rest of the calves. Now, as these young animals are very susceptible to parasites and diseases and as such pests thrive well in moist, dirty places, we therefore see that it is very important that we keep the calves and pen clean by the liberal use of fork and brush and occasional application of a disinfectant. Above all things, the drinking pails must be kept scrupulously clean. It takes a little time, of course, but it pays, because it kills disease. Don't be afraid to use plenty of bedding to keep the little calves off the damp floor.

DAIRY FARM WISDOM

Milk is capable of absorbing almost any odor with which it comes in contact, and during the process of milking a large amount of air is incorporated into it, driven by the streams of milk from the udder, says Kimball's Dairy Farmer. If this air is pure, it will aid in cooling and aerating the milk; if impure, it will taint the milk with whatever disagreeable odor and undesirable bacteria it contains. No other article of human food will absorb more of the surrounding atmosphere than milk. How many of us would like to have our entire breakfast left in an ordinary cow barn for twenty to thirty minutes, as is often done with milk? Remembering that milk is a human food and that it absorbs injurious odors so quickly, let us be very careful how we handle it.

A Stall For Each Cow.

There are two ways of considering economy—one for the cow and the other for the owner, says Hoard's Dairyman. In the end the man who is economical for the cow's sake will find he has best served his own economy. The objection that most farmers make to the plan of a stall for each cow is that it takes more room. Yes, but it increases the efficiency of the cow, and barn room is cheaper than cows.

Test the Cows.

If you test your cows one day each week during the milking period and on the same day of the week or will test them, say, for a week when they have been in milk for a month and take this for the average of nine weeks, four weeks before the week test and four after, you will find out enough about your cows to induce you to make more full and complete tests hereafter. —Wallace Farmer.

The Dairy Bull.

When a farmer thinks of buying a dairy bull to improve the quality of his future cows he should look to the quality of the bull, not to the cheapness of price. The character and reliability of the breeder go a great way in such a transaction. He should try to buy a "future" of good quality that will run on for generations and that will help increase the good effects of every future sire that may be used.—Holstein-Friesian Register.

Cow Ignorance.

About one-third who milk cows lose money on them. The main cause is ignorance.

Improving the Milk.

The work required to sponge an animal's flank and udder is but a trifle, and great improvement can be made on the milk and its products.

Get Rid of Scrubs.

Scrub care, scrub management and scrub breeding will perpetuate the scrub animal. It is the skill and knowledge of right breeding, the influence of systematic and careful feeding, the attention to details in developing and selecting their breeding stock that will force the scrub out of existence.

He Spoke His Mind.

Two Irish farmers who had not seen each other for a long time met at a fair. They had a lot of things to tell each other. "Shure, it's married I am," said Murphy. "You don't tell me so," said Moran. "Faix, yes," said Murphy, "an' I've got a fine, healthy bhoy, which the neighbors say is the very picture of me." Moran looked for a moment at Murphy, who was not, to say the least, remarkable for his good looks, and then said, "Och, well, what's the harum so long as the child's healthy?"—Dublin Gazette.

FRESH VEGETABLES.

They Should Be Freely Used In the Early Spring.

It is believed, by vegetarians that a purely vegetable diet makes people amiable, good natured, generous, developing the finer characteristics of the user, and that excessive meat eaters become the opposite.

Whether this be true or not, fresh vegetables are appreciated in the early spring. They are an essential change from the heavy winter viands and should form the greater part of our daily menus.

Almost every vegetable has its particular use in the human system, and nature provides sufficient variety to keep us in fine bodily condition if we will live in accordance with her laws and not abuse her gifts.

Tomatoes act directly on the liver.

Onions, garlic, leets, shallots, chives, stimulate the circulation, increase the saliva and gastric juices and promote digestion.

Pears, beans and lentils, called also legumes, are among the most nutritious of vegetables, containing as much carbon as wheat and more muscle forming food.

Lettuce and celery both have a good effect upon the nerves. The former is soothing and the latter a tonic.

The free use of pieplant, or rhubarb, is considered a "spring tonic" and will prevent the use of medicine which is often apparently necessary to tone up the system. Being such a common and inexpensive plant, it is really not appreciated by the majority of housewives. When so fortunate as to have it growing in the garden it is generally used in small amounts for pies early in the season and the remainder allowed to go to waste, when it might be utilized in a variety of appetizing dishes all the year around, as it can be preserved for winter use equally as well as the more expensive fruit.—Philadelphia Press.

The Hatless Man.

"The hatless man is here to stay," said a hatter, "and his coming did not meet with the opposition that the shirt waist man incurred.

"All but the baldheads were hatless men last summer. At the seashore, among the mountains, automobiling, horsebacking, canoeing, rowing, driving, walking, the young men were invariably hatless. Their faces were tanned, and the sun had given a bright, coppery hue and a crisp quality to their hair.

"I know a half dozen undergraduates of Princeton who took a cross country walk of 200 miles in August without hats.

"This new fashion has hurt the hat business undeniably. On account of it my summer sales have been smaller than ever before. Still I don't grieve. I like the idea of going hatless. The fact is, I went hatless myself during my vacation. The sun and air did my hair good.

"When the shirt waist man appeared everybody derided him. A hoot went up from one end of the country to the other. But the hatless man was received in silence, an approving silence."—New York Herald.

War on Trailing Skirts.

A pretty war of skirts is being fought out in a small German town, where the League Against the Trailing Skirt has been formed, with the support of the mayor, who has even gone so far as to regulate in an edict the length of the offending garment. It is this last piece of municipal tyranny that has aroused the long suffering woman of fashion, and she has formed a counter Union of the Liberty of Dress. So far it seems that the league is in the ascendant, for it has just dined the mayor triumphantly, while the union, scorning such gastronomic methods of bribery, is trusting to greater elegance of appearance for the propitiation of the masculine authorities.

Phonographs In Court.

The use of a phonograph as a witness occurred for the first time on a recent trial in the United States court at Boston. In this connection it is recalled that photographs had to fight their way to the witness stand. The right to put telephone conversations in evidence has been upheld in some cases. If the use of the phonograph as a witness becomes general it will also become a universal memorandum. Contracts of all sorts, from a merger deal to a promise of marriage, can be recorded as infallibly as on paper or parchment. In breach of promise cases especially a phonograph would be of great value.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Friends.

Never judge a person by his relatives, but by his friends. One isn't responsible for his relatives. Be they good, bad or indifferent, they are thrust upon him, but friends are self chosen, and what they are so is the person.

THE PLANET MERCURY.

Like Venus and For Like Cause, It Is Now a Dead World.

Mercury is a body devoid, practically if not absolutely, of air, of water and of vegetation. Consequently it is incapable of supporting any of those higher organisms which we know as living beings. Its surface is a vast desert. It is rough rather than smooth. Whether this roughness be due to mountains proper or to craters we are too far away from it to be able yet to say. The latter is the more probable. Over the greater part of its surface change either diurnal or seasonal is unknown. Three-eighths of its surface is steeped in perpetual glare, three-eighths shrouded in perpetual gloom, while the remaining quarter slowly turns between the two. The planet itself, as a world, is dead.

Interesting as Mercury thus proves to be, the interest as regards the planet itself is of a rather corpselike character. Less deterrent perhaps is the interest it possesses as a part of the life history of the solar system, for tidal friction, the closing act in the cosmic drama, has brought it where it is. The machine has run down. Whether it ever supported life upon its surface or not, the power to do so has now forever passed away. Like Venus and for like cause, it is now a dead world. And it was the first thus to reach the end of its evolutionary career, earlier to do so than Venus, inasmuch as tidal action was very much greater upon it than on Venus and consequently produced its effect more quickly. Mercury has long been dead. How long, measured by centuries, we cannot say, but practically for a very long time. Venus must have become so comparatively recently. Both, however, now have finished their course and have in a most literal sense entered into their rest.

SEEING SICILY.

Not to Know This Island Is Not to Know Greece.

There are some lands which have always laid a spell upon the mind, upon the imagination, upon the heart. Greece, above all other countries, has entranced the mind. The imagination has ever loved the east—Egypt, the Indies, forgotten Asia, the almost as mysterious Asia of today. For most of us the home land is the country of the heart; for many, it may be, it is Palestine, where was lighted the fire at which the hearts of incalculable millions are still warmed. Others are content to say with Emerson in the fine essay on "Heroism," "That country is the fairest which is inhabited by the noblest minds." But, above all other lands, there is one which has at once impressed the mind, the imagination and the heart of western peoples. When a famous poet declared that on his heart would be found engraved the word Italy the words voiced the emotion of a multitude in every country of Europe and in the great northern continent oversea.

To see Sicily, the old "Garden of the Sun," as the poets have loved to call it, is not to see Italy, though there may be a measure of truth in Goethe's remark that not to know Sicily is not to know Italy. In a sense one might more truly say of Sicily that not to know it is not to know Greece. In another sense, however, we have in this most beautiful of islands the intensification of Italy. Whatever is most Italian is in evidence here, though it is Italian of the south and not of the north. What a gulf divides them is known only to those familiar with the whole peninsula.—William Sharp in Century.

"Bulls" Not Irish.

Those who are not Irishmen sometimes trespass on Irish property. A French cure, preaching about sudden death, said, "Thus it is with us—we go to bed well and get up stone dead!"

An old French lawyer writing of an estate he had just bought added, "There is a chapel upon it in which my wife and I wish to be buried, if God spares our lives."

A merchant who died suddenly left in his bureau a letter to one of his correspondents which he had not sealed. His clerk, seeing it necessary to send the letter, wrote at the bottom, "Since writing the above I have died."

Language is a solemn thing. It grows out of life—out of its agonies and ecstasies, its wants and its weariness. Every language is a temple in which the soul of those who speak it is enshrined.—O. W. Holmes.

Feminine Finesse.

Duffer—My wife got a fiver out of me today with one happy remark. Puffer—Let's have it. Duffer—She told our boy Willie that she was his nearest relative, but that I was his closest.

Every day is a new life, every sunrise but a new birth.—Jordon.

Take No Risk With a Cold

Further Developments May Prove Fatal. There is Cure For You in

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine

If you could depend on a cold passing off of its own accord it would be all very well to let it run its course.

The risk is too great.

Consumption and pneumonia always have their beginning in a cold.

If you take prompt means of curing every cold you will never be a victim of these or other fatal lung troubles.

Did you ever wait to think of it that way?

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is best known on account of its extraordinary control over croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, asthma and severe chest colds.

As a means of overcoming ordinary coughs and colds, throat irritation and the many diseases of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs it has made an enviable reputation for reliability.

Pleasant to take, thorough and far-reaching in action, and certain in its beneficial results, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine should have a place in every house as a safeguard against consumption and other fatal lung diseases.

Mrs. R. T. Turner, Broadview, Sask., writes,—"We have seven children, and have used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for every one of them with good results. We get four bottles at a time and find it a good remedy to break up cold in the lungs."

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 25 cents a bottle, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every bottle.

SUNLIGHT SOAP

Wash oilcloths and linoleums with warm water and Sunlight Soap, rinse clean and wipe dry. The colors will be preserved and the surface unharmed.

Common soaps fade the colors and injure the surface. Sunlight Soap cleans, freshens and preserves oilcloths and lincleums.

Sunlight Soap washes clothes white without injury to the most delicate fabrics, or to the hands, for it contains nothing that can injure either clothes or hands.

Sunlight Soap is better than other soaps, but is best when used in the Sunlight way (follow directions).

Equally good with hard or soft water.

LEVER BROTHERS LIM'TED, Toronto

Last of the Aristocrats.

"The old French aristocracy dies with me," cried the Princess de Valmont on her deathbed. She was a bitter old soul, who, born of a long line of uncontaminated ancestors and married to a noble of equally superfine strain, had, through her husband's death in financial difficulties, to marry her five children to "abominable persons" of high character, but with the blight of trade or industry in their blood. Her last years were made mournful to her by this pitiful descent, and just before her grandiose last utterance, looking with a bitter smile at her children and grandchildren in tears round her deathbed, she broke silence in the following terrible reflection: "We have here," counting on her fingers, "representatives of carriage making, wholesale grocery, confectionery, coal mining and the stock exchanges, and all grafted on the old tree of the De Valmonts."

How Would You Like This Butter?

The Moor prepares butter in an original way and gets a different taste from the usual one. Fresh butter ("sibida," as he calls it), as known by us, he despises and uses only for cooking. It must be old if it is to be liked. After it has lain in a hole in the ground for some years and has got a certain appearance it becomes a delicacy. To make butter a goatskin is turned inside out. It is filled with milk, bound tight and tied to a tree. There it is beaten backward and forward till the butter is made. That is why you cannot get butter in Morocco without hairs all through it. The butter is then laid on pieces of wood and the maker goes to sell it. Possible buyers lift the dirty cover, put in their fingers and take out a taste and if the goods do not please close it down again and the salesman pursues his way.

Ingrowing Toe Nails.

It has been found by some that the copious application of dried powdered alum is sufficient to cure most cases of ingrowing toe nails. The applications are not painful, and the inflamed tissue is dried up, and a hard, resistant, nonsensitive bed is formed for the nail. The toe is wrapped in a cloth soaked in soap and water for twenty-four hours beforehand, and then the powdered alum is poured into the space between the nail and its bed, using cotton to keep the alum in place and repeating the application daily. The suppuration, if any exists, rapidly dries up, pain and discomfort are almost immediately relieved, and, the application being repeated for about five days, a cure usually results.

Crushing a Bore.

An Englishman, complimenting Americans on their skill at postprandial oratory, went on to discuss the possibility of boring an audience. He said the severest reproof for a bore which he recollected was that administered by the great Talleyrand while driving with a friend who kept telling him stories. As they passed through the streets of a continental town, which in those days were policed by many sentries, they observed one sentry yawn at his post, and Talleyrand said to his friend: "Hush! We are overheard."

"I will never forget my first experience in hospital work," said Chief Surgeon Millar of the Central Emergency hospital. "There was a green nurse in the detention ward and we had a very violent case in there—a man in the worst stage of delirium tremens. I was awakened in the middle of the night by the head nurse who requested me to come at once to the patient. When I got there I found him raving and very violent, with the new nurse scared out of her wits. I said:

"Why did you let him go so far? I left you some medicine to give him as soon as he got delirious."

"Yes, doctor,' she replied; "but you told me to give that to him if he saw any more snakes, and this time he was seeing blue dogs with pink tails."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

An applicant for a position in the Public Works Department in a certain city was undergoing a civil service examination. With a view of testing his knowledge of history, the examining officer, says the Youth's Companion, asked him what he knew of the Punic Wars.

"The name sounds familiar," said the applicant, "but I can't just remember when it was or where it happened."

"Don't you know anything about Scipio?"

"No, sir."

"Surely you have heard about Hannibal?"

"Oh, yes, I know all about Hannibal. That's where Mark Twain used to live."

"What is your favorite play?" asked the girl who quotes Shakespear.

"Well," answered the youth with long hair, "I believe I like to see a man steal second as well as anything"—Washington Star.

Late Returns from Oak Valley.

Ye scribe was laid up last week with a cold and stiff neck.

Hilda Skoyen, of Oak Valley, attended the Sages and Nelson wedding Saturday.

Ye scribe has been sewing for Hulda Sedahl.

The auction sale at Mike Finstad's was well attended, and the dance, too. But nobody got into a bad temper because it was crowded when they danced, as I heard they did at some other auction dances.

O, made a smash—no mash at the Finstad dance.

DELICATE BABIES.

Every delicate baby starts life with a serious handicap. Even a trivial illness is apt to end fatally, and the mother is kept in a state of constant dread. Baby's Own Tablets have done more than any other medicine to make weak sickly children well and strong. They give the mother a feeling of security, as through their use she sees her delicate child developing healthily. Mrs. S. M. LaBlanc, Eastern Harbor, N. S., says,—"up to the age of fifteen months my baby was weak and sickly and at that age could not walk. It was then that I began using Baby's Own Tablets, and the change they wrought in her condition was surprising. She began to get strong at once and has ever since been a perfectly well child." Every mother who values the health of her little one should keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house. Sold by all medicine dealers, or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A widow in a Maine town, according to the Boston Herald, was a strict constructionist in her theology, and would admit no lodger into her boarding-house who had a leaning toward Universalist views. One day an old sea captain happened along to ask for rooms.

"But, what do you believe?" asked the widow.

"Oh, most anything," replied the captain.

"Do you believe there is a hell?"

"Sure," was the reply.

"Well," parried the widow, "how many do you think will go here?"

The captain cautiously remarked that he thought 20,000 would be a fair estimate.

The widow paused, then stated that he could come in. "Twenty thousand," she said, "is better than none."

A Nationalist Abroad.

Kalgoorlie, West Australia, is one of the newest and best gold fields in the world. The following advertisement was prominently displayed in a recent issue of the Kalgoorlie Miner:—"Watch the progress of the British elections. Balfour, the coercionist, is defeated. Should his mate, Chamberlain, be also defeated, all comers can indulge in a little 'light refreshment' free of charge for a period of six hours from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., at Paddy Whalen's Shamrock Hotel."

HIS WIFE'S LUNGS BOTH AFFECTED

But the Great Consumptive Preventative brought Health and Happiness to his Home

"Our doctor said there was no cure for my wife as both her lungs were affected," says Mr. L. H. Walter, of Pearl Street, Brockville, Ont. "It was a sad disappointment to us both, just starting out in life, only married a short time. But before she had finished the first bottle of Psychine the pain in her lungs quickly went away, and after taking six bottles Mrs. Walter was a new creature and perfectly well again."

That is just one of the many families into which Psychine has brought hope, health and happiness. It is a living proof that Psychine cures Consumption. But don't wait for Consumption. Cure your LaGrippe, your Cough, your Bronchitis, your Catarrh, or your Pneumonia with the remedy that never fails—

A WELL-KNOWN BANDA MAN SPEAKS

A Well-Known J. P. is Cured of Kidney Trouble of Long Standing by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Banda, Ont., May 21—(Special.)—There is no one more widely known and highly respected in this section of the country than Wm. Bell, Esq., J. P., and the statement he makes below concerning his cure by Dodd's Kidney Pills bears weight and carries conviction with it.

"For more than a year I was a sufferer from kidney trouble," Mr. Bell says. "Always in pain and at times the agony would become unendurable and I was practically unable to attend to any of my duties. I doctored with several local physicians and tried every means to get cured, but without success. At last I was induced to give Dodd's Kidney Pills a trial. I have the greatest pleasure in stating that they drove away the pains entirely and restored me to my old time health and strength. I am sure I owe this entirely to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Improving the Occasion.

An inspector of schools was examining the scholars at a West County school and thought he would improve the occasion with a small class of girls by delivering the following homily:

"Children, especially love and reverence your parents, and above all, never give them pain of any kind. Now, there are two distinct kinds of pain, mental and physical, and" (addressing one of the children), "Nelly Ward, if, for instance, on your rising in the morning you found your father ill and suffering great pain, you would be sorry, would you not?"

Nelly looked at her questioner, and answered glibly:

"I ain't sorry when father 'aves the gout, sir; in fact, I'm glad."

"Glad!" exclaimed the astonished inspector. "Why, child, why?"

"Cos then he can't wear his boots. So I don't 'ave to clean 'em!"—Tid-Bits.

$100 REWARD $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

"This somewhat grasping habit," said Senator Burrows, in the course of a recent argument, "reminds me of a lady who dropped in the other day at a certain bank.

"Going to the paying teller's window, she opened her pocketbook, took out a check and pushed it under the brass grating.

"'Cash this, please,' she said.

"But the paying teller, after one glance at the check, pushed it back to the woman again.

"'I can't cash it, madam,' he said. 'It isn't filled in.'

"'There is my husband's signature on it,' the woman said, excitedly.

"'Yes, I know,' admitted the teller, but there is no amount.'

"'Oh, never mind that,' said the woman impatiently. "Give me what there is.'"

Mummy at Auction.

London.—The mummified body of a miner who lost his life 2,000 years ago will shortly be offered for sale at Stevens' auction rooms, in King St., Covent Garden.

The miner was a subject of the Incas, and death overtook him while he was at work in what is now the Antono copper mine, Sierra Atahualpa, Antofagasta, Chili. The body was mummified by the action of the copper oxide.

With the exception of a small hole in the head, the mummy is perfect, and everything—feet, hands and face—is beautifully preserved. But the body is green nearly all over from the action of the copper oxide.

A rug and two hammers made of stones, tied with leather straps into a bent stick made up as a double handle, were found on the ground by the miner's side. It was with these stone hammers that the miners—who never learned the secret of working iron—extracted the copper, which was valued by them even more than gold.

There is supposed to be only one other mummy of this kind in existence. It was recently bought for $5,000 by the Central Park museum, New York.

Prophets and Patriarchs.

The Rev. Edward A. Horton, of Boston, told this story at a recent banquet of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company. "A woman went marketing in Faneuil Hall," said the minister. She stopped before a stall where were displayed fowl so aged as to seem almost unsaleable. "What do you sell those for?" enquired the woman, wondering if the proprietor would dare call them chickens. "We usually sell them for profits, marm," was the curt response. "Oh," said the woman, "I thought they were patriarchs."—N. Y. Tribune.

NERVOUS CHILDREN.

St. Vitus Dance, Neuralgia and Headaches Common Among School Children.

St. Vitus dance is a disease that is becoming more and more frequent among school children. Young people tire the nerves with study and the nerves cry out. Sometimes the trouble takes the form of neuralgia, headache, nervous exhaustion, weakness of the limbs and muscles, and what we call "being run down." In other cases St. Vitus dance is the result, and the sufferer frequently loses all control of the limbs, which keep up a constant jerking and twitching. There is only one way to cure this trouble—through he blood which feeds and strengthens the nerves. And Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the only medicine that can make the new rich, red blood that feeds the nerves and strengthens every part of the body. The case of Flossie Doan, of Crowland, Ont., proves the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mrs. Doan says: "A couple of years ago my daughter Flossie was dangerously afflicted with St. Vitus dance. She became so nervous that after a time we could not let her see even her friends. She could not pick up a dish, lace her shoes, or make any movement to help herself. She had grown thin and very pale, and as she had been treated by several doctors, without benefit, I feared she would not recover. A friend advised me to give her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after he had used a couple of boxes I could see that they were helping her. We gave her nine boxes in all, and by that time she was perfectly well, and every symptom of the trouble had passed away and she is now a strong, well developed girl."

If your growing children are weak or nervous, if they are pale and thin, lack appetite or complain of headache or backache give them Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and see how speedily the rich, red blood these pills make will transform them into bright, active, robust boys and girls. You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Occult Phenomena.

Those who take an interest in occult phenomena will find much to their taste in the "Annals des Sciences Psychologiques," just published, in which are reported several strange occurrences which took place when Norway was separated from Sweden.

On Nov. 18 ust., we are told, a number of officers were assembled in the hall of the Casino of Akerhus, waiting for King Haakon to make his entry. Suddenly a cracking noise was heard and before anyone could turn around, a full-length portrait of Kink Oscar fell from the wall to the floor. The picture was picked up unhurt, but the crown on the top of the frame was smashed to atoms.

A few days afterwards a reception was being held at the house of Mr. Hagerum, a former Prime Minister, and the guests were talking of the accident at Akerhus. Someone said that evidently the Casino walls needed repairing, when suddenly a life-sized marble bust of King Oscar, which stood between the windows of the room, fell to the floor and was broken to pieces. Several other occurrences of a like nature are reported, and there can be no reason to doubt the good faith of the "Annales."

A Successful Medicine.—Everyone wishes to be successful in any undertaking in which he may engage. It is therefore, extremely gratifying to the proprietors of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills to know that their efforts to compound a medicine which would prove a blessing to mankind have been successful beyond their expectations. The endorsation of these Pills by the public is a guarantee that a pill has been introduced which will fulfil everything claimed for it.

Mark Twain, at a dinner in New York, told a story from his native town of Hannibal, Missouri.

"There are in the world," he said, "a good many men like Jonathan Scarborough of Hannibal.

"Scarborough was one of those men, with nothing evil absolutely known against them, who are yet looked on, and no doubt justly, with suspicion.

"It was thought of Scarborough that, for a poor man, he ate too much chicken. And one day the blow fell. He was arrested for chicken stealing.

"A witness was called to testify as to Scarborough's character.

"Did you ever know this man to steal poultry?" asked the lawyer for the defence.

"'No, I never did,' said the witness, 'But this is what I do know; if I was a chicken, and Jonathan Scarborough was about, I'd roost high.'"

RELICS OF FAMOUS QUEEN.

Chairs Used by Mary Queen of Scots Owned by a Winnipeg Man.

Two of the original set of nine chairs composing the bedroom set of Mary Queen of Scots during her eighteen years of imprisonment in Fotheringay castle, are in Winnipeg. The relics have been in the possession of an English family for generations, have followed a member of the family across to Canada, and have gone, like other family heirlooms, to pay the debts accumulated by the young man. The chairs are now in the possession of R. A. Douglas and are stored in the W. G. Douglas feed store, Princess and James streets.

On May 13, 1568, Mary Queen of Scots was taken to Fotheringay castle charged with conspiring against the life of Elizabeth of England. During her long imprisonment in the castle awaiting the trial which finally decreed that she should die, all of the ancient furniture of the luxurious prison remained intact. Some time after the death of Mary Queen of Scots a raid was made on the castle by the ancestors of the family who have held possession of the furniture and many other relics for so many years, and many of the paintings, silverware and plate were rifled from the castle. The bedroom set was among the goods stolen from the castle. Seven of the pieces are now held by the Countess of Warwick in England and the two in Winnipeg are the only known relics of the famous prison of the Scotch queen known to be this side of the Atlantic.

Anthony Babbington was accused of being implicated in the plot with Mary. One of the chairs bears a "T. B." in deep carved letters. Whether this be the initial of the famous Tony Babbington is not known. Another chair bears "E.R." which is thought by Mr Douglas to mean Elizabeth Regina.

As antique relics the chairs are of high value. They are insured for $1,000, and it was only recently that the Countess of Warwick offered a fabulous price for them so that she could complete her set. It seems, however, that it was only when Dame Fortune played false with the unfortunate member of the English family that he was willing to part with any of the articles that had been held for so many years by his family. The chairs are blackened by age. Parts of them are crumbling away to wormwood, and they are only held together by the most careful handling. A mere glance at the relics of the beautiful queen seems to recall to the mind the tragedy that marks one of the saddest pages of English history.

The age blackened wood, the warping hand carved figures seem to bring a waft of tragedy and of prison gloom, as if they too had played a small part in the life of the fair prisoner.

The efficacy of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup in curing coughs and colds and arresting inflammation of the lungs, can be established by hundreds of testimonials from all sorts and conditions of men: It is a standard remedy in these ailments and all affections of the throat and lungs. It is highly recommended by medicine vendors, because they know and appreciate its value as a curative.

Lord Strathcona on Western Canada.

In the special Canadian number of the London Financier and Bullionist is published an interesting interview with Lord Strathcona, in the course of which the High Commissioner says: "I am personally acquainted—intimately acquainted—with the Western States of the Republic, as well as with the Northwest of Canada. I can say from personal knowledge that the capacity of the latter for growing cereals and other crops is greater than that of the country farther south It is a well-known fact that, other conditions being equal, the further north cereals are grown, providing they have time to mature before the winter, the better the quality. They grow faster owing to the longer period of sunshine they get in the higher latitude. This is thoroughly understood and admitted. Forty years ago the northwest of Canada—what was then called Prince Rupert's Land—produced no foodstuffs. The few whites who were then in the employ of the Hudson's Bay Company imported everything they required in the way of food. Flour, meat, biscuits, butter, and even poultry and eggs were brought in from Eastern Canada and the United States. And that same country—now known as Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Assiniboia and Alberta—is now producing over 100,000,000 bushels a year of cereals.

With regard to immigration Lord Strathcona said "Here in England if a man is of that stamp that when he gets the opportunity to work he does not—if he won't or cannot work—at least he may have relations or friends or someone who may take an interest in him of some sort, but in Canada such a man would have no chance. There, if a man won't work when he has the opportunity, he goes down—it is all over with him.Now to induce people of that sort to go would be cruelty. There is room in the Dominion of Canada for millions of workers, but not for one idler."

The slum sociologist looked properly supercilious.

"My good woman," he asked, "do you believe in the whipping-post for wife beaters?"

"Naw," said the muscular matron, "but I believe in the hospital for any wife-beater that tackles me"—Brooklyn Eagle.

Have you tried Holloway's Corn Cure? It has no equal for removing these troublesome excrescences as many have testified who have tried it.

Superior.

Every one has a point of view as a serious-minded young English woman found out when she propounded to some working girls a scheme for Shakespear readings. "Hamlet" was to be the first topic, and she dealt out to the girls some copies and awaited comments. The first came from a girl belonging to that immense army of "bookfolders" so familiar to all frequenters of working girls' clubs. "Oh, I know this well," she said in a superior tone. "Really?" said the gratified teacher, "Is it wour favorite play?" The girl looked at her pityingly, "Lor' I ain't read it," she chuckled; "we stock 'em at our place; I've 'ad 'undreds through my 'ands. 'Amlet? Sick to deatn of 'im!"—New York Tribune.

It Has Many Offices.—Before the German soldier starts on a long march he rubs his feet with tallow, for his first care is to keep his feet in good condition. If he knew that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil would be of much better service he would throw away his tallow and pack a few bottles of Oil in his knapsack. There is nothing like it.

The Necessary Equipment.

"How do you know that you will ever attain great wealth?" sternly asked the girl's father. "Sir, confidently replied the suitor. "'I am both deeply pious and thoroughly unscrupulous." "Take her, my boy, and be happy."—Louisville Courier Journal.

Where Joy Elbowed Sorrow.

Hans is a German resident of Eastern Pennsylvania. Recently losing his wife by death, his grief and loneliness knew no bounds. After two weeks of mourning he 'made another match.' His friends, according to the custom of the country, surprised him by a rousing calithumpian serenade. Hans stood the racket as long as he possibly could, and then opening the window, in tones of greatest disgust called out: "Poys, ain't you ashamed mit yourselfs to make such a noise; and yust so soon a funeral."—Lippincott's.

The fact that Great Britain leads the world in fast railway runs is remarkable, when it is taken into consideration that there is far more traffic on British than on American and continental roads.

Incidents of the Moscow Revolution.

It was impossible to go quietly about your business, even in those parts of the city where there had been no disturbances. A dozen times a day you were peremptorily ordered to stop, and had to submit to an offensive search by more or less drunken soldiers. This, of course, did not trouble the insurgents, as there were not enough soldiers to search at every street corner, and those who carried arms found it possible, almost without exception, to avoid the patrols. But if you were in a hurry to go anywhere you were sure to be held up two or three times. I was searched twice in two minutes at the Iberian Gate. Another time I was riding along the Leontlefskaia with a friend. Our sleigh was stopped and we both had to get out. A young officer, having searched the sleigh—I suppose for bombs—allowed my friend to get in again.

He then turned to me and began—rather nervously—to search me. By chance I had a large pipe in my pocket, and through my heavy overcoat it might have looked like a revolver. He cried out an order, and three soldiers with fixed bayonets rushed to protect him. My friend told me afterwards that I looked like the statue of Arnold von Winkleried gathering in the lances of the Austrians and making way for liberty. At the time she was thoroughly frightened, as she thought that I might have a revolver. I didn't have time to think about statues. I was wondering whether the soldiers were sober enough to search me first or whether they would, as often happened, shoot first, and search afterwards. I had to stand there "hands up," while the officer unbuttoned my overcoat and gingerly pulled out the pipe. This incident had its humor, but more often there was nothing to laugh at.—Albert Edwards, in Harper's Weekly.

An Anonymous Letter.

A certain congressman from Virginia has long retained in his employ a colored man by the name of Ezekiel. One morning the master left the house leaving behind him a letter he had forgotten. Some time in the afternoon he remembered the communication, and as it was of some importance he hastened back home, only to find that the letter was nowhere to be seen in the library. He had a distinct recollection that the letter had been left on a table. He summoned Ezekiel and asked him if he had seen the letter.

"Yessah, yo' lef' it on yo' table."

"Then where is it now?"

"I mailed it, sah."

"You mailed it! Why, Zeke, I had not put the name and address on the envelope!"

"Jes' so sah! I thought it was one o dem annonymous letters.'— American Spectator.

She (indignantly)—Stop, sir! You shall not kiss me again! How rude you are! Don't you know any better?

An Irishman once met an Englishman who had an artificial leg. Being of a sympathetic nature, Pat enquired the cause of the loss of the limb, whereupon the Englishman said: there was some Irish blood in my body "A short time ago I discovered that there was some Irish blood in my body and that it had se ed in this leg, so I had it cut off." "'Tis a pity it didn't settle in your head, " came the quick retort.—Troy Times.

Savored of the Truth.

That's no lie," remarked the man with the newspaper.

"What's no lie?" queried the other party to the dialogue.

"This paragraph to the effect that 'wise men are more often wrong than fools are right.'" answered the other. —Chicago News.

The Dungeon of Naples.

While working under the street level of the Arch of Alfonso d'Aragona the workmen came upon a sort of cellar, which opened out into a series of small chambers, opening out on to galleries. All were strongly built of stone, and in the dim light the explorers were for a long time at a loss how to explain the mystery. It was revealed at last by the aid of candles, which exhibited on the walls rude drawings and despairing invocations for Divine aid—evidently from men in prison, some doomed to death and others to hopeless confinement. Chance had brought to light those abodes of horror and misery, the underground dungeons of the old kingdom of Naples.—London Globe.

From the Argonaut: When the eminent Wu Ting Fang was Chinese minister at Washington he was the guest of honor at one of the leading clubs, where he made an address, and was afterwards entertained by some of the younger members, who thought it would be great fun to get the oriental diplomat intoxicated. They plied him with champagne, highballs and beer until about 3 a.m., by which time most of the clubmen were maudlin. Cool as a cucumber, Mr. Wu surveyed the crowd and said suavely, in his perfect English: 'If I didn't know the club was composed entirely of gentlemen I should say that you fellows were trying to get me drunk." The session adjourned very shortly thereafter.

The Designer for June is already hinting of vacation days. Mary Kilsyth contributes an interesting article "A Camp in the Woods," and Laura B. Starr one on "The World's Children at Play," while the vacation suggestion department supplies two practical outlines for spending a few weeks pleasantly and inexpensively. That bright little love story of a wilful maid, "A By-Path in Altruria," by Susie Bouchelle Wight, comes to a happy termination in this number, while "The Interest of Bread Winning" series continues in an excellent hint on "The Travelling Photographer."

ASTONISHED THE DOCTOR

Physician said She Might Drop Dead at any time.

Mrs. Robt. Eaton

"The Doctor told me I had heart disease and was liable to drop on the street at any time," says Mrs. Robert Eaton, of Dufferin, Ont.

"I was afraid to draw my breath, it pained me so. I was nervous, short of breath, had dizziness, loss of appetite, smothering and sinking spells, and I could not sleep.

"Sometimes I would have to lie down to keep from falling. My hands and feet would seem to go to sleep and a sort of numbness would come all over me.

"I began using Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill. From the start I improved. I feel much stronger, look better, and altogether Anti-Pill has made a new woman of me.

The Need for Clean Men.

If one were to go to the President of the United States and ask him to name the country's greatest need he would reply in his quick, conclusive way, "Clean men." He knows. Smart men there are by the thousands; rich men abound more than in any other age of the world; able men are found in every state and township, but even from a population of eighty millions the chief executive has difficulty in finding the man of exceptional character for a post which requires a square and flawless morality. It is to his credit that he misses no opportunity to preach clean manhood. But neither presidents nor preachers nor teachers can do the work of fathers except in their own families. We do not mean to underestimate the marvellous influence of the mother. In most lands men who reach success give their mothers the credit. "All that I am I owe to my mother," said Lincoln. "It was you who taught me to write so, dear mother," said the crabbed Carlyle. We get our moral qualities from our mothers, our mental from our fathers, say the physiologists, and as we look back we find this maternal affection the loveliest thing on earth. But isn't there a conviction down deep in our souls that we should have done much better if our fathers had taken time and trouble to share our confidences in the years that counted most?—From the Delineator for June.

The other day two good-looking old ladies entered a prominent bank. One of them wanted a cheque cashed.

"But," said the cashier, "I don't know you; you'll have to get someone to identify you."

"My friend, here, will identify me," said the lady.

"But I don't know your friend," said the cashier.

"Well," said the lady with a withering smile, "I'll introduce you."—Pudge.

"Must."

"You must advertize"—with considerable accent on the "must"—is a common adjuration to business men The expression is too strong "Must" is not the word. "You should advectize," is better. No man is obliged to advertize. He can do the other thing—which is usually nothing—if he prefers. He can go along, not ahead, of course; but he can go along, striving to hold the trade he already has and to catch such additional business as happens to come in his direction. He may be content to do just that; he may prefer to take it easy and to avoid the arduous work demanded of those who advertize and make their advertizing pay He may not care to increase the volume of his business being satisfied with what he has and unwilling to assume the responsibility attendant upon the management of large affairs. To such a man it is idle to say, "You must advertize"

But to the progressive, alert, ambitious and far-seeing merchant, advertizing is indeed the breath of life. It is part of "the game," and a most fascinating part. The true advertizer finds in it all the enjoyment which the huntsman or angler derives from his favorite pastime. To him it opens new possibilities, new fields of endeavor, and new outlets for his activity. And it is also idle to say to him, "You must advertize." As well say to a sportsman, "You must hunt," or to an angler, "You must fish."

SOUTH VANCOUVER.

Mr. Chipperfield of Horne road, has a grievance against the South Vancouver Council, claiming to have been most unfairly treated. Mr. Chipperfield an old man and a ratepayer, was given the work to "brush" the road at 20c per chain; the distance measuring 18 chains. The Councillor who gave him the work stating it meant to cut the brush on both sides of the road. A member of last year's Council told Mr. Chipperfield the usual former rate had been 20c per chain for each side of the road. When he mentioned this to the Councillor before mentioned, it angered him. Mr. Chipperfield declined to do the work at the price offered, which would have amounted to $3.60 and he says it was afterwards done by day labor and he understands cost the Municipality $18; at 20c per chain for each side of the road, the cost would have been $7.20, a saving of $10 80 to the ratepayers. Truly this financieering is a wonder and if each Councillor who has $1.000 to expend equals the one who awarded this contract the present Muncipal Council should be awarded the palm for economics.

An Appeal to Naturalists.

The Natural History Society has undertaken the work of establishing a Wild Flower in this city. We have secured a most eligible site in Beacon Hill Park, and the City Authorities have promised to make us two small rocky ponds.

Our aim is to secure a representative collection of the many beautiful wild flowers and shrubs native to this province.

We now appeal to anyone who is interested in the flora of his particular locality to help us. We want this Fall only those subjects that will thrive on rocks and in in dry situations, as we shall not have water until next season.

Our funds are limited and we can not offer to pay for plants, but will gladly pay freight charges. It is a labor of love on our part, and we shall be glad to hear from anyone able and willing to help us in the good wook.

OBITUARY.

The funeral of the late Mrs. J. D. Sim took place on Tuesday afternoon from the family residence 174 Dufferin street, west, the Rev. A Macauley of Ladner, an old-time friend of the deceased, officiated, assisted by Rev. G. A. Wilson. A large number of the members of Mt. Pleasant Lodge, Knights of Pythias of which Mr. Sim is a member, attended the funeral. At the the conclusion of the service the Knights joined the procession as far as Westminster avenue. The pallbearers were R. A. Townley, W. E. Shaw, S. Cunningham, H. Reid, E. DeBou. all members of Mt. Pleasant Lodge, K of P. There had only about a month elapsed between the death of Mr. Sim's wife and eldest son which is an exceedingly sad bereavement, and he has the deepest sympathy of a wide circle of friends.

The funeral of the late S. S Gray took place on Tuesday afternoon from the family residence 425 Tenth avenue, east, the Rev. Mr. Leitch officiating. The pallbearers were Messrs. Wm. Gaskell, T F. Jull, L. Fulton, R. M. Pallott. The widow and relatives wish to extend their thanks to the many kind friends for the sympathy extended and many kind acts. Many beautiful floral tributes were sent by the following: Mr. and Mrs. Frolander, crescent; Miss B. Broderick, spray; Mr. E. M. Bullock, wreath; Mr. and Mrs. Jull. wreath; Mr. and Mrs. A. What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heartburn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from billousness, torpid liver with indigestion or dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at its formula will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of the following native American forest plants, viz., Golden Seal root, Stone root, Black Cherrybark, Queen's root, Bloodroot, and Mandrake root.

The following leading medical authorities, among a host of others, extol the foregoing roots for the cure of just such ailments as the above symptoms indicate: Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Med. College, Phila.; Prof. H. C. Wood, M. D., of Univ. of Pa.; Prof. Edwin M. Hale, M. D., of Hahnemann Med. College, Chicago; Prof. John King, M. D., Author of American Dispensatory; Prof. Jno. M. Scudder, M. D., Author of Specific Medicines; Prof. Laurence Johnson, M. D., Med. Dept. Univ. of N. Y.; Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., Author of Materia Medica and Prof. in Bennett Medical College, Chicago. Send name and address on Postal Card to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and receive free booklet giving extracts from writings of all the above medical authors and many others endorsing, in the strongest possible terms, each and every ingredient of which "Golden Medical Discovery" is composed.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. They may be used in conjunction with "Golden Medical Discovery" if bowels are much constipated. They're tiny and sugar-coated.

OUR COMMON BROTHERHOOD.

By Helen A. Saxon.

I never saw his face or knew his name,
But that gay morning, as I loitering came Around the blossoming hillside, all aflame.

With lilac spires and apple-blossoms brave
That to the rifling air their sweetness gave,
I saw where they were making him his grave.

If I had chance to meet him by the way
In all the golden sunshine of the day,
No pleasant word I might be found to say.

But since he could no longer come to meet
The world, love-smitten, dreaming at his feet,
Nor feel within his pulse the Spring-tide beat.

Nor love again, I gave for him instead
And poured upon his low, unconscious head
The sacramental love that shrives the dead.

And though I went my way with eyelids wet
For grief of one whom I had never met,
Because his day so soon was finished yet

I lifted up my face to Heaven again
Believing human love was not in vain,
But, moved and softened by the sudden strain

Of friendship, I touched the larger mood
Of universal love, and understood
The passion of our common brotherhood.

At Eventide.

I mean to do so much! Sometimes I say
To my most tired heart and restless brain;
Wait but a little while. On some sweet day
I shall slip off, as garments, all the pain,
The bitterness of labor wrought in vain;
The noise, the weariness, th ceasless fret,
Shall put aside, and for a space forget.
And open wide my heart and cast out sin,
And call God's radiant choiring angels in

And yet suppose, on some fair eventide,
That I should watch, as Abram watched of old,
All the closed tent-doors of my heart flung wide,
To welcome angel-guests into my fold,
And they should find my dwelling-place too cold!
The tent windswept, of kindness never done,
Its floor weedgrown, of battles never won;
Its shrine dust-choked of selfishness and sin,
And all too late I called the angels in!

Physical Culture.

Physical Culture for July is a very interesting and instructive issue of this standard magazine on the subjects of health, strength, vitality, muscular development and care of the body. Bernarr Macfadden contributes the opening article on "Tensing Exercises," one of the most effective methods of developing the muscles. The second of a series of articles by Jack O'Brien on the "Modern Art of Self-defence," is devoted to the principles of attack in boxing. There are many special articles among them being "The Swiming Experts of Australia," "Rowing by Women," "Fighting the Devil with Physical Culture," "Metchnikoff's Old Age Cure," "How May Degeneracy be Avoided," "Physical Training for the Baby." Besides the various departments there is also much of live and current interest.

There were three special cars crowded with merry children and grown-ups on Wednesday, the occasion of the annual picnic of the Mt. Pleasant Methodist Church S.S., the place of the picnic being Queen's Park, New Westminster; another special car in the afternoon added large numbers to the big crowd. The usual races and sports took place in the afternoon and the interest in these were kept up till time for supper. The small zoo, the cool shady walks, the swings and the lonesome streets of New Westminster kept a large number entertained during the day The return trip was made in quick time, the crowd well-pleased with the day's outing.
